SLEW OF CITY STAFF WILL POUND BIG SUR PAVEMENT SUNDAY

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE THOUSANDS converging on Highway 1 to run "the best marathon in North America" Sunday will include almost a dozen Carmel city employees.

Fire Chief Sidney Reade and volunteer CFD Captain Bill Cox are longtime participants in Big Sur International Marathon events — she in the 10.6-mile walk and he in the full-blown 26.2-mile run.

Then there are the newbies. Administrative coordinator Rhonda Ragghianti, who has walked every year for a decade with her cousin, Bonnie Davies, inspired several recent additions to Team City Hall: personnel specialist Jane Miller, city clerk Karen Crouch and acting financial services coordinator Cheryl Panattoni. Executive assistant Sandy Farrell will join the walking team for the first time this year. Administrative coordinator Cindi Lopez-Frincke will run the 5K with her nephew, the same event Carmel Police Sgt. Mike Calhoun and public works supervisor Stu Ross will do

Council sworn in as Livingston bows out

By MARY BROWNFIELD

IN TYPICAL, offbeat Carmel style, Tuesday's swearing in of returning Mayor Sue McCloud and newly elected council members Erik Bethel and Mike Cunningham included a bagpiper, a reprimanding mother, armloads of flowers, two clocks and some final digs at the current city administration from outgoing council member Barbara Livingston.

Spectators packed city hall to overflowing by the time Bethel arrived a few minutes late for the 3 p.m. ceremony, causing some concern to those in charge of its inaugural live television broadcast and earning a quiet rebuke from his mother, already seated across the aisle.

Recovering quickly, Bethel was first to be sworn in, reciting the Oath of Office led by city clerk Karen Crouch.

After promising to "well and faithfully" discharge his duties, swearing his allegiance and promising to support and defend the state and U.S. Constitutions "against all enemies, foreign and domestic," Bethel thanked his supporters for their encouragement and reemphasized his role as a representative of the people of Carmel.

"I will fulfill my duty with integrity, honor and respect," he

Water district grows by 438 bathrooms

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE WATER board this week tweaked the ordinance that has allowed homeowners to add more than 400 bathrooms in residences throughout the water-starved district during the last three years.

While one former water board member said his fears of bigger houses and more development have been confirmed, several others touted the ordinance's usefulness and success.

The water district has issued 438 permits for second bathrooms since the ordinance took effect May 16, 2001, according to Debbie Martin, MPWMD conservation technician, including 79 in Carmel, eight in Carmel Valley, 11 in Del Rey Oaks, 86 in Monterey, five in Pebble Beach, 144 in Pacific Grove and 105 in Seaside. The district tracks only how many permits have been issued, not how many of the bathrooms have actually been built.

Carmel Principal Planner Brian Roseth said remodel plans have improved as a result.

"If you're going to invest as much as needs to be invested when you're upgrading a house or rebuilding a property, being stuck with only one bathroom is a real handicap," he said.

Before, homeowners would include a small room in their plans in anticipation of one day being able to plumb it.

"That was a way for people to plan ahead, but it is a lot less efficient to do it that way," he said.

Before voting against the ordinance three years ago, former water board member Zan Henson said it would entice speculators to snap up small houses, add another bathroom and as many bedrooms as permitted, and then sell them.

Voted off the board by Carmel Valley residents last November, Henson has hardly been surveying property records and compiling evidence to support his theory, but he said he doesn't need to.

"What I see every day on the Peninsula as I drive around

Carmel Bach Festival taps search committee

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THERE COULD be a new executive director hired for the Carmel Bach Festival before the its summer concert series begins in July, according to Bach Fest board of directors president Jack Buffington, but they're "putting no deadlines on it."

"It would be great if we could find somebody prior to this year's festival, but if we don't, we'll keep looking," he said.

The new executive director will replace Willem Wijnbergen, who announced last month he would leave his post when his contract ends Sept. 1.

The effort to replace Wijnbergen formally began last Thursday with the selection of a search committee headed by Buffington and including six of members of the Bach Fest board:

- Fran Lozano, the dean of liberal arts at Gabilan College;
- Steve Pearson, an attorney with the Salinas firm Nolan, Hammerly, Etienne & Hoss;
- Susan DuCoeurs, a Carmel resident who has long been active in community affairs;
- Dick Gourley, a Pebble Beach business consultant;
- Mary Kay Crockett, retired general manager of the Merrill Lynch office in Carmel, and
- Don Hilburn, owner of a certified public accounting service who lives in the former home of Bach Festival founders Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous.

According to Buffington, the first step will be to evaluate the strengths of the Bach Fest staff and draw up a list of qualifications the new executive director should have to complement them. This list will be used to assess applications as they come in.

"The word is beginning to get out that we are looking for a new executive director, and we will accept applications at any time," he said.

Youth musicians sought for family concert series

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A FAMILY concert featuring Monterey County's finest young musicians will again be part of the Carmel Bach Festival this summer, and auditions are set for next month to choose those who will be invited to perform.

"Music teachers from Monterey and Santa Cruz counties are urged to present their most talented pupils who can interpret music written or arranged by Bach," said Nana Faridany, artistic administrator of the Bach Fest.

Applications are due May 1, with auditions before a panel of judges May 15. The family concert will be Aug. 7 at Sunset Center.

Audition applications can be obtained from Faridany by calling 624-1521, ext. 13, or by emailing nana@bach-festival.org.

Birders flock to popular sites at annual bird-a-thon

By KIMBERLY WHITE

LOS ANGELES County may have more people, more land, more traffic and more smog — but Monterey County has more birds.

Last year, bird lovers across the county staked out positions high and low during the annual bird-a-thon and found more species — 248 — than their counterparts in any other county in North America.

They hope to retain the hard-won title of “America’s Birdiest County” at the 11th annual bird-a-thon, scheduled from 4 p.m. Friday, April 30, to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 1. In a contest sponsored by the American Birding Association, afi-

The Ventana Wilderness Society has traditionally spearheaded the effort and given the funds generated through sign-up fees to its Big Sur Ornithology Lab at Andrew Molera State Park. But this year, the event is being sponsored jointly by the VWS and MPAS, with the funds headed toward the Audubon Society’s ornithology-research and public-awareness campaigns.

“The bird-a-thon has always been about bringing together the local birding community and spreading the word about conservation,” said Sarah Stock, a coordinator for the Big Sur Ornithology Lab who has been involved with the event over the last three years.

Stock said last year’s birders were especially excited to spot a flesh-footed shearwater (Puffinus carneipes), which is almost always seen at sea. (Competitors are not allowed to go out on boats, but at least one shearwater was sighted from shore using a spotting scope.) Another highlight was being able to log a Eurasian wigeon, which Stock said is a regular visitor to Monterey County but breeds elsewhere.

“Some people will bird that whole time, but most will bird only during the daylight hours,” said Don Roberson, team organizer of the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society.

Last year, during a 24-hour period between May 2 and 3, approximately 100 Monterey County birders braved stormy weather that dumped up to three inches of rain on peaks and lowlands. Still, they recorded sightings of everything from the common snowy plover to the endangered spotted owl. And their efforts paid off, despite stiff competition from Los Angeles County, which came in second with 239 species logged.

“We were very well organized,” Roberson explained, “and the event took place on a day when spring migration was at

Free emergency response class prepares residents to act

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHEN A major disaster hits, maxed-out firefighters and medics will be tied up with the most pressing emergencies, leaving more minor cases — not life threatening but still dangerous — unaided for as long as three days. Residents with some emergency response know-how can make the wait a lot easier, so local firefighters will offer a free six-session class covering essential lifesaving and disaster-response skills.

“It could be up to 72 hours before someone can help them, and it’s reasonable to expect that, even here in Carmel,” said Carmel Fire Captain Mitch Kastros, one of the Citizens Emergency Response Training instructors. “The biggest things that are most common here are tree incidents, storms and flooding, but we’re also getting a lot more potential for a major fire due to diseased trees drying up.”

Each Saturday of the CERT class will feature a tool for dealing with emergencies.

■ Held at Carmel Fire Department on Sixth Avenue, the April 24 class will include an introduction and details of the incident command system and the emergency operations center. Chief George Haines, Captain Bruce Meyer and County OES Coordinator Harry Robins will speak.

■ May 1, the only all-day class on the schedule, will feature CPR and disaster medicine at the Mid Valley Station at 8455 Carmel Valley Road.

■ The May 8 session, also in mid valley, will have students learning about disaster prep and how to make emergency preparedness kits — including some items supplied by the fire department, according to Kastros.

■ The Carmel Highlands Station will host the May 15 class on fire safety, utilities and hazardous materials. PG&E will present a compelling demonstration of what happens when gas and electricity are misused.

■ Disaster psychology and basic search and rescue will be discussed May 22, also in the Highlands, with guest speakers from the Red Cross and the SPCA. The latter will share information on what happens to pets during a disaster and how to protect the furrier members of the family.

■ The final class, held June 5 at Mid Valley Station, will feature practical hands-on training in which students will show their skills battling a “good-sized fire” with an extinguisher, engage in a search-and-rescue exercise and practice first aid. Afterward, graduation and a celebratory barbecue will take place.

All classes begin at 9:30 a.m., though the stations will provide breakfast beginning at 9 a.m. to entice students to arrive on time. With the exception of the all-day CPR and disaster medicine session, classes end at 1 p.m. While it is encouraged, attending every class is not mandatory, and anyone who misses a class may make it up a later time or obtain some of the information from an instructor one on one. To sign up for the free course, call Kastros or CFD administrative coordinator Leslie Fenton at 620-2030 or Highlands Fire Captain Cindy Nagai at 624-2374.

HUNDREDS OF firefighters, medics and police officers from more than 40 Monterey County agencies will be honored Thursday during Public Safety Appreciation Night at the Monterey Plaza Hotel. The event, hosted by the Public Safety Appreciation Committee of Monterey County, which formed shortly after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, will also be a fundraiser for Pacific Grove Ocean Rescue.

