Injured CHP officer has foggy memory of fateful night

By CHRIS COUNTS

PERHAPS CALIFORNIA Highway Patrolman Jim Covello saw his life flash before his eyes in the seconds before he was hit by a passing van March 23. A month later, though, Covello has little recollection of the harrowing incident that nearly cost him his life.

Covello was investigating an overturned and abandoned Toyota 4-Runner at about 2 a.m. on a seemingly vacant stretch of Highway 1 just north of Garrapata Beach. Suddenly, a Dodge van driven by 18-year-old Leif Holtermann clipped the SUV and smashed into Covello and his patrol car. The van was traveling at an estimated speed of 45 mph.

Just before disaster struck, Covello was attempting to remove the SUV — which reportedly belongs to Big Sur resident Jason Jones — from the road because it was creating a hazard on the rain-slick surface.

“I was getting ready to attach a chain to

CUSD to push $18M bond

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL Unified School District board got to work Monday night on the campaign for an $18 million construction bond this November. The money will help pay for projects left unfunded by the $20 million bond voters approved five years ago. The lengthy list includes a theater for the high school and new classrooms at several campuses to replace 17 portables.

School superintendent Marvin Biasotti announced CUSD board member Amy Funt had volunteered to be campaign chair, and she contacted the consultant on the school bond, Brad Senden, “within nanoseconds” of taking on the job.

“He’s given me advice, and I am forming a committee so we can reach out beyond the staff and parents to the community,” she said.

Senden outlined the responsibilities of the board and of Funt’s committee.

“The board has very little left to do, but it’s all very important,” he said, including approving the 75-word ballot statement, finalizing the project list, determining the bond’s exact size and cost, and preparing a tax rate statement of what the estimated highest and lowest tax rates would be, to show “how to raise what we’re going to raise.”

Last November, when the board voted to pursue the bond, district business manager Judy Long estimated the tax rate to pay for it would amount to $10 per $100,000 of assessed property value.

“Like every community in California, your assessed value is moving up rather rapidly,” Senden said.

Finally, the board will have to adopt a resolution calling for the election. He advised members to spend May and June working on those tasks.

“Summer is a hard time for getting anything done,” he said.

Senden advised Funt’s committee to get busy raising money and preparing to get the message out. That will be expensive and

63-year-old Ironman defies belief

By KIRSTIE WILDE

IF IT weren’t for the crowds who have seen him in action, Whitney Lynn might have trouble convincing people his feats of mind-blowing stamina are for real. After all, who among us can imagine running 26 miles, let alone doing so after swimming two-and-a-half miles in the ocean and after riding a grueling 112 miles on a bicycle? Those three events make up the ultimate triathlon — and they don’t call it Ironman for nothin’ — designed to challenge the fittest athletes on Earth.

But was the Ironman also meant for an ex-smoker who is admittedly a “pretty average athlete” and who will celebrate his 64th birthday this year?

When this self-effacing man describes the Ironman, he makes it sound like psychological warfare. And it seems clear the opponent he’s trying to outwit is himself.

“They print your age in big blue numbers on the back of your calf,” Lynn said of the organizers of the Ironman competitions and qualifiers — the most recent being the Lavaman in Waikoloa, Hawaii, April 3. “That way you know exactly how old the guy was who just passed you.” And if the competitor ahead has a leg tattoo of a number a decade or so younger than Lynn’s, well, when he passes that guy it feels pretty darned sweet.

Lynn, whose past life includes impressive success as CEO of several computer peripherals businesses in Scotts Valley, San Jose and Los Angeles, and who now divides his time between homes in Montana, Hawaii and Los Gatos, remembers the exact moment he gave up chasing dollars and starting pursuing fitness with a capital F.

It was 1996. He was “being paid quite nicely” by the big, bureaucratic, San Jose company, Adaptec, but it just wasn’t fun anymore. He was leafing through a magazine and became intrigued by an ad for a triathlon camp in Vail, Colo.

Lynn had never even been on a road bike and hadn’t swum in 40 years, but he enjoyed running, so he gave the company a call.

“Who’s this camp for?” Lynn asked, and was told, “It’s for beginners.”

At Vail he learned about training, nutrition, technique and various workouts. Fifty percent of the time was spent in a classroom learning the science of human endurance. Two months later he ran his “first little sprint triathlon” in Sacramento. He was 55 years old.

“It was just a half-mile swim, 6-mile bike ride and 5K,” Lynn said. “I was hooked.”

He worked a year or so longer in the computer industry, trying to help a Scotts Valley software company, Borland, challenge Microsoft. But his heart was no longer in the business.

“I could feel my new calling and I realized my job was interfering with my training,” Lynn said. “So I told my colleagues, ‘You know, guys, I’m out of here.’” He quit to pursue a dream that to most mortals would be much worse than a nightmare: the Ironman Canada competition in 1998. His hope was to finish under the deadline of 17 hours, and he succeeded, with a time of

■ Free pool rejected School board OKs $2M pool plan

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TURNING DOWN a Carmel High School parent’s offer to donate a 50-meter pool because it is too large, the Carmel Unified School District board of education unanimously voted Monday night to install a 40-meter pool instead.

The vote followed years of fundraising by the Friends of Carmel Aquatics and several lengthy and sometimes contentious debates at recent school board meetings. Arguments focused not on whether the small, shallow, 60-year-old lap and water-polo pools should be replaced, but what size the new pool should be.

CHS swim coach Conrad Khors said a 50-meter pool would better serve the swim, dive and water polo teams, as well as outside clubs that would use it. CHS parent Mike Rianda also strongly favored the larger pool, which he was willing to donate. He was the high bidder in an auction for the 50-meter, vinyl-coated, stainless-steel in-ground pool used for Olympic Trials in Indiana, and his offer to CHS included all its accompanying equipment. The pool is disassembled and in storage in Indiana.

But if the board decided to cut that pool down to 40 meters, Rianda said he would not give the pool outright, but instead charge CUSD $200,000, which is still far below its $600,000 value, according to school superintendent Marvin

Bell of the ball back at work marking the way

By MARY BROWNFIELD

LOOKING AS if it has been there for nearly a century, a new El Camino Real bell now hangs from the long-vacant stanchion at Rio Road and Santa Lucia. Last week, a Carmel Public Works crew mounted the 75-pound bronze bell cast from the mold used to make the original, which disappeared more than a dozen years ago.

"It's a beautiful piece of artwork," said city building official Tim Meroney, who renewed the search for a replacement bell after someone hung one made of painted plywood from the post during the holidays. Administrative assistant Margi Perotti found the ideal foundry earlier this year.

"I called a couple of places, and then this guy answered and knew exactly where the bell had been and what it looked like," she said.

John Kolstad, present owner of California Bell Company, agreed to make a copy of the earliest bell produced by his company, founded by Mrs. A.S.C. Forbes, who poured the first cast iron bell to mark El Camino Real —The King's Highway — in 1906.

That bell was mounted at the Iglesia de Nuestra Señora Reina de Los Angeles, also known as the Plaza Church, according to Kolstad. On it was inscribed "El Camino Real 1769-1906," representing the founding of the first Mission and the dedication of the first bell.

"As early as 1890, service groups, historians and bicyclists were concerned about the loss of El Camino Real," he said, which was rapidly being replaced by more modern highways.

"It was California's first roadway, so they decided to help residents appreciate the history of their state, as well as increase the rear axle to winch [the SUV] back upright and then use my patrol car to push it out of the roadway," Covello remembered. "That was the last conscious thought I had."

The next memory Covello recalled was talking to a sheriff's deputy.

"She was telling me I needed to start cooperating with the ambulance crew and give up my gun belt," said Covello, who was more concerned at that point with doing his job than worrying about his health. "I asked her if there were any other CHP units on the scene."

According to Covello, there was a head-shaped indentation on the windshield with blonde hair embedded in it, a graphic illustration of the impact. Investigators determined Covello was thrown about 25 feet.

Evidently, the driver of the van and his passengers tried in vain to wake the unconscious Covello and unsuccessfully tried to use the police radio. The driver and his three passengers then, according to Covello, moved their van to a turnout a short distance from the accident. While they were gone, he woke up and reported the accident himself.

"I got up and walked over to the patrol car," said Covello. "They tell me I called in [to the CHP dispatcher], but I don't remember doing so. I repeated my message about five times, so the dispatcher knew something was wrong."

From the moment he handed his gun belt to the sheriff's deputy, Covello has only fragmented recollection.

"I remember being in the ambulance and promising to be a good patient," Covello said. "The next thing I know, I'm on a helicopter to Stanford [University Medical Center.]"

At Stanford, Covello recalled being aware of a strange and unnerving sound, which he described as a "pachink-pachink."

It turned out doctors were using a stapler to close a head wound.

"I guess I was squirming, because a doctor got in my face and asked me to stay still," he said.

