If grass isn't greener, Prop. 60 to the rescue

By KIRSTIE WILDE

CHARLES McDANIEL and his wife, Ali Miner, nearly blew it, big time.

Their dalliance with the state of Hawaii, during which they briefly decided that Maui was a better place to settle than Carmel-by-the-Sea, ended up costing them moving money, more than $100,000 in fees and commissions, and a lot of headaches. But, thanks to Monterey County Assessor Steve Vagnini and California's Proposition 60, McDaniel didn't also lose thousands of dollars annually in higher property taxes.

McDaniel was saved from forfeiting his sharply lower tax base because an acquaintance told him to call the assessor just days before an important opportunity would have expired.

And Vagnini wants to get the word out to other seniors in this county: You can sell your house, move into another one and retain your sweet property tax deal, even if — like McDaniel — you move out of the county to where you think the grass is greener, and then change your mind and come home.

"Everyone should benefit from Prop. 60, not just the people 'in the know' about these things," Vagnini said. "I want to reach out to everyone so they know their rights and benefits."

Prop. 60 allows homeowners older than 54 a benefit that younger homeowners can't get: They can sell their home, buy one with a much higher tax base, and still pay property taxes at their old, lower rate. That can easily cut the annual property tax on the new home by tens of thousands of dollars annually, according to the assessor.

"Mr. McDaniel's property taxes on his new Carmel house would have been double his old tax rate. He had two years from the date he sold his first Carmel home to buy another one and still retain the lower property tax rate from the previous home, and he made it by only a couple of days," Vagnini said.

If McDaniel hadn't squeaked in under the wire, he would have lost that tax benefit forever, and there'd be nothing he nor Vagnini could do about it.

The numbers went like this:

One-square-mile city seeks exemption from runoff rules

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AFTER STRUGGLING for years to figure out how to meet a federal mandate to keep pollutants from running into the sea, and then facing a state order to stop letting any untreated stormwater flow into Carmel Bay, the city recently learned it could be exempt from the whole quagmire.

The law firm of Latham & Watkins LLP, hired to help fight the cease-and-desist order that would have forced Carmel to treat all its stormwater before it reaches the bay and river, said the city could file for an exemption because it has fewer than 10,000 residents.

Ironically, it was the city's good intentions that got it stuck in the stormwater muddle to begin with, city administrator Rich Guillen said Thursday. After the federal government

Extended trip to Paris almost costs councilman his job

By CHRIS COUNTS

AS MANY vacationers have discovered, you can travel halfway around the world and not escape your job. Pacific Grove City Council member Ron Schenck certainly knows that feeling.

After traveling to France for his daughter's wedding and his 30th wedding anniversary, Schenck had hoped to extend his trip, requiring him to miss a total of three city council meetings — on May 18, June 1 and June 15 — before returning June 24.

But the P.G. city charter allows the removal of a mayor or city councilmember who misses more than two council meetings without "just cause." After Pacific Grove resident Patricia Colin-Smith complained about Schenck's absence, he wasn't sure he'd still have his unsalaried position when he

CHP: Sleeping driver killed pedestrian

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A FRESNO man lost his life on Highway 1 south of Carmel Saturday, and another two were seriously injured in the same area Monday.

Zachary Wheeler, an 18-year-old Napa resident, was driving northbound on Highway 1 near Garrapata Creek Bridge at 11:30 a.m. May 14 when he reportedly fell asleep at the wheel of his 1996 Subaru, according to California Highway Patrol Officer Richard Richards. Wheeler drifted across the center line, struck and killed Jose Luis Corral, who had been walking along the dirt shoulder.

The accident remains under investigation, and Wheeler could be charged with vehicular manslaughter, depending on its outcome.

"We're waiting for the 24-hour profile to see what this guy was doing," that would lead him to fall asleep during the late-morn-

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TWO RESTORED World War II bombers will descend upon the Monterey Peninsula May 25 and be available for tours and rides before heading to Sacramento Friday.

The B-17 Flying Fortress and the B-24 Liberator, aircraft of great importance in the European Theater of World War II, have been restored and maintained by the non-profit Collings Foundation. The pair is in the midst of its nationwide, 120-stop Wings of Freedom tour.

Local tour-stop coordinator Carl Trebler expects the 1940s-era bombers to fly into Monterey between 2 and 3 p.m. Wednesday afternoon from Hollister.

They will be on display at Monterey Jet Center, where visitors can explore their interiors for a small donation, talk with the veterans who flew them, and even splurge on a $400 half-hour ride.

"My recommendation would be to take the B-24, because it's the only flying B-24 I

ADA REFORM KILLED BEFORE IT WAS EVEN BORN

By PAUL MILLER

THE BILL never made it out of committee. State Senator Charles Poochigian — a Republican from Fresno — tried to convince his fellow legislators to reform the state's handicapped accessibility laws.

"The ADA should be about providing access, not a pay-day for shakedown artists," Poochigian said before a hearing on his bill, SB 855, in the Senate Judiciary Committee May 3.

Poochigian said his proposed legislation would have made no difference in the obligations of businesses to accommodate the disabled under state or federal law. But it would have given them a 120-day "right to cure" any violations before they could be sued. And it would have required a court or jury, when awarding damages for injuries to a handicapped person because of ADA violations, to take into account any previous damage awards received by him for "the same or similar injuries," according to Poochigian.

His bill was supported by a wide variety of small business owners, including Dave Mock, the owner of a saddle maker in Yucca Valley who was forced to close down after being sued for having a counter that was too high for disabled customers. The business was founded in 1941 by Mock's paraplegic uncle.

"The ADA is having the unintended consequence of hurting those it was meant to help, while benefiting its abusers, which is truly disheartening," Mock said at a Sacramento news conference.

Despite his story — and similar ones from around the state as stories of serial ADA litigants have become commonplace — Democrats on the committee were unmoved. Sheila Kuehl of Santa Monica, Liz Figueroa of Fremont and Gil Cedillo of Los Angeles all voted to kill the bill. None of them responded to calls from The Pine Cone seeking an explanation of their votes. With two members of the committee not voting, the three were enough to overcome two Republicans who voted in favor.

"Unfortunately, members of the committee sided with self-described professional plaintiffs over the testimony of small business owners, members of the disabled committee and other victims of ADA lawsuit abuse," Poochigian said.

THE SAN Fernando Valley man who was declared a "vexatious litigant" by U.S. District Court Judge Edward Rafeedie last December has filed a motion seeking permission to file a new ADA claim.

Jarek Molski was ordered by Rafeedie to have any new suits he wants to file in the Central District of California OK'd by a judge first. Wednesday, Rafeedie will conduct a hearing to determine whether Molski has a good reason to sue Tomdan Enterprises of Glendale, owners of Tommy's Famous Hamburgers, or whether his latest suit is probably another scam.

Molski has a new attorney in the case: Thomas J. Vandeveld of San Diego. His previous lawyer, Thomas Frankovich of San Francisco, was also barred by Rafeedie from filing new suits.

While debate rages, Big Sur residents try the vision thing

By CHRIS COUNTS

PERCHED ON the edge of the continent, the 1,200-acre Brazil Ranch appears a serene place. But the ranch is the most recent flash point in a contentious, decades-long debate between Big Sur residents and the government.

At the Big Sur Multi-Agency Council meeting May 6 at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park, residents sparred with officials over plans by the U.S. Forest Service to host weddings at Brazil Ranch, which the service acquired in 2002 for $23 million. Some Big Sur locals contend that such commercial activity is against the law.

"Zoning laws aren't that difficult to read," said longtime Big Sur resident Monique Bourin. "If they apply to us, they apply to you."

According to Rich Tobin, director of conservation partnerships for the Los Padres National Forest, the property is zoned "watershed and scenic easement," which, under the California Coastal Act, allows the forest service to issue special use permits for weddings and family gatherings on a limited basis.

He said so far this year, the forest service has scheduled fewer than 10 weddings and gatherings. "In comparison, during the last year of private ownership prior to forest service acquisition of the Brazil Ranch, documented use of the ranch for parties, gatherings or other events by the owners occurred on 360 of 365 days."

Tobin added the forest service will not issue any more permits as a "self-imposed moratorium" until the neighbors' concerns have been addressed.

The complaints about weddings on Brazil Ranch are the kind routinely heard at the multi-agency council meetings: Is the federal government illegally acquiring land in Big Sur? Does a double standard exist between the federal government and residents? And ultimately: Can the shrinking Big Sur community survive continued acquisition of land by the government and nonprofit organizations like the Big Sur Land Trust?

Mike Caplin, president of the Coast Property Owners Association, believes the federal government is illegally acquiring land. Specifically, he refers to a section of the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, which states that lands purchased outside existing national forest boundaries will not exceed "3,000 acres in the case of any one forest." He estimates that about 10,000 acres have been added to Los Padres National Forest.