"We honor the firefighters, police officers and emergency service personnel for putting their lives on the line," said Craig Riddell, a committee chairman.

Free tickets for emergency workers and their spouses or guests to the April 29 celebration were mailed to the heads of about 45 law enforcement and emergency agencies, from the U.S. Coast Guard to the far-flung rural fire departments, according to Riddell. Others went to city and county officials who might attend.

The remaining few have been set aside at $75 apiece for retired public safety workers or other supporters.

Ocean rescue benefits

Ticket money goes straight to ocean rescue, but the bulk of the funds to support the program will be raised through an auction featuring donations from almost three dozen businesses.

"It's an amazing organization that does a whole lot with very little," Riddell said.

First formed in 1963 as a volunteer group overseen by the police department, P.G. Ocean Rescue has grown to include 31 volunteers and is now housed at the city's fire station. Equipped with pagers linked to 911, volunteers respond to incidents along 40 miles of coastline and have the only hyperbaric chamber between San Francisco and Southern California, according to PGOR Director and P.G. Fire Engineer Mike Wallace.

Ocean rescue spreads its $35,000 operating budget as far as possible to purchase equipment and train its volunteers.

"We need the tools of our trade to do a rescue," he said, including wet suits and other thermal gear required in the ocean's chilly waters, as well as lights and equipment to save a swimmer or diver in distress.

"The Coast Guard goes to the back side of the waves, and the fire department goes to where their toes get wet," he explained, while PGOR handles the surf zone.

While they are volunteers, all ocean rescue members must become City of Pacific Grove employees and go through a background check because of liability issues, according to Wallace. They receive minimum wage when they respond to calls.

The group depends on donations to survive. "The last time I looked, we had $7,000 in the bank," Wallace said. "We're living year to year."

PGOR recoups some of its costs by charging a fee when its hyperbaric chamber is used — to treat victims of air embolism, the bends or carbon monoxide poisoning — but that income is unpredictable.

Rescuers must be certified on the chamber, and its use requires an initial diagnosis from a doctor.

The hyperbaric chamber is significantly more advanced than its predecessor, a single-person decompression chamber purchased with donations in 1965 which was so small that once the victim was inside, a doctor could not treat him. Instead, someone suffering from air embolism or severe decompression sickness was put in the pressurized chamber, loaded into a rescue van, driven to the airport and placed inside a C-130 cargo transport plane bound for San Diego. Escorted by police with lights and sirens, the patient would then be placed inside a U.S. Navy SEAL team chamber. Upon pressurization of the larger chamber, the smaller unit could be opened and the patient treated by doctors.

PGOR's current chamber is large enough to accommodate patient and physician.

"We had a neat case once where one of our members was a divemaster on a dive boat, and a woman who was diving came up to the surface and embolized — she waved for help and then passed out," Wallace recalled. He was also a paramedic, so he administered basic life support and accompanied her to the hospital. When a dive doctor determined she should be placed in the chamber, he rode down in the ambulance with her and worked on her inside the chamber.

After being close to dead, "she walked out the next day," Wallace said. About a year-and-a-half later, she returned to finish her diving course, and the PGOR volunteer who saved her life that day ended up being her instructor.

"Like I said, we're sort of everywhere," he said.

In order to bolster as much support as possible, PGOR and Monterey County Public Safety Appreciation Night organizers are still searching for auction donations and will accept them right up to the last minute, according to Riddell. Anyone interested should call 646-0351.

'The budget [for PGOR] is almost entirely made up of donations and grants. It's an amazing organization that does a whole lot with very little.'

Sheriff's office holds weekend test to hire new deputies

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THERE MAY be a hiring freeze in Monterey County government offices, but the sheriff's office is looking for new deputies to fill 17 vacancies among its ranks. The first round of tests — a physical ability course and written exam — will be held in Salinas April 23 and 24 and again July 23 and 24.

The last round of testing in January attracted 72 candidates and netted five new hires, with a couple more currently undergoing the extensive background check.

Sheriff Mike Kanalakis recently decided to raise the eligible minimum age to 20 at time of testing, with successful candidates reaching 21 years of age before they are appointed. His predecessor, Sheriff Gordon Sonné, had lowered the eligible age to 19 at time of appointment.

"The state mandate is 18, but the sheriff can set it at a higher number if he likes," said Commander Tracy Brown, who oversees new hires.

Three deputies under the age of 21 were hired following Sonné's change, but most candidates that young can't pass the psychological examination because they lack the maturity, according to Brown.

The perfect deputy

According to the California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training, the sheriff's office evaluates communication skills, problem-solving ability, learning ability, judgment under pressure, observation skills, willingness to confront problems, interest in people, interpersonal sensitivity, desire for improvement, appearance, dependability, physical ability, integrity, possession of a driver license and credibility as a witness in a court of law.

Anyone who applies for the job Friday or Saturday and successfully passes the written and physical ability tests will then be asked to fill out a 28-page personal history statement, due two weeks later.

Following submission of the PHS, the applicant is interviewed, photographed and fingerprinted. A computerized voice stress analyzer test examination — a lie detector test that monitors uncontrollable fluctuations in a person's voice when the person is not telling the truth — follows.

The next step involves a lengthy background check in which a person's history and current lifestyle are investigated, including interviews with relatives, neighbors, friends and acquaintances; verification of employment history and education; and examination of credit history, as well as any past law enforcement work or police academy attendance.

If successful, the candidate receives a conditional job offer contingent upon passing a psychological examination and a physical.

New hires attend the academy as recruits or go through the jail correctional training officer program.

Any man or woman age 20 and older who wants to apply for a job should arrive at the Monterey County Sheriff's Office at 1414 Natividad Road in Salinas by 8 a.m. Friday, April 23 or Saturday, April 24. The next chance to apply will be July 23 and 24. For more information and to receive an application, call Lynnrose Alig at 796-7298.

Former flyboy takes on cause after cause

By KIMBERLY WHITE

HE SPENT more than half of his professional life in the macho world of Air Force pilots, flying nuclear bombers and working in the Strategic Air Command and Air Defense Command units.

Then he became a champion of women's rights.

Milt Kegley, 80, is best known as president of the Carmel Valley Forum and past president of the Del Mesa Carmel Homeowners Association; some may even know that his favorite pastime is fly fishing and that, twice a week, he attends Pilates classes in order to strengthen his core muscles.

Less known is that, upon retiring after 29 years in the military, he started a second career as the government-affairs representative in Washington, D.C. for Safeway stores. Several years later, when he was transferred to the grocery giant's corporate headquarters in Oakland, he helped elevate women into the upper echelons of management at a time when they had almost no hope of being anything other than cashiers.

"My favorite quote from Charlotte Whitten, who was mayor of Montreal, Canada, back in the late 1960s, is, 'Whatever women do, they must do twice as well as men to be thought half so good.

Fortunately, it's not difficult,'" he said. "I think that's one of the greatest quotes ever given with regard to the capabilities of women."

During his time with Safeway, Kegley said he found women's productivity rates were often equal to or better than men's in traditional male jobs, such as driving a truck or working in a warehouse.

"There was a belief that you didn't dare put a woman on the night crew because there'd be too much hanky panky going on," he said. "But lo and behold, they found that you put a woman on, she was going to make damn sure that she did as well as the men — and it made the men work even harder to keep the woman from doing better than them."

A native Texan, Kegley left Texas A & M University at the start of World War II to join the United States Air Force. Over the course of almost three decades, he flew more than 25 different types of airplanes, most of which were propeller-driven. Jets did not come along until midway through his career, and he envies the younger men and women who now fly fighter jets and B-2s.

He retired from the Air Force in 1971 and has not piloted since. Still, "to this day, when I get on an airplane, I miss not being able to go up front and sit in one of the pilot seats."

In 1974, when Safeway transferred him to Oakland, Kegley and his wife — to whom he has been married for 45 years — moved to nearby Piedmont. The 1.8-square-mile community had a lot of neighborhood spirit, with block parties, 4th of July parades and plenty of ways civic-minded residents could get involved.

"That's where I really got my first taste of public service and community activity, because in the military, I never had much of an opportunity to do that," he said.

In 1996, after he served on the Piedmont Planning Commission, city council and two years as mayor, the couple moved to Del Mesa Carmel, where Kegley has already served the 410 residents as president of the homeowner's association.

His interest in community activities is what drew him to the Carmel Valley Association, he said. From there, he got involved in the early study of incorporation in Carmel Valley, and that evolved into his position as president of the Carmel Valley Forum.

"A lot of people in Del Mesa know me for what I was doing as president," he said with a shrug. "Others there, a much, much smaller group, know me personally as to what I do and that I like Pilates and that I like to know what's going on in the world. I'm not one who seeks publicity. I seek publicity for a cause, a purpose, but not for myself at all."

SEVEN STUNNING HOMES AND GARDENS OPEN SUNDAY

“THROUGH CARMEL Gates” is the apt title of this year’s Carmel Heritage Society house and garden tour. Once a year, select homes open their doors to the public. This year seven outstanding properties will welcome visitors from 1 to 5 p.m. April 25, for the self-guided event.

Homes featured Sunday are:
Carefree Sur Mer, Scenic Road, a contemporary home that takes full advantage of its panoramic view of Carmel Bay.

The Fredericksen House, Ocean View Avenue, is surrounded by a classic English garden.

The Weil House, Ladera Drive, is a cheerful 1930s home with gardens that afford a sweeping view over the Carmel Mission out to the sea and Point Lobos.

The Logan House, Shafter Way, remains true to its 1920s Spanish Colonial style. Look for a wrought-iron second-floor balcony and walled garden areas.

Green Gables, Santa Fe and Mountain

View, is a 1926 cottage that speaks of Carmel’s unpretentious past.

Forge in the Forest, Pescadero Road, overlooks Pescadero Canyon. This late 1920s home features numerous whimsical structures, meandering pathways and stone carvings.

Villa Camrey, Mission and Vista, is a 1917 vintage Arts and Crafts cottage surrounded by an old-fashioned garden.