He was treated for head lacerations and abrasions to his knees. He suffered a concussion and a pulled muscle in his neck. He now has a scar on his right cheek from where his face hit the pavement. Covello is recuperating at his home in Big Sur.

"I was very lucky," Covello said. "I had no broken bones and I still have all my teeth."

Covello just started physical therapy and he is on medication for headaches. While he is clearly not ready yet to return to duty, Covello is pleased with the pace of his rehabilitation.

"I am a lot better than I was a month ago," said Covello, who has not driven a car since the accident. "I'm still a bit foggy and my short-term memory is not sharp. I want to be fixed and lucid in my thoughts. It's going to take some time. But I'm on the mend."

He is eagerly anticipating returning to work.

"I miss Big Sur," he said. "Half the fun is just driving up and down the coast. But on this job I have to be 100 percent. I can't get called out in the middle of the night and have the spins or be dizzy."

Covello is also looking forward to resuming his favorite physical activities.

"I didn't get to run the Big Sur Marathon," he said. "And one of the things that disturbs me most is [the possibility] of missing the [Big Sur] softball season."

The accident is still under investigation. According to CHP public affairs officer Richard Richards, an accident investigation team was brought in from Fresno. Charges have not yet been filed against Holtermann or Jones.

Village to participate in National Day of Prayer

CARMEL WILL join thousands of American cities in the 54th Annual National Day of Prayer May 5.

"Prayer will help preserve the foundation our nation was built upon," said local coordinator Vicki Nohrden.

The National Day of Prayer was established in 1952 by a joint resolution of the United States Congress and put into law by President Harry S. Truman. It is founded on the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and freedom of religion.

"As we gather locally, our focus and attention are not given to denomination, race, sex or party but to God, who is worthy to be praised for His continued faithfulness, unconditional love, favor and wise counsel," Nohrden said.

In 2004, approximately 40,000 events were held nationwide, including prayer breakfasts, Bible reading marathons, concerts of prayer, rallies and vigils.

Participants will gather at Devendorf Park in downtown Carmel from noon to 1 p.m.

"We welcome people of all faiths to join us," said Nohrden.

Are Pets a Factor When Selling?

Those who live with and love their pets are often unaware of two things: First, there may be odors in the house that they've become unaware of over time. Second, many potential home buyers aren't necessarily enamored of pets, especially those who are allergic to their dander.

This can be a ticklish matter for the real estate professional trying to help people make their homes as saleable as possible. No one wants to seem to criticize a client's pet--so how do you tell someone his beloved ferret stinks?

The truth, however, is that a good real estate professional will do everything possible to help you make your home stand out from the rest of the homes on the market--from helping you set the best price to helping you decide on any cosmetic improvements to the home to make it even more attractive.

Back to the pet problem, therefore.... When real estate agents bring prospective buyers through your home, it's a good idea to let dogs or cats outside (if they are outdoor animals) or confine them to one area of the house. Further, you may want to hire a professional to clean your carpets and furniture.

It's all a part of getting the best possible price for your home.

Man armed with handgun robs C.V. bank

A MASKED man dressed all in black walked into a mid valley bank Monday afternoon, pulled out a handgun, demanded and received cash from a teller, and fled out the back door, according to the Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

After the alarm was sounded, "deputies got there within just a couple minutes and set up a perimeter," said sheriff's investigator Sgt. Doug Dahmen.

The department also dispatched a K-9 officer to search for the robber, but the dog failed to sniff him out.

Since he was dressed all in black and wearing a mask, people at the bank could only describe the suspect as 5 foot 8 to 5 foot 11 inches tall and weighing 160 to 180 pounds. They could not describe the color of his eyes or hair.

Dahmen said the man escaped with an undisclosed amount of cash. The FBI and the sheriff's department are conducting a joint investigation of the crime and are following several leads.

Meanwhile, Carmel police officers visited downtown banks this week, advising them of the armed robbery and sharing the vague description of the suspect.

Shoplifting suspect strips off evidence

By MARY BROWNFIELD

Stephanie Meredith

A GROUP of store employees began calling themselves "Charlie's Angels" after they helped nab an alleged thief April 23. Stephanie Meredith, 34, was caught after a brief foot chase by Carmel Police Sgt. Mike Calhoun, who also learned she was wanted for robbery.

"Those girls are tough. You cannot steal from them — they take it personally," Calhoun said of the staff at Paloosh, a women's clothing store at Ocean and Dolores. "If it weren't for them, I wouldn't have caught her."

Calhoun said the saleswomen noticed an empty hanger and reviewed the store's surveillance tape to see who might have taken the clothes. Moments later, they saw Meredith walk by their shop wearing the missing clothes.

They phoned police, who were already looking for a shoplifter who had stolen a negligee from nearby Intima, and then left the store to follow her.

The suspect ditched her pursuers, Calhoun said, but they spied her again and confronted her near Piccadilly Park.

"She took off the sweater and tank top right there and said, 'Here, take them,'" detective Jesse Juarez reported.

When Calhoun arrived to question Meredith, she bolted, according to Juarez.

Calhoun chased her up Ocean to Mission Street.

"She ran around one side of a bus, thinking Mike would follow her, but he didn't. He ran the other way and cut her off," Juarez said. "She was arrested wearing pants, a faux fur jacket and a bra."

Juarez didn't know details of the $25,000 felony arrest warrant, but said she told police it involved a fight over a cell phone in Carmel Valley.

Meredith was booked into Monterey County Jail on new felony charges as well as the outstanding warrant for robbery, according to Calhoun.

Carmel Valley

Behind closed doors, drive to incorporate continues

By CHRIS COUNTS

INCORPORATION PROPONENTS believe the Town of Carmel Valley is financially viable. Opponents disagree. So where does the truth lie?

Behind closed doors, Monterey County officials — led by chief assistant administrative officer Jim Colangelo — and proponents — led by former 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman — are meeting to determine the likely revenues and expenses of the new town.

Strasser Kauffman called the present talks “a critical piece of the puzzle.”

“We need to make sure the new town is in good financial shape,” said Strasser Kauffman. “We need to make sure the county won’t have to pick up the pieces down the road. We’re looking to provide an accurate financial picture so people can make an informed decision [about incorporation].”

Strasser Kauffman is a member of the Carmel Valley Forum, a local nonprofit organization that does not take a position on incorporation but “is simply committed to moving the process forward so that the people of Carmel Valley may choose the best course for themselves.” Strasser Kauffman also said she has not taken a personal stand on the issue.

“I don’t want to make a commitment,” Strasser Kauffman said. “It’s too early to tell. I’m sympathetic to the demands made on the county, and I’m sympathetic to the desire of residents to control their future.”

The talks are a prelude to revenue neutrality negotiations, explained Kate McKenna, executive officer of the Local Agency Formation Commission.

“The primary focus [of presents talks] is for both parties to evaluate the draft fiscal analysis and verify the accuracy of its numbers,” said McKenna, who is attending discussions as an observer.

While McKenna concedes negotiations are behind schedule, she believes the talks have been productive.

“The [discussions] have taken time, but they have been a good use of time,” she said. “A lot of work is being done to confirm the accuracy [of the numbers]. Once we’ve accomplished that, revenue neutrality negotiations will get under way.”

Revenue neutrality negotiations, which McKenna said could take two to three months to complete, represent a key step in the incorporation process. While the town is projected to have a surplus of $2.2 million by its second year of operation (based on the draft fiscal analysis), the county is expected to lose $2.5 million that year as a result of the incorporation.

While it is unclear whether the county will insist on receiving the full alimony payment, Colangelo implied as much last December.

“While there is room for negotiation, we have no expectation other than revenue neutrality,” he said at the time. (That could mean a payment from the new town to the county of $300,000 in the second year of its existence and additional payments in subsequent years.)

Last week, Colangelo said he was hoping the two parties could reach an agreement.

“We need to keep the county whole, and at the same time not require so much of a payment that incorporation isn’t feasible,” he said.

Colangelo said the two sides were exploring the possibility of “creatively structuring” the payments.

Revenue neutrality negotiations will determine the duration of time the town would be required to make the undetermined alimony payment. The Carmel Valley Forum reported on its website that “the payments are for a specified period of time, typically about five to 10 years for a community the size of Carmel Valley.”

A survey of recent incorporations in California indicates cities often are required to make such payments over a greater time span. For instance, the City of Los Angeles studied recent incorporations in a 2001 report to prepare for mitigation negotiations with two secession applicants.

“In other incorporations the revenue neutrality payments have varied, but generally fall between 10 to 25 years,” stated city administrative officer William Fujioka. “This time frame gives the county sufficient time to adjust to the loss of a few percent of its revenue without negatively impacting the remaining people in the county.”

Discrimination and harassment suit filed against RLS

By LAITH AGHA

TWO FORMER Stevenson School female employees claim they were fired for complaining about sexual harassment by male coworkers and an allegedly sexually hostile environment in which they were forced to work, according to a lawsuit filed in Monterey County Superior Court April 15.

