Santa Catalina grad is the woman behind Tiffany's glitz and glamour

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A QUARTER century ago, Ellen Rollins stopped attending classes at Menlo College and took what she thought would be a short-term, transitional job as an "inventory control clerk" at Tiffany & Co. while she figured out what she wanted to do with her life.

Today, the San Francisco native and 1977 graduate of Monterey's Santa Catalina School is a company director celebrating the grand opening of the new Carmel Plaza store she manages.

A few days before Tiffany & Co. unlocked its doors at Ocean and Mission and invited the public inside for the first time, Rollins reflected on what has motivated her to stay with the venerable institution, known for the exquisite gold and silver work, jewels and gems that come wrapped

The general manager of the new Tiffany & Co. store on Ocean Avenue, Ellen Rollins, probably didn't imagine when she was a student at Santa Catalina School that one day she'd be showing off a $750,000 blue diamond ring as she prepared to open a Carmel branch of the world's most famous jeweler.

in telltale blue boxes with white satin ribbons. "It is something people ask me, but I have to say, I'm one of many at Tiffany," she said. "We have longevity like you cannot believe."

With her first six years in operations, followed by nine years in sales and four years in management — all at the San Francisco store in Union Square — Rollins said she jumped at the chance to work at corporate headquarters in New York, where she spent the last five years focused on

Incorporation drive could stall Rancho Cañada

By CHRIS COUNTS

A RECENT appeals court decision in a Santa Barbara County land use controversy requires a delay in county approval of the proposed 280-unit Rancho Cañada Village housing project until the people of Carmel Valley decide whether they want to incorporate, according to the president of a residents association backing the incorporation drive.

"We've been concerned that the Rancho Cañada project will be rushed through the county process, but the appeals court ruling means the county can't give final approval to it" until the incorporation effort runs its course, said Glenn Robinson, president of the 850-member Carmel Valley Association.

In 2001, voters approved the incorporation of the City of Goleta. While the drive to incorporate Goleta was under way, a 109-unit subdivision inside the boundaries of the proposed city was approved by the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors. The new city contested the project approval in court and, after an initial setback, an appeals court ruled in favor of Goleta in September 2004.

The director of the Rancho Cañada project, Keith McCoy, said he wasn't aware of the Goleta decision, but he said the group backing the project has no intention of fast-tracking it.

"Every time a newspaper article comes out, people think construction will start next week," he said. "It's going to be a while."

Still, McCoy made no assurances the developers would wait for the incorporation drive to run its course before proceeding forward.

"We don't know how long [the drive to incorporate] will take," he said.

The debate comes as land use attorney Tony Lombardo takes the reins of the Rancho Cañada project from his father, Nick, who died May 4.

Just two weeks before he collapsed of a heart attack while playing tennis, Nick Lombardo was asked what he would like his legacy to be.

"People who come to work here in the morning should be able to watch the sunset," he said — a vision he hoped to fulfill by converting 18 of Rancho Cañada's 36 golf holes to housing, half of it affordable.

At the funeral, Tony Lombardo said his father had already Renowned jeweler opens 56th store on Ocean Ave.

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE PRESIDENT of Tiffany & Co. came to town for the opening of his company's Carmel-by-the-Sea store Friday — a trip he has not made to many of the dozens of others that have opened across the United States during his 19 years with the world renowned jeweler.

"My wife and I have been long overdue coming back to Carmel," native New Yorker Jim Quinn said. "The first time was 30 years ago, and I kept saying, 'We have to come back.'"

It's two strikes and you're out at the local ball game

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE GAME of softball has not changed much in the past hundred or so years. Like its faster-paced cousin, baseball, it is a sport defined by its traditions.

Whether played on a half-frozen patch of tundra in Alaska, a cow pasture in Iowa, or a beach in Hawaii, there are certain basic, unchangeable things in softball — like three strikes, for example.

Unless, of course, you are playing on the Monterey Peninsula or in Big Sur. Then you get just two strikes.

Two strikes? Welcome to the wacky world of Socko, a popular local variant of softball.

In addition to the two-strike limit, another quirky rule prohibits runners from touching home plate. Instead, they're required to stay to the right of the plate, and the umpire decides whether the ball or the runner arrived first.

Also, due to the limited size of local ballparks, home runs are generally frowned upon. In Monterey and Pacific Grove, teams are limited to a specific number of home runs, and

Tighter live music law heads to council

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AFTER MAKING changes that Carmel Planning Commissioner Robin Wilson admitted "may be so restrictive as to destroy the whole thing," the commission unanimously voted June 16 to recommend the city council approve a new law allowing live music in downtown restaurants.

The hearing — the third since the draft ordinance was introduced in May — began with demonstrations of noise levels and decibel-meter readings outside and inside two Carmel restaurants while recorded music was piped through amplifiers.

Commissioners said they were struck by two aspects of the test. Music played inside PortaBella restaurant registered at 55 decibels on the street until the front door was opened, when it jumped to more than 80 db. And when they visited the children's shop upstairs, the music seemed louder than the registered 45 db.

"It only took a minute for me on that second floor to hear a lot more music than I would want to hear for an evening,"

Memorial bench, martinis honor Brenner's 'creativity and vision'

By MARY BROWNFIELD

RAISING A characteristic (though responsibly nonalcoholic) "martini" to a man known for his sense of humor and talent for bridge building, 20 fans of Alan Brenner dedicated a bench in his name at Sunset Center Monday.

Brenner, who died in May 2004 of a rare form of thyroid cancer, was a member of the eight-person Sunset Center building committee.

Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud and Sunset supporter Bill

Doolittle took a few moments to remember Brenner, whose direction helped bring the center's widely acclaimed $21.65 million renovation to fruition two years ago.

"He had experience, and he was blessed with a sense of humor and relaxed demeanor," remembered Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud, who represented the city on the building committee, along with then-councilman Dick Ely, administrator Rich Guillen and attorney Don Freeman. "He could often break logjams."

Brenner, Nancy Doolittle, Davis Factor and Richard Borda, members of the immensely successful fundraising group, Campaign for Sunset, formed the committee's other half.

"Alan was the perfect person to represent the nonprofit side on the building committee, because he understood the needs of the various user groups from the standpoint of running and operating a conference center," said Bill Doolittle, referring to Brenner's years with the Monterey Conference Center. "He had this ability to perceive other users' needs ahead of time, and that proved to be invaluable in anticipating problems before they came along."

His widow, Jean Brenner, and their family also attended Monday's bench dedication, along with a few friends.

The timing of the dedication, as well as the bench's location, are particularly appropriate, given the impending opening of the Carmel Bach Festival's 68th season at Sunset July 16. Brenner was long involved with the festival.

"It's the big bench nearest the San Carlos Street entrance, facing the theater," McCloud said. "It's at a prime spot, so from that vantage point, Alan can see the whole renovation."

The plaque that now graces the bench reads:

In memory of Alan Brenner whose creativity and vision helped shape the renovation of the Sunset Theater Donated by the Sunset Building Committee August 2004

Each of the committee's seven members pitched in $100 for the bench and its plaque, McCloud said.

Spelling champ from P.G. risks humiliation, takes home national prize

By CHRIS COUNTS

DESPITE WINNING the National Senior Spelling Bee June 18 in Cheyenne, Wyoming, Dave Riddle of Pacific Grove isn't quite ready yet to give up spell check on his computer.

"I use spell check because I can't type worth a hoot," explained Riddle, who has worked at the Defense Language Institute as a legal assistance attorney since 1994.

But Riddle never set out to be a spelling bee champ. Instead, he discovered his talent by simply trying to help his brother promote a business.

Riddle's brother, who owns a sewing and embroidery business in Bend, Oregon, decided to host a fundraising spelling bee earlier this year. Riddle traveled north to participate in the contest, which he ended up winning.

