Council overrules commission, OKs bike rentals

By MARY SCHLEY

A BICYCLE shop on Mission Street received permission from the city council Tuesday evening to rent out up to 20 bikes.

The vote reversed a planning commission decision last month not to approve a permit for the rentals after some commissioners said they thought Carmel's streets were too dangerous for rented bikes.

But shortly after the planning commission hearing, Mayor Steve Dallas and councilwoman Carrie Theis decided the city council should take up the issue — and it came before them this week with a recommendation from the city's senior planner, Marnie Waffle, that the rentals be approved.

Waffle said the planning commission's denial "was based on general concerns regarding bicycle safety and was not based on any specific issue with this particular application." The municipal code allows bike rentals but, "general safety concerns would essentially preclude any business from offering bicycle rentals in Carmel."

Jennifer Blevins and Martin Watson, owners of Mad Dogs & Englishmen bike shop, appeared before the council at the April 3 meeting and said their business meets all the city's rules and requirements.

"We met all of the conditions, and it took us quite a lot of

Homeowners get reprieve for 'illegal' retaining wall

By MARY SCHLEY

A RETAINING wall, stone pillars and a fence that were built without permits on city property in front of a home on Torres north of First more than two decades ago should all be removed, planner Catherine Tarone told the city council Tuesday evening, because allowing them to stay would amount to giving public property to a private homeowner.

But council members worried that removing the retaining wall would allow the dirt and plants behind it to wash down Torres, as homeowner Nancy Ann Budden, a sediment geologist (and the director of the Naval Postgraduate School's Defense Counter Terrorism Technology Office), said it would.

PWN says petition has enough signatures

By KELLY NIX

THE ACTIVISTS behind an effort they say will "achieve affordable, sustainable water" for the Monterey Peninsula by turning Cal Am into a government-run company announced Tuesday they had collected enough signatures to put the takeover idea before voters.

At a rally in front of Monterey Peninsula Water Management District offices, members of the group Public Water Now said they collected 11,405 signatures, nearly twice the number required to put the item on the November ballot.

For the past six months, Public Water Now has circulated a petition asking voters to require the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to determine whether a Cal Am takeover would be financially feasible, and if it is, to begin the takeover process. A government-run water system, the group claims, would mean lower water rates.

The group's announcement that it obtained far more signatures than needed comes a couple weeks after a Cal Am mailer urged customers to withdraw their names from the Public Water Now petition. Cal Am contended that the water group

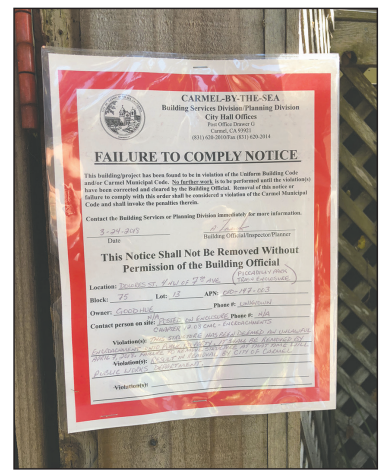
Court halts city plan to demolish trash enclosure

By MARY SCHLEY

A JUDGE issued a temporary restraining order against the City of Carmel Thursday to prevent public works crews from tearing down a fenced garbage area that was built on the side of Cantinetta Luca — taking up 110 square feet in Piccadilly Park next door — in 2006. In February, the city council gave owner David Fink 60 days to remove the trash enclosure, but Fink has argued that the city didn't object when it was built, and his restaurant can't stay open without it, because there's nowhere else to put the trash.



A city-issued red tag orders restaurant owner David Fink to remove his trash enclosure by April 7.

On March 24, code enforcement officer Al Fasulo put up a notice declaring the fenced area illegal and advising that public works would demolish it if Fink hadn't done so by the April 7 deadline.

The two sides have been at loggerheads since the planning department told him he needs permission to have the trash area on park property, even though it was drawn on the plans that officials signed off on 12 years ago. It came to planners' attention when they were reviewing his proposal to build a condo on top of the restaurant.

The condo was approved by the planning commission last fall, but the council voted not to allow Fink to keep the garbage area in the park, as that would in effect be giving him public land. Throughout the process, Fink has contended that Mayor Steve Dallas and councilwoman Carolyn Hardy, who wanted to challenge the condo's approval, are biased against him. The encroachment was denied 3-1, with Dallas, Hardy

Total ban on STRs not happening, county official tells Big Sur locals

By CHRIS COUNTS

A GROUP of Big Sur residents told county officials March 27 they want short-term rentals banned in Big Sur, and they said a longstanding local land use plans adopted by the California Coastal Commission backs up their view.

"This plan has served the coast for nearly 40 years," opponent Tim Green testified. "It has saved this place."

Supporters, though, said vacation stays should be permitted in Big Sur — and probably will be, because the current generation of coastal commission officials have said that's what they want. "You had better work really closely with the coastal commission so they don't say, 'You have to go back to the drawing board,'" supporter C.W. Freedman warned those who are pushing for a ban.

County planner Jacqueline Onciano, meanwhile, urged residents to come up with a compromise. She said an outright ban on vacation rentals is not realistic.

"A prohibition is not going to work," Onciano added.

The statements were made at a land use committee meeting at the Big Sur Lodge, one in a series of meetings hosted by county officials as they seek comments from the public about an ordinance they are developing that will regulate — and permit some — short term rentals in unincorporated areas like Big Sur and Carmel Valley.

Mary Schley honored at city hall

Mayor Steve Dallas surprises Mary Schley with a proclamation at the city council meeting Tuesday night, congratulating her on 20 years as a reporter with The Carmel Pine Cone. For most of that time, she has "attended more city meetings and listened to more public comments" than anyone else in town and become "the most important person at The Pine Cone," the proclamation said.

Still got it

HE'S NOT the first Australian shepherd they've had, but he's their current, beloved boy — sweet, steady, faithful, loyal. And, at 12, he's starting to slow down. His person, who considers herself the alpha member of the family, named the dog Sienna for his rich, red coat, and fell deeply in love the moment she saw the little Aussie puppy.

"Our daughter and I were coming home from a trip to Washington D.C. when my husband surprised us at the airport," Sienna's person said. "I still remember our daughter, who was all of 4 years old, started running toward the dog, and she tripped and fell in all her excitement."

The younger Sienna was very energetic — rambunctious, even, his person says — and loved to explore. But he wasn't much of a beach dog because he really didn't like the water and wouldn't go in past his knees.

"Besides, he has that soft, thick coat that collects sand," his person said. "After a half hour of post-beach bathing, it still would be filled with it."

These days, Sienna has arthritis, so his joints are a little stiff. While he used to wander on the heels of his person, now he prefers to find a comfortable spot in his home near Schulte Road and settle in. His vivid red coat has paled to his "old-age coat," his person says, and he's taken on a seasoned look in his eyes.

Sienna still likes to chase after a Frisbee, as he did in his younger days. But now, he's more likely to chase after other dogs in pursuit of the same Frisbee, as if he's herding them.

"I think it's his way of saying, 'I'm still here; I'm still in charge, even if I can't keep up with a Frisbee,'" his person said. "This tells us he's still got it; he's still good."

Sunset show shines light on 'Mystic India'

PRESENTING A feast of music, dance and acrobatics from one of the world's most fascinating countries, Mystic India performs at Sunset Center Friday, April 6.

Employing striking costumes, elaborate sets, and gifted dancers, show tells the story of India's transformation into a modern country. Created by director Amit Shah, the show has toured the globe since 2011.

It took Shah and his team four years to build the show's sets and make more than 700 costumes.

"Expect an explosion of color and energy as you travel on a celebratory journey through Rajasthan, Maharashtra, Punjab and Gujarat, and progress through Bollywood films with stunning visual beauty that fuses dance and theater," the show said.

Tickets are $39 to $59. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2048 or visit www.sunsetcenter.org.

‘Business improvement district’ for restaurants on its way to reality

By MARY SCHLEY

WITH COMMITMENTS from the city’s tourism-promotion group, Visit Carmel, and local restaurant owners to help fund the formation of a “restaurant business improvement district,” the city council voted Tuesday to proceed with the plan to raise money for marketing dining establishments by levying a small tax on them. The “assessment” would be .25 percent of gross sales, for an estimated $200,000 per year.

Roughly $14,000 in public funds and a total of $26,000 from the others will pay for a consultant, Civitas, to do the necessary work to form the district, which must be approved by a majority of the businesses that will pay the fee for the next five years, according to budget and contracts director Sharon Friedrichsen.

“There does appear to be a high degree of support for the concept of a Carmel Restaurant Business Improvement District,” said Friedrichsen, recommending the council increase its contract with Civitas from the $10,000 it approved in February for a feasibility study and the creation of a steering committee, to $40,000. Working with Visit Carmel and the restaurant group, Civitas will handle the petition drive, planning documents, public meetings and resolutions necessary to create the district.

“It should also be noted that if the district is successful in being formed, the city and the parties could be reimbursed for those funds,” she said.

Nichole Farley from Civitas told the council the feasibility study indicates 64 percent of the city’s restaurant owners support the idea. Only the city’s 52 “full-line restaurants” — those with sit-down table service, not coffee shops or delis — would pay the fee.

Seventy percent of the revenues, $140,000, would be used for sales and marketing to promote Carmel restaurants, while $36,000 would pay for administration, $22,000 would be held in reserve, and 1 percent would go to the city for collecting the money and passing it along to Visit Carmel to market the city’s dining scene to travelers.

Civitas will develop the plan and meet with restaurant owners over the next couple of months, and aims to submit petitions signed by more than 50 percent of them to the city in June, according to Farley. Council hearings on the district would be held in July, August and September, with the assessment taking effect in October.

Representing the restaurants, Ken Spilfogel told the council he is “very confident” the effort to establish a restaurant business improvement district will succeed.

City administrator Chip Rerig cautioned Spilfogel to talk to every affected owner or manager in the city, even those who don’t support the idea, so that no restaurateur “at the 11th hour walks through that door and says, ‘I’ve never heard of this before.’”

Want it in writing

Council members focused on whether they could count on Visit Carmel and the restaurateurs to pony up their shares of the cash for the contract with Civitas.

The tourism group’s executive director, Amy Herzog, said her board voted on the allocation in January, and it’s documented in the meeting minutes. “We have a commitment, and we’re good for it,” she said.

Spilfogel didn’t have anything quite as concrete. “I have to go back and do the legwork,” he said. Restaurant owners were hoping Visit Carmel or the city would front them the money, but Spilfogel said the group is committed to providing the $13,000, though he still has to get a written agreement.

“This is for the restaurants,” councilwoman Carrie Theis told him. “It takes legwork —

The gavel falls

Verdicts, pleas and sentencings announced by Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo

Jan. 28 — Young Kim and Seong Kang were sentenced to formal probation for 3 years and ordered to serve 120 days in custody. The pair pled guilty to felony charges involving Electronic Benefit Transactions trafficking at the Corner Market in Salinas for more than 2 years.

Young Kim, an owner of Corner Market, and Seong Kang, an employee at the market, were charged with illegal redemptions of CalFresh (also known as food stamps or welfare) benefits. CalFresh benefits are part of the federal Supplemental Nutrition Act Program in conjunction with the State of California Department of Social Services.

Retailers like Corner Market are licensed with California to redeem EBT and must comply with the program rules. CalFresh benefits are administered via EBT cards. Kim and Kang defrauded the program out of thousands of dollars in illegal redemptions by allowing benefit recipients to exchange their CalFresh benefits for cash.

It is illegal to redeem CalFresh benefits for cash as well as to purchase items such as alcohol and cigarettes. Monterey County Department of Social Services along with Monterey County District Attorney's Office maintain a Welfare Fraud tip line. If you have information regarding welfare fraud you can leave an anonymous tip at (831)755-3224.

Jan. 23 — Clemente Morado, 26, a resident of Salinas, was sentenced by Judge Carrie Panetta to 15 years, 4 months after pleading "no contest" to four counts of felony charges, including shooting at an occupied motor vehicle, assault with a deadly weapon, possession of a weapon in jail, and resisting an executive officer. Morado was previously convicted of a strike offense for burglarizing a residence in 2009.

On December 31, 2015, Morado resisted a Salinas police officer and fled the scene during a traffic stop. Two months later, on February 29, 2016, Morado engaged in an altercation with some individuals in the parking lot of Shop & Save, located on North Main Street in Salinas. During this altercation, Morado exchanged gunfire with the individuals in the vehicle. Following his arrest, Morado assaulted a fellow inmate with a deadly weapon. The inmate suffered a stab wound on his neck, along with significant blood loss

Jan. 24 — Anthony Fabian Morales, 46, a transient in the city of Salinas, was sentenced to two years in state prison for failing to properly register as a sexual offender.

In 1994, Morales was convicted of committing sexual battery. As a result, Morales is required to register as a sex offender for the rest of his life. Morales is also required to register anytime he is released from incarceration. Morales admitted to Detective Byron Gansen that he failed to register upon being released from jail after he served time in another unrelated case. Morales has four prior convictions for failing to register as a sex offender, two of which were felony convictions.

Jan. 25 — Salvador Navarro, 55, a resident of Salinas, was found guilty by jury of one count of annoying or molesting a child and one count of lewd conduct in public.

On October 2, 2017, Navarro entered the Wash House Laundromat in Salinas and masturbated in front of women and children. Three witnesses testified that they saw Mr. Navarro masturbating, and much of the incident was captured on surveillance.

Navarro tried to flee when police arrived but was apprehended by officers of the Salinas Police Department. A witness also testified that Navarro exposed his genitals to her on a separate occasion.

Monterey County Superior Court Judge Thomas Wills presided over the trial.

Jan. 26 — Salinas resident Gregory Smith, 46, was sentenced by Judge Robert A. Burlison to three years in prison for a hit-and-run collision, and then subsequently transportng methamphetamine into the Monterey County Jail..

On November 26, 2017, at approximately 12:49 p.m., Salinas police officers were dispatched to the scene of a pedestrian injury on East Lake Street. Witnesses observed a vehicle strike a woman as she crossed the street. The driver, later identified as Smith, then got out of his car, walked over to the prone victim, shouted an expletive, then got back in his vehicle and sped away on North Main Street. Smith was identified thanks to witnesses who recorded his license plate.

