Historic Nielsen Bros. may close

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE COST of doing business in Carmel could lead to the demise of Nielsen Bros. Market, according to owner Merv Sutton. High overhead, coupled with a drop in population, have made it tougher than ever to stay open.

"There are more than 2,000 people who used to live here who aren't living here anymore," he said, adding that the market once employed two delivery drivers and trucks, but now has only one. "With insurance and workers compensation and everything going up and business going down, that's not a good combination."

In a good year, Nielsen's grosses $3 million, according to Sutton, and the market was a money maker every year until two years ago. Since the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, gross income has dropped by $800,000.

He's done what he can to cut overhead, including letting two employees go, cutting others' hours, no longer making donations and starting a website to reach more customers.

But much of the cost of doing business isn't negotiable. Government, for example, levies a tax, permit fee or surcharge on just about everything, from the right to sell cigarettes and liquor to operating the elevator.

Sutton also continues to be stung by the astronomical electricity rates that hit after the 2001 energy crisis and PG&E's subsequent bankruptcy filing.

Nielsen Bros. Market power bills currently average thousands of dollars, including $1,000 in surcharges to cover the electricity contracts signed during the crisis, he said.

"You can imagine what a big market pays, if we pay $6,000 a month," he said. "With utilities of more than $70,000 a year for this little tiny

24 could lose jobs in balanced budget

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TWENTY-FOUR city workers could receive layoff notices if the Carmel City Council adopts the budget it received Thursday from city administrator Rich Guillen. The job cuts would result in decreased services in all departments, including public safety, but the budgets for the next three would be balanced without dipping into reserves.

"Expenses have increased faster than revenues," Guillen told the council, much as they did 12 years ago, when the city council was forced to eliminate 15 full-time jobs.

With the governor's announcement Wednesday that the cities and counties had agreed to take $2.6 billion in cuts over the next two years in exchange for protection from future raids of local funds, Guillen said the city would lose $197,195 to the state, though he warned the council the projections are fluid.

Overall, the budget team — Guillen, treasurer Charles Reiman and CPA Paul Wood — estimated revenues would decline slightly over the next three years, from $10,950,340 in 2004/2005 to $10,525,642 in 2006/2007. The "big three" cash generators for the city are sales tax, property tax and transient occupancy tax, and for this coming fiscal year, Guillen projected TOT would increase 3 percent; property tax would increase 7 percent, while sales tax would decrease 2 percent over the current year.

"Staff is recommending these conservative [numbers] on the basis that a full economic recovery hasn't occurred," he wrote.

He emphasized the importance of shifting the city away from a "one-crop economy" by developing more ways to boost revenues. Last

Sunset contract almost ready

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH THE April election having cleared the way for a nonprofit to take over management of Sunset Center, contract negotiations between the city and Sunset Cultural Center, Inc., are going full steam ahead and should soon produce a document for public scrutiny, though Carmel City Administrator Rich Guillen could not say when.

"Both sides recognize the urgency and importance of getting this agreement done," he said.

During last month's city council and mayoral campaigns,

BAGHDAD: Letter from the front lines

Editor's note: There are more than 120,000 American soldiers in Iraq. To the big city news media, however, only a handful of soldiers are newsworthy — the ones who had something horrible happen to them, and the ones who did something bad to somebody else. In an effort to give a voice to the vast majority of the troops on the front lines, we have asked several local soldiers to send us essays about their experiences in the Iraq War. The first comes from a soldier serving in south Baghdad.

Dear readers of The Carmel Pine Cone,

My name is Captain Kevin M. Polosky and I am currently the Company Commander for A Company, 515th Forward Support Battalion. We are part of the 1st Cavalry Division, stationed out of Ft. Hood, Texas. I am a California native, having grown up in the Bay Area, and currently both my parents and grandparents are residents of Carmel. My company is deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom, and we are stationed in southern Baghdad.

My company is unique in that we were set up with the sole purpose of deploying to Iraq and providing logistical support to units of the 5th Brigade, 1st Cavalry Division. We were formed on 14 January 2004 and began putting vehicles on a ship on 23 January. I received around 200 soldiers from various units within the Division, all with specific jobs that will help provide the support the units in Baghdad need. We were forced to quickly come together as a unit, and my soldiers responded. They immediately began bonding and are now as close as any unit I have ever been affiliated with.

County seeks millions in workers compensation cuts

By KIMBERLY WHITE

MONTEREY COUNTY can save millions of dollars by reducing the cost of workers compensation claims from its employees — including close to $2 million with an early return-to-work program, the board of supervisors learned Tuesday morning.

Seven initiatives aimed at shaving money from the workers compensation program were proposed in February and have been analyzed by Monterey County Senior Administrative Analyst Elana Schwartz.

“The goal is to have a well running workers comp program that provides excellent medical care for our injured workers” while saving money for the county, Schwartz said.

Fewer claims are expected to be filed over the coming year, deputy county counsel Keith Honda reported, partly because fewer employees are on the payroll. In 2002, the payroll was about $243 million; in 2004, it is expected to be $225 million.

Over the last several months, county workers have seen some of the workers comp changes instituted by the county, including additional training to prevent jobsite injuries and giving feedback on “customer-satisfaction” forms after an injury.

Schwartz said an important way to lower costs is to identify the most frequent injuries. For county employees, these include slip-and-fall accidents, handling dangerous or heavy materials and repetitive trauma such as carpal tunnel syndrome.

The return-to-work program, which includes finding alternative jobs for people whose injuries prevent them from doing their former tasks, could save the county nearly $2 million based on the payout in 2003, Honda said, with the majority coming from medical and wage-replacement costs.

“That’s a conservative estimate based on what we were told by the Insurance Education Association,” Schwartz said.

The program is mutually beneficial, she added, since injured employees who take a long time to return to work feel disconnected from the job and their coworkers.

Another initiative involves the time required to investigate a workers compensation claim. This issue is particularly important under SB 899, which Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger signed into law April 19 after campaigning on a promise to reduce the cost of workers compensation insurance for California businesses. Previously, injured employees were required to file claim forms with their employers, and if those claims were not rejected within 90 days, employees would be entitled to compensation for any costs related to the injury.

But under SB 899, co-authored by Senator Bruce McPherson, an employer is now required to pay for a worker’s injury from within one day of the incident to the date the claim is either accepted or rejected. Also, the bill limits liability for medical treatment to $10,000 during that time.

“How many cases are still pending in Monterey County?” supervisor Fernando Armenta asked.

“In the neighborhood of 600,” Schwartz replied, “some of them 10 years old.”

Other initiatives include jobsite training and improved scrutiny of medical providers. In 2003 alone, she said, workers could choose from more than 1,200 medical providers in California. But beginning Jan. 1, 2005, employers can establish medical-provider networks that workers must use.

Armenta suggested a union member and workers who have already been through the travails of the county workers compensation system would be invaluable additions to oversight committees.

Fifth District Supervisor Dave Potter said investigations need to be thorough, especially in a system as riddled with abuse as the workers compensation program.

“There are people who are trying to work the system . . . and it’s those people who are really costing the rest of us,” Potter added.

Woman finds her calling on Navy bomb squad

By KIMBERLY WHITE

ROBBIE KURTH has done everything from disabling missiles to clearing submarine fields littered with torpedoes, from training dolphins to spot bombs to dismantling explosives stashed in storage.

Pretty good for a girl.

After spending 15 years in the Navy, Kurth, a 39-year-old student at the Defense Language Institute, is the highest-ranking enlisted female diver on the Navy's bomb squad.

Technically, however, she is an EOD tech.

Explosives Ordnance Disposal technicians identify, disable and dispose of hazardous ordnance, from World War II-era torpedoes found somewhere at sea to homemade bombs. All four armed services have EOD technicians, but the Navy is the only one certified to do these tasks under water. Depending on which category the ordnance fits into and its age, she said, the procedure can be as simple as removing an inactive warhead to dismantling a timed bomb.

"We all have a definite respect for the ordnance, but we also have confidence in ourselves because of the training we've received," said Kurth. "There's always a chance it'll blow up. That's where the respect comes in."