An affinity for spelling clearly runs in the family — last year, Riddle's 14-year-old son, Christoph, claimed first prize in a Monterey County student spelling bee and qualified for a national tournament in Washington, D.C.

"I figured if kids can go out there in front of a crowd and subject themselves to possible humiliation, I could do it too," said Riddle, who moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1990.

So he signed up for the national contest, partly because his brother offered to pay for his airfare and lodging in exchange for Riddle wearing a t-shirt promoting the brother's business.

"I figured, 'Sure, I'll sell out to Corporate America,'" he joked. "Also, it was a great way to reconnect with my brother."

The National Senior Spelling Bee, which was founded 10 years ago, featured 21 contestants from eight different states. The two-and-one-half-hour competition allowed each participant to misspell two words each.

To take home the title, Riddle had to spell 14 challenging words correctly. The winning word was "ptosis," which means the limpness of a limb or eyelid caused by paralysis.

In addition, Riddle correctly spelled "myrmidons," who are people who carry out orders unquestioningly;

"oligophagous," which means eating only a few specific types of food; and "mulligatawny," a soup made with chicken stock and curry powder. He did not misspell a single word.

For his efforts, Riddle captured a $100 cash prize. Despite the somewhat modest sum, he enjoyed his trip to the contest.

Unfortunately, by winning, he is now ineligible to participate again in the National Senior Spelling Bee. But that's okay with Riddle — there are other spelling bees he can enter. He recently traveled to Joshua Tree to participate in a contest with his parents.

"It's really becoming a family thing," Riddle said. "My parents don't get out much, so it was really a blast for them."

While Riddle enjoys the competition of spelling bees, it is ultimately words that capture his attention.

"The utter richness and variety of our language is fascinating," he said. "Seventy percent of our words come from other languages. You can learn a lot about the world from words."

Bach Fest Italian concert, tour launches 'Angels Fund'

By PAUL MILLER

AN AMBITIOUS plan to get the Carmel Bach Festival on a firmer financial footing was launched last month not with the usual fundraising dinner and auction, but with a concert in a 13th Century church in Cortona, Italy — a concert performed by five of the Bach Fest's musicians and attended by 15 of its biggest donors.

"Every year we've had a fundraising campaign to cover the shortfall from the festival that just occurred," said Jack Buffington, president of the Bach Fest Board of Directors.

Historic resources board OKs Forest Lodge condos

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A PLAN to turn an historic house into two low-income apartments and demolish the rest of the Forest Lodge to make way for four new condos passed muster with the Carmel Historic Resources Board, which voted 2-1 in its favor Wednesday. Two members were absent.

Builder Chris Tescher presented his proposed changes to the four-parcel property's only historic building June 20.

Designed by Hazel Waltrous in 1923, the house belonged to notable photographer Johann Hagemeyer and has been extensively altered over the years, according to consultant Sheila McElroy. She was hired to evaluate the proposed alterations and the plan for the entire, 12,912-square-foot, triangular Forest Lodge property bordered by Ocean Avenue, Mountain View Avenue and Torres Street.

To make the former Hagemeyer residence livable as two units, Tescher wants to move a stairway to the street side of the house, remove the garage added to the home 30 years after it was built, install new French doors and decks, replace the stained glass windows and add two new windows. The house will remain on its own lot, while the three others will be merged.

Planner Sean Conroy said any changes to the Hagemeyer house should be designed so they clearly delineate the old and the new.

The four condos to be built next to the historic house in place of the Forest Lodge's non-historic buildings would not loom over it, Tescher said. Designs for two of those homes were changed from stucco to wood at the request of the planning commission, and current height restrictions will keep them below the Hagemeyer house.

"The historic house appears to overwhelm what we're going to build," he said.

McElroy concluded the changes proposed for the Hagemeyer house would comply with the Secretary of the Interior's standards for rehabilitating historic buildings, though she cautioned that the new condos proposed for the Ocean Avenue property line could "create a considerable mass."

Board chair Julie Wendt agreed, suggesting Tescher see if any space could be added to reduce the two buildings' wall-like effect.

Board members voted 2-1, with Paul Coss dissenting, and Erling Lagerholm and Kathy Henney absent, to issue a determination of consistency with the Secretary of the Interior's standards.

The application will return for further consideration by the planning commission, which has already reviewed it in concept.

Koans, freedom and love at Carl Cherry Center

"MAKE THE Mountains Dance," a workshop exploring Zen koans, freedom and love, will be held Saturday, July 9, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts. Joan Sutherland, a cofounder of the Pacific Zen Institute and teacher at the Open Source Project, will also give an evening lecture Friday, July 8, at 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Universalist Church. The workshop will include meditation, talks, and conversations in which koans will be explored as a group.

Sutherland is a senior teacher of Zen Buddhism who explores what happens when methods of meditation developed over thousands of years are brought into contemporary American lives. The cost of the lecture is $10, and the workshop is $65 (including a vegetarian lunch). For more information or to register, call (831) 624-7491.

CELEBRATING THE ARTISTS OF THE BIG SUR COAST

Foundation loves its tiny car

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHAT'S ENVIRONMENTALLY friendly and makes people smile wherever it goes? The used Global Electric Motors vehicle the city sold to the Carmel Foundation last month.

Foundation president/CEO Jill Sheffield discovered the diminutive zero-emissions vehicle's charm when she picked it up from the city May 13.

Carmel originally purchased it and three other electric vehicles in June 2003. The planning and building department uses one for site visits and errand running, and librarians transport books in theirs. Sunset Center has the third.

This particular GEM, with a metal cargo box on the back, was used by information systems/network manager Steve McInchak until May, when the Carmel City Council voted to declare it surplus and sell it to the foundation for $3,000. New, they cost about $12,000, Sheffield said.

"I love it. You get lots of stares, and people look at it and smile," Sheffield said. "It handles well."

With a wheelbase of 110 inches, it's also easy to park. And it only needs to be plugged in at night to keep running.

"We thought we might have to have some fancy thing installed or built, but it's just your regular old 110-volt plug," she said. The GEM spends the dark hours in the foundation's garage.

Ice cream or pizza?

During his two years of driving it, McInchak said the GEM elicited some good-natured heckling.

"Everyone would ask me for ice cream or burritos or pizza," he laughed, because the square metal cargo hold made it look like a miniature delivery truck. "The biggest offender was Clyde Klaumann. I wanted to have a cooler in the back, so the next time he said that, I could give him something."

Food delivery might very well be part of the GEM's new mission, according to Sheffield. Its cargo space may be modified to carry meals to homebound seniors, she said. Last year, the foundation provided more than 5,800 meals to shut-ins.

The GEM will also carry staff to the post office and the foundation's various properties, including its three apartment buildings that provide low-cost housing for 54 seniors.

Founded in April 1950, the nonprofit has 4,000 members who are Peninsula residents aged 55 and older and offers a wide range of services, from inexpensive lunches and classes, to field trips and errand-running.

Former president/CEO John Freitas had long wanted a GEM to be part of the foun-dition's fleet of vehicles. When his admirers gathered money in tribute to him as he left his post Jan. 31, he requested the money be

Carmel cops use Ft. Ord to learn when to shoot and when to wait

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE SCENE played out Thursday in a dingy, dilapidated Fort Ord apartment complex, where broken glass littered the ground and plywood covered most of the windows. Two masked men holding handguns lurked inside. One had already shot someone, who whined in pain outside and cried to the five Carmel cops as they rushed toward the room.

"Help me," wailed off-duty firefighter/paramedic David Jedinak, who played the part of an injured Junipero Serra School student.

He wasn't very convincing, but acting skills mattered little during the "critical incident responder" firearms training staged for Carmel police officers at the old military base. Dressed in protective gear and gripping bright blue handguns loaded with Simunition paint pellets, the cops ignored the "injured student" and headed straight for the shooters hiding inside.