Smith was ultimately apprehended on December 10, 2017, during a high-risk traffic stop at Central and Davis in Salinas and was transported to the Monterey County Jail. During the booking process, intake deputies located .9 grams of methamphetamine concealed on his person.

Water district, city inspect restaurants — some take it personally

By MARY SCHLEY

After A code enforcement officer showed up to make sure he didn't have too many seats in his restaurants for the amount of water he's allowed to use, Rich Pepe told city officials and a group of fellow business owners he believes he's being targeted by Mayor Steve Dallas, according to emails he sent last week.

And then he complained to city inspector Al Fasulo that a restaurant owner across the street might have more seats than allowed.

"The code enforcer is out checking seat counts, or at least I know they came to count mine at both Little Napoli and Vesuvio," Pepe wrote in an email to nearly 40 restaurateurs March 28. "I asked Al Fasulo about it, and he said someone complained about the issue, and I'm suspecting it is retaliation by Mayor Steve Dallas."

According to emails provided by the city that have Pepe's name redacted but are clearly written by him, the thread started March 12, when he wrote to Fasulo, "So, this is the third time you've stopped by my places to check on compliance since my story of harassment by Mayor Dallas broke in the papers," Pepe wrote, referring to his published accounts of being yelled at and threatened by Dallas. "Just seems too coincidental," Pepe said.

"I should probably ask how many other businesses you've stopped at randomly, or who is complaining about my places," he continued. "But I won't. I'll just keep this on file with my attorney, as [city attorney] Glen Mozingo advised me last week."

Tattle tale

Pepe also said he would remove the benches that have been in front of Little Napoli for years, since they were on city property and were therefore in violation of city codes. Fasulo told him someone had complained about them.

On March 26, Pepe wrote to Fasulo, along with planning director Marc Wiener, Mozingo and Dallas, and said he was "happy to learn" his restaurants and Dametra are complying with their permits regarding having the proper number of seats.

And he reminded Fasulo of his belief he was the victim of "selective enforcement."

"Why not just assign a code enforcer to sit in front of my establishments all day long?" he asked. "I have no doubt in my mind that this is all trumped up by Mayor Dallas, and this will be filed for future use."

He also asked Fasulo to "respond about any other seating violations in town as soon as possible."

Fasulo replied later that morning that he took Pepe's inquiry about La Bicyclette "as a code compliance complaint." Complainers' names are confidential under the California Evidence Code, he added.

Fasulo said he visited La Bicyclette at 11:16 a.m. March 26 and counted chairs, finding the restaurant had 13 more than the total of 43 allowed, and that he would be sending a correction notice to restaurant owner Gaston Georis, the owner of the building, and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. Pepe asked Fasulo if he'd included "the seats behind the oven," and Fasulo replied that he'd counted chairs on the restaurant's two levels.

Also in his email, Pepe told the city he had checked with the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and learned the agency is in the process of checking restaurants around the Peninsula. Water allocations for restaurants are based on the number of seats.

'No selective enforcement'

In confirmation, water district general manager David Stoldt sent Dallas and other city officials an email saying he'd called [redacted] "and left a message that the water district took a comprehensive approach to all properties in Carmel as best we could," and noting that he'd asked the city to compare the seat counts with the use permits they have on file for the restaurants in town.

He said he was "clear in my message to say there is no selective enforcement going on with respect to water, seat count or water credits."

P.G. sets fee of $60K for filming of 'Big Little Lies' at Lovers Point

By KELLY NIX

FILMING FOR the second season of the HBO series "Big Little Lies" will commence this month on the Monterey Peninsula, and Pacific Grove has proposed charging the production company nearly $60,000 for film permits and public employee costs for a 12-day shoot at Lovers Point Park, city officials said.

On Wednesday night, the Pacific Grove City Council voted in favor of negotiating an agreement with Blue Blues Productions to use city parks and streets for the show — which stars Nicole Kidman, Reese Witherspoon, Meryl Streep and Shailene Woodley. Filming begins later this month at Lovers Point, according to the city. Meanwhile, filming in Monterey will begin April 19, interim city manager Hans Uslar told The Pine Cone.

The Monterey Peninsula was the backdrop for the HBO series' first season, which drew curious tourists and residents hoping to catch a glimpse of its famous actors when it was filmed here during about four weeks in 2016.

For the Pacific Grove shoot, the production company's request "involves exclusive use of a small portion of Lovers Point Park (roughly 1,200 square feet) with accompanying parking lot use over a 12-day period — including set-up, filming and take down," a report to city council says.

While the city regularly rents out Lovers Point for weddings and special events, the city's staff said they don't "have much experience with location film permits and establishing corresponding use fees."

City workers help

To come up with reasonable amounts, Pacific Grove got advice from a consulting company, which determined the city should charge the production company an application fee, park rental fee, and for use of 41 parking spaces. While the amount came to $58,770, the city applied a 25 percent "credit on city costs," which brought down the amount to $44,077.50.

City administrative services director Tori Hannah said Tuesday that P.G. has estimated it would bill the production company an additional $2,400 for public works employees and $11,600 for police officers during the film shoot.

"It should be noted that the amount could vary based on actual hours needed, assigned personnel, and whether some positions may come in on overtime or be filled at straight time," Hannah told The Pine Cone. "The amount billed will reflect the actual hours and personnel worked, their hourly rate, and a 9 percent overhead or indirect cost rate."

Hannah said that the city didn't have a firm date on when filming would begin.

"Specific schedules are not yet set, and may fluctuate depending on production needs, and external factors such as weather, resources constraints, crew availability or other limitations," she said.

Uslar said Wednesday that the production company has applied for the proper film permits, and that city "has started the coordination process" in preparation for the April 19 filming start date.

P.G. High considering building perimeter fence on school property

By KELLY NIX

PACIFIC GROVE High School students and their parents will notice something very different about their campus if a security-minded proposal comes to fruition.

Pacific Grove Unified School District has proposed erecting a 6-foot high fence around the perimeter of the school with gates that would be locked while classes are in session.

If the board of trustees eventually OKs the idea, the district could be the first on the Peninsula to close off an open school campus since a gunman shot and killed 17 people at a high school in Parkland, Fla. in February.

The fence "is not directly related to the Parkland incident, but is in response to school safety," PGUSD director of school safety Barbara Martinez told The Pine Cone Monday. "All external gates would be locked during school hours."

In March, police ramped up security at all Pacific Grove schools for several days after someone wrote a threat in the P.G. High's girls' bathroom alluding to a school shooting. Pacific Grove police have not yet arrested the person responsible for the threat.

The school board was set to discuss the fencing idea at the Thursday night board meeting and offer feedback, but they were not set to vote on the matter.

The staff report outlines the type of fencing up for consideration.

"The front of campus will predominantly be a 6-foot aluminum fence with pedestrian and vehicle access points," the agenda report says. "Aluminum fencing will start at the southeast corner of the campus and run to the main vehicle entrance off Sunset. The fencing will transition to a black chain link at this location and run along the forest sidewalk to the stadium."

The proposal includes 800 linear feet of 6-foot powder-coated aluminum decorative fencing and 1,030 linear feet of black chain link fencing, the report to the school board says.

The main vehicle entry will have a secured rolling fence gate but other options are also being studied, while improvements to the backside of the campus would include a vehicle and pedestrian gate at the adjacent Forest Grove Elementary School's back entrance, and more fencing from the tennis courts to the "southeast fencing at the back entry."

The security plan, if carried out, would accomplish two goals established by P.G. Police officer and school resource officer Billy Hawkins.

"First, [it would] direct all pedestrian traffic to a few locations, making it easier to monitor individuals coming and leaving campus," according to the district's report. "Second, it allows the campus the ability to completely lock down."

The report doesn't indicate who — whether it's teachers, office staff, police, or all three — would carry keys to the gates.

District employees are working with a contractor on an estimate of the proposal, which was expected to be disclosed at Thursday's board meeting.

Democratic Women to host State Controller

By MARY SCHLEY

In the theme of "Women at the Top Making a Difference," the Democratic Women of Monterey County's April 20 luncheon meeting will feature State Controller Betty Yee.

Described by organizers as "a courageous fighter for the rights of the under-represented," Yee has talked about and written articles on various progressive issues, and has argued for imposing property taxes on oil companies, marriage equality, increased construction of affordable housing, immigrant rights, a higher minimum wage, and "environmental stewardship in the face of global warming." Yee, who grew up in a two-room apartment with her siblings while her parents ran the family laundry and dry-cleaning business in San Francisco, and graduated from UC Berkeley, is a lifelong Democratic activist who ran a grassroots campaign to become California's 32nd controller.

As such, she serves on 79 boards, commissions, and committees, chairs the Franchise Tax Board, is the fifth voting member on the State Board of Equalization, participates in the State Lands Commission, and holds positions on the boards of the California Public Employees Retirement System and the California State Teachers Retirement System, overseeing a combined portfolio of more than $500 billion.

Yee is "known for her record of fairness, transparency, integrity, and the ability to resolve complex policy issues," according to the local Democratic Women's group.

"Over her 30-plus years of public service, Ms. Yee has received broad recognition for her work specializing in state and local finance and tax policy," the group said. "She has represented California before the United States Congress on multistate tax issues."

The lunch will run from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Hilton Garden Inn at 1000 Aguajito Road in Monterey. Tickets are $35 for DWMC members and $45 for non-members. To reserve, go to dw-mc.org. Reservations are due by April 18.

Where the Heart Is

Maybe you remember the hand-embroidered samplers, framed, that hung on the walls of grandmother's parlor: "Home sweet home" they read or "God bless our home" or "Home is where the Heart is." Time may have frayed and faded the fabric of those samplers, but not the emotions they express. The words are as potent and powerful as ever. Words that speak of the most precious thing any of us possess, and that come straight from the heart.

That's why the theme of this column, and of my whole approach to the purchase and sale of real estate, is derived from one such simple maxim as you see here. It's not just a slogan, it's a personal and professional credo. You'll be seeing regular columns of "Where the Heart is" every other week in The Pine Cone. And you may see or hear from me in other spots too—all will try to give you special insights, information and impressions. Not only about real estate listings and values, but about the quality of life in this incomparable corner of the world.

Home. Where, as the time honored samplers tell us, the Heart is.

Former CHOMP nurse seeking more than $900,000 for 'wrongful termination'

By KELLY NIX

A VETERAN nurse who was fired from her job at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula after taking medical leave alleges in a lawsuit that hospital officials fabricated a story that she was "diverting" narcotics from patients to justify her termination.

In a civil complaint filed March 29 in Monterey County Superior Court, former CHOMP nurse Kimberly Wilkin claims that after experiencing "multiple medical issues" about two years ago, she was forced to take medical leave and call in sick several times.

Her health problems were severe enough that, in March 2017, acting on what she said were her doctor's recommendations, Wilkin applied for leave under the Family Medical Leave Act, which requires employers to let workers take time off for medical reasons.

But in early January, after she called in sick "several times," hospital officials told Wilkin she was going to be fired because she "no longer had the hours" to take anymore sick leave.

'Suddenly changed their minds'

However, after hospital officials determined that Wilkin had not violated any attendance policies, her supervisors "suddenly changed their minds" and told the nurse she wasn't being fired, but instead being put on a one-week "investigatory suspension" without pay.

Wilkin says she was shocked when told, in a Jan. 16 meeting with the CHOMP's human resources department, that she was being fired, and her supervisor Diana Pourdier "claimed, without any proof or evidence," that Wilkin "had been diverting narcotics from patients for her own personal use."

"This false and extremely damaging accusation was ultimately used to cover up [the hospital's] adverse actions against" Wilkin according to her lawsuit, filed by the San Francisco-based Ladva Law Firm.

Pourdier, who is also named as a defendant in the complaint, is accused of defaming Wilkin by making "outrageous statements" about alleged substance abuse and using patients' narcotics.

"Pourdier has acted with an improper and evil motive amounting to malice and fraud in conscious disregard of Wilkin's rights," Wilkin's complaint says.

Furthermore, Wilkin claims that CHOMP filed a report with the Board of Registered Nursing accusing her of having a "substance abuse problem."

"Despite her offer to submit to a urine test, glowing references from coworkers, and a clean employment record for 13 years, [CHOMP] used these false pretenses to justify Wilkin's wrongful termination," the complaint says.

Wilkin, her complaint says, is now at risk of losing her nursing license and "is likely to suffer irreversible injury" to her professional reputation.

Among other things, Wilkin alleges CHOMP retaliated against her; wrongfully fired her; and failed to maintain a work environment free from discrimination.

She's seeking "an amount of no less than $900,000," plus punitive and other damages.

Although CHOMP declined to comment on the suit, spokeswoman Mary Barker said the hospital has "a longstanding grievance process employees can use if they don't agree with employment decisions."

Divided council decides to proceed with major remodel of police station

By MARY SCHLEY

AFTER A heated exchange between a pair of council members with opposing views, the city council narrowly approved a nearly $75,000 contract increase with Kasavan Architects, which is designing the remodel and expansion of the police department, bringing the total to just under $200,000. The project has been estimated at $1.75 million.

In August 2017, the council signed its first contract with Kasavan for $122,815, and in November 2017, the council weighed four design options ranging from the bare minimum of what Police Chief Paul Tomasi requested — a new property room, a room for processing evidence, and an updated dispatch center — to an larger station with meeting rooms, a new emergency operations center and other additions. Cost estimates ran from $750,000 to $2.5 million. Not wanting to undertake costly excavation, the council chose a hybrid of two designs that would expand the building to the west and to the south.

Public works director Bob Harary presented Kasavan's design, based on the council's feedback in the fall, at the April 3 meeting and recommended moving ahead. The additional money in the contract is needed because the project has more square footage than anticipated, he said, with 391 square feet of interior remodeling and 2,501 square feet of expansion.

Harary also presented an optimistic timeline for review, approval and groundbreaking. If the council likes Kasavan's design and allocates money for it in the 2018/2019 budget, design review by the forest and beach commission, planning commission and council could take place in August and September, after which construction bids would be sought, and ground could be broken before the end of the year. Prior public projects spearheaded by the city took considerably longer: the design of the Scenic Road bathrooms was tossed back and forth between commissions and the council for at least four years, and the Forest Theater remodel was in planning for almost two.