Advance tickets, $20, may be purchased as late as 4 p.m. Saturday, April 24, at the First Murphy House, Sixth and Lincoln, Carmel. Tickets may be purchased for $25 beginning 1 p.m. Sunday near Carefree Sur Mer on Scenic Road and at First Murphy from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

ALTHOUGH MOTHER'S Day is May 9, more than two weeks away, it's definitely not too early to make reservations at your mom's favorite restaurant. Chef Matt Millea of Ventana Inn & Spa's Cielo Restaurant has planned a special menu for Mother's Day luncheon from noon to 3:30 p.m. and has a choice of six starters and salads, a selection of six main courses and three desserts (one of them the 1940s hit, a "Floating Island." FROM TIME to time, food writers receive manufacturers' samples of new products. One such arrived last week: O'So Low Foods sent boxes of white and wheat "deli rollz," three to a box. Many people are on a low-carbohydrate diet and miss eating sandwiches because bread generally is a high-carb item. Not so the O'So Low rollz that have 4.8. carbs per roll. They are appealing to look at, but are squishy, like most American breads. This problem was solved when we toasted the rolls lightly under an oven broiler. They have 15 g. protein, are an excellent source of fiber and are cholesterol free. They are available locally at Safeway stores in the frozen food section.

CELEB CHEFS Alice Waters and Jacques Pépin will participate in the Monterey Aquarium's third Cooking for Solutions, celebrating "sustainable cuisine" with organic dishes, cooking demos and tours of organic farms and vineyards. This program is an outgrowth of the aquarium's Seafood Watch program, which has distributed more than 3,000,000 pocket guides to help consumers and chefs make wise seafood choices. A gala will be held from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, May 21, at the Portola Cafe in the aquarium. Cost is $180 for aquarium members, $225 for the general public.

From 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. in the aquarium galleries, admission is $85 to aquarium members and $105 to the general public. There will be 13 other nationally renowned chefs, who will prepare featured dishes and talk to attendees at their various food stations throughout the aquarium. Bookings will take place, too.

On Saturday, May 22, celebrity chef cooking demonstrations from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. will cost $60 for members, $80 for others. Farm and vineyard tours with the celebs will take place the same day from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and will begin and end at the aquarium. Cost is $140 for members, $175 general.

CHEF STEVEN BLACKWELL is no longer ruling the kitchen at Pèppoli restaurant at The Inn at Spanish Bay. He has taken a position as chef in a private Pebble Beach home.

THE McATHIES, Dean and Janet, have added another coffee house to their ownership list: Morgan's Coffee and Tea, 498 Washington St., Monterey.

"EATING SOUP WITH CHOPSTICKS" sounds challenging. It's the name of a book written by Ruth Pennington Paget, who also authored "The Edible Tao." If Paget is as good at writing books as she is at titling them, they must be excellent. She will lead a talk on writing food memoirs at 2 p.m. Saturday, April 24. Participants will work on two memoirs, learn writing organization skills and have a chance to ask questions. Paget learned to cook in Paris and has lived in Osaka, Japan. She began writing about food 13 years ago. For information, call 582-9274.

THE DEMYSTIFICATION of wine and food pairings will be demonstrated by winemaker Steve Pessagno of Pessagno Winery and Chef Todd Fisher, chef/proprietor of Bill Quon's restaurants in Monterey and Hullabaloo in Salinas. During an interactive dinner, diners will enjoy Chef Todd's Chilean day boat scallops on the half shell, sesame oil poached salmon, prosciutto-wrapped venison loin and bitter-sweet chocolate crème brûlée. They'll discover how to complement each of these dishes with Pessagno's Chardonnay Pinot Noir, Zinfandel and Port. This culinary event will take place at 7 p.m. Saturday, May 1, at A Taste of Monterey's Cannery Row establishment. Tickets are $40 per person, including wine and food. Seating is limited to 70. For reservations, call (888) 646-5446, ext. 10.

VACATION PLANS swirling around in your head? How about a gourmet river rafting weekend on the American River's South Fork with Passionfish Restaurant's Chef Ted Walter and his wife and business partner, Cindy Walter. Experienced river guides will oversee the river rafting while in the evening, on a secluded beach, river rafters will dine under the stars. Barbecued wild salmon with citrusy-soy sauce, barbecued duck breast, grilled artichokes, coconut rice, lemon grass slaw and strawberry shortcake will be served with selected wines.

The American River Touring Association is the non-profit organization co-hosting the trip. Proceeds benefit the Sea Turtle Restoration Project. Cost of the two-day culinary adventure is $245 per person. Reservations are limited: Call (800) 323-2782.

RENOVATION ALWAYS goes slower than imagined. The Patisserie Boissiere on Mission below Ocean just reopened Thursday, April 22.

CHEF PAUL HADIER, a graduate of the Culinary Institute in S.F., will demonstrate how to prepare quick and healthy meals with his "Spice Up Your Life an Easy Way" program at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, April 20 at the Sally Griffin Senior Center, 700 Jewel Ave., Pacific Grove. Pre-registration is required. A $2 donation is suggested. Call 375-4454 to register or for more information.

MEET WINEMAKER Richard Kanakaris from noon to 4 p.m. on Saturday, April 24, at the winery's tasting room at 1645 River Road, Salinas Valley. Several Pavona wines, including a barrel tasting, will be sampled while Kanakaris conducts an educational seminar. Light hors d'oeuvres will accompany the wines. Admission is free and no reservations are necessary. For information, call 646-1506.

CHEF CAL STAMENOV will lead a walk through his organic gardens at Bernardus Lodge from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 8. He will explain what herbs and vegetables smell and taste good together. Discover herbal bouquets, scented oils and foods for romance. A luncheon will be held, also. Fee is $65 for the complete event. Call 658-3550 for additional information and reservations.

Budget cuts prompt libraries to solicit donations

By KIMBERLY WHITE

IT'S NOT that they don't want new books and magazines — they just don't have the money.

Ever since the state dropped the budget ax on the county library system, its librarians have been brainstorming on ways to get magazine subscriptions and updated textbooks on their shelves.

Recently, Monterey County Free Libraries launched two programs — which will run indefinitely but hinge on community support — to help supplement the elderly cache of magazines and materials at each of its 17 branches.

"Our budget's been cut by $50,000," said Rosy Brewer, managing librarian for public services. "Next year, we're looking at even more cuts."

A similar program launched several years ago was "quite successful," she said.

The "Adopt-A-Magazine" program asks patrons to donate to any library of their choice a magazine from a list of requested subscriptions. As a thank you, these donors' names will be prominently displayed in the library.

Ann Burke, branch manager of the Carmel Valley library, said her wish list includes Bon Appetit, Teen People and Writer's Digest.

The "Amazon Wish List" program asks patrons to go to the Amazon.com website, select a book or periodical on the library's list and — after specifying a particular branch — donate it as a gift.

To access the site, go to www.amazon.com, then click on "Wish List" at the top of the page. Enter "Monterey County Free Libraries" in the "Find a Wish List" box, then click on

"Monterey County Free Libraries Wish List."

Burke said two of the items it has listed — HarperCollins Robert French Unabridged Dictionary, 6th Edition, and Auto Fundamentals by Martin W. Stockel — are "bread-and-butter items" that every library should have, but hers can't afford.

Details on these programs are available at Monterey County Free Libraries branches in Aromas, Big Sur, Bradley, Buena Vista, Carmel Valley, Castroville, Gonzales, Greenfield, King City, Marina, Pajaro, Parkfield, Prunedale, San Ardo, San Lucas, Seaside and Soledad.

Established in 1912 by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, Monterey County Free Libraries operates branch libraries, bookmobiles, book-by-mail programs and other programs free to county residents.

Quality of Life

What does the quality of life have to with real estate prices? Frankly, almost everything. When people have the flexibility to live anywhere, they analyze home buying differently than when they're tied to a location by work constraints.

In the past few years people have begun to re-evaluate many priorities. Foremost among these is deciding what a good quality of life means. Clean air, safe neighborhoods, good schools and libraries have always been qualities that sustain home values.

More recently, I hear prospective buyers talking about living in a "village" atmosphere where they can walk to shops, dining, banking and, (particularly on the peninsula) to the water. People seem to be yearning for a sense of community that isn't "car dependent."

When thinking about the home buying process, I recommend that buyers give serious thought to how they want to live — outside of the home and yard they'll own.

If you'd like to discuss your home selling and home buying needs you may reach Maureen at 622-2565 or e-mail her at maureen@maureenmason.com.

ORIGINAL BALLET DEBUTS WITH ORIGINAL SCORE

By KIMBERLY WHITE

WHILE COMPOSING the musical score for "Treasures, Gifts, Dreams," Carmel physician Bruce Lee found himself transported into the world of the 1872 painting, "Dance Class at the Opera," by Edgar Degas.

"I was trying to place myself in the story," he recalled. "What is the feeling, what's going on there, what are the characters feeling, doing, expressing? I had to create that picture in my mind first and write to that, write to their moods and the events that were happening in those scenes."

"Treasures, Gifts, Dreams," an original ballet written by Laura Akard, will be performed by Dance Kids of Monterey County 7:30 p.m. Friday, April 30, and Saturday, May 1, and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, May 2, at Sunset Center. A gala celebration will be held at 5:30 on opening night.

Lee said it's a first for the Monterey Peninsula: a ballet written by a local choreographer accompanied by a musical score written by a local composer.

"It's an original," said Alan Richmond, executive director of Dance Kids of Monterey County. "It's not a piece like 'The Nutcracker,' where it's been performed elsewhere and has a long track record."

Composer Bruce Lee

The story, set in the 1890s, features Genevieve, a young French ballerina who, after running away from home, finds herself standing in an antique shop surrounded by the shopkeeper and his friends. Upon the discovery of the Degas painting — which depicts a studio filled with ballerinas — they become so mesmerized that the outside world disappears and they are magically transported into the painting.

Akard said she came up with the idea for the ballet one day when she was telling a student how she used to make up stories about the ballerinas in Degas' paintings.

