Teen evacuates all the way to Carmel Valley

By MARY BROWNFIELD

‘THIS WEEK has been pretty hectic,’ said 15-year-old New Orleans resident Nicholas Freeman, who lost almost everything he owns when he fled the wrath of Hurricane Katrina a few days before it struck last Monday.

His former home is in the toxic floodwaters that are slowly receding, and he arrived in Carmel Valley Saturday to live with his dad, step-mother and her two children.

He hopes to start classes as a junior at Carmel High School Friday.

With the hurricane brewing, Freeman grabbed two days’ worth of clothes and evacuated with his girlfriend, Megan, and her family to a farm one-and-a-half hours away near Lake Charles, La.

‘We all assumed we’d be back in no time at all, and everything would be fine,’ he said. ‘And then Sunday it turned into a Category 5, and then the power went out, and the whole week was miserable.’

They used a generator to run a television and a refrigerator as 100 mph winds blew around them.

‘We went out on the back patio and were watching the wind,’ he said. ‘We could see huge pine trees across the field collapsing like dominoes and fence posts flying into the air and shooting into the ground.’

As soon as the skies quieted, Megan’s family headed for Florida.

With the family home in New Orleans underwater and probably destroyed, his mother thought it would be best for Nicholas to join his dad, Greg Freeman, in Carmel Valley.

‘Nick got one of the last seats on a flight out of Lake Charles Saturday,’ Greg Freeman said.

‘My girlfriend is all the way in Florida, and I miss her a lot,’ Nicholas said. ‘I lost everything except two days’ worth of clothes that were all dirty, and I got separated from my mom and my stepdad and my dog.’

He bought some clothes and hopes to get a

Coming soon: Live music in a restaurant near you

By MARY BROWNFIELD

RESTAURANTS AND bars can begin hosting live music next month, according to the Carmel City Council. After making one final change to the much-massaged ordinance, members voted 4-1 to adopt it Tuesday. The new law is set to take effect Oct. 6 and will expire in three years. It overturns a 1939 ban on live music, enacted when ‘honky tonks’ were considered a nuisance.

In order for live musicians to play in bars and restaurants downtown and in outlying hotels, business owners must obtain a permit from the city. The law requires each applicant to submit a noise management plan identifying all ‘noise-sensitive uses’ within 200 feet, such as homes and libraries, and determine how to keep noise levels below 45-55 db, depending on the location of the business. An acoustical evaluation must be prepared, and live music can only be performed between noon to 10 p.m., unless those hours are further restricted by the planning commission when it approves the permit. A deejay spinning recorded music would be subject to the same hours and standards.

Although the council last month approved a 55 db-limit for noise inside a home adjacent to a venue, councilman Mike Cunningham successfully campaigned to lower it to 40 db Tuesday. He argued that imposing 45 db at the property line of a hotel in a neighborhood while setting a higher limit inside an apartment above a downtown restaurant would be ‘logically inconsistent.’

‘Everyone in this room thinks live music would make Carmel a more enjoyable place to be,’ he said. ‘The tough part is deciding how it should be limited to make sure there’s a balance between the interests of people who are attending versus those who are overhearing it. We want this to succeed.’

Three members of the public — Carmel Youth Center music director Kim Edmundson, chamber of commerce CEO Monta Potter and Mulligan’s Pub owner Albert Steele — encouraged the council to pass the law. They said businesses would strive to make it work and ensure the music would not be too loud, as excessive volume would likely drive patrons away.

Three judges slam ADA litigant

By PAUL MILLER

THE MAN who sued hundreds of California restaurants, motels and wineries for alleged ADA violations, including numerous businesses in the Monterey Peninsula, must be starting to realize his easy money days are over.

This week, a Santa Barbara County Superior Court Judge declared Jarek Molski a ‘vexatious litigant’ in state court. Citing a pattern of lawsuits that ‘defied credulity,’ Judge Zel Canter ordered Molski and his San Francisco attorney, Thomas Frankovich, to obtain permission from the chief judge of any county’s Superior Court before filing any new lawsuits there.

Perhaps more significantly, in the last few weeks, federal judges in Los Angeles and San Jose ruled that Molski also lacked ‘standing’ to file some of his suits, because he only visited the businesses once before suing them and wasn’t likely to be a customer again.

Unless he can convince an appeals court to take his side, the triple rulings could put Molski and Frankovich out of business,

P.G. Fire contract with city delayed

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A PROPOSAL to pay $90,000 to Pacific Grove Fire Department to help run Carmel Fire was delayed this week because city council members had unanswered questions about how the arrangement would work, city administrator Rich Guillen said Tuesday.

The council had been set to vote on the contract that would have P.G. Fire Chief Andrew Miller and his staff involved in daily operations at CFD, but the item was pulled from the Sept. 6 agenda without discussion.

The fire department has lacked a chief since Bill Hill retired in 2001. The city contracted with C.V. Fire Chief Sidney Reade to oversee the agency for a few years before putting it under the control of police chief George Rawson in July 2004.

Honoring the past by reenacting it

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE HORRORS of World War II combat — so graphically illustrated in films such as Steven Spielberg’s ‘Saving Private Ryan’ — will be played out among the abandoned barracks and dusty fields of Fort Ord Sept. 10. Thankfully, like the movie, the event will only be a reenactment.

‘I think it’s compelling that this is happening in our own backyard,’ said Stephanie Regevig, executive director of the Fort Ord Alumni Association, which is cosponsoring the event. ‘I went to last year’s event, and I had never experienced anything quite like it. Everything was so authentic. It was a really amazing experience.’

The reenacting is done by the World War II Research and Preservation Society, a California-based nonprofit committed to keeping alive the memory of the soldiers who fought in the global conflict. About 150 participants, each donning vintage heavy wool uniforms once worn by actual American, British and German soldiers, will recreate the battle

Monterey County performs disaster drill

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE MONTEREY County Health Department will hold a mock disaster drill Sept. 19.

The drill will simulate a case in which someone has fallen into an abandoned well. It will take place in the Ryan Ranch area, where a mock well will be created.

Friday, Sept. 9, at 9 a.m., Don Chapin and workers from his construction company will drill a 30-foot hole to be used in the exercise. The work will be at 10 Ryan Ranch Road and should take about 30 minutes to create.

During the drill, a "dummy" will be thrown down the created well, and rescue personnel will be lowered into the hole to retrieve it.

The rescue team will practice heat and oxygen delivery, and carbon dioxide and oxygen monitoring, among other things.

The drill is part of the Monterey County environmental health department's efforts to safeguard the public from the dangers posed by abandoned wells.

The department was awarded grant funding from the California State Department of Water Resources to find and map out abandoned wells as well as conduct safety drills and increase public awareness of the dangers of wells.

Carmel Art Board will review and vote on the winning designs. Once selected, the artists will receive a blank canvas and instructions for completing their masterpieces, which will be painted in acrylic. Banners must be completed by Nov. 18 so they are ready to hang for the holidays.

Sketches should be submitted to Carmel City Hall, attn: Christie Miller, P.O. Box CC, Carmel, CA 93921, by Sept. 30. Anyone with questions should call Eleen Auvil at (831) 624-1052 or Belinda Holliday at (831) 624-3756.

Art association kicks off monthly exhibit with reception for painters

Raccoons attack dog in Hatton backyard, play Santa on Dolores

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PRINCETON WAS out for his final break of the night when a raccoon attacked him in his Hatton Fields yard late last month. Longtime residents Maggie and Webster Downer said their Lhasa Apso mix escaped with a cut nose and two scratched legs, but he is their third dog to have a violent run-in with a raccoon.

"You can't imagine the screaming and yelling," said Maggie Downer, who grabbed her walking stick and ran out to help her 88-year-old husband separate the raccoon from their dog Aug. 23.

Pound puppy Princeton was recovering in the care of his owners the following night. They opted not to take him to the vet.

Raccoons are not infrequent visitors to the Downers' yard, which backs up to a forest. The couple has removed wood piles that became raccoon hangouts and tried to make their yard inhospitable, but the creatures still trespass.

"We have flood lights, but they don't care whether there are lights or not," she said.

The first attack in their yard 30 years ago involved their poodle and a mob of raccoons the neighbor had been feeding. "The dog ran up to scare the raccoons, and they got him and were going to kill him," she said. Webster Downer started kicking the raccoons, "and one of them grabbed his leg and held onto him like an ear of corn," she said.

The next attack occurred years later and involved their grandson's dog.

Downer said they had to kick at the raccoon to keep it from coming into their house after the dog.

Downtown attacks

Dolores Street resident Joffa Kerr notified Carmel police Aug. 8 that an adult raccoon with three babies attacked her Scottish terrier, Muffy, while the Kerrs were walking the dog on Dolores Street around 11 p.m. Aug. 6.

