Pitch canker mortality rate just 5 percent, U.C. scientist says

By KELLY NIX

WITH THE Pebble Beach Company's plan for a new golf course and equestrian center headed for a showdown with the California Coastal Commission, a leading expert on the pitch canker affecting Monterey Peninsula pines says the disease has leveled off and the mortality rate for infected trees has turned out to be about 5 percent, far lower than predicted.

Two years ago, the coastal commission's staff, which has made no secret of its dislike of the P.B. Co's. plans, said pitch canker could wipe out 85 percent of the local pine population.

The alarming figure was used to support efforts to protect the pine in all of its native stands or even have it declared an endangered species.

At the time, pitch canker experts said the 85 percent estimate was wrong. Now, they are saying it is grossly out of proportion to reality.

"We don't have any evidence of a high mortality rate on the Monterey Peninsula," said Tom Gordon, a plant pathologist at University of California, Davis and co-chair of the state's pitch canker task force.

Window smashers move from P.B. to Carmel

THE CRIMINALS who committed dozens of acts of vandalism in Del Monte Forest during the past five weeks apparently decided Carmel-by-the-Sea also needed their attention. Last weekend, the rear or side windows of at least 20 vehicles at the south end of town were broken.

Carmel police and Monterey County Sheriff's investigators combined forces to search for the culprits and are offering a $1,500 cash reward — funded by CPD and Del Monte Forest Property Owners — for their arrest and conviction.

"We encourage the public to help us," said Ed Lorenzana, commander of the MCSO's Coastal Station. "I think more than one person doing it, and if that's the case, they probably told other people about their criminal activities, so we're hoping the public calls and gives us information."

Police discovered the latest, extensive vandalism early Nov. 13 after a citi-

Monterey firm gets no-bid CUSD contract

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WALD, RUHNKE & Dost architects will design all the Carmel Unified School District projects slated for construction under the $21.5 million bond overwhelmingly approved by voters last week, the school board decided 3-2 Monday. A seven-person oversight committee will be named to ensure proper use of the money, school district officials said.

Before the vote, CUSD Superintendent Marvin Biasotti recommended hiring WR&D for only some of the design work. Administrators would confer with the firm to determine whether it is qualified to take on the three biggest projects the new bond will pay for: a high-tech library and a theater at the high school, and an environmentally friendly "green" classroom at the Carmel Middle School's native habitat project.

"We're about to spend $21.5 million of the public's money, and I don't want it to be based on assumptions," Biasotti said. "If you collectively think this is the right firm for all these projects, we will proceed."

Board member Ernie Lostrom argued for retaining WR&D, which designed projects funded by the $20 million bond voters approved five years ago. The firm could hire consultants to help with the more elaborate projects.

"If you start shopping architects at this late date, you're opening this up for complete collapse," Lostrom said, due to escalating costs and work delays. "They understand the district's needs, and they've done a good job of keeping us on budget and on time. I think they should be rewarded."

"Not to disparage the wonderful work of Henry's firm, but even if they're fully qualified, might it not be useful to have proposals from other firms just to see what other prospects there are?" asked board member Amy Funt, who headed the bond campaign effort. "It's tantalizing to think what the other proposal would be."

Henry Ruhne defended his firm's ability handle all the district's needs. Half of the 56-

Friends mourn the death of Rippling River "poster lady"

A FEW miles east of Carmel Valley Village, a sign warns motorists to watch out for salamanders crossing the road.

But at a busy intersection in front of the Running Iron restaurant, where numerous wheelchair-bound and elderly residents of the Rippling River county housing project cross Carmel Valley Road, there is no sign asking motorists to pay extra attention.

Saturday, a 53-year-old severely disabled woman, Chrissy Sauer, was struck by an

"It's very frightening," said Helaine Clark, one of Sauer's friends, of the dangers of crossing Carmel Valley Road. "SUVs, big trucks — everybody is in such a big hurry."

As she spoke, brilliant autumn weather out the window made Carmel Valley look like paradise. But the mood at Rippling River was gloomy.

Firehouse move raises little concern among Vista Lobos neighbors

By MARY BROWNFIELD

JUDGING BY the attendance at a community meeting Wednesday night, few Carmel residents object to the fire department's upcoming temporary relocation to the city-owned buildings and parking lot at Torres and Third. Six neighbors arrived to hear a presentation by chief Andrew Miller and shift commander Ian Watts, and only two — a couple with a nearby house for sale — complained.

Emergency workers will move into the complex Dec. 16 and could remain there through June while their Sixth Avenue firehouse undergoes a seismic retrofit. The lot will be closed to public parking, and employees will live in temporary trailers installed at the south end. Existing buildings will contain a day room, kitchen and other amenities, and four temporary garages will protect the ladder truck, engine, rescue vehicle and ambulance from the elements.

"We understand that if we were living in these homes around here, one of the biggest impacts would be noise," Watts said. "We want to make sure we don't just turn on our sirens whenever we want, especially after 10 at night."

'We realize this has got to be an intrusion'

The parking lot will close to the public as soon as new signs are posted, according to Watts, although he did not know exactly when that would be. Most of the major work at the complex will occur in December, as firefighters will need to be operational in the firehouse through Dec. 15, without experiencing any downtime.

"Our goal is to be good neighbors to you," Miller told the residents at the Nov. 16 meeting that also included firefighters, paramedics, EMTs and other city staff. "We realize this has got to be an intrusion into your neighborhood."

He volunteered to be the contact person who would handle any questions or concerns during the relocation and renovation.

