KRML gets new owner and downtown studio

By PAUL MILLER

JAZZ RADIO is coming to a new studio overlooking the Hog's Breath Inn, along with an ambitious new program schedule, a retail store featuring jazz-themed merchandise, plans for a remote broadcasts from major events on the Monterey Peninsula and an extensive series of live performances at Sunset Center and other venues, according to David Kimball, president and CEO of the company that bought the station from

BUDGET PAIN WILL HIT JULY 1

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH THE Carmel City Council's unanimous adoption of next year's $10,950,340 budget, city officials are trying to determine how to implement it as gently as possible, considering 24 employees must now be fired.

"July 1 is the date when everything will change," said city administrator Rich Guillen, who is meeting with his department managers to figure out what the impacts will be and how best to handle them.

Many of the service changes will occur before most of the 24 workers being laid off arrive for their last day of work July 6.

"Every reduction we talked about, such as shortening the library hours, will go into place on July 1," Guillen said. The public restrooms at city hall, the library and the public works building will be locked, leaving the only open public restrooms at First Murphy Park, Carmel Beach, Devendorf Park and, during certain hours, inside Lucy's restaurant adjacent to Piccadilly Park.

By July 7, the financial specialist and the administrative coordinator in city hall, the custodian, the building department's administrative coordinator and the vehicle maintenance supervisor in public works, all full-time workers, will be gone.

Part-time workers who will lose their jobs are the maintenance worker and office assistant in public works, the office assistant in community activities and recreation, and nine assistants and two librarians at Harrison Memorial Library and the Park Branch.

Council signs with Sunset Cultural Center, Inc.

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL City Council voted unanimously Tuesday to sign an agreement with the private nonprofit Sunset Cultural Center, Inc., for management of the newly renovated theater for the next three years.

According to the contract reviewed last Tuesday and finalized June 8, SCC will oversee every aspect of running Sunset, including deciding which users may use it when and how much they should pay, marketing the center, managing the groups that rent office space or hold meetings in the city-owned building, and taking responsibility for much of its care and maintenance. It will also run the city's Performance Carmel series.

In turn, the city will be responsible for the building's structural integrity, seismic safety and tree trimming.

Tax money will help cover Sunset's operating costs with an initial $225,000 next week; additional annual "enabling grants" of unspecified amounts will cover the gap between revenues and expenses, and emergency "shortfall grants" of no more than $50,000 per year will cover unforeseen costs upon request from SCC.

Historic user groups — such as the Carmel Bach Festival and the Monterey Symphony — will be given preference in scheduling, though it will not be specifically tied to prior use or dates. SCC will set the rates.

CARRERAS' HOMECOMING BENEFITS YOUNG ARTISTS

By PAUL MILLER

THEY'RE STILL totaling up the receipts, but starry-eyed officials with Colleagues of the Arts said Sunday's sold-out performance by tenor José Carreras at Sunset Center was a smashing success, not only because of the quality of his singing, but because of his support for the group's efforts to raise money for local students of the arts.

"I was backstage during the concert, so I could see right into the faces of the people in the audience, and they were absolutely mesmerized," said Flo Snyder, chair of the event.

"It was especially thrilling for me, because I was in the audience for his first recital at Sunset back in 1975," said Norma Jean Hodges-Keyston, president of

New commissioners seated as coastal boss begins treatment for cancer

By PAUL MILLER

SAN PEDRO — THE EXECUTIVE director of the California Coastal Commission, Peter Douglas, told the commission Wednesday that he expects a "full recovery" from tongue and neck cancer and plans to be back on the job full time sometime in August. A scan completed June 3 showed no other tumors in his body, "which came as great news," Douglas said in a memo delivered to commissioners at the beginning of their meeting here this week. Treatment will begin June 17 and continue for about six weeks, he added. Other senior staff, including Chuck Damm and Charles Lester, will cover for him while he is undergoing radiation and chemotherapy, the commission learned.

The news of Douglas' extended absence, after almost 20 years at the helm of the state's most powerful planning agency, came as three new commissioners appointed by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger took on their duties.

One of them, Hollywood talent agent Steven Kram, was a complete unknown on coastal issues before this week's meeting. He moved quickly to assuage any concerns that his appointment might be part of Schwarzenegger's pro-business agenda.

"I'm an environmentalist," Kram told The Pine Cone. "Of course, there has to be some balance on the commission. But I love the coast and I am here to help protect it."

Kram is chief operating officer of the

TOUGH TEST AHEAD FOR BILL TO KILL WATER DISTRICT

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE SENATE Bill that would dissolve the Monterey Peninsula Water Management

District will face what its author calls its toughest hurdle Wednesday, when the legislation is considered by the Assembly Local Government Committee.

"If it gets to the Assembly floor, it will pass," Senator Bruce McPherson predicted.

The bill, revised to eliminate the district rather than just replace its board, now reflects the will of the 66 percent of voters who decided the MPWMD should be flushed, according to McPherson.

"It's really to get as close as I can to doing what the people of the district want me to do," he said.

A replacement for the MPWMD — possibly a joint powers authority representing the six district cities and the county, the Monterey County Water Resources Agency or some other entity — would be decided locally.

"I just want to give them the opportunity, presumably after the district is dissolved, to set up a water agency to oversee water needs to the general public's desire," McPherson said.

Wide-ranging support

SB 1529 has the support of the mayors of all six cities and four of the five Monterey County supervisors, as well as affordable housing advocates, members of the building trade and business owners, according to McPherson.

The Carmel City Council discussed SB 1529 June 3 before directing Mayor Sue McCloud to sign a letter supporting the dissolution.

"The refusal by local public entities to implement the desire stated by voters was arrogant, undemocratic and wrong," councilman Gerard Rose said. "I urge this council to take action."

But some members of the public urged the mayor not to sign.

Calling the possible effects "disastrous," former city councilwoman Barbara Livingston said the current water board members are working well together and should be allowed to continue developing a decades-overdue water supply. Although the board voted earlier this year to shelve plans for a small desalination plant in Sand City after spending more than $1.5 million on its environmental review, it did express interest in Cal-Am's proposed Moss Landing desal plant, which would at least make up for the overpumping of Carmel River and could provide water to many more areas of the county.

"Let the district continue," Livingston said. "Let it be managed by the directors and not the mayors or some nebulous organization."

Resident Carolyn Hardy said SB 1529 would bring progress to a halt.

"At least the wheels are turning, and they are working to get something accomplished where other water boards have failed," she said. "The advisory vote is old news, especially since we voted in a new water board."

But the 27 years and $60 million the district has spent without developing a new supply suggest the failure goes beyond any single board, according to a speaker who urged the mayor to sign the letter.

"This community is screaming for some type of solution to the end of the circle that we keep going in with this district," Virginia Lee said.

McCloud's signature joined those of Monterey Mayor Dan Albert, Pacific Grove Mayor Morris Fisher, Del Rey Oaks Mayor Jack Barlich, Seaside Mayor Jerry Smith and Sand City Mayor David Pendergrass on the June 8 letter to McPherson.

"We are in strong agreement with the voters that the MPWMD is not functioning in a way that meets the needs of the community," the letter reads. "A new governance system must be formed that is supportive of the community needs for a long-term, reliable source of water. This is a decision that ought

Estimated water needs to be based on general plan build-out

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL City Council decided this week that if a new desal plant for the Monterey Peninsula is to provide water for future development, it should be big enough to supply all growth anticipated by the city's general plan for the next 20 years. That stand follows the lead of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's technical and policy advisory committees.

'I caution against being greedy. That's what killed projects in the past.'

— Dave Potter

Hazdovac, who represents Carmel on the water board's policy advisory committee.

Committee meeting set stage

The PAC agreed with the TAC on using the build-out method for calculating water needs during a joint meeting June 1. Those figures are expected in July.