"To me, the dancers seemed to come to life," said Akard, a choreographer at Monterey Peninsula College who has also worked with the Carmel Ballet Academy and venues in Las Vegas.

Akard wrote the piece in outline form and presented it to Lee. Once she received his musical score, she choreographed the movements based on his music.

Lee, whose gynecology practice is based in Monterey, said he spent a year and a half composing the score, which is enhanced by a musical instrument digital interface system that mimics the sounds of a full orchestra. He was approached by Richmond and his wife, artistic director Carol Richmond, after they heard songs performed from his 1997 album, "Born of Love." Symphonies from Monterey to Seattle have performed many of the songs from the album, which revolve around the emotional atmosphere in a hospital delivery room.

A double-CD set that contains the musical score from "Treasures, Gifts, Dreams" will be on sale during the ballet, Lee said, with the proceeds going to offset the costs of the performance.

"Ballets are one of the most expensive productions you can do," considering the cost of the venue, paying for the costumes and replacing pointe shoes worn out through hours of practice, Carol Richmond said. "And people don't really go to the ballet the way they would to [a performance of] 'The Wizard of Oz,'" she added. "So, in a way, we're introducing a new concept to the public."

The 70-member cast, whose ages range from 4 to adult, have been in rehearsals five days a week since January. It was a new experience for everyone involved, she explained, since they had always done fairly well-established performance pieces with story lines, themes and musical scores already familiar to the dancers and audience.

And while there have been some sleepless nights related to taking on a new production, the Richmonds, Lee and Akard all said this ballet is a chance worth taking — and they are confident the public will return for more Dance Kids productions after seeing the quality of their work.

"I like that I can bring my vision to life," Akard said. "All my work has to do with empowering children and getting them to follow their dreams."

'The Cindy Diaries' — A modern Cinderella spin

By K. K. ROBINSON

SINCE 1998, Pacific Repertory Theatre has put students from its School of Dramatic Arts (SoDA) on stage in original musicals. Walt deFaria and Stephen Tosh updated the book and added new songs to the very first of their youth-filled shows, and "The Cindy Diaries" is the sprightly result.

There is something truly irresistible about watching 65 youngsters, 10 adults and a dog perform on a stage. And you don't even have to be a member of the family to enjoy the high level of talent, training and exuberance these performers have in abundance.

Many of the actors are audience favorites, having been in previous shows for SoDA and in the Forest Theater summer musicals. They are well-rehearsed and quite polished in their singing and dancing. Nobody missed a cue, forgot a lyric, or muffed a line, and that's no small feat for the really young ones.

Alex Pike holds the entire production together with his portrayal of Scooter, the Fairy Godbrother. He's cool and engaging as he invites you into the action of a story we all know so well. Katherine Andrade is double-cast with Brianna Slama as Cindy, who is sent off to live with her father's ex-wife when he takes a job on an oil rig. Her real-life mother, Betsy Andrade, as Mrs. Jenkins, with daughters Rebecca (double-cast with Sophia Mossberg and Allyson Spiegelman), Rachel (double-cast with Kasie Clark and Brittney Kessler) and Rosalie (Brooke Bowhay) provide the comic relief as the "wicked stepmother" and three very spiteful stepsisters.

They are well-supported by Connie Lee as Miss Thomas, Sam Skemp as Michael and Alison Osgood as Karen. Everyone wants to be in the school play and the audition scenes provide the vehicle for large group numbers with the cast in stunning costumes dancing in multiple styles of choreography by Gloria Elber. And there are several memorable solo turns along the way by Matt McKay as the Tuba Player, Robbie Lee as Robbie, and Amanda Fridley as Mitzi. A brief but lovely ballet sequence is performed by Stephanie Woods and Reed Scott.

The musical numbers with their "cast of thousands" of singers and dancers are the heart of the play. "The Frog Waltz" brought a smile to everyone's face while Ashley Costa, Lana Richards and Catherine Megan Sylvester in "I'm Six, I'm Seven, I'm Eight" just about stopped the show.

The orchestra is nothing short of spectacular, leading and guiding the youngsters in a vast array of sing-able songs. While playing keyboard, Stephen Tosh conducts Don Dally on violin and guitar, Barbara Tosh on woodwinds, Lynn Jones on flute and Greg Bullock on percussion. The terrific sets designed by Ron Dias are simple but flexible, providing plenty of space and brightly lit by Steve Judge. And Julia Willis' costumes are delightful to behold. The terrific production values technical director John Rousseau and his team bring to this show beautifully frame the performers.

Producer/director Walt deFaria has done it again. So grab your youngsters and get a seat for this fun show.

MAGIC CIRCLE STAGES A SUBLIME 'AGNES OF GOD'

By STEVE HARRIS

AS THE Magic Circle Center in Carmel Valley approaches its fifth anniversary of producing some of the finest work theatrically in our region, and probably any other area as well, a standing ovation is due Elsa Con and her staff for their constant commitment to quality, both in play selection and production values, that is truly amazing in a black box theater of approximately 50 seats. Not every production may be your cup of tea, but there is no denying you are served a full meal, with plenty of meat and potatoes on the plate, all at a most affordable price.

The current offering, John Pielmeier's 1982 drama, "Agnes of God," is a classic example: intelligent, compelling, complex, magnificently staged by director Con, with a superb cast and a splendid setting by Laura Cote that perfectly complements the on-stage action.

The subject matter, gutsy to the max and not for the entire family (leave the kiddies home with Barney), deals with Sister Agnes, a young, naive cloistered nun who is impregnated, attempts to hide her condition beneath her habit (one line mentions that a machine gun could be concealed therein — does Homeland Security know?), and following birth is found unconscious and suffering from severe loss of blood, the infant strangled by its umbilical cord and discarded in a waste basket. A court-appointed psychiatrist is brought in to examine her mental stability against a charge of murder, and the Mother Superior acts to mediate, inform and protect her young charge.

It could be argued that what we really have here is a 20th century mystery/morality play, firmly rooted in Medieval tradition; the Mother Superior representing the forces for God/good vs. the physician characterizing those for evil/Devil, locked in combat for the soul of "Everyman," the naive novice Agnes, the Agnus Dei, the Lamb of God.

If so, or if you choose to hang other symbolic metaphors on other trite trees, fine. Congratulate yourself with a pat on your back. But then sit back and let the production wash over you, for this is a play of character and conscience, with riveting performances that leave its metaphorical structure far behind in the sands of symbolism.

All performances are professionally strong. Maria-Elena Cordero, as the psychiatrist Dr. Martha Livingstone, brought strength, dignity and compassion to her role (while soldiering through with an obviously sore throat) in a finely controlled presentation of the part. The Mother Superior, as performed by Suzanne Sturn, brings a loving warmth and grace to her role that perfectly complements and confronts the performance of Cordero. Kudos to both for your superb efforts.

The later portion of the play deals in part with the possibility, or perhaps more correctly the impossibility, of miracles occurring in our contemporary lives. I, as a smug, self-satisfied non-believer, received my just comeuppance and was proved the fool last Sunday, for the performance of Dawn Flood as Sister Agnes is nothing short of miraculous, a monument to magnificence not to be missed.

Playing at "approximately" two hours (I was so enraptured by Flood's performance that I forgot to check my watch), with one interval, this "must see" closes Sunday, May 16. Reservations will be a must. Call 659-1108 for seating.

Tor House garden party to feature bluegrass and bagpipes

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

PLEIN-AIR artists will create colorful paintings among the flowers and on the grass at the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Garden Party Sunday, May 2, and bluegrass music and a bagpipes' skirl will vie with the sound of crashing waves.

The 25th annual garden party on the estate once occupied by poet Robinson Jeffers and his bride Una will feature tea, tea sandwiches and cookies served from the Tor House dining room. A silent auction of trea-tures is planned, and special books and gift items will be available from the docent book store.

Docents will lead tours of the house and Hawk Tower, and will relate the history of the property and recite the shorter poems of Jeffers.

Guests are invited to bring cameras, as this is the once-a-year event at which photographs are allowed to be taken on the premises.

Proceeds from the silent auction, docents' sales, and a portion of proceeds from sale of paintings done by the plein-air artists, will go to the Tor House Foundation, a nonprofit dedicated to preserving the house and promoting Jeffers' literary legacy.

Admission is $15. No advance reservations will be taken and children under 12 will not be admitted. Tor House is located at 26304 Ocean View Ave. on Carmel Point.

For further information, call 624-1813 or visit www.torhouse.org.

History talk outlines 1888 Catholic resort dream

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

HE IS the real founder of Carmel-by-the-Sea, according to some. Santiago Duckworth purchased the developmental rights to 324 acres in Carmel in 1888, intending to establish a Roman Catholic resort modeled on the successful Pacific Grove Methodist community.

Duckworth was a Monterey realtor who descended from an old Mexican Californian family and played a prominent part in business and politics of the progressive era in California. He was bilingual and was one of the best-known orators of his generation.

Brother Larry Scrivani, currently the archivist for the Diocese of Monterey, will present a lecture on Duckworth's visionary dream at 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Monday, April 26, at the Park Branch of Harrison Memorial Library.

Brother Scrivani holds a master of arts degree from San Francisco State University and a diploma in archival science from Denver University.

BEATRICE BARBARA HUTH SASO, 95, longtime owner of the picturesque Sea Urchin and Periwinkle cottages on Scenic Road, died March 25.

The daughter of a lumber surveyor who traveled to the Oregon territory in a covered wagon, she met and married Andrew Saso while attending St. Mary's College. Since her husband managed theaters for the Hamilton, Evergreen and Orpheum vaudeville circuits, Mrs. Saso played hostess to such luminaries as Kate Smith, Duke Ellington and Al Jolson. The couple first visited Carmel in 1935. In 1936 Mr. Saso transferred to the Fox West Coast Theater Company and managed movie theaters in the Santa Clara Valley. Mrs. Saso raised their seven children, and the couple vacationed in Carmel. In 1963 they purchased Sea Urchin and Periwinkle, and transformed them from white stucco with blue trim fishermen shacks into quaint Mediterranean cottages, modeled after Mr. Saso's ancestral home in Trabia, Sicily.