A rendering of Kasavan Architects' design for the proposed remodel of the police station shows its expansion toward Junipero Street. Some council people don't like it, but the majority voted to move ahead.

RENTALS

In contrast to last week's hearing in Carmel Valley — where supporters were at least as numerous as opponents — most residents who spoke in Big Sur are opposed to short-term rentals. Many say that the Big Sur Land Use Plan, which dates to the early 1980s, requires the county to "protect existing affordable housing in the Big Sur coastal area from loss due to deterioration, conversion or any other reason," and limits visitor serving accommodations "to specific areas along Highway 1."

'Accessible to many'

But supporters contend the land use plan also endorses visitation — and, hence, vacation stays. They refer to a passage in the land use plan that reads, "the area should be accessible to as many as can be accommodated."

Several opponents testified that short-term rentals are driving long-term employees out of Big Sur and forcing those who remain to commute long distances to work.

"If you did a survey, you would be surprised how many people are driving to work from Watsonville and Prunedale," opponent Marcus Foster said.

But Freedman said property owners shouldn't be expected to house local employees. "It's the responsibility of employers to build housing," he countered.

Defending vacation stays, Lowell Strauss testified he formerly rented out his home "once a month to families," and his neighbors didn't complain. But someone did, and he said he was fined $14,000 by the county as a result.

Is a 40-year-old coastal plan in favor of short-term rentals, or against them?

Strauss also said that he's been harassed by opponents — and even called a "carpetbagger" during a recent trip to the Big Sur Post Office.

Several locals suggested limiting short-term rentals to properties that are accessible directly from public roads. John Handy, who serves on the South Coast Land Use Advisory Committee, called access to them along private roads "the main issue." Handy suggested allowing each local road association an opportunity to decide by a majority vote if vacation stays should be allowed along it.

Proponent Lori Kempt, meanwhile, said she believes many of the concerns associated with the industry can be resolved through education.

"As someone who wants to see this community in harmony, I believe education could play a big part of this process," explained Kempt, who said a class on vacation rentals should be required for operators and code enforcement officers.

While the county is on track to send a vacation rental ordinance to the board of supervisors for approval sometime this summer, opponent Mike Caplin urged county officials to wait until an update of the Big Sur Land Use Plan is completed. But county officials said that process will take too long, so they are moving the ordinance forward.

Here, everything can be easy.

TRASH

and councilwoman Carrie Theis voting against him.

Fink, his lawyers and his supporters, including former Mayor Sue McCloud and Jack Galante, asked them to reconsider, but they refused, so he sued.

In the complaint filed by attorney Nevin Miller April 4, Fink said city officials are "wrongfully and unlawfully" threatening to remove the garbage enclosure, to which he believes he has a vested right.

And ripping it out would force him to close the restaurant, he said, because there is nowhere else outside to store the garbage cans, and the California Health & Safety Code prohibits its storage inside the restaurant as it is. Instead, he would have to undertake an expensive remodel, which would shut down the restaurant during the busy tourist season, to make space for the trashcans.

The offending trash enclosure, which the city says has got to go. But a judge ruled Thursday doesn't have to be torn down — at least not immediately.

In Monterey County Superior Court Judge Susan Matcham's courtroom Thursday morning, Miller and attorney David Balch took turns explaining the situation to the judge — who said she'd only had time to quickly skim the papers — and asked that she grant a temporary restraining order to keep the trash area from being torn down while they prepare to make their case in court.

Representing the city, attorney Jon Giffen said Fink had had plenty of time to figure out how to deal with the issue. He also argued that the judge shouldn't grant a temporary restraining order because Fink is unlikely to win his case, considering the trash enclosure "creates a hazard to the public health and safety," and is located on public property.

Since the garbage area was on the plans approved in 2006, Matcham wondered why it wasn't "grandfathered in," but Giffen told her there was no legal foundation for that.

"But practically speaking, would you agree there is no other option?" she asked.

"Absolutely not," Giffen said, though he didn't really offer any. She also wondered why it took so long for the city to notice or do anything about the enclosure, and she asked if people have complained about it. Giffen said some have mentioned the smell, though that was never brought up during the council hearing.

"I do understand your points, but it's hard to address the other options, and that this structure was approved 12 years ago," she said. "But here, the question is if the plaintiff should, at bare minimum, have more time."

"All we want is this to not be destroyed on Monday," Miller told her.

Matcham listed several questions she wants answered for the court, including alternatives, money damages, if there will be "irreparable harm" if the enclosure is demolished, and if there have been any complaints.

She then issued a temporary restraining order to run until the lawyers are back in court April 27.

After the hearing, Fink told The Pine Cone that the city's recalcitrance is "shameful." "We should have reached a compromise," said Fink, who has offered to make the enclosure smaller or lease the land underneath it from the city.

PETITION

had misled voters during campaigning.

"We were surprised by the extra 2,500 signatures in the last two weeks of our petition drive, after Cal Am launched their un-sign the PWN petition campaign," Public Water Now spokeswoman Melodie Chrislock said. "From the calls and comments we received, Cal Am's campaign appeared to have motivated more voters to sign our petition."

Chrislock said the water activist group had more than 170 volunteers collecting signatures for the petition.

"No signature collector was paid by Public Water Now," she said.

Public Water Now has long railed against high water rates and "mismanagement" of the local water system.

This week, the group also slammed Cal Am's proposed desalination plant, which Cal Am said would provide the Peninsula with a reliable water source and allow the company to comply with a state order to stop pumping most of its water from the Carmel River. An EIR released last week supports Cal Am's position.

"Questions have been raised about Cal Am's desal project, which would draw its source water from Marina's groundwater, not the ocean," Chrislock said.

She added that ratepayers "don't want to pay for a failed desal project."

Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Stedman told The Pine Cone that, regardless of who owns the water system, they'll have to comply with the state order to get off the Carmel River.

"Voters should not be misled. Public Water Now is focused on stopping a water supply solution," Stedman said. "It's no coincidence their efforts to condemn our company have stepped up just as a final EIR has been issued for our project and we are nearing permit approvals."

Cal Am has also repeatedly said it's not for sale. Stedman claimed that a takeover process, once it got started, would take "Seven to 10 years" to complete given the legal wrangling that would result.

BIKES

time to find the right property and do our due diligence to bring this business to Carmel," she said. "We were very disheartened at that meeting when the decision was made not to approve our request."

Blevins said the no-votes at the planning commission "were based on their fear of bicycles and an ultimate dislike for visitors in our area." She doubted there was any legal justification for the denial.

She also argued that most people will use common sense when riding and will obey traffic laws. In addition, Mad Dogs customers who rent bikes will be provided with pre-programmed Garmin GPS navigation systems that show them the preferred routes to take.

"I can't tell you how many times I've seen people pull out paper maps, and they're sitting in the road trying to figure out where they're going," she said. "That's bad for the biker, and that's bad for anyone else trying to navigate around them, so we're trying to make this a safer experience, but also easier."

In addition, Blevins assured the council she and Watson have "absolutely no desire to do any type of group tours."

'Mind boggling'

Resident Jeff Baron, who rides a bicycle regularly, commented, "It's mind boggling to me that in this beautiful area, the city would be anti-bike — that we would be telling people that they can't ride bikes in our town," he said.

No one at the meeting spoke up against the idea of bicycle rentals, but a couple of residents wrote to share their concerns.

Charles Adams and Laurie Davies, who live at Dolores and Ninth, argued that the streets are too narrow and dangerous for bikes, especially when crowded with pedestrians and dogs, and that "introducing rental bicycles to Carmel would alter the look and feel of our town significantly," as people would need to park them somewhere.

Michael Kovac felt similarly. "Common sense dictates that this is not the town to rent bicycles to tourists with no knowledge of our topography," he said.

Council members were not swayed by their arguments, however.

"This business is wonderful to have in Carmel," councilwoman Carrie Theis said. "It actually is resident-serving, because I know there are a lot of residents here who do ride bikes."

She also appreciated the limit on the number of rental bikes and said she looks forward "to seeing more bikes on Scenic rather than cars."

The council unanimously voted to approve the permit for Mad Dogs' bike rentals, with a specific exclusion of guided group tours.

SEATS

This week, MPWMD water demand manager Stephanie Locke confirmed she's been working on a spreadsheet showing how many seats restaurants actually have vs. what's allowed in their permits. She said she plans on turning the information over to the city later this week or next week, so Fasulo can verify any numbers that are out of compliance.

But it won't include every restaurant in town, she noted, because some establishments predate the water district's permit requirements.

Vicki (McBride) Boyd Wilder

January 14, 1956 — March 25, 2018

Vicki passed away on March 25, 2018, after a long fight with cancer.

She leaves behind her husband, Lane, her son Norman Boyd, and two young grandchildren; her two brothers, Kurt McBride, (sister-in-law Terry), brother Tim McBride, her parents Norman and Leona McBride and her nephew, Nathan, and niece, Nichole. A sister, Devra McBride, passed away from cancer.

Vicki grew up in Carmel. She graduated from Carmel High School in June of 1973.

Vicki had many friends and was well liked. She was a caring friend always putting others first. She was creative.

She had a strong faith attended church regularly, believed in prayer and trusted in her Lord Jesus.

A memorial service will be held on May 19th, 2018 at 11:30 a.m. at Sanctuary Bible Church located at 8340 Carmel Valley Rd.

Mary Yokomizo

Mary Yokomizo died peacefully and quietly at home with her family beside her. She was 92. Mary was born in Sumner, Washington to Yosematsu Inouye and Shizu Yamamoto. She was the youngest of four children.

She graduated high school while in the internment camps in Idaho. About that time she met and later married Yoshio "Doc" Yokomizo who had joined the Army and fought in the distinguished 442nd Infantry earning a Silver Star and Purple Heart. After the War they moved to the Monterey Peninsula. Mary had a long career in the banking industry. She was an operations officer for several banks. After retiring from banking, she volunteered for the Community Hospital for 20 years and the AT&T for 30 years.

She is predeceased by her husband, "Doc" Yokomizo, her two brothers, Jim and Tom and a sister, Yuki and a son, Kenneth. She leaves behind a daughter, Sherrie McCullough (Tom) and son Steven Yokomizo (Valerie) and grandson Sean Yokomizo (Stacey) and two great grandchildren, Alexandra and Katherine and a step-son Stuart Williams. A Private family gathering will take place on April 8th.

In lieu of flowers, the family asked that donations be made to the SPCA for Monterey County, P.O. Box 3058, Monterey, CA 93942. She brought a lot of sunshine to many who knew her. We are all blessed to have such a devoted and loving mother and grandmother. She will be greatly missed.

Frans Welter Doelman

Frans Welter Doelman, age 84, was born on March 30, 1933 in Brussels, Belgium, to Johanna Doelman & Franciscus Welter. Frans passed away on March 18, 2018, in Lakewood, WA. Frans is survived by his beloved wife of 58 years, Ruth (Stork) Doelman, his three children: Mark Doelman & Stephanie Matthews, Christina (Doelman) & Dwight Martin, Catherine (Doelman) & Craig Hawkins; his 7 grandchildren and 2 great-grandsons, cousins, sisters- and brothers-in-law, nieces & nephews, and many life-long friends. He was preceded in death by his twin brother, Hans, and a granddaughter.

We will miss his bright smile and laughing blue eyes the rest of our days. Frans was a proud Dutchman to the end. He survived many challenges in life ... a child POW in Java during WW2, with his twin brother & mother; immigrating to the US with nothing; settling in California, graduating from Carmel High School 1951, and later ran track at UC Berkeley ("Legs"). He served in the USAF & Reserves for 32 years, flying 14,000 hours (in B47s, B52s & C141s), including 6 years flying transport service to Vietnam. His greatest challenge and joy was his family. Frans was generous, kind, taught us to work hard, love deeply and take time to give others a hand. Our hearts break for we will miss him, but we are comforted knowing that his earthly struggles are over and he is at peace and free to soar again.

Military Honors & Interment are at 2 p.m. April 6 at Tahoma National Cemetery, in Kent WA, and Celebration of Life at 2 p.m. on April 7 at Christ Lutheran Church in Lakewood, WA.

love leaves a memory no one can steal."

Panetta awards Vietnam War vet with medal

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CONGRESSMAN JIMMY Panetta Wednesday awarded a veteran of the Vietnam War with the Vietnam Service Medal, which honors those who served in the 20-year war.

Johnnie Dean Johnson, 66, who served with the United States Navy on the USS Coral Sea, was presented the medal at Panetta's district office in Salinas. Johnson took part in the March 1975 Operation Frequent Wind, a largescale evacuation where helicopters were used to transport more than 1,000 Americans and nearly 6,000 Vietnamese from Saigon, South Vietnam to aircraft carriers.

After Johnson contacted Panetta for assistance, the congressman's office asked the Navy Personnel Center about his military record and found that "his record clearly demonstrated that he met the requirements for the Vietnam Service Medal," Panetta's office said.

Johnson, of Salinas, is a lifelong Monterey County resident who graduated from Alisal High School. He was in the Navy for 20 years from 1972 to 1992, was a petty officer first class.

CHRISTOPHER CARROLL

1948 ~ 2018

Christopher Carroll was born on June 24, 1948, in Walnut Creek, California. Surrounded by his family in Carmel, he passed peacefully on March 27, 2018.

Chris is the grandson of Swedish-American engineer Carl Friden, inventor of the Friden Electromechanical Calculator. He grew up in Hawaii and in Carmel Valley, where his family raised Arabian horses on Cloud Nine, the land now known as September Ranch. He attended Carmel High School and later, Lincoln High School in San Francisco where he graduated.

While serving in Vietnam as a U.S. Marine, Chris was wounded and received an honorable discharge in 1968. He completed graduate studies at both the University of Oregon in Eugene and the University of California at Santa Barbara, earning Masters degrees in Psychology and Special Education. After working for the City of Santa Barbara on behalf of veterans dealing with substance abuse, Chris founded an organization there called Total Mobility that matched advocate-mentors with mentally challenged adults.