However, this was not the career path she had in mind when she enrolled at a community college in Texas. But after realizing she "wasn't giving it all the attention it deserved," Kurth decided to take a break and join the Navy. Not only would it give her something constructive to do during her college leave of absence, but she could take the skills she learned as a Navy diver and apply them to her original goal of becoming an oceanographer once she was ready to return.

'Sign me up'

Off she went to the local recruiting office, where she was told the wait to join the Navy diver program was typically one year long. But she had scored well on her entrance test — and one of the guys who should have been shipping out to boot camp in two weeks had failed his drug test.

"I kept saying I wanted to be a Navy diver and the guy said, 'Your scores are high enough, you could be an EOD,' " she recalled. "He started ranting about what an EOD is but I wasn't really paying attention, I was just listening for the diving part. So I said, 'So I get to go to dive school, right?' and he said, 'Yeah,' and I said, 'Okay, sign me up.' "

Two weeks later, Kurth woke up in an Orlando boot camp. But it turned out there was not exactly a direct route to becoming a Navy diver.

"Recruiters have a real interesting way of making you think that you're on the path to

Businesses to share costs of haz-mat emergencies

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FIRE DEPARTMENTS in Seaside and Salinas should not shoulder the financial burdens of responding to every hazardous materials incident in Monterey County, and charging for remedying a serious emergency could gut the budget of a small city like Carmel. On Tuesday, the board of supervisors decided without discussion to spread the costs of haz-mat responses by forcing businesses that use or sell dangerous chemicals to contribute to a new Hazardous Materials Emergency Response Trust Fund.

The county's operational area coordinating council, representing emergency service agencies, recommended the health department levy the surcharge.

"They have a lot of responsibilities for haz-mat permitting," said Carmel Valley Fire Chief Sidney Reade, a member of the OACC. "They issue fines and do inspections, and since they are already charging everybody storing, using or handling hazardous materials, they could tack on a few dollars toward a haz-mat response fund."

While some of the 4,000 health department permits issued annually to businesses involve no hazardous materials, 90 percent are given to establishments "where there is a potential for a hazardous release or discharge," Monterey County Health Department Director Len Foster said.

The level of risk determines the amount of the surcharge — $25, $45 or $250 per year — and the fees should add up to about $213,000 a year for the fund, according to Foster.

"There are certain services in the county which utilize large amounts of toxic chemicals," he explained. "Therefore, they have a higher surcharge."

Haz-mat 'out of hand'

Seaside Fire Department's a specialized haz-mat team was born 20 years ago out of necessity, according to chief Jerry Wombacher, when firefighters began responding to an increased number of emergencies involving ammonia leaks.

"Out of a desire for self preservation, they got specialized suits and equipment, and that segued into additional training," he said.

Soon, Seaside Fire's team was being called to coastal areas outside city limits and even into neighboring counties. Salinas Fire Department's haz-mat team was covering inland incidents.

"There was not a lot of coordination between the teams," he said. They rarely communicated and had different training, equipment and practices.

These differences, and more so the financial burdens, became increasingly evident during widespread anthrax scares following the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

"The haz-mat situation kind of got out of hand in Monterey County, as it did everywhere in the United States," said chief Reade. "So the fire chiefs met, called it a crisis and formed a working group."

With four firefighters required on each haz-mat call, incidents outside the city mean others are paid overtime to cover for them, according to Wombacher. Of his 22 full-time firefighters, 10 are haz-mat trained and others are in the process.

Seaside Fire Department has one of only two hazardous materials incident response teams in Monterey County, and its crew handles emergencies all over the coast, including this call at Carmel P.D. in 2001. Businesses will begin sharing the costs of responding to haz-mat incidents.

Equipment is expensive, and the training is extensive.

A hazardous materials technician must complete four 40-hour courses at the California Specialized Training Institute in Southern California; a specialist has to complete two additional 40-hour courses. The fire department pays for course fees, travel, lodging and salary, in addition to paying the firefighters back home who cover their shifts.

"The chiefs realized this was a real burden on Seaside and Salinas," Wombacher said.

The surcharge that will help cover those costs will also relieve the cities and the county, which are billed $50 an hour for each Seaside firefighter and the haz-mat vehicle responding to calls originating in their jurisdictions. While the average response, sampling, assessment and cleanup takes about two hours, some can last many more hours and even days, if the contamination is widespread and many people need to be decontaminated. They are also billed for materials and equipment.

"If this is one of those long, drawn-out incidents, the cost could go up to the tens of thousands of dollars, and for some

COPS FINGERPRINT SERRA SCHOOL KIDS FOR SAFETY

No, they're not being entered in the criminal index

By MARY BROWNFIELD

"THANK YOU for 'fingerprinting' us. We liked seeing your car," reads the cover of a book of drawings presented to three Carmel police officers by 15 kindergartners at Junipero Serra School.

Filled with crayon drawings of squad cars, cop-like figures dressed in black and the occasional rainbow, the book was inspired by a recent school visit that made a serious and important task seem like fun.

CPD Sgt. Mike Calhoun, detective Buck Melton and community services officer Lisa Panetta spent a Friday afternoon making I.D. kits that included the fingerprints and photograph of each child. The parents added other identifying information and a hair sample to the kits, which would be used if a child went missing.

"We talked about how everyone has a different print and whether they had a whorl, a loop or an arch," said Calhoun, whose daughter attends the school. Panetta also has a child there.

Captivated, the 15 kindergarten kids examined their fingers as if they had never seen them before. "Then we cleaned them up and took their pictures, and they were all smiling," Calhoun said.

As much as they don't like thinking about the reasons they might need to have such information about their children, parents are always grateful and often ask for extra kits so they can fingerprint others at home, according to Calhoun.

"A lot of parents think, 'How sad,'" he said. "But we talk about it in a positive way and that it's a good thing to have an I.D. kit for your child."

Kindergarten teacher Theresa Todd said police began visiting the school a decade ago to help students become comfortable with officers and recognize them as people they could go to when they need help.

"Someone in uniform is a person you can talk to," she said.

While the fingerprinting and photographing is fun, Todd added, her students seem especially drawn to the police cruiser.

"They really like to go through the car," she said. "They can see it and climb into the back seat, though I tell them I never want to see them in there again."

Its beauty is more than paint deep.

Learn about desalting H₂O

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

“BE SMART about desal,” implores the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments, which with several other agencies will host an all-day discussion of desalination May 20. Free and open to the public, the workshop is set to include appearances by elected state officials and panel discussions on several topics, including:

- Introduction to Desalination, moderated by Nick Papadakis of AMBAG and addressed by Brad Damitz of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, David Furukawa of the National Water Research Institute and Jonas Minton of the Planning and Conservation League;

- Case Studies, moderated by Andy Bell of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and presented by Mike Armstrong of the Marina Coast Water District, Bill Ferguson from the City of Santa Barbara and, possibly, a representative from the city of Tampa, Fla.;

- Federal and California Perspective, moderated by Peggy Shirrel of the Moss Landing Harbor District and addressed by Michelle Chapman from the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, Fawzi Karajeh from the State Department of Water Resources, Tom Luster of the California Coastal Commission and Patrick Rutten of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration;

- Permits, Potential Environmental Impacts and Mitigation Measures, moderated by Bill Kocher of the Santa Cruz Water District and addressed by Pete Raimondi from UC Santa Cruz and Matt Thompson from the Regional Water Quality Control Board; and

- Regional Collaboration for Local Solutions, moderated by Monterey County Water Resources Agency General Manager Curtis Weeks and discussed by Brad Damitz of the MBNMS, Jane DeLay from Save Our Shores and Bob Wilkinson from UC Santa Barbara.

State Senator Bruce McPherson has been invited to speak, and Gary Shallcross will make a presentation on behalf of Assemblyman John Laird. McPherson has a bill pending in the state legislature that would reconfigure the MPWMD board to include elected city and county officials and would remove the requirement that water projects be approved by voters. He has cited the ongoing lack of a reliable water supply as one of the driving forces behind the bill, which received Senate approval last week. Laird has authored a bill that would require the California Public Utilities Commission to study the possibility of making power available to desal plants at lower rates.