The Sasos enjoyed traveling the world.

Following the death of her husband in 1979, Mrs. Saso spent two decades in Periwinkle, attending daily Mass at the Carmel Mission Basilica, walking her yellow Labrador, Bach, on Carmel Beach and enjoying afternoon tea and cookies with her friends. Her final years were spent at Hacienda Carmel.

She is survived by five of her children, Mary Louise, Kathleen, Richard, David and Michael. She was preceded in death by Joanne and Kevin.

RICHARD CONSTANT VIELLE died March 25 at his Pebble Beach home. He was 84.

A Los Angeles native, he graduated from John Marshall High School in Hollywood. Mr. Vielle's boyhood love of boating and swimming continued at the University of California at Berkeley, where he was a member of the varsity swimming team that won the Pacific Coast Championship in 1940. He was also a member of the varsity basketball team.

Upon his graduation from Cal in 1942, he joined the U.S. Army, achieving the rank of captain in the Coast Artillery battery at Fort Cronkhite. Eager to join his younger brother Robert, who was flying B-17s in Europe, he volunteered for the Army Air Corps. His height kept him out of the cockpit of the fighter plane he wanted to fly, and he spent the remainder of the war piloting C-46s for the Troop Carrier Command.

In 1943 Mr. Vielle married Henrietta Latour of Berkeley, with whom he had two children, Ann and Richard Jr. He settled in Sacramento, where he specialized in the field of industrial real estate. He was an officer in the Society of Industrial Real Estate and a member of several Sacramento civic organizations including the Downtown Rotary Club.

In 1986 he married Peggy Patch, an accomplished golfer (she had 10 holes-in-one to his one) and following their retirement to Pebble Beach, they could often be found on one of the many local golf courses.

Mr. Vielle is survived by his wife; son Richard of Carmel; daughter Anne Lydon of Aptos; a sister, Joie Felts of North Hollywood; and granddaughter Alexandra Vielle of Carmel.

He was preceded in death by his brother, Robert, who was killed flying a B-17 in Europe in the final weeks of World War II.

Memorials are suggested to the Hospice of the Central Coast.

MARGARET SIMPSON WHITE, who maintained a studio for weight control and nutrition therapy in Carmel for 40 years, died April 2. She was 95.

Born in Mount Etna, Iowa, she was educated in a one-room schoolhouse and made her way there on horseback or by horse-drawn buggy.

In 1929 she moved with her family to Fresno, where she enrolled at Fresno State College.

It was in Fresno that she met E. Allen White, a theatrical agent and band director. The couple would spend the next several years traveling the United States and Europe with Margaret teaching dance and Allen booking musical groups. In 1934 they moved to Washington, D.C., where she opened a weight control and therapy studio.

In 1954 Mrs. White made Carmel her permanent home. For many years she maintained a studio across from the Church of the Wayfarer, and later on Mission Street.

A Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 8 a.m. Tuesday, May 4 at the Carmelite Monastery.

ELOISE MAYBURN LEVETT, 93, died April 3 in Carmel.

Born in Walnut, Iowa, she moved to Iowa Falls in 1920 and in 1935 married Frank LeVett in that city.

Her husband died in 1954, and in 1957 she moved to Gridley, where she took a position as a school teacher in Yuba City. There she taught grammar school for 16 years.

In 1981 Mrs. LeVett moved to Palo Alto, where she kept active caring for her grandchildren and playing bridge with her friends. She moved to Palm Desert in 1984 and to the Monterey Peninsula in 1998.

For years she was a fixture at the Cypress Inn, which is co-owned by her son, Denny, and Doris Day. While holding court at that Carmel institution, she loved to play with pets brought into the hotel by guests.

Mrs. LeVett is survived by son Denny and grandchildren Amanda and Kate. She was preceded in death by her younger son, Bill.

Memorials are suggested to the donor's preferred charity.

GEORGE R. KNORR, JR., 93, Carmel resident for 27 years, died April 4 at Hospice House.

A native of Forest Hill, N.Y., Mr. Knorr was a graduate of the University of Arkansas and did postgraduate work at Rutgers University.

Following World War II, he was employed by Harleysville Insurance in Pennsylvania and retired as personnel director for National Grange Mutual Insurance, Keene, N.H. after a 45-year career.

An avid golfer and tennis player, Mr. Knorr held memberships in the Keene Country Club and Carmel Valley Racquet Club. He attended Monterey Presbyterian Church and enjoyed photography and carpentry.

He is survived by his wife of 68 years, Hazel of Carmel; his son, Jeffrey of Carmel Valley; daughters Karen Foulkes of Massachusetts and Susan of Pennsylvania; his brother, Harold of Texas; three grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by his brother, Warren, and his sister, Alice Hersch.

Memorials are suggested to the Hospice of the Central Coast.

Flanders gets grants, plans free walk Saturday

■ But election results make job harder

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE ONLY two city council members who supported holding onto Flanders Mansion left office this week, but the Flanders Foundation is ramping up its efforts to convince people the historic home should be saved.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation and the Barnet Segal Charitable Trust recently gave grants of $1,000 and $2,500, respectively, which foundation president Melanie Billig said will be used for advertising, public outreach and education.

The funds will help pay for twice-monthly walks to Flanders through the Mission Trail Nature Preserve, including this Saturday's "Discovering Beautiful Flanders Mansion" walk. Built in the 1920s, the house is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. It was purchased by the city in 1972.

Led by Billig, who will share the history of Flanders and the neighboring Lester Rowntree Native Plant Garden, the April 24 walk will be accompanied by former Carmel forester and assistant city administrator Greg D'Ambrosio.

"A lot of people who have lived here for years don't even know about the park and about Flanders, and that there's this jewel," Billig said.

The foundation is matching the grants, which could also pay for a preservation seminar similar to the successful February event at the Carmel Woman's Club, as well as public information campaigns focusing on the mansion, the adjacent Mission Trail Nature Preserve, and the use of native, drought-tolerant plants.

"Mission Trail park is our largest open space in Carmel, and it's something not just for Carmel residents, but for visitors," she said.

The foundation's task is tougher given this month's vote against city council and mayoral candidates who favored saving Flanders over leasing or selling it, Billig acknowledged. Successful candidates Sue McCloud, Erik Bethel and Mike Cunningham all indicated a willingness to sell the old home to pay for a seismic retrofit of the fire station. But Billig hopes more publicity will encourage city decision makers and residents to change their minds.

"It's been very difficult for us to raise grant money without the support of the city, and we haven't had that," she said. "That's one of the road blocks to doing something creative and dynamic for the city."

Like Tor House and First Murphy House, which have been preserved and used, Flanders could be saved and turned into an art museum, small meeting center or learning institution, according to Billig. But earlier attempts to find a use for Flanders have foundered after opposition from neighbors.

"We have said repeatedly that what we'd like most is the opportunity to work with the council to try to save the property — to go out for the money," she said. "And given an appropriate amount of time to do it, I think this could be a wonderful partnership between the foundation, friends and supporters of Flanders, residents and the city."

To sign up for the free walk, which will begin at the Rio Road entrance to Mission Trail park at 10:30 a.m. April 24, call 626-3826 or 620-0532. The walk and talks will last two hours, and participants are encouraged to wear comfortable shoes and bring a bag lunch. The foundation will provide cold beverages.

And peacocks and asparagus tips and Scrabble and popcorn at 2 a.m. accompanied by Bogie and Bacall. They agreed not to send pictures. "We will know each other when we meet..."

"Where will I find you?" she wrote in her last cyber-missive. "In Parts Unknown," he wrote back. And then he went to Carmel Plaza on the appointed day and, surrounded by the rich scent of leather and suede, he tried on cool Scully Western wear and leather jackets, and more leather jackets by Remy, and Tori Richards Hawaii resort wear, and just when he was reaching for a vintage-looking Nat Nast shirt, she entered the store.

Meanwhile, Charlotte had bought a ticket to Antarctica where penguins thrived. "This is what Dimitri must have meant when he said Parts Unknown," she thought as she boarded the plane. At Carmel Plaza, Dimitri and Diana played eye-tag around the Brighton collection of bags and jewelry and a perfect traveling tote.

"Dinner at Flying Fish Grill," he asked. "I must thank Charlotte for this moment," Dimitri thought to himself. Thirty-thousand feet in the air, Charlotte was fiercely studying piles of maps to Tasmania, Nepal, Cho-Oyu... "Looks like you're going to Parts Unknown..."

Charlotte gasped as she looked into the eyes of Jacque, a delicious, newly divorced French wildlife vet who specialized in Emperor penguins. Things were looking up.

Senate Bill to revamp water board progresses; district hires lobbyist

By MARY BROWNFIELD

STATE SENATOR Bruce McPherson's bill to replace the water board with mayors and a county supervisor unanimously passed its first Senate committee hearing Wednesday, despite the water district's April 19 decision to hire a lobbyist to fight it.

SB 1529, the new version of last year's SB 149, calls for replacing the directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District on a staggered basis as their current terms expire. In addition, the bill would eliminate the requirement that district voters approve water projects, though they could still be asked to approve their financing, and it would allow directors to demand a weighted vote based on the populations they represent. In that case, the weighted vote and the regular vote would have to be in the affirmative for a project to be approved.

BATHROOMS

are homes that I know used to be smaller being 'improved' and becoming much larger," he said. "And then, 'for sale' signs in front of the much larger houses. From there, I do conclude that my concerns were valid."

Roseth disagreed. In a built-out town like Carmel with aging homes, rebuilds and remodels are common and expected. In anticipation, the city years ago developed rules to determine what those new and remodeled homes should look like.

"Certainly there are development firms that are buying up small cottages and either tearing them down and building new homes or substantially remodeling them," Roseth added. "But that was happening before this ordinance, too."

Director Dave Potter, who supported the second-bathroom ordinance as a commonsense means of improving quality of life, maintained his opinion that more bathrooms don't lead to increased water use.

