Aging pines crashing down without any help

By MARY BROWNFIELD and PAUL MILLER

ON DAYS with hardly any wind, two aging, massive pine trees fell on Peninsula neighborhoods this week, destroying two cars, barely missing several homes, and pulling down a string of power poles, causing a widespread power outage.

Carmel Valley resident Bari Tolliver was moments away from getting into her Jeep to run errands Monday afternoon when she heard a "horrendous noise" so unfamiliar that didn't register in her brain. Then she looked out the front window of her Calle de Los Helechos home near Rosie's Cracker Barrel.

"I saw the tree starting to go," Tolliver said of the 75-foot-tall Monterey pine that crashed down through a fence and across the driveway seconds later,

A towering Monterey pine (top) crushed two cars and a fence when it fell in Carmel Valley Monday afternoon, but it spared nearby houses and people. PG&E workers tried to figure out how to make repairs (left) after a 100-foot pine fell in Pacific Grove early Wednesday morning, decapitating several power poles when their wires were suddenly dragged down.

Cal Am: Desal plant will need 30 permits

■ Vast environmental study submitted to PUC

By PAUL MILLER

THE FUTURE of the Monterey Peninsula's water supply can probably be found somewhere in three thick binders, containing nearly 2,000 pages, released by Cal Am Water Co. Thursday.

The vast, $4 million document, called a Proponent's Environmental Assessment, contains a minute analysis of numerous options for providing the Peninsula with water from a desal plant in Moss Landing, including the option preferred by Cal Am: A plant to produce 11,730 acre-feet per year.

That would just be enough to make good on a 1995 state order to eliminate illegal pumping from the Carmel River, while providing another 1,000 acre-feet to slow seawater intrusion in the Seaside Aquifer, according to Steve Leonard, Cal Am's local general manager.

"We have our mandate from the state, and we have to fulfill it," said Leonard. "The PEA shows how much progress we've made and how serious we are."

But while the release of the PEA, which will be studied by the California Public Utilities Commission over the next year and then turned into a final Environmental Impact Report on the desal project, repre-

Business learns not to try to change its name

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CARMEL PLAZA can't be renamed The Courtyard at Carmel, the planning commission voted 4-1 Wednesday, because Carmel has lots of courtyards and people already know the shopping center at Ocean and Junipero as the Plaza.

"They can change it to whatever name they want, except the one we don't like," commissioner Alan Hewer said.

"I agree people are always going to call it the Carmel Plaza, but if I had a restaurant and wanted to change the name even though the old-timers would call it by the old name, I would want to retain the right to call it something else," said commissioner Ken Talmage, the sole dissenter. "I think they should have the right to use any name that wasn't trademarked."

Mall owner Macerich Co. proposed the name change while seeking approval for new signs inside and outside the Plaza, which occupies a city block and is undergoing a remodel after more than 30 years. Last month, Tiffany & Co. became one of the center's anchor tenants.

Gallery selling jewelry ordered to shut its doors

LESS THAN a month after it opened, Romanoos Gallery was ordered to shut this week, when the Carmel Planning Commission decided the owner violated his business license by carrying too much jewelry.

Horde of city employees will motorcycle to work Wednesday

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AFTER CARMEL building maintenance specialist John Hanson returned from his U.S. Army National Guard tour in Iraq this spring, he decided to reenlist and received a $15,000 bonus. He took that cash and bought a Harley-Davidson Fat Boy, which he will ride to work from his Salinas home July 20, the 14th annual worldwide Ride to Work Day.

there's something I can't carry," he said, adding that he bought his first motorcycle as a 19-year-old G.I. — against his parents' wishes. The international Ride to Work effort, organized by a Minnesota group, encourages motorcyclists to show the public there are lots of them — from all occupations and all walks of life — and two-wheeled commuting can reduce traffic and parking congestion while saving gas.

Morgan Hill half the time on a Yamaha. "It's a lot easier on gas," Savage said of his cruiser, which he bought after blowing out his knee while dirt-bike riding. "You can't do any jumps on this," he said of the Yamaha. Other CFD staff who motorcycle to work are shift commander Ian Watts, firefighter/paramedic Graham Evans and part-time firefighter Kenny Hutchinson.

The group estimates the annual event triples the number of bikes on the road. A typical work day in America sees more than 80 million cars and light trucks commuting, but only 200,000 motorcycles. Many locals, including five of the six full-time workers at Carmel Fire Department, already make it a habit. Carmel Fire Shift Commander Bruce Meyer could walk the six-tenths of a mile to the station, but the 42-year motorcyclist would rather ride his Suzuki. Fire engineer August Beacham's commute is just a few blocks, but he manages to ride his sportbike almost daily. He started riding in San Francisco eight years ago. "I did it for the ease of the commute," he said. "And the hills are fun." Fire engineer Bill Scott rides to work from his Carmel Valley home half the time and has been a motorcyclist "for 30 years, off and on." He credited Meyer with getting him back into it a few years ago. They ended up with the same model of Suzuki sportbike, which quickly led to their being known around the station as the Flying Suzuki Brothers. Fire engineer/paramedic Jon Savage cruises to work from

'E' ticket ride
Marina resident Ryan Llorin rides his sportbike to Carmel Public Works a couple times a week. The dirt-bike rider and former mini-motorcycle racer has ridden for a decade. Police Cpl. Steve Rana, a rider for 26 years, commutes from Marina rain or shine on the department's BMW, which is adorned with a stuffed piglet strapped to the back and a license plate rim reading, "This is an 'E' ticket ride." He got rid of his personal bikes after the department first added a motorcycle to its fleet in 1987. Police officer Jason Rogers works nights for Carmel P.D. and rides the Kawasaki he bought a year ago a couple of times a week. Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance emergency medical technician Evan Johnson owns Scott's former Suzuki, which the latter sold to buy the same model but with a larger engine. Johnson also works as a Carmel Valley firefighter and rides every day. Growing up in South Dakota, home of the famed Sturgis rally, got him into two wheels. Other workers who frequently commute on motorcycles include CRFA EMT Logan Talbott, police services officer Jeff Olinger and city building official Tim Meroney.

The Minnesota group sponsoring Wednesday's international event, Ride to Work Inc., argues that "adding more of them to the daily transportation mix makes urban parking easier, reduces road congestion and improves traffic flow. Experience consistently shows that urban motorcyclists reach their destinations faster and are more alert upon arrival than those using automobiles." Since 1992, Ride to Work Day has been held on the third Wednesday in July, with motorcyclists and scooter riders commuting in the United States, Germany, the Philippines, England, Israel, Turkey, Ecuador, and elsewhere. In August, city will get new clerk, finance manager FILLING ONE vacant position and one newly created job, city administrator Rich Guillen announced this week that Heidi Burch will become city clerk Aug. 1 and Joyce Giuffre will take the new finance manager position Aug. 15. Former city clerk Karen Crouch moved to Washington this spring, and the new money job was approved by the city council last month.

Of a half-dozen finalists for city clerk, Burch was number one even though she has never held a similar job, according to Guillen, who sat on a hiring panel with interim city clerk Carol Butler and Susan Kitchens, city clerk for Los Altos.

"She had really done her homework," Guillen said. "You almost would have guessed she was a city clerk."

Born and raised in Northridge, Burch obtained three degrees from the town's state university, including a masters in public administration in June. A professor told her about the job opening.

She presented an air of confidence and intelligence the panel found impressive when interviewing candidates for the at-will position, which pays $5,123 to $6,227 per month plus benefits, according to Guillen. And she had the right attitude about the city.

"She told me, 'It's Carmel, and I would love to be here for a while and learn a lot,'" Guillen recounted. "I think she could do a lot of things, and that's the type of person Carmel needs." And she told The Pine Cone, "I love the sense of community that Carmel offers. Coming from L.A. — we don't have that there."

She also has no doubts her parents, who moved to a town of 2,000 people in Minnesota after living 40 years in L.A., will be out for frequent visits — particularly in the winter.

Burch obtained her BA in English in 1990 and a masters in communications in 1992 before working eight years as vice president of a Los Angeles broadcast software company called Faxts, Inc. She also worked for a travel wholesale company and for Cineplex Odeon Corp. in Universal City.

Her nonprofit work included consulting for the Century City Chamber of Commerce and providing human resources management for the Geffen Playhouse in Westwood. She also professed a fondness for cooking, baking and the arts.

'Belligerent' tree pruner irks neighbor

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

dog on Oliver. Finder attempted to contact dog owner listed on the dog tag, however no contact was made. Information left with Carmel P.D., in the event the dog owner contacted CPD. At 2030 hours, the dog owner contacted the department and was given information on how to reach the person to retrieve her dog. Owner and dog reunited.

SUNDAY, JULY 3

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A male suspect, age 29, was arrested for battery.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle towed from Second and Santa Fe for excessive parking violations.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic collision on public property on San Carlos Street. Property damage only.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject wished for a civil standby regarding guests who refused to sign a "hold harmless" agreement against the hotel, since it appeared they needed special accommodations due to physical needs. The general manager was summoned too, on the request of the desk clerk. The GM asked the guests to sign the agreement, but this was rejected. The GM offered to find accommodations at another hotel with special accommodations, but this offer was rejected. The guests elected to leave. A refund was procured for the guests and the keys were returned to the front desk. It appeared that the guests may have thought this particular hotel had handicapped provisions, however it was a sister hotel at Rio Road and Highway 1 that has special room accommodations.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject found stray

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subjects were trying to find the hospital and became lost. They brought their friend to the police department and requested aid. Subject was conscious and breathing. He was feeling ill and passed out. He was transported via ambulance to CHOMP. Subjects were originally at the skate park in Marina. They left the park en route to CHOMP and got lost. Subject's family contacted.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Victim received two threatening phone calls, one at work, and the other on her cell. She has no idea who the suspect might be.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a medical emergency at Carmel Police Department, Junipero and Fourth. Crews assisted ambulance with vitals, EKG, IV, patient report information and loading for a young adult male who had difficulty verbally responding and was confused. Patient transported to CHOMP by ambulance.

Carmel Valley: During a traffic stop at Del Fino Place and Pilot Road for erratic driving, a 20-year-old male and an 18-year-old female were found to have consumed alcoholic beverages while under the age of 21. Case continues.

DLI student's cliffside death was a suicide, coroner says

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A 20-YEAR-OLD Defense Language Institute student intentionally drove off a cliff on Highway 1 near Rocky Creek last Friday afternoon, according to Monterey County Coroner's Commander Greg Clark.

"There were some people who witnessed the car go over," Clark said. "They turned around and went back and confirmed that's what happened, because when you see something like that, you don't always believe it."

Monterey County Sheriff's Search and Rescue Team members responded to the area and retrieved the body of Eric Rowland from the wreckage about 200 feet down the hillside, according to the report filed by the sheriff's department. Big Sur Towing later removed the car.

Clark said the California Highway Patrol did not file a report on the July 8 incident, because officers ruled it was not an accident.

"There was enough information from the investigation," to deem it a suicide, he said. "There were things left on the side of the road the victim wanted us to find."

Rowland left letters, a package and other personal items intended for specific family members and friends, according to Clark. Rowland's family lives in Mississippi.

