FEDERAL OFFICIALS TO ATTEND RIPPLING RIVER SHOWDOWN

By PAUL MILLER

AGGRIEVED RESIDENTS of a low-income housing project in Carmel Valley, who freely allege a conspiracy on the part of county housing officials to throw them out on the streets, will have a chance to air their grievances in front of an official with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Monday.

Nancy Flores, an operations specialist with HUD's San Francisco office, told The Pine Cone she would attend a meeting of the Housing Authority of the County of Monterey at Rippling River Aug. 9 at 1 p.m., "to hear the concerns of residents and the community." And she's likely to get a major earful.

'Get rid of the cripples — that's what the county's trying to do. They want to throw us out on the curb.'

"Somebody needs to find out why the county housing authority is trying make us leave so they can tear this place down," said 43-year-old Merri Bilek, a double amputee who has lived at Rippling River a decade.

"I swear on a mountain of Bibles that I'll have to be taken away in handcuffs," said another wheelchair-

Steelhead babies saved by treated sewage

By MARY BROWNFIELD

LOW WATER levels, dangerously high temperatures and dying baby steelhead demanded a quick remedy last week, leading the Carmel Area Wastewater District to implement a plan it has been pushing for years.

The lagoon shrank earlier than usual this year due to warm weather, less rain and — according to some vocal critics — because state parks has been excavating for a habitat restoration project nearby. Regardless of the cause, CAWD came to the rescue and spent three days pumping four million gallons of treated wastewater from its sewage plant into the wetland, allowing the water level to rise and the temperature to fall. This was the first time state regulators have allowed CAWD to augment water in the lagoon.

After state parks told CAWD there was enough water in the lagoon July 27, the district began pumping it back to Pebble Beach to water golf courses and open space. But very soon the level in the lagoon began to decline again and temperatures rose. Salinity increased and a lack of dissolved oxygen in the water forced steelhead to the surface, where they became easy pickings for birds, according to Monterey Peninsula Water Management District senior fisheries biologist Dave Dettman. So on Thursday, CAWD again diverted the water to the riverbed and planned to pump Carmel Area Wastewater District diverted millions of gallons of treated effluent to a dry riverbed for a few hours Thursday to boost water levels in the lagoon. Thousands of endangered steelhead trout had been stranded in overheated and under-oxygenated pools.

Who will own the first Ferrari?

By MARY BROWNFIELD

"IT'S NOT just another car — it's a piece of history."

That's how Gordon McCall, specialist for Christie's International Motor Cars' West Coast department, describes the 1947 Ferrari 166 Spider Corsa two-seater to be auctioned Thursday night.

The description could hardly be more apt. The small red car, with its hot-dog shape, spoked wheels and narrow fenders, is the first Ferrari ever sold to a customer.

"When people look at the Enzo or the Modena [modern Ferrari models], it all started with this car," he said. "There's that sense of reverence."

Built soon after Enzo Ferrari opened his new workshop in Maranello, Italy, the Ferrari bears matching engine and chassis numbers: 002-C.

"I read that Enzo had a thing about odd numbers, and that was the reason" for the car not bearing number 001-C, McCall explained.

The 166 in its name refers to the capacity of each of the cylinders in the V-12 engine that became a hallmark of the revered Italian marque.

According to Christie's, Enzo Ferrari once remarked he "had always liked the song of 12 cylinders. That 12-cylinder was the ancestor of all Ferrari engines. All we wanted to do was build a conventional engine, but one that would be outstanding."

The car's first owner, an Italian aristocrat and "gentleman racer" named

New curriculum chief: 'Our students should be breaking through the top'

By PAUL MILLER

WITH PARENTS, faculty and administrators concerned about low test scores at the middle and high schools — and with another round of state test results set to be announced in the next few days — the new head of curriculum for the Carmel Unified School District is going to need every bit of her 30 years of experience in public education to get the schools back to a top statewide ranking, which is where everybody agrees they should be.

On her very first day on the job, Mary Bull said she knew what her first step should be.

"We have to make sure our instruction is aligned with the state standards," she said. "Our students should be breaking through the top in learning and on standardized tests, but if we're not teaching what the state says we should be teaching, it's easy for even very bright kids to not do well on the tests."

Two months ago, school district officials learned that an April 2003 test administered to students throughout

All vehicles owned by the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea are being serviced and maintained by Monterey city employees in their Ryan Ranch corporation yard, now that Carmel's own vehicle maintenance supervisor job has been eliminated.

City of Monterey to repair Carmel's vehicles

By MARY BROWNFIELD

EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY, Carmel city vehicles will be maintained and repaired by Monterey city employees at a shop in Ryan Ranch, the Carmel City Council decided without discussion Tuesday.

Retroactive to July 1 and ending June 30, 2005, the City of Monterey's Ryan Ranch shop replaces the vehicle maintenance supervisor eliminated in the 2004/2005 budget adopted by the council in June. The agreement can be renewed annually.

"Having a large-scale facility near our city makes for a convenient and functional way to have our city's fleet maintained," city administrator Rich Guillen wrote in his staff report to the council. The City of Monterey maintains Del Rey Oaks' vehicles and is being considered for the same services by the California Department of Parks and Recreation.

According to the agreement, maintenance and repair will be provided at a rate of $68 per hour for labor, with parts billed at actual cost plus 15 percent. A 2 percent surcharge added to each work order will cover waste disposal, small parts or spray lubricants.

Estimates for repairs in excess of $500 will be provided in advance of work, and "Monterey reserves the right to prioritize and decline work in the event of scheduling conflicts, emergencies or lack of expertise in a given area," the agreement reads.

Maintenance will be performed every 3,000 miles or 100-hour intervals unless otherwise specified by Carmel, and Carmel personnel will be responsible for delivery and pickup to the corporation yard.

Included are two fire engines and a ladder truck, six police cars, the city's lone street sweeper and assorted public works and maintenance vehicles.

Provided there are no major breakdowns, the agreement should keep vehicle maintenance costs within the $20,500 earmarked in the 2004/2005 budget, according to Guillen.

"Thus far, the 30-day trial of having the City of Monterey maintain our vehicles has been well received by staff and seems very operable," he concluded.

C.V. teen dies in car crash

A 16-YEAR-OLD Poppy Road resident was killed just before 7 p.m. Wednesday when he ran the 1994 Acura Integra he was driving off of Carmel Valley Road just east of Tassajara Road, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Entering a left-hand curve in the road, Arieh Perlowitz Abend applied the brakes but was driving too fast to make the corner. The car went through a barbed wire fence and rolled down an embankment on the south side of the road. He was not wearing a seat belt, was partially ejected from the car and died at the scene, the CHP reported.

His passengers, a 19 year old from Carmel Valley and another 16 year old from Carmel, were wearing seat belts and escaped injury. Alcohol was found inside and around the car, but only tests conducted by the coroner's office will reveal if the driver had been drinking.

Water needs to be based on build-out, committee says

■ Carmel share: 128 or 405?

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District board of directors should use the 20-year build-out called for in the cities' and county's general plans to calculate how much water the community needs — a figure that could be the target for a new water project — the district's technical advisory committee decided Tuesday.

With four of its eight members present, the committee briefly discussed the method before unanimously voting to support it.

Monterey City Planner Chip Rerig reiterated his city council's reservations — that having a "huge pie-in-the-sky number" based on build-out could threaten the approval of a water project — but said Monterey would go with the committee majority's recommendation.

Pacific Grove member Doug Rick, Sand City representative Steve Matarazzo, City of Seaside member Diana Ingersoll and Rerig agreed the general plans, which have been certified and adopted by their jurisdictions, would provide the best means of calculating future water needs.

Cal-Am Water Co., which is proposing a desalination plant in Moss Landing, is legally obligated to replace 10,730 acre-feet of water being pumped from Carmel River, but is being pressured by many in the community to provide more for future needs.

In presentations earlier this year, Cal-Am estimated the Moss Landing plant would produce 20,272 acre-feet per year, including 3,572 acre-feet to supply growth called for in the 20-year general plans of the six Peninsula cities, county areas within MPWMD boundaries and the Monterey Peninsula Airport District. It listed Carmel-by-the-Sea's share at 405 acre-feet.

That calculation was too high, according to Carmel City Planner Sean Conroy, because it was based on 11 residential units per acre for several hundred acres identified in Carmel's old general plan. He updated the figures after the city council decided June 8 to support using the current general plan for estimating future water needs.

"We did research on how many lots are available," he told The Pine Cone. "The number came down to 16 acres instead of hundreds," including acreage that would be used for commercial development. His rough estimate for Carmel's build-out water needs: 128-acre feet per year.

The Carmel Planning Commission will discuss his figures Aug. 11, after which they will be turned over to the water district.

A 1964 Volkswagen Beetle caught fire in The Crossroads parking lot last week, but the crew from the firehouse up the street had it out in minutes.

Bug alights in Crossroads parking lot

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE FUEL filter on a 1964 Volkswagen Bug failed, causing the engine fire that gutted the car in the parking lot of The Crossroads Shopping Village last Wednesday afternoon, according to Cypress Fire Engineer Dennis Hartshorn.

"The driver smelled smoke, saw flames and got out," he said. A passerby tried to douse it with a fire extinguisher while the driver called 911, but the fire was beyond their control.

The Monterey resident, who works at Longs, had only driven her car the distance of a few parking spaces when she smelled the smoke and then leapt out as the car caught fire.

Overheating or a break in the fuel line can quickly lead to an engine fire as heat, especially if the motor, and therefore the fuel pump, are still running, according to Hartshorn.

"By the time she shut it off, it was too late," he said. "I'm glad it didn't happen on the highway."

The crew on the engine from the nearby Rio Road fire station used a highly concentrated detergent foam to extinguish the fire.

"It's like Dawn, only 1,000 times over," he explained. "It's also earth friendly so it goes into a storm drain, that's fine."

But rather than wash down the street, firefighters threw dirt down to absorb the fluid and then cleaned it up.

While the paint and upholstery were torched, Hartshorn said the frame and the engine are salvageable.

Before the fire, the woman's husband was going to fix up the classic Beetle for her, Hartshorn said. Now, he has a much bigger job on his hands.

Cal-Am gets another earful on moratorium application

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CAL-AM Water Co. should ask the California Public Utilities Commission to back off its push for a moratorium on new hookups and expansions, speakers at a public hearing said Wednesday night. But if the PUC insists on forcing Cal-Am to apply for a moratorium in exchange for the emergency rate hike it granted, it should use Monterey Peninsula Water Management District rules as the criteria.

Those rules say the MPWMD may impose a moratorium in Stage 5 of its seven-stage conservation and rationing plan, when water supplies drop due to a true drought, not a regulatory state-imposed shortage as the company is facing now.

Cal-Am called the hearing to solicit comments and advice on the ban. Not a single citizen or public official spoke in favor of a moratorium Aug. 4, and only one spoke in favor at the last public hearing. Although Cal-Am General Manager Steve Leonard initially said a moratorium would last until a new water supply comes online, he admitted Wednesday the PUC did not order that specifically.

"The PUC did not dictate to us what shape a moratorium should take, whom it should apply to, the conditions or how long it should stay in effect," Leonard said.

He planned to relay public comments to the PUC and the Cal-Am board of directors, particularly those suggesting what kind of moratorium would help conservation but minimize financial hardship on people.

The proposal will be brought back for another public discussion next month, Leonard said. According to the PUC ruling, the application must be filed by Oct. 13.

"We weren't given a choice in this matter," he said. "This agency regulates our very existence."