"I'm glad to see that many people have taken advantage of it. These are existing residents — people in the community who have shortened the queues outside their bathroom doors," he said.

As a water board director, Potter said he has no interest in "social engineering" or controlling the housing market.

"And in any community where the housing stock has reached the age of the Monterey Peninsula's, there's bound to be recycling of housing, additions, demolitions and remodels," he said. "That's a fact of life."

Minor tweaking

MPWMD Water Demand Manager Stephanie Pintar characterized changes to the second-bathroom law made by the board Monday night as simple clarifications.

Directors voted unanimously that fixtures in second bathrooms can include only one or two sinks, a toilet, and a standard bathtub or shower, or shower/tub combination. No oversized tubs or separate tubs and showers can be installed in the second bathrooms.

They also decided that if a new water supply ever comes online and a homeowner wants to add a third bathroom, water credits must first be obtained for the second bathroom. Also, the second bathroom cannot be used for a guest house or granny unit, and a demolished single-bathroom house could be rebuilt with two bathrooms while only having enough water credits for one.

Finally, anyone who managed to add a second bathroom in the two years prior to the ordinance's passage by installing half-gallon-flush toilets may replace those with one-gallon or 1.6-gallon-flush toilets, the board decided.

The board plans to vote on the final reading of the revised ordinance at its May meeting.

Since the reemergence of the legislation in February, the water board has been poised to oppose it, as it did when the bill was first introduced a year ago.

Monday night, directors voted 4-2 to pay Sacramento lobbyist Alan Edelstein $40,000 to fight it. According to acting general manager Fran Farina, board members dislike the bill for several reasons, including its replacement of directors with people "whose positions are unknown" regarding water and the elimination of voter approval of water projects.

Director Dave Potter said a lobbyist could do a better job fighting the bill than anyone at the district could, and that directors and staff should focus on finally getting a reliable water supply project in place.

"You have to have a constant physical presence in the capital other than the legislators and be able to access decision makers on a very, very quick basis," he told The Pine Cone. "That's what a consultant does: He can walk across the street rather than me driving 300 miles."

But Potter may still make that trip on occasion. The board also voted to create a legislative committee that includes him and chairman Alvin Edwards, just in case a representative of the district needs to testify.

"There's something in the McPherson bill that just about everybody on the board disliked," said Potter, who believes the current board deserves a chance to get a water project in the works before the state decides to revamp its leadership.

While he acknowledged SB 1529 has its unattractive aspects, director Larry Foy joined director David Pendergrass in voting against a contract with Edelstein.

"I thought hiring the lobbyist was premature," Foy said.

He supports getting rid of the public vote on water projects, which he said is unnecessary and unseen in any other special district in the state.

If it weren't for that requirement, "the reservoir and desalination projects would have been approved, and we would have a water project in place right now," he said.

He agreed with Potter that the current administration deserves a chance to get something done where past boards have failed.

"I am very receptive of a bill that, if we don't have a project and approved EIR in a certain amount of time, then the bill could take effect," he said.

Sheryl McKenzie, government affairs director of the Monterey County Association of Realtors, is not so confident in this or any water board's ability to develop a reliable water supply.

"I would love to think that is the answer, but the problem is that if you look back, we have had stronger pro-project majorities and we still didn't get anything done," she said. "There's something inherently wrong with this board."

Lack of progress has driven people to seek a different solution, according to McKenzie.

"The mayors brought this to Senator McPherson, and they represent tens of thousands of residents who are tired of not having any water," she said.

And the board's decision to hire a lobbyist sends the wrong message.

"If they really want to cooperate and work with the senator on bringing a project to this community, this isn't the way to go," she said.

SB 1529 passed out of the Senate Local Government Committee 7-0 April 21 and is bound for the Senate Committee on Appropriations. For the full text of the bill, its history and status, enter SB 1529 in the search feature at www.leginfo.ca.gov/bilinfo.html.

Latest General Plan draft: No affordable housing zone in C.V. Village

By KIMBERLY WHITE

THE COUNTY'S new General Plan was given preliminary approval by the planning commission this week — without a provision designating Carmel Valley Village for future affordable housing.

"We don't think the county should be spending its energy trying to develop affordable housing there," said commissioner Martha Diehl. Instead, the "affordable housing overlay," which sets up special zoning provisions for projects that include affordable housing, would be limited to the mouth of the valley, she said.

But a call from some Carmel Valley residents to minimize the area at the mouth of the valley considered suitable for new development was rebuffed.

"Some people wanted us to shrink it to the fence behind Brinton's parking lot, others wanted it expanded up the valley, but we decided to leave it right where it is," Diehl said. In the latest General Plan draft, the "rural center" designation, which allows some new commercial and residential development, includes the shopping centers and the mouth of the valley and portions of Rancho Cañada Golf Club. Mid-valley and the Village are also rural centers in the document.

Wednesday, the planning commission unanimously passed a resolution of intent to approve the new general plan and forward it to the board of supervisors. Final action by the planning commission will probably come April 28.

Some residents won a small victory after Carmel Valley Association member Paula Lotz complained that environmental documents did not analyze how the new General Plan's 30 percent slope limit for new development would affect Carmel Valley. Later in the meeting, Diehl said, the wording in the plan was changed to allow a 25 percent maximum slope for development in the valley out of concern for erosion control.

"We have good planning commissioners. They hear what an organization like the Carmel Valley Association, which has 800 members, has to say," Lotz said. "The reason they changed the slope was totally based on scientific information presented during the hearing."

The newest draft plan also stated that any new subdivisions throughout the county should be limited to rural lands, not ag lands. Also, they should not be built in areas "where one or more regional or local roads do not operate at the established level of service standards."

However, Lotz said association members want specific language inserted in the General Plan that prohibits the creation of any new subdivisions anywhere in Carmel Valley, citing concerns about additional traffic.

Residents from other parts of the county spoke about how the General Plan will affect their interests and/or communities. Citing environmental concerns, Mari Kloepfel of Friends, Artists and Neighbors of Elkhorn Slough stated in a letter that all rural areas should be excluded from consideration for affordable-housing development.

A representative of the Monterey Vintners and Growers Association suggested that designating a winery corridor could give a boost to the economy. And residents of Chualar, who presented a short slide show that depicted roadways without sidewalks and a cement park overgrown with weeds, complained that their community is largely ignored even though farmers who live in the area significantly contribute to the economy.

MARATHON

with their kids.

All the women should be easy to spot along the course April 25, since they will be wearing light blue, specially designed Team City Hall shirts with their names on the back.

Ragghianti recalled the first year she and Davies, who lives in Ohio, tackled the course, in 1995.

"It was so foggy, she [Davies] couldn't even see the view," Ragghianti said, adding that she had touted the spectacular scenery as a reason her cousin should make the trip. "The next year, it was beautiful and clear, and then she said she understood" why Ragghianti had raved so much about the view.

The annual event holds even more importance now for Davies, who met her husband, John, on the plane trip west several years ago.

"So he comes out now to walk with us," Ragghianti said.

City ranks build

Miller was the first from city hall to join Ragghianti in the 10.6-mile walk four years ago. Her husband is a marathoner and she had been present at the race before, but never as a participant. She enjoys the "camaraderie and the great festive feeling of the whole event," she said. "And it's easier than running 26 miles."

Three years ago, two more signed on.

"Rhonda kept saying how much fun it was. I was pretty skeptical — I just never thought I'd be able to walk that far," city clerk Crouch said. "But they have music and stands with pieces of bananas and oranges, and by the time you're walking, talking and looking at the scenery, you forget you're walking so far."

The continental breakfast set in the parking lot at Rocky Point Restaurant — the starting point of the walk — doesn't hurt, either.

Panattoni, who is the city's financial services coordinator, has also allowed her Carmel home to become the chosen pre-race slumber party site.

"It just sounded like fun, and we all decided to do it as a group. It's a beautiful walk, and you just would never ever in a million years do that unless it was some kind of event like this," she said. "It's stunning. It makes you thankful for where we live."

This year's event will be executive assistant Farrell's first, after regular walking partner Ellen Ladd entered her in it.

"We'd been talking about it for some time, but she actually gave me the ticket as a gift for Christmas," she said. "Then I was committed — there's no backing out!"

Longtimers

Chief Reade has done the walk since the early 1990s after she worked the course as an emergency medical technician.

"It was so invigorating to see these people push themselves, and I thought, I need to be doing that," she said. "It's not just for the body, but for the mind and soul as well. It's a really special event, and you get out of it a whole lot more than you put into it."

When it debuted, the 10.6-mile walk began at the Little Sur River and ended several miles north of Hurricane Point. They then waited for a bus to deliver them to the Crossroads, where marathoners cross the finish line.

Never wanting to wait, Reade just kept walking, adding another six miles to the distance she had already mostly run. Now the walk ends at the finish line along with the marathon, the marathon relay, the 21-mile PowerWalk, the 9-mile loop walk from Rio Road to Point Lobos, and the 5K.

Reade will be wearing her Team City Hall shirt but prefers going solo, taking advantage of the opportunity to quietly reflect. She always makes a point of greeting volunteers and cheering on each passing marathoner.

Many she knows are involved in race day in some way, including the numerous city employees who volunteer.

"That's one of the things I like about the Big Sur event," she said. "There are so many ways for the community to participate and then turn right around and benefit from it."

Cox, a volunteer fire captain and CFD engineer, is a veteran long-distance runner who has raced in more than 40 marathons since he caught the bug in 1991.

Big Sur is his top choice because it's local, it's tough and it's beautiful.

"It's the challenge of that course," he said. "If you can finish it, you've really accomplished something."

After joking that the last mile is his favorite part of the 26.2-mile stretch of coastline, Cox struggled to identify the choicest miles but finally settled on the run from Andrew Molera State Park to the Little Sur River.

5K registration still open

Cox said he tried to convince public works supervisor Ross to join him this year, "but he said the marathon was too long."

