WATER BOARD CONDEMNNS MORATORIUM

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE HAVOC a water hookup moratorium would wreak on Peninsula residents and businesses prompted the board of directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to vote 6-1 to formally oppose it Monday.

When the California Public Utilities Commission approved Cal-Am Water Co.'s request for emergency rate hikes July 8, it required the water company to apply for the ban, which Cal-Am Monterey Division General Manager Steve Leonard said would remain in effect until a new water supply is brought online. Recommended by the PUC's Office of Ratepayer Advocates, it would affect Cal-Am customers whose water comes from the Carmel River.

Director David Pendergrass speculated a moratorium, which threatens development, whether the expansion of a home or the opening of a new business, would have severe effects on the local economy.

"We should stand united. The PUC needs to hear this," he said, adding that decision makers in Peninsula cities are readying their opposition to the ban as well. "You cannot cut people's livelihood. I can't believe the Office of Ratepayer Advocates recommended what they did."

District counsel David Laredo said imposition of a moratorium would have "significant direct and indirect economic consequences," not only for homeowners and businesses that already have plans approved but have yet to hook up their meters, but for the building trades and suppliers who would have to cancel orders and possibly lay off workers due to the resulting drop in business.

For example, "the City of Pacific Grove has a low-income housing project, but that's a meter that has not yet been pulled and the permit not issued as yet," Laredo said.

Stores settle seven ADA lawsuits

■ One new ramp, multiple cash payments to disabled man and his lawyers

By PAUL MILLER

LACKING HIS financial resources for a long battle in the courtroom, seven downtown business owners went against the advice of former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood and settled ADA lawsuits brought against them last year.

"Despite what Clint said, one of his attorneys advised us to settle," said Lanny Rose, owner of the Cottage of Sweets on Ocean Avenue, "so that's what we did."

"My lawyer said I had to settle, because otherwise it would just keep costing me money," agreed Veronica O'Shea, owner of Redeem, an upscale furniture and accessories store on Mission.

"We also settled, though we haven't signed the final documents yet," said John Wilson, manager of The Pine Inn.

"Because we were selling the gallery, they basically dropped any claim against us, but our insurance company did pay them something," said Frank Dobronte of Phillips Gallery. "We were very, very fortunate."

The other businesses sued last year —

Armed robbery suspect arrested in Capitola

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MAN suspected of robbing a Carmel jewelry store at gunpoint last month was arrested outside the Capitola Mall Friday by Carmel Police Detective Buck Melton with the help of several Capitola police officers. They reportedly found 28-year-old Kevan Thranow in possession of a ring and 34 loose diamonds which jeweler Kerry Lee identified as those stolen from his store June 30.

Thranow came to Melton's attention following an extensive sweep for fingerprints shortly after the robbery occurred.

"We froze the scene and had the Department of Justice come down and process it," Melton said. "And we have some video that shows he wasn't wearing gloves or a mask."

The quality of the surveillance tape was too poor to clearly show the face of the man who approached the saleswoman in the otherwise empty jewelry store around 2:30 p.m. June 30, engaged her in conversation about diamonds and rings, and then forced her down behind the counter at gunpoint, cleaned out a jewelry case and fled.

Kevan Thranow

Fingerprints lifted at the scene were linked to Thranow, who was already in the criminal database for an arrest in the Santa Cruz area eight or nine years ago, according to Melton. The detective placed a photo of Thranow in a lineup with other mug shots and asked the clerk if one of them was the man who robbed the store.

"The employee was able to pick him out and positively I.D. him," Melton said.

A MUSICAL BOUNTY THAT LEAVES YOU WANTING MORE

By BARBARA MOSSBERG

THE CARMEL Bach Festival is often called a musical feast. Each of the individual dishes being served up this year is worthy of longtime remembrance; taken together, they build a texture of awe. Fortunately, the heart grows stronger with use, so unlike a feast, our capacity to savor each event is deepened as we progress through the festival, which began last Saturday and continues for another two weeks at Sunset Center.

For this reviewer, experiencing the festival's programs in such close temporal alignment inspires a different set of reflections independent of a response to any one performance. The intense experience of extraordinary performances from morning to night makes one think about music itself — the gift of minds that organize and produce such festivals; the miracle of minds that imagine it, write it, design instruments to create it; build and maintain instruments; teach and train to play music, to sing, to conduct — all in the service of beauty.

Indeed, the cumulative message of the festival performances in halls, churches and foyers of Carmel is inescapably the transcendent nature of the human being. With technical skill and an engineer's imagination, we can create sounds that are for no purpose other than expression of our spiritual knowledge, our emotional response to being alive. The sounds are just lovely to hear. And we do this in spite of, and because of, our knowledge of our imperfection. Only in music do we have such a form of perfection and transcendence. No wonder music has always been allied with our instinctive efforts at reverence, worship, spiritual communication, praise and celebration.

By Monday night, at the Carmel Mission Basilica's Soloist's Spotlight, I felt that the music was redeeming us as citizens of earth. Humanity's often discouraging and ignoble goings on reflected in the day's headlines were offset by the purity and lightness and tenderness and power of the violins, flute, cellos, bassoons, trumpets, organ, harpsichord, horns, oboes, basses and violas. I imagined those sonic messages going straight into the trunks and leaves, through the clouds, to the stars, affecting the continuous evolving matter of life.

Such were my thoughts, sitting in the Basilica on this warm starry night, hearing such works as Vivaldi's "Concerto in G Major for Strings," and Bach's "Orchestral Suite No. 1." I was assured the performances were not only comfort and joy to us, but a source of cheer to the universe conveyed all the way to the stars. It occurred to me that my scientist friends, especially the physicists ("who speak to God") would find this a realistic notion.

After all, we have a reciprocal relationship with nature. Human breath gives carbon dioxide to plants for their formation of food that keeps us alive; plants exhale oxygen for us. The festival reminds us that in the same way, perhaps, when we make music, we are responding in kind to the earth itself — "the wind in the willows," waves and

YOUNG CLASSICAL VIRTUOSOS CONVERGE TO MAKE CALIFORNIA SUMMER MUSIC

By ANNE PAPINEAU

IT'S NOT only the Carmel Bach Festival that imports an international retinue of musical talent to the Monterey Peninsula each July.

Headquartered at Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach are the 63 participants in California Summer Music. Like their Bach Festival compatriots, they travel distances great and small to practice and perform compositions with a classical twist. But this parallel universe of skilled musicians differs from the Bach retinue, in that several are a mere 12 years old and composers top out at 25. Strolling the halls of RLS, there's almost an incongruity in witnessing the mature musicianship that issues from these youthful individuals.

And the public is urged to judge for itself during a series of

The three-and-one-half week camp is modeled on such East Coast programs as the Meadowmount School of Music in Westport, N.Y.

"Quite a few of our teachers had been taking their kids back east in the summer, to Meadowmount, for example," explained Sigrid Anderson, a cellist who began as a counselor with California Summer Music and is now executive director. "The teachers decided we should be in beautiful California, with no mosquitoes."

Students of strings, piano and composition arrive in Pebble Beach for an intensive, six-day-a-week program led by stellar instructors. The teachers are typically members of leading orchestras or regular instructors at major music conservatories.

"It's sort of a retreat experience," said Anderson. "Students know they have no outside distractions. They don't

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

DRUNKEN RACIST TEENAGE SNOBS

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

SUNDAY, JULY 11

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Units responded to a report of someone pounding on a black SUV on Lincoln Street at 0201 hours. A male subject was contacted who stated his friend had fallen asleep in the vehicle and locked him out. His friend awoke and they both took a taxi back to Monterey because they had been drinking.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Owners of a Carmel Way residence came home after three weeks away and found several pieces of jewelry missing. Construction work on the inside of the house had been under way while they were gone.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A vehicle reported as a habitual offender was seen parked on San Carlos Street with more than $500 in outstanding citations on file. The vehicle was towed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Contact made with a male adult, age 41, who is a resident of Seaside. He was contacted on Ocean Avenue for public intoxication, arrested and lodged at Monterey P.D. jail until sober.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of suspicious circumstances. Female noticed the lights were off inside her Dolores Street business and called police to check the interior. It is her habit to always leave the lights on when the business is closed. She turned the lights on at 1800 hours and noticed they were off at 2322 hours. Officers checked the exterior and interior and everything appeared to be normal. One other employee has a key to the building, but she doubted the employee had returned and didn't think she would have turned the lights off if she had.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine 7111 was dispatched to a fire alarm activation at Dolores and Fifth. Upon arrival, found an audible alarm sounding and a unit filled with smoke secondary to cooking. Alarm silenced and reset after passively evacuating smoke from the apartment.

Carmel Valley: Past-tense theft from a West Carmel Valley Road residence.

Carmel area: Past-tense burglary of a room in a Rio Road hotel.

Big Sur: Past-tense malicious mischief to a vehicle parked at a Palo Colorado Canyon Road residence.