Representing their respective city councils, Monterey Mayor Dan Albert, Sand City Mayor David Pendergrass and Seaside City Councilman Steve Bloomer opposed any moratorium because it would bring affordable housing and business expansion to a standstill, damage the economy and even endanger the Defense Language Institute's plans to meet increased national defense needs. They also challenged Cal-Am to reduce leakage from its system before cutting off new supplies to customers.

Water board chair Alvin Edwards and new water district general manager David Berger reiterated the board's opposition. Edwards said only the water district should impose a moratorium and proposed district rules be changed so it can ban new connections during a regulatory water shortage rather than solely in a supply shortage.

Representing the Cannery Row Co., Alex Hubbard suggested that if Cal-Am proceeds with its application, the ban should not apply to property owners with meters in place.

"It would be clearly defined and easily enforced," he said. "Do not deprive property owners who have paid their monthly charges."

Attorney Tom Jamison suggested Cal-Am ask the PUC to waive the requirement, now that Peninsula water users cut back enough in July to begin August on target to meet the state-imposed limit when the water year ends Sept. 30.

But if the application goes forward, the ban should be triggered by the standards in the water district's Ordinance 92, he said. According to that rule, Stage 5 rationing and conservation kick in if total storage on May 1 is less than 24,750 acre-feet and greater than 17,720 acre-feet, or if short supplies threaten public health and safety.

On Oct. 1 following implementation of Stage 5, "the district shall suspend the issuance of water permits associated with an intensification in use. This provision shall not suspend the issuance of water permits that utilize public or private water credits or where issuance of a permit is required by prior agreement of the district," according to the rule.

Others agreed projects using water credits should be exempt from any hookup ban.

Pebble Beach Co. Executive Vice President Mark Stilwell said the proposed moratorium could not affect the company's water entitlements, which have been recognized by the court and are being sold to fund the expansion of a project to irrigate golf courses and open space solely with treated wastewater. Currently, they use 675 acre-feet of reclaimed water and 275 acre-feet of drinking water each year.

"That project is very far along in planning," he said. "If the moratorium did affect our entitlement, it would preclude this project from going forward."

And since the call to conserve went out, Pebble Beach courses reduced their potable water use by an additional 30 percent last month.

Pendergrass, who also represents the mayors of the six Peninsula cities on the district board, said all of them oppose the moratorium. He accused Cal-Am of asking for the ban because it was mentioned in the rate-hike application.

"The PUC just followed your request," he said.

Monterey resident Ray Worrel added that when he asked PUC members for the logic behind the moratorium, they said they were going along with Cal-Am's request.

California American Water wants to hear from you.

In spite of our history of using less water here on the Peninsula than anywhere in the state, Monterey Peninsula water customers are consuming more water than allowed by state regulations. State Water Resources Control Board Order #95-10 limits our withdrawal to no more than 11,285 acre-feet, and we are exceeding our state allotment by approximately five million gallons (year-to-date). On July 8, the California Public Utilities Commission approved a conservation measure to increase rates on our highest volume customers in order to reduce water use. As part of that ruling, the California Public Utilities Commission also required our company to "file an application for authority to implement a moratorium on new hookups and expansions" (California Public Utilities Commission Decision 04-07-035).

Before we draft the moratorium application, we would like to hear from our customers.

We want to emphasize that there is currently no moratorium proposal or application. There has been no decision made by California American Water on what might trigger a moratorium, who might be affected, or how it might be implemented. We will draft an application in accordance with California Public Utilities Commission requirements, but only after receiving input from the public and taking fair and equitable consideration of our customers' concerns. The California Public Utilities Commission would then receive input through their own process for public participation before adopting or rejecting any proposed moratorium.

Keep up the good work conserving water.

COUNCIL HIRES REALTOR TO HELP MARKET FLANDERS

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MITCHELL Group will search for a buyer for Flanders Mansion — the 15-room, 5,560-square-foot, 79-year-old historic home on Hatton Road — if the city decides to sell it, the Carmel City Council decided unanimously Tuesday evening.

The real estate agency was among three to pitch the city's "Request for Proposal for a realtor to market Flanders Mansion in the Mission Trail Preserve." City administrator Rich Guillen sent the RFP to six companies.

"I looked at firms in the business of selling high-end properties," he told the council, considering Flanders is expected to fetch between $4.5 million and $5.5 million. "You won't find a firm that's expert in selling public property, because it doesn't happen often. But if Flanders is sold as a house, these are the firms you want. I definitely wanted to stay with realtors who are very familiar with the Carmel market."

According to a rating system used by Guillen — who enlisted the help of attorney Marv Silverman and Bruno's Market owner Fermin Sanchez in evaluating the applicants — the companies were scored on their "demonstrated ability" to market a building like Flanders, utilize standard real estate practices and use creative marketing, as well as requested compensation, and expertise.

The Mitchell Group scored highest, closely followed by Alain Pinel. Coldwell Banker, the firm that initially evaluated the potential sale of Flanders Mansion almost four years ago, was third.

Bill Mitchell attended the meeting and discussed his agency's plans and abilities, while principals from the two other firms did not attend.

Although the RFP described the scope of work as "to guide potential bidders for the property in developing a proposal" and provide information to be "used by the city in evaluating individual proposals," Guillen said many steps would be taken before the mansion could be put on the market.

"The Mitchell Group will determine the best process for us to get the most out of a city asset if we move forward," he explained. "There are still many hearings to take place."

Don Freeman said the chosen firm

"They don't really know how to solve our problem," he said. "They think we've had it for more than 20 years and haven't really gotten our act together."

After the meeting, Leonard said Cal-Am mentioned the moratorium in its rate hike application because it planned seek a temporary ban through October to help cut use immediately.

"Our intent was to meet the target."

To speed the application for rate hikes through the process, the ban was to be applied for separately, he said.

But after a meeting with the PUC's Office of Ratepayer Advocates, the demand for a moratorium application appeared in the PUC's order granting the rate hikes.

"We've created a process that we are now in, and we need to respond to our chief regulator," he told The Pine Cone.

With so much uncertainty, Leonard said early on that it would last until a new water supply is brought online. He said he should have sought input from others on the scope of a moratorium during a study session, but Wednesday's meeting was a step in the right direction.

Monterey Bay fishermen win battle, but may lose war

By PAUL MILLER

THE FISHERMEN, with their weathered faces, well-worn clothing, colorful accents and no-nonsense ideals, may have seemed out of place amid the somber surroundings of the Board of Supervisors' chamber Tuesday morning, where a hearing would help determine whether a new layer of regulations would be added to fishing operations in Monterey Bay.

And they surely appeared to be outmatched by the polished appearances of environmental advocates at the same hearing, whose presentations were replete with calls for a "collaborative, stakeholder-driven process" to deal with "fishing-related ecosystem issues."

But in the end, the fisherman won a unanimous vote from supervisors, who asked the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary not to begin regulating fishing in the vast sanctuary that was created in 1992.

"When the sanctuary was proposed, they needed the support of the fishing community to get it through, so they promised they would not regulate fishing," said David Crabbe, who owns a squid boat that operates out of Monterey Harbor. "Now, 12 years later, all of a sudden they want to regulate fishing."

"A promise is a promise and it must be kept," said Donna Oliveira, chair of the county's economic development commission. "It's an issue of honesty and integrity."

"There are a lot of us committed to a sustainable fishery,

Although the city's economy relies mostly on tourism, Monterey harbor is still home to numerous commercial fishing boats.

and all it takes is a little patience to see the fish come back," said Chris Sajak, who said he was a hook and line fisherman. "Unfortunately, patience is a word that's not in the vocabulary of some of the people calling for 'no fishing' zones."

Right to issue new rules?

The fishermen and their advocates came to the hearing armed with quotes from Sam Farr and Leon Panetta, who were both instrumental in creating the MBNBS, testifying to the "no new rules" pledge made to the fishing community when the sanctuary was approved by congress.

And fishing in Monterey Bay is already tightly regulated by the California Department of Fish and Game, several fishermen observed.

But Rachel Saunders, community and public relations coordinator for the sanctuary, said the 1992 promise only applied to "traditional fisheries management," such as setting quotas and issuing permits. The sanctuary has the right to issue new rules "whenever fishing activities are resulting in injury to sanctuary resources," she said. In 2001, the sanctuary staff began work on a new management plan which led to discussion of possible "no take" zones in Monterey Bay.

Sarah Newberg of the Ocean Conservancy said her group was participating in the management plan update, "sitting at the table, participating in a collaborative, stakeholder-driven process" while some opponents of new rules were simply trying to "blow up the table."

"These people only want to be involved if they can pre-determine the outcome," said Steve Shimek, director of The Otter Project.

But supervisors unanimously sided with the fishermen. "Why is the fishing community so fearful [of the sanctuary bureaucracy]?" asked Edith Johnsen "We have to give bound resident, Chris Sauer.

RIPPLING RIVER

Their desperate comments don't reflect the intentions of federal or county housing officials, said Flores. "Our mission is to provide these people with safe and sanitary housing."

Water damage has rotted the beams holding up balconies at Rippling River, requiring shoring to keep them from collapsing.

"Our number-one priority is the quality of life of the people who live at Rippling River," echoed Jim Nakashima, executive director of the Housing Authority. He appeared at a hearing Tuesday of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors

The Monday showdown comes after a double whammy that fed conspiracy theories in the Rippling River project, which is on the outskirts of Carmel Valley Village.

Formerly a resort motel, the complex has fallen into disrepair — intentionally, residents allege — leading the housing authority to declare in 2001 that it must be replaced. Last year, they said the requirements of handicapped accessibility laws alone made it financially infeasible to repair Rippling River.

"They said it would cost $9 million to $10 million to upgrade the kitchens and bathrooms, which is more than the cost of a new facility," Clark said.

But an attorney who specializes in ADA access issues, Dan De Vries, who just opened his own firm in San Juan Bautista, said the ADA access requirements were exaggerated.

"These private residences are not public accommodations, so without some kind of 'triggering event' there is no requirement that everything be upgraded," De Vries said. He is donating his time to the Rippling River cause, "because I want to help these people keep their homes," he added.

So is a well-known ADA consultant, Kim Blackseth, who testified in federal court on behalf of Clint Eastwood when the former Carmel mayor was sued — unsuccessfully — over alleged ADA access deficiencies at his hotel, Mission Ranch.

According to Blackseth's evaluation of Rippling River, "the California Building Code and the Americans with Disabilities Act were used improperly to survey the property."

These laws, requiring extensive wheelchair ramps and other features, were enacted after Rippling River was built, Blackseth said. "It is not appropriate to measure [handicapped] access with standards that do not apply," he concluded.

"Blackseth's report has certainly called into question a lot of the previous reasons given for this facility to be torn down," De Vries said.

"HUD got wind of this whole thing, and they said they'd like to attend a hearing on it, but one week before the hearing, [the housing authority] came up with this insurance thing," Clark said. "It makes everybody suspicious."

She was referring to a July 26 announcement that insurance at Rippling River might be canceled because the property is so dilapidated.

"Residents may have to relocate in 90 to 120 days," said a statement from the housing authority, which blamed the county for failing to "fast track" a solution to the Rippling River problem. "If relocation is required, the leadership of the housing authority is committed to finding all assistance and all alternatives available for the Rippling River residents," the statement said.

"There is no place for me to go, because every place has a 55 age limit," responded Bilek.

"Part of their goal is to reduce the population by attrition," Marquette said. "We had two people go to the hospital just while we were in Salinas for the supervisors meeting."