Cal-Am Water Co. is studying the feasibility of building a desal plant at Moss Landing to solve the Peninsula's perennial water shortage — a plan that has led to discussions about building a larger plant to supply water to much of the county.

To register for the free May 20 workshop, Be Smart About Desal, call 883-3750. The conference will run 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Monterey Beach Resort.

Public invited to tour every sheriff unit May 22

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WATCH A police dog in action, check out the armory, inspect crime scene investigation equipment and see a search and rescue in progress, all at the Monterey County Sheriff's Office in Salinas May 22.

The sheriff will throw open the doors of the public safety building to show county residents what their tax dollars are buying.

"I thought it would be great to make this a day for the public to see what it is we do, ask questions, learn how our special teams operate, interact with our employees and take tours of our facility," said Sheriff Mike Kanalakis.

Planning began nine months ago for the open house, which will afford the public a rare glimpse inside every special unit — including SWAT, K-9, and the volunteer-staffed search and rescue and mounted patrol.

"This thing is so big, every special team will be doing something," the sheriff said. For instance the K-9 unit will demonstrate how the dogs respond to the officers' commands, putting them through their paces and doing attack drills.

The demo will allow people "to see what kind of training and discipline they have to go through to obtain that level of expertise."

Inside, visitors can tour the building, from the CSI lab and the coroner's office to the armory, and everything in between.

Adding to the fun will be a bounce house for the kids, a band of bagpipers and food being sold by the police athletic league. There will be free fingerprinting for the kids.

While the open house will show off the sheriff's office, Kanalakis hopes it will also entice some visitors to apply for deputy positions. The agency will be testing for new recruits again in June.

The event will run 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, May 22, at the sheriff's public safety building, 1414 Natividad Road, in Salinas.

Elephant society hosts 4th annual event

THE ELEPHANTS of Africa Rescue Society, or EARS, will have its fourth annual fundraiser 4:30 to 10 p.m. May 22 at Vision Quest Ranch in Salinas.

The event, which includes a semiformal dinner and live and silent auctions, will feature the society's two elephants — Butch and Buffy.

EARS director Heather Greaux, who said

those are the names they came with and there's nothing they can do about it, said the two African elephants arrived at the Vision Quest facility more than four years ago, after being given up by a petting zoo that had to shut down. Because of the expense and amount of time needed to care for elephants, they are often given up by zoos and circuses.

The $50,000 to $60,000 raised by EARS each year is used to support projects like the construction in 2002 of a large elephant pond, Greaux said. However, most of the money goes for feed, straw and veterinary costs.

Starting at 6 p.m., pilot Wayne Handley of Wayne Handley Aerosports will perform a private air show. Handley, a former naval aviator, crop duster and aerobatic champion, has logged more than 26,000 hours of flight time during his 47-year aviation career.

Tickets cost $125. For more information, go to www.elephantears.org or call 455-3180.

Tularcitos students raise more than $9,000 during CF walk

By KIMBERLY WHITE

AT THE end of this year's cystic fibrosis fundraiser, Tularcitos Elementary School parent Elizabeth Robinson spent days rolling quarters and counting coins.

"The thing that's most heartwarming is the kids who come in with Ziploc bags full of coins, and you know they've raided their piggy banks," she said.

The national Cystic Fibrosis Foundation will soon be $9,262 richer, thanks to the students. Seventy-seven who raised more than $50 will be treated to a pool party at the community center, and others will receive either ice cream or pizza certificates for raising up to $50.

Robinson, who spearheaded the first Tularcitos event six years ago, said the school board "has given us the green light and it's part of our community service. Barring some radical change, I expect we'll be doing it next year."

Last month, students solicited pledges from the community, then spent 40 minutes during their physical education classes walking, with teachers keeping track of their total mileage. Over the course of five days, Robinson said, the school's 400 students racked up a total of 345 miles.

May 7 was the final day to turn in money raised since their first walk April 18. However, donations are still being accepted.

"I'd just send it with a note, asking [the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation] to add it to our tally," Robinson said.

Robinson, whose 6-year-old daughter suffers from cystic fibrosis, said the event was canceled last year due to budget cuts. Although she feared that loss of momentum might translate to less support when it picked up again, "the kids have worked so hard that they're enthusiastic."

Cystic fibrosis, a genetic disease that impairs digestion and causes the body to develop lung infections, affects 30,000 individuals in the United States. According to the foundation, approximately one in 31 people are unknowing carriers of the defective gene.

"You have no idea that you carry it until you have a child, unless there's a family history of it, and there was no family history with us," Robinson said.

Just in the last year, she added, the average life expectancy of those with CF rose from 32 to 33.5 years, and "tremendous strides" have been made treating the disease.

"It's amazing to see the generosity in this community, to be able to generate that much for just one cause," she said. "It's such a tribute to the place where we live."

The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation recently declared May National Cystic Fibrosis Awareness Month, with activities geared toward fundraising and increasing public awareness about the disease. The month-long designation is an extension of Cystic Fibrosis Week, introduced in 1999 by the mother of a young boy with the disease, according to the foundation's website (www.cff.org). The organization's largest fund-raising event, Great Strides, will be held during the third weekend in May, and organizers hope to raise $23 million for cystic fibrosis research and care programs.

Those wishing to donate to the Tularcitos Walk for CFF can send checks made out to CFF to the Tularcitos Elementary School, 35 Ford Road, Carmel Valley, CA 93924.

Big Sur Half Marathon, 5K open for registration

THEY'VE BARELY caught their breath, but organizers of last month's world-famous Big Sur International Marathon are already accepting registrations for the 2004 Big Sur Half Marathon and Run Forrest Run 5K set for Oct. 17.

Although it's a misnomer of sorts because the half-marathon comes nowhere near the Big Sur Coast, the 13.1-mile mostly flat Big Sur Half Marathon course covers the beautiful Pacific Grove coastline, Cannery Row and Fisherman's Wharf.

The half-marathon begins at 7 a.m. and features plentiful volunteers, live music along the way and well-stocked aid stations every few miles. The 5K begins at 8:30 a.m. near Cannery Row and extends to Lovers Point before looping back.

A Health & Fitness Expo will be held before race day. And for newbies and returning athletes who need a little coaching, Big Sur International Marathon organizers will again offer a comprehensive training clinic covering stretching, nutrition, effective mind games and running schedules.

For more information or to register for either race, visit www.bigsurhalfmarathon.org or call 625-6226.

We deployed to Southwest Asia on 10 March, and spent about two weeks in Kuwait preparing for the long move up to Baghdad. On 23 March we got the call to move forward and start the convoy up. Crossing into Iraq was a surreal experience. The border is nothing special, a small U.S.-presence, a couple of buildings and some barricades. There is no difference at that point in the terrain between Iraq and Kuwait, but when we crossed that border I knew things were different. A feeling came over me where I knew that we were in a totally different environment, and we had to be prepared for anything.

The convoy itself was a difficult mission. I led about 90 troops and their vehicles on that long march from Kuwait to Iraq. We spent most of the time on highways and I was amazed at how normal things looked. I was expecting to see just complete chaos; instead I saw what seemed to be everyday life. Vehicles driving up and down the roads with locals taking themselves to where they needed to go. There are military checkpoints along the route that served as welcome refueling and rest stops.

The convoy took about two days, but thankfully we all arrived safely.

Once we arrived, we immediately began work. As stated earlier, my company's main mission is support, and we started setting up all the things that we needed to support the troops. We established a retail fuel point, basically a gas station. However, instead of Fords and Chevy's, we fill up tanks and Humvees. We established a water point, and began producing water. We basically have what would equate to a giant Brita, which turns dirty water clean. That way the water that gets used is fit for American soldiers. We set up a warehouse which is like the Army's Wal-Mart. Units order parts, and they are all received in my warehouse. My soldiers then inventory them, sort them and issue them to the units. I also have about 100 mechanics in my company and they began fixing anything they could get their hands on. We can fix just about anything in the Army inventory, ranging from an M16 to a tank.

Convoy operations are the most dangerous, according to Polosky. Here, a company of soldiers in an open vehicle prepares to hit the streets where they must be prepared to respond if the convoy is fired upon. The convoys are like "mini-Nascar races," Polosky said.