Although toxicology results have yet to be returned, Clark said the detective on the case has determined preliminary cause of death as "multiple blunt force injuries due to a fall from a cliff in a motor vehicle."

Big Sur poetry slam will draw a raucous, urban crowd

BY CHRIS COUNTS

THE HENRY Miller Library in Big Sur — part museum, part bookstore and part performing arts venue — represents many things to many people. But “loud” and “intense” are two words rarely associated with the nonprofit organization dedicated to the memory of Big Sur’s most famous writer and artist.

Yet “loud and intense” will accurately describe the mood when the library hosts the West Coast Poetry Slam Championships July 16-17.

Poetry would seem an unlikely candidate to be an aggressive, competitive sport. But the rise of the poetry slam is evidence that not only do young people consider poetry to be hip, but, like a football game, they see it as a duel between opponents with teams of winners and losers.

The sport of boxing has also influenced poetry slams. The participants of a slam refer to each round of competition as a “bout.” The promoters of this weekend’s Big Sur event have even gone so far as to invoke boxing’s illustrious past in a clever marketing ploy, calling the event “The Thrilla at the Milla,” after the legendary 1975 fight in the Philippines that featured Mohammed Ali and Joe Frazier.

Given the edgy, urban nature of the poetry slam, the pugilistic references make sense. But why did the event’s promoters pick the library — a truly peaceful, serene and out-of-the-way place — to host the West Coast’s biggest poetry slam event?

“Big Sur is neutral territory,” explained event founder Garland Thompson of Monterey. “We have poetry slam teams coming from all up and down the coast. At the library, there is no hometown advantage.”

Plus, the library is simply a great venue, Thompson said. “It’s a beautiful space, period,” he said. “It can accommodate 400-450 people. It’s an ideal locale.”

Thompson also likes the Henry Miller connection because the author “really espoused creative expression,” he said.

If he were alive, what would Miller have thought about a poetry slam? “Henry would have loved all the energy and creativity,” said Magnus Toren, library director.

Toren admitted the library is an unusual destination for a poetry slam. “It’s pretty much of an urban art form,” he said. “Poets like these are used to downtown bars and cafes.”

The library event, though, is now an important stop on the poetry slam circuit. “It’s sort of a dress rehearsal for the National Championship in August,” he said.

Teams from Albuquerque, Eugene, Berkeley, Palo Alto, Oakland, Ventura, Santa Monica, Modesto, Sacramento and San Jose are scheduled to participate. The winning team will receive a cash prize of $1,000.

Jerry Quickley, a radio DJ, hip-hop artist and two-time National Slam finalist, will serve as MC for the event.

The gates will open at noon each day. Tickets are available online for $15 a day or $25 for two days. At the door, tickets are $20 a day or $35 for a weekend pass. For more information, call (831) 521-1895 or visit: www.westcoastslam.com.

The event is outdoors, so attendees are encouraged to wear weather-appropriate clothing. “It can get kind of chilly in the late afternoon,” said Thompson of the slam’s shady setting.

Upcoming events at the library

To help raise money to preserve the library’s historical archives, eclectic performance artist Laurie Anderson will perform a benefit concert there on Tuesday, July 26, at 8 p.m. Tickets are $50. Legendary folksinger Ramblin’ Jack Elliott will return to the library for a Sunday afternoon concert July 31. Call (831) 667-2574 for more details.

Is a Reverse Mortgage Right for You?

A reverse mortgage turns a portion of your equity into tax-free money you can use right now. You make no monthly payments on a reverse mortgage and the loan is not due to be paid until you sell, move out of the house or pass away.

You can use this money for any purpose; living expenses, home improvements or a grandchild’s college education.

Homeowners who are 62 or older may qualify and be eligible even if there is an existing first or second mortgage. The size of the reverse mortgage depends upon the borrowers age(s), the program selected, the home’s value, and prevailing interest rates. There are no income qualifications and you continue to retain title to your home.

Call if you have questions or wish a free Reverse Mortgage Handbook.

Former Sunset Center staffer decries working conditions

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THROUGH RESIGNATIONS, layoffs and firings, Sunset Center lost seven staffers in the last two months. One former employee blamed a toxic workplace for the departures and said "employees were affected on a daily basis by a lack of communication."

But its executive director denied any problems at the city-owned center, and some prominent users of the theater used words such as "fabulous" and "the best" to describe current operations there.

"From my point of view, every time something comes up, [Sunset Center Executive Director] Jack Globenfelt has taken care of it," said Jack Buffington, president of the Bach Fest board of directors.

Alexandra Chappell, who had worked for 11 months as an administrative assistant before quitting July 5, strongly disagreed.

"I don't see how the place is going to function if the bad atmosphere continues, because everyone is frustrated, and it's not getting better," she said. "I think Sunset Center will seriously go downhill if something doesn't change."

She blamed Globenfelt and, to a lesser extent, the other managers, for the communication gap.

■ Former house manager Elizabeth Holliday left Sunset Center to start her own business, according to Chappell.

■ Hattie Catania worked part-time at the center for five years and was then named client and patron services director after the nonprofit Sunset Cultural Center Inc. took over management last July. She oversaw ticketing services and "the front of the house," as well as room rentals to community groups, until her contract was not renewed June 1.

■ Ron Shwedel, who worked at Sunset as a Carmel city employee for 13 years and was then hired by SCC, was facilities and technical operations director. The nonprofit did not renew his contract, either.

■ Part-time box-office worker Lari Witt quit following a dispute, Chappell said, though Globenfelt said her departure was mutually decided because she wanted more work hours than were available.

■ Police officers had to be called when Alvin Young, who also worked part-time in the box office, was fired and reportedly threatened his manager. Chappell called him a "horrible worker" who was kept on because management feared a racial discrimination or wrongful termination suit. She criticized Globenfelt and finance director Craig Robertson for not terminating Young sooner.

■ Marty Nilsson, a part-time office assistant, worked with Chappell and also quit July 5.

Chappell told The Pine Cone she gave no advance notice when she quit, claiming Catania and Shwedel also received no notice when their contracts were not renewed. "I've never done that before, and I'm hoping I'm never in

WHAT WE DO BEFORE PLACING EMPLOYEES IN YOUR HOME

Our employees work in our clients' homes, so we are very careful about screening for any past offenses. We also check driving records and test for substance abuse. In addition, we bond our employees for your protection.

We handle all the payroll-related details such as withholding of taxes, payment of workers compensation and compliance with all government regulations, which grow more complex each year. We train them upon employment and pay them to attend continuing education classes. And we reward them with the best benefit package of any local home care agency.

All this takes place behind the scenes. What you see is a friendly, professional Personal Attendant backed up by a supervising Home Care Coordinator and by every procedure we have established for your protection.

Supes' ruling gives Carmel Valley Brewery road access

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors voted 4-0 July 12 to allow a proposed microbrewery to use a private road in Carmel Valley.

Attorney Derinda Messenger, who represents microbrewery owners Dean Hatfield and Karolyn Stone, said the supervisors' action allows the project to move forward.

"We now have a right of access, and there are no limitations," Messenger said.

The Monterey County Planning Commission previously approved the project but inserted a condition that Messenger said would have required her clients to either "sue or get extorted by" other private property owners with access to the road. The brewery will be located on a 44-acre parcel at 66 E. Carmel Valley Road.

Margaret Robbins of Carmel urged the supervisors to uphold the condition required by the planning commission.

"The road agreement is very specific," she insisted in a letter to supervisors. "It provides only for a potential future subdivision. In my opinion, there is a vast difference between building homes in an area zoned residential and establishing a commercial activity like a microbrewery."

According to Glenn Robinson, president of the Carmel Valley Association, this case had the potential to "set an enormous precedent for Monterey County, as nearly 50 percent of all roads in the county are privately held in whole or in part.

Opening up all these private roads to potential commercial use over the objections of their owners would be bad public policy and would render meaningless the Carmel Valley Master Plan and all other area plans in Monterey County."

Messenger maintained that the project would have only a minimal impact on traffic along the private road. She said there would be no public beer tasting offered.

"The brewery is only planning to produce about 100 gallons of beer a week," said Messenger. "Mr. Hatfield could probably transport that amount in the back of his truck during his regular excursions."

Bay Sox take third in tournament

THE MONTEREY Bay Sox traveled to Santa Barbara to play in the California Cup, taking third place in the eight-team, double-elimination tournament last weekend.

The Sox, a semi-pro baseball team, won its first game handily, beating the Santa Barbara Cowboys 12-2. The game was called after seven innings due to the 10-run rule. Monterey's second-round game wasn't the same cake walk, as it took 10 innings to knock off the Maxim Yankees of San Jose in dramatic fashion, 6-5.

But late-inning dramatics went against the Sox the next day. The team lost 2-1 to the Delta Toros of Pittsburgh after having a 1-0 lead going to the bottom of the ninth.

The loss dropped the Sox into the losers' bracket, forcing them to try to win three games on Sunday to be the tournament victors.

They were eliminated in the first game of the day, however, losing 8-5 to the Santa Barbara Foresters, the eventual winner.

REDUCING GAINS TAXES

When Congress made it possible for us to exempt up to $500,000 in gains from the sale of our personal residence (if we're married—it's $250,000 if we're single) from taxation, many financial advisors said "Hooray! We no longer need to keep records on the major improvements we make to our homes." The idea, of course, was that we'd never have more than a $500,000 taxable profit from the sale of a personal residence. The idea, of course, turned out to be wrong.

If you bought your home some years ago for $200,000 and now find you can sell it for $2 million, you face a daunting tax problem—various aspects of which we'll examine in these columns. You can still exclude up to $500,000 in gains from taxation. What about the remaining gains? The first thing to say is: Save those home improvement receipts!

When your gains are taxed, they are computed as follows: Take the original purchase price, add the costs of purchase, and add the costs of any qualified improvements you have made to the home over the years. The sum of all that is referred to as your "adjusted cost basis," which is subtracted from your selling price after you've subtracted out the costs of sale. Obviously, the more improvement expenses, the smaller your taxable gains will be. Talk with your tax advisor about this, and make certain you pay close attention to the costs of all improvements to your home over the years. For help call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

No new disabled at Rippling River, agency says

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE MONTEREY County Housing Authority's board of commissioners voted 5-0 Wednesday to make 13 of the Rippling River housing facility's 79 units accessible to disabled residents. The board's action also signals the authority's commitment to converting the remaining 56 units to senior housing.

For Helaine Clark, president of the Rippling River Residents Association, the housing authority's decision is bad news.

"We're not happy," Clark said. "There will be no more new disabled residents of Rippling River. Ninety-five percent of the residents at Rippling River are very upset." Cutting off the housing project from new disabled residents will deprive them of the opportunity to enjoy independent living, she said.

But Kathleen Lee, an aide to 5th District Supervisor and staunch Rippling River supporter Dave Potter, supported the board's action.

"The good news is we're moving forward collaboratively with the housing authority and maintaining promises made to the existing residents that they can continue to live at Rippling River," Lee said.

Potter attended a Rippling River ad hoc committee meeting July 8 and endorsed the course of action taken by the housing authority a few days later. While Clark disagreed with the housing authority's decision, she commended Potter for his efforts.