Carmel Fire engineers Bill Scott and August Beacham tried to take them down — but they failed, with Scott taking multiple hits, including one in the head.

Afterward, Sgt. Tom Nguyen, the instructor who ran the June 23 exercise, coached the cops and then readied the "suspects" for the next scenario.

In that case, Beacham stood aside while Jedinak, Scott and paramedic Trish Ringer became belligerent drunks.

Scott and Ringer eventually acquiesced but Jedinak continued yelling while refusing to take his hand out from behind his back. With a flash, he brought out his hand — and it was empty. Sgt. John Nyunt pulled his gun, but he didn't shoot the unarmed Jedinak.

Nguyen commended him for his restraint.

In another scene, Ringer, again with a group of drunks, pulled a knife from her back pocket as cops approached. Refusing to drop it, she suddenly lunged toward those who had subdued Scott and were yelling at her. Sgt. Mel Mukai's gun jammed as he tried to shoot, but reserve officer Tim Meroney got her square in the chest.

Afterward, Nguyen advised Meroney he should have not let her get so close.

And so the day went, with various mixes of cops, suspects and victims playing out scene after scene, practicing how to handle ambushes, armed robberies, fights between lovers, shootouts and other volatile situations that could require a quick shot or a stealthy advance.

"The point is to get them acquainted with the active shooter protocol when going into a mass-murder type situation," said Sgt. Mike Calhoun, who developed the training with and metal bats are restricted to certain models. In Big Sur, all players are required to use wood bats.

How popular is Socko? Well, consider this: In Big Sur, a small, rural and somewhat isolated community with a year-round population of fewer than a thousand residents, the local league features eight teams and a total of more than 100 players. So many Peninsula residents are willing to make the 60-mile round trip drive down Highway 1 to Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park that the league limits each team to playing no more than four "town" players at a time.

Socko's beginnings

Donald Davison of Monterey is one of a handful of local players who was there when Socko made its debut.

"It was in 1952," recalled Davison, 70. "Stan Weiss was a coach who came to Monterey High School, and he introduced the game to us."

Before coming to Monterey, Weiss taught and coached in Yuba City, where he dreamed up a more exciting and interactive version of softball.

"We needed an activity that was fun and kept the kids busy," said the 83-year-old

Weiss, who still lives in Monterey.

Instead of facing an opposing pitcher, Socko players bat against a pitcher who plays on their own team. So rather than trying to strike out a batter, the pitcher tries to give each batter the perfect pitch to hit.

"When your friends are pitching you the ball, they'll put it just where you like it," Weiss said.

To keep things lively, the batter only gets two pitches. Needless to say, the result is a quick-paced game that is never dull.

"Fielders get a chance to field, and hitters get a chance to hit," said Weiss.

Davison agreed. "I love Socko for the defense," said Davison, who played until he was 64. "I was a shortstop and I got a lot of action."

On Aug. 27, Jacks Park in Monterey will host an annual reunion of two of Monterey's early Socko teams, Mike's Sea Food and the Smoke Shop. The celebration will feature a barbecue, a raffle and an informal hitting session.

"We don't have a game because everybody's too damn old," joked Davison. "Everybody gets up and takes a few cuts."

Down the coast

As strange as Socko may seem to a casual observer watching a game in Monterey or Pacific Grove, it is nothing compared to is home to an undetermined number of ground squirrels who presumably like softball. Their dwellings along the left-field line just past third base are often misidentified as "gopher holes." The players don't seem to mind this obstacle course of a field — if anything, it just makes the game more interesting.

How to join a Socko league

Registration for the Monterey Fall Socko League has opened, and space is limited. Fees are $325 to $415 per team. Call Mark Piña at (831) 646-3866 for more information. The City of Monterey Department of Recreation and Community Services also offers a summer league, which is under way. Games are played at Jacks Park and Frank E. Sollecito Ballpark. The season begins Sept. 12.

For anyone interested in joining the Pacific Grove Fall Socko League, registration begins July 5 and space is also limited. Fees are $400 per team. Entries are limited to the first 21 teams to register. Three seven-team divisions will compete. Call Donald Mothershead at (831) 648-5730 for more information. The P.G. Recreation Department also offers a Spring Socko League. All games are played at P.G. Municipal Stadium.

The Big Sur Socko League only offers a summer league. Space is very limited, and the deadline for joining a team is June 28. All games are played at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park. Spectators get into the park for free on Monday and Tuesday evenings. For more information, visit the website: www.bigsursoftball.org.

Don't let a Good Thing go to waste

Be Water Wise

Despite heavy rainfall this spring, our area is still under state-imposed water use limits.

By following these easy water-saving tips, we can maintain water levels in the Carmel River that enhance habitat and protect threatened species.

- Landscape your yard with California-friendly plants that need little or no water.
- Don't Set it and Forget it! Check you sprinkler settings and timing devices regularly and adjust for wetter weather
- Water during the coolest part of the day to reduce evaporation.
- Soak Don't Spray! A good soaking every 3 to 4 days encourages growth.
- Use a broom instead of a hose to remove sidewalk debris.
- Use a bucket instead of a hose when washing your car.

For additional Water Wise information or to receive a complimentary low-flow hose nozzle or showerhead, email us at monterey@amwater.com or call (888) 237-1333.

father had already invested $2 million in getting Rancho Cañada Village started through the permit process. And he announced his own resolve to see the project built.

"My father did not live to see the day when once again a doctor could live in the same neighborhood as a nurse, or the golf pro with the grounds keeper," Tony Lombardo said. "We owe it to my father for all he gave to this community to finish this work, and we will finish it."

The younger Lombardo, who specializes in gaining approval for controversial development projects, said the Goleta decision could have a bearing on Rancho Cañada — but only if the decision is upheld by the California Supreme Court, which has already agreed to review the ruling.

And McCoy said he is optimistic the project will eventually be built. Replacing golf holes with homes will cut water use on the property and even reduce traffic on Carmel Valley Road, he said.

But Robinson and LandWatch Monterey County Executive Director Chris Fitz are dubious about those claims and are keeping a cautious eye on the project's progress.

According to the plan, 140 units — 50 percent of the subdivision — would be sold at below market rates. Only people who work in Carmel, Carmel Valley and Big Sur would be considered eligible to purchase the homes.

Seventeen 1,200-square-foot condominiums designated for very-low-income housing could be purchased for as little as $115,000 each, a sharp contrast to the countywide median home sale price of $620,000.

Fitz, though, is concerned the bargain-priced homes will eventually be sold at market rates. "LandWatch thinks affordable housing is a great idea, but it needs to be protected over the long term," said Fitz, who replaced longtime LandWatch executive director, Gary Patton, just a week ago. "There is a big movement in the county not to have resale restrictions on inclusionary housing and allow homeowners to sell at the market rate."

If the resale restrictions are removed, Fitz said, the original purchasers would get a windfall, but "the community would lose in the long term."

Fitz added that LandWatch has not yet taken a position supporting or opposing the proposed development.

In response to Fitz' worry over the market-rate reselling of affordable homes, McCoy said, "We're happy to make the inclusionary housing permanent, but it's up to the county. We're willing to follow whatever rule is in place."

Build it and cars will come

Robinson is also worried about traffic the project would create. He called the Rancho Cañada Village's own traffic study "fatally flawed," but he is encouraged the county is conducting an independent traffic review.

"We have a lot of development coming down the pike," said Robinson, who estimated that if all of Carmel Valley's remaining lots are built, Carmel Valley Road would get an additional 15,000 car trips a day.

McCoy said the Rancho Cañada project will reduce traffic congestion by eliminating golf rounds and commutes.

"Our project will actually take people off the roads," he said. "Fifty percent of our housing will be for people who already work in the area."