"I'm not excited about this at all. Any noise is not acceptable in a residential area. In fact, it's against the law," said William Callahan, who condemned the city for allowing the move. "I don't know what I'm going to do about it, but I'm going to do something about it."

A disgruntled homeowner said she only learned of the fire department's move a few days ago.

The temporary relocation, which received the Carmel City Council's OK in October without any negative comments from the public, is necessary, said Miller.

"Those questions [regarding the approval process] are for city hall, but we can answer questions about what's going to transpire here for the next four to six months, when we're here as a fully functioning fire department," Miller said.

CFD averages two or three calls a day, some not requiring the use of sirens.

"Since we just put our house up for sale, we'll be sending potential buyers down to see you," commented Nancy Callahan. She said she first heard of the move only a few days earlier, when she received a flier about the the meeting.

Miller reminded residents that firefighters, paramedics and EMTs will want to return to their retrofitted building as soon as possible, considering its living quarters are far more comfortable than their temporary digs at Vista Lobos will be.

Carmel Police Cpl. Steve Rana also said any residents with complaints or concerns could call Carmel P.D., located a block away from Vista Lobos, at any time. A dispatcher and officers are awake and on duty 24 hours a day. Miller encouraged people to call him at Carmel Fire at (831) 620-2030 or P.G Fire at (831) 648-3115.

Where'd the sand pile go?

THE CITY'S stockpile of sand — made available to residents who need to sandbag their homes, yards or driveways during heavy winter rains — had to be moved from the Vista Lobos parking lot to make way for the fire department.

Last week, city workers hauled the 10-cubic-yard pile, along with bags and shovels, to a new location behind the Carmel Youth Center off of Torres Street.

The fire department will set up temporary quarters in the Vista Lobos lot and adjacent community buildings for several months while the station on Sixth Avenue undergoes a seismic retrofit. (A public meeting on the relocation will be held Wednesday, Nov. 16, at 7 p.m. in the Vista Lobos meeting room at Torres and Third.)

The sand and bags are for Carmel residents only, public works superintendent Stu Ross said. "We have a problem with contractors who come over and get 50 or 60 of them," for properties outside the city.

County health, city warn restaurants, markets to clean up

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MONTEREY County Health Department has put Carmel restaurants and markets on notice, warning them to stop washing their grease and kitchen debris into storm drains. The disgusting and illegal practice rankled building official Tim Meroney for months, and in September he enlisted county health to help him enforce the rules.

"To put it in a nutshell, all the wastewater that comes out of your building has to go into a sewer system," Meroney said. "The only thing that can go down the storm drain is rainwater."

Meroney and Carmel police officers routinely warned restaurants and markets against washing their kitchen mats and garbage cans in a manner that allowed wastewater to run into storm drains. On several occasions, they found streams of gray grease in the gutters outside downtown businesses.

"The city has to have these things corrected in order to be in compliance with state and federal mandates regarding stormwater," Meroney said. "There are no excuses anymore — nobody can turn their head."

To convince people of that fact, Meroney asked health inspectors to help. He, county environmental health specialist Ismael Chavira and supervisor Susan Rimando found several businesses reportedly violating state laws regulating food service and wastewater discharge.

Chavira issued warning letters to The Cottage restaurant, Il Fornaio, Nielsen Bros.

and Piatti. Meroney said Bruno's Market was also warned. Chavira gave the businesses two weeks to comply.

"We found staining around the storm drains, so either the water from their garbage cans was leaking into storm drains, or there was some washing of the mats from the kitchens," he told The Pine Cone.

Furniture Designs Reach Art Status

Furniture design is a process filled with many considerations. Basic issues such as historical period, or cultural styling, i.e. French Renaissance, Italian Mediterranean, English, or Art Deco as well as issues of symmetry and proportion all need to be carefully considered. I like to look to period designs for my inspiration with one goal in mind, a commitment to accomplishing anything that I create with uncompromising standards. In other words, the design, functionality and structural integrity of any piece of furniture produced is our priority. The testament to our success is how consistently we exceed our clients expectations. Furniture that is beautiful and practical hits the mark and its beauty will endure the test of time. Our furniture will last because we employ time proven, labor intensive joinery methods reminiscent of artisans of old. Our joy is made complete by fulfilling your dreams and the dreams of generations to come. "Timeless quality starts today", is more than just an advertising slogan it's our unwavering commitment to create fine furniture that defies description as well as time.

Carpenter Street pavement fix set, 5 mph slowdown expected

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A NEIGHBORHOOD group's pleas for a lower speed limit on the short stretch of Carpenter Street between Highway 1 and the city limits of Carmel-by-the-Sea have not fallen on deaf ears. Monterey County traffic engineer Neal Thompson said the board of supervisors will consider reducing the posted speed from 35 mph to 30 mph when it meets Jan. 3 at 10:30 a.m. in Salinas.

The Carmel Carpenter Area Association, representing Carmel Woods residents, cited "two blind corners along a downhill grade which gets more extreme just before the second blind corner," a four-way crosswalk at Valley Way, a bus stop and driveways as reasons to make drivers slow down, according to the letter posted on www.carmelcarpenter.com.

The group held a meeting Nov. 12 to hear results of a speed survey conducted by the county, which last studied rates of travel and conditions in the area in 1984.

According to Thompson, the speed survey and physical conditions along Carpenter Street support a drop in the speed limit.

"[The recommendation to reduce the speed limit from 35 mph to 30 mph] is based on the 85th percentile speed which drivers drive at or below, and other conditions that are not readily apparent to the driver, such as inadequate sight distance from the side streets," he said.