"He's doing the best he thought he could do for us," Clark said. "I have to give him credit. He worked his tail off for us."

In the end, the commission's decision came down to money.

More sand to be bulldozed at Carmel River Lagoon

THERE WILL be bulldozers pushing around sand at Carmel River State Beach July 14 but, in an unusual twist, they won't belong to Monterey County Public Works.

Monterey Peninsula Engineering is donating equipment and manpower to a project aimed at restoring the steelhead habitat in the Carmel River Lagoon.

"Too much fresh water is escaping the lagoon, and too much salt water is coming in," explained Pam Armas, Monterey superintendent for California State Parks.

The project is a collaboration of state parks, the National Marine Fisheries Service, the Carmel River Watershed Conservancy, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, the California Department of Fish and Game, and the Carmel River Steelhead Association.

Valley carpenter arrested for battery

A CARMEL Valley man was arrested Sunday night on suspicion of battering his live-in girlfriend.

"The deputies found the lady walking down the street barefoot and in pajamas at 9:15 p.m.," Monterey County Sheriff's Sgt. John DiCarlo said, adding that she had been drinking. "She had taken off from the residence. They contacted her to find out what was going on."

That conversation led them to 23-year-old George Esser, a carpenter who was still in the home the couple shares.

According to investigating deputy Randal Dyck, the suspect had kicked over the chair his girlfriend was sitting in.

"When she tried to call 911 on his cell phone, he took the phone away from her, and when she tried to get the phone back, he twisted her arm until he thought it had been broken," Dyck wrote in his report.

The woman, whose identity was kept confidential, had minor injuries and was taken to the hospital, but she did not receive treatment and left, according to DiCarlo. He did not know if she declined medical attention or if a physician determined she did not need it.

Deputies arrested Esser for battery and took him to Monterey County Jail. Dyck reported Esser and the alleged victim have lived together in Iowa and Carmel Valley for more than five months.

Sandy Claws By Margot Petit Nichols

OSCAR JAMES, 3 in September, is a Havanese — a direct descendent of a mixed breed of Maltese and Bichon Frise from Havana.

Oscar's best friend is his sister Maddie, a 10-year-old calico cat with whom he he loves to play. Lucy is another sister, a hamster, for whom he babysits while Lucy is in her plastic traveling ball. While Lucy is rolling along in the house, careening around corners, Oscar watches over her in case she gets stuck under furniture or needs a push to get started again.

When he's not running in circles on his Carmel-by-the-Sea lawn, barking and growling in ecstasy at the freedom of it all, Oscar likes to snuggle companionably on Mom Kristi's lap, or read the paper with Dad Murray. Oscar sits between arm of chair and leg of Dad and looks studiously at the paper, absorbing the latest news.

Never at a loss for playmates, Oscar has a brother and sister, too: Sis Jena, 10, and brother Trevor, 13, who are crazy about Oscar for his fun-loving ways.

On Sundays, Oscar goes to the Church of the Wayfarer and sits quietly and attentively in the pew with his family. When Mom is scheduled to usher, Oscar stays home because he would insist on following Mom up and down the church aisle.

Tuesday, while Oscar was being interviewed and posing in the greenery for his Sandy Claws photo above Carmel Beach, he was spellbound watching a windsurfer flash across the water, occasionally being lifted above the waves. Oscar loves to play in the shallows and then stroll on the Scenic Road walking path before going to his obedience class at the Monterey Fairgrounds.

It is Oscar's long-range civic duty goal to be a therapy dog at a children's hospital.

Burritos win Big Sur One Pitch Socko Tournament

THE HAWTHORNE Gallery Burritos cruised to an easy 10-2 win over the Fernwood Rebels July 12, winning this year's Big Sur Socko One Pitch Tournament at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park.

Paced by the big bat of slugger Pepe Soria, who smacked an impressive opposite field home run in the third inning, the Burritos wrestled the One Pitch trophy from the Rebels, last year's tournament champions.

To get to the final round, the Rebels won an exciting 5-4 come-from-behind battle against the Nepenhe Outlaws July 11.

The state park hosts softball games every Monday and Tuesday at 5:10 and 6:30 p.m. Admission to the games is free. For more about Big Sur softball, visit: www.bigsursoftball.org.

Costal Water Project can meet water needs for generations

By Steve Leonard

This week we have achieved a major milestone in bringing a water supply solution to the Monterey Peninsula by asking the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) to approve the Coastal Water Project, including:

- A desalination plant located near the Moss Landing Power Plant.
- Storage of water underground in Seaside.
- Pipelines and pumps connecting these facilities to Monterey Peninsula neighborhoods.

Reliable Supply Meets State Order

The Coastal Water Project meets the legal mandate and environmental need to replace water historically taken from the Carmel Valley Aquifer.

The State requires that pumping from our wells be replaced with an environmentally superior source. Failure to comply could mean fines for Peninsula water users.

The Coastal Water Project (CWP) is the most environmentally friendly, cost-effective way to meet water needs for the Monterey Peninsula.

Community Involvement in Planning

This proposal results from a transparent and inclusive public effort. Your voices have been heard in more than 70 public workshops and presentations.

Our plan is based on what we have learned from our ratepayers, neighboring communities, scientists, and engineers.

Through months of outreach to city officials and communities, this study has been open and accessible. We will continue to offer information and seek the public's advice as we move forward.

Improving our Environment

The Coastal Water Project assures an environmentally beneficial and stable water supply.

Desalination is proven as a reliable and sustainable source of quality water throughout the world. Similar projects now operate in some of earth's most sensitive ocean waters, such as the Canary Islands and near Caribbean coral reefs.

One area we have studied thoroughly is the impact on the delicate environment of the Marine Sanctuary and Elkhorn Slough.

Local marine biologists and oceanographic experts have helped us study this proposal. Based on their work, it is clear our desalination proposal will have no significant adverse effects on sea life.

The CWP meets State requirements to reduce pumping of the Carmel Valley Aquifer --benefiting the river's health and habitat, and offering better protection for threatened species. It also stabilizes and helps rehabilitate the Seaside groundwater basin, a critical part of our local water supply.

Public Control of Desalination

California American Water will continue cooperating with the County as it develops plans for possible public ownership of the CWP.

The company supports eventual public ownership of the desalination plant under appropriate circumstances and commends County leaders for developing such a possibility. The work we have conducted includes the key financial, environmental, and engineering data the County needs as it investigates a regional project under its leadership and control.

Planning for Tomorrow

Our study has proceeded at the direction of the CPUC, the agency principally responsible for regulating our company's activities.

Our project meets today's demand. Desalination and storage could also meet future needs on the Monterey Peninsula, if approved by government authorities.

Our study also provides information required to meet some needs of neighboring coastal communities, should government regulators direct us to do so.

Next Steps

Our application includes more than 1,700 pages of environmental assessments. These include studies of our proposal and possible alternatives to our plan.

The CPUC will now use independent experts to study our work, reach conclusions about the environmental impacts, and suggest ways to respond to any issues they identify.

The CPUC will also carefully scrutinize the proposed cost and rate structure and ensure that consumers are protected from unnecessary or inappropriate costs.

Assuming the CPUC approves our plan and our costs, many steps remain ahead. This includes review by the County Board of Supervisors, California Coastal Commission, and a number of state and federal agencies. We will keep you informed at each step along the way.

Meanwhile, to learn more, please visit www.coastalwaterproject.com, drop by our Coastal Water Project Library at 3180 Imjin Rd., Marina, CA 93933, or give us a call at (831) 883-8187.

Sugar Reef serves up Caribbean fare with reggae, jazz and colorful decor

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

WHILE TROPICAL storm Dennis raged across the Caribbean Sea this week, all was serene at Sugar Reef French Caribbean restaurant in Carmel-by-the-Sea — except for a little happy reggae and jazz music played as soft background to the chatter of diners.

On the Fourth of July weekend, a number of visitors to Carmel discovered the colorful subterranean restaurant down the steps on the west side of Dolores at Fifth Avenue; they ordered adventurous French Caribbean dinners, and many came back again the next night to explore the menu further, perhaps to try the coconut rice tricolor beans or “rasta pasta.”

That sort of repeat patronage pleases Executive Chef Jerome Fressinier, for it confirms his belief that the cuisine of Martinique is not only flavorful and colorful, but reflects the uniqueness of the rugged, mountainous, French-speaking island. Chef Jerome worked in his uncle’s Marie Galante hotel on Martinique on frequent six-month vacations from Cognac, France, where he grew up and studied at a culinary school. He also cooked with his chef grandfather, who trained many chefs over the years.

“When one is raised in a family business, there is care and discipline,” Jerome said in his pleasantly French-accented English. “There is a warm reward that you don’t get at a school or from a master.”

time entails many hours of kitchen prep and cooking, but it comes naturally to the 34-year-old who has been in the business for 15 years. “It’s a most natural thing in the course of which you have to find satisfaction," he said. "We wish we could share that satisfaction with more people."

To that end, Jerome and his artist wife Jill and a group of friends are getting out word to the hotels and inns and chamber of commerce with menus to help visitors discover Sugar Reef. "I strongly believe that when our clients taste the cuisine they will come back. In fact, 70 percent of our business is from return customers," he said.

The decor at Sugar Reef was conceived and executed by Jill Fressinier, an artist who goes by the professional name Spill and who specializes in layered, textured dimensional paintings that, in the restaurant, exemplify the happy-go-lucky ambiance of Martinique. She has even decorated the ceilings with colorful designs and covered the entrance wall with colored, patterned paper she hopes to develop into commercial wall paper and fabric.

The couple plan to introduce live music to their six room, 90-seat restaurant if the city council decides to allow Carmel-by-the-Sea eating establishments to become a little more lively.

The Fressiniers have two teenagers, Jordan, 15, and Juliette, 14, both students at their mother's alma mater, Carmel High School.

Chef Jerome considers the 8-oz. grilled filet mignon rubbed with coffee and herbes de Provence to be his signature dish. This entrée is served with plantain garlic whipped Yukon potato and local vegetables in a "nice reduction."

Asked to suggest a sample dinner menu for first-time diners, Jerome reflected a few moments before recommending a starter of "Bang Bang" tiger shrimp with roasted peppers and paprika, finished with a butter sauce and served with a mango relish. But all diners receive a complimentary amuse bouche of plantain corn bread with a little passion fruit sauce.

After the starters, a salad with pomegranate vinaigrette with strawberries, hearts of palm and mango refreshes the palate before continuing on to the entrée.

To go with this suggested menu, kabobs of grouper cheeks and pineapple would be appropriate, with a choice of sweet potato fries or Sugar Reef slaw, Chef Fressinier said. Another entrée, from a menu of 11, would be a Caribbean lobster tail poached in butter, served with crayfish watercress whipped potato and seasonal vegetables.

And to finish this West Indies dinner, mango passion fruit rice pudding.

The dinner menu (lunch is planned for the future) is displayed in a menu box at the head of the entrance stairs. Chef Jerome described the restaurant as "an island under the street where the comfort and food are meant to take patrons on a trip — a fun trip."

Audiences embraces depressing story deftly handled

By DEBORAH SHARP

IN THE hands of a lesser cast, English playwright William Nicholson's "The Retreat from Moscow" could be an excruciating play to watch. It details the break-up of a marriage that has been disintegrating for years, and, as one observer remarked, it could stand as a text-book study on the subject.