An attorney for the school, Brian Call, flatly denied the women's claims.

"When the allegations were first made, a thorough investigation was conducted by the school and they were determined to be unfounded," Call said. He declined to comment on why the women, Donna Mueller and Helen Cheeseman were let go.

Among the complaints in their suit were the display of hard-core pornography in common work areas and an allegedly hushed-up incident in which a supervisor was caught receiving oral sex from another employee on school grounds, the suit claims.

Mueller and Cheeseman were each relieved of their positions as Stevenson bus drivers last year — Mueller in March and Cheeseman in July. Their lawsuit also makes a charge of national origin discrimination against RLS, claiming school employees discriminated against Cheeseman, who is Mexican.

"The school hasn't really given a reason [for the firings]. We tried going through a mediation session with them to try to avoid a court case, and they didn't say much," said Brian Carter, the San Francisco attorney representing the plaintiffs.

The lawsuit alleges coworker John Payne repeatedly made sexually demeaning comments and gestures in her presence, about which she complained to a supervisor in fall 2003. She also confronted Payne about the discomfort she felt from his comments.

Upon returning from that year's Christmas break, Mueller discovered the maintenance staff lunch room and bathroom contained pornographic magazines, and dirty pictures were displayed in wood shop. On Jan. 23, 2004, she filed a formal complaint with the school's human resources department, submitting as evidence a men's magazine, Jugs, which she claimed had been left in a common area.

Three days later, Mueller reported Payne attempted to intimidate her by speeding out of the school parking lot in his car, passing very close to her.

Meanwhile, the school's facilities operation manager, Willie Suber, who supervised Mueller, Cheeseman, and Payne, threatened

Scenic Road hangs in balance as agencies, neighbors debate facts

By CHRIS COUNTS

AS EVIDENCE continues to mount that Scenic Road is on less than stable ground, hope that its asphalt is supported by a shelf of bedrock is giving way to a fear that it could be swept away in the next big storm.

Geologist Joseph C. Clark, who prepared a 1997 U.S. Geological Survey map of the Carmel Point area, says bedrock beneath Scenic Road lies at depths of eight to 22 feet.

Paul John, a member of the Carmel Point and Lagoon Preservation Association, said his newly formed group has already committed $22,000 to studies which he believes will confirm that Scenic Road, one of Monterey County's most scenic thoroughfares, is highly susceptible to erosion.

"We hired a consulting civil engineer and a hydrology and geomorphology firm," said John, who lives near Carmel Point. "Tests were conducted [and they] did not show any evidence of any geological formations other than sand. Both [the engineer and the hydrology and geomorphology firm] have confirmed the road is in a state of emergency and requires immediate remedial action."

The existence of sewer lines located about seven feet beneath the road only makes the situation more critical, John said.

"If the slope goes, the road goes," he said. "Break the sewer line and you've got sewage on the beach."

John said his group has notified Monterey County Public Works of the test results. Public Works interim maintenance manager Vic Lewis confirmed his agency has received the group's recommendation. While his agency plans no immediate action in response to the report, Lewis acknowledged an effort to shore up Scenic Road could begin as early as June.

"The river is continuing to recede," Lewis said. "We will continue to monitor the road, but we do not feel there is any imminent danger."

Lewis also confirmed talks are underway between Public Works and representatives of the National Marine Fisheries Service. Neighbors argue the erosion is the result of a decision by Monterey County Publics Works to breach the Carmel River sandbar at a northerly angle to accommodate a request by the federal agency, which was concerned that cuts to the south were draining the lagoon too quickly, sweeping young steelhead out to sea.

The annual breaching is required as a flood control measure during the rainy season. According to the Lewis, the two agencies are discussing the results of the recent northerly breach.

"I'm sure there will be a lot of dialogue over that issue," he said.

Did the northerly breach hurt?

Despite the seemingly good intentions behind the decision to cut the northerly breach, John believes the plan has backfired. Not only has the breach threatened the road and an adjacent landmark cypress, but it has threatened young steelhead as well, he said.

"Because of the shallowness [of the channel cut by public works] and the extra quarter-mile the river has to travel [to reach the ocean], birds have had a feeding frenzy. It's the best feast they've ever had."

Carmel River Steelhead President Roy Thomas said the "feeding frenzies" that John and others have observed are nothing more than "birds washing their feathers." He said there are "hundreds of places" where the river is shallow, and only egrets and herons are successful at fishing in shallow water.

"People see all these birds swooping back and forth and they think they are eating all the steelhead," Thomas said. "I challenge you to find a bird with a fish in its mouth."

Thomas said steelhead travel primarily at night.

"Fish aren't dumb," said Thomas, who visits the Carmel River mouth up to three times day. "They're hiding in the deep parts of the lagoon and the river. Everyone wants to eat them, so they stay out of sight and out of mind."

Growing grapes the 'green' way at Heller Estate

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

FOR MANY wineries south of Sonoma and Napa, it's been an uphill struggle to achieve the recognition they truly deserve. Heller Estate, formerly Durney Vineyard, has achieved near perfection with luscious fruit-laden vines, managing to earn a cult status amongst oenophiles. Heller promotes sustainable winemaking practices while making it all happen. Take one sip of any of the label's award-winning nectars and you'll know it can't be easy.

Durney Vineyard was established by the late William Durney and his wife Dorothy in Carmel in 1968. He'd discovered a single, uncultivated vine growing and was inspired to plant a small vineyard on his property. The 120 acres of sandy, clay loamy soil are situated at an altitude of 1,200 to 1,550 feet above the Hidden Springs of Cachagua (a local Indian derivative of a French-Spanish word meaning "hidden waters"). When test drillings were made, deep hidden springs were discovered. The grapes grown on this soil are primarily dry-farmed, with a minimum of irrigation. Natural underground water sources encourage the stressed vines to develop a deeper root structure. The hungry vines squeeze greater mineral elements from the soil, which contributes to the complexity of luscious flavors in the wines. Durney produced his first wines in 1976.

After Bill Durney's death, the sunshinebathed estate was taken over by the Heller family in 1970. They are active proponents of the sustainable system of agriculture. The Hellers' efforts to promote healthier soils and better wine grapes are symbolic of the increasingly "green" attitude being adopted by winemakers around the globe.

Heller Estate wines are produced from certified organically grown grapes, nurtured without pesticides or herbicides. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, organic wine must be made with organically grown grapes and without added sulfites, a preservative. Wines made with organic grapes, but with sulfites added during winemaking, can be labeled as being made with organic ingredients.

In 2004, Wine Business Monthly, a trade magazine, reported organic wine acres in California had reached 8,000. Heller Estate's Mueller for reporting the incidents, according to court documents.

Claiming he would have taken care of the matter had she come to him first, Suber told Mueller he would punish her by "taking away something you love," referring to her employment and close ties with the school. Mueller's three children graduated from Stevenson and her husband teaches there.

Mueller was fired a month later, she claims.

Additionally, Cheeseman, who is of Mexican descent, is also accusing Suber of national origin discrimination.

Suber, who is African-American, allegedly told her that he does not like Mexicans working at the school because "they are all thieves."

Cheeseman says that she knows of other instances in which Suber made disparaging remarks about Hispanics.

"There doesn't seem to be a good faith investigation by the school, but rather an attempt at a cover up," said Carter.

certification was granted after three vintages of clean farming, although the vineyard has employed organic methods for years. To receive official certification for organically grown grapes, the vineyard must adhere to strict organic farming methods, such as:

- Pest management control - not using any pesticides or unapproved organic chemicals for insect control. (The vineyard has planted French prune trees around the property so natural predators, such as wasps, can flourish.)

- Soil management - no herbicides are employed, and the desired results are accomplished by composting all vineyard and winery organic waste, which is then spread in the middle of the vineyard rows in order to build the matter content of the vineyard soil.

- Weed management is controlled by planting cover crops, which also provide an effective habitat for other beneficial insects, such as vineyard spiders.

In addition to practicing eco-friendly grape-growing, Heller Estate was one of the first vineyards in Monterey County to eliminate the use of fossil fuels in their farming practices and adopt the use of biodiesel, a 100 percent plant-based fuel.

While implementing these eco-smart methods are costly and labor intensive, they are contributing not only to the ecology and environment, but also to wine consumer's health. In the long run, Heller Estate will produce even better quality fruit and healthier vines, making their vineyard a veritable Garden of Eden.