"I am familiar with all the issues at Rippling River, but our office is still in a fact-finding mode, so it's premature for me to come to conclusions," HUD official Flores said. Her department, using federal tax dollars, funds most of the housing programs in Monterey County and has an obligation not to waste taxpayers' money. But "we'll be working closely with Nakashima and with supervisor Dave Potter to ensure the safety of the residents of Rippling River," she said.

Park district fee passes, will help open Palo Corona Ranch

By PAUL MILLER

AS PARK district officials celebrated approval of a $19-per-parcel annual fee in a special mail-in election conducted over the last two months, they said one of the first uses for the expected $800,000 annual revenue would be to open Palo Corona Ranch to the public.

"We want to use the funding to assist us in getting the ranch ready for public access as quickly as possible," said Joe Donofrio, general manager of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Part District, which purchased a 680-acre portion of the huge property, also known as Fish Ranch, from the Big Sur Land Trust for $12.2 million in April. "We hope to open it next spring, but we need to put in trails and signage and that sort of thing."

The vote on the special fee, announced Aug. 2 at a meeting of the park district board of directors, was 7,682 in favor (55.37 percent) and 5,100 against. The balloting was limited to landowners and was weighted, which meant owners of larger parcels got more votes because they would pay larger assessments.

"We're very appreciative of the support we got from property owners here on the Peninsula and their willingness to invest in the park district to further accomplish our preservation goals," Donofrio said.

Pebble Beach Co. votes 'yes

A spokesman for the Pebble Beach Co., the Peninsula's largest private landowner, confirmed the company cast all its ballots in favor of the measure.

"We've been very supportive of the park district's goals," said Mark Verbonich.

A company v.p., Mark Stilwell, said the P.B. Co. was allotted about 30 ballots in the election and cast all of them "Yes." It's annual assessment will be between $3,000 and $4,000, Stilwell said.

After the tally was announced Monday night, the park district board voted to make the assessment effective as of July 1, which means it will start showing up on property tax statements later this year.

"Our children and future generations will appreciate the collective vision and wisdom current residents have shown in making this valuable investment in our local natural resources," said Ben Post, park district board president.

Twenty-six local parks and open spaces are owned or maintained by the MPRPD.

Performance Carmel lineup unveiled

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SUNSET CENTER general manager Tom Bacchetti announced the 12th season of Performance Carmel this week. Running Oct. 3 through May 1, 2005, the lineup includes political satire, acrobatics, a three-part "A Capella Extravaganza" and two radically different dance performances.

"We open the series with Capitol Steps, which couldn't be more perfect for the political season," Bacchetti said. A group of congressional staffers turned comedians, the traveling satirists "ought to be armed with all sorts of good material," when they appear in Sunset Center Oct. 3.

SoVoSó and The Bobs are double-billed in the first a capella show Nov. 5, with South African vocalists Ladysmith Black Mambazo and Vusi Mahlasela appearing Feb. 8, 2005, and The Swingle Singers — a group of out-of-work back-up vocalists who banded together 40 years ago — arriving for the third part of the "A Capella Extravaganza" March 23.

In the interim, the spellbinding National Acrobats of Taiwan will perform Jan. 27, 2005, and the 21 dancers of the critically acclaimed Hubbard Street Dance Chicago will appear Feb. 16, 2005. The series ends with Pilobolus, described as "an inexplicable tangle of human limbs and torsos arranged as a gravity defying sculpture," ending the series May 1, 2005.

The planned opener, The Suzanne Farrell Ballet, canceled its show after the brochure, due to drop from the mail house Friday, had gone to print, according to Bacchetti.

He said the series perfectly meets the desire to schedule "the kinds of things you want to offer the people of Carmel that aren't already being offered.

"I think it's a dynamite season, and people should rush to get tickets," he said.

about six hours before returning the flow to Pebble Beach. This fluctuating situation highlights the need for a stable and permanent solution to protect the fish, Dettman said.

Long-term solution

As excavation by state parks continued at the south side of the Carmel River, and as Carmel River Steelhead Association member Roy Thomas complained that the work was endangering fish, CAWD General Ray von Dohren sent a letter July 16 to the Regional Water Quality Control Board seeking permission to discharge treated wastewater on dry land near the lagoon whenever it was not needed for golf course irrigation.

"We had talked about putting effluent into the wetlands area way before the parks department started talking about rehabilitating it," von Dohren said.

Thomas also approached CAWD a year ago to see if the treated water, available whenever the P.B. golf courses were being flushed with potable water, could be used to refresh the lagoon.

While discharging directly into the water of the lagoon is illegal, von Dohren said, treated wastewater can be used to recharge dry land nearby. "We were very interested in creating wetland area with effluent, because it's done in a lot of places. But the guy who shot that down was [former environmental health director] Walter Wong, and it never went anywhere."

That changed July 23, when a letter from RWQCB Executive Officer Roger Briggs authorized CAWD to discharge "disinfected tertiary recycled water" that would filter into the lagoon. Two days later, CAWD began using two portable pumps to send millions of gallons of water into the wetlands.

"Things were critical," when the lagoon level dropped, von Dohren said. "I guess everybody just recognized how valuable that water could be."

"As a result of their releases onto the ground, the lagoon came up from 2.5 feet up to 3.3 feet over the two-day period they did the release," Dettman said. This week, the temperatures remained below their former levels, which he attributed to CAWD and fog.

"Temperatures had gotten up to 78 degrees and as much as 80 degrees," Dettman said. While lagoon steelhead might be more tolerant than fish living in cooler areas, they can only survive in water that warm for six to 12 hours.

"Ideal would be low 60s at this time of year," Dettman said. "Sixty-five would be nice."

Von Dohren was surprised at the quick results.

"It worked better than we expected, because I didn't think we would have that immediate of an impact. It was apparent from the get-go . . . pretty dramatic."

But the new solution is intermittent.

Three-pronged defense

Thomas, whose steelhead association has repeatedly asked the regional board to let CAWD discharge to the lagoon, said the levels at the river mouth have been "the lowest on record" and feared for the welfare of the 8,000 fish his group had rescued from areas upriver and freed in the lagoon, as well as those already living there.

He charges that the $2.3 million state parks project — to restore the former Odello artichoke fields to riparian habitat while offering better flood protection for nearby houses — sucked water by percolation into the newly excavated land.

"They dug a bunch of deep spots which immediately filled with water," he said. "The fish were languishing, being eaten by herons and egrets."

Thomas said the CRSA rang alarm bells but was "ignored for the first two weeks" by state and local agency officials who told him the decline was typical in the summer.

State parks spokesman Dave Schaechtele disagreed that his agency is to blame and said dry weather and little rain are the culprits.

"The GIS [Geographic Information System] showed the excavation area is at a higher elevation than the lagoon area," he said. "Since water flows downhill, it would be unlikely that the laws of physics changed" to make it percolate up.

But state parks developed a backup plan not only using discharge from the CAWD system, but tapping into an old Caltrans well and pumping water from the excavation ditches.

With the first option available only occasionally, the second needing pipelines and additional equipment to oxygenate it and the third requiring oxygenation, filtration and nighttime pumping to ensure the water is cool enough, none of them is perfect.

He insisted that numerous agencies came together quickly to solve the problem.

"You can't just react to one concern and overreact and then find out you have endangered another species," he said. "There's been a tremendous amount of work and coordination to really find a balance between the regulations already in place. There has to be constant monitoring."

Part of that balance involved keeping the treated water out of a nearby pond believed to contain red-legged frog tadpoles, though von Dohren later said a NOAA Fisheries official doubted their presence and said the focus should be on the fish.

Schaechtele said the water supplies weren't initially considered in the lagoon restoration project, "because nobody anticipated the unusually low levels this year."

Dettman said state parks' digging might have had some impact, but the overall water level decline occurred earlier this year than it has in the last 12.

"The restoration project seems to be going well. They are going to greatly expand the riparian zone and surface water of the lagoon, but the entire system is constrained every year by lack of flow," Dettman said. "Any program to increase water volume during the summer dry periods is a very good thing, provided it's of suitable quality."

Thomas was gratified to see the treated wastewater augmenting the lagoon, but said, "We really want it to be a bonus, not a savior."

He said the lagoon's inhabitants are susceptible to illness, depredation and death every summer.

"We rescue a lot of fish," he said. "We know how much heat they can take, and lack of oxygen makes them sick, and then they get lethargic and are easily eaten."

A permanent pipeline

With state and federal agencies now requesting CAWD continue sending tertiary treated water into the wetlands, von Dohren hopes they will help pay for a permanent system.

"We had to man our treatment plant 24 hours a day for those two days to watch this thing — it was costly and stressful," he said of the July 25-27 pumping, which cost $5,199.

He plans to approach the state and federal government, as well as Cal-Am Water Co., the regional water quality control board and the water management district, to see if money might be available to help build a project.

And in exchange for its help returning reclaimed water to the lagoon, Cal-Am might justifiably seek some relief from the state-imposed pumping limit, von Dohren suggested.

"We really are looking at every little half acre-foot of water. Every little bit counts," Cal-Am division general manager Steve Leonard responded. "These droughts often get you to look into places you haven't looked before."

some credence to their views, so they'll be empowered enough not to be fearful when they come to the table."

"The fishing industry is part of our constituency and they depend on the ocean for their livelihood," said Dave Potter. "We need to be constantly vigilant stewards of the our natural resources, but we also have to acknowledge that fishermen are valuable members of our community."

"The sanctuary has their goals and their mandate, but we have an industry we're trying to keep alive," concluded supervisor Lou Calcagno.

Before the vote Butch Lindley cautioned that the sanctuary could still institute new rules no matter what the supervisors did.

"This resolution is only advisory and may not be worth the paper it's written on, but at least you can waive it in somebody's face," he said.

CURRICULUM

California showed that Carmel High did worse than 60 percent of schools with similar demographics. Students at Carmel Middle School ranked in the bottom 50 percent of similar schools, as they have done for five straight years. Local grammar schools — especially River School — performed much better.

No drastic changes called for

At a school board meeting in June, parents and administrators expressed deep concern over the mediocre results at the middle and high schools, but they did not call for drastic changes in teaching methods, curriculum or course offerings.

“Testing is one measure of the quality of schools, but it’s not the only factor,” said Rabbi Bruce Greenbaum, whose three children attended public schools.

“We certainly don’t want to become a Stepford District and have the children just taught to take the test,” agreed parent Richard Kreitman.

Their comments came after one school official outlined steps to increase test scores, including “fine-tuning” the curriculum to match state standards and instituting frequent practice tests to monitor students’ progress.

Bull said she’s been hired to put those changes into effect, and to collaborate with principals, teachers and parents to decide what other changes are necessary.

“The test scores in this district don’t mean that the teachers aren’t good at what they do,” she said. “It could be that they’re teaching something other than what’s on the test.” Only by matching the local curriculum to state standards can other potential problems be identified.

“Let’s say there’s a section on the state test for eighth graders on probability,” Bull explained. “Are we teaching that in eighth grade, or did we cover it in sixth grade? Maybe we need to institute some sort of review of the material along the way.” She emphasized she wouldn’t be “deciding anything in a vacuum,” and that curriculum changes wouldn’t be made overnight.

“I’ll be visiting people, sitting in on classes, getting a feel for where we are, and becoming part of the local school family,” Bull said, a job that will be much easier since her office is on the middle school campus. Also, she said she wants parents to know her door is always open.