Luckily, Pacific Repertory's director Dan Gotch has assembled a superb three-person cast that does to Nicholson's finely-written play, a play which makes both husband and wife sympathetic characters and their grown son (a self-portrait of the playwright) both vulnerable and strong.

Regular Peninsula theatre-goers will immediately recognize a cast up to the difficult material. Jack Stauffer plays Eddie, the gently ridiculed husband, a high school history teacher who hides behind his crossword puzzles and his fascination with Napoleon's disastrous retreat from Moscow. Mary Ann Schaupp-Rousseau plays his wife, Alice, an impulsive woman who won his love years before with her sympathy and ability to recite poetry, but who now alternately ridicules him and becomes ridiculous herself in her attempts to get a reaction from him. Their son Jamie is played by Justin Gordon, who manages to be both child and adult as he navigates his parents' emotions, trying to maintain his love for both of them and his own balance. Lest this all sound impossibly depressing, Nicholson manages to inject humor as well, and this cast makes the most of it.

A family is torn apart

The play is performed in the intimate Circle Theatre in the round, so the audience can closely experience the almost palpable range of emotions of a family being torn apart. In true Anglo-Saxon style, however, the emotions are restrained. Stauffer's entire body exudes the tension of holding in check his need to escape to a woman he has found who loves him as he is. He sits in his armchair picking at the cuff of his trousers as Schaupp-Rousseau earnestly urges him to tell her what has gone wrong with their marriage. Even her little outbursts of anger, dropping his account of Napoleon's retreat or over-turning the breakfast dishes on the floor, are done with deliberate precision. Gordon plays Jamie as both the adult who understands and sympathizes with each parent and can talk straight to them about their situation, and the child who, although no longer a believer, can embrace his mother, sobbing, as he relents and prays with her. One sees in him both his father's reserve and his mother's emotion. The three give incredibly balanced performances which make us see that there is no one to blame for the situation. It just is.

And just as there is justification for each character's actions, so is each character a little ridiculous in his or her behavior. Alice often quotes the likes of George Herbert, Matthew Arnold and Dante Gabriel Rossetti to suit the occasion. She's been compiling an anthology of poetry for years, and she gleefully describes to Jamie a plan she has that features the anthology and a kitchen knife hidden in its pages.

While Alice quotes poetry, Eddie regales his family with grisly descriptions of Napoleon's disaster. It's the playwright's ability to evoke the slightly ridiculous vein that runs through many of the personal entanglements we get ourselves into and this cast's ability to interpret that vein so expertly that saves the play from being depressing.

The plight of three

Gotch's staging effectively emphasizes the plight of the three, each caught in his or her own little circle of emotion. The stage has four distinct sections: two armchairs, side tables and reading lights in opposite corners of a livingroom; an ottoman in a third corner; and across from it a kitchen area. Husband and wife rarely invade each other's spaces, and lighting is skillfully used to further accentuate the tangle of emotions. The only problem with the staging is the inevitable one in a theatre in the round: occasional difficulty hearing actors whose backs are turned on a section of the audience.

It may seem hard to believe that a play about a failed marriage is a pleasure to see, but the standing ovation at the end of the opening night production is testament to the skill of both playwright and cast.

"The Retreat from Moscow" plays through August 7 at PacRep's Circle Theatre. For tickets, call (831) 622-0100.

Butterfly sanctuary could be damaged by effort to save it

By CHRIS COUNTS

JUST A month ago, Pacific Grove city councilmembers urged city officials to fast-track efforts to rehabilitate the P.G. Butterfly Sanctuary. But after listening to suggestions from butterfly and tree experts, the city council agreed July 6 that a rush to open one of P.G.'s most popular tourist attractions by the start of the butterfly migration season in October could cause more harm than good.

"We're on a tight time frame," said new Pacific Grove City Manager Jim Colangelo. "But we're not going to open it for one year and ruin it for the future."

City councilmember Dan Cort also urged restraint. "It's a live environment," he said. "We can tamper with it and hurt it."

The sanctuary has been closed since a woman visiting the site was killed by a falling branch Nov. 27. Efforts to remove dead and dying trees were initially delayed until April, when the butterflies have usually gone north for the spring and summer.

The rehabilitation effort was delayed again while the city conducted a search for an arborist, former city manager Ross Hubbard explained at the June 15 city council meeting. Joseph Bileci, a certified arborist, attorney and longtime Monterey Peninsula resident, was officially hired June 7.

At last week's meeting, public works director Steven Leiker reported Bileci has identified 25 dead or dying trees, mostly Monterey pines. But as noted local botanist Vern Yadon testified, removing them is no simple matter.

"The city council should pay attention to the wind direction," said Yadon, a former director of the P.G. Museum of Natural History. "It has been a wind-shielded sanctuary, and the direction of the wind is very important to the microclimate."

So the removal of a large number of dead and dying trees could eliminate a vital windbreak and potentially deter the butterflies from returning to the sanctuary.

In response to a suggestion the city replace the dead and dying trees with transplanted trees, Yadon urged it to plant saplings instead.

"A 50-cent tree will out-grow a $150 tree," he said.

For now, the city will proceed cautiously with the rehabilitation, Colangelo said.

"This is a balancing act between maintaining public safety and the butterfly habitat," he said.

Colangelo said the city will continue to consult with experts such as Yadon and Stanford University butterfly expert Dr. Stuart Weiss.

Councilmember Susan Goldbeck, who at the June 15 meeting insisted the sanctuary be opened by Oct. 1, conceded the city might not meet that deadline. But she pleaded with city councilmembers to stay focused on the project.

"We don't want to do anything that will harm the habitat," she said. "If we can't open the sanctuary, that's fine, but I don't want this to get lost in the summer months."

Memorial trees suggested

To raise much-needed funding for the rehabilitation project, city councilmember Ron Schenk suggested the city charge residents for the privilege of dedicating a specific tree to a deceased family member.

"Instead of pushing memorial benches, let's do something with trees," he said.

Schenk said there are not enough memorial benches to go around anyway.

"I moved to P.G. eight years ago," he said. "I've been on a waiting list for a bench for my son. Now I'm like number 67 on the list. It doesn't look like I'll see that bench in my lifetime."

Ro Vaccaro, longtime P.G. resident and president of Friends of the Monarchs, said such a program already exists. The woman known affectionately as the Butterfly Lady said memorial trees cost $250, and more than 100 small pines have been planted.

Summer wine benefit for C.V. library

RICH TANGUAY, winemaker for Heller Estate, will lead a blind wine tasting benefit for the Friends of the Carmel Valley Library at Hidden Valley Music Seminars, 5 to 7 p.m., Saturday, August 20.

There will also be snacks, a silent auction of premium wines, and a cash bar. The cost is $10 per person for the wine tasting. For reservations, call the library at (831) 659-2377.

PHILLIPS GALLERY OF FINE ART AT ONE OCEAN AVENUE is presenting an exhibition of recent multimedia paintings by Carmel artist Mary Titus. The show is titled "Visions in Motion" and reflects the rich emotional and visual influence of her recent visit to Scotland. The show will run July 15-30 with an Artist Reception on Saturday, July 16, from 5 to 8 p.m. The public is invited and can RSVP at (831) 626-1617. Phillips Gallery will continue to represent Mary Titus after the close of this exhibition.

A 'CASINO NITE' FUNDRAISER at the Embassy Suites on Friday, July 15, will be hosted by Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty. The evening will feature Texas hold'em Poker Tournaments, Blackjack, Craps and Roulette. It promises to be a fun and lively event. If you don't gamble, not to worry, there will be plenty to do, including a Silent Auction with over a hundred items, a Raffle and dinner. All proceeds will be donated to the Monterey County Habitat for Humanity, which is currently building three homes on Palm Avenue in Marina. Doors open at 6 p.m. Cost is $100 at the door, for dinner and $50 in chips or a buy-in for the poker tournament. Call Vicki Sarris at (831) 622-2574 to register.

while developing the sign plan. He told commissioners he thought it would more accurately reflect the updated center's "amazing courtyard," which will include more outdoor seating and be made more spacious with the removal of the fountain and escalator.

"So The Courtyard at Carmel seemed the perfect name," he said, adding that it would be a nod to the many courtyards in Carmel.

Other courtyards got there first

But their very existence prompted city planner Nathan Schmidt to recommend against the new name being emblazoned across the center's front.

"This name may be misleading, or perhaps even presumptuous, as there are many courtyards throughout the city, and these courtyards have existed far longer than the Plaza," he wrote in his staff report.

He said the name could cause confusion, even interrupting police and fire response to an emergency, because it could refer to multiple locations.

"I suggest they become The Big Courtyard," commissioner Robin Wilson joked before saying he agreed with Schmidt.

"I'm old fashioned enough to want it to stay Carmel Plaza," chairman Bill Strid said.

'Tone down the yellow 'P'

Burch's proposal also included a new entrance directory on Ocean Avenue, wall-mounted and pedestal-mounted directories throughout the shopping center's interior, and a standard mounting bracket system for all new business signs.

Schmidt concluded the plans meet the city's guidelines calling for natural materials, "richly detailed design elements," and muted paint colors.

Only the yellow "parking discs" proposed for multiple exterior locations to show the way to the Plaza's perennially unfilled parking garage raised commissioners' eyebrows.

Burch said their round shape, yellow color and big "P" are universally recognized and would lead visitors to the Mission Street entrance, which is difficult to find because it's dark and nearby parking spaces impede the view.

(He also asked for a red zone adjacent to the driveway, but Strid said granting that request would far exceed the commission's authority.)

"Let's show people how to get there,"

Talmage agreed.

But Hewer disfavored the yellow "round M&M-type things" and asked that their flashiness be toned down.

The commission voted 4-1 to approve the application, without the Courtyard name change and with slight modification.

"Staff will work with the applicant to tone down the yellow 'P,'" Roseth reiterated. Because the parking signs would be placed in the public right of way, Macerich will have to apply to the city council for an encroachment permit.

that order — while city planners and attorneys debated the issues, according to principal planner Brian Roseth.

The commission's vote came after city building official Tim Meroney received a complaint from nearby jewelry store owner Michael Cayen and found jewelry occupied "at least 80 percent of the general sales area and 100 percent of the windows." The gallery's business license, issued in April to owner Ryan Mattonen, restricted jewelry displays to 10 percent of the retail floor space or windows.

At the July 13 hearing, attorney Elizabeth Gianola said Mattonen and the gallery's artist, Romanoos, were careful to understand the restrictions before opening in the former Raffles store. With a floor area of 600 square feet, they concluded they could use 60 square feet to display jewelry.

"It's clearly an art gallery and not intended to be a jewelry store," she said. "She's there painting; it's a studio and art gallery. That's what it's intended to be, and that's what it is."

But Cayen and other jewelers argued otherwise. "We followed all the rules, and we think everybody should have to follow the rules," Cayen said. "To go around them and tell everyone what they want to hear is just wrong."