All of my soldiers have a second mission, which is convoy operations. We go out everyday in search of supplies that will help us better support the soldiers with whom we are stationed. Convoy operations are without a doubt the most dangerous thing we do, and we take it very seriously. Driving in Iraq is crazy. Unlike the highways, the roads in the towns have no lines. Vehicles make their own way with little to no concern for those around them. Our convoys end up turning into mini-Nascar races, but the professionalism of our soldiers ensures that the highest safety standards are always maintained.

My soldiers' lives in Baghdad are definitely different than what they left in the States. They work hard, most of them pulling 16- to 18-hour days. There is a constant fear of attack, but at the same time a calming knowledge that we are prepared.

The conditions in our camp are great. My soldiers have a gym, a great chow hall and access to internet and phones. The lines are sometimes long, but most soldiers are able to contact home a couple times a week. We live in barracks that have power and running water, and most soldiers are able to watch DVDs in their room in their limited off time. The happiest time around here is mail call. We get mail about four times a week and receiving mail is without a doubt the event that lifts my soldiers spirits the most.

Whether it's a care package or just a card, mail has a tremendous effect on my soldiers. So if you are asking yourself what can you do to show your support, sending some mail is the best way. If you would like to write to my soldiers, you can send letters or packages to:

Any Soldier,
A Company, 515th FSB
Camp Huggins
APO AE, 09310

Finally I just want to thank the American people for their support. No matter what your personal opinions are on the war, remember that we have soldiers over here everyday fighting for your freedom. These soldiers are making great sacrifices for their country everyday, so please keep them in your thoughts and prayers. And like the Toby Keith song says, "sleep in peace tonight," knowing that my soldiers are over here, and will never quit until our mission is complete.

Captain Kevin M. Polosky, Baghdad

HALL OF FAME HONOR FOR SWENSON, DUNN

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FOR 17 years, a group of Monterey Peninsula volunteers has quietly bettered the lives of 1,200 men and women living at the California Veterans Home in Yountville. In gratitude, the California Department of Veterans Affairs honored the group last month and inducted its founder and board chairman, Ritchie Dunn, and its secretary, Carol Anne Swenson, into the home's Hall of Fame.

With the financial support of hundreds of Peninsula residents and four local foundations, the Friends of the Veterans Home of California has managed to help in a wide array of ways, from providing support groups for sufferers of various illnesses to giving them shadow boxes to display their medals.

They've taken them to restaurants and to see the Blue Angels fly, donated furniture and clothing, installed fish tanks, framed artwork for their rooms and given books to the 45,000-volume library. The friends bring a Dixieland band in to play a few times a year — "the music of their day," Dunn said — and ensure every vet receives a birthday card each year.

"We've even had slipper programs," he added. "There isn't a veteran in the home there who wants a pair of slippers and doesn't have them."

A veteran himself, Dunn started the small nonprofit, which is entirely volunteer run. Its board includes John Beesley, Stan Smith, Dr. Sigurd Liseth, Perry Miller, Craig Hamilton and the Rev. Jerome Politzer.

Fundraising is a lot of work for the volunteers, but the generosity never ceases to amaze them.

"I've been here 40-some-odd years, so I know a lot of people, and people are very generous," he said.

Contributions often come from those who served in the military or who have lost family members who served.

The state-run Veterans Home in Yountville is the largest in the nation. Founded in 1884 following the Civil War, it offers five levels of care, from independent living to thorough medical care in its 400-bed hospital. The campus includes a 1,200-seat theater, nine-hole golf course, library, creative arts center, swimming pool and fitness center, resident-operated television station, baseball stadium, RV park, bowling lanes, auto hobby shop and a base exchange store.

"We get people tremendously interested in what they do, but we don't step on the toes of the hospital up there," he said. "We stick to getting funds from individuals here on the Peninsula.

"Our main thing is really the people," Dunn continued. "I love to support what we do, and we do that in a very good fashion, so they know we're on the up and up and never let them down."

Anyone who wants to help the group with its mission can contact the Friends of the Veterans Home of California at P.O. Box 789, Pacific Grove, CA 93950.

Carmel could become a trolley stop

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE VINTAGE-STYLE high-tech trolleys unveiled this week in Monterey could end up cruising Carmel as well. Representatives from city hall and the Carmel Chamber of Commerce examined the new Monterey-Salinas Transit rigs, which the City of Monterey will use for its free WAVE service ferrying tourists throughout downtown.

"We could have a route that goes from the aquarium to the wharf to the conference center to downtown Carmel, and back," city administrator Rich Guillen said.

CCC Executive Director Monta Potter suggested the loop include the Crossroads and the Barnyard for maximum shopping opportunities.

In addition to wooing more visitors, Potter said, "the intent of it is to improve people's ability to get here and solve some of the parking problems."

They praised the new trolleys' design and amenities. While modeled after the streetcars of yesteryear, the $337,890, 27-seat trolleys are enclosed, wheelchair accessible and have an audio system that can announce stops and share interesting facts along the route.

"They're gorgeous," Potter said of the six trolleys, four of which were purchased jointly by MST and the City of Monterey and will serve the Waterfront Area Visitors Express.

The idea of bringing trolley riders to Carmel is in its infancy and has only been raised at one brief meeting with the bus company, but Guillen and Potter said MST seemed receptive.

While the particulars of the route and schedule would have to be worked out, the biggest question is money. The trolleys have toll boxes, but Potter hopes to replicate Monterey's offer of "fast, fun and free," as the WAVE trolleys boldly proclaim on their sides.

"People are more likely to step onto them if they're free," she said.

Hoping to tap into tax dollars set aside for pollution-reducing projects, Guillen said he will ask the city's grant writer to draft a proposal in the next few weeks.

Failing that, the city and the chamber could share the costs, "but both of us don't have a lot of money," Potter pointed out. "That's the thing: We just have to figure out what we want and how we can pay for it."

The Fine Art of Selling an Empty House

It happens sometimes. You've bought a new home, the deal has closed, it's time to move out, and your existing home hasn't sold yet. If you're thinking your home will look better empty to prospective buyers, think again. Every room looks smaller and less inviting if the house is empty. That's why home builders pay experts to create furnished models of the homes they are building, rather than just sending buyers out to look at empty, incomplete homes.

You will increase the salability of your existing home, therefore, if you can leave some furniture behind until it sells. Indeed, you have a chance to create your own "model home," furnished lightly but in a welcoming way, with bright lights and open windows, with house plants and pleasant art, and with no piles of "stuff" clogging the closets and garage and hobby room.

If you can't leave furniture behind, the least you can do is to leave a few decorative paintings and photographs on the walls along with houseplants. You might also leave photographs of each room when furnished, and even frame a brief essay on how each room was used and enjoyed, and how it might be used and enjoyed in the future.

There are few times when it is more important, both for your peace of mind and your pocketbook, to have a real estate advisor whom you trust, whom you can communicate with openly, whose efforts on your behalf you are truly confident will continue, resulting in as profitable and rapid a sale as possible. And maybe the most important factor of all: Make sure you have priced your home realistically and with great care. Now is not the time to price above the market, hoping to squeeze extra dollars from the sale. Studies show that the opposite will result, and that realistic pricing will bring in the highest offer. CARMEL ART FESTIVAL 2004

11th ANNUAL Carmel ART FESTIVAL MAY 2004

11th annual Carmel Art Festival takes over the town

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

PERHAPS YOU'VE observed them already: the 82 juried plein air artists who've set up their easels as part of the 11th annual Carmel Art Festival.

Two paintings per artist will be displayed at the Carmel Art Association, where judges will select winners on Saturday, May 15 for $20,000 in total prize money. Winning paintings will be auctioned off on Sunday to benefit local youth art programs, and all other art will be open for bidding during a CAA silent auction.

A "gallery without walls" has been set up on the lawn of Devendorf Park and a festival tent will be staffed by volunteers.

At commercial galleries, look for free demonstrations and lectures by their premier artists during village walk-about between galleries. "Passports," available free at the festival tent, will be stamped for possible prizes.