Rich Tanguay, formerly of Topolos and Buena Vista, is the wine guru at the helm of producing Heller Estate's age-worthy and full-bodied wines. Although the winery typically exhibits characteristics of Bordeaux, it also has a distinctly California influence. The main varietals include Chenin Blanc, Cabernet Sauvignon, Chardonnay and Pinot Noir, but plantings of Riesling, Merlot, Malbec and Cabernet Franc have been playing an increasing role. Cabernets have been described by wine reviewers as "super-rich, with lots of tannin and explosively long finishes." The Chardonnays are reviewed as "dramatic, blockbuster wines that are rich, exceptionally age worthy, and can easily last five to seven years" — an uncommonly long time for a California Chardonnay. The current production is approximately 25,000 cases annually.

Heller Estate's green practices have shown that it is possible to produce some of the highest quality wines in the world while leaving the smallest and least indelible footprint on our precious Earth. Let this be a trend that puts other Monterey County winemakers on the map.

Tor House welcomes visitors to stroll its cottage garden

A CARMEL garden lovingly tended by volunteers in the shadow of the Hawk Tower hand built by poet Robinson Jeffers welcomes visitors from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, May 1.

The annual garden party sponsored by the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation is a multi-faceted event. It embraces live music, displays of original artwork and tantalizes the senses further with an array of refreshments, tea party-style.

Docents will offer tours of the tower Jeffers built of stone he gathered along Carmel Point.

James Karman, author of "Stones of Big

PHOTOS/JAVIER CHAGOYA

Artists exhibit their impression of Jeffers' home during the garden party.

Sur," which blends Jeffers' words with Karman's photos, will autograph copies of his book. A benefit drawing is sponsored by Great Things Antiques, California Market, Inn at Spanish Bay and La Playa Hotel.

The annual party is the only day of the year when visitors are permitted to photograph within the house.

Tickets are $15, $10 for seniors. One must be age 12 or older to be admitted.

For more information, call (831) 624-1813 or www.torhouse.org.

Tor House is located at 26304 Ocean View Avenue, in view of the Pacific Ocean.

Live music augments the garden party experience.

FLUTIST KENNY STAHL SHARES HIS PLACE IN THE SUN

Plugged In
By Stephen L. Vagnini

LONGTIME LOCAL jazz fixture, flutist Kenny Stahl, performs this Saturday, April 30, at the KRML Jazz and Blues Company in Carmel with an impressive supporting cast comprising of drummer Eddie Marshall, bassist Ray Drummond and pianist Murray Low. Stahl, who moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1980, is a full-time working musician, in itself a difficult feat on the Monterey Peninsula. A classically trained flutist who has performed with the Reno and Miami symphonies, Stahl plays regularly at the Inn at Spanish Bay with Latin jazz great Helcio Milito and is a first-call musician at various jazz clubs and corporate engagements on the Central Coast. A seasoned recording artist as well, Stahl appears on numerous CDs, including Jeff Linski's "Angel Serenade" on Concord Picante, and his own recordings, "Kenny's from Heaven," "Scentuality" and his latest release, "Mpingo." Expect a lot of his original material at Saturday's gig, and the group will showcase three new Stahl original compositions. Insofar as his manager once told him, "that he is an artist that tends to rise to the level of the players he plays with," Saturday's performance should be special. Saturday's drummer, who performed with Stahl at last year's Monterey Jazz Festival, is a leading figure in the evolution of San Francisco's contemporary jazz sound. The cofounder of The Fourth Way, a seminal jazz fusion group, Marshall has played with Toshiko Akiyoshi, the late Stan Getz, Bobby Hutcherson and Bobby McFerrin. And for the first time in almost three decades, Marshall will team up with bassist Ray Drummond. A former student at Monterey High School and currently a member of the music department at CSUMB, Drummond is an acclaimed composer, arranger, bandleader, educator and producer and has appeared on more than 300 recordings.

drummer Andy Weis has been backing up jazz musicians on the Monterey Peninsula for more than 20 years. A student at Boston's Berklee College of Music in 1973, where he studied with drummer Alan Dawson, Weis later enlisted in the Army and was stationed at Fort Ord, where he was named battalion "Soldier of the Month." A popular musician and music educator, Weis has performed with a host of local luminaries, including Jackie Coon, Smith Dobson and Bill Watrous, and is summoned for jazz gigs, casuals and weddings. At 6 p.m. Saturday, April 30, pianist Bob Phillips performs with drummer Dave Morwood. Call (831) 372-1234.

Pianist Eddie Mendenhall, an adjunct staff member of the music departments at CSUMB and Monterey Peninsula College, will perform solo at the Inn at Spanish Bay this Saturday and Sunday, 7 to 11 p.m. A graduate of Robert Louis Stevenson Upper School, Mendenhall earned a seat on the Monterey Jazz Festival High School All Star Band in 1989 and 1990, under the direction of Bill Berry, and received a scholarship to the Berklee College of Music in Boston. From 1995 to 2002 Mendenhall lived in Japan, where he became one of the hardest working pianists in the Tokyo jazz scene, performing at jazz clubs, major hotels and embassy parties. In addition to performing solo, recent projects include a new trio with bassist Dan Robbins and drummer Steve Robertson. For information, call the Inn at Spanish Bay at (831) 647-7500.

Performing the following Saturday (May 7) at the KRML jazz venue, vocalist Linda Angelis will sing jazz standards accompanied by Weber Iago on piano, Chaz Mewhort on drums, Dan Robbins on bass, Leo Costa on percussion and Stahl on flute. A British vocalist and flugelhorn player, Angelis began her musical career as a student at the Royal Northern College, singing and playing classical trumpet. She performs at the Jazz and Blues Company in support of her latest album, "Lady of Light." KRML concerts start at 7:30 p.m. For reservations, call (831) 624-6432. Performing at 5:30 p.m. this Friday, April 29, at the Hyatt Regency in Monterey, Biasotti. He said Rianda paid more than $400,000 for the pool, but the exact figure was not available.

Khors worried the smaller pool would not accommodate the school's 90 swimmers and its diving team at the same time, but Dennis Berkshire of Aquatics Design Group showed a 40-meter pool could hold 90 swimmers in 15 7-foot-wide lanes while the dive team used the deep end. Carmel High's current 25-by-14-yard lap pool contains 6-foot-wide lanes used by six swimmers each.

'A 50-meter pool is too big for the hole you want to put it in — it's far too big for the programs we run at Carmel High School. When you put that all together, we would be far better served by a 40-meter pool.'

FOCA, which initially pitched a 40-meter pool due to its lower costs and the limited site behind the gym where the pool will be installed, campaigned for more length after Rianda made his offer. Nonetheless, FOCA board member Brian Call said the group would support either option with an immediate donation of $50,000 toward planning and design.

Carmel High Principal Karl Pallastrini argued strongly for the smaller pool, which he said would meet students' needs while not taking up too much space on the congested 18-acre campus.

"A 50-meter pool is too big for the hole you want to put it in — it's far too big for the programs we run at Carmel High School," he said, adding that the school is projected to see its enrollment drop during the coming years. "When you put that all together, we would be far better served by a 40-meter pool."

Costly venture

Wald Ruhnke & Dost Architects estimated the costs of installing a 50-meter pool at $2.15 million to $2.17 million, depending on how much site work is needed, while a 40-meter pool, including the $200,000 payment to Rianda, would run an estimated $1.98 million.

The figures for the 50-meter pool included $1.44 million to the contractor, $200,000 to $225,000 for site work, $18,000 for more fencing, $40,000 for new bleachers, $20,000 for storm drains, and "soft costs" of $120,000. Henry Ruhnke described soft costs as anything that's not "bricks and sticks," such as permit fees. Finally, the architects estimated it would cost $78,000 to relocate and make ADA accessible the portable classroom that serves as a temporary weight room, even though it is slated to be replaced with a

Bloody reenactment strives to dent teens' perceived immortality

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE LURKING Grim Reaper, scythe in hand, was the only giveaway that the grisly car crash at Carmel High School Wednesday morning was staged. Four teens, bloodied and broken, some moaning and others deathly silent, were victims of a drunken classmate who lost control of his mini-van.

The five CHS seniors and the firefighters, paramedics, cops, coroner, news media — and the reaper — helped their schoolmates see the consequences of driving drunk. Named Every 15 Minutes in reference to the early 1990s statistic showing someone died in an alcohol-related accident that often, the 24-hour lesson began with the 9:30 a.m. wreck and ended in a mock funeral Thursday.

Cypress Fire prevention specialist Tony Campa spent months organizing the extensive demonstration, which was overseen by the California Highway Patrol as part of a statewide education effort and involved numerous agencies and businesses.

Two smashed cars held the injured. The drunken teen, played by senior Dustin Starr, was barely hurt, but his passenger, Janelle Peterson, was killed. Whitney Murrian, Hunter Tanous and Elizabeth Chamberlain were injured.

The scene unfolded in front of the students assembled on the hillside above the scene as they heard the moaning and crying while the dispatcher notified the fire department.

A Cypress Fire engine, Carmel Fire Department's rescue rig and ambulances from Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance and AMR rushed onto the field, followed by the CHP, Carmel police and a sheriff's car.