He accused his new neighbors of deception. Competitors B&G and Kocek jewelers said the gallery looks like a jewelry store, and owners of both decried Romanoos Gallery's intrusion into their market. The number of jewelry stores in Carmel has been tightly controlled for two decades — not to protect existing stores' territories, but to keep the town from being overrun.

Cayen also alleged Mattonen violated the terms of his lease for the Jordan Court store.

"I handled all the negotiations with Romanoos, and they are doing exactly what they agreed to do in their lease," countered Judy Jordan's attorney, Willard McCrone, who has handled her property for more than 20 years. "Unfortunately this has become a tempest in a teapot, with competitors speaking out against what is fairly minor competition."

Planner Nathan Schmidt suggested the license be suspended and the business closed until the gallery dedicates no more than 10 percent of the floor space to jewelry and removes all of it from the windows.

He also called for adding an 18-inch buffer zone to the measurements of display cases, stating that measuring their footprints is inaccurate because it excludes the space occupied by people looking at the jewelry or accessing the cases.

Commissioners agreed, voting 4-0 to shut the gallery down until it meets the provisions of the amended business license and is inspected again for compliance. Because she could not make the tour of the gallery, commissioner Julie Culver abstained.

The following afternoon, Roseth said the city could penalize the gallery for remaining open despite the commission's decision, including issuing citations and obtaining a restraining order.

"We are trying to resolve this amicably, so no specific action has been taken," he said. "But they're certainly on notice that they're in violation."

destroying her Jeep and the Honda belonging to her roommate. It also took out power, telephone and cable lines.

She described the sound of the roots tearing and the huge pine toppling as having a lot of pressure or force, like an earthquake.

Tolliver called PG&E, and by the time she got off the phone, Carmel Valley Fire Division Chief Ron Lemos and an engine crew had arrived.

"We got called out to a tree down over some vehicles,"

Lemos said. "It was unknown if they were occupied."

Wary of the live power lines, firefighters approached the crushed vehicles.

"We kind of snuck our way in there as best we could, just to peak in the cars to make sure no one was inside," he said.

While waiting for the power company, firefighters stood by "to make sure no one went in and make sure no one was getting shocked."

Through the mess of tree branches, wires and debris, he told Tolliver to stay in her house until the power could be cut.

When it was shut off about 30 minutes later, a tree crew quickly moved in to cut several large branches blocking the street. But that's all they did.

"It's up to the homeowner to get the tree removed," Lemos explained.

Tolliver, who has rented the home for five years, said Monday evening the property owner, Patricia Pettit, was driving from San Jose to survey the damage caused by the tree, which fell from one of her properties onto the other.

"I didn't realize how big this tree was," Tolliver said, standing in her driveway. She peered inside her destroyed Jeep and laughingly added, "My glove compartment's on the floor!"

Passing neighbors stopped to ogle the sight and inquire about the welfare of Tolliver and her roommate. One wondered if the tree's falling would increase or decrease the value of the homes, which are on the market as a pair for $969,000.

Power pole dominos

Two days later, just before dawn, a 100-foot pine crashed from Pacific Grove's George Washington Park across Alder Avenue, barely missing two homes and ripping out power, telephone and cable TV lines. One power pole was struck by the falling tree and broke in two; tension on the snagged lines also snapped off the tops of three other power poles on the street, leaving PG&E repair crews with a massive repair job.

"The noise was like a house being ripped in two," said Maureen Close, a nearby resident.

"It's going to take a long, long time to fix this," said a PG&E worker who did not want to give his name.

The damaged power lines had fed a large section of downtown Pacific Grove, cutting power to hundreds of residents. Crews were able to re-route the electricity service downtown, restoring most service by 8 a.m. But for residents of Alder Street, power was still out almost 12 hours later.

PROUDLY ANNOUNCE

THE NEW MILLENNIUM SCHOLAR 2005

Eddie Wu, a senior at Monterey High, has been awarded our $4,000 New Millennium Scholarship for the year 2005. He was chosen for his willingness to overcome significant hardships to achieve his educational goals, and his constant striving for personal and academic excellence.

Though Wu has faced many difficult challenges in his young life, he has maintained an excellent GPA while holding down part-time jobs and working as a volunteer at such community events as the Thanksgiving Dinner at the Monterey Fairgrounds. Eddie is planning to major in Business when he enters UC Irvine this fall. He says, "I hope to be able to make something of myself and find a way to give help to people who need help most."

Congratulations!

sents a major step forward, it also illustrates how much work remains to be done before any new water starts to flow: According to the PEA, 30 government agencies will have to approve the desal project before construction can begin.

"It's more than 30, actually," said Larry Gallery, a consultant hired by Cal Am to help plan the desal project. "Twice, we've had about 25 of them in a room at one time, to ask what they thought should be in the PEA, and it's all in there."

The company's analysis shows that most environmental impacts from the desal project will be during construction, including noise and traffic delays along the pipeline route from Moss Landing to the Peninsula, Gallery said.

Operation of the plant will have few negative environmental impacts, he maintained, and will even bring some benefits to the environment.

"When the desal plant comes online, you'll see substantially better flows in the Carmel River," Leonard said. Two federally endangered species, steelhead trout and the red-legged frog, live in the river and its watershed.

Cal Am officials also said that, while their company prefers to build an 11,730-acre-foot plant, the PEA studies several larger options, all the way up to a plant almost twice as large which would provide water for the entire region.

"Our environmental analysis is based on worst-case scenarios," Gallery said.

But throughout their year-long campaign to solicit public input on desal options, Cal Am officials have maintained they would only build a bigger plant if local cities and the county asked for it.

And while many local mayors have asked for more water, Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud said she understands why Cal Am went for a relatively small project.

"What they're asking for is probably the biggest they can ask for," said McCloud, noting that an earlier desal proposal and a new dam on the Carmel River were both voted down in the 1990s. "Some people are afraid that putting in extra water would lead to unmitigated growth."

Leonard said his company hopes to have a pilot plant operating this fall at the Moss Landing power station. The pilot plant would help engineers fine-tune the desal process to match local conditions.

If a final desal plant is built, it will probably also be located at the Moss Landing site, where it can share the power plant's cooling water intake and outfall. New pipelines would probably not be allowed in the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, officials agree.

Cal Am has also scheduled two town hall meetings to gather public reaction to the PEA, which it said can be downloaded at www.coastalwaterproject.com. The first town hall meeting will be July 18 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Elk's Lodge, 150 Mar Vista Drive, Monterey.

Caber parade comes to town July 31

WHO WOULDN'T want to be a Scot July 31? That date marks the annual Caber Parade down Ocean Avenue, when everyone is invited to don a tartan or a kilt, put the dog on a leash and join in the celebration of all things Scottish. The entertainment will begin in Devendorf Park at 1 p.m., followed by the parade at 1:30 that will feature the Monterey Pipe Band, Scottish dancers and members of the Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula.

Not to be missed are the burley athletes who will carry the caber — similar to an 18-foot telephone pole — down the street. The parade will end at Jack London's pub on Dolores Street after making a U-turn at Monte Verde. For more information, contact the Scottish Society at (831) 647-6311, visit www.montereyscotgames.com or call the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea at (831) 620-2020.

Where the blame lies

THE HOMEOWNERS who are complaining have it right.

It is ridiculous for 300 homes in tiny Carmel-by-the-Sea to be declared "historic" and have their names, ranks and serial numbers inscribed at the county courthouse — all without the consent of the property owners.

The city isn't even 100 years old. Except for the founding of the Mission, hardly anything happened here that you'll find in the state's history books. So it is just plain silly to pretend that 10 percent of the town's housing stock is already of such historic value — not to the people of the town, but to the whole state — that they must not be altered without strict review by a committee of historic preservation fans. Believe it or not, several of the homes on the historic list were built as recently as the 1960s. That's how far-fetched it is.

But it is wrong to blame the mayor and council for the existence of the historic preservation list or the fact that the homes on it will have a permanent notation placed on their deeds.

Left to its own devices, this council surely would have been much more selective in declaring homes historic. Perhaps it would have even opted not to put homes on the list without their owners' consent. But state law, and a series of misguided court decisions, have left the council no choice.

Of course, this battle isn't really about historic homes. It's about small homes. A handful of Carmel residents — and people from surrounding neighborhoods — prefer tiny cottages on the town's 4,000-square-foot lots. They want it to be illegal to build bigger ones. But the fact that most people support the current, 1,800-square-foot maximum on Carmel's building sites prevents the small-house activists from having their way at city hall. So they look for ways to force the town to adhere to their wishes. And they easily found one: The California Environmental Quality Act which, for some bizarre reason, has been interpreted to require protection of homes that aren't even 50 years old as long as an "expert" can be found to opine that they're "historic."

Any hope of changing CEQA rests with the Legislature. That's where the blame lies. And that's where your angry letters should go.

Letters to the Editor

Low morale of city employees

Dear Editor,

I appreciate your calling for fairness in the negotiations between the city and its employees. That is what employees want, and I am sure that is what residents and businesses want as well. They are not asking for the moon. They are asking for a fair deal.

Most of all they are asking for help in sharing the burden of their increased health care costs. Here is what has happened to city employees in the last two years: Because of budget cuts, most of them are now working two jobs. In the same period they have not even gotten cost-of-living increases, and their health care costs have gone up. In effect, their pay has been cut while their workload multiplied.

Now we learn that city council members are getting full health benefits for free while city employees are paying more every year for the same privilege.

So let's not blame the employees when they finally alert us to the fact that they deserve to be treated fairly. They would not have had to do it through a newspaper ad if they had been able to get a fair contract otherwise.

I've experienced firsthand how dedicated our city employees are, those at city hall as well as those responding to police and fire calls. We all benefit when they are treated fairly and appreciated for the service they perform.

Carmel

Newsletter walked like a duck

Dear Editor,

A recent half-page Pine Cone ad placed by city workers, entitled "City of Carmel-by-the-Sea Does Not Respect Its Employees," stated that the city council had spent a sizable sum of money to fight the hotel tax increase (TOT). At the July council meeting, when Mayor McCloud denied spending anything other than election department costs, it was suggested that this sum included the cost of the newsletter which the city sent to each voter during the TOT campaign. She answered, "We have always sent out newsletters."

In fact, the city discontinued its newsletter over a year ago in order to save money.

Couched as a "Progress Report," the newsletter's first page was a direct rebuttal of arguments made by the committee to increase the TOT, explaining how hard the council had worked to reduce expenditures and how they were going to raise revenues. Interesting timing.

This is also interesting because the council was told by the city attorney that if they voted to oppose the TOT, which they did, they could not legally campaign against it. So, whether or not this mailing during the election can legally be classified as campaigning, it certainly, in my opinion, would have trouble passing the proverbial "If it quacks like a duck . . ." test.

Frenchman: 'sad and true'

To the Editor:

The city council should pay close attention to the French tourist's letter of July 8, in which Victoire Reynard of Paris tells us "trash on city streets mars the aesthetic beauty of Carmel's natural setting" and that he will go elsewhere for his next vacation.

How sad and how true! Our city government spends fortunes on advertising, parking enforcement, pensions, and white elephants like Sunset Center, but cannot afford to put one simple cleanup person on the streets daily (or even part-time) to pick up trash and litter, which gets worse all the time. I am sure many other tourists will not be coming back, just like Monsieur Raynard, but will not take the trouble to write and tell us.