A youth art show took place Thursday at the Carmel Youth Center, open to first to 12th graders. Some 120 entrants won prizes and cash awards donated by local businesses.

Closed to traffic

Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues will be closed to traffic from 2 to 8 p.m. on Saturday, May 15. The musical ensemble "Heartstrings Monterey" will perform from 2:30 to 5 p.m.; judges will announce winning artists at an awards ceremony to follow.

The same day there will be a free "Make Art" event for all youngsters facilitated by professional artists at the Carmel Youth Center, Fourth between Junipero and Torres.

Paul Klingman (rear) of New Masters Gallery watches as workmen install one of the gallery's pieces, Harvest Joy, by Gary Price, in Devendorf Park Thursday. The park has been transformed into an outdoor exhibit hall as part of this week's Carmel Art Festival.

For the second year, at 10 a.m. Sunday May 16, Devendorf Park will be the scene of a "Quickdraw" event at which winners of this year's plein air competition — 22 paintings in all — will have their work auctioned off at noon. This is one of the main events of the festival, with art collectors vying for their favorite pieces with live bidding.

Live music is planned for Devendorf Park Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Oscar

Reynolds from San Francisco will perform on South American guitar, Andean flutes and percussion instruments all day May 14; Nick Williams will play May 15 from 10 a.m. to noon; Con Corizon Latin band will continue music in the park from noon to 2 p.m.; and Abdoulaya and Friends will perform on African drums from 2 to 5 p.m. Williams will appear again from 10 a.m. to noon on Sunday, May 16.

Evident in storefronts about the village, the "companion piece" sculptured dog exhibit features cast resin Jack Russell replicas painted by artists in styles varying from psychedelic to the representational. These may be bid on through silent auctions. A drawing is slated for artist Gerrica Connolly's work — she sculpted the prototype dog and created the contest. Connolly's dog will be awarded at a drawing from passports stamped by at least 20 galleries visited during the festival.

Another highlight of the festival will be a free live painting performance by San Francisco artist Clive McCarthy and several others to live music by New Century Saxophone Quartet playing works by Johann Sebastian Bach and other composers. A digital image of Carmel Beach will be projected onto a huge canvas and the artists will take it from there. This one-of-a-kind event will take place at 8:40 p.m. on Saturday, May 15 at the foot of Ocean Avenue above Carmel Beach in the volley ball court area.

Complimentary brunch

A free brunch will be served to art lovers from 10 a.m. to noon at the Carmel Art Association on Sunday, May 16.

The CAA is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth avenues, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

For additional information, call Marie Wainscoat, festival coordinator, at 883-1236.

Please visit Gallery North on May 15 and learn about Animal Friends Rescue Project. All proceeds from the highest bid for the above piece and 10% from all other sales that day go to Animal Friends Rescue. Reception 2-5 pm, Saturday, May 15th Clerk Bob Cothran (left) and Surf 'n Sand store owner Fermin Sanchez (right) flank Juan Gutierrez, who purchased a Super Lotto ticket last week and won almost $35,000.

Construction worker wins $35K with Lotto ticket from Bruno's

By MARY BROWNFIELD

HE COULD buy 1,020 bottles of Chalone Pinot Noir from Surf 'n Sand, or 5,780 sandwiches from Bruno's, or even 34,680 Super Lotto tickets, which would increase his odds of winning the Jackpot from one to 34,680 in 41,416,353. But Juan Gutierrez, a 32-year-old construction worker from Orangevale, already knows how he will use the money he won last week with the Super Lotto ticket he bought at Surf 'n Sand.

After he gives the feds their share in taxes, he will make the down payment on a house in the town northeast of Sacramento where he lives with his wife, Gracia, and 2-year-old son, Sebastian.

Heeding a reminder from his wife, Gutierrez stopped by the Junipero Street store last week to purchase his Lotto ticket while working on a job in town. He said he plays the lottery about twice a month and has done so for the past decade.

"He purchased the ticket here last Wednesday, and then came in to have it checked out on Thursday and found out he won $34,680," said Surf 'n Sand owner Fermin Sanchez. "I don't think he even knew he won. The clerk came over to me and said, 'This guy just won $35,000.'"

Store clerk Bob Cothran had the pleasure of scanning the ticket and discovering it was a winner.

"It shocked me," he said.

"We've never had a Lotto winner of this size," Sanchez said.

And, despite the immutable laws of probability, he thinks an even bigger winner is on the way. "This store is going to hit the big one — we're due," Sanchez said.

Gutierrez, who plays his family's birthdays every time, hopes to cash in on the jackpot someday. He's already soundly beaten the odds. With his successful pick of the five winning numbers between 1 and 47, his was the one success predicted for every 1,592,937 attempts.

"The week before, I won $20," he said, grinning.

Although a store that sells a winning ticket gets some Lotto dollars as a result, Sanchez said the payoff is minimal: one half of 1 percent. In Gutierrez's case, the store's share is just $173.40.

"But had he won the big one, we would have been right there," he said. One half of 1 percent of the current $18 million Super Lotto Jackpot which would be $90,000.

Gutierrez will visit the Lotto office in Sacramento in person Friday or Monday to pick up his winnings. "I could mail it in," he said with a slight shake of the head, leaving his doubts about the U.S. Postal Service unspoken but evident.

And he will keep trying his seemingly good luck with the Lotto. As much as he might enjoy working in construction — usually on mechanical installations at military bases, though he's been in town with a crew working on his boss' house — Gutierrez wouldn't mind retiring at 32.

HAZ-MAT

of these smaller jurisdictions, that could be devastating," Wombacher said.

365-day-a-year protection

Many focus on homeland security and terrorist threats, but the fire chiefs and the OACC wanted to address the county's overall haz-mat disaster potential created by its major freeways, widespread pesticide use, sizable industrial sector and other high-risk businesses, according to Wombacher. Besides deciding to share costs, they developed a plan for unifying the services provided by Seaside and Salinas.

The Monterey Operational Area Hazardous Materials Response Team was formed, with Seaside representing the Coastal Division and Salinas serving as the Inland Division. Both follow the guidelines established by the county office of emergency services.

"We have a playbook to go by, so Salinas isn't going to do it one way while we do it a different way," Wombacher said. The teams communicate regularly and train together, and their vehicles are similarly equipped. "We can ensure that no matter where in the county or who responds, an incident will be handled in a similar manner."

Beginning next month, the haz-mat response team members will be able to request reimbursement for certain costs from the new trust fund. Federal tax money will continue to cover some equipment and training, according to Reade.

"The grant from the Office of Homeland Security will fund capabilities for CBRNE: chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear and explosive, which includes bomb and fire," she said. "Those are the new buzzwords our citizens should know about."

market, we have to sell a lot of groceries."

Hoping to cut his PG&E bills, Sutton installed a $125,000 gas turbine to generate the market's electricity. He has a five-year loan on the generator with payments of $2,500 a month, but the turbine would save money after the loan was paid off, he reasoned. The turbine provides almost 80 percent of the electricity the market needs to operate and runs all the time, making Nielsen's immune to blackouts.

But soon after his generator went online, "the price of gas went up 40 percent," he said. Natural gas is typically less expensive in the winter than in the summer, but rates hit $1.01 a therm this winter and just recently dropped back to 67 cents, according to Sutton. He suspects the rates will rise again. Not including the debt for the turbine, he's spending just as much on power now as he was before: less on electricity, more on gas.

"To save on the surcharges and outrageous electricity bill, it was going to be worth it, but when gas went up, it took away all our pizzazz," he said.

He has yet to see a refund or the electricity rates drop — both required of PG&E in its bankruptcy settlement. The utility promised to reduce electricity rates by $799 million, including $100 million in one-time refunds to cover the rate decrease that took effect March 1 but was retroactive to Jan. 1. PG&E's new rates — reduced by 9 percent to 15 percent for businesses — should begin appearing on May bills, according to the company.

Workers compensation insurance accounts for another large chunk — with the annual premium close to $50,000 for the market's 23 full-time employees.

Considering he has cut where possible, cannot negotiate many of the costs of running a small market, and has half the permanent residential customer base he once enjoyed, Sutton is hoping his already generous landlord will help further.