A change in speed limit requires a public hearing and adoption of a county ordinance by the county board of supervisors. The board last OK'd changes in the area in July 2002, when it approved additional stop signs at the five-way intersection that includes Camino del Monte and Serra Avenue. The speed limit for drivers taking that route from Carpenter Street is 25 mph.

Road work, too

Vic Lewis, interim maintenance manager for Monterey County Public Works, said work crews will begin filling potholes and repairing damaged areas of Carpenter Street just after Thanksgiving.

"We'll be grinding out and patching the failed areas of the pavement," he said, which will take about a week, depending on the weather. Crews will later return to repaint the fog lines, center stripe, speed limit and other warnings on the pavement.

Rippling River caretaker sues county's housing authority

By KELLY NIX

A FORMER Rippling River caretaker is suing the county housing authority, which owns the subsidized facility, because he said he was a victim of "psychological terror, malice and oppression" and contends the agency made him homeless after firing him.

Charles Ivan King, who worked at the Carmel Valley facility for one year, is suing for wrongful termination, wrongful eviction, intentional infliction of emotional distress and breach of contract.

"I was out on the streets on Thanksgiving day and made homeless by a housing authority for an unjust reason," King said.

The suit, filed Nov. 10, alleges the housing authority evicted him from the apartment he was allowed to live in while he worked at Rippling River.

King said the county agency acted as a "bully" and allowed co-workers to create a hostile workplace by "mobbing" him "in a campaign" of terror, malice and oppression.

"I'm essentially alleging differential treatment," said King, who is black. "There were two caretakers on staff, and the housing authority alleges I didn't do my job."

King said supervisors treated the other caretaker, a white woman, better.

"King believes his termination, while not motivated solely based upon his race as an African American, falls into a category of discrimination based upon differential treatment," his complaint says.

King also alleges one of his supervisors falsely accused him of stealing company property. When he confronted his boss and demanded she retract the allegation, he said he was fired and evicted from his one-bedroom apartment.

King said he could not afford to hire an attorney to pursue the case and is doing the legal work himself. As of Thursday, Nov. 17, he had not yet served the agency with the lawsuit but said he plans to soon.

Mary Jo Zenk, deputy executive director of the housing authority, an agency not linked to the government of Monterey County, wasn't aware of the lawsuit but said the agency receives high marks from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Zenk said the agency received a perfect score on the way it manages its section eight housing in the county.

"We are very proud of our record and our staff," she said.

King worked at Rippling River from September 2003 to September 2004. He was unpaid but was given an apartment on Rippling River property in exchange for at least 10 hours of work per week, he said.

Apart from the irony of being evicted from his apartment on Thanksgiving day by an agency that provides housing, King said the emotional toll it's taken motivated him to file the suit.

"King was forced to become a homeless statistic, a member of the ranks the housing authority is pledged to eradicate," the complaint says.

He hasn't specified how much money he is seeking.

"I'm not trying to get rich," King said. "They have certain laws to adhere to for the Kids swing for the green at First Tee's Peninsula debut

By MARY BROWNFIELD

LAGUNA SECA Golf Ranch became the official Peninsula home of The First Tee of Monterey County Wednesday, when World Golf Hall of Fame member Johnny Miller and PGA/Champions tour pro Jim Thorpe hosted a free golf clinic for kids.

And its first class Nov. 21, open to all kids aged 7 to 17, will represent a significant victory for the nonprofit, which spent years and more than $600,000 trying to initiate a program on the former Fort Ord.

Founded locally by the Monterey Peninsula Foundation, which stages the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am each

River School employs kidpower to fix Carmel riverbed, clean beach

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THEY GOT dirt under their fingernails Thursday and will no doubt have shoes full of sand Saturday. Carmel River School students worked along the banks of the Carmel River Nov. 17, helping new native plants take root, and even more are set to descend on and clean up Carmel Beach Nov. 19.

The native plant restoration work, undertaken by fourth and fifth graders in conjunction with state park rangers, marked the first of three outings this year as River fulfills its role as the nation's first Take Pride in America School.

It received that designation from U.S. Secretary of the Interior Gale Norton in May, when it became affiliated with the nonprofit dedicated to the protection, beautification and enhancement of public lands.

"It's part of our commitment to the Take Pride organization and one of the many things we'll be doing this year to enhance and beautify our local area," River School Principal Jay Marden said. State parks provides the plants, "so we're just giving them the manpower."

Or rather, kidpower. Marden hopes students from every grade, and their parents, will arrive at Carmel Beach at 9 a.m. Nov. 19 ready to don gloves and pick up candy wrappers, cigarette butts, broken frisbees and whatever else doesn't belong on the pristine white sand.

Plenty of volunteers

"People see its value — it's not something I have to build a lot of support for," Marden said.

Walking past some classes Wednesday afternoon, he asked the kids how many were planning to help clean the beach. "A third to a half raised their hands."

They will work from 9 to 10 a.m., starting at the foot of Ocean Avenue, and then finish with a "social" that includes muffins, coffee and juice.

River's outreach efforts also help the school "build relationships with local community groups," Marden said. The families' work will lighten the load for the Carmel Residents Association's monthly beach cleanup, which is set to begin at 10 a.m. in the same area.

moving forward

Thanks to all the Monterey Peninsula residents and organizations that took a stand to defeat Measure W. With your help, our community will continue moving forward to solve the water supply problem the Peninsula faces while preserving the Carmel River and the natural habitat it provides for wildlife.

Defeat of Measure W clears a roadblock for California American Water to continue work on the Coastal Water Project to create a permanent drought-proof water supply for the Monterey Peninsula, today and for future generations.