"They stopped because they saw some baby raccoons in a tree, and then all of a sudden the adult raccoon ran out after them and attacked their dog," said Cindi Mitchell, Carmel's animal control officer.

Mitchell said raccoons tend to be fiercely protective and are particularly active late at night. The Kerrs were carrying an umbrella while they walked, which Mitchell advises, and used it and their feet to force the raccoon off Muffy. The raccoon ran away, but only after bloodying their little dog's muzzle. They took her to the emergency veterinary hospital at Ryan Ranch for treatment, and the dog is healing while undergoing a 30-day quarantine.

"At first you're in awe of seeing young raccoons, and then it clicks in that where there's young, there's mom," Mitchell said. "Sometimes, it's going to happen so fast like that."

Last fall and winter, several attacks occurred in yards and on city streets, some resulting in injuries not only to the dogs, but to their owners.

Mitchell advised dog walkers and others to back away whenever they encounter raccoons. She said she's still hunting for an effective deterrent to fend the creatures off when necessary.

"I'm hoping that they'll come up with something," she said. "They would make a lot of money."

This week, Mitchell said another Dolores Street resident returned home Monday to find a raccoon had apparently come down the chimney and tracked soot throughout his home. The raccoon was gone and nothing was damaged, but it left a mess, she said.

She advised him to screen the chimney to keep raccoons, possums, cats and other wildlife out.

"We're seeing more and more squirrels back in our town, and they also love to get into chimneys and crawl spaces," she said.

Mitchell advised residents with questions or concerns to call her at (831) 624-6403 and also suggested reading "Wild Neighbors: The Humane Approach to Living with Wildlife," published by the Humane Society of the United States and available at Harrison Memorial Library.

THE HIGHLY APPRECIATED HOME

If you are married and you face more than $500,000 in taxable gains from the sale of your personal residence ($250,000 if you are single), you're probably wondering what happened to the sure-fire shelter from any taxation on those gains.

There is, however, a shelter. It requires carefully planning and a few years of careful execution, but since we're talking about potentially saving tens or even hundreds of thousands of dollars, it's worth careful consideration. Here's an oversimplified version of the strategy. (Consult with your real estate and tax advisors for a far fuller explanation.)

First, either refinance or take out the largest possible home equity loan on the home you wish to sell. With at least a portion of the loan proceeds, purchase your next personal residence and move into it. Then rent out your existing residence, and continue renting it for at least a year. You may choose to do nothing further, but you can, if you choose, later exchange that first residence into other like-kind properties, creating an investment portfolio that truly suits your personal plans and wishes.

There's a bit more, but we'll save it for another column. Meantime, the moral of this story is that you should carefully plan out financial future with your real estate professional and tax advisor. It will pay big dividends to do so! So call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.mauureenmason.com.

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

Man's home becomes transients' hideaway

SUNDAY, AUGUST 28

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Responded to a peace disturbance at an inn at San Carlos and Fourth at 0100 hours. Contacted a 20-year-old female suspect and her boyfriend, who had been involved in a physical domestic dispute. The boyfriend had visible injuries to his face area and claimed she battered him. She was identified by her Washington Driver License. She was arrested for battering her boyfriend.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Cellphone found on Ocean Avenue.

Carmel area: A 26-year-old male suspect was arrested on Rio Road for public intoxication at 0409 hours after he became belligerent and refused to leave the Chevron station after being asked to do so.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female came to the station to report an acquaintance had been harassing her and leaving pictures on her car at her residence. She did not have any proof that it was he. She stated that she thinks he watches her at her house. She asked that he be contacted and advised of the possible consequences of his actions. She was also given the sheriff's phone number, since her Ocean Avenue residence is in the county area.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male stated that his former partner was in violation of a court order (visitation rights). He indicated he has visitation every other Sunday. A copy of the order was not available. Given that the former partner lives in the county on San Marcos Street, officer contacted Monterey County Sheriff's Office to have the assigned beat unit call and speak to the subject.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Hit-and-run collision on Ocean Avenue.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject reported that a male came into an Ocean Avenue store and began to look around. He asked if they sold a "minute repeater" watch. He was told that the store could get them if ordered. They sell for $200,000. He then left and went in the direction of the business' sister store. He then looked through the store and made it a point to look at the security systems. He then asked the security guard what time the shifts were and how many people worked at the store. The male then left in the company of two females and another male. The person felt the store was being cased and called police. An area check met with negative results. Male described as 18 to 25 years old.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a medical emergency on Santa Rita. At scene, crews assisted ambulance

MIIS celebrates 50 years of breaking cultural barriers

By KELLY NIX

WHEN THE Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies humbly opened its doors in 1955, its fewer than a dozen students had the option of studying two languages — French and German.

But 50 years on, the graduate school, later renamed Monterey Institute of International Studies, offers instruction in eight tongues and a host of international specialties to its approximately 750-member student body.

“We’ve had students from every country in the world,” said Steven J. Baker, MIIS’ president since 2003.

On Friday, the school, founded by Reimsen Bird of Carmel, will begin celebrating its golden anniversary with a convocation to honor four longtime staff and faculty members who have made outstanding contributions to MIIS. About 1,100 students, faculty, staff will attend the convocation at the Monterey Conference Center.

Bird, along with Gaspard Weiss, a former French government official, and Dwight Morrow Jr., a former American diplomat, opened the school as a way to create cross-cultural understanding. Bird died in 1971.

Included in the programs MIIS offers are international policy studies, translation and interpretation, and international business.

Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud, who studied French at the school in the 1950s, served on MIIS’ board of trustees from 1995 to 2000.

“It’s one of a kind as a graduate school,” said McCloud, who plans to attend Friday’s event.

Although 50 years old is merely an adolescent in the world of higher education, it’s important for MIIS, Baker said.

“It provides us an opportunity to visit where we came from and how it’s relevant today,” he said.

MIIS student Peter Fordos, 30, from Slovakia, said that being exposed to so many different students and cultures at MIIS is invaluable in itself.

“It’s such a historical event,” said Fordos of MIIS’ anniversary. “I think that it’s a huge step not only for the school but the students here.”

MIIS’ founders hoped that by enlightening students on the importance of cross-cultural understanding, it would deter international conflicts such as the first two world wars.

The school still carries on that philosophy. The school has a Center for Nonproliferation Studies, formed in 1989 to curb the spread of weapons of mass destruction.

Despite its outstanding national and international reputation, MIIS is still mysterious to local residents, who often confuse it with the Defense Language Institute, a military institution.

“It is a school that does not recruit students from the area,” Baker said. “We prepare people for global careers that are by and large outside the Monterey Peninsula.”

While Baker said he doesn’t expect the student body to exceed 1,000, he said MIIS does have a plan for growth.

Specifically, he said, the school would like to enlist students from less represented countries, like those in Africa, for instance.

Those receiving honorary degrees at Friday’s ceremony are professors Ovidio Fuente and Stephen Garrett, staff member Peter Grothe, and retired professor Elizabeth Trahan.

“We are using the convocation to reward the people who have made it possible to get us where we are today,” Baker said.

In June, MIIS announced it would be affiliated with Middlebury College, a liberal arts college in Vermont. The move will help MIIS shore up its finances after a post-Sept. 11, 2001, drop in enrollment, especially among students from other countries.

MIIS will continue to celebrate its 50th anniversary through 2006, with panel discussions, seminars and social events.

Flanders town hall planned

CARMEL MAYOR Sue McCloud announced this week that the city council will host a town hall meeting in city hall Friday, Sept. 16, at 4 p.m. to hear comments on the proposed sale of Flanders Mansion.

She said no decisions would be made at the meeting, but everyone who is interested in the future of the historic mansion, as well as the city’s financial situation, is invited to comment.

The Carmel Planning Commission is currently reviewing the EIR and the potential sale. See the story on page 10A.

CHIEF

The city currently pays PGFD $20,000 for technical assistance from Miller, but that contract is set to expire Sept. 17. Saying he could not adequately run both agencies on his own, Rawson, who lacks firefighting experience, proposed increasing Miller's involvement and pay. The $90,000 price tag would still be lower than the salary of an in-house chief, which Rawson said would run $155,000 to $165,000.

Guillen said several council members wanted a thorough breakdown of the administrative tasks Miller and his staff would be handling so they could consider contracting for some or all of them.

"We could have had the answers at the meeting, but I'd rather take the time and really think this through and present a complete report to the council," Guillen said. "We will definitely have to bring it back at the October meeting. We don't want to keep our neighbors in P.G. waiting and waiting on this issue."

At the Sept. 6 council meeting, former councilwoman Barbara Livingston said the city should hire its own fire chief.