Working together at a frenetic pace as the Grim Reaper strolled through the scene, emergency workers ministered to the injured. Carmel firefighters used heavy air-powered tools, including the Jaws of Life, to cut the doors and roof off the car to free Murrian. Medics rushed three students to the hospital, where doctors and nurses treated their wounds as if they were real. There, Murrian later died.

Police questioned Starr as another officer pulled an extraordinary number of booze bottles from his van. He was eventually cuffed by CHP Officer Hipolito Pelayo, booked at Carmel P.D. and shut in a holding cell.

Firefighters pronounced Peterson dead at the scene and called in the coroner, who photographed her, zipped her into a body bag and loaded her into the hearse for the ride to the morgue at The Paul Mortuary, where her parents arrived to identify her.

As the scene cleared, students left the hillside above the wreck, but the lesson did not end there. Every 15 minutes, a student or teacher was escorted from class by the Grim Reaper, and obituaries were read. By the end of the afternoon, a forest of headstones for these DUI victims had sprouted in front of the school, and "the dead" were gone.

Thursday, students attended a funeral at CHS, when law enforcement and emergency workers hammered their message home. As they walked into the room for that final assembly, students peered into a half-open casket.

"We had a full-length mirror in there," Campa said afterward. "They looked in and saw themselves."

The students who had been led away the day before by the Grim Reaper then returned, in time for the final scene.

"Students saw the living dead led in, and a fellow student in the coffin," Campa said. "The emotional impact — it's incredible."

The elaborate demonstration — timed for maximum impact before the upcoming prom — was funded by $9,999 in tax dollars from the CHP and the Office of Traffic Safety, and $5,000 from the Cypress Fire board. The Padre Parents group also pitched in, to help their children get the message.

The prom has such potential for tragedy, according to CHS Principal Karl Pallastrini.

"This dents their immortality a little bit."

'Students saw the living dead led in, and a fellow student in a coffin. The emotional impact — it's incredible.'

Dale Lefler danced with the stars and stars-to-be

By ANNE PAPINEAU

YOU CAN read about it, watch the DVDs or catch Turner Classic Movies. But Dale Lefler, dancer/choreographer/director, lived it. He danced alongside Judy and Mickey and Esther and Doris as a vital contributor to what's now called Hollywood's golden age. And at age 90, Lefler has a speaking/tap dancing role in the new musical, "Kid Millionaire," opening at the Golden Bough in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Self-effacing is a phrase almost invented for him. And is it any wonder?

larger, permanent facility.

With the smaller pool, the weight room would merely be shifted, at an estimated cost of $16,000, and the 40-meter pool would yield lower costs overall.

Berkshire said estimated operating costs run the gamut, from $240,000 down to $101,000 for a 50-meter pool, and as low as $71,400 for a 40-meter pool, depending on the weather, number of days in use and the amount of chemicals needed. The current pools cost about $50,000 a year to run.

Berkshire also described the last 50 pool installations his company designed for high schools in California. The majority are 40 meters or smaller, while 13 are 50 meters or larger. Of those large pools, seven are shared with the community or funded by private donors, and two are at private schools.

Board member Ernie Lostrom asked how many of the schools would have opted for the larger pools if they could have done so for less than $200,000 more. Berkshire guessed half.

"When I look at the options, the only difference I see is that it costs a little more money, and we have to shift the weight room farther and put in a new fire road," Lostrom commented.

Biasotti, who recommended the board go with a 40-meter pool, said, "The issue related to that is the board's comfort with an expenditure that approaches $100,000, with all the soft costs, for moving the weight room, and then hopefully within a year abandoning it and building a new weight room with the bond."

(To help pay for these and other school projects, the district will seek voter approval of an $18 million bond in November. See related story, page 1A.)

"The 50 seems like such a good deal to me that I hate to turn it down, especially if it's such a good thing for our kids," Lostrom said, adding that colleges have 50-meter pools. He also wondered if installing the smaller pool would be akin to building an 80-yard football field.

Given called the comparison unfair, since an 80-yard field is useless.

"If we had approved a 40-meter pool before Mr. Rianda came along with his offer, people would be ecstatic," he said.

He also said he would not feel comfortable committing the district to the increased operating costs of a larger pool, even if outside groups offer to help.

Given made a motion to approve the installation of the 40-meter pool, and it was seconded by member Amy Funt.

"It's important we're united in this front," Lostrom said before the vote. "I will support it kicking and screaming, but I will be in favor."

All voted to move forward with the pool project. The district will consider whether outside organizations should be charged to use the pool when students are not using it, as they do for athletic fields and other school facilities.

After the vote, applause erupted from proponents on all sides.

IRON MAN

14:56:00, placing in the middle of his age group, 55 to 59.

It wasn't long before he set his sights on "the Kentucky Derby, the Superbowl, the Indy 500" of Ironman competitions, Ironman Hawaii, where the winds can nearly blow riders off their bikes, the ocean surge is life threatening, and the sun sucks the life fluids right out of a runner.

It was in Hawaii that Lynn's psychological warfare nearly found its Waterloo.

"Ironman Hawaii 2003 was an amazing test. I had ingested salt water and tweaked my back in the swim. I was throwing up on the bike. I was losing all my fluids and my salt pills had bounced out of my pouch. I was just in agony, with blisters that nearly covered the entire bottoms of my feet" he said. And he still had most of the marathon to go.

He spotted some sponges littering the ground, sponges that volunteers had soaked with water and handed to runners ahead of Lynn. He took off his shoes and stuffed the sponges under the balls of his feet to pad the blisters, and kept going.

"Of course it hurts. Everything hurts," he responded to a reporter's silly question. "But you never think about quitting. That's the point. You are so psychologically committed that despite the pain, all you think about is the finish line."

And reaching that line brings a most incredible high, accented by cheering crowds. "Finishing an Ironman is far more exciting and rewarding than my first million-dollar deal," he said.

The motivation to drive oneself to such physical and mental lengths is a curious thing. Is a person born with that kind of drive or is it learned? Lynn recalls his childhood in a family of high achievers. His father, an orphan, attended Stanford, Harvard and MIT

— all on scholarship — and became fabulously successful in business. His was a tough act to follow. Today, there is a Stanley Lynn-endowed, million-dollar perpetual scholarship at his Palo Alto alma mater. Stanley's first-born son and daughter also attended the elite university, but his younger son, Whitney, wasn't considered Stanford material.

"I was the dumb one. I was the one they expected to coach football at Chico State," he chuckled.

Who told him he was dumb? His mega-successful father?

"Not just my dad. My mother agreed, and so did most of my teachers," Lynn said. "I was always told I didn't have much talent or ability, but that I was really nice."

After graduating from the University of Arizona and completing two years in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam era, Lynn decided to blaze his own trail in the high-tech electronics world.

"I learned an important thing from my dad: If you don't try, you'll never succeed at anything."

He credits his ability to bury his own ego — that "niceness" his parents noticed — for much of his success in business. During the computer era's infancy, he was instrumental in setting up standards so different computers could use the same peripherals.

"That was a giant leap. While all the competitors were kind of pissing on everybody else, I was able to convince them to create an industry rather than just create competing companies."

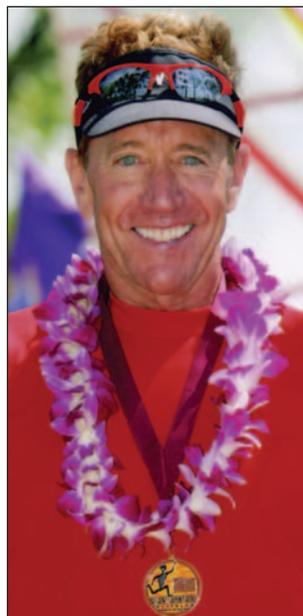

Those were the days when a 10 megabyte drive was the size of a dishwasher and a "silly little piece of software" created by Lynn's company became a Windows-based staple. His exit strategy allowed him to cash in when that silly software was selling for $2,000 a copy. Now a modified version sells for 4 cents and is installed in tens of millions of computers, he said.

The excitement of those days, where he showed the world he wasn't "the dumb son" are long gone. So whence comes the fire to be an Ironman?

"It's doing something that stretches the limits of whatever you thought you could do, or what anybody else could do. It puts you in the elite," he said.

And it doesn't hurt that at his last medical checkup, done in preparation for Ironman Austria July 3, his physician said Lynn is in better shape than .9999 percent of the population in his age group.

"It's competition. It's camaraderie," said Lynn. "It's not to kick someone's ass, but to compete only with yourself."

Lynn's agony during the Lava-man contest qualified him to suffer again, in the 'Superbowl' of Ironman competitions: Ironman Hawaii in October.

Hoping to regain title, bird watchers prepare for competition

By CHRIS COUNTS

IF THERE is any doubt that we live in a competitive society, consider the following: A well-coordinated effort by Monterey County residents this weekend seeks to take back a regional bird-watching title from San Diego County.