MONDAY, JULY 12

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male Perry Newberry

Way resident called and stated someone opened a side kitchen window at his home. No entry was made and there were no investigative leads that would identify the subject responsible for this act. A close patrol was requested. There was no missing property nor was there anything else disturbed in the area.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Three citations for vehicle code violations issued on San Antonio Avenue between 1053 hours and 1130 hours.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Conducted a yard check on Monte Verde Street in regards to wildlife issues.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Young juvenile became separated from his mother on Mission Street. The mother called the department to report her son was at large near the grounds of an inn. Upon arrival, the juvenile and mother were reunited.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A detached garage of a Forest Road residence was broken into sometime between the dates of 07-10 and 07-12. Electronic equipment used in live band performances was taken.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a peace disturbance on Junipero Street. Male stated he had recently terminated a three-year relationship with his girlfriend. For approximately two weeks, she has been calling him on his cell phone and at work wanting to talk to him. On each occasion he has told her there is nothing to talk about. At about 1730 hours today, she arrived at his workplace and demanded to talk to him. Again he said there was nothing to talk about and asked her to leave. She refused to

Peninsula Homeowners Flock To New Option Loan Program

MONTEREY PENINSULA – Homeowners with mortgages over $200,000 can now opt for a recently announced mortgage offering which allows one of four different payment options each month. One option reduces the monthly payment up to 35%. In addition, there is no income or asset verification required. Self-employed individuals with good credit are unlimited cash out of their equity for any reason. Another big advantage is that rates on these loans are well below those of the current interest rates. Many people consolidate high interest credit debt or do home improvements. The public can obtain a free four minute recorded report which provides details of how this loan works by calling 1-800-785-2662 ext. 222, seven days a week, 24 hours a day.

Witness hears crashing glass; bronze and gold lion missing

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE SOUND of shattering glass awakened a San Carlos Street resident early July 18. Her screams sent a burglary suspect scurrying from Fingerhut Gallery.

"She yelled, 'Oh my God!'" said Carmel Police Sgt. Mel Mukai. "At that point, the suspect quickly walked away in a north-bound direction, and she dialed 911."

Sgt. John Nyunt and officer Tom Nguyen arrived moments later, but the culprit, described as a 170-pound white male, 5 feet 9 inches tall with long, dark, wavy hair, was nowhere to be found. Although the alarm was set and has infrared sensors, it did not activate until police tested it following the break-in, according to Mukai.

Officers called Fingerhut Gallery manager Barbara Hurst, who arrived soon after the 4 a.m. break-in to inspect the damage and see if any pieces were missing.

She reported a 25-pound bronze sculpture of a lion, which was brown with gold leaf, had been stolen. Created by Chinese artist Jiang Tie-Feng and valued at $7,500, the lion was 14 inches long, 21 inches wide and 9 inches in diameter, according to Mukai.

"It was situated at the back of the gallery, not near the window," he said. "Nothing else was missing."

But the witness said she did not see the suspect carrying anything when he fled up the street.

"She heard the breakage of the glass and came out, and from her description, there was no way for him to walk into the gallery and run back out," Mukai said.

"But the fact remains there is a bronze lion statue missing. Therein lies the mystery."

Hurst told The Pine Cone it appeared the thief targeted the piece, a suggestion she said police officers made when they learned the sculpture had not been located near the broken window.

The lion is the second Jiang sculpture to be stolen from the gallery in the last 18 months. In February 2003, a burglar smashed a window and stole a 43-pound bronze and gold sculpture valued at $5,900. In that case a passerby noticed the broken window and called police.

The culprit is described as a 170-pound white male, 5 feet 9 inches tall with long, dark, wavy hair.

Shawn Russell: Del Monte Forest's new lawman

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH ITS private roads, guarded gatehouses and $8.25 entry fee, drivers in Pebble Beach may think they're not likely to be stopped for missing a stop sign or exceeding the 25 mph speed limit. But the long arm of the law reaches inside Del Monte Forest, too: California Highway Patrol Officer Shawn Russell has been patrolling inside the gates since December, following the retirement of Dave Peelo, the first officer assigned to cover the forest half a decade ago.

Before the California Vehicle Code was amended to allow them to enforce traffic laws in Del Monte Forest, CHP officers entered the gates only when a crime such as a hit-and-run occurred or to arrest a drunken driver, according to Russell.

But increased traffic congestion generated by a greater number of events and more residents has made regular patrols a necessity, and speed and drivers' inattention are concerns on Pebble Beach's narrow, twisting, sometimes confusing streets and many uncontrolled intersections.

"Probably the most obvious to everybody, and this seems to be a complaint among a lot of different folks, is the speed problem," said Russell. "And people tend to forget what a stop sign looks like."

The head of the Del Monte Forest Property Owners association, Jack Kidder, said having a CHP officer regularly patrol the neighborhood not only keeps speeding down, "it also gives people a comfort level, knowing there is law enforcement around."

In his eight months in the forest, Russell has experienced few surprises.

"The biggest was the beauty," he said. He enjoyed his dozen years working nights in North County, but being reassigned to the Peninsula a year-and-a-half ago and the Pebble Beach beat more recently has reminded him he's "very lucky to be a part of this area."

He now spends more than half of his work hours in the forest, with the remainder responding to incidents on Highway 1.

In a small office that requires its officers to wear many hats, Russell also serves as range master and oversees CHP marksmanship training at the police range at Laguna Seca.

"I help the boys qualify," he said, "and make sure they

Lawsuit alleges hormone therapy - breast cancer link

By PAUL MILLER

TWO MONTEREY County women and their husbands have sued the nation's largest pharmaceutical manufacturers, along with a host of smaller drug producers, alleging the women developed breast cancer after using hormone therapy drugs.

"The fraud that went on with the sale of these drugs was pervasive," said Miriam Bourdette, a Visalia attorney who is representing the women in a lawsuit filed in Monterey County Superior Court June 30. "The drug companies told doctors hormone therapy would keep women young and sexual, that it would reduce cardiovascular disease and prevent dementia, and that we could take it the rest of our lives. But they had no reasonable basis for any of that, and in fact had some evidence it wasn't true."

"The likelihood of severe injuries from the use of hormones far outweighed any utility," of taking them, the lawsuit said. "Defendants concealed or suppressed numerous facts with the intent to defraud."

Taking drugs such as Provera, Premarin and Prempro became common among women in their 50s and 60s after the drugs came on the market more than 10 years ago, Bourdette said. But in July 2002, the Women's Health Initiative announced there were significantly higher rates of breast cancer among women who took the drugs, especially in combinations, and advised all women to stop taking them, except to treat severe menopausal symptoms for a short time.

"We don't even look at a case unless the risk level at least doubles," Bourdette said. "Medically, it may be significant if it is 1.5 or 1.7 times higher, but not legally. And with combination hormone therapy, the rate of breast cancer is more than double."

Even before the 2002 warning, Bourdette said she stopped her own hormone replacement therapy, because she believed that, "our bodies simply aren't supposed to be flooded with these hormones once we get to a certain age." But other women kept taking the hormones even after the warning, because "they trusted their doctors more than their own instincts."

That was true of the two Monterey County women, Esther Carranza and Alice Fernandez, who had taken hormones and developed breast cancer. Under California law, they are entitled to triple damages, plus attorneys' fees and costs, according to papers on file at the courthouse. Their husbands are entitled to be compensated for "loss or diminution of companionship and services including love, comfort, care, assistance, protection, affection, society, moral support and assistance in operating the household and enjoyment of sexual relations."

Bourdette said her firm has five additional similar lawsuits in other counties, and because the defendants are located all over the country, the cases will probably end up being combined into a single suit in federal court in Little Rock, Ark.

The Overlooked Inflation Factor

What is a "low" interest rate? Most economic analysts assume that home sales heat up when interest rates are "low" and slow down when rates are "high."

In truth, mortgage rates—when adjusted to reflect the reality of inflation—remain pretty much the same at all times. If the rate of inflation is 2%, for example, you may be able to find 30-year fixed-rate mortgages bearing an interest rate of less than 7%. Low rates? Not exactly.

If the rate of inflation rises by 2%, the interest rate on mortgages tends to rise by a similar amount. Higher rates? If you are looking at the difference between the mortgage rate and the rate of inflation, you notice that it remains fairly constant. Technically, you are getting pretty much the same interest rate, after adjustment for inflation, no matter what the mortgage rate may be. Such are the mathematics of reality.

Of course, there is more to the question than this. Your income doesn't necessarily rise and fall with the inflation rate, so you can afford a larger home loan when interest rates (and the rate of inflation) are lower than you can when they rise.

Still, most homeowners have learned a magical secret about their home loans. Whenever you take out that loan, you are probably paying the same margin over the rate of inflation that you would pay if inflation were lower and—this is the key part—if inflation declines, mortgage rates will as well, and you can refinance into a lower interest rate. And, further, if they rise, you are the winner because the interest rate on a fixed-rate loan stays where it is until you, not inflation or market forces, change it. A MASS of Solemnity will be celebrated at 8 a.m. Friday, July 23, at the Carmelite Monastery for MAXINE CACACE HITCHCOCK, who died July 4 at her Carmel home. She was 79.

Born Maxine Brown in Oakland, she was raised in Alameda, where she attended St. Joseph's Catholic School and Alameda High. In 1947 she obtained a bachelor's degree in history from UC Berkeley. Following graduation, she was employed by Castle and Cooke in San Francisco, and in 1949, she became a Zephyrette, one of nine women across the United States chosen to serve as hostesses on the exclusive California Zephyr train from San Francisco to Chicago.

In 1951, she married Baron Amedeo Cacace, an international businessman. The couple had one son and resided in Rome for the next 16 years. During this period, Mrs. Cacace traveled extensively throughout Western Europe and the Middle East. In 1963, she entered the Pontifical Institute of Regina Mundi, where she earned master's degrees in theology, philosophy and sacred doctrine.

The Cacace family returned to the United States in 1967 and made their home in Pebble Beach. Mrs. Cacace taught history, philosophy, English and ethics at Santa Catalina, Martin Luther King Junior High, and York and Notre Dame High schools; as well as at UC Santa Cruz, and Monterey Peninsula and Hartnell colleges.

In 1976, she married William Robertson Hitchcock, professor of European history and one of the founding professors of UC Santa Cruz. In 1980, she received her doctoral degree in history from that institution.