"It has been our time-honored tradition to have such a person on whom residents and business people can depend to protect our city and our property from devastating fires, and to direct the operations and the personnel of our fire department," she said.

She wondered how much Miller would be able to help Carmel in the case of a Peninsula-wide disaster. She said she hopes Carmel firefighters will be trained to eventually manage their department "and minimize our financial commitment to Pacific Grove."

Firefighters MOU delayed

The council had also been set Tuesday to approve Carmel firefighters' contract with the city, but Guillen delayed that vote since the Carmel Firefighters Association has not yet ratified the agreement. Their contract expired June 30.

According to Guillen's staff report, the new one-year agreement would include a 1 percent raise, a pay increase for paid-call firefighters working on an office of emergency services strike team, an increase from 12 hours to 24 hours of sick leave accrued monthly, a bump in the uniform allowance from $35 to $50 per month, a cap on the accrual of compensatory time and an outline of the amounts employees pay for health benefits.

The council can not adopt the contract until the CFA ratifies it, according to Guillen. "It's just a process issue," he said.

Meanwhile, managers and general employees represented by the Laborers International Union of North America remain without contracts, as do Carmel police officers.

Bigger project sails through while modest plan stirs up neighborhood

By CHRIS COUNTS

TWO NEW home proposals went before the Carmel Valley Land Use Advisory Committee Sept. 6 and, in a surprising twist, the one that drew the most criticism was the one that doesn't involve removing 66 oak trees.

LUAC members — often cast in the roles of watchdogs against Carmel Valley development — found themselves defending a proposal by Mark and Therese Mahady to build a one-story, 2,903-square-foot home and a detached 600-square-foot guest house at 344 El Caminito Road.

"This is a legal lot of record," explained Janet Brennan, LUAC chair. "The topographical map indicates this is the appropriate place for the house. The architecture blends in with the environment. The house is small when compared with the 6,000- and 7,000-square-foot homes we often consider. I support the project."

Even Carmel Valley Association President Glenn Robinson, an outspoken critic of development, endorsed the plan.

"Given the McMansions that are going up around Carmel Valley, this is a very modest house," he said. "I think it's a very beautiful house."

Neighbors, though, said the project will blight their view and ruin their privacy.

"There are no houses on the ridge line," pleaded neighbor Nancy Mayer. "The house will look right down on our backyards."

The Mahadys maintained the house would be located on the property's most logical building site. Robinson agreed, calling the site "the only reasonable flat spot on the property. I would approve the project just the way it is."

Neighbors also objected to the Mahadys' plan for accessing their property, suggesting a lower elevation route that Robinson claimed was recently illegally graded and would soon come under the scrutiny of Monterey County code enforcement officials.

After a contentious debate, LUAC members voted 3-2 to delay making a recommendation on the project until a site visit could be made and a 17-foot pole erected to gauge the home's effect on the viewshed of adjacent homeowners. It will consider the item again Sept. 19.

66 oaks and no opposition

While the Mahadys encountered heavy resistance to their plans, a project submitted by John and Margaretta Caouette at 5481 Covey Ct. sailed past the LUAC. The Caouettes are asking to build a 7,600-square-foot home with an attached three-car garage and guesthouse on a heavily wooded lot, removing 66 oaks in the process. The would-be builders maintained that many of the trees were diseased and dying, and had to be removed.

The LUAC voted 5-0 to recommend approval of the project but urged the Caouettes to reduce the height of chimneys, make an effort to save as much native vegetation as possible and utilize more subtle outdoor lighting.

Lengthy Flanders EIR debate: Is it a park or a building?

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL Planning Commission's review of the lengthy environmental impact report on the sale of Flanders Mansion continued Wednesday and should culminate at another special meeting set for 2 p.m. Sept. 14.

The city council, which has made selling the historic mansion one of its top priorities, is set to make a final decision on its fate the following Thursday.

After more than two more hours of public testimony, the planning commission this week debated whether the mansion, purchased by the city in 1972, is a park.

On land zoned as "improved parkland," the mansion could legally be used as a single-family residence, offices or lodging, but the city council intends to condition its sale with a restriction that it be used as a home, according to the EIR.

If it is now a park, it could still be sold, according to principal planner Brian Roseth, but the sale would follow a different process.

The city council would have to adopt a "resolution of public interest or convenience," and then hold a protest hearing. If protests were received, the council could overrule them with a two-thirds majority vote and proceed with the sale. If the council does not overrule the protests, the matter would be put on the ballot.

If it's not a park, the council could proceed with the sale without a public vote unless it voluntarily called for one.

Former Monterey City Attorney Bill Connors, who has experience selling city-owned historic property, was hired to help city attorney Don Freeman handle the Flanders sale.

Connors concluded that since the mansion has never been called a park or used as a park, it should not be considered a park.

"The only evidence that the city ever intended it to become a park is the zoning designation applied to it," though that zoning allows for several other uses, Connors wrote in a memo to the commission.

At the hearing Wednesday, he said he combed through files of city documents and found no indication the mansion was intended to be a park. Since the 15-acre property and mansion were bought for $275,000 33 years ago, councils over the years have considered selling it, he said.

But several residents, including attorney Skip Lloyd, objected to that analysis, saying the mansion has always been part of Mission Trail park and should be treated as such.

"I'm having a hard time wrapping my mind around whether the land adjacent to the mansion is parkland or not," chairman Bill Strid said, adding that he has a "hard time justifying" the idea that it's not. Other commissioners showed irritation at Connors' conclusion the house is not a park when the zoning map shows it as parkland.

Some speakers condemned the potential sale as a shortsighted means to raise money, which the city council has said is needed for capital projects elsewhere in town. Joyce Stevens said the sale would create an inholding, interfere with trail use and negatively impact the adjacent native plant garden.

Some Hatton Road residents said they want the mansion used only as a home, regardless of whether it's sold or leased.

EIR fit, unfit

Martin Road resident Alexander Crosby said the EIR does a thorough job of reviewing the impacts of the proposed sale.

"I think it would be most difficult to get a more complete EIR than the one before you," said Crosby, whose wife testified earlier that many residents support the city's efforts to sell the house. "I don't think you could get better compliance with the spirit and intent of CEQA."

But Melanie Billig, president of the Flanders Foundation, condemned the study and said it lacks adequate discussion of the financial goals of the project as well as strong conditions for protecting the mansion, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. "I want to tell you on behalf of our organization that we don't believe the EIR is accurate," she said. The foundation wants the mansion to remain under city ownership.

The EIR, prepared at a cost of more than $100,000, recommends dozens of mitigation measures to offset a litany of potential impacts ranging in severity and defines a lengthy list of "conditions of sale" aimed at protecting the mansion if it is leased or sold.

The commission is expected to make several recommendations regarding the EIR's adequacy and the eventual fate of Flanders when it meets again Sept. 14.

Galante Vineyards' 'Days of Wine & Roses'

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

IN BLAKE Edward's 1962 film, "Days of Wine and Roses," Jack Lemmon seduces Lee Remick into a sexy cocktail culture that soon overpowers them both. Guests of Carmel Valley's Galante Vineyards' Annual Days of Wine & Roses are sure to be seduced (but not in a gritty, unforgiving way like the film) by the vineyard's stellar cabs and glorious roses.

It's long been a tradition to plant roses in the vineyards to serve as a warning sign for disease. When the roses are beginning to show signs of fungal or insect disease, the vineyard workers know it is time to treat the grapevines to protect them.

Today, some of the best gardens belong to wineries, and an increasing number of vineyard visitors are just as interested in what is growing beyond the vines as what is fermenting inside the cellars.

And the best thing about the Annual Days of Wine & Roses is that, after admiring the blooms and smelling the roses, guests can indulge their senses with a tour of the winery and caves, barrel tasting, an outdoor luncheon and stomping of the grapes, followed with Galante's traditional rose petal foot soak to round out a wonderful afternoon of pre-fall olfactory excesses.

Find yourself a designated driver, forget about your shoes and come join the festivities Saturday, Sept. 10, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Galante Vineyards, 18181 Cachagua Road in Carmel Valley. $68 per person (advance reservations required).

Jazz in the redwoods to benefit Big Sur's historic library

By CHRIS COUNTS

LONGTIME Big Sur resident John Batz's backyard sculpture garden, which is set among a grove of redwoods on the edge of the Big Sur River, is typically a quiet and solemn place. But the garden will come alive Saturday, Sept. 10, with the sounds of the city when a trio of jazz musicians — including pianist Dick Whittington — jam among the trees to raise money for the Friends of the Big Sur Library.

"It's gorgeous place for a concert," said John Larmour, a longtime Friends of the Big Sur Library board member. "It's like a cathedral with its tall trees, and it's so peaceful and beautiful with river going by."