Special thanks to local organizations that endorsed No on W and played a critical role in its defeat:

LandWatch drops appeal of Spreckles subdivision

LANDWATCH MONTEREY County has dropped the appeal of its lawsuit over a proposed 73-lot housing development on the north end of Spreckles.

LandWatch and the Association of Spreckles residents sued the county after officials last year gave the go ahead for homes to be built on the nearly 100-year-old lots. Monterey County Superior Court Judge Kay Kingsley ruled in the Tanimura's favor last August.

For having the lawsuit dropped, the Tanimura family, which owns the property, will contribute $100,000 to a town improvement fund, grant an expanded permanent agricultural conservation easement and extend the time during which other land near Spreckles remains protected under the Williamson Act. "Our roots are in Spreckles and we share the commitment to preserve the character of the Town," said Gary Tanimura, spokesman for the farming family.

The agreement will allow the family to develop housing plotted on a 1907 map of Spreckles — the same map that created all the rest of the parcels in the former company town.

Attorneys challenging the remaining parcels argued they were invalid because they had never been developed or separately sold. The board of supervisors and the trial court disagreed.

VANDALS

zen walked into the police station to report several damaged cars parked on city streets. Carmel Police Sgt. Mel Mukai and Cpl. Steve Rana found almost two dozen vehicles vandalized along Monte Verde Street between Eighth Avenue and Santa Lucia and on neighboring streets to the east. The vandals struck sometime between 11 p.m. Nov. 12 and 6:45 a.m. Nov. 13.

The destruction followed a long run of vandalism in Pebble Beach, where dozens of residents saw their car and house windows smashed, sometimes more than once. Numerous mailboxes were also destroyed.

Mukai and sheriff's deputies believe the Pebble Beach window-smashers are also to blame for the Carmel crimes.

"The M.O.'s the same, where projectiles are being used, and the driver's side or rear windows have been damaged," Mukai said. In some cases, officers found ball bearings inside the cars, indicating the suspects might have used a slingshot.

And sometime between the evening of Nov. 8 and the morning of Nov. 10, someone threw a porcelain object through the window of a car parked on Carmelo Street near 11th Avenue, according to Mukai, who collected the broken bits for his report Monday. Another victim reported Nov. 9 that someone flung a ball bearing through the window of a car parked on San Carlos Street.

Also, a resident of Dichro Street — outside the city limits off Atherton Road — reported Nov. 13 that the rear window of her GMC Yukon was smashed.

On Saturday night in Pebble Beach, deputies stopped and cited four male teenagers for vandalism and curfew violation after they reportedly drove onto Collins Field, wrecking the turf.

"They had the evidence in the tires," Lorenzana said. "They were vandalizing Pebble Beach property."

But he doesn't know whether they are responsible for the other acts of vandalism.

"We can't make a connection," he said. "That doesn't mean they're not involved, but it doesn't mean they are. They're not officially considered suspects."

Suspect profile

When he announced the $1,500 reward, Lorenzana also released a profile of the suspects compiled by deputy Frank Duenas and asked parents to consider whether their kids might be responsible. According to Duenas, the suspect likely:

- is a male juvenile or adult, 16 to 20 years old;
- resides in Pebble Beach and/or surrounding area, or has friends who do;
- is a student at Pacific Grove High School, Monterey High School, Robert Louis Stevenson School, Carmel High School or Monterey Peninsula College;
- has some knowledge of law enforcement procedures;
- is very familiar with the Del Monte Forest area;
- has access to vehicle(s) or friends who do;
- frequents Del Monte Forest in groups of two or more;
- owns a BB gun or "wrist rocket" type of slingshot;
- possesses Marksman 3/8 steel hunting shot, and
- is frequently out at night, particularly on weekends.

Anyone with information should call Duenas at (831) 647-7702 or the MCSO Crime Tip Line at (888) 833-4847. Carmel police can be reached at (831) 624-6403.

Andrew Molera State Park offers first guided hike of its butterfly grove

By CHRIS COUNTS

THOUSANDS of visitors are arriving in Big Sur, but they're not driving SUVs and RVs down Highway 1. Propelled by little more than their delicate black and orange wings, monarch butterflies are making their annual pilgrimage to a place where their ancestors have wintered for countless generations.

At Andrew Molera State Park — where the Ventana Wildlife Society will host an interpretive butterfly walk Saturday, Nov. 19, at 9 a.m. — the monarchs seek rest and refuge in a cluster of eucalyptus trees that shade an important historic site, the Cooper Cabin.

"It's a popular wintering site," explained Jessica Griffiths, assistant coordinator of the VWS's Big Sur Ornithology Lab, which is located at the state park. "We have a pretty good butterfly population this year."

Griffiths, who will lead the walk, said the VWS and California State Parks have been hesitant in the past to publicize the presence of the butterflies at the Big Sur park for fear the public would love them to death.

"The butterflies are here to rest, and we're trying to help them accomplish that," said Griffiths, who has conducted butterfly counts in Big Sur and in Pacific Grove at the monarch sanctuary. "People need to remember not to get too close to them. They need to conserve energy to last the winter."

To help keep a curious public from getting too close to the butterflies, the grove has been cordoned off with cables and ropes. Griffiths described the Nov. 18 event as a

"She was the sunshine around here," recalled Clark, who has lived at Rippling River for three years. "You've never heard it so quiet. You've never seen it so sad."

Sauer — who was mute and could not walk — was hit by a 2003 Chevy Blazer driven by Joseph DeMaria, 20. According to California Highway Patrol Public Information Officer Richard Richards, DeMaria could face misdemeanor manslaughter charges for failing to yield to a pedestrian in a crosswalk.