Flood control issues are also a concern for Robinson.

"The project will dig up a lot of dirt," he said. "This will have consequences upstream and downstream."

He said a study of the Carmel River Basin by the Federal Emergency Management Agency needs to be completed before any conclusions are made regarding flood control issues. "At this point it's just guesswork," he said. "You can't approve a project based on guesswork."

Robinson added that the Carmel Valley Association has not yet taken a position but he is also concerned the biggest development project in 20 years will threaten Carmel Valley's "rural character."

LIVE MUSIC

Wilson commented.

As a result, he suggested live music noise levels not exceed 55 db when measured from the wall or ceiling inside the restaurant if someone lives above it or next door, especially since the city encourages people to live in the business district.

Principal planner Brian Roseth cautioned that noise levels in many restaurants already exceed 55 db when filled with loquacious diners, but chairman Bill Strid and commissioner Ken Talmage liked Wilson's suggestion, because it would protect downtown residents and visitors from too much noise.

They also decided the 55 db limit should be imposed whenever musicians are playing, without exception. Any spike in noise level caused by the brief opening of a door or window — such as the rise commissioners observed at PortaBella — would constitute a violation. As proposed, any violation could lead to revocation of the restaurant's live music use permit.

"If the door is going to open and close, they need to understand the measurement is going to be when the door is open," Talmage said.

The commission also decided no live music should be allowed Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday nights, and the law would give commissioners the authority to further limit a restaurant's hours and days for live music.

No EIR yet

Those changes might have at least partially mollified the critics who have testified at all three hearings. Supporters — rowdy and plentiful at the May hearing — dwindled in number at the June 8 meeting and were silent June 16.

But detractors continued to call for an environmental impact report and suggested allowing live music downtown would destroy Carmel's character.

"These restaurants will start competing with each other, and once they start competing with each other, the losers will be people who live downtown or who go downtown for a nice dinner," predicted Melanie Billig.

Resident and retailer Mike Brown called for an EIR and the formation of a subcommittee of planning commissioners, restaurateurs and Carmel Residents Association members who could research the issue and report back in 60 days.

"This is a rather major issue for Carmel that could haunt us in the future if it's not handled right today, and I don't understand why we're going so fast," he said. "When this goes into effect, we're going to hear a lot of music and a lot of complaining from people."

Billig also asked if the ordinance would allow trumpets, drums and clarinets, or if it would limit instruments to guitars and pianos.

"We as a panel are very hesitant to try to legislate what kind of music is going to be allowed," Strid responded. "But I think we have definitely said it's going to be soft."

He also said the commission had spent

We are very hesitant to try to legislate what kind of music is going to be allowed, but I think we have definitely said it's going to be soft.

enough time and effort drafting the ordinance and soliciting input, contrary to Brown's assertion the process was rushed.

"The public has helped a great deal to shape this document and help address the concerns of people living downtown," Strid said.

The proposed law "is not in any way incomplete," according to Talmage and use permits will be reviewed annually. Wilson reminded the audience that the law will expire in three years. None of them called for an EIR.

"It will also have at least two hearings before the city council," Strid added. The draft ordinance is set to be considered by the council July 5.

"I haven't stayed with one position the whole time, but there are many who have," she said. "We have 35-year employees who have stayed in sales, but it's fun to change it up every once in a while, and it's a great company in which to grow."

She described her work as dynamic and said it's easy to support a highly regarded company that has held a place in American culture for more than 160 years and carries with it a certain mystique.

"That mystique will always be there, because it's embedded in our culture," she said. "We carry fine quality merchandise, and the employees all stand behind that and care about it."

The nuns are coming

When the call came to manage the Carmel store, Rollins didn't hesitate to accept. And she's already reconnected with her high school alma mater.

"The sisters are coming to the opening — of course I invited them," she said, to the Tiffany Diamonds and All That Jazz VIP block party held Thursday night to celebrate the opening and benefit the Big Sur Land Trust, the Make-A-Wish Foundation, the Monterey Peninsula Foundation and Sunset Center, which will continue to receive support from the Carmel shop.

"We'll do it on an ongoing basis, but the opening ceremony is very important to us, to honor local organizations that give back to the community so well," she said.

Now an eager Pacific Grove renter "looking for the perfect spot" to buy a home, Rollins said she's thrilled to be working in the new shop with its staff of 16.

"We have a very good existing client base here, and the location we've chosen couldn't be better," she said, adding that she and the company are grateful for the city's support.

"I'm calling it, 'the jewel box on the corner,' because that's exactly what it looks like," she said. "There's a wow factor."

And after 25 years, Rollins said, "You can still be wowed, and it's great."

Leidigs settle civil suit over shooting

TED AND Ilona Leidig have settled the personal injury lawsuit he filed against her in March, more than a year after she shot him in the chest during an argument at their Carmel Valley home, according to Ilona Leidig's attorney, Richard Rosen.

The civil suit had been filed in Monterey County Superior Court March 4, just days after a jury found Ilona Leidig not guilty of attempting to kill her reportedly abusive and unfaithful husband.

Now living in mid valley with his new wife and their baby daughter, Ted Leidig had sought unlimited compensatory, punitive and exemplary damages from Ilona Leidig. He had alleged general negligence and intentional tort and sought compensation for hospital and medical expenses, general damage and loss of earning capacity. He blamed her for his severe emotional distress, and in justification for seeking exemplary damages, alleged she was also guilty of malice and oppression.

Rosen, limited by the confidentiality agreement that accompanied the out-of-court settlement, would not divulge its details Thursday.

"The case is settled, and we are very satisfied," he said. "It's a closure to that chapter, at least. There's still the divorce, community property and spousal support, but I think the end is in sight."

Coastal commission is not unconstitutional, high court says

MORE THAN two years after an appeals court ruled that the California Coastal Commission's structure violated the State Constitution's Separation of Powers clause, the California Supreme Court ruled Thursday that the Legislature fixed the problem in early 2003, and that the commission is no longer unconstitutional.

In a major setback for the Marine Forests Society, the environmental group that brought the original suit, the high court declined to rule on the constitutionality of the old commission, leaving intact all the decisions made by the commission during the 27 years its members were selected under what the appeals court ruled was an unconstitutional appointment scheme. During those years, the the Speaker of the Assembly and the leader of the party that controlled the State Senate were able to select two-thirds of the commission's members and fire them at all, giving the legislative bosses effective control over the commission's decisions. According to the appeals court, that power was reserved by the State Constitution for the governor.

Ron Zumbrun, the attorney for Marine Forests, speculated the high court ruled in favor of the commission because it didn't want to risk overturning "hundreds or even perhaps thousands of administrative rulings."

BACH FEST

"We wanted to reverse that, and we created the Angels Fund to raise money to pay for festivals in advance."

It was bassoonist and newly appointed managing director Jesse Read who came up with the idea of launching the Angels Fund with a trip to Tuscany — a region he knew well from decades of playing concerts in Europe.

"I had some connections in Cortona, and we arranged to have a concert at the San Domenico Church," Read said. "The trip raised more than $100,000, and it was a great experience for everybody."

Performing with Read in the May 21 concert were violinist Elizabeth Wallfisch, harpsichordist Andrew Arthur, trumpeter Wolfgang Basch and soprano Rosa Lamoreaux. Their program of works by Bach, Vivaldi and Scarlatti drew a big crowd.

"When we were setting up, they told us we would have trouble filling the church," Read said. "But we had people standing and sitting on the steps and we even had to turn some away. The local councillor for cultural affairs said it was one of the most successful concerts they've had."

According to Read, the Cortona event could be the first of a series of European outings for Bach Fest musicians. He mentioned Leipzig and London as candidates for future concerts.

"I would like to keep the festival visible year-round," he said. "I don't know how many tours we'll be able to do, but it should be one a year."