While Tobin acknowledged the 3,000-acre limit, he said Congress used its power to override that limit so the forest service could purchase Brazil Ranch.

According to Caplin, one-third of the private land in Big Sur has been acquired for conservation purposes in the past 30 years. When the government buys so much private property, it reduces the amount of land available for housing Big Sur residents. As landowners and homeowners continue to sell to conservation entities, can the shrinking Big Sur community continue to exist?

Resident and Monterey County Planning Commissioner Martha Diehl is a regular at BSMAC meetings. Frustrated by a particularly fiery Dec. 1 meeting, Diehl suggested locals and government people participate in a retreat that would have as its first order of business, "to define what the Big Sur community actually is."

Her suggestion was met with applause, and Congressman Sam Farr offered his support. Five months later, a group called "The Big Sur Vision Project" emerged.

Diehl, who organized the first two meetings at the Esalen Institute with the help of longtime Big Sur resident and business owner Alan Perlmutter, described them as "energizing and hopeful." She hopes those attending the meetings will have an opportunity "to look at a positive vision and be able to come back to our larger issues with a different perspective."

She said the meetings represented a sharp contrast to the tone of the BSMAC meetings.

"I sort of feel beat up after BSMAC meetings," she said. "I say to myself, 'These are my [neighbors] and they're yelling at each other again.'"

Diehl said the goal of the Vision Project is to come up with a best-case scenario of what the Big Sur community will look like in 2050.

The group will meet again at the Esalen Institute on Friday, June 3, at 9:30 a.m. For more information, call (831) 625-9621 or send an e-mail to mvdiehl@mindspring.com.

Incredible movie night coming

"THE INCREDIBLES" will work their super powers at Carmel Beach Saturday, June 18, at the city's 7th annual Movie on the Beach. The show, as always, is free and is certain to be packed, so everyone is encouraged to show up early to grab a good spot on the white sands at the foot of Ocean Avenue near the volleyball courts.

Presented by the community services department, the show will begin at dusk, but the festivities typically begin much earlier, as people gather to eat, drink and be merry by the sea.

"We are the only community in the whole USA to offer such a beautiful 'movie spot,' so come on down and enjoy the fun" community services manager Christie Miller urged.

SUNSET FEES DRIVE SOME TO JUMP SHIP

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE INCREASED cost of performing at Sunset Center is driving some nonprofits away, while larger groups intent upon staying are finding ways to pay.

Among those to depart is the small Mozart Society, which had hosted concerts at Sunset Center since 1998 but will open its six-concert season in October at All Saints Episcopal Church.

"The cost of Sunset is going up now, because of the website, the box office service, the surcharges on tickets and special additional charges for each concert that one presents there," Mozart Society vice president Rudolf Schroeter said. "And all of that adds up to a very big number for a modestly funded entity like ours, so we couldn't afford to stay there."

Adopted last December by Sunset Cultural Center, Inc., the nonprofit that runs the theater, the new fee schedule is an effort to recoup more of the costs which have long been subsidized by Carmel taxpayers. SCC offered grants to nonprofits to help ease the transition.

"When the city was operating the theater, they were not cash-flow conscious," then-board chairman Jim Price said at the time. "They didn't really consider what it cost to open the theater; they just ran it." In 2003/2004, the city underwrote events at Sunset Center by more than $700,000. In 2004/2005, that figure hit $762,000 which was paid to SCC. It is set to increase by $10,000 in 2005/2006, but city officials expect it to decrease after that.

But the new rates mean nonprofits like the Mozart Society, with its annual operating budget of less than $60,000, have had to relocate.

"Being at Sunset Center was truly a great pleasure for us, and we looked forward to it as it was being rebuilt, and so did our audience," Schroeter said. "On the other hand, we are looking forward to the intimate atmosphere of the church, and its ambiance and acoustics."

Schroeter said he and the rest of the volunteer-run group, which doesn't even have an office, departed from Sunset on friendly terms.

"We understand that Sunset Center needs to charge for that expensive building," he said. "We can't make ends meet and stay there."

The same is true for the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society, which held its spring concert at Sunset last year but was priced out in 2005.

According to its 2004 contract, the choral society paid $300 or 10 percent of gross receipts for theater rental, which included dressing rooms, backstage area and evening use of the box office and lobbies. Rehearsals cost $300 as well. The sound system cost $25 per use and stage lighting cost $15 an hour, with additional fees for more staff, space or technology as needed.

The 2005 rate sheet for nonprofits includes $900 or 10 percent of gross receipts for theater rental per performance, $600 per rehearsal, $350 per event for use of the

Felony DUI possible

The driver of a 1998 Land Rover is also facing charges for a rollover accident on Highway 1 near Soberanes Point Monday evening, according to Richards.

Carmel resident Michael John Derooy was reportedly drunk when he and his wife, 59-year-old Kathryn Pallastrini, were driving southbound on Highway 1 around 6:30 p.m. May 16, Richards said. Derooy drifted to the right-hand shoulder and overcorrected to the left into the northbound lane. He then swerved and lost control of the Land Rover, which "rolled over several times and came to rest on its roof," Richards said.

The impact cracked several of Derooy's ribs, and he sustained a cut to his head. Pallastrini was found conscious but unresponsive. They were airlifted by helicopter to Stanford Medical Center, and he said he had no update on their condition Thursday.

"If you're DUI and injure someone, it's felony driving under the influence," he said of the charges Derooy could face.

Carmel Valley

In a dusty corral, kids learn about horses and feelings

By CHRIS COUNTS

ARRANGED IN a circle, the participants shared and examined their feelings. One talked about "boundaries," while another raised the subject of "empathy."

Remarkably, the setting was not a workshop at the Esalen Institute or an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting, but a corral in Carmel Valley. And those taking part in the circle were a group of children ranging in age from 9 to 12.

On May 13, 20 students from the Highland School in Seaside traveled to Carmel Valley to participate in Horse Power, an innovative equine therapy program co-founder Dr. Robert Magnelli calls "a solution-oriented approach to emotional growth and learning." The setting is a 40-acre slice of heaven made available for no charge by Larry and Shonna Scholink.

A dusty corral would seem an unlikely place for a group of kids to learn about their feelings. But a corral is where you find horses, and according to Magnelli, horses can be remarkable catalysts for emotional growth and learning.

"A horse is able to mirror feelings," said Magnelli, a Carmel psychologist. "They can immediately read nonverbal communication, so they are able to give us instant feedback. If a horse's boundaries are threatened, they react accordingly. As a child begins to trust a horse, the horse begins to trust the child."

Not only do most of the participants come into the program with very little understanding of psychology, they have also never touched a horse. From the start, it's clear some of the kids are intimidated by the 1,000-pound animals. But by the end of the day, it's clear a transformation has taken place.

"When I see the kids respond to a horse and I see the horse respond back, that's my greatest satisfaction," Magnelli said.

As the children interact with the animals, feelings of fear and anxiety often melt away and are replaced by confidence and trust. Magnelli helps the kids become aware of these feelings and the powerful roles they can play in their lives.

Magnelli said the program teaches children about respect, boundaries, making choices, understanding consequences

Horse Power participant Tashina Abeyta, a fifth grader at Highland School in Seaside, learns about her emotions while working with horses in Carmel Valley.

above the ocean on Castro Ridge in Big Sur, Dr. Bill Benda is working on medical research documenting the positive effects of equine therapy on disabled children. So far, he has completed three studies on "hippotherapy," a branch of equine therapy focusing on children with spastic cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis and traumatic brain injuries. Benda's studies have focused specifically on children with cerebral palsy and the benefits they have received from interacting with horses.

"There are about 700 therapeutic riding centers in the U.S.," explained Benda, a former medical director of the Big Sur Health Center. "Tens of thousands of kids are being treated with hippotherapy."

Unfortunately, the success of these centers has barely registered on the radar of the health care system.

"Part of the problem is that nobody has done any research to prove that [hippotherapy] works, so that's what I'm doing," said Benda, who has also led workshops at the Esalen Institute for breast cancer survivors.

One of Benda's studies was published in the Journal of Alternative and Complementary Medicine. His next study is focusing on the benefits autistic children can receive from hippotherapy.

"There is a lot of evidence that autistic kids respond well to horses," he said.

An emergency medical doctor by training, Benda is convinced of the benefits of equine therapy.

"It's really powerful work," he said. "I really believe in it. To see the reactions on the faces of parents [of disabled children working with horses] will make you cry."