Clark said Sauer had lived at Rippling River for nearly three decades, longer than any other resident. "She endeared herself to everybody. Despite her limitations, she always had a smile on her face. She could dance in her wheelchair."

Sauer also possessed a fierce determination and steady resolve that helped her overcome many challenges. According to her brother, Alan Sauer, she fought hard to dispel myths often associated with the disabled.

"She took a lot of abuse in high school because she couldn't communicate in the traditional way," he said. "She had the same problem when she went off to college. They tried to have her removed from the [college] classroom because she was a distraction, but she won [the right to stay]."

Despite her longtime debilitating illness, dystonia, Sauer graduated from Contra Costa Community College in 1972 with an A.A. in library science.

"She was always in the newspaper for breaking some barrier," her brother recalled. "She was very persistent. She didn't want anybody restricting her from participating in something she wanted to do."

When the future of Rippling River hung in balance, she appeared before the Monterey County board of supervisors with a letter that read, "I swear on a mountain of Bibles I will be taken away in handcuffs before I am moved [from Rippling River]."

Joe Hertlein, a Friends of Rippling River board member, called Sauer "the poster lady for saving Rippling River."

Despite her fighting spirit, she also had a sense of fairness. When San Fernando Valley activist Jarek Molski sued 10 local businesses, including the Running Iron, for alleged ADA violations last year, Sauer was quick to defend the popular Carmel Valley watering hole. "Her courage and tenacity were so inspirational to everybody in the village knew who her," added Lewis Leader, a longtime village resident.

A memorial service for Sauer is scheduled at Carmel Valley Community Park Sunday, Nov. 20, at 12:30 p.m. Donations can be made to the Action Council of Monterey County c/o Friends of Rippling River, P.O. Box 815, Carmel Valley, 93924.

P.G. likely to face cutbacks to reverse poor financial state

By KELLY NIX

PACIFIC GROVE will likely face cutbacks to deal with its extremely weak financial condition, Pacific Grove's city manager said this week. That could mean cutting back on city staff and programs.

The results of an audit by Harvey Rose Accountancy Corp. released Nov. 9 revealed the city had only $42,000 in its general fund by June 2004. It should have had millions.

"Before we look at the magnitude of cuts and where they will come from," said city manager Jim Colangelo, "we want to update this report see where we stand now."

The accounting firm presented council members Wednesday with results of its 25-page report, which outlined an audit that covered fiscal year 2001/2002 through fiscal year 2003/2004.

"It's sobering, it's interesting, it's inspiring in a way," because it shows how the city can fix its problems, said councilwoman Lisa Bennett.

"It's common for there to be borrowing," said Roger Mialocq, vice president of Harvey Rose. "But it's not common for a general fund for any city to drop to the point Pacific Grove was at."

Compared to 11 other cities, Pacific Grove ranked last in fiscal strength, the firm reported.

But the good news is Pacific Grove's fiscal situation is reversible, said Mialocq, who didn't think it would take long to bolster the city's coffers.

"I think it's a matter of a few years and you can really turn things around," he said.

But to do that, policies must be established to regulate the city's finances, he said.

For instance, any loans from one account to another should be in writing, limited in duration and have an interest rate attached to them, Mialocq said. And city council members should approve significant financial transactions, he said.

"It's about better management of the money," said Colangelo, who took over as city manager in July.

"It's about presenting clear information so the decision makers have the tools to make those decisions."

Ross Hubbard was city manager from 2000 until this summer.

The city paid Harvey Rose $15,000 for the investigation and will find out next week how much it will pay for the new audit, Colangelo said.

BUTTERFLIES

“pilot nature walk” and an “experiment.”

The eucalyptus grove provides an ideal over-wintering habitat for the butterflies. Its microclimate offers just the right combination of humidity, sunlight and temperature.

Even the shape of the grove is well suited for monarchs.

“Butterflies prefer groves in the shape of an amphitheater,” Griffiths explained. “It forms a protective barrier from the wind.”

The 4,800-acre park is located 20 miles south of Carmel. Hikers are asked to meet at the ornithology lab. Signs will be posted. The walk to the grove is less than a mile. Bring sturdy walking shoes.

BIG SUR POET CHEATS DEATH, RELEASES NEW BOOK, AND GETS HIS FIRST TATTOO

By CHRIS COUNTS

IT HAS been said that acclaim only comes to poets in death. Well, perhaps the Grim Reaper thinks Ric Masten is already dead, because the Big Sur poet is receiving a lion's share of acclaim these days.

In this case, the Grim Reaper should be cut a little slack because Masten — who will celebrate the release of his new book, "Words and One-Liners, Take Two," with a reading at Morgan's Coffee House in Monterey Wed-nesday, Nov. 23 at 8 p.m. — was diagnosed with terminal prostate cancer seven years ago. Even some of Masten's acquaintances think he must have already died. But after an interview this week with Carmel's Poet Laureate, it's clear Masten is alive and well.

 Ric Masten received a proclamation from Mayor Sue McCloud in Nov. 2000 honoring him as Carmel's official "troubadour and people's poet."

ingly frenetic pace. "This is a culture where everyone knows they're going to die, but too few believe it, because if they did, they wouldn't treat each other the way they do," said Masten, 76.

He said he experienced a rebirth the day he received his diagnosis of terminal cancer.

"That's when I started living," recalled Masten. "I began to understand my own poems. I look back on my life, and I realize that I spent most of it getting ready for what I'm doing now."