After retirement, Dr. Hitchcock continued to travel and was an avid scholar and researcher. She was a member of Sigma Kappa Sorority, the MENSA Society and the American Association of University Professors, and was a parishioner of Carmel Mission Basilica.

She was preceded in death by her husbands and is survived by her son, Stefano Cacace of Pebble Beach.

Memorials are suggested to the Animal Friends Rescue Project, Box 51083, Pacific Grove, CA 93950.

HENRY (HANK) HUMANN, 77, an avid sailor of racing boats, died July 11 at Hospice House.

A native of Pasadena, Mr. Humann was a World War II veteran and a graduate of Claremont Men's College. He was married to his wife, Shirley, for 52 years and made his home in Newport Beach for 35 years. His love for the ocean and Carmel brought the Humann family to this community in 1993.

Mr. Humann is survived by his wife; three sons, Bruce, Kingdon and Bryant; a sister, Elizabeth Alford; a granddaughter, Kira; and many nieces and nephews.

Memorials are suggested to Hospice House or the donor's favorite charity.

CHARLES RICHARD LEWIS, 94, died July 12 at his Carmel home.

A native of Cincinnati, he had lived locally since 1976, coming from Orinda. Mr. Lewis attended Ohio State and was a member of Beta Theta Pi. He was an accountant for Safeway for 17 years.

Mr. Lewis is survived by his wife, Nancy Lucia of Carmel; one niece and three nephews.

Contributions are suggested to the SPCA of Monterey County, P.O. Box 3058, Monterey, CA 93942.

SPENCER STUART GILMAN, 80, a retired Carmel residential developer and contractor, died July 15 at home.

A native of Hudson, S.D., he was a graduate of the University of Missouri School of Journalism and received an M.S. in economics from the University of Utah, followed by doctoral studies at UC Berkeley. During World War II, Mr. Gilman was a B29 bombardier based on Tinian Island. He was recalled to service in the Korean War, and was a B-50 nuclear crew officer in the Strategic Air Command.

Mr. Gilman moved from the San Francisco Bay Area to Carmel in 1977. Prior to entering the construction business, he was a newspaper editor in Salt Lake City and an economist for Safeway, Western Pacific Railroad, Alexander and Baldwin and the ports of Oakland and San Francisco. From 1966 to 1968, he was assistant county executive of Santa Clara County.

Survivors include his wife of 50 years, Marjorie; sons Scott and Tobin; and his grandchildren, Deanne and Robert. He was preceded in death by his first wife, Suzanne Weber, in 1951.

Graveside services will begin at 1 p.m. Friday, July 23, at El Carmelo Cemetery, Monterey. Donations are suggested to the American Cancer Society.

MORATORIUM

"That project is set to go, and depending on the moratorium, that would not proceed. There would certainly be an economic impact caused by that."

Director Larry Foy said talk of a moratorium, especially with the uncertainty of whom it would affect and how, spurs a rush to get water hookups, increasing consumption.

'Shortage' definition debated

Talk of a moratorium arose in early July during a public hearing on the water company's June 16 application for emergency rate hikes to reduce water use to the level allowed by the State Water Resources Control Board. If use is not cut by the time the water year ends Sept. 30, the company and its customers could face as much as $3 million in fines. In that application, the water company stated it would separately apply for a moratorium on new and expanded water connections.

The day before the PUC acted on the rate hike application July 8, the water company's board of directors hastily scheduled a public hearing to declare a "water shortage emergency."

According to the California Water Code, a shortage occurs when a utility cannot meet the ordinary needs of its customers "without depleting the water supply of the distributor to the extent that there would be insufficient water for human consumption, sanitation and fire protection," according to Laredo, and a shortage must be declared before a moratorium can be requested.

But the company is facing a regulatory shortage imposed by the state, not a shortage in supply, he said, and the state board has the power to adjust the 20 percent cutback order it imposed on Cal-Am's Carmel River pumping in 1995. The chief of the water rights division could raise the limit so the water district can honor allocations already made and continue issuing permits for the remaining 156.4 acre-feet of available water as the projects counting on it are processed.

"Nothing is new or different now than since 1995 in terms of constraints," Laredo said.

But if any agency should impose a ban, it's the water district, which is entitled to that right under its conservation and rationing rules, he added.

Cal-Am's leaky system to blame?

Many speakers blamed the current water crisis on the fact that 9.5 percent of water produced by Cal-Am escapes from its system — through leaks, firefighting, system maintenance and theft — rather than the 7 percent of its overall 15,285 acre-foot-per-year production called for by district law.

"Unaccounted-for water lost through leaks in an aging Cal-Am infrastructure more than offsets any water available for allocation, thereby obviating the need for a moratorium," read the resolution approved by the board Monday.

"It's a drastic measure to solve a problem that has been inadequately handled by Cal-Am over the years," commented Carmel property owner Jim Staples. "Now we're faced with the financial penalty of that inadequacy."

Tex Irwin, who represents the Monterey Peninsula Airport District, said consumers should not be punished for lack of a usable water supply.

"There's is no such thing on this Peninsula as excess consumption. What it is is lack of excess in production," he said. "People on this Peninsula are the lowest water users in the whole damn state."

Many of the speakers at Monday night's meeting argued a moratorium would be illegal, unjustified, unfair and damaging, and several said further conservation efforts should be made before an outright ban is implemented.

Attorney Lloyd Lowrey and Pebble Beach Company Vice President Mark Stilwell testified that a moratorium interfering with the expansion of the reclamation project, which is being funded by the sale of water entitlements held by P.B. Co., would be unlawful and damage an extensive plan to cut potable water use.

'Long overdue'

Some environmentalists and water board director Kristi Markey supported the idea of a hookup ban.

"It seems to us a temporary moratorium would help in reducing excess consumption," said Carmel Valley Association member Robert Greenwood.

Cal-Am's Steve Leonard also spoke briefly during the comment period, stating he was frustrated by being unable to answer specific questions about the moratorium, the details of which won't come to light until an application is filed.

He said he has been relaying people's comments to his company's board of directors.

"We have heard the concerns and debated them internally, and we will follow the PUC guidance," he said. "But how we do that is yet to be determined."

Leonard said the application for the moratorium might be filed in a month, depending on his board of directors. After advising all affected customers via mail, local hearings would be held prior to the formal PUC hearing in San Francisco.

Director Dave Potter criticized the company via Leonard, calling him "the lieutenant du jour that wanders through this community doing the best you can to defend the corporate decision makers' bottom line."

Also a county supervisor and coastal commissioner, Potter said the company's practices could jeopardize the planned partnership between Cal-Am and the county on a desalination plant in Moss Landing.

"We all know you have a project that you're proposing within Monterey County that is probably going to necessitate a public-private partnership," he said. But Potter is less inclined to work "with somebody who isn't candid and upfront with the community."

Although concerned about a water shortage and drought, director Judi Lehman also opposed the moratorium because it would be out of the district's control and create "a severe black cloud over us for an undetermined amount of time."

But Markey believes a hookup ban is overdue. "This moratorium should have been put into place years ago," she said, and it shouldn't be opposed hastily.

"I don't think we should be adopting a resolution to oppose something before we know what it is," she said. "There's no rush. We should wait and see what Cal-Am is proposing, and then look at it rationally, not based on an emotional reaction."

But the rest of the board remained unconvinced, voting 6-1 to formally oppose Cal-Am's impending application for a moratorium and adding a finding that it could have a negative impact on the Carmel Area Wastewater District/Pebble Beach Community Services District reclamation project.

injured in a 1993 car accident and spends most of his time in a wheelchair. Tacl and another disabled man, Fred Shotz, visited the Monterey Peninsula in June 2002 and filed a series of lawsuits the next spring. At the time, Shotz told The Pine Cone their visit was partly inspired by the activism of Eastwood, who won a big disability-access lawsuit in federal court the year before and who had testified in Congress that the Americans With Disabilities Act should be amended to discourage "scam lawsuits" filed solely to make money. He urged the businesses not to settle.

"If you do, they'll just go after everybody in town, and they'll be back at your door later," Eastwood said.

But Rose, who is still putting the finishing touches on a new $14,000 Carmel stone wheelchair entrance to his candy shop, said he was never given any alternative by his insurance company.

"They told me what the demand was, and the only option I had was to put in a movable ramp with a buzzer, or a permanent ramp, and I was afraid a movable ramp might not be used properly and somebody would slip off, so I decided to make the best of it," Rose said.

With the help of Pacific Grove architect Scott Hall and Michael Mahoney of Mahoney Masonry, Rose was able to install a level walkway that hardly intrudes on the charm of his store. The work was done at the end of last month.

"They certainly did a beautiful job," said Csaba Ajan, owner of the adjacent PortaBella Restaurant, as he admired the new stone walkway and integrated planters, which eliminated the step at the threshold of the Cottage of Sweets. "It looks like it has always been there."

Rose said he paid the full cost of the new walkway, but his insurance company, The Hartford, paid the cash demanded by Tacl and his attorneys.

"I tell all the business owners that the

'I tell all the business owners that the handicapped-access laws are still vague enough that it's hard to know what you have to do. But one thing is sure . . . make sure your insurance covers you for ADA claims.'

handicapped-access laws are still vague enough that it's hard to know what you have to do," Rose said. "But one thing is sure . . . make sure your insurance covers you for ADA claims."

O'Shea wasn't as lucky. She had no insurance coverage to pay the approximately $8,000 it cost to settle Tacl's lawsuit and install a buzzer at the handicapped-accessible entrance to her store (which was the sole access improvement she had to make). But her landlord helped pay the tab.

"There was no way I could afford it otherwise," she said.