"The trip was fantastic, not only because of the music, but because we got to become close with five fabulous musicians," said Buffington, speaking for the group of donors who went on the weeklong trip. "In private conversations, you learn so much about the music."

The donors and the musicians stayed together at an 18th century Italian villa and toured Tuscany before the concert. They were also greeted with a ceremony at the Cortona City Hall.

"One thing this trip showed is that you can do special events for special people," Read said. "And now we have confidence that we can manage our money and look ahead. We don't have to go hat in hand after we've overspent."

This year's Carmel Bach Fest will be July 16 to Aug. 6. For complete concert and ticket information, including events at Sunset Center and the Mission, go to www.bachfestival.org.

Fallen teen's mother drives home point to grads

By LAITH AGHA

"I DON'T understand why these kids can't put on a seat belt," said Brandy Abend. "How many more kids have to die before they realize that wearing a seat belt will save your life?"

Last August 4, Abend's sixteen-year-old son, Arieh, died when he crashed the car he was driving. While his two passengers were wearing seat belts, he was not. The passengers survived without injury.

Abend brought her anguish with her to last Friday's Carmel Valley High School graduation and delivered an emotional but poignant speech, urging the 16 graduating students to be aware that their actions have consequences, not just for themselves, but for all who are connected to them.

"What the kids found most gripping [about the speech] was that they still would have been sitting next to this young man had he only been wearing his seat belt," explained CVHS principal Tom Stewart. They received the message that "when you're young you feel invincible, but things can happen very quickly that can change your life."

Wearing a seat belt is one such thing that can have a monumental impact. And in light of the wave of teen fatalities in the area, the message was particularly relevant.

Most recently, Stephan Nataf, a junior at Robert Louis Stevenson School, who had recently celebrated his eighteenth birthday, died when he lost control of his Chevy Tahoe and hit a tree on 17 Mile Drive May 20. He was not wearing a seat belt.

He was the second RLS student to die in an automobile accident in less than three years. Michelle Croke, 16, lost her life after losing control of her car and crashing into a tree in Pebble Beach. Police said she had been driving at approximately 50 mph – twice the speed limit.

And the morning after Abend's speech reached Carmel Valley High grads, 18-year-old Callie Thorning crashed on Carmel Valley Road — the day after she graduated from Carmel High School. She was not wearing a seat belt and suffered major injuries after being ejected from her car. She was airlifted to Stanford Medical Center from the crash site.

She is home now after being in critical condition, but her injuries probably would have been prevented had she been wearing her seat belt, according to California Highway Patrol Officer Richard Richards.

But buckling up isn't the only safety measure teens are overlooking. Speeding and driving while intoxicated have also played roles in the fatalities of young locals.

Since the beginning of 2004, 37 people 21 years old or younger have died in Monterey County auto accidents. In most cases, seat belts, speeding or alcohol were factors.

"They need to understand that when you die and leave behind people who love you, it's extremely devastating," said Abend. "It's the most unnatural thing in the world to lose a child. I don't think you ever get over it."

Abend, whose daughter, Zehava, graduated from San Diego State University last month, is planning a memorial on August 6 to commemorate the one-year anniversary of Arieh's death.

'My Way' is a toe-tapping journey through Sinatra's career

By DEBORAH SHARP

EVEN PEOPLE who don't think they have any particular interest in Frank Sinatra (those of us of the Beatles' generation, for instance) can be drawn into the magic of The Voice as it's recreated in Pacific Repertory's current production of "My Way: A Tribute to Frank Sinatra," directed by Anne Marie Hunter. Perhaps that's because, no matter what our generation, Sinatra's music speaks to all of us on some level or another, taking aim at love, loss, living fully, and just plain gutsiness — things that are hard to ignore, and things that Sinatra gave voice to better than just about anyone.

The musical review showcases about 50 of Sinatra's hits, and the strength of the production isn't just the four-person cast's rendering of his music, it's the way the four also convey a sense of Sinatra and his world. It doesn't hurt that the two men in the cast, Travis Poelle (who played Buddy Holly in the 2003 PacRep hit) and Jim Andy, could be doubles for the slender young matinee idol and the heftier, aging, but still sexy, elder-statesman of song.

Their female counterparts, Stephanie Keller and Lydia Lyons, add the right amounts of sizzle, sultriness and sentimentality to the mix; the setting, a cocktail lounge, is extremely classy, and the five-part ensemble is pure big-band sound. It all adds up to "Frank's World," and it's hard not to finger-snap, toe-tap and hum your way right into it.

The four singers, whose voices are made for Sinatra's music, take their turns performing the numbers that are divided up into theme sets, a concept introduced for the records he made. Each in turn smoothly maneuvers around the stage, crooning into mikes with long cords that somehow never get tangled, while the other three assume whatever mood is appropriate to the song. Their moves around the elegant set, the personas they project, and their interactions in the frequent duets and company ensembles are deceptively simple. In fact, they take the audience through a myriad of emotions and, for many, probably a myriad of memories.

In addition to creating Sinatra's nightclub world, the cast intersperses tidbits about the man himself between the numbers — the fact that, for instance, he swam a lot to strengthen his lung capacity; or that he sometimes ate up to six meals a day to be able to sustain high notes. They give us a sense of the hard work behind the seemingly effortless theater Sinatra produced and the drive that made him the phenomenal success he was.

The four are a smooth working team who have not only mastered the material but conquered the potential problem of Keller's pre-opening night mishap — director Stephen Moorer made an announcement Saturday night assuring the audience that she was fine — which has confined her to a bar stool.

Nation's premier blues festival at fairgrounds this weekend

CONSIDERED TO BE one of the premier blues festivals in the United States today, the Monterey Bay Blues Festival turns 20 this weekend with three days of non-stop music on three separate stages located throughout the historic Monterey County Fairgrounds. Since its modest inaugural gathering in 1986 (with less than 2,000 in attendance) the MBBF has evolved into a major festival and continues to break attendance records annually.

Beginning with Friday night's 70's Soul Jam featuring Peaches & Herb, Heatwave, the Chi-Lites, and the Stylistics in the Main Arena, the 20th annual festival is a party waiting to happen.

In addition to Friday's concert in the Jimmy Lyons Arena, the three-day event features a wide variety of blues, soul and rhythm and blues artists performing throughout the weekend. This year's main-stage performers include guitarist Tommy Castro, keyboardist and "Fifth Beatle" Billy Preston, vocalist Shemekia Copeland and blues legend Buddy Guy on Saturday, plus Endurance, Ruth Brown, Kenny Neal and Trudy Lynn on Sunday. A plethora of other artists can be seen and heard on the secondary stages including Michael Hill's Blues Mob (Saturday afternoon on the Presidents Stage); The Blue Tones (featuring former Carmel and Stevenson high school students) and Debbie Davis (Saturday afternoon on the Garden Stage); plus boogie woogie pianist Deanna Bogart (Sunday evening on the Garden Stage). To view the complete schedule and to purchase tickets, check out the festival's website at www.montereyblues.com or call (831) 394-2652.

Sly McFly's on Cannery Row will keep the blues party going throughout the weekend with festival performers Big Mo and the Full Moon Band and Las Vegas blues singer Moody Scott performing on Friday and Saturday nights respectively. The winner of this year's MBBF Battle of the Bands, Big Mo is also scheduled to perform at the Main Arena and on the Presidents Stage at this year's festival.

The group's guitarist Volker Strifler also moonlights as guitarist for the Ford Blues Band and often appears with Robben Ford. On Sunday evening, Sly's presents its 7th Annual After Blues Festival Jam Session, hosted this year by guitarist Johnny "Cozmik" Smith. The biggest blues jam session of the year, Sunday evening at Sly's regularly features many of the headliners from the Monterey Bay Blues Festival and past shows have been highlighted by appearances by Bo Diddley, Lucky Peterson, Little Jimmy King, Sista Monica, Beverly Watson, Barbara Morrison and many more. For info call (831) 649-8050.