"There's a one-time opportunity to build a pipeline," water board director Larry Foy said at that meeting. "We know Cal-Am has to retire the deficit [of 10,730 acre-feet, which the state ruled Cal-Am is illegally pumping from the Carmel River]. Where do we go beyond that?"

Planners and elected officials from each jurisdiction in the district were warned that inflated estimates could complicate the review process, stall the project and drive up construction costs.

"We've been water poor for years," said county supervisor and water board director Dave Potter, who suggested breaking the anticipated needs into periods of two or three years. "I caution against being greedy. That's what killed projects in the past."

Monterey Mayor Dan Albert said his council favored using the general plan coupled with analysis of past trends.

"We didn't think the general plan needs would be fulfilled in 20 years," he said. "We just didn't think we would use that much water."

But a long period when water wasn't available can hardly be used to predict water needs in the future, some committee members responded.

"We've been suffering for the last 15 years," said Seaside City Councilman Darryl Choates. "Now we're ready to start taking off."

Ultimately, the committees decided each jurisdiction should calculate future residential, commercial and municipal water needs based on general plan build-out and then break them down over several shorter periods.

At the June 8 Carmel City Council meeting, members agreed with the strategy and asked staff to gather the figures, which will be reviewed by the Carmel Planning Commission before being turned over to the water district.

City administrator Rich Guillen said he would update the figures he and principal planner Brian Roseth calculated a year ago.

With environmental consultants already hired and preparing a study of Cal-Am's desal project, which is being overseen by the California Public Utilities Commission and designed in cooperation with Monterey County, Hazdovac said the desal plant could be up and running within five years.

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

Front-seat fuel drum was car's only tank

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log compiled by Mary Brownfield.

SUNDAY, MAY 30

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Contacted two subjects at 0048 hours in a vehicle at Scenic and 11th for having sexual relations in the back seat of a parked vehicle.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Conducted a vehicle check on two subjects sleeping in their vehicle at 0533 hours at Ocean and Carpenter. Drug paraphernalia was seen in plain view. A consent search of the vehicle located a black case containing two baggies of suspected crystal meth and a glass smoking pipe. The male subject, 25, was subsequently arrested, and a search of his person located a small amount of marijuana in a cigarette case in his jacket pocket.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle found parked on Junipero Street displaying expired registration. DMV check revealed the vehicle was expired as of 11-28-03. Vehicle was towed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A vehicle was witnessed hitting a parked truck. The vehicle was towed prior to contacting the owner of the victim vehicle on Fifth Avenue. A later investigation revealed the parties knew each other and no further action was requested. The vehicle was released without charges.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Keys found on water line between 11th and 13th off of Scenic. Keys returned to owner.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Wallet found in the restrooms in Devendorf Park.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Responded to the area of Ocean and Forest on report of a loud dryer. Male resident reported this has been an ongoing problem with his neighbor, who removed the device used to muffle the dryer noise. Contacted the neighbor who stated the device had been removed because it was affecting the performance of the dryer. The noise did not appear to be excessive. Information forwarded to city building inspector.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Unknown male subject came to the station with a watch he found on Camino del Monte.

Big Sur: Lost/found/missing person on Highway 1 13 miles north of the San Luis Obispo County line.

Carmel area: At approximately 0714 hours, the sheriff's dive team, Pacific Grove Ocean Rescue, Carmel Highlands Fire Department and AMR responded to a report of an overturned kayak in the coastal waters near Otter Cove. Arriving rescue units discovered the kayaker, a 36-year-old Aurora del Mar resident, had overturned his boat while he was kayaking with a friend. The men had been unsuccessful in righting the boat. They decided to leave the kayak and the friend would return to the cove to get help. While the friend was en route, the man in the water was swept into the rocks by large surf. He was pulled from the rocks by a bystander. The kayaker suffered minor injuries.

MEMORIAL DAY

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Responded to San Carlos and Ocean on report of a 911 hang-up. Contacted a male subject who stated he accidentally called 911 while looking for a taxi. A taxi was called for the subject. No emergency was noted.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A citizen reported locating a loose dog on Carmel Beach west of Scenic and Eighth. Officer gained custody of the dog and transported it to the station. Procured owner information based upon previous loose dog reports involving the same animal. Friend arrived to take custody of the dog and paid the department kennel fee. A citation is forthcoming against the dog owner.

POLICE CHIEFS DECRY BOOSTED BOOKING FEES

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FACING A 60 percent increase in the cost of booking a suspect into Monterey County Jail, Peninsula police chiefs are looking to the state to end the system that allows counties to charge "whatever they want" for incarceration services.

'It's totally unfair and inequitable to the cities. I could lodge my prisoners at Embassy Suites for less money than at the county jail.'

"I think the whole concept of booking fees is poor public policy," said Carmel Police Chief George Rawson, a member of the Monterey County Chief Law Enforcement Officers' Association, which opposed Monterey County Sheriff Mike Kanalakis' successful bid last month to boost booking fees at the county jail from $145.69 to $233.86 per inmate. The charge is levied whenever a suspect arrested in a city without its own jail is housed at the county jail.

"Basically, you're making the residents of cities pay to book the people who are victimizing them," said Seaside Police Chief Tony Sollecito, president of the MCCLEO.

"Fundamentally, I find that to be wrong. And the citizens already paying taxes for deputy sheriffs are now paying additionally for the bookings."

The issue didn't even exist 15 years ago. Then, county sheriffs covered the costs in their budgets, since lodging criminals was a statutory requirement, according to Sollecito.

But when the state began raiding property taxes in the early 1990s, it allowed counties to generate new revenue by charging booking fees. Nine years later, the state began reimbursing the cities for their county jail bookings, but the reimbursement rate has remained the same and is threatened in budget talks every year.

"It's totally unfair and inequitable to the cities," Sollecito said. "I could lodge my prisoners at Embassy Suites for less money than at the county jail."

Board backs sheriff

On May 25, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors voted 4-1 to allow Kanalakis and his cash-strapped agency to recoup booking costs from the cities. The increase will generate an additional $1.8 million to offset the $4.24 million it costs to book prisoners, according to Kanalakis.

County administrative officer Sally Reed said her office "absolutely supports raising the fee to meet the costs of running the jail."

Fifth District Supervisor Dave Potter also supported raising the fee. "This is a cost-recovery issue," he said.

Supervisor Fernando Armenta sided with Salinas Police Chief Daniel Ortega, who warned that having to pay $1.1 million in booking fees annually would hurt efforts to curb gang violence.

"As much as I want to support the sheriff, I cannot do it in good conscience at this time," Armenta said. "If I have to decide what's more important, a facility or protection in local neighborhoods, I will support the neighborhoods."

Rates run the gamut

With the increased fee of $233 kicking in at the July 1 start of the next fiscal year, Monterey County Jail will become the second most expensive place to book prisoners in the state, behind Sonoma County, according to Sollecito. The lowest is Butte County, which charges $40.

Too Good to be True

We all get email that promises us a 3.95% mortgage rate if we submit an application for a refinancing loan through the company named in the email. But there are almost certainly several problems.

1. The loan with the incredibly low rate, if it exists at all, is usually an adjustable rate mortgage whose low "teaser" rate is paid for with immediate negative amortization. The loan balance starts growing, in other words, the moment you start making payments on it. You probably don't want that.

2. Most companies sending email advertising that promises such low rates don't make loans themselves. They are merely in the business of collecting filled-in applications, which they then sell to whatever lenders will pay them the most for them. Don't allow yourself to get mixed up in such a mess.

3. Many of the companies advertising impossibly low rates are shells whose only address is a box at MailBoxes USA. They are "phishing" for personal financial information they can use to run up credit cards, take out loans and use your financial identity in utterly unscrupulous ways.