Dobronte, who owns two other galleries — one in downtown Carmel at Ocean and Mission and the other at the new Santana Row shopping and residential complex in San Jose — said his settlement cost "between $8,000 and $10,000," most of which came from his insurance carrier, Fireman's Fund.

According to Carmel building officials, other than the Cottage of Sweets, no Carmel businesses have applied for permits to make their businesses more wheelchair friendly as a result of the lawsuits.

But Wilson said the Pine Inn would make changes later this year to meet the terms of the settlement with Tacl.

"We'll be putting in a handrail so it's easier to negotiate the sloped walkway from Lincoln Street," Wilson said. "And we're going to put in a buzzer at the bottom of the ramp off Ocean, so when someone in a wheelchair arrives, they can get help from the front desk."

SUMMER MUSIC

have to worry about school, and the older ones don't have to worry about mundane things like picking up the dry cleaning. They're around others who are interested in the same things, and they can support each other."

It's intensive, of high quality and only for the gifted and hard-working. Children audition for California Summer Music early in the year in New York, San Francisco, Denver, Cleveland and New Haven.

Tuition is $1,300. Room and board adds $1,700 to the cost, although a limited number of scholarships are available.

Stellar participant

One pupil who is in his fourth season with California Summer Music is 14-year-old Jeong-Bo Shim from Corvallis, Ore. The home-schooled violinist just finished his ninth grade studies but, having first picked up the violin at age 3, is already a veteran of performing with the Oregon Symphony.

Shim's talents so impressed the board of California Summer Music, he received a full scholarship funded by Sherrie McCullough, president and co-owner of classical radio station KBOQ, and Kevin Cartwright, local arts patron.

"When I first met the group and then heard the youngsters play, I was totally amazed," said McCullough. "These youngsters aren't just people who come and play because it's an extracurricular activity for them. This is their whole life, their passion in life. This will be their career, and the intensity of their practice and the devotion behind their playing is so obvious."

"For a lack of a better description, I think it's wonderful," said Shim. "First of all, you can focus on music in general. You're encouraged to do that, and it's motivating. Every year, I've enjoyed every single moment."

"There are so many things in this one camp. It's not just a solo or chamber music camp," Shim added. "There's a good amount of chamber music, but it doesn't tie you down. The teachers and coaches I've had each year are different. I think the teachers can't be any better."

Shim plays a 1917 Venetian Siega e Figli violin on loan from the David Kerr Violin Shop in Portland, Ore. One of the pieces he is polishing under Maestro Zaven Melikian's tutelage is the "Chaconne" from "Partita No. 2 in D Minor" by J.S. Bach. He will perform the work during the Carmel Bach Family Concert, which begins at 4 p.m. Saturday, July 24, at Sunset Center.

Carmel Valley pianist

In contrast with veteran CSM participant Shim, Emilie Lygren of Carmel Valley is enjoying her first summer with the program. Lygren, 16, is a pianist who will start her junior year at Carmel High School in the fall. She is the only local in this year's crop of California Summer Music pupils.

"Chamber music is a relatively new experience for me," said Lygren, who has been rehearsing Faure's "Trio in D Minor," a work she characterized as "sounding relatively simple, but it's a hard piece."

"Music is a big part of who I am," she said. "I love Chopin. I like all types of music. I love the Dave Matthews Band. I go to the Monterey Jazz Festival a lot."

Lygren began piano studies at age 4. She played trombone in the concert and jazz bands at Tularcitos and Carmel Middle schools, and now plays piano with the jazz band at Carmel High. Her piano teacher is Bill Riddlespurger of Pacific Grove. Before beginning California Summer Music, she attended the Monterey Jazz Festival Camp the first two weeks of summer break.

"The jazz musicians and classical musicians are different personality types altogether," Lygren asserted. "The classical ones seem to be more intense, but they're all united by their love of music. I like them both."

"I'm kind of straddling everything I do right now," she explained, as poetry, acting, hiking, studying for advanced placement classes "and just talking to people" also consume her summer hours.

"I usually get here around 11:30 a.m. for a lesson or a theory class. I end up going home around 10 p.m., because the master classes and concerts are at night."

Lygren is self-deprecating about her piano achievements and said of California Summer Music, "I was almost positive I wouldn't get in." She has already made friends in camp, although the rest of the year they live far away.

Who can gauge the impact of this musical program? KBOQ President McCullough is certain it is profound.

"I'm very much an advocate of the arts, especially with young people," she said. "I think it's fabulous for them to be concentrating and devoting so much. In the long run, we all benefit from it. They grow up to be culturally motivated, to be good citizens. They're intelligent kids; they're interesting kids; they're phenomenal kids."

MINNIE SHEP-ARD, 3 in September, is one happy Coton de Tuléar, a bicon relative,
having been flown out from Dallas where she was in holding for adoption.
Over 100 people logged on to petfinder.com, where rescued dogs are listed by breeds, hoping to take Minnie home.

But Linda Shepard of Carmel won out over all the adoptive parent hopefuls because she made a convincing case to the rescue people that Carmel-by-the-Sea is a paradise for dogs.

Minnie had never seen the ocean, never felt sand under her paws, never been in an elevator, and never flown in an airplane until Mom Linda came to the rescue. She had never curled up with a sister to catch a few Zzzzs, but now does do regularly with Missie, 4, a black and white longhaired cat. Her other sister, Brandy, a 4-year-old calico, pays no attention to Missie when she tries to induce Brandy to play by wiggling invitingly; Brandy waddles away, hissing to express her disdain. Evidently, there's something between calicos and dogs that is as yet unexplained.

Minnie is described by her mom as having a "dramatic personality." If not socialize, Minnie displays Attitude.

For this reason, Minnie, with training later on, hopes to become a therapy dog at which time she can socialize to her heart's content. Her breed has no dander, so even highly allergic people can pet her and invite her onto their beds or wheelchairs.

As it is, she accompanies Mom
Linda to work at Prudential California Realty in Clocktower Plaza, where she serves well as the office mascot, not yet having learned to file.

RUSSELL

shoot straight.”

Never strayed too far

Shortly after his birth in Albuquerque, N.M., Russell and his family moved to a home west of Salinas in 1964. His father worked for the Salinas Police Department for 13 years before becoming an investigator for the Monterey County District Attorney’s Office.

The second youngest of five children, Russell spent his childhood here and worked locally for UPS and Coca-Cola. “Both were excellent companies and really treated me well,” he said. “But there was something about that black and white driving around that kept my curiosity, and I thought that would be something I could do well.”

He applied in 1989 at the age of 24.

None of his siblings got into law enforcement, except for “getting in trouble with the law — does that count?” he joked.

A year before Russell’s father died in 1991, he was proud to see his son graduate from the academy.

“It was special for me, too, because none in the family had gone into his field,” he said.

Russell intended to seek CHP territory near a big city, but vacancies in Monterey County prompted him stay close to home — a decision he does not regret.

“It’s been a blessing. This is a fantastic place to work,” he said, adding that the Peninsula’s temperate climate allows him to wear a bulletproof vest without suffering heat stroke.

Living “out in the country” in Prunedale where he has room to spread his wings, Russell has no problem commuting to patrol for the residents of Pebble Beach.

“They’re very passionate about their area,” he said. “So it’s nice to be able to serve a community that’s anxious to have things done and to help.”

Felons need not apply

FOR THREE weeks only at the end of the summer, the California Highway Patrol will recruit candidates between the ages of 20 and 35 for the job of CHP officer, which starts at $3,000 a month during the six-month training at the CHP Academy in West Sacramento.

The agency that patrols the state’s highways in the famous black-and-white cruisers accepted applications 12 months a year in the past, but now will consider only those postmarked between Aug. 12 and Sept. 2. Anyone who misses the deadline will have to wait until 2005.

To request an application package, call the Monterey office at (831) 455-4800. For information on the hiring process, eligibility, qualifications, study guides and test sites, visit www.chp.ca.gov/recruiting.

Indulge in Sardine Factory's 'Cannery Row Lounge'

PICTURE A men's club, beautifully appointed, with burgundy leather wing chairs and a handsome green and black couch before a crackling hearth. A masterful ship model of the H.M.S. Victory fills the massive mantelpiece.

Interior designer Charles Gruell certainly worked his refined magic on this beautiful room — which reopened the day after Christmas. Seating 90 guests at small tables, the lounge is divided into areas at different levels to provide intimate spaces conducive to conversation.

Browse the Cannery Row Lounge bill of fare, an homage to John Steinbeck — a compendium of “little dishes” from the “Tortilla Flats” tapas menu to “The Sea of Cortez” chilled seafood selections, Doc Rickett’s favorite bar items, Mack & the boys famous sandwiches, Paisano ultra thin pizza, Steinbeck’s artisanal cheese selection with “Grapes of Wrath,” to Madam Flora’s banana split platter. There are so many appealing items on this lengthy menu, you’ll spend a great deal of time selecting the dishes that call to you. And after you’ve ordered, you’ll wonder what other gems you might have overlooked, and conclude you must come back soon to rectify these unfortunate omissions.

Our party of three agonized over which dishes to order, and finally decided on two each, with several platters, in addition, to be shared.

From the nine-item tapas menu ($6.95 a plate), we ordered Rob’s four-hour braised Kobe beef short ribs with orange-soy barbecue glaze on roasted garlic and chive potatoes. The Kobe beef was falling-off-the-bone tender, and so flavorful and succulent, swooning noises could be heard coming from our table.

Sautéed New Caledonia prawns with basil and olive oil on a grilled polenta cake with smoky tomato coulis was a masterful amalgam of flavors and textures, the prawns fresh, firm and pink, the polenta yummy with garlic and a toast-like texture.

Cornmeal crusted sand dab poppers looked like giant dates on a platter and were filled with smoked mozzarella cheese, which rendered the usually bland fish surprisingly and pleasingly tasty.