He writes poems about his experience with cancer that teeter on the brink of hilarity and heartbreak. While Masten certainly isn't the first person to make the connection between humor and healing, he has turned it into a virtual art form. As word of his work has spread, he has become a celebrity on the cancer support group circuit. Masten is often introduced to audiences as the "Poet Laureate of Prostate Cancer."

"Last June I was invited to read my poems at a national conference," he said. "I may be the only poet ever who has been paid to speak at a medical conference."

He spends a great deal of his time on the road, which seems to suit him fine. "Today I gave a reading at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut," Masten said Wednesday, checking his appointment book. "Tomorrow I'm doing a cancer support group in Marina del Rey. On Saturday, I'm doing a cancer support group in Westlake, followed by a poetry reading in Echo Park that evening. On Sunday, I'm giving a talk at a Universalist Church ..."

And so it goes. Just several weeks ago, he returned from a 21-day tour of New York, New Jersey and most of the states in New England.

housing of people. It just seems weird this action occurred by them."

King said his superiors said only good things about his work habits while he was employed there. "I received one evaluation and that was positive," he said. "Terminating someone without due process after a very positive evaluation doesn't make any sense."

Chrissy Sauer, who died after being struck Nov. 12 by an SUV on Carmel Valley Road, encouraged King to pursue action against the county, he said.

"She was the one who urged me to fight," King said. "She said 'Charles, this is wrong. Fight.'"

Chavira recommended they use a degreaser to remove accumulated debris from the ground, ensure stormdrain lines are cleaned of grease, prevent the dirty cleaning water from entering the drains and figure out how to prevent future contamination.

Continued violation of the California

Uniform Retail Food Facilities Law and the Regional Water Quality Control Board's wastewater discharge laws could result in penalties, including "$111 per hour to recover the costs of inspection, monitoring and enforcement activities."

Rimando said the businesses are complying, and her office also issued a general letter to all restaurants and markets in town advising them of the wastewater regulations.

"I think it's gotten everybody's attention," Meroney.

Masten — who has crisscrossed the country countless times since he first took his poems on the road in 1968 — still thrives on trying new things and seeing new places. In New York, accompanied by his 25-year-old grandson, he got his first tattoo.

Now he's looking forward to reaching a longtime professional goal of performing in all 50 states.

"I only have two states left — Alaska and North Dakota," boasted Masten. "And I have a tour of North Dakota scheduled in the spring. That just goes to show you how crazy I am."

PINES

Gordon and a team of scientists have been monitoring plots of pines in Del Monte Forest since 1996. Evidence gathered at those plots produced the 5 percent mortality rate estimate.

There has been "pretty much a leveling out in severity,"

Gordon said.

The pines in the Del Monte Forest plots are representative of the rest of the Monterey Peninsula's pines, he added.

Pitch canker, caused by the fungus Fusarium circinatum, attacks Monterey pines of all ages. Some trees succumb to the disease early while others are minimally impacted or not at all, Gordon said.

The disease initially infects branch tips, causing needle wilt and tip death. Resinous cankers result from infection of the trunk, roots and other parts of the tree. Various types of beetles can inflict secondary damage and cause death to a pine already infected with the disease.

Pines close to the ocean are more susceptible to pitch canker than those farther away. There are more than 2.75 million Monterey pine trees in the county and billions more throughout the world.

Mike Branson, Carmel city forester and a member of the state task force, said his crews come across infected pines fairly frequently. "I still see pitch canker as a scourge on the forest, but you just have to deal with it," Branson said.

It used to be common practice to remove trees if they showed signs of pitch canker, but now foresters generally take a wait-and-see approach, something Gordon recommends. "Typically what we tell people is, 'Be patient, and don't assume you have to take the tree out because it's diseased,'" Gordon said.

That's because some trees show a resistance to the pathogen, said Steve Staub, consulting forester with the Del Monte Forest Foundation and co-chair of the task force. "The same affected tree sometimes will withstand subsequent attacks more than it did with the initial attack," Staub said.

Carmel replants pine trees in place of those that have died from pitch canker or other causes, Branson said. But the frustrating part is finding that seedlings have come down with the disease, Branson said. "When we plant young pines, we are basically hoping for the best."

Although the disease is still spreading and is still a concern, it's not as severe as once thought, Staub said. Pitch canker first appeared locally in 1996.

"Its back has been sort of broken as a catastrophic epidemic in the short term," he said. "Natural mortality rates continue to be accelerated by the presence of pitch canker, but the rate of acceleration has declined."

And some areas hit by the disease show promising signs of natural regeneration, such as Spanish Bay and Indian Village, said Staub, and that's a big positive for the future of the area's pines.

"It turns out storm damage is an infinitely larger factor in mortality than this disease," he said. "It dwarfs pitch canker for mortality."

PortaBella's new chef has been cooking since he was 8 years old

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

HE WAS given a standing ovation by eight French diners following dinner at PortaBella Restaurant recently, which pleased Executive Chef Ken Skinner mightily.

Chef Skinner has been with Csaba Ajan's PortaBella and Merlot Bistro restaurants on Ocean Avenue for only three months, but he's already attracting a following of Peninsula locals.

His style is "Mediterranean and French country" — a style that's reflected in the daily specials, announced on an easel blackboard in PortaBella's, flowered courtyard, and on the restaurants ongoing menus.

"Merlot Bistro is a small cafe, with simple, good food," according to Skinner. "We serve brick-oven pizzas, grilled salmon and bistro petit filet steak, to give you an example, while at PortaBella, the cuisine is Mediterranean-French with a tighter presentation." From Monday through Thursday, one kitchen runs both restaurants, but on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, when the restaurants are running full steam, both kitchens are utilized.