“My last job was in a district with 22,000 students and 2,000 teachers, and the administrators were off by themselves in a central office,” she said. “But here I’ll actually get to work side by side and get to know some parents in a much more personal way than you can at a larger district. I’ll really enjoy that.”

Strong credentials

Bull has a master’s degree in special education and a doctorate in educational administration, both from the University of Texas at Austin. She has worked as a social studies teacher, an assistant principal and principal, and in various administrative capacities at several school districts, large and small, in Texas. She moved to California to be with her fiancé, a Watsonville businessman, and applied for the Carmel curriculum job after seeing it posted on the Internet.

“My philosophy is that every child deserves an opportunity to do as much as they can, whether it’s someone in advanced placement classes or a struggling reader in the ninth grade,” she said.

CUSD superintendent Marvin Biasotti said he and the school board “were extremely pleased to have found such a strong candidate” for the curriculum job.

“We are a fine school district with a very strong instructional staff, and we need to focus our attention on aligning our curriculum and instruction with the expectations of the state and the community,” Biasotti said. “Mary has the experience and the qualifications to assist us along that path.”

Very soon, Bull will get more information about how CUSD students are doing. Preliminary results from the April 2004 state tests will be released this week, Biasotti said.

THEODORE W. CLYMER, an authority on reading and author-editor of many textbooks and children's books, whose work revolutionized the instruction of reading, died on July 25 at his home in Carmel. He was 77.

For more than a decade, he faced the difficulties of a rare, degenerative, neurological disease with his customary wit, creativity and good humor.

As a professor of elementary education and educational psychology at the University of Minnesota, he was a leader in reading research and research training. Many of the nation's leading reading researchers from the 1950s to the early 1970s entered the field under his tutelage.

Dr. Clymer was founder and first editor of "Reading Research Quarterly," one of the most widely circulated and cited research journals in the field of education.

With Thomas Barrett, he developed a reading readiness test that was used for decades by kindergarten and first grade teachers to assess their students' skills.

For four decades, Dr. Clymer was an author-editor of reading textbooks for grades K-12, at first for Houghton Mifflin. In the late 1960s, which was a period of widespread reassessment of reading instruction, Dr. Clymer designed a textbook series for Ginn & Co., "Reading 360," according to the principles he and others devised.

In 1976, he left his university position to concentrate entirely on publishing, both textbooks and children's books.

His interests in world folklore, especially that of Native Americans, were reflected in two of his children's books: "The Travels of Atunga" (1973), a retelling of an Eskimo legend, and "Four Corners of the Sky: Poems, Chants, and Oratory" (1975), a collection from Native American oral traditions. He also published "Horse and the Bad Morning" (1982), co-authored with Miska Miles.

Dr. Clymer was born in St. Paul, Minn. on April 2, 1927, and grew up in Hudson, Wis. He graduated from Hudson High School in 1945. He served as a yeoman in the U.S. Navy during World War II from June 1945 to August 1946.

After earning a B.S. degree in 1948 in science education from River Falls State Teachers College, now known as University of Wisconsin, River Falls, he received his M.A. and Ph.D. in educational psychology from the University of Minnesota in 1952. He worked as a fifth grade "demonstration teacher" at the River Falls State Teachers College.

Hired as an assistant professor at the University of Minnesota in 1953, he eventually served as chairman of the Department of Elementary Education and Educational Psychology, and within that department, the director of Clinical Services for Children and of the Psycho-Educational Clinic.

He also taught as a visiting professor at the University of Utah in 1953 and 1958, and UC Berkeley in 1960. He served as a consultant to the U.S. Office of Education, the Ford Foundation and the Carnegie Foundation.

In 1964, he was president both of the International Reading Association and of the National Conference on Research in Language and Literacy. In 1985, he was elected by his peers to the International Reading Association Hall of Fame. For four decades, he directed the Institute for Reading Research, an organization he founded to explore and support the development of reading readiness and literacy.

He moved to California in 1967 to take a two-year sabbatical from the University of Minnesota, and resumed his academic duties in Minnesota for one year. Returning to California in the summer of 1970, he made his home in both Santa Barbara and Carmel.

He was also an accomplished bread baker.

Dr. Clymer is survived by his wife of 24 years, Genie.

The family suggests friends may make a donation to a library in his memory.

JANET LOU HURLEY, psychotherapist and mentor, died July 25.

Mrs. Hurley was founder of Take a Stand for Kids and lectured and worked toward the understanding and elimination of all forms of abuse.

She is survived by her children, Regina and James; three grandchildren, Michael McCabe, Kari Gasperson and Matthew Hurley; and her brothers, James G. Bryant, Jr. and John R. Bryant.

STANLEY ABRAM ROBERTS, 86, died July 29 in Monterey following a brief illness.

Mr. Roberts made his home in Carmel Valley for more than 45 years and retired after being self-employed as a tree trimmer.

He was a volunteer for the Carmel Valley Fire Department for 16 years.

Mr. Roberts is survived by his wife, Patricia; his son, Scott of Harpswell, Maine; grandsons Seth Henry and Andrew; and his great-grandchildren, Holden, Waylon and Greta.

A celebration of Mr. Roberts' life will take place at a later date. The Paul Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

Remarriage and the Gains Exclusion

Let's say you have remarried but kept the personal residence that you shared with your former spouse. Is there any way to resurrect the full $500,000 exclusion from taxation for the possible eventual sale of the home?

The answer is yes. It's really a simple matter. The tax code says you must live in the home for a cumulative total of two of the prior five years in order to claim the $500,000 exclusion as husband and wife filing jointly.

Therefore, you and your new spouse need only reside in the home for two years and, voila, the $500,000 exclusion is available to you if you sell your home. You could even rent the house out for a time before selling, assuming that the provable sum total of all the time you lived in the home meets or beats 24 months.

As always, we strongly suggest that you consult with your tax advisor when taking advantage of such home-related tax benefits. Perhaps the main point to be made here is simply this: Don't make negative assumptions about whether you can hold on to your $500,000 exclusion if extraordinary circumstances come along. Gabriele Besana, took delivery of it on Jan. 19, 1948. He spent two years racing it — including a run in the famous Mille Miglia 1,000-mile race through Italy — before selling it to a woman who also raced.

It arrived in the United States in 1953 and passed through the hands of several Ferrari aficionados, winning the Charles Chayne Special Award on the 18th Fairway at Pebble Beach in the 1983 Concours d'Elegance and 21 years later receiving great acclaim at Concorso Italiano.

Purchased by Beverly Hills car collectors David and Ginny Sydorick in 1995, the 166SC was taken to Italy for Ferrari's 50th anniversary and driven in an historic revisit of the Mille Miglia by David Sydorick and Phil Hill, who won the world championship in a Ferrari in 1961.

Most recently owned by a major Swiss Ferrari collector who commissioned Christie's to present it during the Aug. 12 Exceptional Motor Cars auction at Monterey Jet Center, the car occupied a place of prominence at New York City's Rockefeller Center during a Ferrari retrospective presented by the auction house in April.

It has resided in McCall's Monterey detail shop since May, catching the eye of each person who walks through the door.

"When people come in to pick up their everyday cars, they look in the back and say, 'What's the story with that little car?'" McCall said. "It almost looks like the Oscar Mayer Weiner van — a funny little hot dog with wheels and bicycle fenders — and very prominent Ferrari badges."

Similar to the awe those customers experience when they learn of the 166SC's storied past, people who work on the car are captivated by the machine they are charged with stewarding.

"It's just satisfying to think of the people who have been involved with it at one time or another," McCall

SUNDAY BRUNCH AT PACIFIC'S EDGE: SHEER PLEASURE

SUNDAY BRUNCH away from home evokes both pleasure and trepidation in many: Pleasure in selecting from a bounteous repast presented in an elegant style, some dishes on ice, some over a réchaud flame, but always appetizingly and prettily garnished; trepidation for fear we might overindulge, make the wrong choices, and not be allowed to come back a second time to rectify the possibly faulty first selections.

Put your fears to rest and rev up your pleasant anticipation: Sunday brunch at Pacific's Edge is nothing short of sumptuous and prepared with such care you'll wonder how many chefs, sous chefs and line cooks are in the kitchen turning out these tasty dishes.

Executive Chef Mark Ayers is responsible for the elaborate and exquisite Sunday brunch menu which begins in a celebratory fashion with a flute of champagne at your table.

It's good strategy to walk about the buffet — which encompasses three rooms at the upper level of the restaurant — to get an overall view of the myriad dishes handsomely displayed.

Select from lobster or traditional Eggs Benedict. From the made-to-order waffle or brioche French toast station, decide which you want, but here's a hint: The French toast is coated with frosted flakes to lend added crunch and sweetness. Toppings are laid out temptingly: rum-banana raisin compote, candied pecan halves and shaved almonds.

At the omelet station, a chef will prepare yours with your choice of a variety of ingredients. Then you may add thick and flavorful applewood-smoked bacon, chicken-apple sausage and country style potatoes to your plate.

At the bagel table, top off yours with roasted vegetable, strawberry or plain cream cheese. Muffins, scones, croissants and cinnamon rolls have all been prepared in the Pacific's Edge kitchen. Don't overlook the table of assorted, sliced fresh fruit including watermelon, cantaloupe, honeydew, strawberries and pineapple and their accompanying dipping sauces.

On to the smoked salmon display with chopped egg, onion, capers, tomatoes and crème fraîche, and then the shellfish and raw seafood bar where oysters on the half shell, prawns, citrus marinated mussels, and crab claws are kept chilled on beds of ice. Champagne apple mignonette and smoky cocktail sauce are the condiments.

For those who can't get enough sushi, even at this time of the morning or early afternoon, there is a section, also on ice, of California and spicy tuna sushi and unagi rolls.

Crisp salads are displayed temptingly on a tiered table. Select from: Caprese (mozzarella, tomatoes and basil), Caesar, roasted chicken, wild rice and citrus, tortellini, Monterey, grilled vegetable, purple potato and bacon, and green salad with toppings.

Now for what we've all been waiting — the carving station —

Carved to your liking

Prime rib of beef paired with foie gras, rack of lamb, and roasted monkfish with appropriate natural juices, gravy or sauces, are sliced for you by the carving station chef. Continue on to spoon from their casserole some unsurpassed au gratin potatoes, and add grilled spring vegetables.

At the cheese display, you may help yourself to Port-Salut, Point Reyes or Maytag blue, dry jack, Laura Chenel chèvre, aged cheddar and Swiss Gruyère. You might want to go back to the fruit display for a side of fruit with the cheese.

And finally, a dessert station so prodigious and tempting we can scarcely name all that is offered. Suffice it to say there are assorted cakes, pies, tortes and petit fours, all overseen by pastry chef Alex Espiritu. And for those who have indulged too freely from the buffet, there are little molded rounds of panna cotta, with the light, airy texture of junket and refreshing flavor imparted by its decorative candied lemon peel topping. Coffee is served at your table.

This resplendent buffet brunch has been a tradition at Highlands Inn since 1984. A short hiatus, then it returned in May of this year — to which we might add huzzah.

What we haven't mentioned is the view from Pacific's Edge. Since its renovation last year, every table has an unobstructed, panoramic view of the vast Pacific in all its glory. The immense windows of the restaurant run its entire length. For its cuisine, service and ambiance, Pacific's Edge has been named one of America's top restaurants by Wine Spectator magazine.

And now for the pièce de résistance: This delectable brunch usually costs $42 per person, exclusive of tax and gratuity. But for the period Aug. 1 through 31, two adults may brunch for the price of one.

Top that.