Sutton's 25-year lease is up in September, and he has three 10-year options to renew. His rent has not increased in the last seven years, despite the fact that his landlord has that right in the lease. Prime retail space on Ocean Avenue rents for $6-$8 per square foot; Sutton pays $3 per square foot.

"All the landlord wants is a fair return on the business," he said. "But for us, it adds up to more than we can afford."

Beyond wanting to maintain his livelihood, Sutton has long-standing, sentimental ties to the market, which was opened at Dolores and Seventh by brothers Walter and

Merv Sutton

Harold Nielsen in 1930. He began working there 44 years ago and later married Walter's daughter, Nancie. Sutton was president of the business when it moved to its current San Carlos Street location, which had been formerly occupied by Dale Leidig's Texaco station, in 1980. He and his wife work there, as well as their sons, Jeffrey and Christian.

"It would be nice to keep them employed," he said.

But he won't keep the market open if it means continuing to lose money.

"I just hope we can negotiate something so we can be in business after all these years," he said. "It's a needed business for sure. A lot of people don't drive, and we carry a lot of specialty items other people don't carry."

Considering the current trend, he added, the one-of-a-kind market could end up being replaced by what has become a ubiquitous business in Carmel.

"Whenever something leaves, a gallery goes in," he said. "And this would be a gallery with underground parking."

tured jazz-themed merchandise. The combination radio studio and retail store is "unique in the country," Wisdom said.

The station was featured in the 1971 Clint Eastwood movie, "Play Misty for Me," which was Eastwood's directorial debut. He played a KRML deejay, working out of the station's former studio at the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. He meets an ardent young fan, played by Jessica Walters, in the bar at the Sardine Factory restaurant on Cannery Row. She later turns up naked in his Carmel driveway before stalking him with a knife.

Eastwood sold the Hog's Breath in 2000, but he still owns the building, on San Carlos near Sixth, where KRML will relocate.

BUDGET

month, the council suggested selling Flanders Mansion, charging tour buses for parking, increasing permit fees, starting a branded credit card, auditing TOT collections and imposing TOT on 30-day rentals.

Each department hit

In drafting the $10,950,340 budget, which includes almost $6.4 million in salary and benefits and nearly $4.6 million in materials and services, Guillen asked his department managers to help cut $1 million in payroll, in addition to the 10 percent they already cut from materials and supplies.

"It was certainly very difficult for them to recommend employee reductions," he wrote. The cuts would be added to the $990,000 saved by early retirement and attrition.

The draft budget calls for eliminating 19 part-time positions and five full-time jobs, as well as freezing four vacancies. It also combines public works and forestry into one department, and puts the fire and police departments under a single public safety director. Clerical staff formerly assigned to each department would be pooled. A non-profit group would manage Sunset Center.

"I have met with all the employee groups and associations and have laid out the reorganization and the number of employees we're looking to eliminate," Guillen said. He also asked the managers to estimate how the cuts would impact services.

The police department's response times to non-emergency calls would increase; it would have a harder time meeting state-mandated training requirements, and parking enforcement (and revenues) would drop.

The list also calls for eliminating four part-time engineers from the fire department, but Guillen told The Pine Cone those cuts might result in more overtime pay and therefore need more scrutiny.

In planning and building, cuts would mean less code enforcement, longer processing times and less responsiveness to the public, deferring General Plan amendments until 2005/2006 and minimal staff support for the commissions, committees and boards.

Cutting janitorial services would end regular cleaning of city buildings and restrooms and bare-minimum compliance with health code sanitation requirements.

The library would lose the most employees: 11 part-timers. As a result, both branches would be open fewer hours and closed all day two or three days a week.

The public works department would lose its representation on several regional agencies, deferred street maintenance would increase, response times for street repairs and cleanup would grow, and streetsweeping would be cut. On the forestry side, projects would be limited and staff's ability to maintain the urban forest would decline. Removal of tree debris and cleanup after storms would take longer.

In administration, more calls would go to voicemail, counter service would drop, insurance claims would take longer to process, payroll and accounts payable would be processed less often and events like the kite festival and movies in the park could go.

The good news: Some programs, such as the Carmel Youth Center and home mail delivery, would be fully funded. Guillen also suggested making some long overdue capital improvements and replacing equipment that is becoming a liability.

Council members offered no immediate reaction to the draft budget. They will discuss it in detail at a special meeting May 25 at 4:30 p.m. at city hall, as well as during its June 3 meeting.

all the candidates stressed the importance of getting the management question settled and a marketing director hired to ensure the best possible use of the newly renovated center.

But mayoral candidate Dick Ely said he would terminate discussions with SCC, Inc., and start over with public hearings. He was defeated by incumbent Mayor Sue McCloud, who launched the drive to put a nonprofit in charge at the showplace theater.

"We're continuing negotiations with SCC, Inc., and those are moving well," Guillen said, adding that he has had several meetings with SCC board chairman Jim Price. "We're getting close to producing an agreement. I'm not sure how close is 'close,' though."

He characterized the meetings as "friendly and cordial," and said the discussions have contained the back and forth expected when drafting a contract both parties can live with.

When it's finally ready for review, "first the SCC board would agree this is something they can abide by, and then the council will give it a thumbs up, thumbs down or make modifications," Guillen said.

He has continued to recommend holding off on hiring a marketing director until the management question is settled. If SCC takes over, it will be responsible for recruiting and hiring the person to run the center. Guillen speculated "the new executive director hired by SCC would have a marketing background."

Meanwhile, "we are still scheduling programs and working on contracts," he said. "It's business as usual from the city's standpoint, but we are anxious to get the SCC Inc. agreement going and starting a new chapter for Sunset."

PACREP'S 'BUDDY' TO BE STAGED IN SAN FRANCISCO

PREVIEWS BEGIN June 1 for the Pacific Repertory Theatre production of its hit rock 'n' roll musical, "Buddy — The Buddy Holly Story," at San Francisco's Post Street Theatre.

This production won critical praise and broke box office records when it premiered in Carmel at PacRep's Golden Bough Playhouse in May 2003. The show later transferred to the San Jose Stage Company for three months, where it played to sold-out houses. The S.F. run will be produced in association with San Jose Stage Company.

London-based rights holder, Paul Elliot, LTD, has awarded an exclusive rights agreement to PacRep for the entire State of California, as well as the cities of Las Vegas, Denver, Phoenix and Seattle.

"This is a huge opportunity for PacRep, and we are extremely grateful that the London owners have chosen to recognize our production in this way," said Stephen Moorer, PacRep founder and the originating director of the Carmel production. Moorer has since directed an L.A.-based touring production of "Buddy."

The production's transfer to the San Francisco's Post Street Theatre is a commercial venture in partnership with MOR (Better) Entertainment and the S.F. Buddy Company, a limited partnership of investors.

"We have achieved our minimal capitalization requirements and are now soliciting remaining investors to create our production reserve. We expect to be at full capitalization considerably in advance of the May 30 cut-off date for investors," Moorer stated.

The PacRep staging will open Wednesday, June 9, at San Francisco's Post Street Theatre, 450 Post St.

"Buddy" is directed by Moorer and features Travis Poelle as Buddy and Scott Free as the Big Bopper, reprising their roles from the original Carmel production. Musical direction is by Don Dally. The set design is by Jean-Francois Revon, costumes by Tandy Messenger, lighting by Mark Gilmore and sound design by Thomas R. Craft. Executive producer is Michael O'Rand.

Tickets range in price from $25 to $63 for regular performances, and $35 for all seats for previews. For reservations, call (415) 321-2900, or visit www.poststreettheatre.com sf.com or Ticketmaster outlets.

For further information on receiving an investor packet, contact Moorer directly at the PacRep Theatre administrative office by calling 622-0700.

VETERAN JAZZ PIANISTS CLAIM CENTER STAGE THIS WEEKEND

AT THE Cafe Monterey located in the Hyatt Regency Hotel on Old Golf Course Road, jazz pianists Bob Phillips and Gennady will perform this Friday and Saturday evenings, May 14-15, respectively.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

Phillips, honored as Dixieland Monterey's musician of the year in 2002, will be accompanied this Friday by his son David on bass, daughter-in-law Nancy on vocals, plus drummer David Morwood. Phillips, an original member of Jake Stock's Abalone Stompers, has been playing on the Central Coast since the early 1970s and is at home playing almost any style of music. The Fabulous Phillips Family (as they like to call themselves) recorded a live CD at a birthday party for Nancy earlier this year and have been having fun playing upbeat jazz ever since.