Verging into the Paisano ultra thin pizza listings, our group selected the portobella mushroom pizza with caramelized onions and fresh pecorino cheese ($8.95). This was the thinnest pizza crust we have ever seen, and the toppings of sweet caramelized onions and tart pecorino provided a great ying/yang experience.

Under Doc Rickett’s favorite bar items, we chose several plates of “sliders,” mini hamburgers with grilled onions and American cheese ($1.95 each). These little burgers were all freshly made with nicely rounded, glistening buns filled with substantial beef and cheese. They were delicious, and we thought, what fun to bring these along on a harbor-side picnic.

Also from Doc’s bar items, we ordered a grilled Dungeness crab cake ($13.95) with coleslaw, capers and dill on a yellow and red sweet pepper sauce. There are as many styles of crab cakes as there are recipes for coleslaw. This crab cake was loosely made, although it held its high, round appearance nicely. The slaw was delicious, and complemented the crab.

We didn’t order anything from the soup and salads listings ($7.50 to $9.50) because we were more in the mood for tasty trifles, but next time we’ll sample the Cannery Row Lounge’s signature abalone bisque with madeira wine and fresh chives ($9.50).

If you want to cosset yourself, you might order “Seafood Indulgence” served on ice for $17.95. You get chilled Maine lobster, a New Caledonia prawn, an oyster, clams, Pernot-pickled mussels and cracked Dungeness crab with remoulade, mango and cocktail sauce. Cosset-on with La Ida’s girls favorite: Tsar Nicoulai California estate osetra caviar accompanied by traditional water crackers. One ounce is $40, two is a bargain for $65. With a glass of champagne, add $10.

There are so many tempting items on this menu. Which to choose, which to choose? How about a 10 oz. Kobe beef hamburger on a roll or in a lettuce wrap, if you’re counting carbs (they think of everything at The Sardine Factory), with truffle mayonnaise and fries for $13.95.

Or 1 ounce servings of various select cheeses from the cheese cart: three cheeses for $12.95, four cheeses for $14.95, and five cheeses for $16.95.

Whatever selections you choose, you have this fabulous Cannery Row Lounge experience thanks to owners Bert Cutino and Ted Balestreri, always au courant and innovative, and Executive Chef Robert Mancuso and Executive Sous Chef Gaspar Catanzaro for their culinary expertise.

Zydeco makes some peninsula inroads

THE MONTEREY Peninsula has never been (and doubtfully ever will be) mistaken for a mecca for zydeco music. Nevertheless, during the last 12 years, the Cachagua Playboys, a local quintet of eclectic musicians, has managed to expose our little corner of the world to the fun and significance of good old-fashioned Louisiana dance music.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

The popular group's repertoire focuses on the heritage of Southwestern Louisiana and Eastern Texas, borrowing from the vault of such notable New Orleans artists as Professor Longhair, Ernie K-Doe and the Neville Brothers, as well as the bayou-based sounds of Michael Doucet, Clifton Chenier and Hank Williams.

The group, composed of bassist Rick Chelew, drummer John Tallon, fiddler and troubadour Pat Clark, plus Kevin Gould on accordion and Mike Eckstrom on rubboard and guitar, performs this Friday afternoon (July 23) from noon to 1:30 p.m. at Devondorf Park as part of the City of Carmel's Parkfest Concert Series. Bring a blanket and laissez le bon temps roulez.

Del Monte Center's Music Marketplace takes place Wednesday evening's from 5:30 to 8 and features the talents of a wide variety of local musicians. This coming Wednesday, July 28, hard drivin' bop quintet Along Came Betty performs. Formed in 1998 to celebrate the spirit of hard-bop, a seminal movement of '50s and '60s jazz, ACB has released two well-received CDs and is currently in the studio recording their third.

Compositions by pianist and prolific composer Biff Smith blend elements of hard-bop with modern sensibilities. The talented lineup of jazz artists features Smith on piano, Stu Reynolds on saxophones, Pete Lips on bass, Brian Stock on trumpet and flugelhorn and drummer Patrick Tregenza. The following two Wednesdays will feature the Dennis Murphy Trio (Aug. 4), and Big Mama Sue on Aug. 11.

Dennis Murphy, who honed his trade playing with Roger Eddy more than 20 years ago, is a celebrated local bassist who has appeared on more than 30 albums, including Acoustic Alchemy's Grammy-nominated recording, "Arcanum." Murphy has performed at national and international jazz festivals worldwide and plays an extensive variety of music including jazz, Latin, funk, Brazilian and rock 'n' roll.

The annual Seaside Sunday Blues and Art in the Park series continues this week with the appearance of Michael Hill and his Blues Mob. Recognized by Living Blues Magazine as one of modern blues' "most talented songwriters and guitarists," Hill makes his debut Monterey appearance this Sunday, June 25, at Laguna Grande Park. Raised in South Bronx, New York, Hills grew up listening to the music of Jimi Hendrix, Jeff Beck and Cream and was later influenced by blues heroes B.B. King, Albert King and Buddy Guy. He has released four critically acclaimed albums and in the process has created a unique high brand of New York City blues. Concerts take place at the Laguna Grande Park on Canyon Del Rey in Seaside and begin at 1 p.m. A few words from his bio on his website www.ramblinjack.com gives us a glimpse of the man. "A lifelong aspiring cowboy, Ramblin Jack Elliot has rode saddle broncos and bareback horses. He still ropes and hauls around on cow ponies, though after trying to sleep curled under saddle blankets, he's become quite a Land Rover aficionado." As the folk legend recalls, "I was born on a 45,000 acre ranch in the middle of Flatbush." Most of us refer to this particular ranch as Brooklyn, New York." At 14, he left New York City and hitched a rig to Washington, DC where he spied a poster advertising Colonel Jim Eskew's Rodeo. He has been on the road pretty much ever since (hence the moniker) and he has established himself as a legendary American folk musician and icon in the process. As a young man, Ramblin' Jack rambled with another folk legend, Woodie Guthrie, and he in turn inspired the likes of Pete Seeger and a young Bob Dylan. In recent years his popularity has reached mainstream status and in 2003, Elliot earned his first Grammy Award for best folk album.

Next Saturday, July 31, Elliot celebrates his 73rd birthday at a special concert at the Henry Miller Library in Big Sur. Music starts at 3 p.m. For info call 667-2574.

O'Shaughnessy sisters set new suspense novel here

A MAP of the Monterey Peninsula covers the endpapers and liners to this legal suspense hardback novel, "Unlucky in Law," pinpointing areas of Pebble Beach, Carmel and Monterey germane to the plot which incorporates grave robbery, murder, and a trial in which forensic pathology figures prominently.

It's their 10th novel with Nina Reilly as the tough but compassionate attorney-protagonist: Pamela and Mary O'Shaughnessy, sisters who write under the pen name Perri O'Shaughnessy, have brought Nina to the Monterey Peninsula from her fictive South Lake Tahoe home to take on a challenging case. Her client, a two-time felon, is up on charges of grave robbing and possibly homicide.

If you're riveted by trials, you'll love this book because of its verisimilitude — a true page-turner during the scenes in which new forensic evidence throws a revelatory light on the killing.

This fascination with trials has ever been with us, from the 1925 Scopes Monkey trial to the Simpson yearlong cliffhanger in 1994.

As Nina pays close attention to the demeanor of the jurors — just as attorneys do in Lawrence Schiller's bestseller "American Tragedy" — we, the audience, learn to read "tells" that indicate which way the jury members are leaning. And we learn a great deal about forensic pathology, too. But the style of the writing is in no way didactic. We learn by observing.

Another pleasure in reading "Unlucky in Law" is its local setting. The body is found in Monterey's El Encinal Cemetery, close to the apartment of both the victim and the defendant; Nina and her son live in a little, inherited cottage a block above Lovers Point in Pacific Grove; her boyfriend, private investigator Paul van Wagoner, lives in a Carmel condo; and the trial takes place in the Salinas courthouse. Wherever the action, it's familiar turf to us.

This is an extremely well plotted and well written book, and we have come to expect nothing less of the O'Shaughnessys since their explosion onto the writing scene with "Motion to Suppress" in 1995. At that time, they were awarded one of the highest six-figure advances ever garnered by first-time authors, and were honored by the Mystery Writers of America at its 50th anniversary black tie celebration in the New York Public Library. I was present at that ceremony, and was amazed when two young women stepped up to receive accolades for Perri O'Shaughnessy.

How do two sisters write a novel together, when Pamela lives in Hawaii and Mary at Lake Tahoe? E-mail is a marvelous thing. Pamela received her law degree from Harvard, Mary her degree (cum laude) in English literature from UC Santa Barbara. Together they have the tools and talent to write legal suspense novels of very high caliber.

The book was released this month by Delacorte Press, and published by Bantam Dell, a division of Random House, N.Y.C. It retails for $25.

The O'Shaughnessys will appear at a book signing reception at 4 p.m. Saturday, July 24, in the Thunderbird Bookshop's community room in the Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel. Come and chat with Pamela and Mary and have them sign your copy of "Unlucky in Law."

HAROLD E. RAUGH Jr., Ph.D., command historian for the Defense Language Institute and the Presidio of Monterey, will show slides from his new book, "Fort Ord," at 1 p.m. Saturday, July 24, at the library community room, Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St. The lecture and slide show, "The American Military Experience on the Monterey Peninsula," is free, and Dr. Raugh will sign copies of his book at a reception immediately following the presentation. Seating reservations are required and can be requested by calling 646-3949.