At 13 strategically selected locations throughout the county, local bird watchers participating in the 12th annual Monterey County Bird-A-Thon will attempt to identify as many bird species as possible in a 24-hour period starting April 29 at 4 p.m. The event is a fundraiser for the Big Sur Ornithology Lab, located at Andrew Molera State Park.

In 2003, Monterey County was crowned "The Birdiest County in the United States" by Bird Watcher's Digest after local birders tallied in one day 248 different varieties of feathered friends. Last year, the Ohio-based publication decided to award four regional titles instead of one national trophy, and San Diego County captured the prize for "The Birdiest Coastal County in the Western United States" after recording 266 species. Monterey County finished second in the region by again identifying 248 different birds. They also ranked first and second nationally.

"Not only do we have a lot of birds, but Monterey County birders are very well organized," said Jessica Griffiths, director of the Ventana Wilderness Society's Big Sur Ornithology Lab. "They are very passionate about birding and that gives us an edge."

Even before the Birdiest County award was introduced in 2003, Monterey County bird watchers relished competition. For nine years, local birders simply tried to outdo each other.

"People would form teams and try to see how many species they could identify," Griffiths said. "At the end of the day, the team with the most species would win. In 2003, we switched our focus after we discovered the existence of the national contest. We're no longer competing against each other."

Local birders now view San Diego County the way the Stanford University football team looks at UC Berkeley on the eve of The Big Game. At least from the perspective of Monterey County bird watchers, a serious rivalry exists. On its website, the Big Sur Ornithology Lab urges bird watchers to help the county "reclaim its rightful title."

And when asked about its competition, Griffiths' focus was clearly on California's southernmost county.

"I don't think we consider anyone else a real threat," she said.

After two straight years of sighting 248 varieties of birds, Griffiths is confident that number can be boosted. Last year, local birders recorded 10 different species that weren't identified in 2003.

Despite well-organized efforts, Griffiths concedes there is a lot of territory for bird watchers to cover in Monterey County's 3,322 square miles.

"We're definitely short of manpower," she said. "If there are any birders out there who would like to help out, we would really appreciate it."

The Bird-A-Thon will culminate with a festive Countdown Dinner at the Wild Bird

'We're definitely short of manpower. If there are any birders out there who would like to help out, we would really appreciate it.'

Editorial

Hypocritical newspapers also get their facts wrong

A MARCH 19 editorial in the Salinas Californian, in justifying the paper's hope that the coastal commission "will put a stop" to plans for new development in Del Monte Forest, complained that the Pebble Beach Company's proposed new golf course, hotel rooms and employee housing had been "fast-tracked" through the county permit process.

A few weeks later, a British newspaper reported that the Monterey pine is a "rare" species that grows in "very few places on the planet."

And at about the same time, USA Today unquestioningly quoted a Sierra Club rep's opinion that what the P.B. Co. wants to do with a small portion of its undeveloped land amounts to the "largest project" proposed for the California coast "in decades."

These blatantly erroneous assertions — and dozens more like them — have been represented as the gospel truth in newspaper across the country and around the world during the last few weeks.

Reporters and editors, it seems, are outraged at the idea of removing 100 acres of trees to make way for a golf course. Their umbrage has been expressed in editorials and news stories so similarly indignant it's hard to tell which is which.

As a threshold question, one might ask whether they can actually be unaware that their beloved industry — printing newspapers — is one of the biggest tree-killers in history. The slaughter of old-growth trees to produce millions of copies of stimulating features ("Your Daily Horoscope"), can't-miss news items ("Special pullout on the NFL draft"), and highly detailed descriptions of weekend discounts at the local retailer ("Kmart will be open 'til midnight!"), has been going on for decades and continues today. And the people who benefit most from the worldwide logging that makes their livelihoods possible blithely pretend that only a scoundrel would cut down a Monterey pine.

So certain are they that it's a bad idea to clear a small forest to make way for fairways and sandtraps, they see no need to get their facts straight as they condemn the idea. In some cases, they didn't even bother to make their stories internally consistent:

■ On the Californian's website, right next to the paper's complaint that the P.B. Co.'s latest plan has been "fast-tracked," a caption below a photo showing Clint Eastwood announcing the plan almost five years ago describes it as "one of the Peninsula's longest running land-use battles." Huh?

■ In USA Today, just a few paragraphs below the Sierra Club spokesman's description of the plan as "the biggest in decades," another recent project was detailed: In 1999, the paper reported, the coastal commission approved 3,400 homes on 1,600 acres of "undeveloped wetlands and coastal mesas in Orange County." Isn't that just a wee bit bigger than what the Pebble Beach Company is up to?

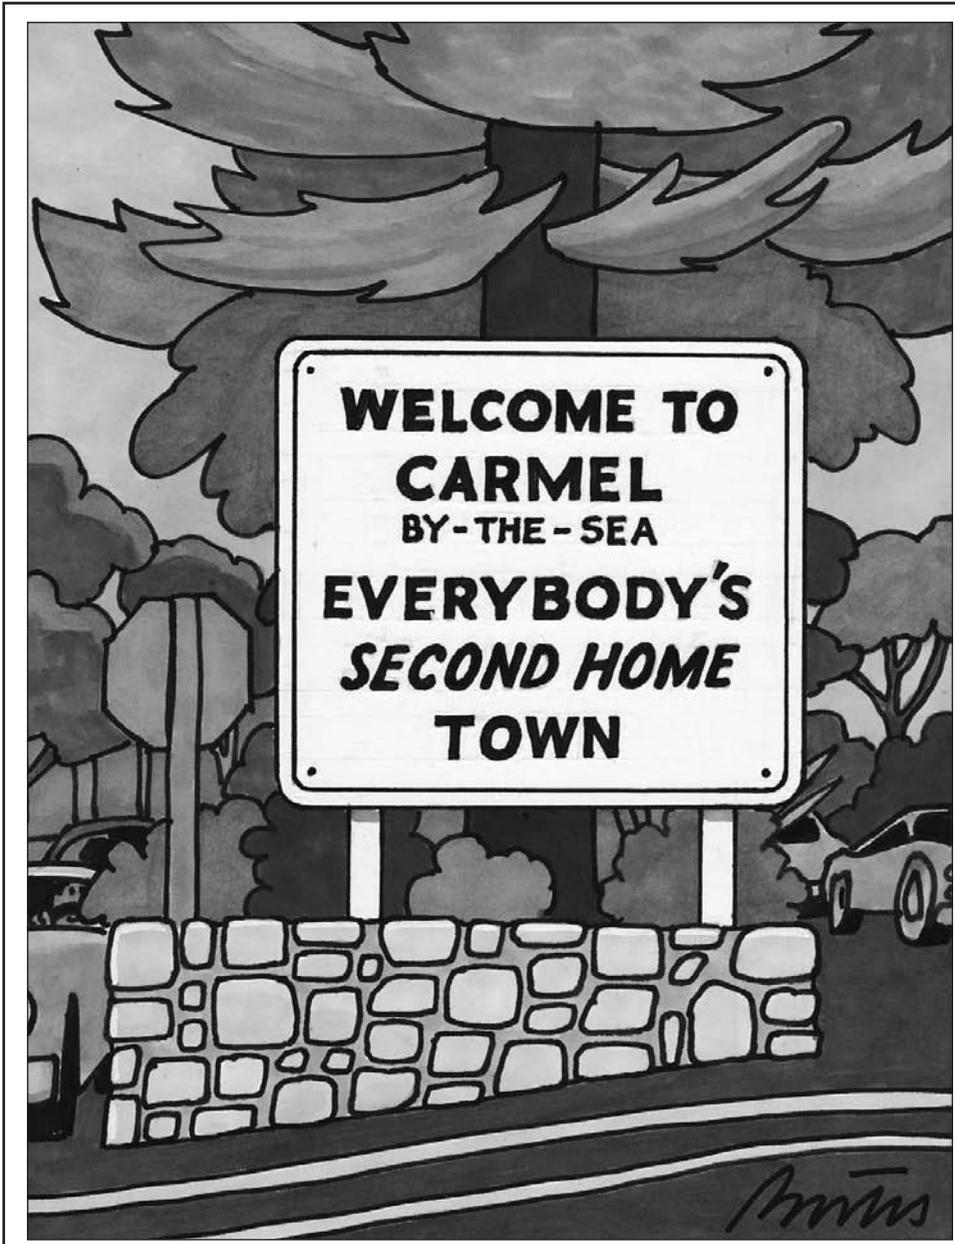

The British newspaper's story at least didn't contradict itself. But if the reporter had no idea the Monterey pine not only isn't rare, it's one of the most common trees in the world, he at least could have done a wee bit of investigating and discovered that Clint Eastwood doesn't live in Carmel; there is no water rationing in Carmel Valley every summer, and David Dilworth doesn't represent a group. He just represents himself.