50th birthday party planned for popular 'bathtub' Porsche

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A PLETHORA of Porsches will descend on the Monterey Peninsula June 25-27 to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the 356 Speedster — the "bathtub" Porsche that became a California favorite soon after its debut.

"A marketer suggested they needed something to compete with the British roadsters that were cheaper," explained Bruce Sweetman, who is publicizing the event conceived and organized by Pebble Beach resident Steve Heinrichs.

They were hot sellers in California due to the convertible-friendly weather.

"And they were popular for racing," he said. "Back when people would drive their cars to the track or race with only minor modifications, the Speedster was a couple hundred pounds lighter than the other convertibles or the coupe. The 356 was also the cheapest, and now they are the most coveted and most valuable."

In honor of its racing heritage, many of the Speedsters — as well as other historic and modern Porsches, since all aficionados are invited — will be driven Saturday along the Pebble Beach Road Race course of the early 1950s and at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca. They will also gather at Quail Lodge that day for a show of the cars, silent auction, dinner, awards ceremony and live entertainment.

Heinrichs, who came up with the idea a few years ago to celebrate the icon's 50th birthday, also compiled the definitive book on the model.

'This car has been in a lot of movies. It's a car people think about and my sense was, ultimately, this was really the car that made it for Porsche in the United States.'

— Steve Heinrichs

"This car has been in a lot of movies," he said. "It's a car people think about and my sense was, ultimately, this was really the car that made it for Porsche in the United States."

The fun begins on Friday at the Hyatt Regency Monterey with a "Speedster Typ 540" book presentation and signing and dinners at Pebble Beach and the Monterey Bay Aquarium. Following Saturday's day-long celebration, the event will wrap up Sunday morning with a swap meet at the Monterey Hyatt. Tickets run $245 for registrants and $190 for their guests, and Saturday-only tickets are also available. Tickets must be purchased by June 15 at www.speedster50thanniversary.com and some of the proceeds will benefit the Boys and Girls Clubs of Monterey County.

Heinrichs expects 500 Porsches and 1,500 people to participate, some coming from as far as Australia and Japan.

"There are going to be some very exciting cars gathered together that have never been together before and will likely never be together again," said Heinrichs, who owns the first four Speedsters to roll out of the Porsche factory a half century ago. "We're doing our best to make this event the Porsche people and the community will be happy about."

The employees will receive severance pay based on their number of years with the city, according to Guillen.

He said he has yet to meet with the union representing the four interim fire engineers whose jobs were cut in the budget, and the contract with the part-time information services worker has already been terminated.

On Wednesday, Guillen met with managers from every city department and asked them to reflect on the quotation: "Seek not to change the world, but seek to change your mind about the world."

With that mind set, he said, they should not focus on blaming anyone for the job cuts and bare-bones budget, but instead concentrate on solutions.

"We talked about how we have to improve communication and start thinking in terms of helping each other," he said.

The meeting spawned many questions and few answers, including:

■ With two fewer clerical workers and a pool of the rest, how will work from each department be handled, and where will the clerks be?

■ How will combining the public works and the forest, parks and beach departments be implemented, and will workers be assigned tasks outside their traditional areas of expertise?

■ Without a janitor, who's going to take out the trash? "Maybe you'll see me out there vacuuming one day after work, and the next day, it will be Karen," Guillen said, referring to city clerk Karen Crouch.

■ With the termination of the city's contract with Carmel Valley Fire Protection District for the services of fire chief Sidney Reade, who will handle the fire prevention and plan check services that were also provided in that contract?

■ Can some of the city's boards, commissions and committees meet less often, to reduce the amount of time staff spends on them?

Guillen hopes next week's meeting will produce answers to many of those questions.

They also made cost-cutting and time-saving suggestions, such as reducing paper use in favor of electronic communications; swapping services with other organizations, similar to the agreement between Carmel P.D. and Pacific Grove P.D., and centralizing the phone systems so that all phone calls are picked up at city hall, "instead of having all these satellite reception areas" in city buildings throughout town.

While the reorganization of city departments and staff includes a position for a public services director who would oversee public works, forest, parks and beach, the salary was not included in the 2004/2005 budget.

Guillen said Carmel Police Chief George Rawson will likely fill the role of public safety director and receive a stipend on top of his regular salary to oversee administration of the fire department.

On the revenue side, more money is already coming in from recently increased permit fees, and paid parking in the north lot of Sunset Center should begin within the next few months after the current vendor is given notice, according to Guillen. Tour bus operators will also soon pay for parking.

But selling Flanders Mansion, which the city council supports, will take longer to accomplish. The property must first be rezoned so that it's no longer park land, even though it has already been separated from the surrounding Mission Trail Park, and the mansion must first be offered to other park districts, according to Guillen.

On Tuesday, the city council also briefly discussed possible means of offsetting the budget cuts, principally the shortened library hours. Starting next month, the main branch will be open Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m., and the Park Branch will be open Tuesday from 2 to 7 p.m., and Wednesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. In addition, cuts in staff mean the end or reduction of some library programs.

"I think a call for volunteers would get a tremendous response," councilman Gerard Rose said. "Carmelites have never been shy about coming forward when the need arises."

AFS needs host families ASAP

Does helping people develop the knowledge, skills and understanding needed to create a more just and peaceful world appeal to you? If so, hosting an American Field Service foreign student for the 2004-2005 school year may just fill the bill.

The Steinbeck Coast Area Team of AFS has sent out a call for host families. They need not include a high school student, nor even a child. The visiting students range in age from 15 to 18 years old and attend public and private high schools throughout Monterey County for a year, a semester, or the summer.

More than 10,000 students, young adults and teachers participate in AFS programs annually. It is an international, voluntary, non-governmental, non profit organization.

Wisdom Broadcasting this week.

"Carmel is unique and KRML is unique as well," Kimball said. "We're going to break new ground in the world of broadcasting."

"It's a station that belongs downtown," said Clint Eastwood, whose 1971 directorial debut, "Play Misty for Me," featured the station. The former mayor sold the Hog's Breath in 2000, but Eastwood still owns the building where KRML's new studios will be located. "I love the music they play, and it will be a fun addition to the neighborhood."

Broadcasts from the new studio will begin in early July, said Kimball, who began his "Let's Dance" Saturday afternoon show on KRML in 1991. Over the years he has increasingly been involved in station operation. But he praised previous station owner Gil Wisdom for his "foresight and creativity in combining a radio station, retail store, record label and concert series into a thriving business."

Joining Kimball in managing the station in its new location are Gary Hamada, who has extensive experience producing local concerts and will do the same for KRML, and Rhett Alan Smith, whose Pacific Grove business, "The Media Room," thrived as a concert venue in the 1990s until it was shut down by the city for lacking handicapped access.

Local businessman Don Bowen will also continue as on-air host of "Around Town," his 10 a.m. Saturday talk show on political and business events on the Monterey Peninsula.

"We're very excited about the future of Carmel's hometown radio station and the new vision we've created," Kimball said.

KRML broadcasts 24 hours a day at 1410 AM and at 92.5 FM via Comcast cable.

'I love the music they play, and it will be a fun addition to the neighborhood.'

COASTAL

William Morris Agency which, he said, "has a long history of public service," and was "making time for me to attend coastal commission meetings," which usually run three days each month and are well-known for their arduousness.

Kram said he had previously attended just one coastal commission meeting. Why, then, was he appointed to such a high-profile, and possibly controversial, job?

"I supported the governor in the recall election and I contributed to his campaign," Kram said. "When he won, I asked him if there was an opportunity to serve, and the coastal commission seemed to be a good fit with my interest in the environment."