Chris married Pamela Carroll in Summerland, California in 1980. Their son Dustin was born in 1982. Over the years the Carroll family moved from Santa Barbara to Santa Rosa, Lake Oswego, Oregon, and Carmel. Of all the many beautiful homes and towns they lived in, Chris' favorite was the Julia Morgan-designed cottage he restored on Franciscan Way in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Here on the Monterey Peninsula, Chris volunteered for Meals on Wheels for many years. He loved journeying across the British Isles, New Zealand and Australia as well as up and down the West Coast. He relished long walks in Point Lobos State Park and along the Pacific Ocean. Everywhere he traveled, he enjoyed capturing the beauty of nature with his camera.

Chris is survived by his beloved wife, son, and daughter-in-law Shandy; and his siblings Nancy Berg, Fred Carroll, Robert Alexander, Rick Alexander, and Sherry Alexander.

Chris was a wonderful husband and an amazing father. The memories of this kind, wise, and caring man will live on forever in the hearts of all who have been gifted with knowing him.

In lieu of flowers, please contribute in Chris Carroll's name to Youth Arts Collective. Chris embraced this after-school art studio and mentorship program whose mission is to inspire creativity, kindness, and confidence in young people. YAC is located at 472 Calle Principal, Monterey, California 93940.

Robert James Newell

Robert James Newell, 92 of Pebble Beach, CA passed away on March 29, 2018. He was born to Mildred Potter and Robert C. Newell in Holcomb, IL. He was a graduate from Austin High School in Chicago, IL and later received a B.S. degree from the University of Illinois at Urbana. He served in the U.S. Army Air Force from July 1944 to July 1946. He joined Xerox Corporation in 1962 where he held various senior marketing and management positions until his retirement in 1987. He later became an Adjunct Assistant Professor of Marketing at the Golden Gate University Campus in Monterey, CA from 1989-1995. He joined the Service Core of Retired Executives (SCORE) Monterey Chapter where he was a volunteer business counselor and former Chapter Chair.

Bob is survived by his loving wife of 65 years, Helen, who met as students at the University of Illinois and married in Chicago, IL; his daughter, Barbara Priest (Frank) of Webster, NY; his son, Robert Finley Newell of Pebble Beach, CA; his grandchildren, Aaron and Kara Priest of Webster, NY; and his sister, Donna Jean Wichser of Venice, FL.

No services are planned. Memorial donations may be directed to the charity of the donor's choice.

Erica Weston

If only three words could be used to describe the life of Erica Weston, they would be family, art and laughter. On March 25, 2018, at the age of eighty, the daughter of Brett Weston and Doris Cicely Edmunds left our world to continue her journey of exploration.

Erica was introduced to the world through photographs taken by her grandfather, Edward Weston. Shown in the embrace of her mother, or father, these images reflected the beginnings of a life that was to be surrounded by art and an appreciation for nature's beauty. Erica held an understanding of art's importance to our world and like others in her famous family she studied the craft of photography, but chose to channel her creative talent into the building of her homes in Big Sur and New Mexico. Her innate flair for interior and landscape design breathed life and warmth into their spaces.

Erica lived among the shadows cast by her photographer father and concert violinist mother. These 'larger than life' parents found sparse time for the raising of their only child and yet the compassion of Erica's heart was reflected in her enduring love for Brett and an ability to transcend the complexities of her relationship with Cecily – eventually caring for her mother in the final years of Cecily's life. This compassionate nature carried through to her many animal friends over the years, whose unconditional love was rewarded by a woman gladly returning their love in full measure.

In spite of having endured times of great sadness, Erica drew joy from her belief that our world held numerous secrets and magic. Spirit guides, extraterrestrials, mystical powers held within the structures such as Stonehenge, or in the designs of crop circles; the wonders of the unseen in a multidimensional universe were all possibilities in her mind and she remained an avid explorer of their mysteries throughout her life. On the other hand, her worldly interests included the collection of fine jewelry and art, the consumption of ice cream and chocolate, and an avid appreciation for the aesthetic pleasures of handsome men. Her smile and laugh would light up any room and her quirky nature and impish sense of humor made for strong and abiding friendships. Erica will continue to live in the stories of those of us who loved her and we are grateful for the times we shared with her.

In her final days with us, Erica was supported by a team of caregivers who had already seen her through many challenges. Their loving care allowed her to remain in her home, preserving her dignity and earning the eternal gratitude of family and friends.

Erica Weston is survived by the many family members, wonderful caregivers and friends who cherished her deeply. A celebration of Erica's life will be held this summer and contributions in her name can be made to the: Animal Friends Rescue Project in Pacific Grove, CA.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE of SARAH C. CECCONI Case Number 18PR000104

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of SARAH C. CECCONI.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by GIUSEPPE E. CECCONI in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

The Petition for Probate requests that GIUSEPPE E. CECCONI be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:
Date: June 6, 2018
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept.: 13
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

String quartet serves up Sunset Center swan song

A STRING quartet whose members met as students at Yale University and later earned a Grammy Award nomination performs here for the final time Saturday, April 7, at Sunset Center.

The Enso String Quartet — whose name refers to a sacred symbol in Zen Buddhism — was founded nearly two decades ago. But the group, whose members include violinists Maureen Nelson and Ken Hamao, violist Melissa Reardon and cellist Richard Belcher, plans to disband by the end of the summer.

On a High Note

By CHRIS COUNTS

Erica Horn of Chamber Music Monterey Bay, which is presenting the concert, called the break-up "very bittersweet," but not entirely unexpected.

"The life of a quartet is much like a marriage, but more complicated, if that's possible," Horn told The Pine Cone. "The members lives are pulling them in different directions — this is the last time to see them in Carmel."

The quartet took first place in the Concert Artists Guild International Competition in New York City in 2003, and a year later, they won a top prize for their performance at the Banff International String Quartet Competition. The group earned a Grammy nomination in 2010 for a recording of Argentine composer Alberto Ginastera's string quartets. "They shot to the top and stayed there," Horn said of the group, which visited Carmel several times.

At Sunset, the quartet will pay tribute to the genius of Ludwig van Beethoven. The program starts off with two pieces by composers who were influenced by Beethoven: Mendelssohn's String Quartet No. 2 in A Minor, op. 13; and contemporary composer Paul Moravec's Dialogue. Beethoven's String Quartet No. 15 in A Minor, op. 132 will close the performance.

The concert starts at 8 p.m., and will be preceded by a talk by musicologist Kai Christiansen. Tickets are $33. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 625-2212 or visit www.chambermusicmontereybay.org.

■ Blues star, folk great visit Golden State

Grammy Award-winning blues singer and guitarist Jonny Lang takes the stage April 7 at Golden State Theatre in Monterey, and the following evening, Sunday, April 8, singer-songwriter Arlo Guthrie does the same.

With a cast of kids, 'Annie' opens at Bough

By CHRIS COUNTS

A CHILDREN'S version of a musical based on the heart-warming story of an orphan girl with an indomitable spirit, "Annie" opens Friday, April 6, at the Golden Bough Playhouse.

Presented by PacRep Theatre's School of Dramatic Arts, the musical features an alternating cast of 66 — and all are children. "My youngest is five, and my oldest is 17," director Susanne Burns explained.

The inspirational story, which is set during the Great Depression, is perfect for a cast of youngsters, Burns said. "It's fun to explore the historical value of it, and then there's the lovely story of a young orphan girl melting the heart of a staunch businessman," she said.

Burns called the music from "Annie," "timeless." "You may not know the musical, but you know the music," she suggested.

Sharing the role of Annie are Scarlett Nix, 10, and Teagan Cox, 13.

"Scarlett is more of the sweet and innocent side of Annie, and Teagan is more of the feisty part of Annie," Burns continued. "They're very different, but they both bring wonderful

Where to go on Cinco de Mayo, new beers on tap, and Morgan releases rosé

WHAT WILL be your drink of choice on May 5?

While most people will be enjoying margaritas and cervezas on Cinco de Mayo, locals might be enticed by two events celebrating other adult beverages: the 26th annual Winemakers' Celebration in Carmel, and the Steinbeck's Home Brew Festival in Salinas.

This year, the Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association, which hosts the annual Winemakers' Celebration downtown, is actually honoring local wines over the course of several days, with workshops ("Taste Like a Sommelier" May 4 at 5 p.m. and "Scents & Sensibility" May 4 at 6:45 p.m.), special menus with wine pairings at area restaurants, selective tastings, and screenings of the documentary film, "America's Wine: The Legacy of Prohibition," May 3 and 4.

But the main event is the celebration that shuts down the block of Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, and Seventh between Dolores and San Carlos, May 5 from 1 to 4 p.m. Nearly 40 wineries that either use fruit grown in or are located in Monterey County, from Albatross Ridge, to Wrath, sign up to pour. Many of them don't have tasting rooms of their own, making the celebration the perfect time to sample their offerings.

While restaurants are still being lined up, those signed on include Aabha Indian Cuisine, Basil, Carmel Honey Company, Il Tegamino, Krua Thai, La Balena, La Bicyclette, Little Napoli, Nothing Bundt Cakes, Percy's Pies, Roux, Seventh & Dolores, The Brittle Lady, Village Corner and Lafayette Kitchen & Café.

VIPs who pay $125 per person will get early access at noon, along with a seat at a screening of the documentary, and valet parking. Regular tickets are $75 per person. The movie screening is $20, and the workshops are $40 for one or $70 for both. A free shuttle will continuously run to and from the Barnyard shopping center at the mouth of the valley, and Uber and Lyft will be busy providing rides, too. The Winemakers' Celebration is a 21-and-over event. Visit www.monterey-wines.org for more information.

In Salinas, beer fans will savor the creations of more than 30 amateur brewers — including local chefs whose passion is making beer at home — pouring in excess of 80 different brews during the Home Brew Festival organized by the Salinas Steinbeck Rotary Club. The festival will begin at the Street Faire in the 100 block of South Main Street, with live music and performances, food and vendors, and guests can wander down to the beer gardens located in the National Steinbeck Center and the courtyards of the new Taylor Farms building.

Tickets are $35 until May 4 and rise to $50 the day of the event. They're available through Eventbrite. All proceeds support Salinas Steinbeck Rotary Club's community projects.

■ Morgan releases new rosé

Taste Morgan, located in the Crossroads shopping center, will share samples of its new 2017 Grenache rosé April 7 from 1 to 4 p.m., when the special wine will be added to tasting flights for customers. Small bites will be served, too.

While many wineries make their rosés by siphoning off some of the juice from grapes and then fermenting it separately — a method known as "saignée," which means "bleed" in French — Morgan selects Grenache grapes from the Cedar Lane Vineyard in Arroyo Seco solely for the purpose of making rosé. They are picked earlier in the season, when the sugars are a little lower and the acids are higher. For the 2017 vintage, the grapes were foot stomped and left to soak with the skins for six hours, giving the wine its light pink hue, and then pressed. Rosés are famously food friendly, with their bright acidity and some of the complexity of red wines.

Morgan made just 200 cases of its Grenache rosé, which sells for $22 per bottle. For more information, visit www.morganwinery.com.

Still family-owned after 200 years, Billecart-Salmon is run by the sixth generation of its founders and prides itself on honoring tradition while taking advantage of modern technology to produce clean, balanced Champagnes.

The seminar at Stave will begin at 5:30 p.m., with a "casual flight night" starting at 6:30, and costs $25 per person. For more information and reservations, email stavewinecellar@pebblebeach.com or call (831) 644-7997.

■ On draft at Whaling Station

Jeremy Phillips — son of Beach House, Whaling Station and Abalonetti managing partner Kevin Phillips — recently marked his fifth year as GM of the Beach House at Lovers Point, and to celebrate, he set up a draft beer system at the Whaling Station, where he is a part owner, as well.

Phillips is a "cicerone," which means he is as much an expert at beer as a sommelier would be with wine. The Cicerone Certification Program "seeks to ensure that consumers receive the best quality beer at every service occasion," and therefore educates and certifies servers on storage and serving of beer, different styles of beer, flavor and evaluation, ingredients used in beer and the brewing process, and proper food pairings. The program offers four levels of certification, starting with the simplest and progressing to the most complex and demanding.

At the Whaling Station, the new tap system is being inaugurated with three special beers Phillips selected for the occasion: Anderson Valley Blood Orange Gose, Firestone PIVO Hoppy Pils, and Firestone Wookus Imperial Black IPA.

Stop by the restaurant at 763 Wave St. in Monterey to enjoy a glass or three. www.whalingstation.net

■ Montrio's latest

Executive chef Tony Baker and chef de cuisine Bryan Copp have been mixing it up at Montrio Bistro at 414 Calle Principal in Monterey, where they've been adding seasonal dishes to the menu. Showcasing their creativity, and a bit of humor, are their version of chicken nuggets — which are more like croquettes, with tender Jidori chicken confit shaped into nuggets, fried, and served with a sweet and spicy sauce — and the beef short rib waffle topped with a poached egg and a three-cheese sauce.

Lamb on Lamb is, as it suggests, for the lamb lover, with lamb sirloin sliced and served atop crispy lamb belly on a bed of white beans and creamed leeks. And the American Burger is over the top, too, with two Painted Hills natural beef patties and a thick slab of Baker's slow-cooked bacon, American cheese, tomato-onion jam and an egg, with a side of house-cut French fries.

To check out the restaurant's latest offerings, stop by any evening after 4:30 or visit www.montrio.com.

The tender Jidori chicken "nuggets" at Montrio in Monterey feature shredded chicken confit deep fried and served with a sweet and spicy sauce.

■ MEarth Day

The MEarth habitat project will hold an Earth Day celebration Saturday, April 21, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at its garden and green building at 4380 Carmel Valley Road next to Carmel Middle School.

Admission to the day-long event is $5 per person (kids under 12 are free). The day includes a sale of drought-tolerant native plants, along with organic edible and ornamental plants. Lunch will be prepared by numerous notable chefs and offered in the outdoor kitchen in exchange for food tickets, which are $2 each or 12 for $20. Purveyors taking part that day include Carmel Berry Co., Carmel Valley Ranch, Il Tegamino, Poke Lab, Revival Ice Cream, Village Corner, Lafayette Kitchen and Café, and Salt Wood Kitchen + Oysterette. Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Co. will bring the coffee, and Roux, Paris Bakery, Parker-Lusseau and Aubergine will provide the baked treats.