To be the executive chef of two restaurants, located side by side on Ocean Avenue but with two separate kitchens and entirely different menus, might seem to be too fragmenting.

But Skinner says the restaurants "run like chef profile

clocks" because of the skills of their staffs. Sous chefs Fernando Aguilera and Paul Vega are at his right hand in both kitchens.

"This is a joint effort," says Skinner.

His philosophy of cuisine is "palate first, presentation second."

"I rely on my own palate — the way I've tasted a dish before," he said. "The wine-makers dinners at the Highlands Inn, in which I participated, have been a big influence. Also my special dinner experiences with the Culinary Center of Monterey have helped."

Of his menus and dishes, he said, "I try not to be redundant."

First and foremost, Skinner considers himself a cook. He started with his mother in her kitchen when he was 8 years old and liked cooking from the start. Watching Julia Child and Jacques Pepin on television clinched the deal: He went to the Culinary Academy in Salinas, where he learned technique and practiced his skills.

Before joining PortaBella and Merlot Bistro, Skinner was chef de cuisine with Hullabaloo Restaurant in Salinas. "It's been a positive experience coming from Hullabaloo with its bold, American cooking, to the Mediterranean country cuisine we prepare here," he said.

The specials are especially appealing to Skinner, who takes delight in such innovations as pan-seared marinated duck breast, stuffed veal chop, and portabello and shitake mushroom ravioli in pesto cream sauce. Very well received, too, are other specials, such as applewood smoked bacon-wrapped day boat scallops, and grilled Alaskan halibut with whipped cream of red potatoes.

He and his staff cook from scratch to ensure the integrity of everything coming from the kitchens. From salad dressings, sauces and even biscotti, to a complicated, slow-cooked veal roast stuffed with baby spinach, sun-dried tomatoes and pecans, and a succulent beef Wellington — it's all done on premises and with the best ingredients. Even PortaBella's lentil soup is made with filet mignon trimmings.

Sous chef Aguilera doubles as pastry chef and makes the cheese cake, floating islands, brioche bread pudding and tiramisu.

"Many things are still on the menu from when Csaba started PortaBella nine years ago," Skinner said, noting that locals expect to see them there when they come to lunch or dinner. But that's not to say new dishes aren't added frequently. PortaBella's duck ravioli has been especially well received, he said, as have veal chops with cauliflower gratin, and grilled salmon with ratatouille and griddled polenta.

Stumped when it came to naming his signature dish — "They're all signature dishes," he said — Skinner decided to name his own favorite: grilled loin lamb chops with Pont Neuf potatoes and organic vegetables. "We're very big on organic vegetables in both restaurants," he said.

PortaBella and Merlot Bistro are connected in the interior by a graceful wrought-iron staircase. Merlot Bistro is entered from a side passageway filled with flowers and is basically one large room that looks out on Ocean. PortaBella has two dining rooms: The first, the Santa Maria room, is made cozy by a working fireplace and overlooks its Ocean Avenue flower-filled, heated patio. The second room, the Brick Room at the back, looks out on the Golden Bough courtyard and boasts a tiny, four-seat bar which is open from 11 a.m. until midnight.

PortaBella and Merlot Bistro are located on Ocean Avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde. They are open for lunch at 11:30 a.m. and dinner at 5 p.m. PortaBella additionally is open for afternoon tea, coffee and dessert from 3 to 5 p.m. For reservations, call PortaBella at (831) 624-4395 and Merlot Bistro at (831) 624-5659.

PacRep and the roots of rock

PACREP THEATRE takes another stroll down memory lane when "The Roots of Rock n' Roll Tribute Concert" premieres at the Golden Bough Theatre in Carmel Wednesday, Nov. 23, at 7:30 p.m.

"From Elvis ... to Motown ... to the British Invasion," the performance tells the story of rock 'n roll's formative years. Travis Poelle, who played Buddy Holly in PacRep's musical production about the talented but ill-fated singer-songwriter's life, returns to headline the cast. He'll be joined by guitarist Don Dally, vocalists Charmagne Scott and Daniel Simpson, and a variety of special guests.

"Roots" will play through Dec. 31. The theater is located on Monte Verde Street between 8th and 9th avenues. For more information, call (831) 622-0100 or visit www.pacrep.org.

High on the Hog

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

I'VE NEVER met a pig I didn't like, and I'll gladly take pork over poultry any day.

So at a time of year when everyone is talking turkey, I will dare to reveal my love affair with the exquisite succulence of "the other white meat."

Come fall, chefs embrace the shorter days and crisper weather by adding richly colored squash, sweet potatoes and pumpkins, stick-to-your-ribs beef-based stews and mashed root vegetables to their menus. And pork, long one of the world's favorite meats, is another fall specialty, but its surge in popularity has made it more than just a seasonal mainstay of American kitchens.

From the increasing number of barbecue establishments, to elaborate presentations at upscale restaurants, consumers are clearly swooning for swine. The New York Times style section recently paid tribute to the pig with a spread featuring offbeat pig parapher-nalía. And food and fly-fishing writer Peter Kaminsky chronicled his eight-year culinary quest for the best pork in his infectious enthusiastic paean to the pig, "Pig Perfect" (Hyperion, 2005).

Thanks to decades of breeding to achieve less fatty animals and an effective public-perception makeover, pork has lost much of its unhealthy stigma.

According to butcher Henry Junsay of Grove Market in Pacific Grove, "Nowadays, pigs are treated and fed differently. Before, they were fed scraps; now many diets consist of corn, soy and wheat, making for leaner cuts."

He also adds that pigs are kept in cleaner, more spacious confines — huge pens that are cleaned regularly, versus knee-deep mud.