Saturday evening, Russian-born pianist Gennady performs at the cafe along with Morwood. Music starts at 7:30 p.m. There is no cover charge.

Also at the Hyatt from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Sunday, May 16, the ever-popular jazz jam takes place under the steady guiding hand of local jazz crooner Lee Durley. Call 372-1234 for more information.

Also this Friday, May 14, Brazilian funk band Bat

Makumba makes its Monterey debut at Sly McFly's on Cannery Row. The group was recently nominated for a California Music Award in the Outstanding Latin Alternative Album category. Named after the '70s classic Tropicalia song by Caetano Veloso and Gilberto Gil (popularized by Os Mutantes), Bat Makumba follows in the tradition of cultural cannibalism that so well describes modern music in Brazil. Spanning from Rio-style sambas to the maracatus of the Brazilian northeast, Bat Makumba creates a fresh sound by injecting funk and rock into these traditional music forms. Bat Makumba's performances are as close to a night out in Rio as one can get without a 16-hour plane ride. Call 649-8050 for details. Music starts at 9 p.m.

Returning to the Jazz and Blues Company next Saturday, May 22, young pianist Taylor Eigsti began playing the piano at the age of 4 and made his professional debut at 8 when he was invited to be the opening act for jazz legend David Benoit. A little more than a decade later, Taylor has released four CDs and has performed with Dave Brubeck, James Moody, Bobby Hutcherson and many others.

He was signed last year to Bop City Records, which re-released his trio's latest CD, "Resonance." A Presidential Scholar at the University of Southern California, Eigsti has served on the faculty of the Stanford Jazz Workshop since 1999. His trio, which includes drummer Jason Lewis and bassist John Shifflet, can be expected to play straight-ahead jazz. Music starts at 7:30 p.m. Call 624-6432.

The 45th Castroville Artichoke Festival is slated for this weekend (May 15-16) and features a wide variety of food, fun and live entertainment. Performing at this year's event is a mix of music including Bay Area blues bands the Delta Wires and Shane Dwight, plus modern country band 8 Second Ride and Caribbean music makers Broken English on Saturday. Sunday's lineup has a definite Latino edge and features headliners Dr. Loco and his Rockin' Jalapeños plus Latin Lingo and Eduardo Trujillo. For more information, check out the festival website at www.artichoke-festival.org.

Comedy at Carmel High

ONE-ACT comedies are in the offing this weekend, courtesy of the Carmel High School drama department.

"The Real Inspector Hound" by Tom Stoppard is a lampoon of murder mysteries in which theater critics are given a taste of their own medicine when they attend a mystery play and find themselves becoming part of the story. Michael Jacobs directs.

"What Love Life?" is an original work from the mind of Savva Vassiliev, "Carmel High's version of Steve Martin."

The one-acts begin at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, May 14-15, and 6 p.m. Sunday, May 16. Setting is the little theater on campus.

Tickets are $5 for students and seniors, $7 for adults. To learn more, call 624-1821, ext. 301.

The Schwarzenegger Uncertainty Principle

THE GREAT German physicist Werner Heisenberg changed one of mankind's rock-solid beliefs in 1927 when he demonstrated that a sub-atomic particle's position and speed could not be accurately measured at the same time. As soon as a scientist tried to analyze the behavior of, say, an electron, Heisenberg showed, the scientist invariably altered what he meant to observe.

This was not just an obtuse statement interesting only to pinheaded Ph.D.'s. The Heisenberg Uncertainty Principle, in fact, had profound philosophical implications because it meant that the future — not only of electrons, but of everything made of them — could never be predicted with any certainty.

Just five months into office, Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger has had a similar effect on California politics, where the old rules have been blown to bits. Thanks to his enormous popular appeal, when the energetic governor gets involved in an issue, nobody can predict what will happen.

For example, during the recall campaign one of the complaints from Gray Davis's supporters was that California law made it too easy to force a recall election. They laughed at the Schwarzenegger candidacy and promised that, if he won, they'd immediately circulate tit-for-tat recall petitions against him. But no such recall petition has been drafted, much less passed around.

At the state capitol, where the Democratic party was 100 percent in charge just a few months ago, party leaders are hesitant to disagree publicly with Schwarzenegger's ideas and protest they are being left out of his strategizing. Even the once invincible John Burton, an ultra-liberal from San Francisco whose power derived from his seniority in the State Senate, has been marginalized by the former actor's juggernaut. Other arrogant Sacramento politicians — the ones, for example, who pushed through a bill granting drivers licenses to illegal aliens knowing full well the public would never support such a law — have also been effectively cowed.

But despite his success and his enormous power, Schwarzenegger has not been doctrinaire in his public statements or his legislative initiatives. Instead, he has taken moderate positions on social issues (against a Constitutional amendment to ban gay marriage, for example) and has used his influence to get groups usually at odds — such as insurance companies and unions — to compromise for the good of the state. Last week, on a trip that was full of surprises even for the governor's own staff, he even dared to tackle the seemingly intractable situation in the Middle East, urging all sides to "reject intolerance and prejudice."

Earlier this month, the New York Times opined that the governor's 64 percent approval rating would probably "evaporate in time." But it could just as easily go up. With Schwarzenegger, nobody can predict.

Sell Sunset, not Flanders

Dear Editor,

Carmel is a beautiful place. Flanders Mansion is a beautiful old, historic, and unique building. It is an ideal setting with views overlooking the Carmel Mission and Point Lobos. Art is inspired and created in this wonderful area; artists, art collectors, and aficionados live here. The double-walled mansion is a great location for a Carmel Art and History Museum. The mansion has perfect temperature and humidity for art display and storage. It has double walls and no cracks, even after the multitudes of earthquakes it has experienced in its 70+ years. The City of Carmel has accepted, rejected, and stored numerous works of art; let us empty the basements and display these lost works of art at Flanders!

I served the city some time ago on a long investigation of conditions and uses for Flanders. Then, as sadly now, City Hall is looking for $$$ for that eternally hungry Sunset Theater. Don't sell city property because you didn't "do the math" right on Sunset. If you must sell something, sell Sunset Theater!

'Much better way to spend tax monies'

Dear Editor,

I can't believe voters in the Regional Park district would consider being taxed again for parkland that has and will be removed from property and sales tax rolls, therefore putting a greater tax burden on everyone. The Palo Corona, for example, was purchased with public funding by the Big Sur Land Trust and Nature Conservancy with the intent of reselling it to the State Parks Dept., without a management plan in place.

The Conservancy has been selling parcels of conserved land to its contributors, such as Harrison Ford and others, on the correct something that you're not really on the path to," she said.

Even after getting through boot camp, she still had to complete a variety of tasks just to get into the Navy diving school in Maryland. And once there, she learned there was a rigorous physical test to pass.

Immediately, she began training — and when the day finally came, Kurth found herself testing with five men whose goal was to get on the SEAL team.

"Only two of us passed," she said. "I'm 5'2" and the other guy who passed it was 6'1" or something. I remember he was the one I tried to pace myself to during the swim and I almost killed myself."

It actually wasn't until she arrived at the diving school and saw no other women in sight that she realized she was entering a very male-dominated field.

There are just over 1,000 EOD technicians in the country, she said. Fewer than 10 are women.

But instead of making an issue of it, or complaining about unfair treatment — which was often obvious, she said — Kurth simply focused on training and didn't make gender an issue.

"I think that's the way I've treated everything. If I knew somebody had a hard time with me, without coming out and saying, 'Well, you have to accept me,' I'd let my work speak for itself," she explained. "I wasn't there to prove that a woman could do something; I was there to do my best and reach my goals."

"I've actually seen that, with women who had the whole, 'I'm woman, we can do it' mindset, it hurt them because they weren't thinking about the job and focusing on that," she continued. "I just kept doing my training and every time I caught any flak or realized there were some people who thought I really shouldn't be there, I just kind of phased them out and ignored them."