Eric Julber,
Carmel

Frenchman: 'absurd'

Dear Editor,

The criticisms of Carmel in the July 8 Pine Cone by Frenchman Victoire Reynard are so absurd, even paranoid, my first reaction was that the letter is a hoax. But assuming this pompous jerk is actually serious, it's a shame that his visit to Carmel was spent counting and being insulted by "no parking" signs and studying the "uneven surfaces" of city streets. While this representative of French charm was bah-humbugging his way along Scenic Road, he apparently missed one of its attractions, something called the Pacific Ocean, not to mention Carmel's many other attributes.

He says that for his next visit to California — and how blessed the state would be to have him back — he will choose a more aesthetically oriented community than Carmel. Good luck, mon ami. You won't find one.

Doug Gamble, Carmel

Let Cal-Am do its job

Dear Editor,

Finally some public watchdog wrote a proper editorial regarding public takeover of Cal-Am. Your message of July 1 was right on target.

Although the editorial, "Public takeover of Cal-Am is a really bad idea," was short and to the point, it could have added the following:

1. Former owner of the Herald Allen Griffin advised the public in the early '60s that public takeover was a stupid move. The voters wisely took his advice and voted down the takeover proposed at that time.

2. Instead of constantly adding costly "studies," the water board should concentrate on solving the water problem.

3. "Study" what happened to governments that had unfettered discretion to spend taxpayers money, such as the water board itself. It raised fees this year. In 1989 the district had 15 employees, but during the rationing program that followed, that mushroomed to 39. After the "emergency" period, the board reduced to 23. Now the district has nearly 30 employees yet there is less need for them because there is no significant water project on the table.

4. The Monterey school district spent and spent until it neared bankruptcy. The City of Monterey 20 years ago had 283 employees which mushroomed to double that amount in a dozen short years.

Just because Cal-Am faces penalties for overpumping the river and there has been no alternative water source in 10 years is no excuse for a taxpayer takeover. We water customers are as much to blame as Cal-Am. It has diligently attempted to provide a dam and we turned it down. A desal plant was proposed and we voters turned that down.

Private industries have a profit motive, and that is the very reason they do better jobs than government. They keep costs down. Let government take over and be sorry later. Allen Griffin called it correctly.

Carmel Mediterranean Estate "Zanadu"

Located just a block from the beach, with stunning ocean views is this marvelous Mediterranean estate. Originally constructed in 1925, it was extensively remodeled, in 1981-83, by architect Don Wald in collaboration with its artistic owners. There are three bedroom suites plus a 1/2 bath, a generous living room/dining room combination, a cozy den with wet bar, a large family room, and a breakfast room off the kitchen. The home features three fireplaces, a double garage, and three lovely garden patios. Situated on a double lot (80'x100'), the property also includes a guest cottage. The colors of Xanadu are the colors of the sunset over Carmel Bay - the sky, the water and the setting sun.

Supes delay decision on long-proposed Carmel Valley lot split

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors delayed a decision June 12 on whether a proposed lot split in Carmel Valley is subject to a subdivision moratorium.

According to attorney John Bridges, Howard Liggett of Carmel Valley first tried to submit plans for a four-lot subdivision at 29001 Robinson Canyon Road in 1993. But due to "bad advice" he received from a county planner, a second phase of the project is in jeopardy, Bridges said.

According to Bridges, a planner told Liggett he could only submit plans for a two-lot split because he had insufficient water resources for a four-lot split. He said Liggett should have been informed by county staff that he could submit his plans, but they would be incomplete until he solved his water problems.

"Mr. Liggett was not represented by counsel at the time and had no way of knowing the legal distinction between application submittal and completeness," Bridges explained.

If he had been aware of the difference between the two terms, he would have submitted plans for a four-lot split, beating the moratorium that was enacted in 1999.

Paula Lotz of the Carmel Valley Association worried that if Liggett's split is approved, it would pave the way toward even more development.

"It could open the floodgates," Lotz said. "We are concerned with opening the doors to other property owners. This is not a unique case. We don't know how many projects like this are out there."

Bridges disagreed. "The fear is unfounded," he said. "The facts in this case are unique. This is about Mr. Liggett and nobody else."

Originally, Liggett owned a 64.2-acre parcel. The original two-lot split divided his property into a 14-acre lot and a 50.2-acre lot. He then built a low-income rental unit on the 14-acre parcel.

Bridges said Liggett has since abandoned his original goal of four parcels — he simply wants to split the 50.2-acre parcel into one 19.7-acre lot (where he lives), and a vacant 30.5-acre lot. Water is no longer an issue, since Liggett dug another well. According to Bridges, Liggett has spent about $100,000 on the second phase of the project.

The supervisors agreed unanimously to delay the any decision on the project until further research is completed. They will reconsider the application Aug. 23.

San Antonio couple barely escape beach development rules

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AFTER ALMOST four years mired in planning limbo, Kevin and Melissa Riches received permission Wednesday night to build a home on San Antonio — a home that got its initial approval September 2001.

That OK of the home's basic design was extended three years while the city's Local Coastal Program was under review. In March, the couple tried to get their final permit, only to learn the LCP's strict limitations on development in the beach district might ruin their plan, because the official boundary of the beach district bisects their lot even though it is a block from the beach.

At the hearing, planning commissioners debated whether the more restrictive zoning — particularly its 18-foot height limit — should apply to the entire lot, on which an existing home would be torn down and a new one built at the rear. The application was delayed while planners conferred with coastal staff.

"When the LCP was written, staff understood from the California Coastal Commission that if a lot was bisected, [beach district zoning] would apply to all of it," planner Sean Conroy explained July 13. "But in recent talks with the coastal commission, it no longer functions that way."

In fact, coastal commission planners said the city should decide how to deal with lots partially covered by the overlay.

"Until the LCP's language is amended, the planning commission must interpret the code in a way that achieves good physical results on the land, not just for this property, but for any similarly situated property," Conroy said.

He suggested commissioners could decide on a case-by-case basis, apply the LCP as written or delay the application until the code is amended to conform with the coastal commission's take. He also recommended some design changes to conform with LCP standards adopted after the application was approved.

With the project on the agenda, several neighbors took advantage of the opportunity to ask for the redesign of a home they said would be too large and intrusive for the neighborhood.

"A bedroom of their house is going to look directly into my bedroom," Francesca Farr said. "It will have an impact on us. It will change the character and integrity of the whole neighborhood."

One neighbor said the home should be approved.

And attorney Philip Favro said the permit extensions should have preserved his clients' plans and asked for approval of the coastal development permit.

"The issues have been resolved for four years, and we're getting back into a design review process which has already been completed," he said.

Planning commissioners unanimously echoed coastal staff's position that the home should not be subjected to the more restrictive overlay rules or appeal before the state agency. They also reaffirmed the design approval and asked for no changes.

After the vote, they asked staff to work on clarifying the rules that would affect an estimated 30 properties falling partially within the beach overlay/coastal commission appeal zone.

"There needs to be a code amendment to clear up the ambiguity that has resulted," commissioner Ken Talmage said.

the guest is acting out without reason. Advised the manager that the guest could not be evicted and the matter is civil. Officer then offered several suggestions on how to handle this situation.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male reported someone stole his laptop computer from his truck while it was parked on Dolores.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject was talking loudly and screaming at people on San Carlos Street. Contact was made and the subject did not fit the criteria for a section 5150 hold. She was advised to stop yelling. Subject left the area.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine responded to a fire alarm activation at Trevett Court on Dolores Street. Cause of the alarm activation was cooking in one of the units, so the unit was naturally ventilated and the alarm silenced.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine responded to a fire alarm activation at a restaurant at Mission and Fifth. The cause of the activation was contact with a heat detector from a cardboard box being placed for storage in the kitchen pantry area. The management was advised against storing supplies in that location, and they silenced/reset the alarm system.

Carmel Valley: An 18-year-old male Via Contenta resident reported he received an annoying late-night phone call. Case continues.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 6

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Carmelo Street resident reported her former husband broke a window pane in order to gain entry to her home on behalf of their son, so that the son could retrieve some property. The son was never provided a key to the home where he now lives. Numerous calls were made to the reporting party in order to get her to respond to unlock the door. Their son is responsible for breaking the glass. The husband notified her about the damage to the window and this was confirmed by the resident. The husband offered to pay for the repair/replacement of the window and will be coordinating with the property manager. They were counseled.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female reported the loss of her cell phone while she was at the beach.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Grand theft on Carmelo Street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Anonymous person found a wallet in the business district on Sixth Avenue and turned it in to the fire department. Owner was subsequently located, and the wallet was returned.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a reported natural gas leak on the corner of Santa Rita and Fifth. Firefighters discovered a flexible gas line that had been severed during excavation but had been clamped off upon arrival. Santa Rita Command was established and a tactical channel was assigned. A gas reading was taken, showing a small leak still existed, with small, short-lived pockets of gas showing near the break. PG&E repair personnel arrived to cap the break, and the scene was secure.

To whom it may concern:

It has been my pleasure to work with Michael Coleman. He is warm, caring, and very easy to communicate with. Michael listens well and has excellent follow-through.

As a long distance buyer, it was imperative to have an agent who was honest, thorough, unbiased, and looked out for my best interest. Michael handled everything for me - he was my eyes and ears. I would trust him to do it again without hesitation.

Michael is a rare find in the real estate world. He is truly the buyer's or seller's unequivocal advocate. He puts self-interest aside and truly works for his client. I highly recommend Michael to anyone looking for an agent.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF FRIEDERIKE STRACHWITZ

Case Number MP 17683

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of FRIEDERIKE STRACHWITZ nee FRIEDERIKE von BREDOW.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by CHRISTIAN STRACHWITZ in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that CHRISTIAN STRACHWITZ be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on July 29, 2005, 2005 at 10:30 a.m., Dept.: TBD, in the Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

PUBLIC NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Design Review Board of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea will conduct a public hearing in the City Hall Council Chambers, located on the east side of Monte Verde between Ocean and Seventh Avenues, on Wednesday, July 27th, 2005. The public hearings will be opened at 4:30 p.m. or as soon thereafter as possible. Following a staff report on the project, the applicant and all interested members of the public will be allowed to speak or offer written testimony. Decisions to approve or deny the project may be appealed to the City Council by filing a written notice of appeal with the office of the City Clerk within ten (10) working days following the date of action by the Design Review Board and paying a $265.00 appeal fee as established by the City Council. For those projects listed as appealable to the California Coastal Commission, appeals may be filed directly with the Coastal Commission for no fee, by filing a written notice of appeal with the Coastal Commission's Central Coast office in Santa Cruz. Such appeals must be filed within ten working days of the Coastal Commission's receipt of the City's Final Local Action Notice.