City job, 4th Ave. landscaping top new expenses in budget

By MARY BROWNFIELD

IN STARK contrast to last year's budget cuts, the Carmel

City Council decided by consensus Tuesday to add another job to the payroll and to fund a long-awaited landscape project. On May 26, members will determine how to pay for those and other new expenses they agreed should be included in the 2005/2006 budget.

At this week's meeting, city administrator Rich Guillen outlined eight items totaling $500,000 for possible inclusion in the spending plan.

The council quickly nixed the two largest — a $100,000 request from a countywide community housing trust that would help families purchase homes, and the $182,000 it would have to pay to participate in the Monterey County Convention & Visitors Bureau marketing and tourism promotion efforts.

"The timing is not right for us to be talking about that kind of expenditure," councilman Gerard Rose said. "We have other priorities that need to be dealt with immediately."

Among those more immediate needs are $18,000 to install fire sprinklers in the Indoor Forest Theater — which, among others, is the home of the Children's Experimental Theater — and $10,000 to complete an appraisal of city-owned art.

"The Forest Theater fire sprinklers, that's a must," said resident Larry Rodocker. "And with the fine art appraisal, we may have a great jewel there and have it underinsured."

"We have 150 Edward Westons that haven't seen the light of day," Mayor Sue McCloud said. "In '97, they were estimated at half-a-million dollars."

Hiring a business wooer

The council also agreed to earmark funds for two big-ticket items.

The long-planned landscaping of Fourth Avenue, where towering eucalyptus trees were felled five years ago, can commence with a $373,000 grant from state tax dollars earmarked for riverine and riparian habitat restoration and a matching $74,600 from the city's bank account.

Members spent significantly more time debating the hiring of an economic development coordinator for an estimated $75,000: $45,000 in salary, $18,750 for operating expenses such as postage and publications, and $11,250 for administration. The new hire would report to Guillen and a to-be-formed board that would advise the city council.

Guillen said the coordinator's tasks would include recruiting and supporting businesses to serve residents and visitors, working with hoteliers to improve older buildings and wooing overnight visitors to town.

Specifically, the new hire would develop an overall economic development strategy; serve as a liaison between city staff, businesses, residents, leasing agents and realtors; be in contact with potential investors; and track the progress of the city's business environment.

"We need a person like this to guide us in a direction we all want to go," councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said.

The economic development board would include a representative of the city, a resident, a Carmel Chamber of Commerce board member, a hotel owner, a retail business owner and a restaurant owner.

"We could say, 'Let's not do this,' but the problem is, our competition is doing this," Guillen added.

Chamber executive director Monta Potter said she strongly supports investing in a person who could help boost business profits and tax revenues.

Resident-serving businesses sound good to library board member Bob Irvine, but he said the ongoing discussion of bringing them to town seems fruitless.

"We hear the same talk year after year, but the rents keep going up," he said. "Nothing ever happens, and all we get are more art galleries."

The Foot-Through-Roof Problem

Actually, there are endless variations on this theme, but let's just look at one hypothetical situation. You've made an offer to buy a home which the sellers have accepted. You've had a professional property inspector examine the home. All systems seem to be GO...and then, just a couple of days before escrow is to close, the teenage son of the sellers holds a party that ends up on the roof of the house, and parts of the roof collapse beneath the bouncing weight of dancing teenagers.

What now? Your offer was made with the explicit contingency that the property will be delivered to you in virtually the same condition it was in when you offered to buy it. (You'll find that in the purchase contract, assuming you are being helped by a real estate professional.) So the damage to the roof is the seller's responsibility. It must be repaired fully, and you should then have your professional property inspector examine the repair job, before the transaction can close. If the seller balks, the deal can be forfeited.

But sometimes such a situation creates a pressing problem. What if the buyer or seller faces potential financial damages if the close of the sale is delayed? An escrow account can be set up which will hold the money needed for the repair (and sometimes 1 1/2 times the repair estimate). This is an awkward solution to a sticky problem, but it can be done, if both buyer and seller agree. The best solution by far is to bite the proverbial bullet and not to close the deal until the home is truly ready to belong to the buyer. returned. But that changed when mayor Jim Costello announced at the May 18 city council meeting that Schenck's absence was excused, according to Jean-Marie Findlen, assistant city clerk.

So Schenck is off the hook, but the next time a colleague departs on an extended vacation, he could be booted from the council. Councilwoman Susan Goldbeck wants an item on the next agenda to discuss giving the council the power to decide which absences fit the category of "just cause" in the future.

When he called The Pine Cone office from Paris May 19, Schenck was clearly peeved about the interruption in his vacation.

"I think [the complaint] is unconscionable," said Schenck. "It's unbelievable."

Colin-Smith, a self-described "rabble-rouser," said the complaint was not personally directed at Schenck.

"While I do not necessarily agree with his views, I have respect for his position," she said. "I want the city council to protect the integrity of the city charter. If it had been any other council member, I would have done the same thing. They are not above the city charter. And the charter is our constitution."

Colin-Smith said she is concerned that Schenck's absence, combined with the recent resignation of council member John Stidham, places the city in a vulnerable position.

"It's a delicate time for the city," she said. "If anything happened [to another city council member], we might not have a quorum to get the city's business done."

Schenk was prepared to go to a lot of trouble to make a virtual appearance at the next council meeting, if his job were still in jeopardy. He and city attorney David Laredo came up with a plan for him to telecommute from Paris.

"The Brown Act does allow a board or council members to participate in a meeting by telephone," he said. "Before [Schenck] left, he did review with me the provisions of the Brown Act that let him participate by telephone. And he's certainly given every indication of his planned participation."

Before Costello announced Schenck's absence was excused, the council member said he was planning to "attend" at least one meeting by phone.

"I'll just have to get up at 3 in the morning," he said at the time.

know of," said Trebler, who has had the privilege of flying in both.

Passengers receive a preflight briefing before strapping in and taking to the sky.

"I'm a World War II airplane junkie, and I got to fly up the coast — the most beautiful coastline in the world," he said. "There are no words to describe it. Down on Highway 1, you could see cars pulling off and people gawking."

All the money raised during the tour goes toward restoration and upkeep of the historic planes.

The Collings Foundation fleet includes 14 aircraft, including a 1909 Bleriot. Restorations of an A-36 Apache, a Bell UH-1E Huey and three others are under way.

The nonprofit is always looking for new projects, all in the name of organizing and supporting "living history events that enable Americans to learn more about their heritage through direct participation," according to the Massachusetts-based foundation's mission.

The B-24 and the B-17 are scheduled to be on the ground and open for tours at Monterey Jet Center from 3 to 6 p.m. May 25, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. May 26, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. May 27, after which they will depart for Sacramento, according to Trebler.

Tours cost $8 for adults; $4 for children under 12. A tax-deductible $400 will earn the donor a half-hour ride above the Peninsula in one of the bombers. To make flight reservations, call (800) 568-8924. For more information on the local tour stop, call (831) 373-8907.

Special athletes meet on track

By LAITH AGHA

WINNING IS so emphasized in sports, even high school athletes sometimes forget they're just playing a game.

But events such as the May 1 Special Olympics track and field meet at Carmel High School can be a reminder that competition isn't only about winning. Sometimes it's not even about how you play the game — it's that you play at all.

Athletes from Monterey and Santa Clara counties, 180 in all, gathered to run, jump, and toss in friendly but spirited competition. Participants were as young as 8, though most were in high school.

Approximately 60 coaches work regularly with the athletes — some are teachers of adaptive physical education classes at mainstream schools and others have been training the kids for months for this meet.

"All the athletes did a terrific job; the coaches were excellent, and the whole day really went well," said Jenny Choo, Special Olympics regional sports director.

The Sunday contest was a qualifier for the Northern California Summer Games in Stockton, June 10-12.

Gold medalists from the Carmel High event are the first eligible qualifiers for Stockton, but if they are unable to go, the next in line will be invited.

And beginning May 31, the Special Olympics Torch Run will begin in Monterey County, winding its way to Stockton for the June 10 opening ceremonies. To find out more about the Special Olympics, visit www.specialolympics.org or www.sonc.org/regions/montereybay, for local activities.

Armed Forces, Coast Guard celebrate Saturday

THE U.S. Coast Guard and the Defense Language Institute will celebrate National Safe Boating Week and Armed Forces Day at the Monterey Harbor Saturday at 12:30 p.m.

Monterey Mayor Dan Albert will kick off the festivities near Wharf No. 2, when he welcomes the Coast Guard and all four branches of the U.S. Armed Forces. The celebration will include a full military Color Guard, a 12-person choir and the 30-member Monterey Community Band. In his final keynote speech before reassignment, Coast Guard Commander Neil Buschman will discuss homeland security.

DLI Garrison Commander Jeffrey Cairns will address military matters, and members of the local Coast Guard Auxiliary will provide information on safe boating and offer examinations of vessels for free. Coast Guard recruiters will also be on site.