Musicians will be performing on the Garden Stage all day, and a silent auction will raise more money for MEarth's mission of teaching Monterey County kids not just about organic gardening and the environment, but biology, chemistry, and even foreign languages and cooking. Finally, more than two dozen vendors with ecological themes will set up displays, and a DIY screen printer will be set up to emblazon the MEarth logo on whatever people bring.

For more information, visit www.mearth-carmel.org.

■ MY ParTEA

■ Monterey art gala

The Monterey Museum of Art's April 28 gala, Women in Art, will begin at 5:30 p.m. at Tehama. According to museum officials, the gala "is designed as a unique social and educational experience that will immerse participants in the work of iconic women artists over the past 100 years," including Georgia O'Keeffe, Frida Kahlo and Yayoi Kusama, along with the female painters and photographers who helped lead the early California art movement.

The event's co-chairs, who came up with the idea, said they "wanted to bring people together to celebrate art and the museum in a fun, yet educational way… Guests will travel through time with these artists and leave with a deeper appreciation of their contributions."

Event planner Brian Bode plans to transform the golf club into "a collage of individual spaces devoted to the artists in their time," including notable female artists from the Central Coast, many of whom are featured at the museum. The gala will also complement the museum's Year of the Woman theme.

The event is black tie, and guests are encouraged to dress according to their favorite eras. The evening will include cocktails, dinner, music, a live auction and an after party. Tickets start at $500 apiece, with higher sponsor and group levels available, too, and proceeds will benefit the museum's exhibitions, school education programs and Free Family Fun Days. For more information and to reserve, visit www.montereyart.org/event/women-in-art-spring-gala.

New book illustrates artist's love affair with coast

By CHRIS COUNTS

A PAINTER with deep affection for the California coast will unveil his second book on the subject this weekend at his downtown gallery.

"The coast of California is pretty irresistible," said Kevin Milligan, who will sign copies of his book, "From Big Sur, to Mendocino," Saturday, April 7, from 3 to 6 p.m.

The artist previously released a book that focused on Mendocino, where he lived for more than a decade.

Milligan told The Pine Cone he did more than 2,000 paintings sessions to come up with the 120 paintings that are included in the book. He tries to get outside and paint every day. "It has been a great way to spend a life," he said.

The subjects are a mix of the natural — and not-so-natural. Milligan often paints the varied buildings he finds along the coast. "I like architecture as much as I like the natural landscape," he explained.

While he is a prolific painter, he is also fascinated with the stories behind his subjects, and the book delves into many of them. "The stories stick with me like word pictures," he added.

The Kevin Milligan Gallery is located on Lincoln between Ocean and Seventh. Call (831) 624-3450 or visit www.kevinmilligangallery.com.

■ 'Jeanne's Kitchen' opening soon

Art and food are one in the same in the exhibit, "Jeanne's Kitchen," which opens April 6 at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts.

The display, which continues through May 5, uses painting, sculpture, ceramics and photography to examine our relationship with food. Included are works by David Ligare, Michelle Magdalena, Viktor Klinger, the late Barbara Spring and many others.

"These images endeavor to describe the essence of food and cuisine in subtle and unexpected ways," explained Robert Reese, the Cherry Center's executive director. "The artists, sculptors and photographers featured in the exhibition range in style, intention, and time period, but all of their works share an evocation of the gastronomy."

The art center, which will be the site of a reception from 5 to 7 p.m., is located at Guadalupe and Fourth. Call (831) 624-7491 or visit www.carlcherrycenter.org.

■ New month, new shows

Known for her rich palette of colors, painter Peggy Jelmini will step into the spotlight when an exhibit of her work, "Water, Land and Earth," opens April 7 at the Carmel Art Association. The nonprofit gallery will be the sight of a reception from 5 to 7 p.m.

Also opening Saturday at the CAA is a display of figurative drawings by Tim Sloan and Susan Reith ("Female Figures from Life), a show of abstract monoprints by Eleen Auvil, and an exhibit of "whimsical mixed media" by Susan Giacometti.

The shows continue through May 1. The gallery is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. Call (831) 624-6176 or visit www.carmelart.org.

■ First Friday again

Downtown Pacific Grove will be the site of another First Friday celebration April 6. Calling attention to the local art scene, a variety of shops and galleries will stay open late, including the Pacific Grove Art Center, Artisana Gallery, Studio Silzer, the Center for Spiritual Awakening, A Touch of Glass and others. Some will present live music, while others welcome new art shows or offer sales.

The event happens from 6 to 9 p.m. and is free.

STATION

Resident Jeff Baron asked why the council was considering a design that costs $1 million more than the changes Tomasi said he needed.

"I would say that we should roll back the scope of the police station project," he said. "There's no harm in reversing the project before it grows even more hair. Everyone is allowed to change their mind."

"The needs of the department are the same as what they were two years ago," Tomasi confirmed, but the proposed remodel and expansion would give the police and "other departments," like public works, more space.

And he'd like the emergency operations center to be moved out of the basement and onto the first floor, where it would be accessible by people who can't walk down stairs.

"Most police stations I've been to that have been built in the last 20 years have an EOC on the first floor," he said.

Council members faced off over whether to go with the more comprehensive — and expensive — remodel, or a less costly, less complicated one.

"Are we going to do what's minimal, or are we going to plan for the future?" councilwoman Carrie Theis asked, after recounting the shortcomings of the station.

"I want to be prudent with our tax dollars," councilman Bobby Richards countered. "I want the station to be developed for the future, but we need those tax dollars" for paying down retirement debt and other more pressing expenses.

Mayor Steve Dallas said the larger remodel is needed to accommodate the EOC, which he described as "necessary."

"We made a decision, and those that didn't vote for that decision lost out," councilwoman Carolyn Hardy said. "We're not going to take it back… You lost out on the design, Bobby."

Councilwoman Jan Reimers, who was on the planning commission that dealt with the design for the Scenic Road bathrooms, pointed out that people do change their minds.

"We changed it and took some front-page criticism at the time, but think it was the right decision," she said.

The council voted 3-2, with Richards and Reimers dissenting, to increase Kasavan's contract by $74,534, to $197,349, and to move ahead with the design, which will be reviewed by the commissions.

Oak death survey needs volunteers

DESPITE A forecast of wet weather, volunteers are planning to do a survey of Sudden Oak Death Saturday, April 7, at Garland Ranch Regional Park in Carmel Valley.

"It looks like we have a stormy weekend ahead, so I got permission to sample either this weekend or next weekend," reported Kerri Frangioso of Big Sur, a researcher who leads annual "Sudden Oak Blitzes" to provide scientists with more information about the pathogen, which has decimated oak trees in California over the last decade.

Volunteers are asked to meet Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon in the Garland Park Meeting Room. The park is located at 700 W. Carmel Valley Road. For more information, visit www.sodblitz.org.

Former NFL ref offers C.V. talk

PERHAPS THE famous of all football referees, Jim Tunney offer a free talk Saturday, April 7, at Carmel Valley Library.

According to library officials, Tunney — who is "one of our area's greatest residents" – will present "a morning of inspiration."

A Pebble Beach resident, Tunney worked in the National Football League for more than three decades before retiring in 1990, serving as a referee in three Super Bowls and countless big games.

He is also the author of several best-selling books, including "Chicken Soup for the Sports Fans' Soul."

The event starts at 10:15 a.m. The library is located at 65 W. Carmel Valley Road. Call (831) 659-2377.

This 'compliment' from the new league means new, bigger challenges

Peninsula Sports

By DENNIS TAYLOR

WHAT HAPPENS when a silverback gorilla wanders into a lion's den? We're about to find out.

The Carmel Padres put a beating on the rest of the Mission Trail Athletic League last winter in boys basketball and won their first league crown since 2014 — and they did it with a kiddie corps roster: Nine of 16 varsity players were underclassmen, including six of Carmel's top seven players. Among them were league MVP J.T. Byrne, a freshman, All-MTAL forward Kai Lee, a sophomore, and the league's Defensive Player of the Year, Zack DeZee, a junior.

Ordinarily, those kind of assets might justify getting ready to make room in the trophy case for the 2018-19 season, but on March 29 things changed in a very big way for the Padres.

The MTAL will dissolve at the end of this school year, and its teams will become part of the new Pacific Coast Athletic League, a "super league" in which 31 schools will be divided into four divisions based largely on the strength of their athletic programs in each individual sport. Those divisions will be reshuffled each year in an effort to bunch the toughest teams in the top division and place the weaker teams in the lower divisions.

Rich traditions

What that means for talent-laden Carmel (13-1 in the MTAL this past season) is membership in the new PCAL Gabilan Division, where they are grouped with the five best teams from the former Monterey Bay League. The Padres' new playmates will be Alisal, Palma, Monterey, Salinas, and Monte Vista Christian.

Each of those schools has a rich tradition in boys basketball, and all of them — Salinas (enrollment: 2,533), Alisal (2,425), Monterey (1,209), Palma (532, all boys), and MVC (845) — draw their athletes from a larger pool of students than Carmel (794).

"I consider it a compliment," Carmel coach Kurt Grahl said with a gallows-humor kind of laugh.

"Seriously, the kids I've spoken to so far are excited about this — maybe because they've gotten used to their coach's attitude. This is the way we like it," he said. "Nobody's looking for a padded record, where we can pat ourselves on the back for beating teams that clearly aren't as talented. We've been trying to build a program that can compete with the best, and now we're going to get the opportunity to do that."

So, meet the competition:

Alisal was 21-4 overall last season, won the MBL Gabilan with a 10-2 record, and was disappointed with a 60-59 loss to Salinas in the quarterfinal round of the Central Coast Section Division I playoffs. The Trojans will lose just two of their 12 varsity players to graduation.

Monterey will return nine of 13 varsity players from a team that went 19-9 (9-3 in the Gabilan) and reached the CCS Division III championship game, where the Toreadores lost to Archbishop Riordan (a San Francisco high school).

Palma stumbled to a fifth-place Gabilan finish with a 6-6 record this past season, but that came on the heels of three consecutive championship years in which the Chieftains went 36-0. They'll return nine varsity players, each with a chip on his shoulder.

Salinas, 17-10 overall, won twice this year in the CCS Division I tournament, reaching the semifinal round, after a third-place finish in the MBL Gabilan Division. Five will return from that team next season.

And Monte Vista Christian, 15-9, lost to Palma in the Division IV quarterfinals. Only three varsity players were underclassmen for the Mustangs.

A long-time rival

One lingering question for the realignment committee: What about Pacific Grove?

The Breakers placed second to Carmel with an 11-3 MTAL record, went 17-8 overall, and made it to this year's CCS Division IV playoffs. They're only returning five players, but two (Jack Sendell and Jalen Killian) were All-MTAL, and another (Josh Cryns) made the MTAL's All-Defensive team.

Since the 2000-2001 season, Pacific

Editorial

Go easy on the nitpicking, please

ONE OF the basic principles of our democratic form of government is that every law is supposed to be enforced in a way that benefits the public, and not for a corrupt, arbitrary or capricious reason. Picking nits is one way to be capricious.

Unfortunately, the city is getting perilously close to being very nitpicky with its sudden determination to force restaurant owner David Fink to remove his trash enclosure from the unobtrusive place it has occupied at the edge of Piccadilly Park since 2006, and the question has to be asked, "What's the benefit to the public of taking it out?"

If it were bothering a significant number of people, that would be a justification. So would the possibility that letting Fink keep his trash enclosure would make other people feel entitled to store their trash in public parks in the future, or keep trash enclosures in public parks they already have. Except almost nobody minds, nobody wants to do that, and there aren't any of those.

The city, of course, could cite the broader possibility that letting one man's "illegal" use of public property stand will serve as a precedent for not taking action against illegal or non-conforming structures around town.

But then there was the city council this week deciding a homeowner on Torres Street could keep a small retaining wall that was illegally built in the public right of way more than 20 years ago.

And why did the council do that? Because the damage — to the homeowner and the public — of taking the retaining wall out would be greater than the harm done to the public of letting it stand. Which was the right decision. If the wall goes, serious erosion could result along Torres Street, but if it stays … well … actually … nothing happens.

What does a similar analysis of Fink's situation show? If he takes out the trash enclosure, he'll have to find another place to store the trash (which is presumably substantial from his large restaurant), and the evidence seems to show that no such place exists that wouldn't be very inconvenient for the restaurant or the public or both. So the downside of taking out the enclosure is likely to be substantial.

Meanwhile, the upside isn't much. First of all, as we have just said, no other such private trash storage area exists in any park the city, and nobody is looking to create one. And when it comes to setting a precedent for other illegal uses and nonconformities around town — well, there are many hundreds, if not thousands, of those in Carmel. Probably every building built before 1970 has 10 or 20 of them — and while lots of those should be fixed as soon as possible, everybody also understands that many of them would be so difficult or costly to correct, they'll have to be tolerated, i.e., "grandfathered," for many years, just as the council did with the retaining wall on Torres.

As Judge Susan Matcham said in court Thursday, the city should have issued a permit for the trash enclosure in 2006 when the plans for the restaurant were approved, so shouldn't the enclosure simply be permitted now?

We don't believe David Fink is the target of anybody's vendetta. But, as far as the trash enclosure is concerned, he's definitely being treated capriciously. The trash enclosure should stay.

Letters to the Editor

Thank you, Sam Downing

Dear Editor,

It was with sorrow that I read of the death of Sam Downing. Some 12 years ago, Sam saved a young stranger's life. While travelling in Ukraine I saw a local teenager suffer a terrible seizure. His father begged me on his knees to save him, saying he had severe seizures from birth, that Kiev hospitals had not been able to help, and that Ukraine's doctors said the seizures were worsening and the boy would soon die.

I made arrangements to bring the boy and his family to California for medical care. By chance I ran into Sam and told him the grim story. The next day, thanks to Sam, the boy was given full exams at the new SVMH Imaging Center where tests showed severe epilepsy. And, in another miracle, a doctor discovered that the young man, who was believed to totally deaf, might hear with new hi-tech hearing aids. No one charged a dime!