To find the concert venue, which is usually not open to the public, stop at the Ripplewood Resort, about 24 miles south of Carmel on Highway 1. Signs will be posted giving directions.

The event will offer a silent auction featuring an overnight stay at the Ventana Inn, dinner for two at a wide variety of Big Sur restaurants, original artwork and even a massage from the Esalen Institute. Tickets are $60 each, including a picnic lunch and refreshments. The festivities will start at 2 p.m. For more information, call (831) 667-2375.

The Big Sur Library has come a long way since the days when books were trekked to homesteaders by horseback. Yet even in the 21st century, the library exhibits a rustic and improvised charm that no doubt would have suited Big Sur's first settlers.

"It's one of the few meeting spots in Big Sur," explained Larmour. "You can see anybody you want to see there."

On a coast where natural beauty and human resourcefulness have peacefully coexisted for more than a century, the library is a remarkable synthesis.

In the early years of the 20th century, books were packed into Big Sur along the old Coast Trail by Anne Hadden, Monterey County's first official librarian, who was affectionately known as the "librarian on horseback."

From 1931 until 1958, the library was located in the same building as the Big Sur post office. When the post office moved from Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park to a new location near the Big Sur River Inn, the library traveled with it.

In the winter that followed the Molera Fire of 1972, a devastating mudslide wiped out the post office and library. Two years later, the library found a new home when a tiny trailer popped up along Highway 1 next to the Ripplewood Resort. In 1987, Lucille Packard purchased a doublewide trailer, allowing the fledging library to greatly expand its collection.

Against the backdrop of majestic redwoods and an oak-studded hillside, it seemed reasonable to library volunteers that the makeshift library should blend in with its natural surroundings. The Friends of the Library raised additional funds for an addition and beautification project, which began in 2003 and hasn't stopped yet.

Screened by trellises covered with morning glory and jasmine and surrounded by hedges and a grassy lawn, the library is a little slice of book lovers' heaven. "It feels wonderful to offer this service to the Big Sur community," said Eby Wold, a Friends of the Big Sur Library board member for two decades and the library manager for the past year. "People of all ages use the library. We have mothers bringing their small children in here. It's great to see."

The Big Sur Library is a branch of the Monterey County Free Library system. It's open Mondays and Wednesdays from noon to 6 p.m., and Fridays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Council revokes Inn for Seniors water deal it OK'd in June

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FOLLOWING A brief discussion — and no comments from property owner Dr. Ron Chaplan or developer John Mandurrigo — the Carmel City Council voted 4-1 Tuesday to rescind a deal it approved this summer to accept water credits from the defunct Carmel Inn for Seniors in exchange for allowing Chaplan to build three condos but no apartments in the old building. According to the city's general plan, a redevelopment featuring condos must include a matching number of rental apartments.

Burdened with a property he has said he's been trying to sell for more than two years, Chaplan had proposed transferring 42 water credits to the city, which could then pass them to an apartment project to be built elsewhere in the city. The swap would allow him to turn the San Carlos Street senior home into three upscale condos, keeping the building intact and ensuring adequate off-street parking.

The council voted 3-2 to accept the deal in June but decided last month to reconsider that move after city administrator Rich Guillen warned it would violate city laws, including the general plan's apartment requirement and a municipal code rule that at least a quarter of the residences in any multifamily development with three or more units be small — between 400 and 650 square feet. He also said nonconformities involving parking and the building's size would remain.

Councilman Gerard Rose strenuously objected to the reconsideration in August and repeated his opposition Sept. 6 to what he called "the most ill-considered measure I've seen before council."

"To make it virtually impossible to make use of this property is bad city policy," he said. "It's also bad city policy for the city to change its mind, as it's done in this case, and I would request that city council members reject this very, very unfortunate motion."

"We were making a huge accommodation that wasn't consistent with the general plan," countered councilman Mike Cunningham, who voted against the deal in June along with Erik Bethel. "And the only justification for that was that the building involved was clearly one worth saving."

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac regretted her initial yes-vote and speculated the council was greedy for the water.

"The property owner should be required to follow the same rules and guidelines in the general plan that anyone else would have to follow," she said.

"When this beautiful old building is torn down, and this project collapses and that property remains unused and unusable for an extended period of time, remember what you did tonight," Rose told the rest of the council before the vote.

No members of the public commented on the matter, and the council voted 4-1 to rescind the deal.

Was Shakespeare just a talented front man?

By DEBORAH SHARP

PACIFIC REPERTORY has opened its end-of-season Shakespeare Festival with "The Beard of Avon," a comedy that tackles the question scholars have long debated: Was Shakespeare capable of writing the plays attributed to him? After all, doubters point out, Will Shaksper of Stratford came from humble origins and was barely educated. How could he have gained the knowledge, insight and experience to write 37 plays and 154 sonnets of such beauty and depth?

Among the court of Queen Elizabeth I there were other, far more likely, candidates for the authorship of the work said to be Shakespeare's. Most notable was the 17th Earl of Oxford, Edward de Vere, an aristocrat who lived a pretty dissolute life when he wasn't writing. But it was considered beneath a courtier to write for the theater, so someone of de Vere's status would have needed a front man, a "beard" in Elizabethan terms. Enter Will Shaksper, a stage-struck farmer determined to make it in the theater.

Playwright Amy Freed was a Pulitzer Prize finalist for this wonderfully written play, which hypothesizes how it was that Shaksper become linked with de Vere. Her theory goes far beyond Shaksper merely lending his stage name to the work of the earl. It plays marital battle by going to see a traveling troupe of actors swagger their way through a low comedy featuring a long sausage hanging from the leading man's waist. Will is entranced, invites the actors home for supper and unburdens his stage-struck soul to them in more blank verse. By the end of the scene he's been lured away to London. When he auditions as a spear-carrier for actors Heminge and Condel (played well by Michael Jacobs and Christopher Paul Hart), the London professionals perk up their ears when Will begins to speak to the imaginary head impaled on his spear in lines that bring to mind Hamlet's "Alas, poor Yorick" speech. Carroll plays Shaksper with all the wide-eyed eagerness of a newcomer eager to please and not yet aware of his own skill.

Edward de Vere (Stephen Moorer) is very aware of his ability to pen a play. He's got a trunk full of scripts to prove it; all he needs is a way to produce them anonymously. Moorer, an advocate of the theory that de Vere was "Shakespeare," clearly relishes the role. In the stylish black wig de Vere uses to cover his baldness, Moorer, with his usual verve, makes de Vere an unabashed rake. But at least he recognizes talent when he hears it at Heminge's theater where an early version of "Antony and Cleopatra" is being broadly rehearsed (with hanging sausage), and Will is trying to inject it with worthier images. Before long de Vere and Heminge with the idea of what it really takes to write worthy stuff — and does so with wit, faced-paced scenes and extremely clever dialogue. And, once again, PacRep takes a gem of a play and brings it vividly alive in its intimate Circle Theatre.

for the historic town of Aachen, Germany, in October 1943. That bloody conflict, which left more than 5,000 dead on each side, marked the beginning of the final allied push into the heartland of Germany.

One of the highlights of last year's inaugural reenactment was an appearance of a tank used in "Saving Private Ryan." Altered to look like a German Tiger, the tank was actually a 1943 Russian model. The group hoped to use it at this year's event, but the old warhorse had maintenance issues.

"Old tanks are easy to work on, but they take time and manpower," said Jim Camarillo of the reenactment society. "We just ran out of time."

Camarillo, by the way, owns an old Russian tank. Imagine explaining that one to your wife.

"If you're ever looking for a way to get rid of some disposable income, get yourself an old Russian tank," he joked.

In addition to recreating the sights of the bloody conflict, the reenactment group is dedicated to replicating the actual sounds of the battle. So this weekend's event will feature lots of things that go bang.

"We will have machine guns that can't shoot bullets, but they sound louder than regular guns," explained Camarillo, who became interested in World War II history when his father returned from the war with a handful of German medals. "They shoot propane and oxygen."

This year's reenactment will also include two German anti-aircraft guns. "They only shoot blanks, but boy, are they loud," Camarillo said.

The society stages about five or six battles a year, usually at Camp Roberts in San Luis Obispo County.

"We just signed a contract with Warner obvious delight and skill.

And what of Elizabeth's court? They appear, played by actors doing double duty as stage folk and aristocrats. Christopher Paul Hart plays Francis Bacon; Katie O'Bryan, Lady Lettice; Geoff Mutch, Francis Walsingham; Michael Jacobs, Lord Burleigh; and David Mendelsohn, the Earl of Derby. Together they form a team of sophisticates dressed in black pouring over the newly published works of "Shakespeare" and fawning over their queen, played by Emily Jordan, who is alternately charming and imperious.