The other two new commissioners, Meg Caldwell and Bonnie Neely, have long records on coastal issues. Neely, a Humboldt County supervisor for 16 years, previously served on the coastal commission in the 1980s. Caldwell is a lecturer at the Stanford law school where she serves as director of the school's environmental and natural resources law and policy program

Kram, Neely and Caldwell were sworn in last week in Sacramento. None made any comments from the dais after being publicly welcomed by coastal commission chair Mike Reilly.

"It's better to sit and watch for awhile, because the commission's business is complicated," said coastal commissioner and Monterey County Supervisor Dave Potter.

Moss Landing, Pebble Beach, Pacific Grove

After being reassured that noise from pile-driving at a new pier at Moss Landing wouldn't disturb sea otters and other marine mammals, commissioners unanimously OK'd a permit for the project, which would replace a pier destroyed by the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake and subsequent storms.

And, despite opposition from the League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula, the commission also approved an amended permit for Murray and Carol Smith, who want to build a new home on 17 Mile Drive in Pebble Beach. The couple's original permit, approved last year, restricted them to 14 percent lot coverage — much smaller than other houses in their neighborhood, according to attorney John Bridges. The coastal staff restricted the lot coverage on the Smiths' property to protect sensitive habitat. The new permit, which increased lot coverage to about 21 percent, came after the Smiths filed a lawsuit challenging the commission's restrictions on their building plans.

And a Pacific Grove homeowner, Ed Kwiatkowski, got final approval to replace a ramshackle 1,776-square-foot house adjacent to the Asilomar Conference Grounds with a much larger home. He must restore native habitat on all the undeveloped portions of his site. Kwiatkowski was also represented by Bridges.

"For both clients it has been a very, very long road, and they're happy to finally be at the end so they can build their homes," Bridges told The Pine Cone.

There is still no schedule for final certification of the Carmel Local Coastal Program, which will give the city the right to issue its own coastal development permits.

Neither has the state Supreme Court scheduled oral arguments in a lawsuit brought by an Orange County environmental group, Marine Forest Society, that challenged the legality of the coastal commission. An appeals court ruled in late 2002 that the commission had to be restructured because it is an executive branch agency but is controlled by the Legislature, which violates the Separation of Powers clause of the state constitution.

BACH FEST YOUTH AUDITION WINNERS ANNOUNCED

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

EIGHT YOUNG musicians from Monterey and Santa Cruz counties — including an 11-year-old pianist — were chosen from auditions May 15 to perform during this summer's Carmel Bach Festival.

More than 20 young artists applied to play or sing the music of Johann Sebastian Bach, hoping to be chosen for a family concert Aug. 7 at Sunset Theater, according to the Bach Fest's artistic director, Nana Faridany. The concert will be free to the public, and a reception with refreshments will be held afterwards for the audience to meet the artists.

The judges for the auditions, which were open to musicians up to 19 years of age, were Willem Wijnbergen, man-

The first two family concerts of this year's Carmel Bach Festival will be given by visiting groups: on July 24, young virtuosi from California Summer Music; on July 31, the Junior Bach Festival of Berkeley.

Masons, runners grant scholarships

FOUR CARMEL High School students will receive a combined $3,500 in scholarships from the Carmel Masonic Lodge to further their college education. Treasurer Andrew Bonfield, a Hacienda Carmel resident, announced May 21 that Jessica Gillette, Ashley Urgo, Patrick Parsel and Megan Crouch would be receiving the awards.

The day before, the Monterey Bay Wednesday Night Laundry Running Club — the largest adult running club in Monterey County with more than 200 members — named three high school long-distance runners to receive scholarships.

Omar Mendoza of Salinas High School, Athena Pierre of Monterey High School and Jose Garcia of North Monterey County High School will each receive $1,425, which includes funds donated by the Big Sur International Marathon and the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce of Monterey County. The WNLN scholarship awards were presented May 29 at the club's annual barbecue.

to be made locally, with full public input, and among each of the stake holders in the region."

The mayors pledged their readiness and eagerness to "create a positive future for water governance on the Peninsula."

On the same date, the majority of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors also articulated its support. Supervisors Edith Johnsen, Fernando Armenta, Butch Lindley and Lou Calcagno decried the district's lack of progress.

"This is in direct opposition of their enabling legislation," they wrote. "Instead, the district has chosen to act as a regional land use agency. Their failure has strangled growth and economic development within their agency's boundaries, resulting in major impacts on the County of Monterey."

Protection of the Carmel River, an increased water supply and adequate drought reserves are urgent, according to the supervisors. "A new governance system must be formed that supports community needs."

Fifth District Supervisor Dave Potter, who represents the county on the water board, did not sign the letter and has said a board with forward momentum should not be stopped.

"Complete dissolution of the district without any alternative just seems to me to be oddly vague as to what we're supposed to be doing in the community," Potter said.

It wouldn't depoliticize water issues, either.

"More political blood has been spilled, more capital expended, in the arena of water problems and solutions than in any other arena I've ever seen, and I've been in almost every one there is," said Potter, reached this week during a coastal commission meeting in San Pedro. "I've never seen more violent politics than in issues around water."

On Wednesday, the Assembly Local Government Committee, chaired by former Monterey County Supervisor and bill coauthor Assemblyman Simon Salinas, will consider the revised SB 1529.

With Salinas and the three Republicans on the committee presumably on board, McPherson will need to convince one more Democrat to vote in favor of passing the bill on to the full Assembly, according to McPherson's chief of staff, James Jack. Since it is a non-fiscal bill, it will probably avoid the Assembly Committee on Appropriations, where an earlier version died last year.

"We're making every effort to meet with the members to show them the merits of the bill. We feel like we have a pretty compelling case," Jack said. "It's a matter of convincing the Sacramento politicians that this is what the voters want."

Colleagues of the Arts. "José was very impressed with the new hall, and he said he will definitely come back."

After finishing his early-evening program of Spanish and Neapolitan love songs, Carreras and his small entourage walked across San Carlos Street to the Carmel Woman's Club, which had been transformed into a gala banquet hall for a dinner, prepared by Kurt Grasing with wines by the Frank Family vineyards, in Carreras' honor. Wendy Brodie and Bernardus donated food and wine for a pre-concert reception. Proceeds from the dinner, and a percentage of the concert ticket sales, went to Colleagues for the Arts.

"José doesn't usually do dinners after concerts, but he told me he really supports our programs for young artists," Hodges-Keyston said. "I was so moved by his genuine warmth and friendliness."

During the dinner, Carreras was presented with a key to the city by Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud, and a portrait of himself painted for the occasion by Van Magert.

"He seemed genuinely touched by the whole evening," Hodges-Keyston said.

The Spanish opera star arrived in Carmel Friday from Moscow and spent the next two days resting at the Monterey Plaza hotel, Snyder said. The day after his Carmel concert, he headed off to another engagement in Washington, D.C., leaving behind a trail of happy fans — especially women.

"I was so entranced because I've wanted to hear him sing for a long, long time," said Joanne Albert, wife of Monterey Mayor Dan Albert, who was seated at Carreras' table. "To be able to have dinner with him was just perfect."

"The evening was pure magic," said Anne Ross, event manager for Pacific Grove's Martine Inn, who was accompanied by her son, Navid, for the evening. "It was a night out with my son, captivating music, a charismatic man on stage, and I was able to hug and kiss José Carreras. I am still on Cloud Nine."

After he was given the key to the city, Flo Snyder said, "Now you can open any door in town. My home address is . . ."

Pagrovia pleasingly melds Russian, Italian favorites

FOR A little bit of atmospheric Bohemia on the Bay — in the unconventional, artistic sense — try Pagrovia in Pacific Grove. It's an eclectic mix of Russia and Italy, with samovars as decoration, embroidered ecru net curtains at the windows, and Russian scenes in many original paintings . . . and sculptures, drawings and paintings copied from Italian masters.