Thanks to the kindness of Carmel Hearing Aids and the Starkey Foundation, the young man can now hear and he has been seizure-free for 12 years. Thanks again, Sam, on behalf of the boy you saved and his grateful family far away.

Frank Koucky, Carmel Valley

What has Cal Am done for us?

Dear Editor,

California American Water is a state-sanctioned monopoly. The definition of monopoly is no competition, which Cal Am enjoys on the Monterey Peninsula.

The California Public Utilities Commissioners, appointed by the Governor, set a target for annual revenues, but both the CPUC and Cal Am treat the target as a revenue guarantee. That is why the ratepayers are paying out $64 million for the water they did not use between 2011 and 2016. The public had little say in this decision. This is an example of government at its worst, which has led to us paying the highest water bills in the nation, according to a study from a Washington lobbying group.

Conversely, a publicly run water utility, which is how 87 percent of the country gets its water, has real benefits. Corporate profits and taxes are eliminated and the CPUC is removed from the process. Ratepayers elect the decision-makers at the public agency. The agency board will make rate-setting decisions. They will analyze new water source projects which are not driven by profit incentives. Their financial books are transparent, and open to the public. They will determine the fate of the Los Padres Dam which Cal Am is allowing to silt up. Public financing is far more affordable than what Cal Am can offer. Most importantly, the agency board must answer to the ratepayers. We can vote them in, we can vote them out.

A lifelong love affair with cooking, brewing and fly-fishing anywhere

Great Lives

By ELAINE HESSER

'WE WERE the only ones in the neighborhood whose last names didn't end in a vowel," said chef Brandon Miller of his upbringing in the Cow Hollow district of San Francisco, near North Beach — a very Italian neighborhood.

His neighbors would make dishes like veal-stuffed squash blossoms, and let him and his young buddies drink wine diluted with water. Meanwhile, his mother was working her way through Julia Child's "Mastering the Art of French Cooking" long before Julie Powell ever thought of blogging about it. Some dishes were more successful than others.

Brandon Miller

One day, Miller said, while he was still in a high chair, his mom served his older brother a salmon mousse and left the room, telling him she expected it to be gone when she got back. He said his brother heaved the dish out of the window, it flew across the breezeway and landed on the roof next door, where it remained all summer — a jarring pink splat on the tar and gravel.

Nevertheless, the sum total of the experiences ended up guiding him onto a culinary path from an early age.

Miller, who helms the kitchen at Alvarado Street Brewery and Grill, has been working in kitchens for more than 30 years.

He started as a kid, cracking crabs at San Francisco's Fisherman's Wharf as a summer job, and at 20 took over the oyster bar at Pacific Heights Bar and Grill, where he reorganized the setup to improve efficiency. By the time he'd moved on to the city's famous Fog City Diner — first in the pantry and then as sous chef, he said, "I knew this was the natural thing for me to do."

He worked there with Cindy Pawlcyn, who now owns restaurants in Napa and who at one time was the culinary consultant for the Monterey Bay Aquarium. From Fog City, Miller went on to work with chef Michael Chiarello, an Emmy-winning Food Network star known for his exceptional Italian cuisine.

Miller said he respected Chiarello and learned a lot from him. "He graduated from the top of his class at the Culinary Institute of America. He's a real sharp cookie." By his early 20s, though, Miller said to himself, "I really need to learn how to do this right."

A cooking voyage

He went to Amsterdam to develop his skills, and later began applying for a stage (rhymes with "garage," an unpaid internship) at three-star Michelin restaurants in France. Landing at the famous George Blanc Hotel between Lyon and Dijon, Miller successfully completed his three-month stint with far less stress than many others.

"I didn't speak any French," so he didn't understand any of the ribbing and verbal abuse going on around him. "But cooking is like mathematics, it's a universal language," explained Miller.

Next, he said, "I ate my way through Italy." Returning to San Francisco, he cooked for several other restaurants, finally working his way to executive chef jobs. He was invited to Monterey to be the executive chef at Stokes Restaurant, where he remained for 13 years, serving what he described as "country Mediterranean" food.

When that job ended, he took a break and traveled through Basque country in Spain, satisfying his appetite for learning about the foods of the region. He came to Carmel and collaborated with Gabe Georis on Mundaka, a restaurant specializing in Spanish tapas, or small bites.

The decision was made after nine years to change the theme to a Baja-style restaurant, and Miller decided to combine his love of beer brewing with the cuisine at Alvarado Street Brewery and Grill.

'A magical thing'

He said he's been making his own beer for more than 25 years, after completing a two-week course at UC Davis with a friend. "It's a lot like cooking — you follow a recipe, but then you leave it for fermentation. That's a magical kind of thing."

In a creative move, Miller uses leftover wort — water with sugar that's used to ferment the brew — in his pizza dough. "The yeast just goes crazy with it," he said, producing an excellent crust. He's also considering fermenting his own hot sauce and making kimchi, which is the Korean version of sauerkraut.

Miller's next proposed venture is Yeast of Eden, a combination brewery and restaurant occupying much of the old Homescapes space in Carmel Plaza. He's working with brewer J.C. Hill and Hill's father John, who's the architect — and not coincidentally, the owner of Alvarado Street Brewery and Grill.

Along with his wife, public relations powerhouse Marci Bracco, Miller is the proud parent of six relatively famous French bulldogs — Geno, Hugo, Rooney, Lulu, Zoey and Buddha — at their home in Salinas. Hugo in particular is quite the pup-about-town, often seen dining with his mom on patios from here to Carmel Valley.

"They have great personalities, I just fell in love with them. They're all individuals, too. For example, Zoey just dug a hole and lay down in it for no reason, while Hugo's sort of staring off into space. They're very entertaining," he said.

When he can get away, Miller relaxes by fly fishing (mostly catch-and-release). He still follows the old-fashioned practice of tying his own flies, and has taken rod and reel to Chile, Argentina and Croatia. "Marci has an uncanny knack for picking vacation places with great fishing," he noted.

What else would Miller like to try his hand at? His mused for a few moments and said, "I don't know. Maybe rolling my own cigars?" That would certainly go with the fishing, the food and the beer, wouldn't it?

THE TWISTS AND TURNS THAT LED TO ART

Carmel's artists

By DENNIS TAYLOR

ARTISTIC PEOPLE often steal away to a secret place, a private sanctuary where time stands still, the temperature is tingly-warm, and inexplicable things magically appear on canvas, or paper, or in a lump of soft clay, or rise from the strings of a guitar or the keys of a piano.

That "artist's zone" also is where Rolf Lygren's three-decade-old injury fades into the background while he paints placid seascapes, lush hillsides, wildlife in the woods, rustic buildings, workers in the lettuce fields, or Rockwell-esque city scenes in his Carmel Valley studio.

In 1985, Lygren fell from a second-story rooftop at a construction job and broke his back. The injury put him in the hospital for two months and in rehabilitation and recovery for … well, honestly, it still bugs him. But life has its twists and turns.

The stuff of novels

"I had a lot of pain and a very difficult time, and the rehab process was a long one. One thing I knew for sure during that time was that I was never going to go back to construction," said the 66-year-old watercolorist, who, during the excruciating healing process, regained a gift for painting that had been in cobwebs since his teenage years.

"What I discovered was that painting helped me focus on something other than what was happening with my body," he said. "I'd have to say that art has been a major factor in my healing process. I no longer battle with the pain — I don't even address it anymore. I choose to shift my focus into creativity, rather than expending energy on something that isn't taking me anywhere."

That choice has been life-altering for Lygren, who, since 1996, has made a name for himself as a Monterey Bay area artist. His work has been featured in solo shows at the Elmarie Dyke Gallery at the Pacific Grove Art Center and the Marjorie Evans Gallery in Carmel. He won the Best Watercolor Award at the Carmel Art Festival in 2016, a year in which he also took first place at the Carmel Valley Art Exhibition, and third place at Plein Air Carmel Valley. In 2015, he was one of 15 finalists (out of 500 artists) at a show in Scottsdale, Ariz. His resume of honors and accomplishments is a full page long.

Oddly, it's possible that none of it would have happened if not for the accident. Lygren hadn't touched a brush since his high school days, a time when he was showing unusual talent as a painter.

His childhood, in many ways, was the stuff of a Mark Twain novel. His family owned a country resort on Clear Lake, 110 miles north of San Francisco, where Lygren and his brother worked split shifts every day of the summer at the restaurant, the bait and tackle shop, building docks for their boats, or whatever else needed to be done.

"I'd have about four hours every day between shifts, and I was almost always in a boat during that time, fishing or waterskiing, or whatever," he said. "I think it gave me an appreciation of nature, especially a great love for water — something you see in a lot of my paintings."

Christmas breaks frequently included a trip to the Monterey Peninsula, including wanderings through Carmel galleries, where Lygren's mother and grandmother became acquainted with James Peter Cost, whose paint-

Grove has won or shared the MTAL crown 12 times (the Padres have won four titles in that time), and the Breakers were outright champions four straight years until Carmel ousted them this season. They beat Salinas and Palma this season, and whipped Monte Vista Christian twice in 2016, a year when P.G. won the CCS Division IV championship.

Despite all of that, they were placed in the PCAL's Mission Division — the second-strongest grouping of teams — with Christopher (a Gilroy school), Everett Alvarez (Salinas), San Benito (Hollister), Seaside, and St. Francis College Prep (Watsonville).

"I can't speak for [Pacific Grove coach] Dan Powers, but I think he's probably a little bit disappointed that P.G. wasn't placed in our league. He's a very competitive guy who probably would like to be in the position we're in now, playing all the best teams," Grahl said.

Grahl scratched his head wondering why the realignment committee picked Monte Vista Christian over Pacific Grove as a PCAL Gabilan Division team, particularly since it means separating Carmel and P.G. — schools who have been archrivals since Carmel High opened in 1940.

"If you're an old-timer from P.G. or Carmel, it probably doesn't feel right that those two high schools are no longer in the same league," he said. "We've already scheduled a game with them next year because it's been a long, healthy rivalry for this area, and we definitely want to keep it going."

Other teams assigned

Soledad and Stevenson landed in the PCAL's third-strongest bunching, the Cypress Division, with Gilroy, North Monterey County, North Salinas, and Pajaro Valley. King City, Greenfield, Gonzales, and Oakwood are in the Santa Lucia Division with Marina and Watsonville.

Meanwhile, Carmel girls were placed in the third-strongest basketball division — the Cypress — with King City, Pacific Grove, Soledad, Stevenson, and St. Francis.

The Padres' boys soccer team also is a Cypress Division team, playing Greenfield, King City, Monte Vista Christian, Pacific Collegiate, and Seaside, while the girls were placed an echelon higher, in the Mission Division, with Everett Alvarez, Greenfield, King City, North Salinas, Notre Dame, Pacific Collegiate and Watsonville.

Carmel wrestlers will compete in the Mission Division with Gonzales, Monterey, North County, North Salinas, Pacific Grove, Pajaro Valley, and Watsonville.

ings often appeared on the cover of Reader's Digest.

"I think those trips are what inspired my mother and grandmother to start painting," he mused. "Neither of them painted professionally, but began taking lessons from Nevin Kempthrone, a notable artist who visited our area from Sedona, Ariz. And since I liked to draw, I got to take lessons from her, too."

At age 14, Lygren painted a seascape (which he still has) that won first prize at the Lake County Fair, but life took a different turn after he graduated from high school: The creative construction skills he had developed working with his family at the resort offered him a career path.

"An ability to come up with unique ways of constructing things allowed me to work on some interesting projects," said Lygren, who began restoring 19th-century Victorian homes and buildings. "I eventually was hired by the Office of the State Architect as a restoration specialist, which is what brought me back to Monterey. I worked on the Cooper-Molera adobe."

When that restoration was finished, and it was time to move on to new projects in other parts of the state, Lygren balked. He had fallen in love with the Monterey Peninsula and decided to stay.

He worked locally until the accident changed his path.

When he got back on his feet, Lygren enrolled at UC Santa Cruz, earning a Bachelor of Fine Art degree, then supplemented his education by taking classes and workshops from notable artists, including Irving Shapiro of Chicago, Timothy J. Clark of Los Angeles, and Carmel Art Association icon Donald Teague, who became the primary illustrator for The Saturday Evening Post.

"Donald Teague was an incredible watercolorist," he said. "I used to go to his house, and we'd just sit and talk about art. He'd review my work, and show me a few things, and I think that started taking me much deeper into art."

More inspiration came from California art legends Wayne Thiebaud and Richard Diebenkorn, among others, he said.

Lygren's work was showcased for more than a decade at Lyons Head Gallery in Carmel Valley Village. The gallery closed in 2017, so he is looking for a new location to display his art.

He paints nowadays in a bright studio at 15 W. Carmel Valley Road, in Carmel Valley Village, where he welcomes walk-in visitors. His work can be seen online at rolflygren.com.

it takes hitting the boots on the pavement — and that can't be done by the city, it can't be done by Visit Carmel, it has to be done by you guys."

Councilwoman Carolyn Hardy quoted a common saying among lawyers, "If it isn't in writing, it isn't so."

Rerig said he'd be happy to work with Visit Carmel and the restaurant group to set up a payment plan, rather than demanding the whole $13,000 from each of them at once.

Resident Barbara Livingston said the plan shouldn't proceed until the financial aspect is settled.

"It doesn't sound like we're ready to move ahead today, does it?" she said. "I don't know how you move forward without a really solid commitment."

But council members were satisfied they'd get the cash and unanimously voted to approve the Civitas contract and proceed.

"They will be paying for all employee hours required to assist in servicing their needs, but the amounts are not yet known as they are still finalizing some of the details," Uslar told The Pine Cone.

He also said the city had a "very positive experience working with" the "highly responsive and respectful production staff" for the HBO show when crews first filmed in Monterey.

In March, an open casting call was held in Seaside for extras for the series.

Monterey County Film Commission spokeswoman Karen Nordstrand said that December press notes from the production company indicate the film locations include "a variety of locations from private properties to beaches." The company also said filming would begin April 9.

All roles in the musical are shared except that of Oliver "Daddy" Warbucks, who is played by Andrew Mansour.