She plays the queen as spiritedly as she does Anne, particularly when she goes to Heminge's theater to see her own play, "The Taming of the Shrew," performed. When Shaksper takes the play's weak ending and strengthens it with one of his inspired speeches, the queen can't help but be delighted, but pronounces Shaksper "in water most enormously hot."

John Rousseau's simple sets and Michael Palumbo's lighting work well in the small space of the Circle Theatre, and Tandy Messenger's Elizabethan costumes are sumptuous. Whether or not you enjoy Shakespeare, "The Beard of Avon" is well worth seeing for its wit, ingenuity and extremely fine acting. The play runs through Oct. 9.

devise "Shakespeare" as the stage name for Will and the pen name under which Heminge will produce de Vere's plays. Will is in awe of his luck.

Back in Stratford, Anne decides to go to London in search of Will. Emily Jordan brings much spirit to the part, and when Anne gets fitted out by an obliging prostitute and goes to seduce her own, unknowing husband, Jordan has a real romp. Things get even more spirited when de Vere, coming to deliver some play drafts to Will, walks in on them and promptly seduces Anne away from Will. The consequences are pivotal to the play: De Vere discovers a twinge of conscience at stealing his front's whore, and Will discovers he's jealous of the whore and de Vere. He has feelings for both.

The ramifications of these surprising feelings are used by playwright Freed to flesh out her ingenious theory. In the next scene, de Vere appeals to Will to help him write something he is incapable of: a sonnet to his lover. Together the two collaborate as equals, de Vere contributing his quick wit and Will contributing his sensitive images to produce one of "Shakespeare's" sonnets. Carroll and Moorer play the scene with

Dryer lint sparks house fire

By MARY BROWNFIELD

LINT BEHIND a clothes dryer caught fire and caused $80,000 damage to a Pebble Beach home Monday afternoon, according to Cypress Fire Captain Dan Frost.

The fire in the laundry room of the home on Mestres Drive — just one block from the firehouse — was substantial before its two female occupants, whom Frost would not identify, noticed the flames and called 911.

"The house has a peaked roof, and the smoke and heat went really high," Frost said. "By the time they even smelled smoke, the fire was well established."

The women, whose home apparently had no smoke detectors, managed to escape as three fire engines, an ambulance and a dozen firefighters responded to their call for help. Two thermal imagers, which Frost described as "the best thing since sliced bread for the fire department," were used to locate hot spots and make sure no one else was inside.

"It burned out the electrical for the whole house, and we tore up the walls putting the fire out," he said. "The smoke damage is extensive."

Crews spent the next four hours mopping up and hauling burnt debris outside before declaring the home uninhabitable due to the destroyed electrical system.

The fire prompted dual warnings from Frost. "People need to at least once a year clean the vent hose out and clean behind the dryer, because that lint that accumulates can be very flammable," he said.

"And even today, people have houses without any smoke detectors," he said. "The fire department believes that is unbelievable. We give smoke detectors away free, and if people need help, we'll even put them up for them."

At a minimum, detectors should be installed in every bedroom and adjacent hallway. "I have five in my house, and I have a three-bedroom house," Frost said.

Pebble Beach residents can pick up free smoke detectors at the community services district office at 3101 Forest Lake Road, and residents of the Cypress Fire Protection District, which also covers part of Pebble Beach as well as portions of Carmel and Monterey, can obtain them at the Rio Road or Carmel Hill fire stations.

For more information, call the Pebble Beach Community Services District at (831) 373-1274, Cypress Fire's Rio Road station at (831) 624-4511 or the Carmel Hill station at (831) 625-6415.

As chambers get involved in politics, some business owners object

By KELLY NIX

WHEN THE Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce decided to take a stand on a hot local water issue, it irked Craig and Rebecca Riddell, longtime chamber members.

"I joined the chamber of commerce to hopefully support my business," said Craig Riddell, co-owner of Riddell & Riddell Advertising. "I didn't think I was joining a political party."

The Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce recently announced it's opposing Measure W, the November ballot initiative that would authorize the Monterey Peninsula Management District to spend up to $550,000 studying a public takeover of California American Water's local system.

Riddell isn't alone in his criticism of the chamber of commerce. Two people at Wednesday's Pacific Grove City Council meeting spoke out against the chamber for taking political sides.

But their complaints might go unheeded.

That's because many of the state's smaller chambers of commerce, such as Pacific Grove, are getting involved in politics, said Sara Lee, spokeswoman for the California Chamber of Commerce.

"There are dozens of local chambers across the state that are very active politically," Lee said.

The P.G. chamber's president, Moe Ammar, said the chamber in June mailed an annual survey to its roughly 500 members. About 100 members responded and 77 percent of them favored the chamber becoming more involved in political advocacy, he said.

"We have always been politically active when it impacts business," said Ammar, who's been with the chamber for 13 years.

A Cal Am takeover might interfere with developing a new long-term water supply for the Peninsula, Ammar said. And having a reliable water supply is important to the city's numerous restaurants and hotels, he said.

Since he's been with the chamber, it's endorsed measures and political candidates, including the former council member Michelle Knight, who represents the city on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board of directors, Ammar said.

A recent $6,000 donation from Cal Am to the chamber did not influence the board's decision to oppose Measure W, he added. "That commitment was made a year and a half ago, before the issue was even on the table."

The chamber and Riddell & Riddell Advertising recently ended their nine-year working relationship, Ammar said.

The state chamber, which does a lot of lobbying at the state level, frequently gets calls from smaller chambers for advice on how to become more politically active, Lee said.

"If the chamber board does not get involved and make those decisions, what is the function of the board?" Ammar asked.

Riddell said he's worried that the decisions made by the board could reflect on him and his business.

"As a member, it could potentially affect the way people see me," he said.

P.G. golf fees, clubhouse hours and liquor sales ruffle feathers

By KELLY NIX

NEIGHBORS OF Pacific Grove's golf course jam-packed Wednesday's city council meeting to object to extended hours and liquor sales at the clubhouse restaurant.

With most golfers apparently resigned to the idea, council members voted to raise the golf fees at the 18-hole course an average of 11 percent to offset a shortfall in the city's golf fund.

"We will still be in the black at the end of this year," said City Manager James Colangelo said. "But without an increase, by the end of 2007 the fund would be in the red."

Non-resident golfers will now pay $35 for 18 holes Monday through Thursday and $40 on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. There will also be a limit on Saturday play for holders of some annual golf cards. Price increases for golf cards will range from 33 to more than 100 percent, depending on the type of card. The rising costs of maintaining the course, which has stunning ocean views, and the fact that green fees hadn't been raised in four years, prompted the increase.

Resident Teri Cotham said the city should generally spend less rather than trying to pass it on to golfers.

The council also agreed to impose a $10 fee for many who now receive free golf, such as the city council members themselves. But middle and high school golf teams will still receive free golf for most of the year.

Although Colangelo said it's difficult to predict how much revenue the city would take in annually by raising the fees, he said it would likely be in the $300,000-$400,000 range.

It costs about $2 million a year to run the golf course, Colangelo said.

With its stunning oceanfront location and its great views of the Pacific Grove lighthouse, the P.G. golf course is known as a great value on the Monterey Peninsula. But it's getting more expensive.

Many residents spoke out sharply at city staff's recommendation to extend the operating hours of the clubhouse restaurant and to offer a full liquor license. Currently, there are restrictions on the use of the restaurant and it only allows beer and wine sales.

The staff also recommended changing the use permit of the clubhouse to raise money for the construction of the facility, which was originally expected to be about $3 million and is now estimated to cost about $4 million.

Several residents, such as Sally Aberg, said that the city should wait at least six months to a year to determine how the new clubhouse would affect the neighborhood before it changes the use permit for the clubhouse.

Many were concerned that noise and other problems could arise if restrictions were lifted at the clubhouse.

About 80,000 rounds of golf a year are played at Pacific Grove Golf Links, widely considered an affordable alternative to many golf courses on the Monterey Peninsula.

Council members voted to postpone making a decision on changing the use permit of the clubhouse until Colangelo can gather more feedback from residents about the proposal.

ADA

a local attorney familiar with the Americans with Disabilities Act said.

"There's no doubt he'll appeal, because he has to. But when he gets to the higher courts, the danger is that an adverse ruling will affect not only him, but lots of other ADA litigants as well," said the attorney, who did not want to be identified because he represents a client who has been sued by Molski.

Canter's ruling came on top of a similar declaration last December by a federal judge, Edward Rafeedie, that Molski and Frankovich had filed hundreds of abusive lawsuits at the United States District Court in Los Angeles, targeting small businesses with ADA claims, and that the judge's obligation to "protect the public" compelled him to put roadblocks in Molski's way.