Alma White

1908 - 2004

Long-time Carmel resident, Alma A. White, passed away July 15th in Seattle, Washington. She was 96 years old. Alma was born Alma A. Kopp in Hamilton, Ohio; raised in Plant City, Florida; and moved with her husband, Kenneth, to Carmel in 1945. Alma was involved in many organizations during her lifetime, including the Tau Mu Sorority, the Junipero Serra School PTA and Carmel Mission Altar Society. She had worked for the Pine Inn, the Carmel Candle Shop and at Emile Norman's Art Gallery on Mission Street. She made many long-time friends on the Monterey Peninsula before moving to Seattle in 1997. She will always be remembered for her enthusiasm, graciousness and "y'all's" — she never really lost her Florida accent. The family wishes to extend their gratitude to all who cared for Alma at Providence Mt. St. Vincent in Seattle.

Alma is survived by her son, Robert of Carmel; daughter Susan Veninga, son Ken, grand-daughter Catherine Veninga, grand-daughter and grandson-in-law Jennifer & Jeff Thomas, and great-grandchildren Sylvie & Eli, all of Seattle.

Remembrances may be made to the Monterey Community Hospice Foundation, P.O. Box 1798, Monterey, CA 93942

Booming Sand City West End puts on free show

IN ADDITION to promoting the arts and artists of Sand City with open studio tours in the booming West End area, this Saturday's West End Celebration (the third annual) will feature non-stop entertainment at three locations on Ortiz Street beginning at 2 p.m.

The event is free, open to the public and sponsored by the The Sand City Arts Committee.

Performing on the main stage at this year's event is a pair of eclectic funk bands from the San Francisco Bay Area, plus local favorites The Chicano All Stars. Kicking off the event at 2 p.m. with an hour set is Global Funk Council.

Following GFC on the main stage is Brazilian funk band Bat Makumba, winners of the 2003 California Music Award for Best Latin group. The main stage entertainment closes out with popular local band The Chicano All Stars performing from 5:30 until 7 p.m. Guitarist Joseph Lucido and acoustic rock duo Trusting Lucy appear at the other venues.

Performing at this Sunday's (Aug. 8) Blues in the Park Concert in Seaside, Lil' Ed and the Blues Imperials are a high-energy electric blues band from Chicago. Lil' Ed Williams, although small in stature, is a true giant of the blues. Concert takes place at Laguna Grande Park in Seaside and begins at 1 p.m.

The new owners of KRML Jazz and Blues Radio recently unveiled plans for a new concert series, "Black-Hawk Live," which kicks off on Monday, Aug. 9, with a rare local performance by Mulgrew Miller and Wingspan at 7:30 p.m. in the Ferrante Bayview Room at the Monterey Marriott in downtown Monterey.

Miller, a world renowned jazz pianist, has more than 400 recordings to his credit. Arriving on the New York City jazz scene in 1977 as a member of the Duke Ellington Orchestra, Miller made his first recording as a band leader in 1985. Miller currently tours with The Jazz Messengers and duos with Danish bassist, Neils Henning Orsted Penderson. He is also a member of the Contemporary Piano Ensemble and the Grammy-nominated Wingspan which features Steve Nelson on vibes, Steve Wilson on alto and soprano sax, Duane Eubanks on trumpet, Rich Goods on bass and Karriem Riggins on drums.

recordings through the 1960s, is an integral component of the recently purchased KRML group. The new ownership plans to revive the label by re-releasing classic Black-Hawk jazz recordings and by signing established and rising jazz and blues artists.

Starting in September, KRML's affiliated Jazz & Blues Company Store in Carmel's Eastwood Building will be the primary venue for the new "Black-Hawk Live" concert series. For tickets and more information on Monday's concert, call (831) 624-6431.

The Sunset Center in Carmel is quickly becoming a magnet for concert promoters and a glimpse into the schedule for August and September shows the promise for this newly renovated jewel.

A few concerts to plan for include sax great David Sanborn on Thursday, Aug. 12; bluegrass master David Grisman on Thursday, Aug. 19; the "godmother of punk rock," Patti Smith, performing a benefit concert for the Henry Miller Library on Aug. 22; and blues legend Taj Mahal on Sept. 2.

David Sanborn, a well traveled sideman who performed with a variety of major artists including Paul Simon, The Eagles and Bruce Springsteen, recorded his first solo album in 1975 and never looked back. A multi Grammy award-winner for such classic smooth jazz recordings as "Voyeur" and "Double Vision," Sanborn's name is synonymous with the smooth jazz genre.

Annual Gartshore fellowships announced by Cherry Center

BONNIE GARTSHORE, highly respected and fondly remembered Monterey journalist, poet and teacher (1926 - 2001), has been honored with a Bonnie Gartshore Memorial Fund by the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts.

Two fellowships of $500 each will be presented this fall through an annual competition intended to develop and support individuals in the creative arts in Monterey County.

By assisting artists, musicians and writers to engage in research in any field of knowledge, and creation in any of the arts — and under the “freest possible conditions” — irrespective of race, color or creed, the fellowships will bring the work of Monterey County artists and writers to a wider audience and further the careers of emerging and under-recognized writers and artists.

Applications should be requested from the Cherry Center and then submitted with accompanying documents, for receipt no later than Sept. 15, to the Cherry Center, P.O. Box 863, Carmel, CA 93921. For information, call (831) 624-7491.

SUSANNAH YORK SHIMMERS IN HER OWN ADAPTATION

By K. K. ROBINSON

IT'S QUITE a treat to watch both a bona fide movie star and a superb actress strut her stuff on a local stage. Susannah York brings her one-woman show, "The Loves of Shakespeare's Women," to Carmel, and in doing so, allows us to savor the skills of this multi-talented performer.

Written by York, the production takes us on an exploration into the lives of 17 women created by William Shakespeare in 16 of his plays. The emotion binding them all is said to be "love"; from the naïve certainty of Juliet's love for Romeo through the grieving love of loyal Emilia for her murdered mistress, Desdemona.

In fact, love may have been what inspired York as an author. But, as an actress, what York reveals in performing each of the monologues is her tremendous gift for inhabiting these particular woman — thinking, speaking and living the specific reality of her individual existence. And, in doing so, a host of additional emotions pour forth.

For those who may be uncomfortable with the idea of spending the evening with Shakespeare, she begins with the most familiar, Juliet — anxious, exuberant, and impatient as she awaits her lover — and segues into comic fury as Hermia berates her inamorato for his incomprehensible change of heart in "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Her transformation from one character to another is swift and disarming. With a step or two, a turn, a brief pause behind a tapestry, she becomes an entirely different woman. In her rendition of both Mistress Page and Mistress Ford reacting to the identical letters sent to each by Falstaff, she moves from one character to the other in the flick of an instant. Cognizant of her audience, York includes personal anecdotes about her life and experiences playing many of these roles, and enough of the "back story" of the play and character to set each scene before she begins.

Her philosophy in bringing Shakespeare's women to life to those of us who doubt our ability to understand the verse is simple. "The secret of verse-speaking is to discover and reveal the character's thoughts." In her on-stage commentary she invites us to look at the work through the eyes of the characters. As an actress, she has done her homework so well that we are able to see, hear and understand these women as living beings rather than mere historical characters lacking relevance now.

She offers an English lesson as well as a history lesson. "If you love language, if you have a good ear, if you have been well taught, the words will reveal themselves."

A few white columns and a candelabrum in front of three tapestries provide a spare setting. But she has no problem making the stage come alive with her, and Shakespeare's, women.

Susannah York is at Pacific Repertory Theatre's Golden Bough Theatre for just one more weekend. So, make it your business to see her, as opportunities like this are few and far between.

Clever 'Corpse' seemed to overtax Unicorn Theatre

By DEBORAH SHARP

"CORPSE" IS an extremely clever play. Set in London on Dec. 11, 1936, the day Edward VIII abdicated, it uses the age-old literary vehicle of twins to spin a tale of deception, bribery and murder, all wrapped up as farce. An "older," disinherited twin, Evelyn, plots revenge against his "younger" twin by bribing an aging, down-at-the-heels has-been (or never-was) with a past to hide, but he needs some color nonetheless.

WWI major who's still a crack shot to do him in, but his plot is nearly blown by Evelyn's coquettish, soused landlady who stumbles in at awkward moments. And that's only the beginning of the intrigue and surprise.

Carey Crockett's sets are handsome and complete. Evelyn's flat in Soho is cramped but gaudy, befitting the flamboyant but luckless actor. An especially nice touch is a closet door resembling the top of an Egyptian sarcophagus depicting a wide-eyed, scantily clad Egyptian lady. The stage crew must go to heroic lengths to change this set to Rupert's spacious, stylish Mayfair flat every other scene. The magic wrought in The Cherry theater's small space is often heroic.

Adrianna Wellisch's costumes are as wonderful as always, but there are many small glitches remaining in the props and their manipulation. Perhaps when these things are ironed out, the cast will feel comfortable enough to put more creative energy into their roles.

Not up to snuff

Unfortunately, at least on opening night, the cast of the Unicorn Theatre's production of the play at the Cherry Center wasn't up to snuff. Scott McQuiston, who plays the twins, Evelyn and Rupert, has his strongest moment in the first act of the play as Evelyn in drag. The failed Shakespearean actor is dressed as a matron just returned from a shoplifting spree at Fortnum and Mason where he's snagged some delicacies for the lunch he's about to prepare for Major Ambrose Powell, played by Peter Eberhardt. He establishes the character of the fey twin well, and in the second act he makes the shift to the wealthy, man-about-town Rupert successfully, but both characters go flat in succeeding scenes. McQuiston's energies are taken up just getting through the admittedly challenging logistics of the play.

Rita Caratello, as Evelyn's landlady who tries hard to hold on to her gentility while madly pursuing the actor, has some nice, tipsy moments, but Eberhardt never seems to get a handle on the Major, who plays a pivotal role in the story. Granted, the Major is a

Ibarbia pens high seas romance thriller set in the Philippines

A STORY set during the decline of Spanish power in the Far East — precipitated by Commander George Dewey's naval victory in Manila Bay — recounts a clipper ship hijacking and its flight to the orient.

"The Sea Butterfly — The Clipper Captain and the Bastard Chieftain" by Expedito A. Ibarbia of Salinas, is a fast-paced, historical romance thriller in which the captain and a young chieftain fight over another chieftain's daughter in the capital city of Luzon. As the captain becomes involved in the Philippine revolution to oust the Spaniards, he discovers an unlikely relationship with an adversarial chieftain.

Author Ibarbia holds master's and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Rhode Island and Washington State University, and was a postdoctoral fellow and visiting professor of horticulture, and a research geneticist at the University of Missouri. With ancestral roots in the Philippines, he has traveled widely in Asia, Europe and the Americas. He is currently working on a second novel set in the Salinas Valley, and on his first textbook.

Published by 1st Books Library of Bloomington, Ind., the book is available in paperback for $13.50 or as an electronic book for $4.95 at <http://1stbooks.com/bookview/22931>. Barnes and Noble carries "Butterfly" at $15.75, and Amazon for $17.50.

Irony of ironies

AFTER YEARS of fighting to keep its own plan for development of Hearst Ranch from being realized, the staff of the California Coastal Commission is now trying to torpedo a new deal to buy most of the land for open space.

Back in 1983, the commission approved an LCP — a local coastal program, the Holy Grail of regulating coastal development at the local level — allowing 650 hotel rooms, a 100-unit youth hostel and an 18-hole golf course at Hearst Ranch, best known for the castle built by newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst in the 1930s and donated by his heirs to the State of California in 1957.