Almost all these stories make the mistake of exaggerating opposition to the Pebble Beach project. Not having taken the time to get familiar with local circumstances, the reporters invoked a journalistic cliché: "Developers" try to ruin things; "environmentalists" and "the public" try to thwart them.

But in this case, a majority of the people of the Monterey Peninsula clearly support what the P.B. Co. is doing. The November 2000 vote on Measure A showed this, and so has public testimony at numerous hearings in the years since. In fact, most people around here actually appreciate the drastic reduction in potential development and the vast increase in protected open space the P.B. project represents.

We urge the coastal commission to take due notice of these facts and approve the P.B. plan with minimal changes. No matter what all those other newspapers say.

More incorporation info needed

Dear Editor,

In an April 22 letter to The Pine Cone, Glenn Robinson proposed debates on how the boundaries for the Carmel Valley incorporation should be set. He asserted the fiscal analysis had now answered all necessary questions about the incorporation and the time has come to resolve the boundary issues. In a blunt statement, he declared all previous votes by homeowner associations in the boundary areas as irrelevant or bogus and called for a fresh round of debates on how these groups really feel about incorporation and where they think the boundaries should be.

Contrary to what he says, the fiscal viability of the incorporation has not been determined, nor can boundary issues be resolved at this time, according to Kate McKenna, executive officer of LAFCO, the agency responsible for managing the incorporation process. She confirmed that the fiscal analysis is still undergoing revision; revenue neutrality negotiations with the county remain in their beginning stages, and an initial EIR study has yet to begin and could lead to months — even years — of work if a full EIR is required. Any of these processes could break down to halt or delay the incorporation. All will produce essential information for assessing the incorporation proposal, overall, and for dealing with boundary issues. The required information is simply not available at this time on which to base useful debate about the incorporation or its boundaries, she said. Setting the boundaries will be one of the last things we do.

The time for debates will come, but this is not the time, nor is initiating them in terms of vicious attacks on individuals and groups the way to set them in motion.

Too soon for debates

Dear Editor,

Just a note of correction. Contrary to Mr. Robinson's recent commentary, no incorporation debates were or have been scheduled. There will be a time and a place for debates once the incorporation studies, including an extensive EIR, are completed and evaluated, and once the county's revenue neutrality negotiations and the alternative boundary negotiations have been resolved.

Whole streets blocked

Dear Editor,

I read the article in the April 22 Pine Cone regarding the posting of illegal no parking signs. Well, I have a question: What about people who live on a street where there is constant construction going on (which is almost every street in Carmel) where these contractors and etc. block your driveway, front gate and mailbox? Forget 'no parking' signs...they block the whole darn street!

present
Al Smith's
"Carmel Legends"

For more than 50 years (1930-1980) Nielsen Brothers Market occupied their original location on Dolores near 8th, expanding from one building to another, with uneven floors, nooks and crannies for gourmet food-stuffs, a confusing but always orderly display of quality foods. Competition disappeared over the years and, by great good fortune, Carmel laws prevented the entrance of "chain stores". In 1959 a new generation entered the picture in the person of MERV SUTTON, who married WALTER'S daughter, Nancie, the happy ending of a Carmel High School romance. He began to take over some of the duties of "Mr. Inside," (WALTER), making sure customers had what they wanted, supervising service in-store and out; and "Mr. Outside," (HAROLD), establishing sources for quality meats, produce and wines, soliciting long term customers, representing the store in community activities. In 1980, having acquired Harold's share in 1962 and a few years later Walter's as well, Merv moved the store from Dolores Street to a new building at San Carlos & 7th. He added a much needed parking garage, erected a valued (and funny) Carmel map designed by Bill Bates and Carol Minou, and created an unassailable new slogan: "The Super Non-Supermarket." With these dramatic changes, some equally dramatic shifts occurred. For instance, 80% of volume now comes from walk-in traffic, as compared to 30-40% in earlier years. The earliest and best fruits and vegetables, and the finest meats are still found at NIELSEN'S; the broadest selection of wines, cheeses, snacks and staples. HAROLD has passed on, but WALTER still appears almost every day. You'll forgive us for a little special pride in this "legend." It is truly vintage Carmel!

Astonishing local real estate market continues to roll

First quarter report

House Talk

By Paul & Nellie Brocchini and Mark Ryan

OUR LOCAL real estate market appears to be on steroids. Its strength grows and grows with no apparent limits to its power potential.

As in 2004, dollar volume and price appreciation are the main stories. The just-concluded first quarter of 2005 chalked up the second highest dollar volume in history, $426,148,000. Carmel led the way with $127,479,000 of closed transactions during the quarter. That figure was 88 percent over the first quarter of last year.

Pebble Beach had an even more impressive gain. Dollar volume in Del Monte Forest was up 176 percent over the first quarter of last year, rising from $25,968,000 to $71,787,000.

Only the second quarter of last year topped the overall figures. Dollar volume reached $526,393,000 during that quarter, led by Carmel with sales of $160,602,000. That quarter followed a $266,572,000 first quarter. Looking ahead, one can't even imagine what the second quarter will be after this amazing start to the year.

Median Sales Price Comparison (dollars)

The Distribution of Sales chart becomes more fascinating at each reporting period. Over the years we have watched as sales ranges have disappeared. First we lost the market under $200,000, then under $300,000. Now the market under $500,000 is disappearing.

Prices
The astonishing dollar volume is more a case of higher prices than an increased number of sales. During the quarter, 330 transactions closed, up 12 percent over last year. That 12 percent increase in units translated into a 60 percent increase in the number of dollars that changed hands.

All of the markets were up over the first quarter of last year, and all but one, Pacific Grove, exceeded the 2004 year median sales price. P.G. slipped a little bit, with a first quarter median sales price of $750,000, as opposed to $762,500 for all of last year.

Monterey was up 47 percent; Carmel and Seaside, 37 percent; Carmel Valley, 28 percent; and Pebble Beach, 25 percent.

Of the 330 sales recorded during the first quarter in the 10 Monterey Peninsula markets, only six were under $500,000. Those sales were all in Seaside, and all were more than $400,000.

At the other end of the range, million-dollar-plus numbers are becoming commonplace. It wasn't long ago that, even in Carmel, we didn't see many million dollar homes. The first sale over $1 million of a Carmel house without an ocean view was a groundbreaking event.

Contrast then with now. During the first quarter, 41 percent of the 330 transactions topped the $1 million mark; 13 percent were transactions over $2 million.

Short-term view

The best gauge we have of the near term is our Market Barometer, which shows us the percentage of listings in escrow. Back in the days when we came up with this idea, we considered a barometer reading of 20 percent or higher to indicate a good market. When we measured the barometer on April 1, nine of the 10 markets had readings over 30 percent. Of those, two exceeded 40 percent and one, Del Rey Oaks, hit 63 percent.

On April 1, 219 properties were in escrow. Most of those will close during the second quarter. In addition, many more deals will be done during the quarter. Prospects for the second quarter are excellent. It will be interesting to see if the second quarter can surpass last year's record dollar volume.

Longer term

Since we began writing these reports more than a decade ago, we have made it a policy not to hype the numbers. Like Sergeant Friday, we are only interested in "the facts, ma'am, just the facts." During the last few years, it has been hard not to look like cheerleaders. We have been rolling out lots of superlatives, but they have been a product of the facts, not an attempt to make more out of the numbers than they deserve. In short, it has been and continues to be an historic period in local real estate.

Skeptics keep describing the real estate market as a bubble that will invariably burst. Certainly, the level of recent gains is not sustainable, but a selloff at greatly reduced prices is highly unlikely on the Monterey Peninsula. We do not have an abundance of properties, especially at the luxury end of the market, and as we have stated ad nauseum in these columns, the baby boomers are coming our way with lots of cash in their pockets.

All of the exceptionally desirable places in the country, like Aspen or Santa Fe or Sedona, are benefiting from this phenomenon. Scarcity and strong buying power will keep our retirement and second-home market strong.

At the lower end, which is not very low anymore, low interest rates have fueled the price gains. This has been true all over the country. When rates increase substantially, as they probably will, price gains and activity should cool. What the mix will be here is anyone's guess.

labor intensive, he said, to make sure it isn't lost amidst the onslaught of information bombarding voters in the general election.

The 2000 bond, by comparison, was alone on the ballot and not in competition with any other races. That campaign cost about $11,000, while Senden estimated the 2005 effort would cost almost three times that much.

"You just have to talk to people more often; there are more people participating, and there's more interference," he said. "It's the process of making sure they are as informed as possible. You would have to write them more often than before, simply to make sure they don't forget you."

And a greater number of absentee voters means getting mailers sent and newspaper ads placed before the ballots begin arriving in early October.