For more information, call (831) 624-3333.

Pebble Beach bringing in the sheriff

By LAITH AGHA

IF A car speeds in the forest and there's no one there to catch it, does it break a law?

Some Pebble Beach residents certainly think so, and they filled Spanish Bay's main ballroom Sunday afternoon to voice concerns about fast driving and other matters at the Del Monte Forest Property Owners semi-annual meeting.

The streets of Pebble Beach are patrolled by a California Highway Patrol officer fewer than 40 hours each week. Subsequently, alleged rampant speeding has been attributed to an absence of cops.

"Forty mph is too fast to go at any time in Pebble Beach," said DMFPO president Jack Kidder. The speed limit is 25, but "even 25 mph can be too fast if you're going around blind curves and such," he said.

About six months ago, a discovery was made that may solve the problem.

"We found out that the Monterey County Sheriff's Office also has the legal authority to enforce traffic laws in Pebble Beach," said Kidder.

And when he contacted Ed Lorenzana, station commander for the sheriff's Coastal Station, he learned the services would be free.

"We decided the motor patrol squad was probably the best unit to handle this problem," Lorenzana explained to the crowd.

The motor patrol squad, staffed with deputized but unpaid volunteers, will focus its efforts on Sloat Road, Lopez Road and 17 Mile Drive, but other roads will be surveyed as well. The squad started patrolling Monday and will operate on a trial basis for the first couple of months.

Lorenzana emphasized the motor squad's primary goal.

"We are there to deter people from speeding, not to issue them citations." But they will hand out tickets.

And who are the perpetrators of the traffic law violations? Kidder identified "golf caddies, construction workers, ladies late for hair appointments and golfers late for tee times" as all potentially guilty.

Speeding in the forest led the agenda, but vandalism was also a hot issue that residents attribute to the lack of policing in Pebble Beach. And a different sort is suspected in these crimes.

"Most of the vandalism is damage to mail boxes. Sometimes there is damage to vehicles or residences," said Lorenzana. "These crimes are committed by juveniles, with very few exceptions."

So far, 32 cases of vandalism have been reported in Pebble Beach in 2005.

Also addressed was the heavy traffic that tends to back up around the Highway 1 gate during rush hour.

Mark Stilwell, executive vice president of the Pebble Beach Company, explained plans for revamping the interchange immediately outside the gate, including the addition of a free-flowing right lane headed toward Carmel and an adjustment to the lanes that will reduce the danger of turning left out of the gate. The plan is awaiting coastal commission approval, Stilwell said.

PROP. 60

Fifth for $1.3 million. Although the home prices were similar, his annual property tax bill would have nearly doubled, to $13,000. But since his replacement home on Carpenter was purchased within two years of the sale of his Torres house, he was able to receive the Prop. 60 property tax benefit.

If he had waited just a few more days to buy the second home, he would have missed the two-year Prop. 60 window.

Vagnini said the skyrocketing value of real estate in the Monterey Peninsula means seniors who want to move to a smaller house may not be able to afford to, even if they can cover the cost of the new home.

"I see it quite often," the assessor said, "People who can afford to get a house but can't afford to pay the higher taxes. For instance, a million dollar house has a tax bill of $10,000 per year, and for some of these older folks, that's half the mortgage and they simply can't afford the taxes."

But if a couple had lived in their million-dollar house for many years and have a tax base of $150,000, which is not uncommon around here, their tax bill would be only $1,500 per year. With the Prop. 60 benefit, they can move into a new million-dollar home and still pay only $1,500 in property taxes.

Prop. 90 benefit gone here

Until a few years ago, Monterey County also honored Prop. 90, which allowed people to move here from other California counties and retain the lower property-tax base from their previous home. But Monterey County no longer accepts those out-of-county tax base transfers.

Eight counties in the state still accept Prop. 90 transfers: Alameda, Los Angeles, Modoc, Orange, San Diego, Unlike Monterey, eight counties in the state still accept Prop. 90 transfers: Alameda, Los Angeles, Modoc, Orange, San Diego, San Mateo, Santa Clara and Ventura.

San Mateo, Santa Clara and Ventura.

So folks from here can sell, buy something in one of those counties, and still hold on to their lower property tax base.

"I had a lady from Carmel who's thinking of selling," Vagnini said. "She asked me, 'Gee what counties can I move to, Steve?' I asked her, 'Why in the world would you want to leave Carmel and move to Modoc?'"

Maybe that lady should call Charles McDaniel. He'll tell her the grass is pretty green right here.

STORMWATER

began requiring cities to create stormwater plans, Carmel joined forces with other Peninsula cities and the Monterey Regional Pollution Control Agency to draft a comprehensive and expensive plan to comply.

In November 2003, Carmel voters were asked to pass a stormwater utility fee to pay for implementation of the program, but the tax failed.

Last December, the California Regional Water Quality Control Board, which oversees compliance with the federal laws, notified Carmel, Pebble Beach, Pacific Grove and Monterey they would face cease-and-desist orders for not curbing their stormwater flows. The cities faced that penalty because their combined populations exceeded 100,000, Guillen explained.

"All the parties participating were trying to be good guys ahead of the game," Guillen said. "We were trying to be proactive, and it worked against us, unfortunately."

Pebble Beach and Carmel began working together to prepare for the hearing on the cease-and-desist orders, and P.B. hired Latham & Watkins, which Guillen said has experts who have extensive experience with the state board, particularly on behalf of Southern California coastal cities.

Attorneys combed through Carmel's paperwork and asked why the city, with its population of 4,081, had never applied for the under-10,000 exemption.

"They said two things had to happen," Guillen said.

First, Carmel had to withdraw from the regional stormwater task force, which it has done.

Next, it had to apply to the State Water Resources Control Board for the exemption, which it did last Thursday.

"We submitted a stack of documents at least a foot tall, with affidavits and background information," Guillen said.

While the state board could subject the city to a public hearing before an administrative law judge, Guillen hopes it will grant the exemption without one, based on its existing laws and efforts to minimize pollution.

The general plan, the Local Coastal Program and the city's "best management practices" for handling pollution, including the installation of underground traps to capture debris, show the city has been proactive and is well deserving of the exemption, he said.

"It's not like we're a city with a bunch of industrial plants, or something."

Is a Reverse Mortgage Right for You?

A reverse mortgage turns a portion of your equity into tax-free money you can use right now. You make no monthly payments on a reverse mortgage and the loan is not due to be paid until you sell, move out of the house or pass away.

You can use this money for any purpose; living expenses, home improvements or a grandchild's college education.

Homeowners who are 62 or older may qualify and be eligible even if there is an existing first or second mortgage. The size of the reverse mortgage depends upon the borrowers age(s), the program selected, the home's value, and prevailing interest rates. There are no income qualifications and you continue to retain title to your home.

Call if you have questions or wish a free Reverse Mortgage Handbook.

BUDGET

Potter also advocated spending another $16,000 on destination marketing. Public relations firm Graham & Associates is currently paid $84,000 a year to market the city, and the additional money would keep the effort strong in the fourth quarter. Councilmembers seemed to agree.

They asked Guillen to save money by eliminating TOT audits, which have been costing more than the revenue they produce. They recommended renegotiating the cost of the sales tax audit.

"We are going to have to do a little horse trading to pay for some of these other things," McCloud commented.

Fees up

On the moneymaking side, the council asked the city administrator to estimate earnings from raising some permit fees — including residential parking and tree pruning — and the business license tax. The tax hike would have to be approved by voters.

The council did not delve into the other details of the proposed $11 million budget submitted last month, though McCloud expressed satisfaction that the city's financial health has improved and that $7.6 million in reserves won't have to be tapped, except for $230,000 to retrofit the firehouse.

"We focused the cuts last year. It wasn't pretty and wasn't good. But now we can move on while other cities are still having to deal with some very serious problems," she said.

Councilman Mike Cunningham supported the overall spending plan but wondered if money designated for fire, police, and parks should be shifted to reopen the library on Sunday and increase maintenance of city buildings.

"It's a solid plan, but some tweaks could make it even better," he said.

Guillen said much of the increase for police and fire goes to retirement obligations, so the money can't be moved.

Last year, total payouts for police and fire pensions were $256,321; next year, they're estimated to be $516,305.

Councilman Erik Bethel said he would like to see more actual expense and revenue figures from last year before voting on the budget. The city's audit, which Guillen said produces those numbers, is several months overdue. He attributed its lateness to changes in accounting laws and operational changes at the auditing firm.