And why not? It's owned jointly by a St. Petersburg Russian, chef Valentina Rapisarda, who has been in the U.S. for 13 years and is married to an Italian. Her business partner, Vincenzo D'Amigo — whose grandmother was Russian — is also a chef and the resident artist.

At first we thought Pagrovia was just a clever play on words for Pacific Grove, and while it is that, it also tips you off to the Russian fare. But it gives no hint of the Italian dishes that predominate.

Chef Vincenzo was born in New York and learned Italian cooking in his mother's restaurant there, while Chef Valentina acquired her cooking skills at a culinary academy in St. Petersburg. She also owns the Bayview Deli on the Coast Guard pier in Monterey which she opens at 5 a.m. After a stint there, she goes to Vincenzo's aid at Pagrovia. They opened Pagrovia together last October following D'Amigo's stints as chef at Brookdale Lodge in the Santa Cruz Mountains, La Strada in Los Gatos and Carniglia's in Santa Cruz.

Chef Valentina's 21-year-old twins, Vladimir and Larisa, will be arriving from Russia next month and will be an addition to the wait staff at Pagrovia.

Poultry and seafood dishes pretty well make up the menu, but there's a filetto al pepe for $23 with gorgonzola butter, roasted vegetables and caramelized garlic smashed potatoes; a Russian lamb stew — which one of our dinner companions ordered — with roasted vegetables served over arborio rice or smashed potatoes for $18 under the name Barashka; and a petit rack of lamb, for $19, with prosciutto, onion and garlic country wine sauce with an accompaniment of polenta or the ubiquitous potatoes.

In case you aren't in-the-know about these potatoes, they're mashed, but with big chunks of potato too. They are the lazy man's mashed potatoes, and oh, so good.

As for the remainder of the Russian offerings, there's a starter of borscht, a traditional Ukrainian soup with meat or seafood. We assume the main vegetable is beets, but we've never heard of serving borscht with seafood before.

Then there's Karcho ($8), described as a Georgian lamb soup with roasted vegetables and buckwheat kasha; Piroshki ($12), unlike any other we've seen. Generally speaking, piroshki is a turnover with a savory filling, but Pagrovia's version follows a very old Russian country tradition, prepared as a substantial crêpe stuffed with wild mushrooms, onions, hard boiled egg, sour cream, and served on a potato pancake (also smashed) with a mushroom sherry sauce. The three of us dining together Sunday night shared this as an appetizer ($12), and found it tasty and filling.

Zareniki ($10) is a homemade vegetable, mushroom or potato-stuffed egg pasta pocket sautéed in butter, sour cream, and napped with Parmesan or marinara sauce.

Siberian mushrooms consist of portobellos stuffed with smoked salmon, goat cheese and sun-dried tomatoes ($12). And of course beef stroganoff ($16) with sour cream served over fresh egg pasta or mashed potatoes is on the menu.

There is a preponderance of Italian dishes — from minestrone ($7) to seafood and pasta — the chicken dishes are prepared parmigiano, cacciatore, roasted with rosemary and lemon, and piccata. And with an obvious political avoidance of veal, even the saltimbocca, cannelloni and scaloppine are prepared with chicken. Italian entrées run from $10.95 to $13.95.

All of the dishes we ordered were very good, but the plating, in this era of pretty presentations, was rather plain Jane.

There are 24 items on the breakfast menu alone, which is extensive by any comparison and lists unusual items, such as Dungeness crab and shrimp potato cake, spinach, hollandaise ($9.50); omelets and fritatas in the style of Greek, Italian, Romanov, Muscovite, and Belgian ($7.50 - $9.50); blinis ($7); Normandy toast stuffed with sweet ricotta and fresh berries ($7.50); Russian buckwheat or buttermilk pancakes with sour cream and strawberries ($7.50); or kasha, Russian hot buckwheat cereal with walnuts, prunes and bananas for $6.50.

The bottom line is, if you seek a substantial breakfast or dinner a little out of the ordinary, set among Russian accoutrements and artwork produced by the chef, Pagrovia is the place.

'Jake's Bake' perpetuates Abalone Stomper memories

ONE OF the most colorful local figures ever to grace the Monterey Peninsula, Jake Stock was known for his wit, his love of music and his regular performances at the Big Sur River Inn. Fittingly, the folks at the popular Big Sur restaurant and resort hotel are presenting "Jake's Bake," an afternoon of music to perpetuate the memory of the original Abalone Stomper.

The event takes place this Sunday, June 13, at the Monterey Fairgrounds and kicks off at 1 p.m. Entertainment will be provided by the Monterey Jazz Festival High School All-Star Band plus festival clinicians; Sweet Thursday Jazz Band, the Abalone Stompers Reunion Band, Along Came Betty, Just Friends, Illuminati and Coco Beat.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Monterey Jazz Festival Youth Education Fund. Tickets are available at Bay Books in Monterey, Bookworks in Pacific Grove and the Big Sur River Inn. Call 626-1744 for more details.

Cannery Row restaurant and popular music venue, Sly McFly's, serves up its biggest concert ever this Sunday, June 13, with a rare club performance by two of the most popular groups from the '60s: the legendary Drifters and the Coasters supported by the Muddy Rivers Revue. "The Clown Princes of Rock 'n' Roll," the Coasters were the first vocal group to be inducted into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame on Jan. 21, 1987.

Performing such hits as "Riot in Cell Block Number Nine" and "Down in Mexico," the Coasters will appear at Sly McFly's with original member Leon Hughes.

Featuring original member Bobby Hendricks, the Drifters are today regular performers in Las Vegas and other major venues throughout the United States. With the Drifters, Hendricks recorded "Drip Drop," "Moonlight Bay" and "Suddenly There's A Valley." Leaving the Drifters in the latter part of 1958, he recorded the smash hit "Itchy Twitch Feeling." A year later he rejoined Bill Pinkney and the original Drifters and toured the United States and Europe for more than 17 years. Hendricks was inducted into the Doo Wop Hall of Fame of America in Symphony Hall in Boston in 2001.

When Krishnamurti met Robinson Jeffers at Tor House

ONE NEEDS to look at life with "a crystalline interest," the East Indian spiritual teacher Jiddu Krishnamurti once said. Carmel poet Robinson Jeffers and Krishnamurti shared a spiritual awakening that transformed their respective lives. Although Jeffers had not known Krishnamurti before his visit to Carmel in 1934, Jeffers told a friend, "I feel as if I have always known that which Krishnamurti teaches."

Poet Elliot Ruchowitz-Roberts will present a reading of Jeffers, Krishnamurti, and his own work at 7 p.m. Saturday,

Ruchowitz-Roberts

June 19 in the Parlor, East Wing, Tor House at 26304 Ocean View Ave. on Carmel Point. Ruchowitz-Roberts will explore the parallels between Krishnamurti's writings and Jeffers' poems, and reveal the spiritual nature of Jeffers' poetry. He will also read some of his own poems that have been influenced by the writings and lives of these two extraordinary 20th century teachers.

Seating is limited and reservations are required by calling 624-1813 Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., and at other hours, 624-5725. A wine and cheese reception will be held at 6:30 preceding the reading. This is a fund-raiser for the Tor House Foundation; a suggested donation is $20.

Theater veterans serve punch lines with polished skill

By K. K. ROBINSON

WHAT A pleasure it is to watch three veterans of the local theater scene strut their stuff in "A Bench in the Sun." Morgan Stock, Edie Karas and Michael Robbins rock the house with laughter as three "inmates" of a retirement home where the food quality is questionable and the company of old friends can be a curse as well as a blessing.