Instead, Ross will be among the many adults running or walking the 5K with their kids to raise money for their schools. It will be his fifth year with his 11-year-old daughter, Haley, and the third with his 8-year-old son, Jacob. Both attend River School, and this will be the first 5K they run rather than walk.

Police Sgt. Calhoun, his wife, Térés, and their 7-year-old daughter, Kendra, a Junipero Serra School student, enrolled in the 5K for the first time this year.

"We've had her running a little bit along the beach," he said, adding that she's proud of the progress she's made. "She's so young that we didn't want to put any pressure on her, but she wanted to do it."

For administrative coordinator Lopez-Frincke and her 11-year-old nephew, Austin McMahan, the 5K has become a tradition full of mutual encouragement. It began when the River School student asked his aunt to do the race with him four years ago.

"It's fun, because either he's saying, 'C'mon Aunt Cindi, you can do it!' or I'm saying, 'C'mon Austin, you can do it!'" she said.

While all of the other Big Sur International Marathon events are sold out, registration remains open for the 5K. Anyone who wants to sign up can do so at the Expo, held Friday and Saturday at the Monterey Conference Center in Portola Plaza. Visit www.bsim.org for more information.

BIRD-A-THON

"I personally like the idea of teamwork, because a lot of bird-a-thons are pretty competitive . . . but the whole county is working together to see as many birds as possible," she said.

According to Roberson, this will be only the second year the bird-a-thon has been a countywide event; prior to 2003, individual teams from different cities would go out to their respective areas to compete against one another. Now, however, "we've decided to all work together to have Monterey County compete as a single entity against other counties in the nation," he said.

Those new to birding — including individuals, families and school groups — can either team up with experts or form their own teams. T.J. Adams, one of two guides who will lead tours May 1, said his group will start at Laguna Grande Park, continue into Marina and Del Rey Oaks and finish the afternoon at Jacks Peak.

He said he enjoys birding because it gives him an excuse to spend as much time outdoors as possible.

"Being outdoors is soothing, but the activity itself is intellectually stimulating," said Adams, a member of the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society. "You're using multiple senses . . . you're using your eyes to see them and your ears to hear them."

Armchair birders can still get their fix by joining the "feeder watch" category and recording how many different species drop by their bird feeders during the designated 24-hour period.

The event will culminate at 6 p.m. Saturday with a Countdown Dinner outside the Wild Bird Center at the Del Monte Shopping Center. There, a silent auction will be held and prizes will be raffled, including a spotting scope worth more than $1,000.

Sharing the benefits and the costs

THIS TOWN is justly proud of its forested setting.

The trees that tower over nearly every street are there partly because of careful planning by the town's original settlers who nestled their cottages among stately pines in the eastern half of the city, and partly because they and every succeeding generation have ambitiously planted trees — so many that modern Carmelites are hardly aware that the western half of town was a treeless meadow before the settlers arrived.

Life in the “village in a forest” is an unmitigated blessing for about 350 days year. But when winter storms rush onshore with their winds of up to 70 miles per hour, some of Carmel's giant pines become fearsome hazards. In El Niño years, they have fallen by the score. But even during mild winters such as the one just passed, and in relatively minor storms such as the one that arrived Feb. 25, some local homeowners get tree trunks dropped into their living rooms.

Most of the homes hit in the latest storm were struck by trees growing on their own property, which clearly became issues between them and their insurance companies.

But one unfortunate owner of an historic home on Guadalupe Street saw the peak of her roof sliced in two by a giant tree that grew across the street on city-owned land. Does that make the city responsible?

In strictly legal terms, the answer is No. Without “constructive notice” that something was wrong with the tree, the city was under no obligation to take steps to prevent it from falling. Trees are everywhere in town, and the city owns many thousands. It simply isn't reasonable to expect the city forester to examine all of them, much less trim or remove all the ones that might fall.

But there is another side of this story. City government is nothing more than the taxpayers and their families joining together for the common good, sharing the benefits and the burdens alike of living in a small town.

It certainly could not be said that the Guadalupe Street homeowner was the sole beneficiary of having the large Monterey pine across the street from her home. In fact, everyone benefited from it and from all the other publicly owned trees. Therefore, she should not have to bear, all by herself, the burden of its falling just because she had the misfortune of being under it when it fell.

Just as the people of Carmel underwrite the cost of local ambulance service even though, in any given year, the vast majority have no need for emergency transportation to the hospital, they should share the cost of repairing the damage to the woman's home, even if the collapse of that particular tree could not have been foreseen.

Bring trees to city's attention

Dear Editor,

When I walked by Marcia Green's house just days after our Feb. 25 storm, the word “cleave” came to mind. A city-owned tree on the opposite side of the street had fallen and literally cut her lovely old house in two.

Two months later, Ms. Green's house is still shrouded under blue tarp while the City of Carmel dithers over who is responsible. As is customary in such cases, the city council quickly voted to reject the claim, estimated to be about $130,000. Once that action was taken, the city's insurance company should have stepped up to the plate.

Sadly, that has not happened. Despite a professional arborist's determination (after the fact) that the tree had “heart rot” and was cracked, the city cited a law that says if they didn't know it was sick, they have no liability.

Well, isn't that interesting! In a city that routinely favors trees over people, a city that tells you if and when you can prune or trim, these guardians of the forest could not hazard a guess that this tree had been compromised by their own trenching work done a couple of years earlier. It is common knowledge (and common sense) that when a pine tree's roots are disturbed in a major way, the tree will suffer.

According to The Pine Cone something might have been done about this tree if it had “been brought to our attention,” said Jane Miller, city personnel specialist.

Consequently, since most of Carmel's mature pines are reaching the end of their natural lifespan, it would behoove every city resident to “bring to the attention” of the forestry department any tree on public easements which could conceivably fall on said resident's home.

Recently, Ms. Green did exactly that in regard to two trees that were on her side of the street. The city promptly removed them. What she did not do was examine the city trees across the street . . . someone should have.

Mayor's term should be four years

Dear Editor,

Now that the election is over, if Mayor Sue McCloud doesn't plan to run again in two years, this would be an appropriate time for the city to catch up with the rest of the electoral world and change the term of the mayor to four years instead of the current two-year span. The council members serve four-year terms, but the mayor has to do the election chore two times to their one; and spend considerable sums to support the candidacy to influence voters and take time from civic leadership activities.

The mayor has only one vote and no real executive powers as does a governor or president, both of whom get four-year terms. Also, a change of mayor really doesn't change the civic direction in most instances, even if the mayor were voted out of office after a two-year term, as the other council members are still there (albeit half of them have to run for a new term at the same time).

We elect state assemblymen for two years and representatives in Congress for the same two-year period. And they spend a great deal of their time seeking funds and working on reelection rather than on legislative issues they might more appropriately devote their time to. As this is a long-term pattern, it hardly seems likely to be changed although four-year terms are suggested every election year — as I am in this note. But at least in the Assembly and House of Representatives, all the members are in the two-year boat, while only the mayor in Carmel has that constant reelection pressure. Makes no sense.

'Wicked words'

Dear Editor,

We trust that no one believes silence is consent to the wicked words in the letter to the editor (April 16) from Alexandra James, who gets pleasure out of her vendetta against the general manager of Hacienda Carmel. Bill Piercy needs no defenders. The last 35 years, during which he has been the manager of this "common interest development" for seniors, are testament to his skills.

Nevertheless, we need to set the record straight concerning incorporation of Carmel Valley. An organization at the mouth of the valley conducted a mass mailing of ballots to registered voters, the return of which were addressed directly to LAFCO. Hacienda Carmel received a report from LAFCO that of the residents who returned their ballots, more than 93 percent voted against incorporation.

The LAFCO February meeting held at All Saints' School was arranged by the Carmel Valley Forum. A bulletin from Hacienda management was distributed to all mailboxes offering transportation to all residents who wished to attend that meeting. One person responded. The general manager, who believed he also should stay informed, used his own car as transport. The Hacienda van was not used!

Also for the record, legal and representative decisions at Hacienda Carmel are the responsibility of the nine elected directors on the board, in accordance with the bylaws of the corporation. Decisions are never "dictated" by the general manager. Miss James believes what she wants to believe.

The directors and the general manager, as well as the other employed staff, are well aware of the attempts by some to micromanage by making personal attacks and planting negative rumors. These few will stir any pot in which they feel they can put a stick.

Ely's thanks

Dear Editor,

I want to thank all of the wonderful residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea for providing me with the incredible opportunity to serve you for the past four years. Working with the city council, the staff, the commissions, committees, boards and volunteers has been one of the most gratifying and rewarding experiences of my life. Completing the Local Coastal Program and the renovation of Sunset Center are two achievements of which we can all be proud.

I look forward to my continued participation in the many exciting and varied opportunities that our city has to offer and expanding the wonderful friendships that Barbara and I have developed with you.

Thank you very much!

Dick Ely, Carmel

promised. "Feel free to let me know what you think, and I will do my very best to listen and carry that out."

After taking his oath, Cunningham told those gathered he was honored to serve the city and pledged to work diligently to represent it.

"There's too much at stake to do any less," he said, reiterating his campaign promise to "listen carefully and decide fairly."

Freshly sworn in for her third term, McCloud thanked her sister, Sarah Berling, "who, like me, works tirelessly to maintain the values and traditions of Carmel."

She remarked that time had flown since her last swearing in two years ago, when she was looking forward to the reopening of Sunset Center and the beginning of the centennial celebration of the city's initial development.

"In our early days when times were tough, the residents pulled together. Now we must again work together to lay the economic foundation for our continued prosperity," she said. "By cooperating and remembering our past, I am confident Carmel-by-the-Sea and its residents will enjoy another 100 years in paradise."

Farewells

Outgoing city council members Dick Ely and Barbara Livingston received clocks as gifts of thanks from the mayor and the city before offering their own parting remarks.

While Ely was brief — giving thanks and saying he had already talked enough during his four years in office — Livingston reflected at length and then asked the new administration to remember Carmel is "a place where residential interests are placed above commerce."

The only woman ever to serve three terms on the council and one of only four members to do so, Livingston said she was "politically naive, full of hope and altruism," upon her initial swearing in 12 years ago.