The council is set to discuss the $11,259,578 budget for possible adoption at a special meeting in city hall

RESERVE CARE: YOUR CONTINGENCY PLAN

Many of our clients come to us following an unexpected illness or injury requiring hospitalization and affecting the person's ability to be at home without assistance. The hospital typically will not discharge patients until a follow-up care plan is in place, so everybody scrambles around trying to find the right care facility or home care agency on short notice. This creates stress and can result in an uninformed choice among options for home care.

Through our Reserve Care Program, we meet with you in advance to find out what's important to you, explain all the options available and take care of the paperwork. Then, if an emergency arises, you're ready. We'll work with you, your family and your doctor to assure that you are comfortably at home with just the right amount of personal assistance. We can also coordinate with home health or therapy services, arrange for any necessary home repairs, take you to appointments and otherwise make life easier so you can use your energy to get well.

There's no cost to enroll in the Reserve Care Program until you actually use our services. Think of it as your contingency plan...because it means you have provided for the future.

You have 30 CALENDAR DAYS after this summons and legal papers are served on you to file a written response at this court and have a copy served on the plaintiff. A letter or phone call will not protect you. Your written response must be in proper legal form if you want the court to hear your case. There may be a court form that you can use for your response. You can find these court forms and more information at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp), your county law library, or the courthouse nearest you. If you cannot pay the filing fee, ask the court clerk for a fee waiver form. If you do not file your response on time, you may lose the case by default, and your wages, money and property may be taken without further warning from the court.

There are other legal requirements. You may want to call an attorney right away. If you do not know an attorney, you may call an attorney referral service. If you cannot afford an attorney, you may be eligible for free legal services from a nonprofit legal services program. You can locate these nonprofit groups at the California Legal Services Web site (www.lawhelpcalifornia.org), the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courtinfo.ca.gov/selfhelp), or by contacting your local court or county bar association.

Tiene 30 DIAS DE CALENDARIO después de que le entreguen esta citación y papeles legales para presentar una respuesta por escrito en esta corte y hacer que se entregue una copia al demandante. Una carta o una llamada telefonica no lo protegen. Su respuesta por escrito tiene que estar en formato legal correcto si desea que procesen su caso en la corte. ## SUNSET sound system, $100 to have one microphone at the podium, $120 and up for stage lighting and the city-mandated fee of $1-$2 per ticket.

"Once I saw the prices, I thought, 'We can't even think of affording this,'" said Glen Cheda, a member of the choral society board. "We only have two concerts a year, two nights twice a year."

The society's adult chorus ranges from 40 to 70 volunteer singers and operates on an annual budget of about $30,000, according to Cheda. The group held its spring concert at Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley Village, since it could not afford another show at Sunset.

"Sunset Center is going to want to have an act that fills the house and makes some money as well," Cheda observed. He lamented the fact that smaller groups like his, which draw smaller crowds, can no longer afford to play at the city-owned center.

Sunset's executive director, Jack Globenfelt, said the theater is not the best fit for them.

"We can't rent the place and lose money. We do have a special rate for not-for-profits, and the ones that are able to do it, do it," he said. "And the ones that are unable to draw bigger houses are unable to. When they are drawing 100 to 120 people, they should be in a facility that holds 200 people, not 700."

Globenfelt said simply opening the doors, heating or cooling the center and cleaning it costs about $1,400 per event.

Bach has a plan

Larger, established presenters at Sunset that draw bigger audiences, including the Carmel Music Society and the Bach Festival, have absorbed the rate increases and said the belt-tightening is worth it to use the new, state-of-the-art center.

Carmel Music Society board vice president Bob Reid said all costs are rising, not just Sunset's.

"I've had this experience before in another city where they built a new performing arts center, and they essentially just slammed us with increased costs," Reid said. "Sunset Center has been sensitive in gradually increasing the costs."

He expects they will continue to rise, and the group will manage its finances accordingly.

"Every item is open for inspection, and we're trying to pare all the expenses to the bare bones," he said. But that won't result in layoffs or negatively affect the quality of the performers.

The Carmel Music Society was formed in 1926 and operates on an annual budget of $230,000, with only one hired staff member and a board of hardworking volunteers, Reid said. It has been affiliated with Sunset Center since its founding, save for the two years the center was under renovation.

"That was a major setback for our organization, so we were tickled to death to be back at Sunset, and we will stay there," Reid said. "The people who go to our concerts want to be at Sunset, so I think we will stay."

The Carmel Bach Festival also plans to continue taking over the center for five weeks in July and August.

"We have a five-year plan in place, and we had plenty of warning," said board president Jack Buffington. "We took that into account and are adjusting accordingly as we look ahead."

The festival accrues most of its expenses during that five weeks and has an annual operating budget of about $1.5 million.

"We're hoping to sell more tickets and are being a little more aggressive asking our patrons for help defraying expenses," Buffington said. "But the program itself is as good or better than it has ever been."

In addition, the festival has increased outreach efforts, with the youth chorus and programs for senior citizens.

"Those have brought in some enthusiastic donations and support from some of the foundations," he said. "We're alive and well."

Lumped in with Wynton

The 50-year-old Carmel Ballet Academy has also pulled out of the center after decades of performing there. Business owner Carol Richmond cited an inability to pay the for-profit hall rental rate of $2,000 or 10 percent of gross receipts and other charges.

"We were told we would have some fees going up. Naturally, that's part of life, but certainly not to the tune that they have," Richmond said. "I think they're not remembering the history of Carmel. And we're not a Wynton Marsalis — we're a small-town ballet academy."

She approached Globenfelt, who offered a onetime break in costs for the academy's three-night 50th anniversary show, but Richmond found it was still too high. The recital will be presented at CSUMB's World Theater instead.

"We had always felt that Sunset Center was a community theater, and when the renovation was talked about, we were assured that as an historical user, our fees would remain close to the same," Richmond said.

The academy, which stays afloat by charging its 350 students of all ages for dance lessons, does not aim to make money from the recital and charges spectators about $16 per ticket, she said. The event intends to give students the experience of performing in a professional venue.

"We're just trying to cover the cost with our recital," she said. "It's certainly not about banking a lot of money."

But with the new rates, the group "couldn't even afford to have spotlight operators."

"I'm sick about it," Richmond said. "I had really hoped we would come to an agreement. This is a heritage that is no longer the people of Carmel's."

Globenfelt said he is sympathetic to Richmond's plight, but he aims to be fair.

"We try to be consistent in what we do and in our rates, so that nobody is shown favoritism," he said.

Globenfelt pointed out that the center fulfills its obligations to the community, including free rentals to the city and the school district, as well as hundreds of meetings held there.

"There's a balance between community service and fiscal prudence, and unfortunately that entity was caught in the middle," he said.

M I L E S T O N E S

DADE V. SKINNER of Pebble Beach, a retired building contractor, died April 11. He was 82.

A native of Glenrock, Wyoming, he grew up in Concord. He graduated from Mount Diablo High School in 1941 where he excelled in athletics. He was elected to the Mount Diablo High School Hall of Fame in recognition of having earned 11 varsity letters.

Mr. Skinner enlisted in the U.S. Navy after graduation, serving in the 99th and 55th Construction Battalions in New Guinea during World War II. He earned the Pacific and Asiatic combat ribbons and numerous other awards.

Mr. Skinner was a respected building contractor in the Bay Area for 30 years. He took pride in the quality workmanship reflected in the hundreds of homes he built throughout Contra Costa County.

He and his wife retired to Pebble Beach 32 years ago. An avid golfer, he was a member of the Spyglass Hill Golf Course. He was continually looking for the perfect golf club.

He is survived by his wife of 51 years, Wilma; his daughters, Marna Zachry of Nevada and Toni Coplan of Sunol; grandchildren, Jacob and Elijah Zachry and Amelia Coplan. He is also survived by his brother, Don; nieces Dawn Sorahan and Star Hara and nephew, Tauby Skinner.

A Celebration of life is pending.

Memorial contributions may be sent to Holy Names High School Building Fund, 4660 Harbord Drive, Oakland, CA 94610; Habitat for Humanity Mount Diablo, 2350 Stanwell Drive, Concord, CA 94520; or the American Cancer Society, 1184 Monroe St., Suite 1-2, Salinas, CA 93906.

HARRIE HILL PAGE, 94, died April 11 surrounded by her family.

A native of San Francisco, she was a descendant of early California families including the Estudillos, Carrillos and the Bandinis. She remembered, "My grandmother, Dolores Carrillo's great-grandmother was born in the Monterey Presidio. Her father was the Commandante, Juan Estudillo. She later married Juan Bandini of San Diego.

Mrs. Page was a former member of the Town & Country Club and the Francesca Club, both in San Francisco. An active volunteer with the Red Cross in San Francisco, Harrie was proud to have received her 35-year service pin. She was honored as La Duena at the Monterey Merienda in 1977.