Director Conrad Selvig starts off with an immediate sight gag and the audience never stops nodding its head in collective acknowledgement of the vicissitudes of aging gracefully. The actors, all skilled in the art of delivering a punch line, make the most of every opportunity in this great collection of one-liners about living as a senior citizen in today's world.

Center spotlight is on Karas who shines every time she is on stage as the once-famous actress, Adrienne Bliss. She sparkles with gaiety as she flirts with both men, igniting a rivalry from an old, unsettled score between them.

Robbins (Harold) insistently maintains his optimistic view of life, and dresses up each morning to greet the day. He is the first to succumb to Adrienne's attractions, and his already good opinion of himself expands in the light of her attention.

Stock (Burt), the curmudgeon of the group, just wants to be left alone to read his paper and complain about the world. He has suffered a deep loss and only begins to open up to life again when bathed in the warmth of Adrienne's affection.

The stage is set for a classic lovers' triangle, but the script is so full of jokes the tone of the play never darkens. Instead, we are treated to a waltz lesson by Harold, who walks unsteadily with a cane and cannot get up from the bench without assistance. We are admonished by Burt early on that, "It's not boogie-woogie any more, it's rock with roll."

With more than a century of performing among the three of them, Karas, Robbins and Stock hold the audience in the palms of their collective hands. Their comic sense is impeccable and the pace of the first act could be tightened without losing either the exposition or the comedic effect. The announcements to the retirement home residents by Deirdre McCauley are often hilarious.

There will be two shows: 6 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. For tickets call 649-8050.

The folks at CenterArts (out of town promoters with ties to Humboldt State University) will kick off an ambitious season of concerts at the Sunset Theater in Carmel on Thursday, June 17 with the appearance of singer/songwriter great Mary Chapin Carpenter.

With more than eight million albums sold world-wide, five Grammy Awards, two Country Music Association Awards, and a host of other honors, Carpenter is touring in support of her 10th and latest album, "Between Here and Gone."

In 1987 Carpenter announced her arrival with the release of "Hometown Girl," a critically acclaimed debut. And, while her first album marked her professional breakthrough, it was her second release two years later, "State of the Heart," that launched Carpenter's career. The album generated four successful singles, (including "How Do," "Quittin' Time" and "Never Had It So Good,") and garnered her the American Country Music award for Top New Female Vocalist. Music starts at 8 p.m. For tickets call 620-2040.

Not to be outdone by their neighbors up north, the Henry Miller Library has put together an exciting lineup of music this summer including this Sunday's appearance of New York singer/songwriter Dan Bern. Frequently likened to folk icon Bob Dylan, Bern is a wit with clever lyrics and thought-provoking tunes. Music starts at 3 p.m.

Also this summer at the HML on Highway 1: Jazz at Miller's on Saturday, June 19 featuring New York saxophonist Sherman Irby with Dottie Dodgion and the Dick Whittington Trio; Ramblin' Jack Elliot's 73rd birthday party on Saturday July 31; singer/songwriter Ellis Paul on Sunday, Aug. 8; and from New Orleans, the Dirty Dozen Brass Band on Sunday, Aug. 22.

For details check out their website at www.henrymiller.org.

Author Ron Clark, who has written several other plays and was a screenwriter on Mel Brooks' films "Revenge of the Pink Panther," "High Anxiety" and "Silent Movie," meets all of our expectations as a comedy writer. The bench in the title is placed in a garden, brightly lit as we pass through the seasons of the year. Both set and lighting design are credited to Conrad Selvig, while Adriana Wellisch provided the many colorful costumes.

Just right for the intimate Carl Cherry Center, "A Bench in the Sun" is an artful recognition that the most valuable skill we can acquire to take with us to the end of our lives is a sense of humor.

WHAT: "A Bench in the Sun"

Budget choices

WITH THE local economy rebounding, and the national economy getting so hot the Fed is thinking of raising interest rates to prevent inflation, it is especially painful for the city to be cutting library hours and laying off employees. The budget shortfall seems likely to be short-lived, making it possible city services will be restored in the near future. But that doesn't make it any easier to say goodbye to valued city workers, even while remaining employees have to start doing the work of two or three.

Building inspector and part-time police officer Tim Meroney, for example, already has one assistant serving his country in Iraq, while the other is on the layoff list. You can't blame the indefatigable Meroney for asking the city council to dip into reserves rather than put more work on his shoulders. But the council was right to save that money for emergencies, which the current budget deficit certainly isn't. City administrator Rich Guillen has warned of it for years. Various new revenue sources to forestall exactly the sort of dire budget shortfall Carmel is facing have been discussed at least since 2001. But none has come to fruition, mainly because of fears these ideas (paid parking, a surcharge on restaurant meals or higher taxes on hotel rooms) would backfire by driving customers and tourists away from local businesses. As councilman Erik Bethel pointed out recently, you can't tax your way out of a slow economy.

Meanwhile, the city has a huge amount of cash literally wasting away in the form of Flanders Mansion. Letting the old house continue to decay while not producing any public benefit is a grossly irresponsible use of the citizens' money. Last month, Carmel picked up a tidy sum — $11,000 — renting the mansion to a clothing company for a photo shoot. But such windfalls are sure to be few and far between. The only way the old place could produce steady, reliable revenue would be to stage large-scale public events there, something the neighbors will never tolerate, and which the council has rejected in the past. With Sunset Center providing an ideal venue for exactly the sort of events foreseen for Flanders Mansion, the council is sure to continue vetoing cooking classes, art exhibits and weddings at Flanders in the future.

In the meantime, the $4 million or $5 million the sale of the mansion will likely generate could easily be put to good use. By freeing up other funds dedicated to capital improvements, it could have saved a few jobs this summer, or kept the library open on Sunday and Monday, for example.

Proponents of keeping Flanders Mansion say it's foolish and shortsighted to liquidate city property to underwrite operating expenses. That's true in most situations. But it's also true that clinging to an unused piece of property while handing out pink slips at city hall is just plain callous.

Flanders Museum?

Dear Editor,

The city of Carmel-by-the-Sea has gained world renown for its beauty, and fame as a community devoted to the arts and artists, yet it has never created a museum of art. What is it waiting for? The city owns an ideal building that would be a perfect home for its large collection of works of art that sit unseen in storage areas and a vault at the main library. Very few residents even know about the extensive and valuable collection of paintings, photographs, etc. that have been given to the city over the years. Other than one brief showing of the Edward Weston photographs, the other art works have seldom been seen. The perfect place to display and benefit from this valuable collection of art would be at the Flanders Mansion. The Flanders Foundation would like nothing better than to work with the city to turn that building into the Museum of Art and Natural History that our community has waited far too long to create.

With cooperative efforts, museums are created and sustained through dues-paying members, volunteers, docents, bequests, grants, etc. The city of Carmel-by-the-Sea has the building, the works of art and an organization that wants nothing more than to make this museum a reality. The only element lacking at this time is the approval of the city council to make Flanders into a truly beneficial city property for all to enjoy.

It is reasonable to believe that once Carmel-by-the-Sea has a museum of art it would attract a steady flow of donations of works of art that would never have been given if the donors knew their treasured pieces would be put in storage, never to be seen by the public. Just recently the Monterey Museum of Art received an extensive, valuable collection of paintings; since there are far more paintings than they have room for, they plan to sell a portion of the collection. If Carmel-by-the-Sea had a museum it could be the beneficiary of simi-

Better uses for tax monies

Dear Editor,

I can't believe voters in the regional park district would consider being taxed again for parkland that has and will be removed from property and sales tax rolls, therefore putting a greater tax burden on everyone. The Palo Corona, for example, was purchased with public funding by the Big Sur Land Trust and Nature Conservancy with the intent of reselling it to the State Parks Dept., without a management plan in place.