Judge Rafeedie also observed that Molski's tactics undermined public confidence in the ADA itself, and added impetus to calls for it to be amended or repealed.

The very next day after suffering that big loss in federal court, Molski sued the Solvang restaurant that refused to settle with him in Santa Barbara County.

When the restaurant's attorney, Robert Appert, asked the Santa Barbara judge to also dismiss the suit and declare Molski a vexatious litigant, the judge called a hearing on the issue. During the hearing, he seemed sympathetic to Molski's attorney.

But in a blistering ruling issued Sept. 1, Canter declared that, "Jarek Molski falls squarely within the definition of a vexatious litigant," because of his "pattern of lawsuits" and "questionable damage claims."

Canter added even more details to the remarkable record of success Molski and Frankovich have enjoyed:

"Mr. Molski went to work visiting Central Coast vineyards in 2003," the judge wrote. "He was injured at three different vineyards on February 8, which resulted in $17,500 in settlements ... between May 17 and May 24, 2003, he sustained injuries at 10 vineyards [which he settled] for $136,6000 ... and on the single day of May 24, 2003, he allegedly sustained four separate injuries at four separate vineyards and collected more than $54,600 in settlement."

Not allowed to sue at all

The U.S. Constitution limits federal lawsuits to cases where there is an "actual controversy." Two federal judges have recently thrown Molski suits out of court because he sued businesses he had only visited once. Even if he won his suits, the judges concluded, the victory wouldn't gain him anything because he wasn't likely to visit the businesses again.

"In order to establish an injury in fact sufficient to confer standing to pursue injunctive relief, the plaintiff must demonstrate a likelihood of substantial future injury," wrote judge Stephen V. Wilson of the U.S. District Court in San Jose. Because Molski sued a gas station in Camarillo, but lived more than 100 miles away, in Woodland Hills, and because his "professed intent to return lacked credulity," the judge dismissed the suit Aug. 24.

Likewise, Judge Rafeedie dismissed Molski's suit against the Mandarin Touch Restaurant in Solvang, because he concluded that Molski had only gone there to establish grounds for suing it, and that he was unlikely to return.

"The court has concluded that Molski's ADA claim should be dismissed because he lacks standing to pursue the matter," Rafeedie wrote.

All good things in moderation

By Steve Leonard

Monterey Peninsula residents are the leaders in wise water use over almost every major community in the United States.

Despite community efforts – and near-record rainfall early in the year – the need to conserve remains with us.

Why? Nearly 70 percent of local water comes from the Carmel River or wells that draw from the Carmel Valley Aquifer. These have been the principal sources of water on the Peninsula for over a century.

In 1995, the State of California issued an order mandating an immediate 20 percent reduction in water usage and requiring California American Water find a permanent replacement water supply for the Carmel Valley Aquifer. Failure to comply could result in steep fines to Peninsula water users.

To further complicate matters, the Carmel River is home to the Central Coast California Steelhead Trout and the California Red Legged Frog, both of which are listed as threatened under the Federal Endangered Species Act.

Every gallon of water that stays in the river reduces the need for water rationing and improves survival chances for these and other threatened species.

Using Water Wisely

California American Water has demonstrated its commitment in this area over the last several years by sponsoring a variety of water conservation programs that stress the importance of maximizing our water resources to protect the environment.

In addition, the California American Water team works with volunteer groups to rescue and relocate Steelhead Trout along the river.

California American Water has distributed more than 43,000 free water saving devices to help Peninsula residents reduce indoor and outdoor water consumption.

Working with our customers, we have seen a 30 percent reduction in the volume of water drawn from the Carmel River and a 37 percent decline in total per capita water usage since 2001.

Steve Leonard is Vice President & Manager of California American Water

That is an impressive track record, and we salute our customers for their hard work. However, the only way we can "guarantee" enough water for everyone and protect the Carmel River is by creating a new water supply.

That's what California American Water is doing with the Coastal Water Project, a proposed desalination plant.

A Sustainable Water Supply

After years of research, careful analysis and input by an independent team of experts, California American Water has identified a cost-effective, sustainable and environmentally friendly solution to the water challenge on the Monterey Peninsula.

The Coastal Water Project is the right project at the right time and solves what Peninsula residents realize is a very serious problem. It is in its early stages, but progress happens every day.

Until we have solved Monterey's water shortage, moderation remains the key to ensuring a stable water supply. The more we work together to stay within strict water limits, the greater the benefits to you, our wildlife and our environment. We thank you for your support.

If you would like additional water conservation information, free water saving devices or details, please email us at monterey@amwater.com or call (888) 237-1333.

been able to locate are scattered across the country.

"Sometimes I feel like I'm in shock, and it hasn't really hit me yet, and other times I feel like it's not that big a deal and that things are going to turn out pretty well," he said. "But I have to be realistic about things, and that's pretty hard to do. I keep hoping things will get better in New Orleans and I'll be going back soon, but I don't think that's going to happen."

But he likes the Monterey Peninsula and is very happy to have a home in Carmel Valley. His father's family, which includes a 15-year-old, trumpet-playing stepbrother, Conor Jones, and a 13-year-old stepsister, Madeline Jones, are thrilled to have him.

"I've been trying to get him to come out and live with me for years, but he's been pretty happy with his friends and his life in New Orleans," his father said. "Not to make the hurricane seem like a good thing, but because of it, he came out here, so that's a good thing."

"We're all extremely close," he added.

Nicholas said Thursday that he's looking forward to studying at Carmel High, and he hopes to attend medical school after he graduates, though he's learned from this ordeal that no one can really anticipate what will be happening two years from now.

"If I'm here for a long time and eventually get attached to the school here and meet a bunch of people I really like, I might stay," he said. Of course, he hopes his girlfriend will come to visit.

'We Need Underwear'

Facing an unprecedented level of need following the hurricane, Peninsula residents and businesses are pursuing a wide range of ways to help.

■ The Carmel City Council voted Tuesday to donate $10,000 in tax dollars to the disaster relief effort and challenged other Peninsula cities and the county to follow suit.

■ Carmel High School's Campus Key Club, affiliated with Kiwanis, kicked off a money drive Tuesday, according to teacher and club advisor Jeff Wright. "We're doing a one-week blitz, and have 20 cans out, posters all over campus and kids encouraging each other to give," he said. The money will go to the American Red Cross. Other Carmel public schools are also undertaking campaigns.

■ The Carmel chapter of the Red Cross continues to train and dispatch disaster-relief volunteers, including several set to leave early Friday morning for Mobile, Ala. For more information, call (831) 624-6921. To donate money — the most-needed resource — visit www.redcross.org or call (800) HELP NOW.

■ The Pebble Beach Company announced Sept. 2 it would match employee donations toward disaster relief. For every $1 employees give, the company will contribute $2, up to $30,000.

■ Del Monte Properties on Lincoln north of Sixth in Carmel, Steinbeck Real Estate — ERA at 1770 N. Main St. in Salinas, and Village Interiors at 19 E. Carmel Valley Road are gathering new socks, underwear, T-shirts and bras for immediate shipping to churches housing storm victims, according to Bonnie Fosso. "250,000 people were displaced to Texas," she said. "If you give each person three pairs, you're looking at 750,000 pairs of underwear, which the stores are not going to have in stock." Anyone interested in donating or assisting the drive should call (831) 659-3644 or visit www.weneedunderwear.com.

■ The Carmel-by-the-Sea Rotary Club is gathering funds. Checks should be made out to Carmel Rotary, designated "Hurricane Katrina Relief," and sent to P.O. Box 774, Carmel, CA 93921. For more information, contact Steve McAlpine at (831) 626-5545.

■ Carmen Ajan and a crew of volunteers are handing out Mardi Gras beads in exchange for cash donations. For more information or to volunteer, call (831) 622-0784.

C.V. fire gets three new captains after intense competition

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CARMEL VALLEY Fire Protection District promoted three firefighters to captains following a grueling assessment this summer. Jim McCabe and Mike Vout, both 20-plus-year veterans who came to C.V. Fire as volunteers, and paramedic/engineer Eric Ulwelling received their captain's badges July 28 and were honored at a celebration Aug. 27.

Carmel Valley Fire Chief Sidney Reade and the fire department's board of directors voted to promote the three men on the recommendation of Scott Kenley, an outside contractor hired to test and evaluate the five firefighters competing for the jobs, according to C.V. Fire Division Chief Miles Schuler.

Kenley assembled a panel of one captain and five fire chiefs from neighboring departments, and together they watched and analyzed the five candidates as they handled various tasks.