But when Hearst Corp. tried to get started on the development blessed by the coastal commission — which would take up just a minuscule amount of the company's 77,000 acres — the commission twisted itself into knots trying to come up with reasons the 1983 LCP was no longer valid.

The Hearst Corp. plan also elicited a strong public reaction. A 1998 hearing in San Luis Obispo was said to be the biggest ever in front of the coastal commission — attended mostly by people who wanted to see the Hearst land kept undeveloped.

The resulting stalemate led to years of negotiations between the development-minded company and the State Coastal Conservancy and other open space groups. A deal to pay the Hearst Corp. $80 million to give up most of its development rights was announced last month — a deal the coastal commission staff should be expected to celebrate.

Instead, in what the San Diego Union-Tribune called an example of "grudge-match meddling," coastal commission executive director Peter Douglas is trying to sabotage the deal, going so far as calling it a "bait and switch" scam.

Douglas even belittled the deal's opening of vast stretches of magnificent beaches to the public, claiming that "under the law, all beaches are public" — a bizarre statement which is laughably untrue.

And one of his underlings improperly telephoned state officials, trying to drive down the land's $230 million valuation, according to an official with Caltrans, which paid for the appraisal.

One newspaper editorial called these efforts another example of the coastal commission staff's "obstructionist activism."

We think they're yet another vivid illustration of the coastal staff's never-never land concept of reality, where the truth is a lie, fact is fiction, and property rights do not exist.

The Hearst Ranch deal may be the last chance to save this treasured stretch of coast from being turned into ranchettes for Silicon Valley and Hollywood millionaires. The public, which would pay for the acquisition through voter-approved bond measures, has repeatedly demonstrated its willingness to buy parkland and open space.

The coastal commission should tell its staff to get out of the way.

Supes can't veto incorporation Dear Editor,

Please allow me to correct and clarify several items from your article on Carmel Valley incorporation (July 30). First, contrary to what your article states, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors will have no vote on whether or not Carmel Valley incorporates. The only votes on the matter will come from LAFCO commissioners and citizens of Carmel Valley. Given that counties have routinely opposed incorporations, the California Legislature wisely decided four years ago to remove the counties' veto on incorporations.

Second, the Carmel Valley Association board of directors voted unanimously in April to endorse incorporation as the best chance to preserve the rural character of Carmel Valley and stop its overdevelopment. This endorsement has two caveats: that incorporation be fiscally feasible, and that LAFCO provide a satisfactory proposal upon which we will vote. The board's endorsement of incorporation followed a poll of 300 members that showed a greater than 3-to-1 margin in favor of incorporation. Of those CVA members that supported incorporation, 85 percent did so "strongly."

Third, I am disappointed to report that Robert Sinotte, the chair of the anti-incorporation group Valley Watch, has changed his mind and now declines my offer to hold two debates this fall on the merits of incorporation. For a man who has spent three years bombarding Carmel Valley residents with Chicken Little scare tactics, Sinotte now claims that there is nothing to debate. I respectfully beg to differ. Even before the fiscal study is completed, there is still much to debate. Sinotte should respect the voters of Carmel Valley and agree to publicly debate the merits of incorporation. What is he afraid of?

Incorporation is about preserving the rural character and open spaces of Carmel Valley before we get paved over like so many other communities in California. Witness that in the past few months Monterey County has approved in Carmel Valley a 64,000-square-foot self-storage compound, a 78-unit development, and discarded a five year, $5 million general plan — all over the objections of our neighborhoods, our land use advisory committee, the planning commission, and our supervisor. Incorporation is the right choice for Carmel Valley.

New York Times — tree killer?

Dear Editor,

You have to hand it to The Pine Cone; at least it is not picking on the little guy this time. Calling the New York Times hypocritical (New Heights of Hypocrisy — Part 2) takes a bit more guts than picking on a local environmentalist as it did the week before — and countless times before that. For taking on the big corporate fat cats, The Pine Cone certainly deserves credit.

However, when you are David and you are challenging Goliath, it helps to have a slingshot that shoots straight. Unfortunately, The Pine Cone missed its target by a long shot. It could have argued its case against the Times on its merits. Instead, The Pine Cone engaged in a bit of blatant demagoguery. After all, calling the Times a tree killer for its use of newsprint is a bit like blaming the fire department for wasting water when it fights fires. It just doesn't ring true.

So let's sort out the facts. First, the New York Times did not call for an end to the use of wood in building or paper products. Nor did it call for wood production to be cut back in the United States. What the Times editorial did call for — and what apparently bugged The Pine Cone most of all — was an honest approach to forest use policies. In fact, the editorial was asking for an end to the hypocrisy of the Bush administration, which has been using fire safety as a pretext to let timber companies get at protected stands of timbers that they had not had access to under the conservation policies of the Clinton administration. Most recently, the Bush administration has proposed to further limit protection of the 58.5 million acres of national forests that have been off limits to new road building and development by allowing both. In combination with the so-called "healthy forest initiative" these two measures would represent a major rollback of wilderness protection.

As the Times has pointed out, not even hunters and anglers — many of them Republicans — like the proposal. It was merely another in a long string of pro-industry and anti-environment decisions that has been the hallmark of the Bush administration. It also involved the manipulation of scientific evidence and the use of very targeted doublespeak. If all of this sounds familiar, then it's because it is. We now know that this is not an isolated case. This same pattern of deception and hypocrisy is the basis of so many policy decisions of the Bush administration. And thank you, The Pine Cone, for reminding us of it.

We are all in favor of fighting hypocrisy where we find it. Regarding the Forest Service policy, we can weigh in on Nov. 2 when we elect our next president.

Regarding the New York Times, I suppose we can all start reading it online.

PS: The New York Times uses 22 percent recycled fibers for its newsprint and once you have read it you can pass it on to others and then recycle it. It really works; I do it every Sunday.

Planned growth

Dear Editor,

It's taken me awhile to respond to your article of June 30 about the general plan with Gary Patton and Fred Keely. This plan has been a big undertaking, to say the least, trying to satisfy the growth we must plan for and the people wanting no growth as those above. They don't live here and didn't do anything in Santa Cruz, where they live and have served the public, to create a growth plan with affordable housing.

I salute the supervisors for having the guts to send the plan back to planning where it belongs. It's difficult to extend the process when it seems so close. I just hope the people who are affected by the general plan are the ones who have a say in it, like the refinement group, not outsiders.

We are all very lucky to live in such a beautiful place. Everyone would like to be the last ones in and keep everyone else out. The problem is that we continue to have families.

If we don't plan for growth with affordability, we'll be forcing families to live apart or leave this area for something more affordable. We already are experiencing much of that.

What we need is planned growth, not no growth.

Dean Provence, Monterey

'Kindly and extravagantly treated'

Dear Editor,

I've done a fair amount of traveling and never had the urge to write the mayor or chamber of commerce to sing the praises of the nice places I have visited, but a trip to your wonderful city in search of the Fountain of Woof has inspired me to do so.

I read a delightful article in Sunset Magazine that touted the dog friendliness of Carmel. I was intrigued, looked at my golden retriever companion, Raza Roo asking if she wanted to go in search of the Fountain of Woof, and promptly picked up the phone to make reservations. Alas, my calls to a handful of establishments were met with, "Sorry, we're booked for the weekend." I was trying to put my excursion together on seven nights' notice. A man named Travis at the chamber told me most inns had a two-night minimum but said he would contact me if anything should pop up, and encouraged me to check back right before my chosen weekend to see if any of the lodging establishments had eased their two-night policy. Hoping for the best, but not expecting much, I hung up. Not 10 minutes later, Travis called with the information that The Coachman's Inn would be delighted to take my one-night reservation. Talk about an easy booking experience! We asked for a list of doggie-friendly eating places and received it by mail. The staff was so friendly and cheerful.

The article in Sunset did not do justice to the dog-friendly nature of your city. Every shop I went into, the shopkeepers were as friendly to my dog as they were to me. And the choices of eating places! We passed Anton and Michel and couldn't believe they were on the dog-friendly list. Thinking there had been a mistake, my sister-in-law walked into the restaurant to confirm doggie dining and we were graciously escorted to a nice little patio table complete with fountain view and gorgeous container gardens. We later learned there were even friendly restaurants with their own canine menus and doggie bowl service!

We did find the Fountain of Woof and have pictures of Raza Roo enjoying the moment. What a delightful experience! Your city is beautiful, friendly, and a dog owner's heaven. I hope to come back many more times to enjoy its charm and beauty. Should you ever need a doggie spokesperson to woof the doggie-friendly praises of traveling to Carmel, we'd be happy to answer the call. Thank you for developing and maintaining such a charming town where all the travelers are kindly and extravagantly treated.

GALENA JENSEN, 8-1/2, was named for a lodge. Lucky she wasn't born in the Boulder Hotel, or even the Heartbreak Hotel.

But as it was, Galena was one of a seven puppy litter of springer spaniel/Bernese mountain dogs born in the Galena Lodge, Sun Valley, Idaho, when her new Mom Missy and Dad JD spied her and made her their own. "Bring her back tomorrow if she doesn't work out," the lodge keeper said.

They returned the next day, but not because they were giving her back. Far from it. They returned to ask the lodge keeper for a suggestion of how to get Galena back to Marin. Mom Missy couldn't bear the thought of putting her in a carry-on and having her crammed under the airline seat.

"No prob," said the kind lodge keeper. "I'll fly you back in my private plane." And that's how Galena flew into Marin airport — in style and unencumbered by body luggage.

Now a resident of Carmel-by-the-Sea for four years, Galena gets to accompany Mom daily on the Carmel Beach walking path, where we encountered her.

As we interviewed her Thursday, seated on a log bench overlooking the beach, Galena snuggled up to our feet and legs, leaning trustingly against them. She even welcomed a pat on her pretty head.

Almost all black, with a fluffy white bib, Galena shows a bit of her Bernese mountain dog heritage on her feet, which have brown shadow markings.

Always a good girl, Galena likes to play with her sea-themed toys, so appropriate for the area: a stuffed plush octopus and a neoprene orange colored crab that's a perfect foil for her multicolored Guatemalan collar.

"Carmel Legends"

There's an old joke in real estate which says the three most important things are: location, location, location. Actually there's a fourth: timing. That's where one of Carmel's earliest entrepreneurs blew it. He was about 100 years ahead of his time, at least 50. His name was S.J. DUCKWORTH; he was 23 years old, operated a real estate agency in Monterey; and he had a vision! Observing the success of Pacific Grove in selling lots for Protestant camp meetings, he reasoned that he could create a Catholic resort in Carmel near The Mission. So in 1886 he bought 234 acres on the northern slope of Carmel from Honore Escolle (an earlier and more timely investor), and in 1888 issues a brochure promoting his property. "Near Mission" in those days was farther away, because his province was bounded by Ocean Ave. on the south, 1st St. on the north, Monterey St. on the east and "Broadway" on the west. The latter later became Junipero! He predicted that Southern Pacific would extend its line from P.G. to Pebble Beach to the Mission within 2 years. This didn't happen (still hasn't), so although he sold some lots (at $25 for a corner, $20 for an inside lot), the project languished and he had to sell out to others. Too much, too soon. Just unlucky. Do you realize we might be living in "Duckworth Shores"?

remainder of the living space on the ground floor and parking garages below.

"It will be a really good-looking structure," said Feiner, who has developed properties in the city for the past dozen years.