If you challenge the nature of the proposed action in court, you may be limited to raising only those issues you or someone else raised at the public hearing described in this notice, or in written correspondence delivered to the Design Review Board or the City Council, or prior to, the public hearing.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a fall on city property on Fifth Avenue.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Suspect, age 20, was contacted on Ocean Avenue and cited for driving on a suspended license.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a reported sewer spill on Monte Verde and Ocean at 1217 hours. Firefighters discovered raw sewage flowing at a slow rate from a clean-out cap in the sidewalk and entering the storm drain at Seventh. Rate of flow appeared to be less than 1 gpm but it was unknown for how long. County health was called by dispatch but the call was not returned. Spill neutralized with bleach and the flow was contained with more than 300 pounds of absorbent. Several berms were constructed to minimize flow and puddles near the storm drain had enough absorbent to eliminate standing water. Saturated absorbent was replaced with fresh in continuing effort to minimize the flow into the storm drain. County health finally returned the call at 1525 hours and responded from Aromas. The owner of the building called and angrily reported that the problem was not from her building, and the fire department was responsible for damaging her business. The PD watch commander was notified, and he responded to the scene. By now the repair person was on scene and determined the problem was this building as originally determined, and cleaned out the clogs in the system. County health arrived at 1500 hours, assessed the incident and notified CFD that the effort to neutralize and control the spill was successful and water could now enter the drain. The absorbent was disposed of at public works.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a medical emergency in front of Carmel Fire Station. Firefighters assisted ambulance personnel with c-spine precautions, patient assessment, packaging and gathering information on an elderly female who had fallen on the street and then driven herself to the fire station. Patient transported to CHOMP by ambulance and the patient's dog was secured by fire and police personnel. Dog was then picked up by a trusted citizen until a friend of the patient could pick the dog up about an hour later.

Pebble Beach: Units responded to the Stevenson Drive residence of a 59-year-old female on referral from CPS. Investigation determined to be inconclusive.

Pebble Beach: Deputies responded to a Sloat Road residence for a verbal domestic dispute between husband and wife.

Carmel Valley: During a consensual contact at Birch Place and Rio Road, two probationers were found to possess drug paraphernalia, paraphernalia for sales and burglary tools. They were arrested and transported to county jail. Case continues.

er job to the payroll, Guillen already had a candidate in mind for the new finance manager position.

Joyce Giuffre, a Stockton resident and accounts receivable manager for Diamond of California, had interviewed for the lower-level financial services coordinator job vacated last year by Cheryl Panattoni, but she turned it down.

As finance manger, Giuffre will "provide management-level oversight of all functions and operations of the city's financial activities," according to the description of the new at-will job, which also pays $5,123 to $6,227 per month, plus benefits.

Because she will handle financial analysis, projections a situation where I would have to do that again," she said, adding that she moved from Pacific Grove to Carmel last August for the Sunset job.

"It's such a negative place, and it's so sad, because it's so pretty," she said, speculating the center will have a hard time maintaining "its soul and its charm."

"This is something the community would want to know about," she said.

"That's her perception, and she's entitled to her perception," Globenfelt responded. "I think you can only judge [the situation at Sunset Center] by how events come off, and I think they've come off flawlessly."

Bach Festival officials, for example, have commented that this is "the best operation since they've been here," he said. The 68th annual Carmel Bach Festival begins July 16, but performers arrived for practices more than a week ago.

Now with a staff of eight, Globenfelt said the center is seeking to fill two new positions approved by the nonprofit board — one in operations and the other in administration — and is close to making offers. Once those jobs are filled, the center will be "pretty much at optimum staffing level," he added. He does not know if anyone will fill Chappell's former role.

As for his recently departed staffers, Globenfelt said, "They resigned, and I wish them well. They were good employees, and for whatever reason, they decided to move on. That's sad, but those things happen."

and budget preparation, Giuffre's work will reduce the amount of time consultant CPA Paul Wood spends in city hall, according to Guillen. "And it frees me up for economic development and the sale of city assets," he said.

Guillen cited Giuffre's impressive private-sector background. She spent 17 years working in operations, financial management and accounting, including positions with Omni Healthcare, food processor San Tomo Group and Valimet Inc., a metal powder manufacturer.

She holds a BA in management/accounting from Sonoma State University, is a board member of the Stockton chapter of the Institute of Management Accountants and has volunteered with Friends of the Stockton Public Library for more than eight years.

"She's had experience in all these different things," said Guillen.

Giuffre, who found the job listing on the Internet, said she is also looking forward to working with the city and was impressed by its staff.

She and her husband, Dennis, a CPA, will move to Pacific Grove and are "thrilled to death" with the prospect of having such a spectacular venue for the outdoor sports they enjoy, as well as being closer to family in Aptos and Capitola. The Giuffres have six adult children, seven grandchildren and a cat.

"As far as the job goes, I expect it to be a really good opportunity for me to be involved with government accounting, and also to be hooked up with the community right away," she said.

Guillen expects she will bring an entrepreneur's perspective to the job. "In government, we get comfortable doing things a certain way, and that's not always the best way," he said. "I think she can offer some ways to streamline our process and look at things a little differently."

Bach's Brandenburg Concertos, Beethoven's 9th, Vivaldi's 'Four Seasons' top 2005 festival offerings

By DAVID MILLER

THE THEME of the 68th Carmel Bach Festival, and the first under the directorship of Jesse Read, makes plain what has always been true about the event: The cover of this year's program says "Bach and beyond."

The strength of the Carmel festival has long been its double mission — to present first-rate performances of Bach's music and to play pieces by later composers with a special connection with Bach. In the past, for instance, this has meant Mendelssohn's "Elijah" or Mozart's "Requiem." This year, the guest star composer is Beethoven.

Bach and Beethoven are connected in the obvious ways, the younger composer having learned the older's fugues and been inspired to write fugues of his own, most notably in his string quartets. But there is a deeper connection, and it is metaphysical. As the festival program, in the blurb for Bach's "B-minor Mass" (to be sung on Sundays this year) says, "... a work neither Catholic nor Lutheran — a mass for all time."

Bach was, by upbringing and culture, extremely Lutheran. Nowadays it is fashionable to say that all religions basically preach the same thing. In Leipzig in 1740 it was not. So if Bach's career included a mass that speaks strongly to the religious feelings of Protestants, Catholics, Jews, and beyond, it was because of his inner need to address metaphysical issues, his inborn universality of language — a need that is all the more remarkable for showing up at a time of relative religious intolerance.

(A preoccupation with metaphysics does not characterize all great composers; Mozart, for example, was more concerned with the human heart than with the universe.)

Beethoven, whether influenced or not by Bach, had

Rehearsals for this year's Carmel Bach Festival began at Sunset Center on July 6, with maestro Bruno Weil helping his players master the fine points of Haydn's 103rd Symphony, composed in London in 1795.

the same drive, the same need to address issues of universal importance. One of the highlights of the 2005 festival will be the Friday night performance of the Ninth Symphony, the work where Beethoven's metaphysics found its most popular expression.

The iconic status of Beethoven's Ninth is hard to overstate. It manages to mean things to people in situations that go beyond music. Thus, in Berlin, when the wall came down, Leonard Bernstein played it, and to underline the freeing of the former German Democratic Republic, substituted the word Freiheit (freedom) for the original Freude (joy). Beethoven's Ninth is also the only piece not by Wagner to be played regularly at the Bayreuth Festival.

It is a symphony that wants to be an opera, secular music that tends to become sacred, a message of love between people that makes the hearer think of God, an invitation to a world beyond the physical one. Go and hear it.

Another highlight is bound to be the Mission Concert — which this year features Monteverdi's splendid "Vespers of the Blessed Virgin." It will be conducted by newcomer William Jon Gray, who comes to Carmel with a very impressive resume. He is replacing the well-loved Bruce Lamott, who recently retired.

Also not to be missed: A chance to hear all six Brandenburg Concertos in one evening, which you can do in the Thursday night concerts. These pieces are a sheer joy, a hoot and a half, and I know how great they will sound with the festival orchestra and conductor Bruno Weil.

The Monday concert pairs Vivaldi and Handel, two composers born in the same year as Bach (a vintage year!). Elizabeth Wallfisch will play the Four Seasons, and Kendra Colton will sing four Handel arias. This is bound to be a hot ticket.

Carmel's Bach Festival may not be the only musical event to combine Bach with later composers, but it has a unique ability to do this well. Weil is well known for his Haydn performances, but also for Wagner; Elizabeth Wallfisch switches back and forth between baroque and modern playing with breathtaking ease; and the same can be said for many other festival regulars, including director Jesse Read who, after 28 years in the orchestra, will still be playing a mean bassoon.

The joys and struggles of Nana Faridany's music-loving life

By PAUL MILLER

WHILE BRUNO Weil led the Bach Festival Orchestra in a rehearsal of Beethoven at Sunset Center last Thursday, a gracious, gray-haired woman inconspicuously greeted a few friends and eavesdropped on the rehearsal backstage.

Nana Faridany didn't attract much attention that day from the dozens of musicians busily getting ready for opening night. Last summer, a grim cancer diagnosis forced her to retire as the Bach Fest's artistic administrator.

But for 20 years, she was the musicians' combination CEO and den mother — literally the woman who made the festival run on a day-to-day basis, as far as the cellists, bassoonists and percussionists were concerned.

"Nana was a treasure who always made all of us feel incredibly welcome," said Elizabeth Wallfisch, concertmaster. "She took care of everything for us, and she did it with such a loving heart."

"The relationship she had with the musicians through all the years was just fantastic," said board president Jack Buffington, a volunteer with the festival since the 1970s. "She nurtured them and provided for them while they were in town every summer."

"She's a salt-of-the-earth person, but with very high ideals and a tremendous sense of history. I respect her immensely," said Jesse Read, who became the festival's principal bassoonist twenty-five years ago and its managing director last summer.

And, according to Maestro Weil, Faridany was much more than a nuts-and-bolts administrator. "Without Nana I wouldn't be here, that's for sure 100 percent," said Weil, who was hired as artistic director in 1991. "She brought me over, and she showed me the potential and the spirit, and that's why I decided to come here."

For Faridany, 63, whose departure from the festival last year was accompanied by a lot of sadness, the backstage eavesdropping session Thursday was exciting, and comforting.

"I was standing in the wings, looking at Bruno and the orchestra, and it felt like home," she said. "It is just the best to hear them take a few black marks on a piece of paper and turn them into something sublime."

This deep appreciation for classical music was something she recognized in herself at a very early age, thanks to her mother, Nancy Morrow, who was a mainstay of the Carmel Bach Festival for decades.

"My mother was in the chorus, and we used to sit around the piano and sing the chorales," Faridany recalled. "It was the only music that seemed complete to me."

Long-time Bach Festival administrator Nana Faridany, pictured here on the porch of her Carmel Valley home, retired last summer and spends much of her time fighting an aggressive form of cancer. But the joy she feels when she hears the music of J.S. Bach is undiminished. "It's the only music that feels complete to me" she says.

Morrow also sold tickets and even made banners for the Mission Concerts, Faridany added, and it was those duties that led to a very early encounter with one of the Bach Fest's organizers, giving Faridany a unique connection to the festival's past.

"I was eight years old, and my mother was managing the ticket booth at Sunset Center, and I was hanging around and wandered into the theater, which was completely empty," Faridany recalled. "In came a terrifying woman, who promptly threw me out, because she said I had no business there. And that was Dene Denny. So I could always say I was the only one working for the festival who had been ordered out of the theater by the founder."