The conservancy has been selling parcels of conserved land to its contributors, such as Harrison Ford and others, on the correct basis that private ownership is the best mode of ecological stewardship. It is irresponsible to purchase land for public use without a sound scientific and economic plan in place. Perhaps the MPRPD should sell portions off "ala San Carlos Ranch" and use those resources to cover underestimated management costs, and also curtail their aggressive land acquisition policy.

I believe our children would rather hike on the path of higher education, our sick rather see a horizon of well being, and our poor envision the flowers of opportunity. There are much better ways to spend our previous few tax monies.

Save Nielsen Bros. Market

Dear Editor,

I feel it is both my duty and my privilege to voice my opinion regarding the possible closure of our venerable and valuable market — Nielsen Bros. What a disaster to its loyal customers and to the community of Carmel such a closure would be! Carmel, without Nielsen Bros. Market, I can't imagine! Where else can one find such convenience, service, and quality? Furthermore, Nielsen Bros. Market is kind of like the neighborhood post office — one meets one's friends there.

I urge everyone to shop at this 77-year-old Carmel treasure and thereby allow it to stay in business for many years to come. A necessary ingredient in keeping the "spirit of Carmel" alive is the continuance of Nielsen Bros. Market. Please visit this wonderful store soon and often!

Sandy Claws by Margot Petit Nichols

C. HARRY BOGARD, 4-and-a-half-months, looks as if he's about to break into a fox trot, but in reality, he's getting ready to jump into Mom Barbara's arms on the Scenic walking path above Carmel Beach. (Coincidentally, last week Harry saw a fox trot across his back garden by the Forest Theater, so Dad Roger had a gate created at a break in the fence to keep out the fluffy-tailed reynard.)

Having arrived at his new home only last weekend from a breeder in Novato, little Harry's world expanded exponentially as he was introduced to new sights and sounds at every turning. On his third visit to the beach Thursday – as yet unaccustomed to all the canines, runners, walkers and visitors flashing past on the path – Mom's arms provided a safe haven.

So far, teaching Harry to fetch has resulted in Mom and Dad doing most of the retrieving, and as for the squeaky toys Harry has been given, he's too little to make them squeak, so Mom has to do it for him for the nonce.

When Harry passes a full length mirror at home, he never fails to bark to ward off that audacious furry intruder, cognizant that home invasions are on the upswing in nearby cities. His vigil seems to be working, because when Harry continues on his way, the intruder disappears.

On Father's Day, Harry's two sisters, whom he has yet to meet, will converge on the family home to honor Dad and to meet little brother Harry. Sister Nancy is coming from Santa Cruz and Sister Amy from Los Banos. This familial type of home invasion Harry's going to enjoy.

"Carmel Legends"

We keep a little file of legends which we wish had happened. But didn't. Among them is the non-visit to Carmel of SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN on July 24, 1885. He had come from London to New York to conduct The Mikado, to fight against piracy of Gilbert and Sullivan operas in the States, and principally to visit the children of his deceased brother in Los Angeles! His train journey from New York to San Francisco took 9 days, including stops in Chicago, Iowa, Denver, Salt Lake City and Sacramento. Of Iowa he wrote: "No liquors to be sold in this state. Shall not dine in Iowa." He hated the food in Lincoln, Nebraska; he played the organ in Denver's opera house; repeated that impromptu recital at the Mormon Tabernacle; visited Chinatown and Alcatraz in San Francisco; and took the overnight train 428 miles to L.A. Presumably he by-passed Carmel in the night, probably a few miles inland. We are distressed that he lacked a better guide, especially because he did visit Madera, Fresno and Yosemite during his time in California. But maybe he was right: we had no opera, no Golden Bough, no Sunset Center, no Forest Theater in 1885. But what a difference he might have made in Carmel history! His "Pirates" might have operated from Carmel Bay instead of Penzance!

County refines rules for landscaping with graywater

By PAUL MILLER

REVERSING A recommendation they made last summer, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors this week voted to allow graywater to be used for landscaping at commercial and industrial buildings in unincorporated parts of the county. But permits for such systems will be subject to a full environmental review to ensure that they can be built safely.

"Our current ordinance allows graywater — which is wastewater from bathtubs, showers, bathroom sinks and washing machines, but not from toilets or kitchen sinks — only at single-family homes," explained county health officer Laura Lawrence. "We know that some commercial uses are not appropriate if the water contains infectious agents," such as from a hospital. But other commercial projects could use graywater safely, she said, so long as the county retained jurisdiction to "require conditions to protect public health."

Currently, the county is evaluating a graywater proposal for a 78-bed assisted-care home the Gamboa family wants to build on its property behind Brinton's at the mouth of the valley. Concerns that viruses and bacteria could be present in graywater from such a facility, where some residents will probably be bedridden, led the county last summer recommend a ban on graywater systems at all commercial and industrial buildings.

But the Gamboas have subsequently offered to filter and disinfect the graywater at their proposed senior living complex, which doesn't have enough potable water rights to operate without using graywater on the grounds.

As proposed, a collection tank would receive water from sinks, bathtubs and showers. After being filtered and disinfected, the water would be distributed to a network of shallow irrigation pipes to flower beds and lawn areas. Similar setups have been used successfully in other parts of the state, according to a company that builds them. Lawrence said San Diego County has issued 30 to 35 graywater permits since 1994.

"But in Monterey County, no permits have been issued for graywater systems, so we have no information on their success or failure," Lawrence said. That's why she recommended they should be approved only after going through the full permit process.

Supervisor Edith Johnsen said there may be no graywater systems in the county built with permits, but "every time there's a water crisis, people engage in ersatz graywater use — especially using wash water, which they store out in their yards where it can be a breeding ground for mosquitoes." It's important that if people use graywater, they do it right, she said.

Another supervisor, Butch Lindley, asked if graywater included runoff from roofs and gutters. "The health department does not regulate the collection of rainwater for irrigation," Lawrence said.

The board voted unanimously to allow graywater systems at commercial and industrial buildings. An ordinance to implement the decision is expected later this summer.

FEES

"If I go to another county, what's so different?" Rawson asked. "I'm at a quandary to understand why there's such a huge discrepancy across the state."

The police chiefs hope the state will address that question next year. In a two-pronged approach, the attorney general would investigate how current fees were established and whether cities should have to pay them, while legislators would work for a tiered system to apply statewide.

Accountants would determine the appropriate charges for booking prisoners in "rural, urban or metropolitan" county jails, according to Sollecito, who has already met with Assemblyman John Laird to request he "support any bill that gives any relief to the cities, as far as booking fees go."

Standardizing the fee schedule would also help reduce the enmity that has developed between city and county law enforcement agencies over the years, according to Sollecito.

"The county and the cities should not be pitted against each other," he said. "That's a very bad situation."

In the meantime, police chiefs are praying the worst case scenario — in which the state yanks its reimbursements but continues to allow counties to charge unlimited booking fees — does not play out.

The state might cover only a third of the cost, Sollecito said, but "something is still better than nothing."

While Seaside police make frequent trips transporting prisoners to Monterey County Jail each week, Carmel P.D. has far fewer arrests. In 2003, CPD had 39 bookings into county jail and 19 into Monterey P.D.'s jail, where it can lodge intoxicated people, drunken drivers and misdemeanor drug users who usually bail out or are released the following day. Monterey P.D. charges Carmel $137 per booking.

"Our budget for booking fees is not very high," Rawson said, estimating the cost would increase from around $8,000 this fiscal year to more than $12,000 in 2004/2005.

"It's not a lot, but it's just more thousands of dollars [in costs] I've got to find out how to pay for," said Rawson, whose department has already seen cuts in supplies, services and staff.