Survivors include her daughters, Susan Page of Carmel and Greece and Pamela Page Galy of San Francisco; four grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her former husband, Stanley Page, and her sister, Juanita Hill Schurman.

Contributions are suggested to UNICEF or St. Anthony's in San Francisco.

JANET LANGSTON WILSON, 60, a resident of Carmel and Brenham, Texas, died April 19 at her Texas home.

Born in Oakridge, Tenn., she graduated as valedictorian from Hockaday High School in Dallas, graduated with honors from Rice University in Houston and received her master's at Houston Baptist University.

She was a certified property manager, commercial investment manager and licensed real estate broker, as well as a licensed family counselor. She was a member of St. Peter's Episcopal church in Brenham where she served on the altar guild.

She married Robert S. "Bob" Wilson in Dallas in 1965. Mrs. Wilson was a devoted wife and mother. She loved the outdoors, gardening and animals, especially her companion, "Scooter."

She is survived by her husband; daughters Laura Lynne Wilson of Pacifica and Kathryn Langston Wilson of Houston; a niece and a nephew.

Memorials are suggested to the Carmel Foundation, P.O. Box 1050, Carmel, CA 93921; or St. Peter's Episcopal Church or Texas Wildlife Rehabilitation Coalition, P.O. Box 19030, Houston, TX 77024.

LEYLAND MAURICE ORRETT, who maintained homes in Pebble Beach and Carmel, died April 30.

A native of Berkeley, he attended the University of California and earned his diploma from the University of London.

A U.S. Navy line officer and aerologist (a meteorologist who specializes in the air) in World War II, he was senior meteorologist with Pan American Airways Transpacific Division and registered professional engineer (civil and traffic) with the State of California and the County of Monterey.

Mr. Orrett had served on the Monterey County Planning Commission and was twice elected chairman.

An enthusiastic world traveler, he was a longtime member of the Commonwealth Club and the Chester Civic Trust (UK). He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts (UK) of the Institute of Transportation Engineers (U.S.); was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, Del Monte Forest Property Owners, the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach and the County Engineers Association of California. He chaired the ITE committee that developed standards for styles and uses of the reflective road markers now seen throughout the United States.

Mr. Orrett is survived by his wife, Betty; and two sons, Ned and Shah.

Memorials are suggested to Guide Dogs for the Blind, P.O. Box 3950, San Rafael, CA 94915-1200.

Celebrity chefs join aquarium for sustainable foods fest

By LAITH AGHA

YOU PROBABLY won't find a fish called Wanda, but Monty Python icon (and "Wanda" star) John Cleese will appear at the Monterey Bay Aquarium to help present the fourth annual Cooking for Solutions festival, slated for Friday and Saturday, May 20-21.

Cleese and Martin Yan, host of the internationally televised cooking show "Yan Can Cook," are the featured guests at this celebration of sustainable farming and fishing practices. Fourteen distinguished chefs from the United States, Canada and England will also be on hand to entertain and educate via cooking demonstrations, preparing organic dishes and leading tours of local organic farms and vineyards.

Yan will host a wine reception each day, lead a cooking demonstration in his signature style and share his dishes with guests. Friday's reception is at the Portola Cafe from 6 to 7:30 p.m. and Saturday's is at the Monterey Plaza Hotel and Spa from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Saturday's reception will also include the Sustainable Seafood Challenge, in which four chefs will compete in a cook-off stylized after the "Iron Chef" television show. Chan and Cleese will provide color commentary.

Yan's Friday spectators can shuffle over to the aquarium galleries immediately after the wine reception to join the Cooking for Solutions Gala, a sustainable and organic food extravaganza from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.

Thirty restaurants will offer tastes of dishes prepared with sustainable ingredients, 35 wineries will pour organic wines and the 14 chefs will be paired with local host restaurants to prepare dishes and talk with guests at food stations throughout the aquarium. Many of the chefs will also sign copies of their most recent cook books.

Saturday morning kicks off bright and early when chefs Jack Amon of Marx Brothers Cafe in Anchorage, Alaska, Mark Franz and Emily Luchetti of Farallon in San Francisco and Nick Morfogen of 32 East in Delray Beach, Florida, demonstrate how to prepare sustainable seafood and other dishes from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Attendees will be treated to a continental breakfast, aquarium admission and take-home recipes by the chefs.

The rest of Saturday can be spent at the aquarium exploring the Sustainable Seafood Information Fair 10 to 6 p.m. or joining one of five farm and vineyard tours with the guest chefs.

At the information fair, booths will punctuate the aquarium's galleries, offering information about organic agriculture and sustainable seafood.

Yan will put on cooking demonstrations in the auditorium and Rick Browne, creator and host of the television show "Barbecue America," will be on the oceanfront deck to give you how many close calls I've had at the two-way stops in town. The city council must understand the inevitability of aging demographics. For everyone's safety, four-

'Look in the mirror'

Dear Editor,

Why are George Ferguson and the other anti-incorporation activists intent on dragging the discussion of incorporation down into the gutter? Having in an earlier letter to The Pine Cone referred to my friend Glenn Robinson as a "defecating seagull," Ferguson has once again launched another personal attack on Robinson in these pages (May 6).

According to Ferguson, Robinson is now guilty of unspecified "vicious attacks on individuals and groups." Robinson is a Middle East expert at the Naval Postgraduate School. I have heard him interviewed any number of times on National Public Radio and KCBS, and even on The News Hour with Jim Lehrer. Never once has he been even remotely "vicious" (in spite of the fact that he studies a particularly contentious part of the world).

So what was Robinson's sin this time? He criticized anti-incorporation leaders over their refusal to debate publicly the pros and cons of incorporation. This is far from a personal attack; it is a clarion call for responsible and honest debate and dialogue on the future of our community. The next time Ferguson bemoans personal attacks, I hope he is looking directly in the mirror.

Lorraine Surprenant, Carmel Valley

'Avoiding constructive debate'

Dear Editor,

I found Bob Sinotte's "Too soon for debates" letter to the editor (April 29) interesting. At last year's Los Tulares Homeowners Association annual meeting, Glenn Robinson was invited by the association's president to debate Sinotte about Carmel Valley incorporation early in the meeting. Sinotte did not show up on time, and by the end of the two-hour business agenda, Sinotte had still not shown up. Therefore, Robinson ended up making a presentation/discussion of incorporation issues at the conclusion of the meeting.

At this year's annual meeting, Sinotte and Melvin Steckler were on the agenda by themselves to present their side of the incorporation issue. I recently saw an editorial in the Herald of a similar incident.

Why are Sinotte and Steckler avoiding constructive debate of the important issues related to incorporation?

Rodger Langland, Carmel Valley

New garden coming

Dear Editor,

On April 23, the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club had a very successful plant sale and speakers program at Sunset Center to raise money to renovate the Harrison Memorial Library garden on Ocean Avenue. The members of the garden club would like to thank the fine staff at Sunset Center for their help and cheerful support of this event. We express our special appreciation to Hattie Catania for her assistance, creative ideas and continuing friendship. We would like to thank Mary Brownfield of The Pine Cone for the excellent coverage she gave the event, which contributed to its success.

During the past year, the garden club has raised $75,000 for this project, which is almost half of what is required. We thank all the people who have attended our plant sales, boutiques and speakers programs. With your continuing support, in a year or two there will be a new, beautiful, tastefully Carmel garden at the library.

Carol Sullivan, president,

Rotarian walks the coast to fight polio

DISAPPOINTED YOU couldn't motivate yourself to exercise yesterday? This will make you feel even worse.

Nathan Auerbach, a member of the Rotary Club of Coto de Caza/Rancho Santa Margarita, is in the midst of walking from Tijuana to Vancouver in an effort to raise $1 million for Rotary's PolioPlus program to assist the final efforts to eradicate polio by next year.

His 2,200-mile, 100-day journey began

May 1 and will reach Big Sur May 24. The next day he will be joined by several Carmel Rotarians for the trek to Carmel.

Worldwide cases of Polio have reduced drastically since 1988 when the World Health Organization set out to eliminate the disease. It had hoped to wipe it out by 2000, but cases only 1,185 new cases were reported last year.

To follow Auerbach's daily journies, visit www.westcoastwalk.com.

Sandy Claws

By Margot Petit Nichols

TEDDY & LUCY Warner, 7 months and 9 years respectively, are golden retrievers and siblings in the Warner household in Carmel. Their second home, which they visit during Carmel's often foggy summers, is in Vida, Oregon.

Dad Harley doesn't care for the hazy gray, so for the past 20 years he and Mom Clicquot have driven up to the MacKenzie River. Lucy has gone with them every year for nine years, while puppy Teddy, née California Golden Bear, has had only one Oregon visit so far but is looking forward to the summer trip.