The conductor in the early 1950s, Gastone Usigli, gave Faridany another memory which makes her laugh even now. "He was very, very Italian, and he was rehearsing the chorus one day, and got fed up with the basses because they weren't producing enough sound," she said. "He told them, 'Gentlemen, you must think of yourselves as a great organ ... and you must swell!'"

That was also an era of fantastic parties, Faridany said, especially ones thrown by San Francisco socialite Noel Sullivan at his Carmel Valley estate, to which she tagged-along with her mother.

But while the festival in those days was fun, it was much more formal than now — "hideously formal," she said. "I was an usher for many years in my teens, and the audiences always got dressed up, and so did we," she said. "I enjoyed parading up and down the aisles in fancy ball dresses."

Bored with high school, Faridany got herself into college after her junior year at Carmel High. That, and a subsequent marriage to Edward Faridany, took her away from the Monterey Peninsula for nearly two decades, including 14 years living in England.

When the marriage ended in divorce, she returned home. "It was my mother who told me that the Bach Festival was looking for an administrator — but I didn't even know what an administrator was," Faridany said from the porch of her Carmel Valley home as her horse, Flea, placidly grazed in a paddock below. "Well, after I got the job, I found out they did absolutely everything."

That included helping the festival find a new conductor after the legendary Sandor Salgo decided to retire in 1990. "That was a critical time for the festival, because Salgo lived in Palo Alto and had a home in Carmel and was around all the time and knew just about everybody in town," Read recalled. "When he left, the festival would have lost a lot of local connections, except for the fact that Nana was here."

Her first effort was to get legendary conductor Roger Norrington to take the job. And he did — but had to back out suddenly because of illness. So Faridany and the board of directors started scouting for other candidates, a search that led to Weil.

"When he came from Germany for his interview, I picked him up at the airport, and I couldn't believe it when he started speaking to me in flawless, vernacular English," she said. "I asked him, 'Where did you learn to speak such perfect English?' and he said, 'I went to high school in Fresno.'"

The one-time foreign exchange student was enthusiastic about the Carmel conducting job, and he made a great impression on the search committee. Looking back on how he was hired, Weil gives Faridany the credit. "I owe everything I have here to her," he told The Pine Cone.

In 1997, Faridany's job running the Bach Fest was suddenly divided in two, with much of her responsibility assigned to a new position, Managing Director. When she heard the news of what amounted to a demotion — after what she regarded as an especially successful season — she was stunned.

"I could hardly move," Faridany said. "I burst into tears and ran from the room, and drove home howling."

The succeeding years were difficult, as a succession of managing directors came and went, and as the Bach Fest was forced into an itinerant existence by the remodel of Sunset Center. The festival's finances also took a severe hit during the economic downturn that followed the 9-11 terrorist attacks. But still, she looks back on her 20 years with the festival as "a magical time in my life."

At the end of last year's fest, Weil paid tribute to her from the Sunset Center stage, and at the closing concert tenor Sanford Sylvan sang an aria especially for Faridany, who was sitting in the audience.

Since retiring, she has been concentrating on her medical care. She beat breast cancer, but now has to fight an aggressive form of the illness in her colon.

"I'm getting all these fantastic new treatments," she said. "I don't know if I have six months to live or not."

Also, last February, she married a lifelong friend, Larry Crapo, who is a professor of medicine at Stanford, with whom she spends her days happily. Painting has become a new passion. And during this summer's festival, she'll be contributing pieces to The Pine Cone, assessing the performances from the point of view of an audience member — a very well informed audience member.

Meanwhile, on the stage and in the rehearsal halls of Sunset Center, her absence is keenly felt by some of the musicians who relied on her for so long.

"I miss her terribly — especially her laugh," said Wallfisch.

"I had a crush on her from the very beginning," said Read. "And I still do."

Inge Kessler

I grew up in the town in Germany where Bach had been the church organist (the original church and organ are still there) so I was very happy in 1967 when I came to America and discovered beautiful Carmel with its wonderful Bach Festival.

I have lived here ever since and would be most happy to meet all your real estate needs in my position as realtor with Prudential California Realty at 7th Avenue and Dolores Street in Carmel. And while my office is in Carmel, I serve the entire midcoast, from Big Sur to Carmel Highlands to Soquel (and Salinas too!).

Bach Fest director moves from the pit to center stage

BY DAVID MILLER

UNLIKE HIS predecessor, Willem Wijnbergen, who was brought in from the outside, the new managing director of the Carmel Bach Festival, Jesse Read, has risen to the post through the ranks.

In fact, in spite of his new duties, Read will continue playing first bassoon in the Festival Orchestra, a job he has had for 28 years. And he emphatically does not see his new function as a stepping stone to a career in arts administration, nor is it one toward which he has had ambitions: "They asked me to consider becoming managing director and I said yes, provided I could still play."

There are obvious advantages for a new festival director to have working relationships with regular performers, including high profile musicians Elizabeth Wallfisch, concertmaster, and Bruno Weil, conductor.

Less obvious to an outside observer, but equally important, are the contacts Read has cultivated with non-performers such as board president Jack Buffington, office staff Elizabeth Pasquelli, Karma Simons and Erin Sullivan, and numerous community supporters of the festival. He was also close to retired Nana Faridany, who retired last summer as artistic administrator, and former chorale director Bruce Lamott.

"Bruce was a great musician and a great friend. He was like the San Francisco ambassador to the festival. I would like to cultivate contacts in San Francisco and try to fill the gap left by Bruce," Read said.

And while he is an accomplished player, composer and conductor, Read is no stranger to the field of arts administration. In Carmel, he has run the Festival Recital Series for 15 years, and for the last eight years he has worked as director of the School of Music of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver.

J.S. Bach: Musical genius from a ruined childhood

By DAVID MILLER

THE MAN whose musical genius is celebrated at the Carmel Bach Festival, and who inspired generations of other great composers, has a reputation for having been a dour, serious person who worked hard all the time and didn't laugh much.

While we will never know how much laughter there was in the Bach household for the simple reason that laughter leaves no record of itself, we do know that certain well documented events of his childhood would have made any one of us into a humorless person, if not outright depressed.

Think of it: In 1695, young Johann Sebastian lost his mother, then his father remarried within a few months, only to die soon after. Bach was, at the age of 10, left in the care of a stepmother whom he had only just met.

Even for the 17th century — when serious illness routinely carried people off while their families watched helplessly, waiting for antibiotics to be invented and invoking the Will of God — this was serious stuff.

Perhaps inevitably, the situation with the stepmother didn't work out and the 10-year-old was soon bundled off to live with his brother, Johann Christoph, then 24 and just married.

Johann Christoph, like virtually the whole family, was in the music business, making a living playing, singing and composing in the service of a church, duke, or town.

This big brother became Bach's harpsichord and composition teacher and, surely in an effort to keep his pupil from outgrowing his instruction too quickly, did not allow the youngster to study a manuscript containing pieces by several then-famous composers. Johann Sebastian tried to get around this rule by copying the forbidden pieces by moonlight over several months. Of course his disobedience was punished and the copy destroyed, which must have been heartbreaking, yet another assault on a normal childhood.

Childhood ended

By the time J. S. Bach was 15, whatever childhood he had was over. He moved to Lüneburg in the north of Germany to sing in the Matins Choir, first as a boy soprano, then as a tenor. It must have been clear to him even then that his whole life would be music, whatever form it might take: singing, fiddling, playing keyboards, teaching, arranging and composing.

He was, at 15, a hardworking, professional, underpaid musician, and would remain so for the rest of his life, moving from one North German town to another, following the work.

Bach made his music in the service of orthodox Lutheranism, which was rather high-church with elaborate music, as opposed to the then-fashionable Pietism, in which music played a much smaller role.

Pietism, a bit like present-day Charismatic Christianity, with its emphasis on a personal relationship to God, may not have gone as far as altar calls and speaking in tongues, but it was of that general tendency.

Lutheran Orthodoxy — a direct descendant of Martin Luther's break with the Catholic Church in 1521 — was Bach's faith, and it went for solemnity and glory in the service of God, and, above all, more music. Did he adhere to the faith because that's where the work was?

On the contrary, Bach evidently was completely sincere, and, lucky man, never seems to have had doubts.

It is well documented that Bach didn't suffer fools gladly. He hated having to teach Latin and music to unruly teenagers, and he regularly refused to do so, to the repeated distress of his employers. He also couldn't bear inferior musicians, and in a story on which all biographers agree, once took off his wig and threw it at an incompetent harpsichordist!

He sometimes showed an indifference to the rules, as when he asked for, and got, a month off from Arnstadt to go to Lübeck and hear the Danish composer and organist Buxtehude, and showed up back at work four months later, not even having written to let his boss know.

We know how important Bach's music is, but in his day, he was unfavorably compared to Telemann and Kuhnau, and many others who are now completely forgotten.

Despite all of this, Bach was not a revolutionary. He accepted his calling and his station. He set himself the task of making his faith audible, and succeeded to an extent that is still not completely known.

His music speaks strongly to our secular age, meaning even more than it meant to the devout Lutherans of 1750 Leipzig. Who knows what comfort and inspiration people will draw from him in the future. •

68th season July 16, Read feels he has inherited a "beautiful tradition, a treasure that needs nurturing" and thinks his director's role as one of "respectful stewardship." Still, for someone who knows the past as well as he does (for instance, he well remembers the colorful tenure of conductor Sandor Salgo), his gaze is firmly on the future. "I don't want to look back."

Read also has strong feelings about the importance of fund-raising to make growth possible. "An arts administrator shouldn't make grandiose plans and then go out looking for the money to pay for them. The right way is the other way around: Organize solid funding, and then get creative about the programming."

To this end, he has many new ideas about raising money, the most visible being a trip to Tuscany. On May 14, five musicians known to Bach Fest audiences, including Read, plus 20 sponsors, traveled to Cortuna for a week of rehearsals and concerts. The reaction to this initiative, which launched the fest's "Angel's Fund" has been "extremely positive," and the hope is to repeat it every year.

Another concrete change in the running of the festival will be to do the major programming (for instance, the choice of the B-minor Mass and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony for this year's festival) in five-year periods.

"In the past, the big pieces were chosen after each festival for the next year. Now we basically know what we will do through 2010," Read said.

The new Bach Fest director comes from a family of musicians. His 92-year-old aunt still performs ragtime piano, and his mother was a piano teacher. He is one of three brothers, all professional musicians. In the mid-'80s, Read spent time in Hollywood playing film scores. (His bassoon can be heard on the soundtracks of "Big," "Die Hard," and "Throw Mama from the Train," among others). He has also written music for a series of children's videos and has conducted orchestra concerts in Vancouver.

If Read is a musical polymath, so are many of the regular players of the Carmel Bach Festival. Wallfisch, Roger Cole and Doug McNames, for example, all have mastered baroque and modern versions of their instruments. "I don't know what other festival has four cellists who also play viola da gamba, and a flutist who also plays traverso."

This expert switching of styles, sometimes in the same concert, has long been a feature of the Carmel Bach Festival, and it is a feature Read plans to maintain. "Where else but Carmel can you hear Bach and Stravinsky played stylistically on the same program by the same players? We simply have great musicians who can cope wonderfully with a variety of styles. I want my directorship to be respectful of that tradition."