The Pilgrim's Way Bookstore, Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues, Carmel-by-the-Sea, will present local author Kathleen Sullivan at a free book signing and discussion of her book, "Recurring Dream Symbols: A Map to Healing Your Past," at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, July 29. Sullivan was interviewed on the television show, "20-20." Free. Call 624-4955 for information.

LOCAL AUTHOR Laurie King is featured in the latest Mystery Readers Journal which highlights religious mysteries. Sample articles and a table of contents can be reviewed and subscription information obtained at www.mysteryreaders.org/issues/relig2.html.

"Se Habla Espanol"

Several top-quality performers anchor 'My Fair Lady'

By AGGIE ASH

ON A starry, balmy evening last weekend, Old Fisherman's Wharf was crowded with families strolling the boardwalk. While cleaning up melting ice cream cones, some people paused at the Wharf Theater to read the playbill. The producer, leaning over the rail of the balcony, took advantage of this marketing opportunity. He called down to them, "The best 'My Fair Lady' EVER."

theater review

Uncounted legendary entertainers could challenge the amiable Angelo DiGirolamo's boast, Julie Andrews, for example. But nobody questioned the spiel. "My Fair Lady," the Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe musical is as close to fail-proof as a Fourth of July parade. Audiences regard it as a silent sing-a-long no matter what's happening on stage.

The Bruce Ariss Wharf Theater production is no exception to this phenomenon. Some scenes are raucously overplayed and big production numbers need more voice but it's still "My Fair Lady."

Director Gina Welch-Hagen appears to have taken the Hippocratic oath before taking on this assignment, promising to, "Do no harm." The Wharf's version of the 1950s classic moves along smoothly, overcoming the limitations of a stage too small for such a large cast and the absence of an orchestra.

Ron Cohen as Prof. Henry Higgins achieves his personal best when he raps out, "I'm an Ordinary Man." He manages the intricate pacing of the number and deftly bridges the trills and musings. He's most amusing when he joins Guy Francis (Colonel Pickering) in a comedic bullfight for a show-stopping number, "The Rain in Spain."

Reprising the role she played at the age of 16 four seasons ago, Erin Helm is Eliza Doolittle. A student at the University of Arizona, she's been one of the Wharf's leading musical stars for nine years. No wonder she takes commanding possession of the stage. However, Helm's interpretation of the street urchin determined to speak English properly so she can work in a flower shop, is too strident. Crouching and striking wide-legged poses, Helm's guttersnipe is more gun toting Annie Oakley than violet vending Eliza. She does have a pleasant, well modulated voice with good range.

Costumes by Tracy Selbacka are imaginative but lacking the opulence required for such blockbuster numbers as "The Ascotte Gavotte," a stylized race track scene originally designed in black and white by Cecil Beaton.

Jeff Whal as Freddy Eynsford-Hill, Eliza's well born but penniless suitor, is a believable lovesick fop but a stronger voice is needed to make the most of "On the Street Where You Live."

Several top quality performances hold the show together. Guy Francis is the archetypical service colonial officer, unfailingly courteous and predictable. Vicki McNamara, as Prof. Higgins' housekeeper, is so efficient and likable you want to jump on stage and ask her if she can come to you on Fridays. Martin Needler is a convincing rogue as Alfred P. Doolittle.

Kathy Cusson (Mrs. Higgins) is outstanding. Without abandoning her matriarchal poise, she alternates caustic lines, delivered to her self-absorbed son, Prof. Higgins, with sympathetic, romantic advice, offered to Eliza.

The chorus and featured singers are well rehearsed by musical director Desma Johnson, adding volume to the lone piano accompaniment.

Even if you don't like chowder in a sourdough bread bowl or a starlit promenade shared with lighthearted vacationers, "My Fair Lady" offers a pleasant night out on Fisherman's Wharf.

tidal pulls on water, drops of rain on the roof, flapping of wings, ripples of a turtle bobbing, gurgles and babbling of the rocky stream. Music, essential nutrients we have processed from nature's sounds and rhythms, returns energy to nature to continue its processes of flow, growth, existence and new life.

Amidst consistently outstanding and uplifting performances, filled to the rafters by ecstatic audiences, moments stand out like the morning glories on the old wood fence in the Carmel yard, among the ivy and bougainvillea.

The Classical Night at the Sunset Center Tuesday featured works by Bach's gifted son Johann Christian Bach, Mozart, Haydn and Beethoven. The Festival Orchestra, all in formal white, was led by the vital, humanely brilliant Elizabeth Wallfisch, whose rapport with the orchestra members and conductor is visible and a joy to behold. Bruno Weil conducted, and as I gazed at him conducting the final piece of the night, Beethoven's "Symphony No. 4 in B Flat Major, Op. 60,"

I thought, "That man is the happiest person on earth." Hunched, his shoulders heaving and arms extended outward in strokes like someone swimming the butterfly, he conveyed an energetic excitement and totally enraptured engagement with the music and the orchestra.

The singular opening notes, startling in their bold simplicity and force, played with strength and delicacy, precision and passion — presented with such detail and space to frame and savor each one that the following chord was put into relief and sounded immense, and the following joining of musical instruments breathtaking. The notes invoked leaves improbably emerging and unfolding, one by one, out of dark wet bark in spring, rain drops becoming a stream — the tension between the solitary moment and the gorgeous abundance of color, texture, as sounds of life gather.

The audience knew it was witnessing something extraordinary. Everyone (in festival cultures, anyway) knows not to clap between the four movements in a symphony, but the cognoscenti in Carmel's audience this night could not restrain themselves and burst into spontaneous applause after the second movement, followed by embarrassed and acknowledging chuckles and murmurs, forgiving themselves this transgression of protocol. We all were so bursting to respond, to give back a sound respecting the achievement of this performance, that at the conclusion of "Allegro ma non troppo," that marvelous bassoon, the pent-up applause was hearty. People in the front and back rows (including my 14-year-old daughter) stood, as Weil returned for another bow with the orchestra; by the third time he was called back by insistent clapping, to bravos and bravos, everyone was standing. People did not want to stop clapping. Mr. Weil, Ms. Wallfisch, and the orchestra members responded to this recognition of their triumph with warm dignity and modesty. But we had seen their true inner nature, into their fire, the brimming gladness, the joyous and almost reckless happiness, the triumph of the spirit that is possible in these days and gives hope to us all for the next moments of our lives. And for the moment, the Beast and Beauty joined in harmony, and we all went home in peace.

Another benefit of having the Bach Fest in town for these weeks is a set of extraordinary educational programs about Bach and music in general. Audiences have access to a faculty of world-class performers, local and international — and for free.

A most ingenious program is the Virginia Best Adams Vocal Master Class — for 21 years a tradition whereby singers from around the world audition for the chance to come to Carmel for these master classes in Baroque style, vocal technique, artistic communication and performing artistry. A full house Monday at the Carmel Presbyterian Church availed itself of one of a set of six opportunities to hear an aria from the inside out. In Monday's session, four singers had public voice lessons.

To most of us, this would seem a scary thing to do. Learning is hard enough without the additional stress of doing it as performance. Even for performers, a public voice lesson is practically unheard of. But it was immediately apparent with the first singer, tenor Nathan Davis, that these singers are professionals and we could all relax and enjoy the process of watching how professionals — already great — learn. They were so at ease with their talent and vocal ambi-

The programs mentioned in this review will be repeated during the final two weeks of the festival, through Aug. 7. Call (831) 624-2046 or visit www.bachfestival.org for tickets.

tion that they were poised and charming in the vulnerable situation of being critiqued by a world-renowned Baroque eminence, the unsurpassed educational director for the festival, David Gordon, and accompanied by the esteemed Melinda Coffey.

The session was practical and focused, both informal and serious, designed to not only showcase talent but to get some work done. Gordon's respect for his colleagues and love for the music itself, the common work they each are devoted to, communicated itself in a dignified and warm ethos.

In the format of the Master Class, the singer prepares a piece and performs it. One by one, from Nathan Davis, to Daniel Bubeck, to Tim Krol, to Emily Sinclair, we saw the development of a piece take place before our eyes. In this day's program, Gordon (the other faculty in this program is Sanford Sylvan) was hearing it, like us, for the first time. He gave feedback, focusing on one aspect of the performance to work on. Then for about half an hour each, they worked together.

What a difference a little change here and there made to something already so outstanding! It made sense why we hear renowned singers always working with a coach, always trying to understand how to excel at the work they are performing.

What could be better than hearing someone with an exceptional voice sing an ambitious piece? To hear it again and again. For sheer enjoyment, the Virginia Best Adams Vocal Master Class is the best deal in town.

ROBBERY

Based on that evidence, a Monterey County Superior Court judge signed an arrest warrant Thursday afternoon, and Melton went to Capitola the following day to find him.

While canvassing the city, Melton said he spied Thranow's vehicle at a car wash and the suspect sitting outside waiting for it. He notified Capitola police and then followed Thranow to the Capitola Mall.

"I did some surveillance on him until I could get some Capitola P.D. units to back me up," he said.

Arrested without incident

They arrested Thranow as he exited the mall, approaching with weapons drawn and taking him into custody without incident, according to Melton.

At the Capitola police station, he said they found 34 diamonds and a ring in Thranow's possession. The suspect waived extradition and was taken to Monterey County Jail, where he is being held on $100,000 bail.

According to Melton, Lee estimated the total recovery at nearly $200,000 and said the loose diamonds had been pried from the rings and necklaces stolen during the robbery of his San Carlos Street store.

"He recognized the stones," Melton said.

While Carmel P.D.'s case had been filed and Thranow has pleaded not guilty to the charges, other agencies are investigating him in connection with additional crimes.

A Monterey County Sheriff's investigator suspects he might be the armed robber who stole two diamond rings from Hesselbein's in the Crossroads April 24, and he may also be linked to two robberies outside the county, Melton said.