Jazz singer and guitarist Julie Kelly's voice has been compared to West Coast "cool school" singers like June Christy and, in fact, her latest album is entitled Kelly Sings Christy. Born and raised in Oakland, Kelly studied jazz at Oakland City College with pianist George Duke and, after spending a year in Brazil, enrolled at Julliard where she spent time soaking up the jazz scene in New York City. She moved to Los Angeles in 1980 and shortly after began her recording career with Pausa Records. During her years in Los Angeles she has worked with Benny Green, Nat Adderly, Gary Foster and Alan Broadbent. She will be accompanied at her Carmel performance by pianist Tom Garvin, bassist Scott Steed and drummer Vince Lateano. Music starts at 7:30 pm. Call (831) 624-6431 to make reservations.

At the newly christened Monterey Live, located in downtown Monterey on Alvarado Street, The Sun Kings, a tribute band to the Beatles covering the Fab Four's entire career, will make their debut Monterey appearance on Friday night. On Saturday, June 25, country folk artist Larry Hosford is scheduled to perform. Sunday June 26 folksinger Mary McCaslin offers a quiet alternative to all

Her voice and interactions with the others make one almost forget her relatively stationary status.

Clearly the production wouldn't be worth beans without strong instrumental backup. Musical director Stephen Tosh at the piano; Greg Bullock (plus fedora) on drums; Don Eshoff, trumpet; Dan Lishin, sax; and Sean Stillinger, bass, create the smooth sound necessary to Sinatra's world. And Tandy Messenger's costumes match the elegance of the simple, predominantly black set and subdued lighting.

If you loved the Buddy Holly story, come see how Poelle and his friends handle Sinatra. You'll be dazzled.

AH, CONTINGENCIES

A seller says he wants $600,000 for his home and, by golly, "Don't bring me any offers with contingencies in them."

Two important points need discussion. First, if there is a written offer, we must hear it. Your real estate professional doesn't have any legal right to screen offers and make sure you only hear the ones he or she knows you will like. These are matters of law.

Second, contingencies are simply conditions that must be met for a transaction to make its way to a successful closing. Usually, contingencies protect one or both of the parties to a transaction. They are neither to be feared nor to be rejected without a fair hearing. For example, a seller may accept an offer contingent on the buyer being able to receive loan qualification within a certain number of days and loan approval within a longer number of days. This protects the seller from being hung out to dry while the buyer drags out the process of finding the necessary financing.

On the other hand, a buyer may purchase with the contingency that a professional property inspector examine the home and make sure it's sound and without obvious need of repairs. This, frankly, protects both parties, since property defects should be cured as soon as possible and not months or years later in court actions. Questions? Sandy Claws

By Margot Petit Nichols

JAKE SEGURA, 9, is a Tibetan Lhasa apso whose favorite toy is a stuffed lion that sings, "Wild Thing." It's sort of Jake's theme song because every time a dog strolled by on the Scenic Road walking path above Carmel Beach, Jake went into a wild fit of barking that startled me so much I almost fell off the log bench we were sharing.

You'd never know it to look at Jake's sweet countenance, but he's been diagnosed as being "social – but not so much." He's got it in for children, the elderly, males, and of course, all dogs. Fortunately, we don't fit into any of those categories, and so our interview went very well, although punctuated with barking frenzies whenever children, the elderly, males or dogs passed by.

His mom and dad, Nadine and Eli, answered an adoption ad in the San Jose Mercury four years ago in which Jake was described as having "special needs." Their 16-year-old son, Justin, is also a special needs teenager, and so they felt drawn to Jake and felt they could provide a nurturing home for him.

Mom said Jake "has never been arrested to date," and everything seems to be going well at home: Jake goes shopping with Mom and Dad, sleeps in their bed, follows Mom around most of the day, and plays nicely in their fenced back yard.

This week Mom, Dad and Jake, who reside in San Jose, have been staying in Carmel at the weekend home of good friends Don and Sue Rose. All three enjoy their visits here, especially Jake, who finds a never-ending supply of dogs at whom to bark.

Nguyen. "We're also covering critical incidents, where it might be minor at first and then becomes lethal."

Calhoun and Nguyen hope to run the scenarios at least twice a year, in addition to the department's regular firearms exercises.

"We have to update our training continually," Calhoun said.

The drills are meant to ensure officers will handle firearms safely, clear a room in a safe and proper manner, "use the proper tactics to rapidly neutralize one or more armed suspects who are placing innocents' lives at risk," and work as a team to "accomplish a tactical mission" and eliminate any life-threatening situations, according to the lesson plan.

The eight-hour sessions June 6 and 23 began with a lecture and explanation of the blue Simunition handguns, which fire 9 mm bullets tipped with water-soluble paint.

"We all got hit," Calhoun said. "They sting a little, too. The bad guys learned what good shots we are."

Boating group hosts free GPS class

UNRAVEL THE mysteries of global positioning satellite systems and put them to use at a free GPS class hosted by the Monterey Bay Sail and Power Squadron June 25. The five-hour course, which begins at 10 a.m., packs a lot of information into that limited amount of time, according to Robert Aurner, who represents the Monterey Bay unit of the U.S. Power Squadrons, the country's largest boating organization of its kind. The class is open to all, and students who use hand-held GPS units are encouraged to bring theirs along. On-board units will also be discussed.

While the course is free, the instruction manual costs $45. The class will be held in the dining room of the Elkhorn Yacht Club in Moss Landing, located in the north harbor off Highway 1 north of the Duke Energy plant and the bridge crossing Elkhorn Slough. Look for the Elkhorn Yacht Club sign. Teen reports friend's mother assaulted her

A 50-YEAR-OLD Carmel woman was arrested at a Carmel Beach party Sunday night on suspicion of public intoxication and battery of a 13-year-old girl.

"Basically, she got a bottle of water and poured it on top of the victim's head and grabbed her hair," said Carmel Police Sgt. Mel Mukai.

Police officers arrived at the beach around 9:30 p.m. to help look for the girl, who had run away following the fight. The party included 11 people, one of whom phoned police to report the girl was missing.

They found the teenager, who told them her friend's mother had physically assaulted her.

"I don't know exactly what triggered it," Mukai said. Officers at the scene also reported she had been drinking.

Police arrested the suspect, brought her to the station for booking on charges of battery and public intoxication, and released her with a citation to appear in Monterey County Superior Court, Mukai said.

Save your town by spending your money there

NOT TOO long ago, there was a very nice bookstore in downtown Carmel. It was a bookstore with lots of novels, biographies, political and historical works, atlases and dictionaries — the sort of place where it was a pleasure to spend one's lunchtime browsing, and where it was easy to spend $50 or $100 on something you didn't even know you wanted until you walked in. And there was a similar shop on Pacific Grove's main thoroughfare.

Both establishments are gone now — victims, perhaps, of the large Borders store that opened in Sand City in 1999. More likely, they disappeared because of the ascendancy of Internet sellers such as amazon.com. Even some of Carmel's most ardent activists can occasionally be seen walking out of the post office with a large box of books they ordered on the world wide web.

And if it's true that the people get the government they deserve, it's even more true that a town's citizens pick the sort of stores that will prevail on their beloved Main Street. Instead of voting with a ballot, they vote with their wallets — an inexorable force where businesses are concerned. Even in hyper-regulated California, nobody has figured out how to make a drug store, shoe repair shop or stationery store stay open if its cash registers aren't busy.