Both Teddy and Lucy love Carmel Beach, which they visit almost daily, but the MacKenzie River has kayakers to bark at and to swim after.

Once, while following a kayak, Lucy was caught in the river's strong currents; Mom and Dad had to hop in the car and head her off at the pass, so to speak, rescuing her at a friendly bend in the river.

Lucy loves to retrieve tennis balls, and Teddy does, too, but Teddy doesn't like to give the ball up once he has it in his mouth. On Thursday at Carmel Beach, Teddy raided German shorthair pointer Shaunie Segale's car and acquired Shaunie's tennis ball. He finally relinquished it to Dad Harley.

At home, Teddy helpfully empties the wastepaper baskets and chews on wadded up paper. When he was even younger, Teddy liked to chew on Lucy. Saint Lucy, being patience personified, let him chew to his heart's content.

As the senior member of the two-dog team, Lucy gets to sleep on Mom's bed, while Teddy sleeps in his crib (read crate) in Mom and Dad's bedroom. Bed privileges will accrue to him when he's not so bouncy.

Sometimes it works

IN TOO many cases, the hydra called the “permit process” — with its sky-high fees, duplicative environmental studies, endless public hearings and incomprehensible mitigations and conditions — produces results that are unfair to the businesses, homeowners and government agencies that have to endure it. And, unfortunately, in the end, all that analysis and debate can also actually harm the public, rather than protecting it.

That’s what’s going on, for example, with the Pebble Beach Company, which has been working for years to gain approval of a very good project — a project that is heavily supported by the people of the Monterey Peninsula, but which the reigning bureaucrats at the coastal commission are working overtime to thwart. And with all the regulatory tools at their disposal, the powerful zealots on the coastal commission staff may very well triumph — the public be damned.

Likewise a new water project for the Peninsula. Ten years ago, the state ordered Cal-Am to stop pumping most of the water it had been taking for decades from the Carmel River, and to find a new supply to replace it. But despite the company’s best efforts, and a parallel endeavor by Pajaro/Sunny Mesa to fill the same need, this community is barely closer to a new water project than it was in 1995. Why? Because of the incredible permit hurdles that must be overcome before a new desal plant — or any other option — can become reality. According to one estimate, more than 30 approvals are required before any new water can start to flow. Is it any wonder that Cal-Am officials have spent $4 million, and they haven’t even gotten to their first public hearing?

Once in a while, however, planners and the permit process they administer produce undeniably beneficial results for the community they serve. That’s what happened with last week’s hearing at the Carmel Planning Commission on a proposal to allow live music in the town’s restaurants and bars.

The plan — including plenty of restrictions to make sure the historic ambiance of downtown Carmel was protected — was already in good shape when city staff presented it to the commission. A lengthy, and sometimes impassioned, public hearing resulted in several improvements. One more planning commission meeting should do the trick. And then it probably won’t be long before the city council undoes the long-ago mistake of banning live performances — no matter how genteel or sophisticated — wherever alcohol is served.

The permit process in this state is a horrible mess. But it sometimes works anyway.

Eyewitnesses wanted

Dear Editor,

If any of your readers who walked along Scenic Road this spring saw birds eating the fingerling steelhead trout as they made their way to the sea, we need to get their description of that event. This year NOAA ordered the county to cut a northerly route from the lagoon to the sea, following the edge of the beach along Scenic Road. This made the route a quarter-mile longer than the usual direct, or southerly, cut. Unfortunately it gave the birds more time to eat their prey. Not good.

Birds eat — it’s called a “take” in fish biology terms — 70 percent of steelhead fingerlings as they leave their breeding areas and go to sea. That’s nature at work. The president of the steelhead association recently denied the birds were eating fish (letters, April 22) but we have received a number of unsolicited reports to the contrary and I personally saw more than 200 pelicans eating the fish for a week.

To avoid a repetition of this year’s disaster, we would like to get as many letters as possible for a meeting coming up soon. Help us protect the beach, the cypress tree, Scenic Road and the fish next year.

Please send your account to: Scenic Road and Lagoon Preservation Assoc., 2446 17th Ave., Carmel, CA 93923.

HOPE says it has members

Dear Editor,

Thank you for your amusing editorial rants (April 29) against anyone who doesn’t jump with glee at Mr. Eastwood’s greedy insistence upon chainsawing 17,000 Monterey pines, ripping the heart out of our imperiled native Monterey Pine forest ecosystem.

Sadly, since you wrongly insist that I only speak for myself, I must correct that factual error: HOPE, or Helping Our Peninsula’s Environment, is an IRS certified 501(c)3 tax deductible non-profit charity. It is governed by a board of trustees who keep it on its mission — to protect our local environment and democracy using the best available science and law, education and advocacy. I am HOPE's executive director.

HOPE's 2005 trustees are former Pacific Grove councilman Terrence Zito, law school student Dena Ibrahim, former Monterey Planning Commissioner Ed Leeper, wilderness guide Holly Keifer and Fort Ord Citizens Advisory Group representative Vienna Merritt-Moore. HOPE also enjoys a set of world-class environmental scientists as our advisors. You can find all of this on our website, which shows up at the top of many Google searches.

(But you knew all that because you've called our science advisors previously, and we sent you a media release on our letterhead with everyone's name on it — before your first of two erroneous editorials hit the streets.)

At the absolute least, my apparently newsworthy remarks reflect those of HOPE's board. Moreover, HOPE believes a majority of our community supports HOPE's forest protection views and our lawsuit. Let me replay my favorite Pine Cone editorial headline, supporting that belief — "No-growth movement can declare victory."

You and Mr. Eastwood want everyone to equate Measure A, the deceptive "Save the Forest for Clint" ballot issue, with support for his forest bulldozing project. Trouble with that argument is the project was never on the ballot, and during his campaign Mr. Eastwood forgot to mention the 17,000 trees.

Editor's note: Dilworth did not respond to e-mails asking how many members HOPE has.

Tours are better
Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter in support of Gail Wrausmann's "Carmel Walks" walking tours, and to comment on the proposed walking tour ordinance.

I own two Comstock cottages that Wrausmann includes on her walking tour and appreciate that she does. One of the joys of owning these unique Carmel cottages is sharing them with others. I appreciate the research Wrausmann has done and the information she conveys to our very important guests in town, the tourists. I understand their tour dollars are valuable to Carmel and feel Wrausmann is adding to their Carmel experience. I, in fact, like to take walking tours in cities I visit.

I have never had a problem with her group, nor with any individual in her group. It is a tribute to her that they are very respectful of my property and never a problem. I have, however, had many un-chaperoned individuals enter my yard, give themselves a self-guided tour, and snap photographs of themselves on my front steps! One day I was going out my front door when one said "Don't come out! I'm having my picture taken!" I far prefer the walking tour option!

What is the problem being solved by the proposed ordinance? I have never had a reason to complain about the walking tour and wonder how many complaints have been received. I believe the un-chaperoned tourist is far more likely to walk into my yard, block a sidewalk or not understand that some corners are not four-way stops, than a group escorted by a Carmel-wise veteran.

I believe walking tours should be allowed in our fascinating residential areas, as well as downtown on weekend afternoons, as that is when the majority of our valued guests are here.

Bobbie Voris, Carmel

Walks 'enrich Carmel experience'

Dear Editor,

Recently, I was surprised to read in a Pine Cone article that restrictions on Gale Wrausmann's "Carmel Walks" had been proposed, and I found myself asking, "Why?"

As a longtime Carmel resident, I have never endorsed anything exploitative to our community, but Wrausmann doesn't do that. Having taken the tour, I can attest to its being presented tastefully and unobtrusively, enlightening both locals and the outside world with what can only enrich their Carmel experience.

Local girl honored by Soroptimist International

By LAITH AGHA

COMMUNITY SERVICE is often a selfless act that rarely gets recognized. Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay, however, gives credit where it is due.

On April 27, the women's organization honored 16-year-old Pacific Grove High student Amie Kiehn for her volunteer efforts with the community. She volunteered 150 hours at the Canterbury Woods Retirement Community working with seniors in the medical center. And in her free time, she worked with CWRC's Spanish-speaking staff members, tutoring them in the retirement center's English as a Second Language program.

"She's a wonderful girl with a great spirit," said Melinda Tinney of CWRC.

Also honored were Christine Ferguson, who received the Women's Opportunity Award, and Riane Eisler, who was presented with the Making a Difference for Women award.

Planning commission recommends Carmel Inn water deal

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL Planning Commission voted last Wednesday to recommend the city council allow Carmel Inn for Seniors owner Dr. Ron Chaplan to donate water to the city in exchange for a waiver of the requirement to build apartments if he remodels the building into condos. According to the city's housing element, any redevelopment including condos must feature at least an equal number of apartments.