Thranow's preliminary hearing is set for July 30.

"With [the I.D.] and the prints and the diamonds in his possession, we think we have a good case," Melton said.

New heights of hypocrisy

IT'S NO surprise that some people will loudly claim to believe something while doing the opposite. But last Sunday's newspapers provided examples of hypocrisy so blatant they deserve to be highlighted.

Now that my beach house is finished

Susan Cantrell's "Personalities" in the Sunday Monterey County Herald don't usually delve into hard news, but the July 18 piece on Pebble Beach activist Janice O'Brien was more than just the usual puff piece about a noteworthy local.

Right from the outset, Cantrell got down to business, observing that O'Brien, who can always be counted on to oppose pretty much anything anybody wants to build in Del Monte Forest, "doesn't buy the maxim that people who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones."

The stone-throwing O'Brien engages in is figurative, Cantrell explained: She is a "rabid political junkie" who has spent more than 20 years using her "loud voice in the forest, speaking out against Pebble Beach development." But the glass house part is literal and figurative. O'Brien lives in an oceanfront home largely made of glass — a house she and her husband built on the same sand dunes, amid the very endangered plants and marring exactly the same scenic viewshed that O'Brien constantly and belligerently demands everybody else protect. As recently as last month, O'Brien insisted the coastal commission not approve a new house on her street for these very reasons.

Doesn't that make her a hypocrite? Cantrell asked — a question that has often been on the minds of Pebble Beach residents who have witnessed O'Brien in action at dozens of public hearings. This, according to the Herald, was O'Brien's answer:

"No! Truthfully, I would like to have seen it [her own property] saved. I don't think anybody should be seen on these sand dunes, including me. I don't find that hypocritical. There was a lot of questioning when S.F.B. Morse opened this tract. Was he sure he wanted to do that? They were all marvelous, pure sand dunes running to the sea . . ."

Huh? She wishes her property had never been built on, because before she got there it was all "marvelous, pure sand dunes." But she went ahead and indulged her whims and bulldozed the place back in 1973, building a comfortable home overlooking Fanshell Beach that she could enjoy through her retirement years. And then, almost as soon as the house was finished, she launched a career trying to make sure nobody else could do the same thing. In her two terms as its president, she even turned the formerly non-partisan Monterey Peninsula chapter of the League of Women Voters into a highly political, left-wing lobbying group to pursue her NIMBY goals. (Strangely enough, the league joined O'Brien in protesting to the coastal commission against the home planned by O'Brien's neighbors.)

We'd like to propose a more honest answer for the next time O'Brien is asked if she's a hypocrite:

"Yes! It is obviously hypocritical for anyone in my situation to oppose development along the coast. But well-heeled, comfortable individuals whose every need has been taken care of by the American free-enterprise system and its guarantees of liberty and self-determination are often the first people to campaign for higher taxes and new government regulations. Just look at Ted Kennedy and practically every celebrity in Hollywood. People who are struggling to pay the bills, buy a home or save for their kids' college educations don't have time to be activists, so it's a good thing we're here, don't you think?"

We'd also love to have heard O'Brien's answer if Cantrell had asked, "When you die, will you direct your heirs to demolish the house, restore the dunes and deed the property to the parks department?"

Next week, part two: "It's wrong to profit from cutting trees — unless you're the New York Times."

Letters to the Editor

The Pine Cone encourages submission of letters which address issues of public importance. The Pine Cone reserves the right to determine which letters are suitable for publication. Letters should not exceed 350 words, and must include the author's name, telephone number and street address. Please do not send us letters which have been submitted to other newspapers.

Proud to have been a reservist Dear Editor,

I kept thinking I'd leave this alone, but after reading so many times that President George Bush was "only a reservist" with the implication that reservists don't really serve their country, I had to jump in. I am roughly the same age as George Bush and John Kerry, and when we were young we faced a military obligation. There were several alternatives:

- Join the Army (a 3-year obligation);
- join the Army Reserve (a 6-year, part-time obligation);
- wait and be drafted (a 2-year obligation and a sure ticket to Vietnam);
- move to Mexico or Canada; or
- refuse the draft (and likely go to prison).

In my opinion, the first two choices made sense and were honorable. Since I was in the formative years of my career and didn't want to disrupt my professional life any more than necessary, I joined the Army Reserve. I spent six months at Fort Ord in basic training and advanced infantry training and five-and-one-half years spending two to three days per month teaching computer programming to members of the military and civilians at the Presidio of San Francisco. I'm proud to say I can remember several people who transitioned from clerical jobs to computer-related careers as a result of the education we worked hard to provide.

When I joined the Army Reserve, I was never told that if I ever ran for President, I'd be considered a draft-dodger. I spent six years in the service of our country and, although I was called up only once, for riot-control duty in San Francisco, the possibility was always present. In addition to the threat of a call-up, being a reservist put a serious crimp in any travel or relocation plans. So, when evaluating Bush vs. Kerry for President, please consider ability, experience and qualifications (or vote the party column if you prefer), but don't buy into the media's characterizations of their respective military careers.

The dangerous world

Dear Editor,

In reference to the letter to the editor, "I don't think you'll print this" (July 16), I am amazed that the writer considers it inappropriate for a "weekly small-town paper" to express an opinion on our invasion of Iraq. I would like to compliment the editor of The Carmel Pine Cone for being an informed observer of not only city and county issues, but intelligent and interested enough to express opinions on the world around us, which happens to be an extremely dangerous place.

It is pathetic that the writer values the love and admiration of feckless Europeans and the ruling elite of the United Nations who despise us because we put an end to their fraudulent acquisition of billions of dollars of Iraq oil money. They were cooperating with the great tyrant Saddam Hussein and against the Iraqi people. Rather treacherous allies. Unlike the writer, I can easily live without their approbation.

Contrary to the ill-informed writer's claims, America has influenced events in the Middle East. Libya has given up its nuclear weapons and capabilities.

Thank you Carmel Pine Cone for taking an interest in matters other than parochial.

Kay Thomas, Carmel

Editor's note: Pine Cone Publisher Paul

Miller was Tel Aviv bureau chief for NBC News from 1981 to 1985, and the experience he gained in that position is sometimes reflected in the newspaper's editorials.

Preservation 'long overdue'

Dear Editor,

Una and Robinson Jeffers' little log cabin on Monte Verde finally received some long overdue attention in the form of Mary Brownfield's article (July 16). Indeed, the cabin sits on the bluff like a deserted bird's nest in the skeleton of an old tree, wrapped by the ivy, shrubs and trees and, more recently, yellow plastic "hazard" tape.

Unfortunately, the preservation it should have received is long overdue and the value of replacement by a new "historically correct" structure is questionable. However much I've treasured driving by the cabin and even carefully winding my way up the treacherous stairway to peek into that wee bit of Jeffers' past, it would never represent Jeffers as does Tor House and Hawk Tower, which are the visual representation of Jeffers, the man and his poetry. The sleeping loft of Tor House is where Jeffers put pen to paper recreating the history of the Big Sur area in his dramatic narrative format and creating a visual portrait in his deeply stirring poetic portrayal of the natural environment.

If any funds are to be used to preserve Jeffers' history, they should go toward the preservation of Tor House, which has been affiliated with the National Trust for Historic Preservation since 1979. This little cottage has never been lived in by anyone other than the poet and his family. The East Wing now houses the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation, which struggles daily to preserve the original buildings, gardens and archives. This foundation is kept alive by a much involved and committed staff headed by president Alex Vardamis, the board members and a core of volunteers.

This is where the heart and soul of Jeffers lie and as a volunteer docent and archivist at the Tor House Foundation, I personally feel this is where the focus should be if funding is available. (I am not representing the foundation in this letter.)

NFL career?

Dear Editor,

Bruno Weil richly deserves the standing ovation he received for Sunday's "St. Matthew Passion," but he also deserves a 21-gun salute for the 44-yard championship field goal he kicked at age 17 for Hoover High School (described in the July 16 Pine Cone). He could have had a great career in the NFL!

Designer obits

Dear Editor,

Sincere thanks and appreciation to The Carmel Pine Cone for continuing to provide us with obituaries which are thorough, thereby honoring the lives of the deceased in a respectful way.

This community service is in sharp contrast to the Monterey Herald, which has enhanced the divide between the "haves" and the "have nots" by limiting community obituaries to seven lines (totally insufficient for any but rudimentary facts), while charging fees, à la classified advertising, for "designer" obits...shame!!!

Fans invited to be part of Laguna's Corkscrew

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TO RAISE money for improvements at the race track, Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca is selling bricks to be laid in the "Steps to the Corkscrew" later this year. A pathway beginning at Turn 10 and culminating in an 80-foot-by-100-foot patio at Laguna's signature corner will be paved with the engraved bricks, which are available in three sizes ranging in price from $150 to $500.

Work on and around the race circuit is constantly needed in order to stay on top of the motorsport scene, address safety issues raised by racing's increasing speeds and accommodate the hundreds of thousands of spectators and participants who flock to the track each year. In response, the nonprofit Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula, which operates the track, established an improvement fund to take donations.

Laguna Seca public relations coordinator Ed Nicholls said the money could help pay for upgraded restrooms and concessions stands, as well as larger aspects of its overall master plan: more pit-row suites and garages, an infield media center, and eventually a museum.

"A lot of history has occurred here, and there are a lot of people who want to help us preserve that," Nicholls said.

The commemorative bricks may be ordered in three sizes: the standard 4-by-8-inch brick for $150, an 8-by-8-inch brick for $250 and a 12-by-12-inch brick for $500. The smallest can accommodate three lines of text — with 15 characters, including spaces, on each line — while the middle brick can fit eight lines and the largest can take 10 lines, or between two and six lines accompanied by a logo.