Although the plans were approved by the Carmel Planning Commission in 2002 and permitted by the building department in 2003, Feiner applied for and received extensions for his permits, according to city building official Tim Meroney, who was set to meet with the developer to discuss construction rules now that the project is finally under way.

Feiner said he requested the extensions in order to work out issues with nearby residents.

"Delays are usually the result of trying to compromise with neighbors so everyone can be as happy as possible," he said. "So we've had a few delays, but we worked everything out."

He said the two-story complex should be completed in about a year.

would sell the mansion only if the city decides to take that course. "It's a very limited discussion this evening — not if you should sell it or what the process is, but selecting a company to assist you," Freeman said.

Thus restricted to commenting solely on the hiring of a real estate agency, few of the two dozen Flanders supporters in the audience spoke.

Linda Anderson asked if leasing out the building was no longer an option, to which Guillen replied that during budget talks, the council directed staff to pursue its sale. (Earlier in the meeting, he also announced that the council, in closed session, decided to take no action on a lease offer for Scout House, which is currently closed and was also suggested for possible sale by the revenue/expenses committee during budget discussions earlier this year.)

Flanders Foundation President Melanie Billig questioned the council's consideration of a realtor before undertaking the legally mandated process for selling park land.

"Why are we approaching it from the back end?" she asked.

Billig followed her comments with a letter from the San Francisco law firm of Shute, Mihaly & Weinberger LLP which cited California Government Code requiring the city to first adopt a resolution discontinuing the use of Flanders as a park, hold a protest hearing, vote to sustain or overrule the protests and hold a special election if it votes to overrule the protests. Under California environmental law, it must prepare an environmental impact report evaluating possible effects of the sale and ensure the sale would be consistent with the general plan, according to the letter.

But Freeman said the action the council was considering would not violate the law.

Councilman Mike Cunningham said he initially felt uncomfortable with hiring a realtor right away, until he realized it implied no commitment.

"We're not committing to sell — just getting someone on the team," he said. "If we decide to sell, we have a realtor. In the meantime, we're evaluating options."

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac made a motion in favor of signing on with the Mitchell Group, and the council and mayor agreed, voting 4-0. Councilman Gerard Rose abstained because of an attorney-client relationship with one of the agencies under consideration.

In exchange for the work, The Mitchell Group proposed 5 percent of the sale price be split between the listing and selling agents, city clerk Karen Crouch said Wednesday, though the final terms — including what sort of compensation the firm would receive if the property is not sold — are still being negotiated.

Unique Monterey Peninsula homes

THE BEST HOUSE: With a 270 degree view

THE PRIMO real estate on the Monterey Peninsula may be at the beach, but some of the best views belong to homes on the hills overlooking Carmel and the Pacific Ocean.

A case in point: The home at 2467 Outlook Drive, which occupies a hilltop on the east side of Highway 1, above Hatton Canyon.

"The view is just breathtaking," said Mark Seitman, who built the house three years ago with his wife, Kim. "On a clear day, you can see about 15 miles of the Pacific Coast, as well as all the way up Carmel Valley. Point Lobos looks like you could just reach out and touch it."

The 3,400-square-foot home, designed by L.O. Roberts and built in a modern style with formed concrete walls, a steel roof and vast windows, sits on an eight-acre site that abuts a large greenbelt, offering a rare combination of privacy and panoramic views. The unique architecture makes almost as big an impression as the 270-degree vista.

"Last year during the Concours d'Elegance, Ford Motor Co. had a party at our house, and Edsel Ford said, 'It's like living in a piece of artwork,'" Seitman recalled.

The home has extensive professional landscaping protected from drought and the perennial local water supply shortages: It has its own well and 3,000-gallon holding tank.

Also, the home has radiant heat, a central music system, an ultra-modern gourmet kitchen, security system, wine room, many built-in cabinets, two large decks, an outdoor spa and a separate 600-square-foot garage.

The home has three bedrooms, four bathrooms, a sauna and a media room with an HD flatscreen TV.

"When people visit the property, they say it's just breathtaking," said realtor Bob Wahl, who has it listed at $8.4 million. To arrange a visit, call him at (831) 626-2121.

Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races, Mazda Raceway at Laguna Seca, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 13-15, featuring Ferrari.

The quintessential gentlemen's racing event was started by enthusiast Steve Earle three decades ago with just 66 cars and a paltry handful of spectators, but the Monterey Historics now feature 400 entrants in two full days of vintage car racing (and practice on Friday) that showcase models from almost every automotive era. To complement Ferrari, one of the greatest names in racing, Earle lined up three of racing's greatest drivers — Dan Gurney, Sir Stirling Moss and Phil Hill — to participate this year. And to celebrate its current racing prowess along with its past, Ferrari will include a Michael Schumacher Formula-1 car on the track with earlier F-1 specimens Sunday.

With racers vying for inclusion in the annual historic races, each of the 15 classes features the best drivers and automobiles battling on Laguna Seca's 11-turn, 2.2-mile racetrack. Contestants do their best not to swap paint, but competition reigns when it comes down to a fight to the checkered flag. Advance tickets run $35 Friday, $50 Saturday, $40 Sunday only, $95 for three days and $75 for Saturday and Sunday. Admission includes paddock access and grandstand seating, with children 12 and under admitted free. For tickets and information, call (800) 327-SECA or visit www.laguna-seca.com.

All who own and drive their own vintage vehicles and sports cars are invited to participate in the 10th annual P.G. Concours Auto Rally, this year honoring Ferrari in a nod to the Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races. The meandering tour through the Monterey Peninsula, which typically draws more than 200 participants and thousands of spectators, is also a charity event featuring a barbecue dinner and awards ceremony afterward in the historic Chataqua Hall. The auto rally in "America's Last Hometown" has raised more than $30,000 over the past decade to benefit the Pacific Grove Youth Center, City of Carmel youth funds and the P.G. Unified School District. Pacific Grove Rotary is a rally organizer again this year. Cars begin lining up on Lighthouse Avenue at 1 p.m., heading out for the drive at 6:30 p.m. to cruise along the Pacific Grove shoreline through Pebble Beach, Carmel, Monterey and Cannery Row. Tour d'Elegance showcases antique cars 'in their natural state'

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TAILGATING IS not a good idea when the car in front is an 80-year-old Rolls-Royce, but anyone driving an equally old Hispano-Suiza would know that.

As do each of the 100-plus people who will hit the road in their antique beauties for a 47-mile cruise around the Peninsula Thursday during the seventh annual Pebble Beach Tour d'Elegance.

Behind the wheels of their rare and exquisite Talbot-Lagos, Bentleys and Duesenbergs, participants will explore new territory on the tour this year. After leaving Pebble Beach, they will loop through Pacific Grove, including a cruise down Lighthouse Avenue.

To avoid the scenic but strenuous Los Laureles Grade — which can be tough on an 80- or 90-year-old automobile — and take advantage of some local hospitality, drivers will explore the Jacks Peak area and stop at a hilltop haven for a coffee break during their Aug. 12 tour.

"It's such a wonderfully forested area and an open road," tour director Leslie MacMillan said of the drive on Aguajito and Monhollan roads. "This year we tried to keep away from too much traffic congestion so they could really have fun moving along."

"Especially with the Ferraris. We don't want to get too many overheating."

The Italian marque, celebrating half a century on American soil, is among those being honored at the 54th Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance Sunday, Aug. 15.

The procession will visit Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca, though the drivers will not circuit the track.

They will then head west on Highway 68, up Olmsted Road and into Monterra and Tehama for a mountaintop coffee stop before traveling south on the private road into Carmel Valley.

"It's quite attractive and a little less strenuous than Los Laureles Grade. Some of the very old cars have a difficult time going up — and coming down, because they don't all have four-wheel brakes," said tour chairman Craig Davis. "It's a nice route and scenic, and I think it's probably a little more friendly on the cars. We hope to reduce some of the stop and go."

From the valley, the group will drive west to Carmel-by-the-Sea for the traditional lunchtime stop in Devendorf Park.

"This is a lovely drive," said MacMillan, who recently drove the route to find it is 47.2 miles — close enough to the 50-mile target. "It's just beautiful."

Davis first conceived of the tour idea seven years ago to "show the cars in their natural state — i.e. driving — and that the cars in the Concours can be used and driven."

"And to put something back in a more general way into the community, so people can see the cars — particularly those who might not otherwise get a chance," he continued.

Concours featured marques Rolls-Royce and Hispano-Suiza are celebrating their 100th anniversaries this year and will have a strong showing in the tour, according to Davis. A fleet of Mercedes Gullwings will make the drive as well.

"There are well over 20 Rolls-Royces — the oldest a 1909, up through the early '50s," Davis said.

Only collectible automobiles entered in the Concours may be driven on the tour, and participation in the day-long drive will weigh in favor of an entrant should the awarding of a prize come down to a tie.

Although the schedule is somewhat rough, as antique cars can be unpredictable, the tour is set to begin in Pebble Beach near the polo field at 9 a.m. and arrive in Carmel between 11:30 a.m. and noon.

While drivers and their passengers — often dressed in period clothing to match their cars — dine in Devendorf Park with VIPs, the public is invited to view their rare automobiles parked on Ocean Avenue up close. Volunteers will be available to answer questions and distribute lists of registered drivers and their cars.

Following the lunch break, drivers and passengers will climb aboard again and leave for Del Monte Forest around 2 p.m. And just in case any of them don't make the full trip on their own, a Matteson & Beers tow truck will follow, as will mechanics who specialize in restoring antique automobiles, according to MacMillan. ☺

Any Concours d'Elegance participant who takes Thursday's tour will have the upper hand with judges in case of a tie.

Carmel Valley car buff runs country's only automobilia expo

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A MAN whose passion for old automobiles and eye for graphic art led him into the vintage poster business more than two decades ago introduced a precedent-setting automobilia sale this time last year. For 2004, the show is doubling in size, presenting a bevy of genuine automotive artifacts from around the world for sale Aug. 10 and 11.

"I was going to Europe a lot and buying there, and a lot of the dealers there were asking me, 'Why doesn't someone do a show in the United States?'" recounted Tony Singer, who moved to Carmel Valley from Long Island early last year.

Having visited the Monterey Peninsula annually to attend the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance for more than 20 years, Singer said creating the country's first dedicated car-related collectibles sale was a must.

"When I knew I was moving here, I just decided I might as well do this," he continued. "I know enough of these people from Europe and a bunch of people in the U.S., and let's face it: The automotive world comes to the Peninsula during car week."

Everything original

Automobilia Monterey — set for Tuesday and Wednesday at the Embassy Suites in Seaside — will include dozens of vendors selling original vintage posters, photographs, rallye plates, badges and pins, mascots and hood ornaments, signs, original art, desk and display pieces, scale models, literature and books, signed items and postcards. Dealers set to attend hail from England, France, Italy, Germany, New Zealand and the United States.

That Michelin Man is no replica, as only original automobile memorabilia is allowed at the sale Tuesday and Wednesday at Embassy Suites.

"There are no reproductions allowed at my show, which is a big issue to me," Singer said. "I don't want someone to come to this show and feel as though they they got ripped off."

Holding an event dedicated to automobile memorabilia with a $5 admission benefiting the Monterey Rape Crisis Center proved a success last year, and Singer expects attendance to significantly jump in 2004. Twice as many vendors, more advertising and a new website, www.automobiliamonterey.com, will do the trick to draw people in.

"The people who come to it have these smiles on their faces, because they see things they've never seen before — posters, advertising signs, historic photos — all these different things we have," he said.