Many of the school district bond measures that failed in the last election fell short by a handful of votes, sometimes fewer than 100, because "their mailers arrived four or five days after the ballots arrived," he said. And once absentee voters mail their ballots, there's no way they can get them back.

He advised Funt to appoint key committee members to take charge of phone banks, fundraising, editorial and print production, volunteers, endorsements, community walks and data handling.

The committee will also select signers for the ballot argument.

"You get five, and they don't have to be related to the school district at all," Senden said. "Voters are going to assume you're for it, so if you can reach out to the community and get a good, broad cross section, that's a good statement."

And the rebuttal, if one is needed, could be signed by five others.

Wish list

The most dire conditions in Carmel schools — such as failed heating systems, aged locker rooms and falling ceiling tiles — were remedied with the earlier $20 million bond, but a host of others were not, including:

- replacing 17 portable classrooms throughout the district with permanent structures;

- building a new access road at Captain Cooper School in Big Sur;

- expanding the multipurpose room at Carmel River School to accommodate all students during lunch;

- installing a foyer at the Carmel Middle School gym to keep grit from being tracked onto its floor;

- constructing new buildings and amenities for the habitat project at CMS;

- converting the high school's drama room to two classrooms and an office for the Associated Student Body government;

- adding and a multipurpose room to the gym to accommodate dance and wrestling, a weight room and a foyer;

- turning the former boiler room at CHS into a career center;

- replacing the grass on the football field with low-maintenance fake turf;

- building a new walkway at Carmel Valley High School;

- repaving the playground and expanding staff parking at Carmelo School;

- improving safety at parking lots and drop-off/pickup areas throughout the district, and
- replacing old furniture.

tourism through the missions. They used the bell as the first state historical icon.”

A plan to place bells along the original route, as well as in front of each mission, was hatched by Forbes. By 1913, 425 bells marked the way.

How far to San Francisco?

The bells also served as California’s first road signs. Since other markers were few and far between, travelers needed help figuring out where they were, Kolstad said. Placed a mile apart, the bell posts pointed out historical sites, scenic views and distances to other California towns. The bell at Rio Road and Santa Lucia had been there about three score and 10 years before it was stolen, according to Kolstad’s research.

“As far as I can determine, that was an original location from about 1909,” he said. After talking to Kolstad, Perotti knew she had the right man for the job.

With Meroney’s go-ahead, she ordered the $1,348 bell and, when it was cast, she drove to Saratoga to retrieve it.

Kolstad said his “hobby business” of casting the bells has increased along with the appreciation of California history.

“I sold 600 and put up 556 of them between San Francisco and L.A.,” he said, as part of a $1.24 million federal highway beautification program for Highway 101, the route of much of the original Camino Real. Cities striving to revitalize their downtowns are placing orders, too.

Stu Ross and Jesse Garibay, both from public works, hung the new bell last Wednesday afternoon while Meroney and Carmel Police Officer Chris Johnson directed traffic around the lane they were blocking.

Less than half an hour after the truck and crews left, a trio of Italian visitors stopped to photograph the new El Camino Real bell.

Carmel Public Works’ Jesse Garibay (left) and Stu Ross muscled the city’s brand new, 75-pound bronze bell into the long vacant stanchion at Rio Road and Santa Lucia.

dance and you shouldn't either. I almost went into hiding, afraid that witch would get me."

But the Nebraska native defied curses and occasional public derision to pursue the career choice that meant the most to him.

"As a kid I was very sickly, and couldn't go out for athletics. My mother sent me to a ballet class — snuck me in. Later, when the couple that ran the school left town, they arranged for me to take over. I ran it, from age 14 to 17."

His was a glorious legacy. He auditioned for dance legend Ted Shawn and won a scholarship to Jacob's Pillow, an ahead-of-its-time ensemble of male dancers that took its name from Shawn's farm in western Massachusetts. Lefler remembered honing his skills under the tutelage of Shawn and Shawn's wife, Ruth St. Denis, and an unnamed contingent of "the greatest dancers."

"America is a country that looks down on dancers, especially male dancers. When I was in the Army during the war, I was on a troop ship traveling to Japan, and they showed movies. I wouldn't dare admit to anybody, 'That's me,' dancing onscreen," he recalled.

"Shawn was the first one confident enough to put men dancers onstage. While I was there, Joseph Pilates was a good friend of Ms. Ruth's, so I learned about the Pilates body conditioning routine in the '30s. In Hollywood later, I taught Pilates techniques, and suddenly everybody has discovered the guy. Maybe that's why I'm still here."

Lefler worked in the U.S. dance capitol, New York City, for several years, and toured the United States. He recalled dancing in Sunset Theater in Carmel in the late '30s and being enchanted by the Monterey Peninsula.

"Everybody who ever saw it here wanted to come back."

But first he responded to the call of Hollywood, in the heyday of the fabled "dream factory."

"I auditioned for [choreographer] Hermes Pan and got absolutely the best thing that could happen to male dancers: a seven-year contract at MGM."

Lefler extolled the strengths of the "Tiffany" of Hollywood studios. From the seamstresses who stitched the costumes to the composers, set designers and cinematographers, the MGM production team was "the absolute best."

"I created many big dance numbers and never got any credit for it," he recalled. "But I'm so grateful I had that long run of employment. Trying to get into a show in New York, they might run for two days or 10 years, and you might not get another one. I guess that's what made it exciting and fun."

Asked to name an MGM number he appeared in that stands out in memory, Lefler cited "Baby, It's Cold Outside" from a Technicolor confection, "Neptune's Daughter" starring Esther Williams.

He danced not only at MGM, but at virtually every other studio of the time, even the less prestigious Monogram and Republic venues. And his profession wasn't prestigious, either.

"Dancers were frowned upon, never given the credit we deserve. At the studios, they put us with the screen extras. The actors had their own guild and the actors' [retirement] home, but they didn't let the dancers in."

Lefler remains essentially upbeat, but he did lament, "The golden age — there's not much left of it. The people I performed with are all dead."

Performed is past tense. Lefler is very much part of the present in his latest part, a cameo written for him by Walt deFaria, author/director of "Kid Millionaire."

"Ninety years old and still tapping," said deFaria. "In the play Dale helps a 10-year-old boy who wants to learn tap. Dale doesn't just sit in a chair and talk, he performs a few steps."

Although Lefler's MGM contract expired in 1953, he's never stopped dancing.

He trained hundreds of locals from 1954 to 1986 at Dale Lefler's Theater Dance Showcase. He also taught dance for eight years at Monterey Peninsula College and has appeared at nearly every local theater.

"I had a sweetheart all those years, and she wanted me to quit sooner. I loved teaching and costuming. It's not good when you quit — you slow down, and you need to keep moving."

The nonagenarian keeps moving during Marianne Rousseau's fitness classes taught at the Carmel Foundation. But he said a recent struggle with emphysema has him frankly worried.

"I'm trying to get healthy for the show. Walt wrote it so well. A little boy and this old codger me. Wish me luck. I hope I can get through it."

"Kid Millionaire," a new musical with book and lyrics by Walt deFaria and music by Stephen Tosh, plays at 7:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, April 29-30 and May 6-7, and 2 p.m. Sundays, May 1 and 7. Local actors Connie Erickson, Connie Lee, David Ehrenpreis and Steve Woods had a cast of "Seventy Five Stars of Tomorrow" who are enrolled in the SoDAonSTAGE theater arts program at Pacific Repertory Theatre. Choreography is by Gloria Elber.

A benefit gala will take place Saturday, April 30, in the lobby of the Golden Bough, Monte Verde between Eighth and Ninth, Carmel-by-the-Sea. Gala tickets are $40 and include refreshments and preferred seating. Regular tickets will also be available that evening.

For tickets and information, contact the Golden Bough box office at (831) 622-0100 or online at www.pacrep.org or www.ticketguys.com.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: The owner of a residence at San Antonio and Eighth reported two trees planted along the west side of the street had fallen onto the roof of her residence and into her front yard, causing damage to the southeast corner of the roof, the front fence and plants in the yard. One tree was approximately 2 feet in diameter and 30 feet long. The larger tree had fallen onto a nearby tree branch that also fell into the yard. City forestry crew members responded, assessed the damage and hired a tree company to remove the tree.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to a report of a tree down into a house on the east side of San Antonio between Seventh and Eighth. Firefighters discovered a large tree limb that had fallen from a city tree and become hung up in a live service power line over the residence driveway, along with a telephone line. PG&E was notified to de-energize the line, but no ETA was given due to their being busy with other calls from the windy weather. Firefighters placed safety tape around the hazard and a crew stood by until the utility crew arrived. After line was de-energized, firefighters removed the limb from the wires and contacted public works for cleanup. Although no services were lost, resident was advised to have lines checked.

On scene, firefighters assisted Carmel P.D. unit with the clearing of a broken tree branch and a downed TV cable, which was secured to the side of the roadway. Battalion chief canceled.