So instead of wringing one's hands over the loss of unique, resident-serving businesses on Ocean Avenue, and instead of protesting at city council meetings at the lack of legislative solutions to the degradation of Carmel's charming shopping district, the people of this city have a ready solution to all their worries about the town's future: Start spending more money in the stores they like.

Doing so will not only help maintain the vitality and friendliness of downtown, it will also increase sales tax revenues at city hall, making even more of the town's woes disappear.

In a column last week, the mayor reminded the people of Carmel of their civic obligations in this regard. She also asked them to help the town's new economic development coordinator recruit unique small shops downtown, and to support the city's innkeepers as they look for ways to attract more overnight guests.

These suggestions seem painfully obvious. But it can be very difficult to alter one's personal habits. If you've let yourself get into the Internet shopping habit, now is the time to reflect on the civic cost of trying to save a buck or two.

And the next time a venerable downtown merchant shuts its doors and you find yourself outraged at such a deplorable event, try to remember the last time you bought something there.

'Employees are entitled to health benefits'

Dear Editor,

Based on the information provided by the Police Association and the General Employees Union of Carmel in last week's Pine Cone, I am very upset that our city allows differing levels of health benefits. In the past, Carmel health care has been given to all employees equally. All city employees are entitled to equal health benefits. But the part-time councilmembers right to full health benefits is questionable. They have their own professions or retirement incomes and should be able to provide for their own health plans.

Also, as a member of the recent campaign for increasing the TOT, I am upset to hear that the city spent $27,000 of city money to fight against the TOT increase.

I have experience in weapon system procurement while in the Air Force. I have observed procurements by the city that are not up to standard practices. One example is the selection of a non-profit group to manage Sunset Center, without advertising for competitive bids. Now we are told that the Sunset Center remodel never had a final inspection. How can this happen? We citizens of Carmel depend on city officials to properly take care of our city money.

I urge all good citizens of Carmel to attend this next council meeting and express their concerns and support for the well-being and equal treatment for all of our city employees. I also urge the city council to immediately remedy the problems identified in this advertisement by the police and employees of Carmel. It is sad that our city employees had to resort to a paid ad to get their message across to the residents of Carmel.

He finally got the chance this week.

Tiffany & Co.'s 56th shop, located in Carmel Plaza at the corner of Ocean and Mission, combines small-town charm with the security of a bank vault. Divided-light windows are framed in metal, and an elaborate steel gate patterned after the company's flagship Fifth Avenue store separates the corner entrance doors from the street. Inside, custom-built steel cases display the jewelry, diamonds and other Tiffany creations. At 3,000 square feet, the store is smaller than most, and Quinn described its setup as "immaculate."

"When we open up a store, we have a whole team of people who come from different parts of the country to get the store prepared," he said. "There's an enormous amount of training that goes on, so when a customer comes in, we're ready to go. We have an extraordinarily well trained staff. Nothing is left to chance."

Also brought in for the grand opening were several especially valuable pieces which probably won't be part of the Carmel store's regular inventory. One ring, featuring an extremely rare 2-carat, pear-cut blue diamond, is priced at $750,000.

Quinn, a former banker who "by a stroke of good luck" came to work for Tiffany & Co. in New York almost two decades ago as its V.P. of sales, has watched the 168-year-old company grow its American presence from eight stores to more than 50, with several more abroad. It also enjoys a burgeoning online business. Tiffany had 1,500 employees when he joined the company. He was named president two years ago and is now in charge of more than 7,000 people — some of whom have worked for Tiffany twice as long as he has.

Quinn recently returned from opening a store in Shanghai, China, and said a third shop opened not long ago in Australia. He spends about a third of each year traveling, frequently to Japan, where about a quarter of the company's sales takes place.

Following company tradition, the local store's private grand-opening celebration Thursday night honored four local nonprofits — the Big Sur Land Trust, Sunset Center, the Monterey Peninsula Foundation and the Make-A-Wish Foundation.

"It's a way for us to immediately become part of the community and connect with community leaders and civic organizations," said Quinn. "We've asked the leaders of four of the civic groups in the Monterey area to help us introduce Tiffany to the Monterey area."

The nonprofits picked most of the guests invited to the block party June 23.

Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud, invited to speak at the event, told The Pine Cone she was grateful for the store's pledge to continue supporting those groups. "And we're obviously interested in a major anchor for Carmel Plaza," she said. "We hope they have every success."

After months of costly construction — much of it occurring behind temporary plywood walls — the storefront of the new Tiffany & Co. at Carmel Plaza was unveiled this week. The corner was formerly the home of Georgiou and The Sharper Image.

'Many notes, calls and e-mails'

Dear Editor,

I want to publicly compliment and thank your fine journalist, Mary Brownfield, for her article about my mother, Marjorie Timmins, who died at home in Carmel earlier this month. Mary's article has elicited many notes, telephone calls, and e-mails from friends who knew my mother, but also from those whose lives she touched only briefly. From the comments of all these kind, loving and generous people, I now have a more full understanding of the woman who was my mother. For that I am deeply grateful.

"Carmel Legends"

There is a lady with the improbable name of Gladys Georgiana Green who lives on Carmel Point. She's had a home here since 1937, and she very seldom leaves it. She's about 5 feet tall, has mischievous blue eyes and a voice you will never forget. When her long-time friend and director, Frank Capra, called her some months ago and asked her to be his special guest at a luncheon given in his honor, she turned him down without hesitation; not that she doesn't adore Mr. Capra, but she hates publicity. In her long career, she has played opposite Gary Cooper, Jimmy Stewart, Cary Grant, Clark Gable, the Barrymores, Alan Ladd and other headliners. You'll remember her in Shane, You Can't Take it With You, Mr. Smith Goes to Washington and dozens of other films. And you'll remember her as Peter Pan on Broadway, as a professor of drama at Vassar and North Carolina State, and as a television actress. She was born in Plattsburg, N.Y. in (the record is blurred here), started a modelling career in New York, and accepted a contract in Hollywood. Her first hit was The Saturday Night Kid with Clara Bow. Fox Films and Paramount missed her appeal, and it took MGM to make her a major star. It's a pleasure to salute JEAN ARTHUR, one of Carmel's proudest legends.

City argues with itself over Scout House's historical significance

By MARY BROWNFIELD

EXPERTS DISAGREE on whether the city-owned Scout House at Mission and Eighth is historic. And the city can't even agree with itself: This week, city administrator Rich Guillen asked the historic resources board to reconsider its May 16 vote to list the M.J. Murphy building on the town's official inventory of historic resources.

The listing could affect the city's plans for the house — closed more than two years ago because it is not handicapped accessible — which could include moving it, fixing it or selling it.

Guillen did not contest the building's historical value, but he said more research needs to be done to defend its official protection.

"The Scout House has a lot of interest in our community," he said. "When it comes before the council, these questions will be asked, and I think it would be embarrassing for staff if we don't have all the background work done."

The issue arose last month, when the city asked the board to determine whether the 74-year-old building, which has undergone several changes and additions, is historic.

Historian Kent Seavey filed a California Department of Parks and Recreation form in 2002 stating it was, because it was built in 1931 for the city's original Boy Scout troop, making the building "an important component of the civic and social fabric of the community."

But architectural historian Mark Bowen, who helped prepare the EIR for the potential Flanders Mansion sale, concluded the Scout House had undergone too many changes to be considered historic.

With one expert on each side, the city hired historian Sheila McElroy to weigh in.

"The integrity of the Scout House building is questionable, because many character-defining features have been altered," she wrote. She wondered if the changed windows, enclosed entry door and large addition on the east side, as well as an interior remodel, would make the Scout House unrecognizable to its original occupants.

She also said Seavey did not describe the importance of the Carmel Scouts themselves, which would make the building's tie to that group more significant.

She concluded, "The combination of having an altered building and no discussion or substantiated documentation about the troop's importance doesn't make the case for the building being individually historic."