"I was able to find so much wonderful talent on the Monterey Peninsula," Burns added. "The talent of the kids here is overwhelming and wonderful. It's a pretty sophisticated musical, and they're embracing it — it's really lovely."

Showtime is 7:30 p.m., except matinees, which start at 2 p.m. The musical continues Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through April 29. This week, MPWMD water demand manager Stephanie Locke confirmed she's been working on a spreadsheet showing how many seats restaurants actually have vs. what's allowed in their permits. She said she plans on turning the information over to the city later this week or next week, so Fasulo can verify any numbers that are out of compliance.

But it won't include every restaurant in town, she noted, because some establishments predate the water district's permit requirements.

WALL

"It's a very steep part of town," she said.

The issue came to the city's attention after the Buddens received approval in January for a 442-square-foot second-story addition. "A topographic survey submitted with the design study application indicates that the existing fence is located approximately 8 feet from Torres Street and encroaches into the city right of way by 6 feet 3 inches," Tarone said. "The city has no record of a permit being issued for this fence."

As a condition of approval of the new second floor, Budden and her husband were required to either remove the encroachments or get permission from the city to keep them.

But the wall, posts and fence were added before they bought the property 22 years ago, she said, and many other homes on the street have similar elements that are also intended to keep the dirt from running down the hill.

And if the city requires them to remove it all, she said, it will be liable for the mud and debris flow that might result.

Councilman Bobby Richards favored allowing everything to stay. "We're really creating a hardship for this resident, I believe," he said, by requiring the Buddens to remove everything.

Councilwoman Carrie Theis, however, argued for following the rules. "The prior owner did this without any regard for the city ordinances or building codes or rights of way, so what we're trying to do here is put things in compliance based on what the current codes are, so we can keep the aesthetics of the village in line," she said.

Councilwoman Jan Reimers said the pillars and fence should go, but the retaining wall could remain, in some fashion, to keep the mature plants and dirt in place. She also noted that it doesn't really affect the right of way, since there's still plenty of space between the edge of the road and the wall for pedestrians and parked cars.

The council voted 4-1 to deny a permit for the pillars and fence, but to allow the wall. The Buddens will be required to work with the city's planning department on the height and shape of the wall.

From fins and flukes to fur and paws — and pet-safe dye

By ELAINE HESSER

SHEBA IS purple, except for a shock of turquoise hair right on top of her head. She's a Chinese crested dog, and she belongs to Renae Crevalle, manager of Suds 'N Scissors, a grooming shop in the Crossroads.

Sheba and her best human buddy, Renae Crevalle, on a yacht called "She's a 10" in Miami.

Crevalle said she and Sheba have been besties for more than five years, and that the pooch is a celebrity in town, where it takes her "an hour to walk two blocks" because people want to fuss over her. And she assures everyone that the color is perfectly safe because she uses a special dye made specifically for dogs.

The Miami, Fla., native didn't start out to be a groomer. But just like Sheba, she's always been comfortable in the limelight. Her father taught to her to scuba dive by the time she was 5, and she ended up being on the TV show "Flipper" as a result of her skills. Crevalle won the title of "Little Miss Universe" around the same time.

The pageant was basically in her own backyard in Florida, so she entered and said she "had a lot of fun." She was also in a movie called "Island of the Lost," as well as more than 30 commercials for businesses like Eastern Airlines, McDonald's and M&M's by the time she was 16.

Later, Crevalle moved to Chicago, where she ran several different businesses, including high-end consignment shops. She recalled going from apartment building to apartment building once a week, picking up the clothes that sellers left with the doormen. And between 1980 and 1992, she ran four video rental stores.

Once she picked up a camera, however, her life changed. She discovered the world of animal photography — specifically dogs. She ended up partnering with a groomer in Chicago to do a Christmas shoot, then helped them install software to computerize their systems.

Herding cats

After being introduced to Carmel and the Peninsula on a visit here — and one too many Chicago winters — she was on the internet and found a Craigslist ad for a groomer in the Crossroads, at Suds 'N Scissors. As it turned out, she was a great match for the job and owner Todd Harris hired her. That was four years ago.

Now she spends her time helping shepherd some 40 dogs (and sometimes as many as three cats) through the salon each day. Despite the number of paws involved, she said, "It's a very calm shop." She explained that the dogs stay in individual kennels and wait their turns to be bathed, pedicured, brushed and blown dry. "They're den animals; they feel safe in the kennel," she said.

Also, Crevalle said, there are sanitary aspects to the business people might not think about. Not only do all the surfaces have to be disinfected between animals, but if just one pup comes in with fleas, it has to be immediately bathed and any hair that's removed has to be bagged and disposed of.

> 'You have to train your pet and not let your pet train you'

Bathing cats is another matter. "We do it very delicately, in the tub, with two people at all times," she said. The animals that come into the salon are all well-behaved, though — feline precautions notwithstanding. "They know what's expected of them," said Crevalle. "You have to train your pet and not let your pet train you."

In addition to helping out with the grooming, her management job involves marketing, creating artwork (including a wrap for the business' mobile unit), scheduling, purchasing retail items that are sold in the shop and setting up and running the computer system. She also manages the salon's 10 employees.

Crevalle is a member of the Del Monte Kennel Club and still loves taking photos of animals in her spare time. She also volunteers with Max's Helping Paws Foundation, an organization that helps pet owners with unexpected veterinary expenses to treat their pets and thus avoid having to put them to sleep.

She said that the best part of her job at the salon was get-

Her heart is filled with beauty and she has an eye for design

By ELAINE HESSER

SHE GREW up in Santa Monica, but when Liz Davies' family moved to Darien, Conn., for her then-husband's job, with her second-, fourth- and ninth-grade children in tow, she made a discovery. The small (but wealthy) enclave about 37 miles north of New York City was about to tear down a train station that dated to 1900.

Instead, thought Davies and several others, why not petition the state to keep the station, raise some money and turn it into a youth center. And that's how the Darien Depot began its renaissance in 1989. Now home to a snack bar, gathering places, games and activities, the founders — including Davies — approached the project a little differently from the beginning.

Rather than imposing their vision on the center, they gathered local students and listened to what they wanted and felt they needed, and gave them as much assistance and freedom as possible to bring the spot to life. "We taught them how to grow up," Davies recalled.

But, sadly, she never got to meet Martha Stewart

That approach — listening and then acting — is the same one that she brings to her business, Liz Davies: A Celebration of Home. A licensed realtor associated with Sotheby's, Davies has spent this chapter of her life staging houses, whether for sale, setting them up as second homes or helping seniors downsize. Or, she'll just give clients advice on how to redecorate.

The business started with one of her friends in Connecticut whose husband was a realtor, and then when her kids had grown and she found herself alone again, she missed her three sisters — all of whom were in California — so she moved back. Her only regret was that Martha Stewart lived one town over in Connecticut, and she never got up the nerve to knock on her door and to ask to go to work for her.

Davies' urge to renovate came naturally to her. Her father designed homes, and, Davies said, "I would rather have a tool belt on than anything." One of her sisters also had the decorating bug, which in her case expressed itself through a long-time stint as a gardening editor with Sunset magazine. But it took a couple tries before Davies nailed her business plan.

In between, she was a flight attendant, she worked at La Quinta Resort in Palm Springs, greeting private planes and their VIP passengers, and was the leasing agent for 30,000 square feet of commercial property in the Oldtown district of La Quinta. She became a realtor to celebrities like Ben Affleck, Jennifer Aniston and Stevie Nicks.

Her mother, meanwhile, was starting to age, so Davies moved her up here around 2008 to be closer to two of her other sisters. And around the same time, she met Meridith Baer, of Meridith Baer Home, which according to the company's web site is "the premier home staging company in the nation."

"I said, 'That's what I want to do,'" said Davies. She admired Baer's clean lines, minimalist use of color and the way she let the house "speak to her." Davies said she discovered she had an instinctive sense of the way a room should be laid out. She's kept her realtor's license, although she confessed, "I'd rather go through a house room by room, than a contract line by line."

Prowling the shops

Since moving here herself in 2011, she estimated she's staged and/or redecorated more than 450 homes, actually moving into 18 of them to get the job done right. She explained that her mother had been a world traveler, and she seemed to have inherited her ease in moving around.

She took a training program to become an accredited stager, and also studied design at UCLA back in the day, but most of what Davies does just seems to come naturally. Her before-and-after pictures show a keen eye for color, balance and composition — and for having just enough stuff in a room to make it comfortable.

Not only does she listen to her clients, but, she said, she also tries to "hear" what the architect was trying to say when the home was designed and built. Some things are obvious — if there's a big window facing the ocean, there should be a chair in front of it.

Others are more subtle — if it's an arts and crafts home, for example, the decorative objects should be part of that tradition.

Davies prowls consignment shops for furniture and fixings, and is dedicated to getting every room in a place just right. She makes sure that families know when she's redecorating that she isn't being disrespectful of their things, too. And while she's living out her passion, she carries her late mother's last bit of advice with her: "Learn to forgive and love with all your heart."

That's all good for making the world a more beautiful place.

She's been a realtor to the stars, and a founder of a children's center in Connecticut, but Liz Davies' true passion is decorating and staging homes – so much so that she often moves into them for a while to get them "just so."

WOMEN IN BUSINESS

'Wine Shark' is Woman of the Year

By MARY SCHLEY

A VETERAN of the wine industry who has put that experience and the relationships she's built to use for good will be honored as Meals on Wheels' Woman of the Year in Monterey May 6. Cheryl Warner, who works each year to procure local wines for the Culinary Classique d'Elegance, the nonprofit's signature fundraiser, will be feted at the annual Women Who Care Campaign luncheon.

The Women Who Care network is a group of philanthropic women who raise funds for Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula, and at their annual luncheon each May, they honor one woman "who has given generously of her time to Meals on Wheels." The luncheon also serves as a kickoff for the agency's annual Save Our Breakfast fundraiser, which pays for the breakfasts Meals on Wheels provides, while some federal tax dollars and other donations cover lunch and dinner. Volunteer drivers take the meals to shut-ins and others in need daily.

Cheryl Warner

A committee selects a Woman of the Year to honor at the annual luncheon because her "exemplary service to Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula and her community is inspirational." Last year, Paula Arnold received the award for her years of volunteer service as a driver.

This year, Warner was chosen for her "generosity, enthusiasm and dedication to the nonprofit sector," according to the committee.

Warner has served on the California Restaurant Association Board for 15 years, worked for two liquor distributors, and was vice president of sales and marketing for McIntyre Vineyards for a decade, leaving the company in 2015.

"Not only has she solicited wine for Meals on Wheels for the past 20-plus years, she has tirelessly worked with a group of hospitality friends to help fundraising efforts for Hurricane Katrina, Big Sur fire relief, Rancho Cielo, Boys & Girls Clubs of Monterey County, Community Partnership For Youth and other area nonprofits," the committed said. "We are deeply honored to recognize Cheryl as our Women Who Care Woman of the Year 2018."

Julie Ann Lozano, a key organizer of the Women Who Care Campaign and Luncheon, and a previous recipient of the Woman of the Year award, said she considers Warner to be the "Woman of the Century," for all the good she does for the community.

"Cheryl Warner's roots run deep in the community," she said. "The contacts she made during her 36-year career in the wine industry, and her friendly and outgoing manner have served her community well."

"Cheers to our Wine Shark!" reads the front of the invitation for the event, which will take place from noon to 3 p.m. in the Ferrante Room atop the Marriott on Calle Principal in downtown Monterey.

The cost is $60 per person, $10 of which is tax deductible, and a raffle will be held for various prizes. Marich will be there with its "candy bar" to ensure all who wish it will have plenty of delicious sweets to take home, too. For more information, visit www.mow-mp.org.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS

Teamwork that's important on the field and in the kitchen

By LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

DESPITE A pitching arm that could rocket a softball at 68 mph for North Salinas High, Teresa Raine-Lee imagined she'd go into theater. She even majored in theater and education at Indiana University, having been sent there on a full-ride scholarship on the speed of that arm.

Instead of becoming a thespian, though, she's done a fair amount of coaching, based on a triple-sport talent in softball, volleyball and basketball. Which makes sense, having grown up the youngest of four in the athletic Raine family of Salinas. Her brother Steve's 90-mph pitch got him a draft pick from the SF Giants his senior year in high school, and after deferring his baseball career for college in Arizona, he ended up playing for the Kansas City Royals. Sister Jill was a gymnast, who made it to the Junior Olympics, and sister Staci, a javelin thrower, took fourth in the Olympic trials, twice.

"In our family, 'Can you pass the bread' meant put your hands up to catch it," said Raine-Lee.

'More about doing than talking'

But if you ask her to talk about her induction into the Salinas Valley Sports Hall of Fame, her invitation to the Olympic tryouts for softball in 1991, or how she pitched 45 out of 68 games for a Division 1 university her freshman year at Indiana, she'll reminisce for a moment and then say, "Athletics are more about doing it than talking about it."

Raine-Lee was in middle school the first time she saw Bill Lee. She was dining at Rio Grill with her family when they were greeted by the dashing 29-year-old restaurateur. She found him charming and kind, but was impressed, mostly, by the DeLorean he kept parked out front, the main memory she carried from that evening.

She stayed long enough to know that a No. 24 was a turkey-avocado sandwich

When Raine-Lee was 21 and on a visit home from Indiana, her mother took her to lunch at Quon's Orchid Grill Restaurant. When Lee stopped by the table, her mother, who knew him through her job in the produce industry, introduced him to her daughter. This time, Raine-Lee noticed him.

She returned to visit him on holidays and during breaks from school. She was 26 when they married. The couple lived in Hawaii for a few years but returned to the Peninsula, where they opened their first restaurant together.

"I was 29 when we opened Billy Quon's Rotisserie at Ryan Ranch," Raine-Lee said. "I was excited but a little bit on the shy side. I liked working behind the scenes, making sure everything was running smoothly. It made me anxious to go out and greet people at their table. Not anymore. Maybe it was my theater background that enabled me to act the part until I became more confident."

The Lees sold their Ryan Ranch restaurant once she was expecting their son, Kai. Now 16, he is a sophomore at Carmel High, where he plays quarterback on the varsity football team. His parents have never missed a game.