To demonstrate their management skills, they had to confront another captain and discuss how best to handle day-to-day operations, according to Schuler.

When it came to fighting fires, they showed how they would respond to three computer-simulated scenarios: a fire blazing out the window of a duplex, a conflagration in a wooded canyon lined with houses, and flames and smoke pouring from the cargo hold of a semi.

Each prospective captain had to demonstrate how he would organize the attack on the fire, including establishing the incident command center and communicating with the crews, Schuler said.

They took a written exam, participated in oral interviews, wrote an incident report for a structure fire and oversaw a crew meeting. It was up to candidates to plan their day accordingly so they could finish all of the tasks on time.

"They were exhausted when they were done," Schuler said. "All five passed the test, but unfortunately, we could only promote three."

As Kenley recommended after the June 30 assessment,

How not to look like a fool or be dead

MOST OF questions being asked in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina are in the, "What on earth were they thinking?" category. Why wasn't the city evacuated? Why weren't food, water and medicine stockpiled at the Superdome? What happened to the New Orleans police force? Why weren't more troops standing by for immediate deployment? The city's peril was obvious, and the dire consequences of a direct hit from a hurricane had been foretold for decades. Many people suffered and died for their own, and others', appalling lack of foresight.

The area where we live is also not without its obvious perils. And so we urge our readers, in the aftermath of this great national disaster, to consider how prepared they are to deal with an emergency right here at home.

■ EARTHQUAKE — If a major earthquake strikes the Monterey Peninsula, blocking roads and destroying hundreds of homes, do not expect help to arrive right away. You must be prepared to subsist on your own for at least 72 hours. That means food, water, basic medical supplies and, if your home falls down, a makeshift place to sleep. At a minimum, you should stockpile a case of bottled water and an ample supply of canned or dried food for each member of your family, and make sure everyone knows where it is. Also, cooking and eating implements, tools, a battery-powered radio and waterproof matches.

■ FIRE — Despite the damp, onshore breezes that usually keep our coastal communities humid and cool in the summer, a wildfire could strike at any time, especially in neighborhoods thick with trees and bushes. Firefighters warn that, unless your home has a defensible space — clear of tall grass or other fire-prone vegetation for at least 30 feet — it may not be possible to save it from a rapidly moving fire.

■ DROUGHT — We have a woefully inadequate water supply — a problem that has been obvious for decades but which our political leaders have only allowed to get worse. And there doesn't seem to be any sense of urgency about solving it. But there should be, because if a severe drought strikes, which it invariably will sooner or later, the impact on the community will be disastrous. Despite this, even as Cal Am Water and the Pajaro/Sunny Mesa Community Services District compete to build a desal plant in Moss Landing, officials seem to think it's fine to take their sweet old time deciding whether a plant should be built at all. So complicated is the permit process for a desal plant — with more than 30 local, state and federal agencies having to give their OK — it's hard to know whom to start lobbying first. But the board of supervisors and the directors of the water management district are a good place to start. Let them know you want something done ASAP about our perilously inadequate water supply.

Econ 101

WE HAVE often used this space to chastise the national news media for misleading the public on matters of national importance. And nowhere has their misinformation done a greater disservice than in the reporting of the runup in gasoline prices in the wake of Hurricane Katrina.

With prices quickly topping $3.50 a gallon in many parts of the country last week as refineries and pipelines shut down across the southeastern United States, the refrain on NBC, in the New York Times and everywhere else was the same: Oil companies are just being greedy. Which they may have been. But a bit of simple economics would have been helpful for people to understand that the alternative to higher prices also isn't very attractive.

Say the country was using 100,000,000 gallons of gasoline a day before the hurricane hit and that, suddenly, the daily supply was cut 20 percent, to 80,000,000 gallons a day. How would this reduced supply be distributed to people in undamaged parts of the country who would presumably want the same amount of gasoline they used before the storm?

Raising the price until they are forced to decide on their own to buy less gas is one way to do it. But it is not the only way. Rationing, a lottery, odd-and-even rotations, curtailing service station hours — all these methods have been tried, along with price controls, during national emergencies in the past. And they all had the same result: long, long lines that forced people to wait hours to buy gas, sometimes only to find that the station ran out before their turn came.

And that's the basic choice. You can either let the price go up, or you can have a shortage. One method favors people who have money but not much time. The other favors people who have time but not much money. There is no perfect solution.

Letters to the Editor

In defense of runoff ban

Dear Editor,

The comments of many local officials quoted in "Mayors: Runoff policy needs common sense" (Sept. 2) perpetuate the unfortunate myth that the State Water Resources Control Board is requiring an unreasonable and unaffordable local effort to protect sensitive marine habitats from polluted urban runoff.

This simply isn't true.

The state water board workshop Aug. 31 in Monterey was a chance to discuss various ways to protect Areas of Special Biological Significance, such as magnificent Carmel Bay, from toxic urban runoff pollution that flows into our coastal waters. At the meeting, we and other conservation groups proposed a plan that would enable each community to fashion its own runoff solution over time using a large toolbox of proven, cost-effective techniques, including catch basins, sand traps, filters and smart standards for new development.

The Central Coast can protect its precious marine habitats, safeguard its $1.8 billion coastal tourism economy and comply with state water quality rules without spending untold millions on boondoggle infrastructure projects, or wasting time on more studies to prove that toxic runoff is bad for marine life and people.

Let's put aside exaggerated rhetoric and work together to preserve for future generations the extraordinary resources that the Central Coast is so lucky to possess.

An armed camp?

Dear Editor,

Is Carmel becoming an armed camp? Shall we be seeing articles that call it "Fort Apache, Carmel?"

Picture this: A private security guard poised in menacing, wide-legged stance, dark glasses, grim-faced, carrying a 9mm pistol in front of a jewelry store. Sound like some crime-ridden city? No. This was the scene at one store on Ocean Avenue on Labor Day in Carmel-by-the-Sea. Tourists and locals alike were aghast to see such a sight.

Will this be our future? Will every jewelry store be permitted to hire their own police force to stand in front of their businesses? Is this the welcome we want to extend to visitors and locals? Is this the kind of image we want to project to the world?

What can be done to remove armed guards from the local business district? Where are the mayor and city council? Where is the planning department?

Carmel has an excellent police department. We do not have a crime-rate that warrants private armed forces on our streets. Private armed forces are inconsistent the civility and charm of Carmel and do not belong in our village.

Jo-Ann Fantino Ruffolo, Carmel

An apology to the mayor

Dear Editor,

This letter is a public apology to Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud, over a comment about her position I made in a smaller local paper. Mayor, I am deeply sorry.

Last Thursday, Sept. 1, I had a meeting with her. During that meeting, I saw a person that cares about our community as much as I do. She also shared something that touched my heart. Since I had to first explain the reason for my vocal problem, she told me a story about how she once worked for a paper company. The president of that company had a problem with his hearing, which also affected his speech. Mayor McCloud had to step in during meetings in which he was required to speak and serve as a translator so everyone could know exactly what he was saying. Some of my friends have had to do the same for me during conversations with others.

I was amazed by her knowledge of pitch canker and oak fungus, both which cause our local trees to die. She is a casual, very friendly person, and by the small size of her office I could tell that her heart must be huge. I encourage other residents to meet her and compliment her on her position as our mayor and a fellow human being.

Our town is small, but local gossip travels from person to person faster than a message by western wire. I have always held the belief not to trust what one says about another until I meet the accused face to face but violated that belief by my comment. I pray our mayor as well as our city council absolves me of my mistake. Since no longer do we have a public stockade for humiliation, I offer this: I volunteer to clean the restrooms at the foot of Ocean Avenue twice daily for a week. I deserve it.

Mayor McCloud, I honor your position, and hope in the future I can count you as one of my friends.

Marsh's 'restful quality'

Dear Editor,

I was both surprised and distressed to read your editorial, "Historic, it isn't" (Aug. 26), stating that Marsh's store in Monterey is said the word "noise" is reportedly derived from the Latin word, "nausea," meaning "disgust, annoyance, discomfort."

Councilman Erik Bethel, who has actively pushed for the law's drafting and passage since it was proposed at a town hall meeting last November, favored no more changes to the version OK'd last month. He argued restaurants would have no interest in "blasting people out of their seats," but said, "Let's just move on."

The council voted 4-1, with councilman Gerard Rose dissenting, to amend the law "to allow live music where alcoholic beverages are sold or served."

"We'll just have to monitor this and see how it goes," McCloud said.

MUSIC

"Musicians no longer work for food," Steele said. "If we do not make money in the restaurant, they will not make money, and the program will implode."

And they may not be sipping wine beside a string quartet, but "the kids are looking forward to it, too," Edmundson said, because they'll be able to walk downtown rather than drive to Monterey to hear musicians.