But she suggested the house could be considered historic if Seavey's report was strengthened and background documentation found to support it.

At its May 16 hearing, the board voted to list the Scout House on the inventory and asked the planning staff to make the changes to Seavey's report.

Action too quick

Guillen characterized that vote as premature.

"This was done even though there was general agreement by the board that the DPR form was inadequate, inconclusive and in need of refinement," he wrote in a memo. "Each resource placed on the inventory should have an adequate, compelling DPR report to document the resource and explain its historic significance."

He reiterated McElroy's advice that the cultural and social significance of the build-

How to make sure your home sells at the right price

WHEN THINKING about selling your home, establishing a reasonable and, ultimately, profitable listing price is perhaps the biggest challenge that every homeowner faces. The fair market value is simply the price a buyer is willing to pay for your home, and you are willing to accept. But go too high with the asking price and risk scaring away potential buyers who won't even bother making an offer. Set the price too low and you could end up leaving tens of thousands of dollars on the table.

So what's a homeowner to do? Here are some suggestions that can help sellers get the very best possible price for their home:

■ Choose the Right Agent — I know this sounds obvious and self-serving, but you'd be surprised at how many people don't do their homework when choosing the person who will be in charge of cashing in their most valuable asset. A recent study by the National Association of Realtors found that 44 percent of home sellers use a friend or relative's referral when selecting a real estate agent. That's fine as far as it goes, but sellers would be smart to interview a variety of prospective agents and invite them to show their listing presentations.

■ Evaluate Marketing Plans — Pay attention to how agents plan to market your home, and find out how many homes they (and their companies) listed in your local market in the past year and how many of them were sold. Also, make certain they plan to list your home on the multiple listing service (MLS), and inquire about the breadth of the agent's network of contacts. Remember, the more prospective buyers an agent can attract, the better the chance for a successful sale. Finally, because selling a home will require a lot of communication, the seller should ensure he or she connects with the agent's personality.

■ Comparative Market Analysis — Home sellers should work with a real estate agent to develop a written comparative market analysis (CMA). This will provide a list of recent sale prices of similar homes in the area with factual information about the comparable homes — i.e., the number of bedrooms, baths, square footage, lot size, pools, etc. — and the asking prices of homes currently for sale in the neighborhood, as well as other important information. Based on the CMA, an agent will provide his or her professional estimation of a legitimate selling price.

■ Take the Emotion Out of It — While a homeowner likely has spent years in the home and takes pride in it, the agent will not set the price based on a seller's emotion. Instead, the location, condition and size of the home will significantly impact the list price. A house in a secluded, exclusive area may be appealing to some buyers, while others will want to be closer to schools, shopping and health care facilities. What is the physical condition of the home? Is it a fixer-upper? Does it make a good first impression (the ever important "curb appeal")? Will it attract a growing family, or is it better suited to empty nesters? A good real estate agent will know the type of buyers who will be interested in the home.

■ Determine Current Market Conditions — Home inventory, mortgage interest rates and the economy play a role in determining whether the buyer or seller has a negotiating advantage. Currently, most experts agree that this is a seller's market because inventory is relatively low and demand from buyers is still strong.

Also, interest rates remain at historically low levels even as the economy shows signs of improving, allowing more buyers to be in a position to shoulder the debt of homeownership. But conditions change as the economy, interest rates and other factors change. An experienced agent will know the inventory levels in the community and how best to react to the current market conditions.

■ Give It the Once Over — After working with a real estate agent to get a CMA and considering all the other factors, the list price will be set. But there is one more step in trying to ensure that the house sells for that price, or more.

ing and its historic integrity be further evaluated.

To help the board decide the city's appeal, one more consultant, former historic preservation committee member Kathryn Gualtieri, was hired. The Scout House qualifies for listing, she said, and the cosmetic changes did not compromise its integrity.

"It is a cultural resource that provided the setting for important social and recreational activities to occur, and deserves to be preserved so that this story can be imparted to the community today," she concluded, while also recommending that the DPR be strengthened.

Planner Sean Conroy recommended the board withdraw its decision to and reconsider the building's listing when the questions raised are adequately answered.

Board chair Julie Wendt defended the vote and asked Guillen if he thought members made a procedural mistake. "I'm not saying you made any error and would respect any decision the board makes," he responded. "I'm just asking you to reconsider, to get more facts and make it stronger."

Member Paul Coss said the planning department's staff members "have been in an awkward position due to the fact that their employer, the City of Carmel, is the applicant in the case of the Scout House."

He described the additional required information as "housekeeping details that will only further support the recognized historical value of the Scout House in this community" and suggested the DPR form could be updated by a hired consultant while the board's decision stands.

Because members Kathy Henney and Erling Lagerholm were absent, Guillen asked the board to allow the hearing to continue at its next meeting. The vote was 3-0 in favor of the delay.

Do as much as possible to improve the home's appearance: touch up the paint, fix leaks, seal any cracks, clean the home, eliminate clutter and consider replacing worn carpets. Many sellers also turn to decorators to professionally "stage" their home for sale. Remember: Your house has only one chance to make a good first impression.

■ Do the Math — Do not forget to figure in closing costs, legal fees and other selling expenses when determining the selling price. A real estate professional should be able to provide cost estimates upfront, and negotiate with a potential buyer to ensure the best possible sale price.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A 46-year-old male suspect was contacted at the rocks at Scenic and Ocean View. He was observed to be crouching in the rocks and appeared to be reaching between the rocks. It was also noted he was carrying a black duffel bag. Officer approached and asked what was in the bag, and it he was found to have 25 abalone in his possession (a felony). Fish and game was dispatched and assisted with the investigation. Suspect was arrested and lodged at county jail. The subject was found to have a prior arrest for the same offense.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female victim reported her vehicle was hit while parked in a stall on Mission Street. No suspect information or note left as to who was responsible for the damage. She came to Carmel P.D. to fill out a counter report form for insurance purposes.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle towed from San Carlos Street for being parked in a tow-away zone.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject reported finding a camera at the beach at Scenic. The person would like to claim the camera if no owner is located. The person signed the form and was given a copy. Camera was entered into CLETS as found property for safekeeping.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Officers came upon a vehicle on Dolores Street in the process of being repossessed. The vehicle was about to get towed away when the owner arrived. The owner obtained his personal belongings from the vehicle before it was hauled away.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Elderly female Junipero resident reported a fire on the outside of her residence at 2234 hours.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: On-duty fire crews received a walk-in medical at the station. Crews assessed and provided oxygen for a female complaining of severe headache. The patient was released to the care of a friend who was to transport her home.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Two engines, ambulance and battalion chief responded to reported structure fire at Junipero and Fifth. A trash can fire on the second level deck of an apartment was partially extinguished by the occupant and then fully extinguished prior to fire's arrival by Carmel police units on scene. Crews performed overhaul and investigated for cause and origin. Occupant stated she had placed a plastic, 6-gallon waste container on the deck adjacent to the exterior wall earlier in the evening. The occupant further stated she had a few glasses of wine and fell asleep on the couch for approximately one hour. She awoke to the smell of smoke and discovered the fire outside on the deck. She attempted to extinguish the fire herself with more than a dozen plastic 20-ounce water bottles for 45 minutes prior to calling 911 for assistance, as she thought fire department response was going to cost her a lot of money. Police stated she was nearly successful in extinguishing the fire, which they easily extinguished with a portable dry-chem extinguisher. Occupant admitted to being a smoker and appeared to be somewhat intoxicated. She also stated she put out all her smoking materials in the sink with water. What little debris was left was searched, and no ignition source could be determined, as the plastic can and its contents were totally consumed by the fire, with the exception of two broken wine bottles. Damage was limited to the finished exterior siding, window, associated trim/molding and decking material at an estimated loss of $1,500 to $2,000.