Installation of the pathway and patio will begin at the end of the 2004 racing season, following the Oct. 15-17 visit of the American Le Mans Series, and should be completed when the season begins anew in 2005.

For more information or to order a brick, call 1-877-4CORKSCREW or visit www.laguna-seca.com. Other races this season include the Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races Aug. 13-15 and the Champ Car Bridgestone Grand Prix Sept. 10-12. For tickets, call (800) 327-SECA.

Water chiefs to speak at breakfast

CAL-AM division general manager Steve Leonard and Monterey Peninsula Water Management District General Manager David Berger will discuss the ever-salient topic of water at a breakfast hosted by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce Aug. 6. The event will run 8 to 9:30 a.m. at the Best Western Monterey Beach Resort at 2600 Sand Dunes Drive off of Highway 1. Attendees will have the opportunity to ask questions following statements from the speakers. Cost is $15 for chamber members and $20 for nonmembers. For reservations, call (831) 648-5356.

"Carmel Legends"

A curious little publication, sort of Readers Digest size, has come into our hands, courtesy of Dr. John Baldwin who squirrels away such treasures. It is simply titled Carmel 1937, and was issued in that year. The ads are fascinating, and the historical notes in its 12 pages prove that the more things change the more they stay the same. Carmel, as a city, was only 35 years old, but already it had acquired the status of a many-faceted legend. Of greatest interest is an 8-page insert (see, nothing is new) which lists the owners and the "cute" names of 850 Carmel cottages. Among them is "Me Too" on Crespi Lane, and "We Too" on Dolores. There are 6 "Casas": Blanca, Contenta, Mia, Antigua, Lobo and del Pinar. "Oaks" are big, going from Oaks to Oak Bower to Oak Thicket to Yea Oaks to O.K. There's a "High Tide" on San Antonio and a "Low Tide" on Scenic. "Wee House" was popular, with one on Bayview and another on San Antonio. There were a lot of "La's" with Casita, Esperanza, Fuente, Paloma, etc. There was "Land Ho" and "Westward Ho" - no "Don Ho." "Sleepy Hollow" on south Monte Verde was quite a ways from "Sleepy Valley" on north Dolores. "Green" was the favorite color, with Gate, Gates, Village, Lantern, Leaf, Lettuce and Dragon. It's reassuring to know that creativity has always been in Carmel.

Plywood prices, down from record highs, start to climb again

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

WALK INTO a local lumber yard and ask for a piece of plywood, and you're likely to be shocked at the price: more than $30 for a sheet, and that's for the cheap stuff.

"One of my customers was almost in tears when I told him what the price would be," said a salesman in Pacific Grove, who didn't want his name in the newspaper. "For people who haven't bought lumber in a few years, it's quite a shock."

Three years ago, a typical piece of plywood, used for the roof and walls of a house, cost about $10. But that was before the housing boom of the past 12 months, fueled by low interest rates. Also, the Pentagon has been buying lots of plywood, steel and other building materials for military construction, and civilian reconstruction, in Iraq.

"The wholesale cost of lumber has moderated in the last 30 days, but we still have a lot of extremely high-priced wood," said Steve Hardy, director of purchasing for Hayward Lumber, which supplies many local contractors and do-it-yourselfers. "We're going to have nearly 2 million housing starts in the U.S. this year, which will be an all-time record, and that's stretching the manufacturers' capabilities to the limits."

Factor in China

Another factor: The Chinese economy is booming, transforming that country into a vast importer of consumer goods and building materials. In the plywood industry, stories have circulated of ships full of logs on their way to this country being suddenly diverted after Chinese companies offered higher prices.

In Oregon, where plywood mills peel thin layers off giant logs, chop the layers into rectangles and then glue them in alternating directions, creating the very strong plywood sheets that hold together most houses in the country, the boom in prices is boosting the local economy after decades of layoffs.

But some contractors are finding that the steep increase in the cost of materials is squeezing their profit margins out of existence.

"If materials go up $10,000, that's not that much in a million-dollar project, but it's a lot in a $200,000 house," said Chris Tescher, a Carmel builder who specialized in custom homes.

"Low interest rates are offsetting the increases in materials for now, but when interest rates go up, a lot of people will start feeling the pinch," said Bert Long, a market analyst for a website that monitors lumber prices. "Of course, that will reduce demand, and help bring lumber prices back down."

According to randomlengths.com, the average price of structural panels (plywood and its substitutes) was $243 for 1,000 square feet in May 2002. In April 2004, that figure had gone to $598. Last month, it was $455.

"Lumber is a market-demand product, just like oil or corn, and it's traded on the commodities markets, and every day is a new deal," said Hardy.

Unique Monterey Peninsula homes

THE BEST HOUSE: Made of stone

START WITH a fourth-generation stonemason whose grandfather came over from Italy to work on Hearst Castle.

Add several hundred tons of cream-colored Santa Rita stone, to be used not only on practically every square inch of the exterior, but much of the interior as well.

Draw up blueprints for a comfortable, modern castle with six bedrooms and five-and-a-half baths; add a sunny two-acre lot in the exclusive Monterra subdivision off Highway 68; toss in an expansive floor plan and every up-to-date convenience you can think of, and pretty soon you'll have not only the best stone house on the Monterey Peninsula, but one of the finest houses — period.

"I've taken some of the grouchiest people in the local real estate community through, and they all say it's the best house they've ever seen," said Doug Steiny of The Mitchell Group, who has the house at 24253 Via Malpaso, Monterey, listed at $5.995 million.

The home was designed and built by developer and hotel owner Jim Schilling for his family — wife Kathy, seven children and 16 grandchildren. They are selling it now to pay for another project, Steiny said.

Outside, the 8,000-square-foot house, with its steeply pitched slate roofs, rounded towers and vast, windowed walls facing the morning sun, looks like a chateau built for a rich vintner in Bordeaux or Champagne.

But the interior is pure California: A great room with rustic, structural beams, a gourmet cook's dream kitchen with granite counters and multiple fireplaces connected to the dining room via two small rock arches, a sitting room with a grand, multi-paned window overlooking the Monterra hills, a master suite with a fireplace in the bedroom — and one in the bathroom! Not to mention his-and-hers sinks and closets, a loft for entertaining or for the kids, a high-ceilinged study just off the entryway, plus an artist's studio/mother-in-law unit with its own full-bath, walk-in closet, fireplace and mini kitchen. There's even a separate, two-bedroom apartment accessible from the upstairs main living space and with its own exterior entrance.

But perhaps the most outstanding feature is the intricate stonework, which Steiny said "takes your breath away" with the "incredible amount of attention to detail that went into the setting of each piece."

For his work on this house, the mason,

Carmel Valley's Jamey DeMaria, won an international award of excellence from the Masonry Contractors Association of American, he added.

To arrange a visit to the fabulous home at 24253 Via Malpaso, called Doug Steiny at (831) 236-7363.

She said she was depressed because she was about to go public with the civil matter with the city. She was also upset she had to pay a dog impound fee Tuesday to CPD. She claimed the dog got loose because of the construction being done at her house. She thanked officers for checking on her. No further problems.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Viscaino resident noticed a female in her back yard using her hose to wet herself. She confronted the subject and asked her what she was doing. The subject told her she was being chased by people who wanted to hurt her. Resident noted the subject was acting strangely and contacted police, who arrived and contacted the subject. She said she had taken unprescribed antidepressants given to her by her mother. She was evaluated and it was determined she did not meet the criteria for a 5150 Welfare & Institutions Code 72-hour hold. A brother was called and gave her a ride home. He was asked to discard the rest of the antidepressants. He said he would.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Responded to Lincoln and Eighth on report of a stolen Fed Ex package. Male stated he was expecting a package on 07-10-04 and when he looked for the package, it was not there. He called Fed Ex and the company confirmed delivery. Fed Ex stated it would be starting an investigation. The package contained personal items with no cash value.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female came to the department to report her son missing. He left for a couple of festivals in Northern California on 06-28-04 and has not contacted his mother. She was able to track him by his ATM card use and the Dolores Street resident felt he was possibly not the one using the card. She then removed money from the account in case someone else was taking it. Inquired with the banks and the Wells Fargo in Eugene, Ore., was able to send a photo of the person using the card. The mother and her husband confirmed the photo was of their son. She decided not to file a formal missing person report unless he does not return by Saturday, when they are leaving the country.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male subject came into the department to report he had been slapped on the face during a road rage incident on Dolores Street. He stated he was stopped outside the American Legion Hall where a man told him it was not a parking spot. An argument ensued and the man came around to the passenger side of the car and slapped him in the face. The driver of the car stated the man came around to the side of the car but he was not sure if the passenger was slapped or not. Units responded to the scene and contacted a work crew. They said words were exchanged, but that was all. No charges desired. All were counseled and agreed to go their separate ways.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Units responded to a report of a semi truck that struck a tree on 13th Avenue, causing the tree to fall onto the truck. Arrived and found the semi intertwined with a large tree. Driver stated he was east-bound on 13th when a bus was coming the other way. He moved to the right to allow the bus to pass and the trailer got stuck on the tree. He backed up and the cab of the truck caught the tree, causing it to fall. Forestry was called and responded quickly to remove the fallen tree and untangle it from the truck. Only very minor damage was caused to the truck's cab.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine 7111 responded to a reported fire alarm activation at San Antonio and 13th Avenue. Cause of activation was found to be from construction workers cutting tile and the dust activating the alarm system. The alarm was reset and the owner advised to temporarily cover the detectors when creating dusty conditions.