Mayor Sue McCloud also favored a lower limit, entreating restaurant and bar owners to "make noise unto others as you would have them make noise unto you." After all, she

"an eyesore and a blight" and that it should be "replaced with something attractive to the community and useful to its owners." I couldn't disagree with you more. I have spent many happy hours in the store, admiring the restful quality of the building and its gardens. What's next? Dismantle the adobes? They occupy a lot of valuable real estate and aren't used very often.

C.V. fatal accident

Dear Editor,

Your article regarding the fatal accident on upper Carmel Valley Road in the Aug. 26 Pine Cone was by far the best of all written on the accident. However, although I know it is necessary to be sensitive to the family of the deceased, it might be necessary to follow up at some point. While it is true the car being passed was "going slowly," it was also traveling at a safe speed, because the road is narrow and winding. I believe the highway patrol estimated the speed of the driver who was killed to have been between 75 and 90 mph when passing. I have written to the county administrator, Lew Bauman, asking him to consider lowering the speed limit on Carmel Valley Road east of the village.

When we are teaching our children how to drive, and what things to avoid, these types of accidents are great examples of what not to do. Also, the car that was passed had two people in it, and they were very traumatized by it. I think the article could convey the thought that they were partially at fault, which I guarantee was not the case.

By Margot Petit Nichols

MOLLY BOWHAY (rhymes with Maui), 3, a golden retriever, still thinks she's a pup: She makes visitors to her home welcome by sitting on their laps. Her 70-pound frame doesn't always fit – it more or less engulfs – but Molly is such a love, the lap owners don't mind at all.

We accosted Molly and her dad, Phil, at the top of the Ninth Avenue stairs after watching Molly enjoy the surf and sand of Carmel Beach.

Since Dad and Molly come to the beach at least four times a week together, they're in such good condition neither was winded when they reached the top.

On days Dad is otherwise occupied, Molly joins one of Andee Burleigh's walking groups at the beach to further stay in top shape. Molly also is thrilled to have her friend Susie accompany her on her walks.

All this activity is remarkable, considering Molly was born without hip ball joints. A successful operation, performed by Dr. Rausch, fixed that severe problem, allowing Molly to be the svelte athlete she is.

At home, she plays tug-o-war with Dad and a very frayed rope, keeps company with her blue elephant, whose squeaker is still miraculously intact, or fetches to keep her retriever skills honed to perfection.

This last weekend, her nephew Andy, 17, came down from Lafayette to visit and brought his girlfriend, Piper, with him, which provided two more laps for Molly. Andy's brothers, Matthew, 19, and John, 12, also visit occasionally, as do Molly's other nephews and nieces from Moraga, Melissa, 22, Greg, 19, and Kelly, 17.

So many laps.
So little time.

Council sides with landowners who want to move, add-on

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL City Council came to the rescue of two property owners Tuesday.

Joan Hudson-Miller can pursue a lot-line adjustment for two large parcels and relocate her historic home to one of them, and Chris Rodgers can remodel his house to include a second story.

With her small, 82-year-old home sitting in the middle of two lots at San Carlos and 12th totaling 9,006 square feet, Hudson-Miller proposed moving the historic house 15 feet to the east and two feet to the south and then changing the lot line to create one 4,050-square-foot lot and one 4,950-square-foot lot. The house would occupy the larger of the two, and the other could accommodate a new home.

But the historic resources board voted 2-1 Aug. 16 to deny the proposal. That decision would have required Hudson-Miller to pay for an environmental study on the plan if she opted to continue, but she elected to appeal the HRB's vote to the council Sept. 6.

"The board felt moving it at all would be inconsistent with the Secretary of the Interior's standards, because it would result in a change in the spatial characteristics of the site," planner Sean Conroy said, though an historic preservation consultant said the plans were consistent with the federal standards.

Other than designer Steve Dallas, who said his client agreed with conditions suggested by the city regarding preservation of the old house and conformity with setback requirements, no one commented on the appeal. The council unanimously voted to overturn the historic resources board's ruling, and Hudson-Miller's proposal will next go before the planning commission.

Two stories, not one

Also siding with the applicant who proposed adding a second floor to a Santa Rita Street home, the city council voted Sept. 6 to overturn the design review board's July 27 decision to require Chris Rodgers to keep his house one story.

"Their main concerns were regarding privacy, particularly with the neighbors to the south, and also with the proposal to have a second story at all," Conroy said. "They stated it may be inappropriate in this neighborhood."

But he suggested the mass and bulk of the 406-square-foot second-story addition could be reduced by lowering the plate height and said using obscured glass in the upstairs bathroom and removing or changing the two bedroom windows would reduce privacy impacts.

Carmel Building and Design principal Rob Nicely and designer Chris Sawyer drew the remodel plans to minimize impacts of the second story on nearby neighbors, testified Nicely, who lamented the development of so much conflict among the residents. "A single-story design could be done, but it would be a vastly inferior house," he said, adding that the proposal fits with the neighborhood.

Attorney John Bridges also defended the plans and asked the council to uphold his clients' appeal.

"Anyone who had crawled onto the roof would have seen the access to neighboring structures is extremely limited," councilman Gerard Rose said. "It's not like you can casually look out a window and see any adjoining window. Anyone who got up there would shrug and say, 'No big deal.'"

Council member Mike Cunningham, who, along with Rose, actually did climb onto the roof during a site visit earlier that day, agreed. "The design does a marvelous job of reducing the impacts on adjoining properties," he said, adding that he was not concerned about mass and scale of the second story, either.

The majority of the council agreed, voting 4-1 to overturn the design review board's denial. Mayor Sue McCloud dissented, saying the plans for the second story should be redrawn to reduce its size. The DRB will still have a say over the final design of the home.

CAPTAINS

the board and chief selected McCabe, who began his career with C.V. Fire as a volunteer 27 years ago, and Vout, who also started as a volunteer 23 years ago. Ulwelling, the short-timer of the bunch, initiated his career in 1994 as an emergency medical technician and later trained to become a paramedic. CVFPD hired him as an engineer/paramedic in 1999.

The department, which is responsible for fire protection from Rancho San Carlos Road to Sleepy Hollow and in the Santa Lucia Preserve, has six paid captains, according to Schuler, and the two candidates who were not promoted can still fill shifts as acting captains when needed. Accompanying the new badge is a 10 percent raise, from the upper-level engineer's pay of $5,647 per month to $5,930 per month. The two who didn't get the job this time will also be in good shape next time the department needs a captain.

"Some of these guys hadn't gone through the captain promotion before, so now they'll know what's expected of them," he said. "Or at least, they'll have an idea."

To whom it may concern:

It has been my pleasure to work with Michael Coleman. He is warm, caring, and very easy to communicate with. Michael listens well and has excellent follow-through.

As a long distance buyer, it was imperative to have an agent who was honest, thorough, unbiased, and looked out for my best interest. Michael handled everything for me - he was my eyes and ears. I would trust him to do it again without hesitation.

Michael is a rare find in the real estate world. He is truly the buyer's or seller's unequivocal advocate. He puts self-interest aside and truly works for his client. I highly recommend Michael to anyone looking for an agent.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 2

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vicious dog on Carmel Beach.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Manager of a San Carlos Street liquor store reported a subject at the counter attempting to purchase alcohol possibly using a fake I.D. Officers arrived and contacted the subject using the I.D. The I.D. was an authentic Cabo San Lucas driver license indicating the subject was 21 years old; however, the subject did not appear to be 21. A DMV records check revealed the subject was actually 17 years old. The juvenile stated that when he was in Cabo San Lucas, he obtained the driver license by providing false date-of-birth information. The juvenile's parents were contacted and advised of the situation. They advised they would take care of the problem.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A subject came in to a woman's Dolores Street business to inquire about her identity. Female suspected the subject was a processor employed by her former employer and advised the subject to leave if he was not conducting business in the store. The subject left and entered her former employer's business located across the street. She locked the front door to avoid any further confrontation. The subject returned and slipped a document underneath the front door and left. When she reopened the door, the subject returned and personally served her with documents, interrupting her business with a customer. The subject was rude and acted in a threatening manner, and she suspected her former employer had directed him to do so. The ex-employer stated he didn't use the subject to harass her but to serve subpoenas.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A male suspect, age 24, was issued a citation for driving without a license. The vehicle was towed from San Carlos and Fifth, and stored.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine responded to report of a possible hazmat at Junipero and Ocean. Met with CPD officer and building official. They had determined prior to firefighters' arrival that the source of the call was some liquid poured into a storm drain by some masonry workers. The liquid was water mixed with clay brick dust from the masonry saw they were using. Flushed the system with 700 gallons of water to spread out the clay particles.