Chaplan, who spent $1 million remodeling the property but said he had to close the senior residential inn due to fire code issues that caused him to operate at a monthly loss of $40,000, has tried to sell the property for two years. He said turning the old building into three condos, with three parking spots on site, would be the only way to make it sellable.

Chaplan consulted with designer John Mandurrigo, who suggested he offer the city enough water credits to build three apartments elsewhere in town. In exchange, the city would waive the onsite-apartment requirement. Mandurrigo said it would not be financially feasible to build apartments on site, since the building would also have to provide off-street parking.

"We have what I consider a little gem," Mandurrigo said, referring to the two-story, 10,780-square-foot, Mediterranean-style building on San Carlos Street. "If we tore it down, we could build three condos on each lot and no apartments. It's an asset to the downtown area, and we tore it down, we could build three condos on each lot and no apartments. It's an asset to the downtown area, and we ought to be creative in order to keep it."

Mandurrago said other Carmel property owners would be interested in taking the water from the community reserve and using it to build apartments.

'I don't think it's possible to find another property, buy it, go through the design and have it built simultaneously. I financially cannot carry this property empty for another year.'

— Dr. Ron Chaplan

"That building could be scraped [off the lot] by a buyer, and we would like to see that not happen," said realtor Peter Baird. "Our proposal before the city allows the planning commission to control this choice."

He asked the commission to recommend the city council accept the water transfer without conditions.

But principal planner Brian Roseth pointed out that the offer included no obligation on Chaplan's part that the apartments be built. High-priced condos typically offset the costs of building the apartments, but the financial burden would fall to someone else in this case.

"Accepting [the deal] would be like granting a special favor unlike that granted any other applicant," Roseth warned.

Instead, he proposed Chaplan transfer 42 water credits — enough for three apartments, as well as the 15 percent the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District confiscates in any water transfer — to the city, and that he find a site for the new apartments, finance their design and construction, and have the work done on both properties simultaneously.

"The city would also be made whole, and the objective of the housing element would be met," Roseth said.

Impossible?

But Chaplan said that, while converting the former old-folks home to condos would free up plenty of water, the option of building apartments himself is no option at all.

"I don't think it's possible to find another property, buy it, go through the design and have it built simultaneously," he said. "I financially cannot carry this property empty for another year. This situation has tremendous financial consequences for myself and my family. This is the only solution we've been able to come up with."

Commissioner Robin Wilson said the issue seemed to be timing and suggested Chaplan be obligated to build the apartments, but not simultaneously.

That suggestion was also rebuffed by Mandurrago, who said delays on the apartment end could hold up sale of the condos, presenting too much financial risk.

Commissioner Julie Culver wondered why the city would try to accommodate Chaplan's wishes.

"We spent a whole afternoon on the housing element and the problem of not having enough workforce and affordable housing," she said. "And for us to bend over backward to violate the goal we have set seems not very honest."

Wilson moved the commission recommend the council accept the water under the conditions proposed by Roseth.

But in the middle of the vote, Chaplan interrupted in protest. Commissioners allowed him, Mandurrago and Baird to confer and continue discussing the idea. The vote ended in a 2-2 tie (commissioner Alan Hower was absent), allowing the original motion to die.

"The obligation for the apartments rests with the owner of this piece of property; the city is not assuming the obligation," commissioner Ken Talmage reiterated when discussion resumed. "It stays with this piece of property, and there will be a trigger so that final approval of the condos will not be granted until there's significant progress on those three apartments."

Chaplan said he could not understand why the city would not want to take the deal he had offered, but Baird commented that a compromise should be possible.

Ultimately, the commission unanimously voted to recommend the city council OK Chaplan's offer, contingent upon the condos not being OK'd for occupancy by the city until it sees and approves a contractual obligation for the building of the apartments. Chaplan would not be financially responsible for their construction.

"Design review and construction could all take place afterward, and it wouldn't hold Dr. Chaplan up," Roseth explained after the meeting.

The matter is set to come before the city council in June.

Welcome to Los Castillos, Monterey Development Group's final community at Pasadera. This gated, private enclave of luxury villas reveal four stunning floorplans ranging from 3,133 to 4,550 square feet. Tuscan architectural styling defines these homes, endowed with lush landscaping, gracious entry foyers, captivating entertainment areas, enchanting outdoor living spaces and incredible views. There are just eight of these extraordinary villas remaining. Priced from the high $1,000,000s.

Included is the irrevocable refinement and elegance found in a full golf membership to the Pasadera Country Club, where Old World Hacienda architecture prevails throughout the 38,000 square foot clubhouse. In addition to unparalleled golf, opportunities for tennis, swimming, fitness, and dining compliment the multitude of luxuries.

Exclusively crafted in the realm of timeless prestige and well-deserved celebrity, Pasadera opens your eyes to vistas of unabashed radiance—to an expression of paradise as only a Jack Nicklaus course can provide.

vehicle. No suspects seen.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Bracelet with a broken link found on the sidewalk on Ocean Avenue.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Contact made with a citizen whose dog was not on a leash in the commercial district on Seventh Avenue. A warning was given and follow-up will be made for current dog license information.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fall on city property on Lincoln Street. Victim exited the vehicle, stepped backward and fell to the ground, striking her head.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to a reported vehicle accident in the area of Monte Verde and Second. Firefighters discovered a middle-aged female inside a Carmel police car complaining of pain to her right knee and abrasions to the same knee and right arm. She appeared to be intoxicated. Firefighters assisted ambulance personnel with dressing the woman's wounds and gathering information, although she did not want further treatment or transport to the hospital. Her vehicle was found at the dead end of Monte Verde north of Second, partially hanging off the edge of a driveway, which is where the patient drove the car while trying to escape police. She sustained her injuries after getting out of the vehicle and falling off of the edge of the driveway. Patient signed a medical release form and was left in custody of CHP. Carmel police remained on scene to monitor the vehicle on the embankment and were advised to contact CFD if the towing company needed assistance.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to medical emergency on Dolores. Firefighters assisted ambulance crew with vitals and patient report information for an older female who had tripped on tree roots, suffering a minor abrasion to the right hand and face. Patient refused further medical treatment and signed a release.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to a medical emergency on Lincoln. Firefighters assisted ambulance crew with vitals, EKG, c-spine, patient report information and loading of an elderly female who had suffered a fall while getting out of a vehicle, suffering an injury to the back of the head. Patient transported to CHOMP.

Carmel Valley: An 81-year-old female Elinore Place resident reported the past-tense theft of money and a 35mm camera from her home. Case continues.

Carmel Valley: Female Jensen's Camp resident, age 44, reported her daughter ran away from home.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 11

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female came to the station to report a civil problem. She said she owns a restaurant and is in the process of remodeling it. She hired an assistant for $5,000 to help her with the contractors. On 05-10, the assistant came to her and demanded she pay a contractor $1,200. The contractor had no payment in two weeks, but the assistant demanded he be paid. When the owner refused, the assistant began to yell at her. The assistant then tore up a lot of business papers and demanded payment of the $5,000. The owner said she would pay her when the remodeling was done. The owner did not want the assistant contacted but wanted a report on file in case the situation escalates.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic collision on public property on Mission Street resulted in injury.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to a natural gas leak at Junipero and Fifth. Firefighters discovered a small leak coming from the main valve on the riser to the gas meter for the complex. PG&E was notified and employees were advised to limit activity in the immediate area of the meter as a precaution. Although gas detector from the engine detected gas from the valve, it dissipated immediately and no detection of gas could be found past about six inches from the meter.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to request for public assistance on Lincoln Street regarding a strange noise. Police officers on scene had discovered an audible rodent and insect detector that had tipped over, setting off an alarm. Occupant was concerned her carbon monoxide detector might have also gone off, but it was not activated, as determined by the gas monitor from the engine. She was advised to have PG&E check her appliances at no charge if she was still concerned.

Big On Experience Yet Small Enough To Worry About Every Little Detail

CARMEL. MEDITERRANEAN ESTATE. "XANADU" Located just a block from the beach, with stunning ocean views is this marvelous Mediterranean estate. Originally constructed in 1925, it was extensively remodeled, in 1981-83, by architect Don Wald in collaboration with its artistic owners. There are three bedroom suites plus a 1/2 bath, a generous living room/dining room combination, a cozy den with wet bar, a large family room, and a breakfast room off the kitchen. The home features three fireplaces, a double garage, and three lovely garden patios. Situated on a double lot (80'x100'), the property also includes a guest cottage. The colors of Xanadu are the colors of the sunset over Carmel Bay - the sky, the water and the setting sun. $12,500,000.