Finally, after finishing years of EOD training, Kurth was certified and spent the next several years stationed in Key West and Washington state. Two years ago, Kurth arrived in Monterey with her husband, Philip, to study Arabic at the Defense Language Institute, from which she will graduate next month.

Kurth, Philip and their 1-year-old son, Marcus, will then head to Florida, where she will train her younger counterparts — who will be deployed to places such as Iraq and Afghanistan — how to identify, disable and dispose of ordnance. She has only four years left until retirement and, for now, plans on "just being a mom" after she gets out.

But those who know Kurth doubt full-time homemaking will do. "All of my friends tell me that might last for all of a week before I find something to get into," she laughed.

"If I knew somebody had a hard time with me, without coming out and saying, 'Well, you have to accept me,' I'd let my work speak for itself."

basis that private ownership is the best mode of ecological stewardship. It is irresponsible to purchase land for public use without a sound scientific and economic plan in place. Perhaps the MPRPD should sell portions off à la San Carlos Ranch and use those resources to cover underestimated management costs, and also curtail their aggressive land acquisition policy.

I believe our children would rather hike on the path of higher education, our sick rather see a horizon of well being, and our poor envision the flowers of opportunity. There are much better ways to spend our precious few tax monies.

Firefighters' help

Dear Editor,

I recently updated my CPR certification as part of the current C.E.R.T. training being conducted by members of the local fire departments and emergency medical services.

I would like to thank the instructors, August Beacham, Dennis Hartshorn, and Darren Lovechio, for doing a commendable job of providing serious, pertinent, hands-on training, all the while maintaining a relaxed and very helpful environment.

Upon leaving the training, my friend and I were embarrassed to realize that, in our effort to park out of the way of traffic and others, our wheels were suspended over a trough and we were unable to move forward or backward. Although we interrupted Dennis Hartshorn's lunch with our plight, he kindly assessed the situation and immediately enlisted the help of several other firefighters. Together they gamely had the car back onto solid ground in no time. They were simply amazing, and good-natured to boot. Angels all! I am reminded of yet another reason I am blessed to have moved to this beautiful area.

TEACHERS

than ignoring the problem posed by teachers not qualified in their subject areas, more attention should be focused on getting them fully qualified.

Local school districts have tapped an unlikely resource to solve the current teacher shortage: the Far East, according to Bill Barr, superintendent of the Monterey County Office of Education

He said 154 fully trained teachers were recently recruited from the Philippines specifically to teach math, science and special education in various schools across the county. Five were hired by the Monterey County Office of Education and others were hired by the Monterey Unified School District.

"We recruited them because the Philippines had an abundance of math, science and special ed teachers," said Sam Bozzo, assistant superintendent for personnel.

Retiring en masse?

Although the teaching population in Monterey County is aging, administrators don't yet have a handle on how many of the county's 3,000 teachers will be retiring soon. Nancy Kotowski, associate superintendent of the Educational Services Division of the Monterey County Office of Education, said getting those numbers is critical.

"We're going to start tracking the numbers to analyze trends as to how many teachers are leaving and for what reason," she said. "We'll be using the data we collect to refocus our work on the core issues that affect the quality of our teaching workforce."

Congratulations, Ritchie & Carol!

At the Veterans Home at Yountville in early April, an audience of over 200 Department of Veteran Affairs officials, hospital staff, and other state & local dignitaries met to honor the "Friends of the Veterans Home of California," a Monterey Peninsula based charitable organization.

The ceremony recognized the 17 years of outstanding volunteer work performed by the "Friends" on behalf of the 1,200 resident vets at Yountville.

Along with this tribute, Carmel residents J. Ritchie Dunn, Board Chairman of the "Friends," and Carol Anne Swenson, secretary, were inducted into the Home's "Hall of Fame."

*Way to go, "kids"!

"Carmel Legends"

There is a lady with the improbable name of Gladys Georgiana Green who lives on Carmel Point. She's had a home here since 1937, and she very seldom leaves it. She's about 5 feet tall, has mischievous blue eyes and a voice you will never forget. When her long-time friend and director, Frank Capra, called her some months ago and asked her to be his special guest at a luncheon given in his honor, she turned him down without hesitation; not that she doesn't adore Mr. Capra, but she hates publicity. In her long career, she has played opposite Gary Cooper, Jimmy Stewart, Cary Grant, Clark Gable, the Barrymores, Alan Ladd and other headliners. You'll remember her in Shane, You Can't Take it With You, Mr. Smith Goes to Washington and dozens of other films. And you'll remember her as Peter Pan on Broadway, as a professor of drama at Vassar and North Carolina State, and as a television actress. She was born in Plattsburg, N.Y. in (the record is blurred here), started a modeling career in New York, and accepted a contract in Hollywood. Her first hit was The Saturday Night Kid with Clara Bow. Fox Films and Paramount missed her appeal, and it took MGM to make her a major star. It's a pleasure to salute JEAN ARTHUR, one of Carmel's proudest legends.

Lombardo to present Cañada development plan

By KIMBERLY WHITE

THE APPLICATION has been filed and the first public hearing will be Monday on the Lombardo Land Group's proposal to build 280 mixed-use homes on the West Course of the Rancho Cañada Golf Club, half of them reserved as "affordable, workforce housing."

Nick Lombardo, the golf club's president and a 40-year resident of Carmel Valley, will appear before the Carmel Valley Land Use Advisory Committee at 6:30 p.m. May 17 to discuss the proposed development, Rancho Cañada Village. Half of the single-family homes, town homes and condominiums would be sold at below-market prices.

Of the affordable units, 17 would be two-bed, two-bath, 1,000-square-foot units for families with "very low" incomes and will sell for $175,000; 123 others will be sold in categories of "low, moderate, and workforce housing" for up to $370,000, and the rest will be sold at market prices.

Lombardo said he hopes to make a presentation to the LUAC and answer questions about the development, prices, habitat restoration, golf course routing and public trails. After the committee's review, the application will go to the county planning commission for further perusal.

"I hope we'll have the opportunity to answer the public's questions," he said. "I'm anxious and willing to speak to whatever groups that want to come to the presentation."

The meeting will be held at the Sanctuary Bible Church, 8340 Carmel Valley Road.

CORRECTION

DUE TO an editing error, one of the charts printed last week with Paul and Nellie Brocchini's real estate column was wrong. They reported that condo sales in the Monterey Peninsula boomed during the First Quarter of 2004, with prices and the number of sales at record or near-record levels. FRIDAY, MAY 7

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Guests at the inn at San Antonio and 13th reported an unknown subject was trying to break into a room. Contacted a female who had misplaced her room key and was locked out. After looking further, she found the key in her vehicle. No problems were noted.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person became concerned when a subject entered a jewelry store at Dolores and Ocean to inquire about engagement rings. The person said the subject's physical description and appearance closely resembled the composite drawing of the armed robbery suspect who robbed a Crossroads jewelry store on 04-24 and committed another robbery 04-28 at a jewelry store in Saratoga. Responded and contacted the subject, who identified himself with his California driver license. He did resemble the composite drawing but after questioning it was determined he was not the suspect. He was released and returned to the store to look at the rings.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Resident observed a large moving van hit a large branch on Torres between Ninth and 11th, causing it to fall to the ground and block the roadway. He became concerned when the truck continued down the narrow street without stopping. Upon arrival, nearby construction workers offered to cut up and dispose of the branch. Continued down Torres and located the moving van and its driver next to a downed cable line. He stated he was lost and showed a county address on the opposite side of Torres. Informed him of the designated truck route and stopping at the scene of an accident. He stated he knew about the branch but couldn't stop right away due to the traffic behind him. When he did pull over, he knocked down the cable wire. He said he canceled his delivery to that address and would be leaving the city via the truck route. Followed the truck to Highway 1 to make sure all were able to get through OK.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject called CPD to report finding a key and a time clock apparently left behind at the Guadalupe Street residence by unknown employees of the representatives of the property. Key slid into front door lock with ease, so she asked for the locks to be changed. Due to a communication breakdown,