Lee has established 10 restaurants over the years, Raine-Lee counts, each wildly successful upon opening, and six of which the couple has done together, during their 23-year marriage. Two years ago this month, they opened Sur Restaurant in the Barnyard Shopping Center, a "California coastal, comfort food restaurant," she said, with a Big Sur feeling in the design.

"This place is a part of everyone who comes here, and everyone who works here," she said.

Growing up, Raine-Lee never imagined herself in the restaurant business. The closest she ever got was working a few months at To-go's in Northridge Mall during high school, which she gave up when basketball season started. She was there just long enough to remember that a No. 24 is a turkey-avocado sandwich. She believes life is about choices, and she wouldn't change the ones she's made or where they've led her.

"I've always been intrigued by the restaurant business," she said. "I see a lot of crossover energy with sports. It requires teamwork, and we all have our positions to play. We also have a sense of family in the restaurant; we take care of each other. I'm not sure there's a name for my job, but Bill and I are somewhere between Mom and Dad, and coaches. We all move well together, like a skilled basketball team."

Successfully combining her love of theater with her athletic background – not to mention love of her husband, restaurateur Bill Lee – Teresa Raine-Lee enjoys the day-to-day challenges of running eateries like the couple's current venture, Sur, in the Barnyard.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS

Got a picture you don't know about? She'll figure it out.

By ELAINE HESSER

ALL HER life, Lily Yu has loved art. She comes from a family of creative women, including her mother, aunts and sisters, and has been drawing and painting since she was 6. Her other great loves are food and wine, so when she was ready for a change from her life in her native Los Angeles, a move here — where she had visited on vacation — seemed like a natural choice.

Schooled at UCLA and Cal State Long Beach in fine arts and art history, Yu put herself through college with a catering business she started at 18 in her mother's kitchen. She would later run two restaurant/gallery combinations, places where bohemian types could come and play music or do poetry readings.

Seemingly impossible

For 13 years, she worked as the director of the Andrew Weiss Gallery in Beverly Hills, where she said her real-world education took place.

"I handled works by 20th century masters, like Matisse, Chagall and Picasso," she explained, developing a knack for recognizing fake works from dealing with the real ones. "There are things that just don't feel right" about the frauds, she said.

A love of art, fostered by a family of artists, developed Lily Yu's keen visual sense. After more than 20 years working in galleries, she's an accomplished art appraiser and detective. She especially enjoys tracking down the provenance of unknown works.

When corporate CEOs wanted to assemble art collections that would represent who they were personally, living on after they'd died, Yu was there to help them. But after a while, she wanted to indulge her own creativity and become more independent. She found Carmel to be "charming and intriguing," infused with the artistic spirit she sought.

Artist's table

When Yu got here, although she found the town "very welcoming," she couldn't find the space she'd hoped for to open a multi-artist gallery, and she discovered that the long-time residents had already assembled their own art collections, so those services weren't required, either.

Instead, she became a sort of art-world private eye, running down the provenance of works people had, but didn't know anything about. Her business, appropriately, is named Agent Art. "Everyone has something somewhere and they don't know what it is," she said. "Maybe their late uncle left it to them."

She specializes in 20th century and contemporary American, European and Asian art, including photographs.

"I recently took a case that seemed impossible," she said. "A typical appraisal takes one month. This one took several." It was an unsigned drawing by an artist from pre-World-War-II Dresden, and the way she was able finally to run its origins down was by the distinctive way the artist wrote the numbers in the date on the piece.

She also does appraisals and helps people decide what works to buy, based on value and market research. Another passion for Yu is bringing people together for good causes. While in Beverly Hills, she was able to assemble more than 300 nonprofits to raise more than $1 million for charity.

In this community, she hopes to combine her love of food and wine and art to curate exhibits at local cafes, starting with the Village Corner and the Shale Canyon tasting room. "The Shale Canyon show will be a pop art show, reflecting the playful nature of the wine and the owner," she said.

'Charming and intriguing' and infused with 'artistic spirit'

Coordinating with the Village Corner, she hopes to have a series of dinners and exhibitions she's calling "The Artist's Table," where artists and chefs will be on-hand to discuss the work and how it inspires the food.

In the area for five years, Yu lives near Stevenson School, and has embraced the spirit of the town. "I love the burgeoning renaissance of culture, the innovations in food, the musical scene, the Center for Photographic Art …" and the list went on.

She hopes to be able to become part of the fabric of the town's art scene, bringing it together, and adding her own contributions to her newfound bohemian village.

Museum celebrates women in art with gala, shows, talks and much more

By CHRIS COUNTS

After declaring 2018 the "Year of the Woman," the Monterey Museum of Art will carry the theme over to its annual fundraising Spring Gala which is set for Saturday, April 28, at the Tehama Golf Club.

The black tie gala will not only offer attendees a chance to rub elbows with other art lovers, but learn more about the many contributions women have made in art — particularly painters and photographers from California such as E. Charlton Fortune, Imogen Cunningham and Evelyn McCormick.

"We wanted to bring people together to celebrate art and the museum in a fun, yet educational way," explained gala co-chair Adriana Hayward, who also serves on the museum's board of directors. "Our discussions on the theme for this year kept coming back to honoring women who defined art in the last 100 years. Guests will travel through time with these artists and leave with a deeper appreciation of their contributions."

Besides art, the gala will include cocktails, dinner, music, a live auction and an after-party. Proceeds from the event will help pay for the museum's exhibits, educational programs and Free Family Fun Days.

See ART page 48A

Dr. Sarah Frahm Delivers Expert Dental Care

DR. JEANETTE KERN RETIRES, PASSES BATON TO NATIONALLY RECOGNIZED DENTIST

Dr. Sarah Frahm provides comprehensive dental care in a spa-like setting. She recently purchased Dr. Jeanette Kern's dental practice in Monterey, where she is now the leader of an all female team of accomplished dental professionals.

"Dr. Kern and I share a great love for comprehensive care," says Dr. Frahm. "Considering the whole person, and where that person is in her or his health journey is what we are all about. I am so grateful to Dr. Kern for blazing the comprehensive dental health trail on the peninsula."

Prior to taking the helm at her own practice in Monterey, Dr. Frahm worked as a dentist in Salinas.

"When I made the decision to retire, I knew I wanted to recruit a dentist with a compassionate spirit, and amazing clinical skill set. That is who Dr. Sarah Frahm is," says Dr. Kern.

Dr. Frahm brings more than a decade of dental experience to her leadership role. She has completed hundreds of hours of postdoctoral training in cosmetic and restorative dentistry. Dr. Frahm also possesses expertise in the design and placement of New You dentures, an innovative approach to the replacement of missing teeth for optimum fit, and appearance enhancement.

Dr. Frahm lives with her husband and three children in Pacific Grove. She enjoys hikes with her family and spending weekends at the beach.

Dr. Frahm is accepting new patients at 831-372-8011, and the practice address is 660 Camino Aguajito, Suite 201, Monterey, CA 93940. ■

ART

Tickets start at $500. Tehama is located at 25000 Via Malpaso. For more details, call (831) 372-5477, ext. 105.

Aside from the gala, the museum currently is displaying four exhibits dedicated to women who made their mark on California's art scene in the century, including a show of early mid-century abstracts by the late Joan Savo ("Through the Years," closes April 22) and a display of still life paintings by the late Beth Van Hoesen ("Still Life," closes April 29).

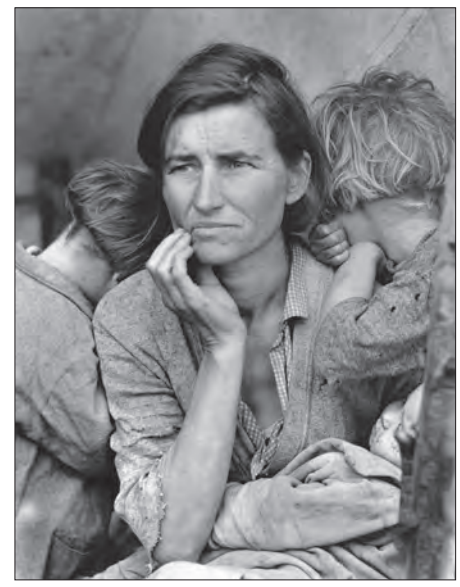
Also, a collection of images by pioneering female photographers ("Into the Light," closes April 29), and an exhibit of paintings by some of the state's most important female artists ("California Women Artists," closes Dec. 1).

The group photography show includes work by Cunningham, Anne Brigman, Dorthea Lange and others, while the group painting display calls attention a varied assortment of painters, including Fortune, McCormick and Grace Hudson.

The "Year of the Woman" theme will also recognized Saturday, April 7, when the museum hosts a Family Fun Day from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Titled "Who Runs the Art World? Girls," the event is free and includes activities for all ages, as well as live music by Samz School of Rock from noon to 2 p.m. The museum is located at 559 Pacific St.

The museum will offer many more events celebrating women in art throughout the year. For more details, visit www.montereyart.org.



Many women from California have made important contributions to the arts, including E. Charlton Fortune, who painted "Above the Town" (left); Beth Van Hosen, who created this impressive portrait of a bobcat (above); and Dorothea Lange, who photographed a mother in a migrant worker's camp during the Great Depression (right).

LINDSAY DYSON, DIRECTOR

The Transcendental Meditation® technique (or TM®) is a simple, natural, effortless, technique that allows the active thinking mind to settle down and experience quieter levels of thought and what has been called the source of thought, the Unified Field or pure consciousness. Simultaneously, the body settles down and gains a state of rest and relaxation that dissolves the build up of stress, tension, and anxiety.

400+ scientific studies published in peer-reviewed journals have shown that TM reduces anxiety, high blood pressure and the risk of heart attack, death, and stroke. It substantially reduces or eliminates Post Traumatic Stress. Intelligence and happiness increase. Practiced twice a day for 20 minutes, TM improves all areas of life.

It's spring again — time for poets to extoll the virtues of the season

Whan that Aprille with his shoures soote
The droghte of Marche hath perced to the roote,
And bathed every veyne in swich licour
Of which vertu engendered is the flour

— Prologue to the Canterbury Tales, by Chaucer

AH, THE return of spring, as described by Geoff Chaucer. I can remember looking out the classroom window at the University of Detroit while the professor droned on in Middle English. I wished I were anywhere else but that classroom while April's sweet-smelling showers bathed every vein in such liquid.

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

Did you miss the vernal equinox? It happened on March 20 at 9:15 a.m. You may have been sheltering under an umbrella or wishing you had changed your windshield wipers so they didn't leave a streak exactly at eye level.

Wet or dry, spring did begin and we, along with our clocks, sprang forward. Back in Michigan, we didn't spring in any direction. We knew that April could be the cruelest month. Imagine Easter bonnets with earflaps and fur trimmed espadrilles with four buckles.

Speaking of "spring has sprung" — this little ditty, often attributed to Ogden Nash but actually preceding him by several years, may have been the source:

Der spring is sprung, der grass is riz;
I wonder where dem boidies is.
Der little boids is on der wing.
Ain't dat absoid?
Der little wings is on der boid!

We like spring because of its renewal characteristics, both real and symbolic. Mother Nature dips her brush into a palette of brilliant colors and splashes them all over our landscape. Spring is in the air, and there is a spring in our step as we respond to the newness going on all around us. We have a newfound hope that springs eternal, endowing us with a fresh outlook at life and at the world.

Poets have adopted spring as their favorite season, waxing poetically (how else?) about the glories of the season. A personal favorite of mine is by e.e.cummings:

In Just-spring
when the world is mud-luscious

Later in the poem cummings writes that the world is puddle-wonderful and bettyandisbel come dancing from hop-scotch and jump rope

Would today's children even understand hop-scotch and jump rope?

How about this from Emily Dickinson?

A light exists in spring
Not present on the year
At any other period
When March is scarcely here.

And this haiku, by Philip Appleman, has nothing to do with the extracurricular lives of Hollywood elites or Washington Pols:

Spring means plum blossoms and spotless new kimonos for holiday whores.

Here is a stanza from Robert Frost's "A Prayer in Spring."

Oh, give us pleasure in the flowers today;
And give us not to think so far away
As the uncertain harvest; keep us here
All simply in the springing of the year.

These lines are from Robert Hass' poem "Palo Alto: The Marshes."

In California in the early Spring/There are pale yellow mornings/when the mist burns slowly into day/The air stings like autumn, clarifies the pain — Well, I have dreamed this coast myself.

"The Daffodils," is one of William Wordsworth's more familiar and evocative poems, and makes the reader want to head to the Lake District of England asap:

I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host of golden daffodils;
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

It isn't only poets who gifted us with memorable words about this notable season:

I am going to try to pay attention to the spring, and look up at the hectic trees. Amid the smashing and crashing of terrible silences, the trees are in blossom, and it's soft and warm and bright. I am going to close my eyes and listen." — Anne Lamott

And don't forget that spring is when a young man's fancy turns to love. Perhaps no one expressed that thought more penetrating-

ly than Pablo Neruda:

My words rained over you, stroking you. A long time I have loved the sunned mother-of-pearl of your body. I go so far as to think that you own the universe. I will bring you happy flowers from the mountains, bluebells, dark hazels, and rustic baskets of kisses. I want to do with you what spring does with the cherry trees.

I believe it is important to look at something as wonderful as spring from a poet's point of view, since poets try to give people an understanding of something nobody knew before.

And even I tried to do that last week with the Genius Test. Some readers let me know how they struggled with it. I hope it didn't cause too much mental strain. Here are the answers:

Pebble Beach Food and Wine Kickoff Open House

Join us for stunning views of Carmel River Beach in this masterfully built home.
2848 Santa Lucia Avenue

Open House
Friday April 6th,
2:00 - 5:00PM

Perfect for entertaining, this stunning remodeled masterpiece is privately sited on a 10,000 sq.ft. lot with sunny southwest exposure. Located on a knoll, and just blocks to both beaches, downtown and a short stroll to the Mission Ranch. The home features high open-beam ceilings, great room and open kitchen with wood cabinets and Taj Mahal Quartz counters, and a large tiled view deck. The entry patio with Carmel stone fireplace and water fountain, and the sunny south facing lower patio with stone fire pit offer many options for comfortable outdoor living.