Unique Monterey Peninsula homes

THE BEST HOUSE: In the sun

THANKS TO Annette Funicello movies and their late 20th-century progeny ("Baywatch" comes to mind) the rest of the world thinks California beaches are places where hordes of bikini-clad models and their hunky, bronzed boyfriends frolic in the surf and loll on sun-splashed sand, their only worry being running out of Coppertone.

The innocents whose only knowledge of the Golden State is what they see on TV or at the movies bring their California fantasies when they visit. They're easy to spot walking down Ocean Avenue in flip-flops and halter tops. The goosebumps give them away every time.

The reality of local beaches is all too familiar to residents of the Monterey Peninsula: The ocean is freezing and on the sand it's often frigid, too — even in summer. The scenery is incomparable and the wildlife is fascinating . . . but don't expect to see the sun every day. Or even every week.

And while thousands of us wouldn't have it any other way, the cold reality of life at the beach has fostered the creation of an entirely separate, inland real estate market — especially in Carmel Valley and along the Monterey-Salinas Highway — where fog is rare, roses bloom aplenty, and summer temperatures are reliably in the 80s, instead of the 50s.

Jan Williams of Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty has a splendid home for sale in the hills above Highway 68 that is a paramount example of upscale sunbelt development.

"The people who built it in 1992 wanted to get away from the fog," Williams said. "They wanted sun and privacy, and they created what amounts to a private resort."

PHOTOS/COLDWELL BANKER DEL MONTE

Coastal fog is but a distant memory at sunny, inland estates such as this one, which also has expansive southern views, in the hills above the Monterey-Salinas Highway.

The home, on Paseo del Sur in Bay Ridge, occupies a hill-top one-acre site at the end of a cul de sac. Expansive southern views of nearby mountains complete the feeling of isolation, while providing maximum light.

The Mediterranean villa has four bedrooms — including a vast master suite — five-and-a-half baths, a small vineyard, pool and hot tub, radiant heat and slate decking. And while the temperatures are much warmer than in Pebble Beach or Carmel, the prices are much lower. The house is listed at $2,295,000.

The Mediterranean villa's formal, mirrored dining room has large windows overlooking a slate deck.

The city will retain the right to use the center and obtain the help of two members of SCC staff at no additional cost five days a year, while the Carmel Unified School District may use it 10 days a year, though it will have to pay for the SCC staff. Neither will be allowed to bump previous commitments. CUSD may continue using the pottery room at no cost, and city and support groups may use meeting rooms Monday through Thursday free of charge.

According to the contract, all revenues generated by the center will go to operating costs. SCC will also pursue grants, donations, sponsorships and other sources to help reduce the city's subsidy toward the operation of Sunset Center.

Following last week's unveiling of the contract, few changes were made, and Tuesday's hearing prompted only a handful of comments from the public.

Resident Cavan Hardy commented on the timing of the contract, which coincided with a party celebrating the dissolution of the Campaign for Sunset, the nonprofit that raised $13.4 million from the community to help cover the $21.65 million renovation.

"It's wonderful to be able to celebrate the completion of that," Hardy said, but it seemed unusual to be doing so as Sunset is placed in the hands of a private nonprofit that will operate it. "It's kind of like sending a child off to college," he said, when parents hope for the best but fear the worst.

Attorney Skip Lloyd said the city should have more say in deciding whether to renew the agreement after it ends June 30, 2007. As written, unless SCC has failed to meet its obligations, the nonprofit can extend the contract for two additional three-year terms.

Olof Dahlstrand worried about residents lacking control over the center.

"People will lose a say in what becomes of Sunset Center even though they continue to own it," he said. "They are required to back up financially this entire enterprise, even though they have no say in the risks and inefficiencies that come up over time."

After observing that the successful Campaign for Sunset was also a nonprofit formed by supporters who saw a need, much like SCC, cultural commissioner Denny Gambill said the "silent majority" spoke in support of SCC when it elected Mayor Sue McCloud and councilmen Erik Bethel and Mike Cunningham in April.

The inner workings of the newly renovated Sunset Center are now in the hands of the nonprofit Sunset Cultural Center, Inc.

"The candidates who wanted to scrap SCC and start all over again were not elected," he said. "I think that's how voters stand on this."

Responding to questions about the fate of Sunset Center employees, city administrator Rich Guillen said the city and SCC will now determine how to best orchestrate the transition of management of the center. The agreement takes effect July 1.

Meetings closed

SCC's board will not open its meetings to the public but will submit quarterly financial reports to the council, and its finances will be discussed each year when the budget is set, Guillen said. SCC will also conduct annual community meetings to seek input.

"Those are the meetings where the public would have the opportunity to challenge the budget figures and anything else that's in the contract," Guillen said.

Councilman Gerard Rose predicted "in a year, it will be all smiles," while Cunningham had a more subdued, though supportive, take.

"The central issue we're wrestling with is still the wisdom of having a nonprofit manage this like a business," he said. "I believe it's still the right choice, albeit not without risk."

Following the council's unanimous vote, McCloud invited SCC board chairman Jim Price and other board members in the audience to the podium.

"We look forward to the partnership that has been spawned this evening as we go forward," she said.

After commenting on the uniqueness of Carmel-by-the-Sea and its Sunset Center, Price thanked the council, the staff and the community for their courage and commitment.

He encouraged residents and their friends to subscribe to the presentations and events at the center.

"The goal is to offer a rich and varied cultural life for Carmel, and for our Central Coast neighbors," he said. "SCC's job is to provide sound and responsible management. We can do that; however, the success of this venture relies on everyone."

paradise.

A police state is not necessary in Iraq because these unfortunate people have endured war and misery for at least two generations; they are more than ready for peace.

A police state is not only unnecessary but unthinkable here for many reasons:

■ It comes at the expense of the precious and hard-won freedom we are blessed with.

■ It also comes at the expense of our schools, libraries and, no doubt, other relevant and necessary services — or simply lower taxes

■ Americans have always been independent, free and more than capable of ensuring order and protection for all without artificial restraints and hidden agendas.

We as citizens should steadfastly guard our freedom for ourselves and our posterity.

Gino San Felice, Carmel

Learning more about Reagan

Dear Editor,

I was honored to serve as a member of the Reagan Administration from 1981 to 1986. I am touched by the outpouring of support and sympathy shown in honor of President Ronald Reagan. When in his presence, I always sensed his respect for the office he held and his courtesy to all those around him. He was the right man at the right time to lead the world away from simply accepting the existing strategy of mutual annihilation to the ultimate realization of freedom for the millions trapped behind the "iron curtain."

Ronald Reagan was a man of well informed principles and profound intelligence and he applied those principles to the decisions he made. Sadly, some tried to picture him as an actor reading lines. Those who were with him day by day knew differently. He was a deep thinker, a superb writer, clear and concise; when he presented his ideas, the public understood.

Now it is becoming apparent that Ronald Reagan may be our foremost "President of Letters." Two books of his letters have recently been published, "A Life in Letters" and "Reagan in His Own Hand." Many of the letters are personal. They give a real insight into the heart and soul of the man. There is a CD collection of radio essays titled, "Reagan in His Own Voice," broadcast between 1975 and 1979, the years between his governorship and the presidency. He offers profound advice on many of the issues which still face our nation today. I recommend these books for those who wish to know more about this great American.

James C. Sanders,
Carmel

Editor's note: Amid all the tributes to President Ronald Reagan this week, former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood offered one personal remembrance: "When I was elected mayor in 1986, the first person who called to congratulate me was President Reagan. He said, 'People ask me how you can be an actor and then become a politician. Now that I've been president for five years, I don't see how you could be a politician without being an actor first.'"

Eccentricities explained

Dear Editor,

Like you, I was once skeptical about the theory that jet contrails affect our minds. But now that you have published the map showing the extraordinary number of flights over our area, I believe we have a convincing explanation for the high rate of mental eccentricity among residents of Carmel.