In addition to providing a more affordable means of indulging in retail therapy during a week when rare automobiles sell at auction for six or seven figures, Singer said Automobilia Monterey presents a relaxed atmosphere and a fun way to kick off car week.

"At any of the other venues, the memorabilia is sort of a side issue," he said. "The idea of having a very focused show of authentic automotive collectibles made sense."

Principally Porsches

Singer, who grew up in the printing business and has run his own enterprise selling vintage posters since 1980, happened into the trade soon after he began collecting cars, principally Porsches, in the early 1970s.

"I recognized Porsche had produced a lot of paper, and a lot of it was posters starting around 1950-51," he said. "And the graphic elements and excitement of them opened up this whole world that I knew nothing about."

He accumulated the collectible prints over the years, only to be left wondering what to do with them once he sold or traded the car that had inspired their acquisition in the first place.

"I decided to start selling them, and it's been a nice hobby business ever since," he said. In addition to offering his posters for sale at the event he created, Singer will have a booth at the Concorso Italiano at Black Horse Golf Course in Seaside Aug. 13.

His favorite vintage cars are the Porsche 356 and the Siata 208S Spyder.

Automobilia Monterey will run noon to 6 p.m. Aug. 10 and 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Aug. 11 at Embassy Suites, Canyon del Rey and Del Monte, in Seaside. For more information, visit www.automobiliamonterey.com or call (831) 659-5335.

Original event posters, like this one for the famous 24 Hours of Le Mans, will be for sale at Automobilia Monterey.

Pebble Beach is home to vintage car racers

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PEBBLE BEACH hosted the original Monterey Peninsula road race — an event that 50 years ago helped inspire the creation of Laguna Seca raceway.

Now, a handful of residents of Del Monte Forest are among the most avid racers who take to the track each summer to show what their vintage cars can do.

Among those particularly impassioned Pebble Beach residents are Bob Walker, who races a 1963 Elva Courier Mark III, and Kent Evans, who owns the Lotus 11 driven by his nephew, Richard Goldsmith.

Walker happened onto the sport after buying a Ferrari in 1989 and realizing he wanted to learn how to really drive it. In 1993, he enrolled in the Jim Russell Racing School — then located at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca but now at home at Infineon Raceway in Sonoma.

“After taking that class and visiting the Monterey Historics, I was very interested in racing vintage cars myself,” he said.

His first race was in 1995. But automobiles have held a special place in Walker’s heart for decades. Fascinated with sports cars as a kid, he drove a Sprite while in college.

“I just loved it,” he said. A 1954 Corvette followed.

Like many, Walker had to say goodbye to sports cars while he and his wife, Joy, raised their children and built up a successful furniture business in Redding.

Once the kids were out of the house, though, the cars returned, including a DeLorean, which he sold and then purchased the Ferrari 308 GTSi that prompted his enrollment in racing school in 1993. Joy showed her support by deciding to buy him the race car of his choice for Christmas the following year.

He knew we wanted an Elva Courier, and as his search began, the same name kept coming up: Butch Guilber.

“People said, ‘If you’re looking for an Elva Courier, call Butch. He knows all of the Elvas in the country,’” Walker recalled. “And he said he knew just the car for me” — a 1963 Elva Courier Mk III stored at Sears Point.

“The car turned out to be fantastic — much quicker and more responsive than my Ferrari,” he said. Also, the car was set up for racing, with a special gearbox, a “beefed-up motor,” heavier springs for better cornering and disc brakes.

But the Elva wasn’t Walker’s initial choice for racing.

“Originally I was considering a 330 Ferrari,” he recalled. “And then I looked at the price of engine rebuilds and maintenance and thought, ‘The Elva is much better.’”

At more than 40 years old, the Elva requires regular work to remedy leaky oil seals and a problematic rear axle. He rebuilt the engine three years ago.

During last year’s Friday practice the transmission blew, and Walker missed Sunday’s race.

“Other than that, it’s been a good car,” he said.

He does the majority of the work — including creating parts that are not readily available — in the well-organized but crowded garage at his home near Robert Louis Stevenson School.

“I try to do my own fabrication. I used to teach welding at one time, so I have a lot of equipment,” he said. “I pretty much put the car together.”

In fact, he enjoys tinkering so much that he has since bought another — a 1958 Elva Courier Mark I — which has a similar body and drivetrain but a lighter tubular frame particularly designed with racing in mind.

“I’m going to try to get it ready maybe for next year,” Walker said. “There’s a lot of work to be done.”

And those aren’t the only projects under way.

“We have a four-car garage that’s about 1,500 square feet,” he said. “Right now, there are seven cars in the garage.”

Among them are the Ferrari, the two Couriers and a Sprite that belongs to their son but is for sale.

The entire frame of a Cobra hangs from the ceiling, serving as a guide for another project car.

“It’s a 1963 Cobra I’ve been doing a major restoration on for the last 10 years,” he said. Totaled in a 1971 accident, the Cobra rebuild was too challenging to resist.

He purchased the frame from the owner in Nevada, bought an original Cobra engine out of another car, took the differential from a third, took the transmission from a fourth and salvaged the gas tank from a fifth. The restoration is about half completed.

A learning process

Since entering the sport, Walker said he has learned the importance of physical and mental fitness, confidence and experience on the racetrack.

“A lot of it’s mental. You have to get really relaxed and make sure you keep your wits about you, because things happen very quickly out there,” he said.

Racing might not sound physically demanding, but it is.

“As easy as it looks, driving 10 laps at Laguna Seca is one of the most exhilarating but difficult things you can do,” he said, adding that as a novice, he would be exhausted after five laps.

Contributing to the pleasure of vintage racing is the experience and respect of the competitors, many of whom are former professional racers and all of whom are driving cars they have no interest in damaging, though they are certainly willing to fight for the checkered flag.

Joy has been a passenger in her husband's car on the track, but she doesn't see herself in the driver's seat.

"I didn't want to go around the second time," she recalled. "But he couldn't hear me screaming."

When historic car week rolls around, both are very much part of the scene.

"It's probably the most wonderful thing that anyone can experience," Bob Walker said. "There's a full week of wonderful get-togethers, dinners, parties, cars to see on the track and old friends to meet — some you haven't seen in many years. [Race founders] Steve and Debbie Earle do such a great job each year, and unless you're involved in it, you don't see the details and the people who take care of things."

Husband and wife also volunteer for Thursday's Pebble Beach Tour d'Elegance, when more than 100 participants in the fabled Concours take a 50-mile drive through the Peninsula and stop in Carmel for a lunch break so the public can examine their cars up close.

Walker, running the number 6 on his green and yellow Elva Courier, will drive Sunday in Group 2B.

'Lots Of Trouble, Usually Serious'

Ever since he can remember, Kent Evans has been fascinated with cars. Growing up on a ranch in Lemoore, he recalled identifying every make and model he saw when out driving with his family in the 1950s.

"I knew all of them," he said. "But it was easier in those days — they didn't all look alike."

Soon he was working on cars, getting hold of an old Model A and fixing it up so that it would run.

Then the town's sports-car-racing family doctor introduced a teenage Evans to a whole new automotive world.

"I got to know him, and he took me under his wing," he said of Dr. Paul Young.

About 18 years old at the time, Evans would spend nights in the doctor's garage working on cars, and they attended many races together. Young helped Evans buy his first race car, a Jaguar XK120 roadster.

"At his practice at Lemoore, he'd have patients out there, and we'd be in there talking about parts and engines," he recalled. "We'd be talking cars in the office, and his patients would be out there sick in the waiting room."

Together they visited racetracks all over the state, and they attended the final Pebble Beach Road Race in 1956.

"We'd go race," Evans recalled. "And once in a while, he'd let me drive the car if I was good."

In the 1960s, Evans drifted from racing but always owned and drove British and European cars: Porsches, Jaguars and Austin-Healeys were among his favorites.

Living in Palo Alto, he worked in the computer business and then with his wife, Lyn, founded an office furniture business. They sold it and retired to Pebble Beach.

Evans returned to racing several years ago after he and his nephew, Gilroy resident Richard Goldsmith, took the Russell school at Laguna.

He decided he wanted to find a car like the one he'd raced half a century before — a 1958 Lotus 11 — and he wanted it to be an uncle-nephew venture.

"Richard used to race motorcycles, so we were trying to find something he could do," Evans said.

A 48-year-old father of two who owns a seed company and has traveled all over the world in his work, Goldsmith raced dirtbikes for many years — first flat track, then motocross. He still rides, occasionally on the track.

They decided to take the plunge, but the chosen car was a fairly long time in coming. Evans and Goldsmith searched all over the country for the next four years and ironically found the car in Gilroy.

"It was parked in a large garage, and the guy had raced it a couple of times but not a lot," Evans said. "He'd bought it in England and shipped it back over here. It had everything we wanted."

Still, the pair "tore it all the way down and rebuilt the car from scratch," he said. "You have to do that, because when you're on the track, your life's at stake."

Evans initially raced the car, but a few years later, he handed that responsibility to teammate Goldsmith and took on the demanding role of mechanic.

"There's a saying about Lotuses: 'Lots Of Trouble, Usually Serious,'" Evans laughed.

The duo competes in races at Infineon Raceway (Sears Point) and Coronado as well as their favorite, Laguna.

"We ended up being very competitive. The Lotus is a thrill, easy to drive, lightweight, not overpowered, handles extremely well and has extremely good brakes," Goldsmith said. "That's a good combination for a vintage car."

Both tout the thrills of Laguna and the joys of historic racing.

"There's the thrill of getting on the racetrack, especially with the history at Laguna and the Corkscrew," Goldsmith said. "It allows me to get my competitive juices flowing without a lot of bodily risk."

In preparation for competing, Goldsmith said he stays in good physical shape and runs the course in his head.

"It's important to remember and refresh, especially in the first two laps of the event," he said. "As you warm up, the track changes. It's different every time you go around it."

Although "the historic racing rules are to have a good time and go as fast as you dare while being safe," surprises can happen on the track.

"I've had Maseratis go sideways in front of me — it gets your heart pumping when you don't want to hit that million-dollar car," Evans said.

"Most people are very respectful not only of what they're driving, but what we're driving. It's very good racing, but there's always a great level of respect out there."

Evans too praised the congeniality among competitors.

"You know most of the people who are racing the same kind of car," he said. "It's a friendly race, not a cutthroat race."

Evans described a favorite stretch of the track as the uphill climb from Turn 6 — affectionately known as the Salinas Off-ramp — and into the signature quick downhill left-right.

"It seems like you're going to drop off the top of the earth when you get to the top of the Corkscrew," he said.

Outside the races, Evans and his wife "usually try to get to one or two of the auctions, depending on time and how well the car's running," he said. They also volunteer during the Tour d'Elegance.

Goldsmith will be driving his Uncle Kent's number 11 Lotus 11 on Sunday in Group 1B.

Peninsula residents driving during the Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races Saturday include Larry Menser in his 1960 Meskowski Indy Roadster and Baja Cantina owner Pat Phinny in a 1948 Kurtis Kraft in Group 2A, Lou Pavesi in a 1954 Huffaker-Healey Special in Group 3A, and Jimmy Domingos in a 1960 Cooper T-52 F Jr. and Don Orosco in a 1959 Scarab F1 in Group 6A. Sunday will also include Pat and Chris Orosco competing in Group 1B in 1960 and 1959 Lola Mark 1s, John Kerby-Miller in his 1958 Porsche 356A in Group 2B, Jim Castle Jr. in his 1957 Corvette in Group 3B and Mac Archer in his 1965 Cobra — Old Bertha — in Group 4B.