The experience she gained didn't make her irreplaceable, though, Livingston said. Any new council members who respect the general plan and Carmel's residential character could do the job.

"What once was a village of artists and bohemians is now, according to some real estate agents, a city in which 60 percent of the homes are occupied by second-home owners," she said. "How can we imprint on these people the importance of community character over personal property rights? How do we make them understand how history has molded the traditions of our village? That's a challenge for this new council to solve; otherwise, we will continue to lose even more of our identity bit by bit."

Among those losses is the drop in the number of city department heads from eight to two, she said.

After thanking many people and groups, including those who later foisted gigantic floral bouquets upon her, Livingston recited her last wish, "that we all — all of us — take a time-out from politics to wander alone the hand-built streets of Carmel, to enjoy what's left of the cottages of yesteryear, to look up into the canopy of pine, oak, cypress and redwood, to consider the rustic informality of our streetscapes, to experience the unique charm of the downtown commercial district and to gaze at the dark starry night skies.

"We need to find the time to do these things because it is critical that we learn to appreciate what nature and man have created here, so that we can better understand what it is that we should be protecting for the future."

Following the ceremony, the new council took on a distinctly Scottish flair as it followed bagpiper Michel d'Avenas up the street to celebrate at the Cypress Inn. Meanwhile, Livingston and her supporters departed to gather at the home she and Bob Kohn share.

Budget meeting rescheduled

The new council will have its first meeting Monday, April 26, at 4:30 p.m. in city hall, during which members will discuss the upcoming budget. The meeting was originally set for Tuesday, but was rescheduled due to a conflict. The meeting will be broadcast at 8 a.m. Sunday, May 2, on KMST cable channel 26.

VETERANS OFFICE MOVES TO AGUAJITO ROAD

IN AN effort to help cut county costs, the Military and Veterans Affairs office will close the doors at its Reservation Road facility Wednesday and move into the Monterey courthouse complex on Agujito Road.

Effective Friday, April 30, the new address will be 1200 Agujito Road, room 3. The new telephone number for the administrative office, claims assistance and hospital-van scheduling will be 647-7610. (The number until then is 384-0605.)

Information and assistance will still be available at the VA Monterey Outpatient Clinics at Fort Ord and 1000 S. Main Street in Salinas.

Red Cross chapters break new ground, join forces for Treasure Sale

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FOR THE first time in their history, the Carmel and Monterey County chapters of the American Red Cross will join fundraising forces when they host a Treasure Sale in Carmel May 7 and 8.

"It really represents a desire on the part of both chapters and their collective leadership to find creative and energizing ways they can work more as a team to serve all of the residents of Monterey County," said Donna Duvin, executive director of the Carmel chapter. "When you have many non-profits operating in one fairly limited area, there's always a sense that you are vying for the same resources."

The Monterey County chapter's public relations director, Laura Kershner, who is also now providing PR services for Carmel, said she was delighted when Carmel extended the invitation to participate in the sale this year.

"Both chapters are in a situation where we need to raise funds, and that's becoming increasingly difficult," she said.

"This is a new beginning for us."

The Treasure Sale will help them provide disaster relief and ongoing programs in first aid, CPR, lifeguarding and disaster preparedness. Neither receives money for their local efforts from the federal government, United Way or the national Red Cross headquarters.

"The dollars raised through the sale will help sustain us in our next year of operations," Duvin said, adding that the non-profit's goal of caring for all Monterey County residents transcends territorial boundaries.

The success of the sale depends on donations of clothing, jewelry, furniture, bric-a-brac, and any other treasures donors can spare. The Red Cross is accepting donations through April 30, and many merchants have already stepped forward to contribute, including the Pebble Beach Company, Dick Bruhn and many stores throughout Carmel, The Crossroads and The Barnyard.

The sale will run 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, May 7 and Sunday, May 8, in the Carmel Red Cross Chapter House at Dolores and Eighth, and the American Legion Hall next door.

"We're hoping this will be a terrific success and will lead the way for other joint fundraising ventures in the future," Duvin said. "We're hoping the sale will get bigger and bigger and bigger and better and better and better."

For more information or to make a donation, call the Carmel chapter at 624-6921 or the Monterey County chapter at 375-5730.

First aid/CPR teachers needed

The Carmel chapter is also looking for candidates to enroll in its first aid/CPR/automatic electric defibrillator instruction course, which begins May 3. Anyone interested in participating in the eight-session course to become an instructor should call Anna Azzopardi at the Carmel chapter.

To protect views, city bans planting of Monterey pine

By PAUL MILLER

WHILE THE California Coastal Commission steps up its campaign to halt the Pebble Beach Company's proposed new golf course by characterizing the Monterey pine as a threatened species, one California city has banned the planting of the tree because of its "rapid growth," "invasiveness" and "height at maturity."

This week, the city council of El Cerrito not only extended a ban on the planting of Monterey pines within the city limits, it also took the first step to set up a mediation process whereby property owners can try to compel neighbors to trim or even cut down Monterey pines that are blocking their views.

"There are four species that are banned in El Cerrito because they grow so quickly," said Bruce King, maintenance manager for the public works department. "The Monterey pine in particular has been widely planted for landscaping and privacy because it grows so fast."

According to King, property owners in El Cerrito hills enjoy expansive views of San Francisco Bay and the Golden Gate Bridge. The city, which is just north of Berkeley, has even adopted "El Cerrito, city with a view," as its slogan.

But as the city matured, trees planted for landscaping or privacy by downhill homeowners began to intrude

'No person shall plant, maintain or permit to grow on private property' a Monterey pine, Monterey cypress, coast redwood or red gum eucalyptus.

— Proposed ordinance on the treasured views of their uphill neighbors, diminishing their enjoyment of their homes and eroding their investment.

A property with a great view is worth $100,000 more than a similar property without a view, realtors in the East Bay say.

"People pay a lot for views, said Laurie Capitelli of Red Oak Realty. "Say I have two houses to show you that are exactly the same, except one has a view from San Francisco Bay to Mount Tamalpais and another has a grove of trees in front. If both cost the same, most people are going to pick the view."

"Views are a very serious issue here and people regard their views highly," King said.

Residents want ban strengthened

According to city officials, some people who spoke at Tuesday night's city council meeting were advocates of protecting trees and wanting more trees planted. But most residents wanted the tree ordinance strengthened beyond the ban on Monterey pines enacted in 1992.

The ordinance approved Tuesday deems the "unreasonable obstruction or blocking of views by uncontrolled growth or maintenance of trees on private property" to be a "private nuisance," and establishes an entitlement for homeowners to any view that "existed at any time since a person purchased or acquired" their home.

To protect those views, "no person shall plant, maintain or permit to grow on private property" a Monterey pine, Monterey cypress, coast redwood or red gum eucalyptus, the ordinance says.

Another section of the law, to be considered next month, sets up a complicated procedure for homeowners with lost views to try to get them restored.

First, an aggrieved landowner would be required to notify the owner of an offending tree of his complaint. "The parties shall attempt to resolve their concerns to the satisfaction of both parties while maintaining a spirit of compromise," according to the proposed ordinance.

If that doesn't work, the dispute would go to a mediator who, while without any power to order a tree cut down, "shall strive to aid the parties in resolving their dispute."

If the mediator is unsuccessful, the property owner with the lost view could submit a "view claim" to prove that he lost an important view. The city would then encourage the parties to submit the dispute to binding arbitration or, as a last resort, settle their dispute in civil court.

Among the remedies allowed by the proposed ordinance to restore a lost view are:

- trimming and/or thinning of branches on a neighbor's property;
- topping up to one-third of a neighbor's tree, but only when "it would not compromise the vitality of the tree; and
- cutting down the tree if more than one-third must be removed to restore an unreasonably obstructed view.

The homeowner forced to remove a tree would be allowed to replace it with lower-growing vegetation to protect their privacy.

Another unique feature of the ordinance: If a person is sued in civil court for obstructing another homeowner's view but the judge finds that the view doesn't have to be restored, the "claimant shall be required to pay for the tree owner's reasonable attorney's fees."

Under the ordinance, homeowners wouldn't have the right to a view that was already blocked when they acquired their property. Many of the view claims filed in the near future are expected to come from homeowners getting ready to sell.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine 7111 and Ambulance 7166 responded to a medical emergency on Carmelo. Firefighters assisted ambulance with patient assessment, oxygen administration, diagnostics, monitor hookup, I.V. setup, packaging and gathering information on a 78-year-old male experiencing possible gastrointestinal bleeding. Patient transported to CHOMP.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Santa Fe Street resident, 22, stopped at Scenic and Eighth and arrested for driving under the influence with a blood alcohol content greater than .08 percent. He was cited at Monterey P.D. and his 1998 Ford Ranger was impounded at Carmel Chevron.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a past-tense dispute and disturbance at Second and San Carlos. Female advised a subject had come downstairs and yelled profanities at her after she tapped on her ceiling in an effort to have the upstairs resident quiet down. This seemed to make the upstairs tenant angry and she stomped on her floor. Moments later, she was outside banging on the doors and windows and challenging the neighbor to a fight. Resident was afraid and asked if the subject was drunk and that was causing her to act this way. This only made her more angry. Another neighbor yelled at her and she yelled back. Contacted the upstairs neighbor, who was obviously intoxicated and denied challenging the downstairs resident to a fight. She said she has had ongoing disputes with the neighbor regarding noise. She admitted going downstairs and trying to get the resident to come to the door. Advised her to contact the landlord with any concerns instead of confronting the neighbor, especially if she is intoxicated. Both parties counseled.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Driver reported being struck from behind while stopped at the stop sign at Ocean and San Antonio. Other driver stated he stopped behind the first and his foot slipped off the clutch, which caused his vehicle to leap forward and strike the other from behind. Both parties exchanged information at the scene.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a barking dog at Rio Road and Santa Lucia in the morning hours. Contact made with the owner of the dog and the situation was discussed. Contact also made with a neighbor, who had no complaints. No violation.