And the National Pork Producers Council dramatically helped the promotional efforts of pork with its successful ad campaign featuring the slogan: "Pork, the Other White Meat."

From the forests and swamps

Pork's adaptability to just about every taste — spicy Asian flavors, flavorful pan braises, or light and healthy grills — has also added to its increasing popularity as a versatile menu item.

According to the National Pork Board, fossils show the pig dates back 40 million years, when wild, pig-like animals roamed forests and swamps in Europe and Asia.

By 4900 B.C., pigs were domesticated in China, and by 1500 B.C., they were being raised in Europe.

At the insistence of Queen Isabella, Christopher Columbus took eight pigs on his voyage to Cuba in 1493. However, it was Hernando de Soto who has been credited as "the father of the American pork industry," when he landed in Tampa Bay, Fla. in 1539 with America's first 13 pigs.

After the Revolutionary War, pioneers began taking their herds west, and pork processing and packing facilities began to spring up in major cities. Pigs were first commercially slaughtered in Cincinnati, which was dubbed, "Porkopolis." More pork was packed there than any other place in the mid-1800s.

Now, there are more than 180 species of pig, found on every continent except Antarctica, and pork is the world's most widely eaten meat, according to the pork council.

And despite the development of leaner cuts of pork, fatter cuts have been coming back in vogue (be still my heart). Perhaps it's due to the pork-rind revival brought on by carb-conscious dieters. Or maybe even health-conscious diners are realizing that rich delicacies can be enjoyed in moderation. Either way, a luscious Kurabota pork chop, (touted as the pork equivalent of Kobe beef), at Will's Fargo in Carmel Valley, reconfirmed my taste for pure pork fat, which I have no problem proudly wearing as a badge of honor. So, in the spirit of a season, which brings much decadence and indulgence, here are a few of my favorite, albeit fatty parts of the pig:

Scrapple

Unless you've lived on the East Coast, you may have never had the pleasure of breakfasting on scrapple — a cornmeal mush made with boiled, ground leftover pig scraps (including the meat scraped off the head), seasoned with onions, spices and herbs, and shaped into loaves for slicing and frying. If you can get past what goes into making this American Dutch specialty and the fact that it's a veritable cholesterol meltdown, you may discover it tastes surprisingly good and, like many scrapple-lovers, consider it food for the gods.

Pork belly

Fat is where it's at when it comes to pork belly. The unabashedly fattiest part of the underside of the pig was recently a to-die-for special at Passionfish in Pacific Grove. Chef Ted Walter paired melt-in-your-mouth (and straight to your thighs) thick stripes of pure white fat and rosy meat with creamy macaroni and cheese and greens.

Sausage

Roy's Swiss Sausage Factory sits on an idyllic parcel of land that brushes up against Highway 101 in Greenfield. For more than 15 years, Roy Richina has attracted a faithful carnivorous clique to his small South County processing operation.

Although his sausage recipe isn't strictly swine (a mixture of 75 percent lean pork and 25 percent lean sirloin tip is mixed with red wine, sugar and a secret mixture of 12 spices), he sells 1,500 of these luscious links each week.

Bacon

In 2004, Esquire chose The Grateful Palate Bacon of the winter, the First Tee seeks to teach children from all backgrounds life skills through the game of golf.

FIRST TEE

In October 2001, the group entered property negotiations with the City of Seaside, which eventually OK'd a project there. But a contentious group of residents threatened to fight it in court, and lease agreements, further architectural review, adoption of a habitat conservation plan and other impediments put its opening years away.

The chapter gave up on the Fort Ord plans a year ago and began looking elsewhere. The U.S. Navy's Monterey Pines course looked promising, but the Naval Postgraduate School's uncertain future during federal Base Realignment and Closure Commission hearings complicated the matter, according to Ollie Nutt, the chapter's executive vice president. "And there was some concern about how a kids' program would fit in at a military course."

Talks began with Laguna Seca club president Gary Crusio about four months ago.

"They have a wonderful new practice facility — we couldn't ask for anything nicer," Nutt said. Laguna Seca, located on York Road off Highway 68, and Rancho Cañada, on Carmel Valley Road, are sister courses, and Nutt speculated the Carmel Valley course might eventually host First Tee students as well.

Kicking off Nov. 21, the classes will be held each Monday from 3:30 to 5 p.m. They will feature instruction on full swing, chipping, pitching and life skills programming based on The First Tee's nine core values: honesty, integrity, respect, responsibility, confidence, courtesy, judgment, perseverance and sportsmanship.

Also in Salinas

The inaugural lesson at Laguna Seca comes more than a year after students attended their first class at Twin Creeks in Salinas Nov. 1, 2004. The First Tee is paying that city $575,000 annually to lease the facility for 20 years.

"In Salinas, we have 19 classes held Monday through Saturday, and we've enrolled 748 kids," Nutt said. "That happened faster than we expected. For a little while, it was a little challenging getting volunteers involved, but now we have 200 volunteers helping out."

The agreement with Laguna Seca means Peninsula residents can help the First Tee program without commuting to Salinas.

"We're really excited about it," Nutt said. "We've gotten great reception in Month Club as one of "The Esquire 70: As In Seventy Things that Make Us Happy to be Alive Today." It was 39th on the list, ahead of The New York Times, the French Laundry and Maura Tierney. Bacon is a clear-cut champion in the culinary world, and chefs have long had an appreciation for the sliced slab of swine (and its European cousins pancetta, lardons and ventriche). Speck, a smoked Prosciutto from Trentino-Alto Adige in northeastern Italy, appeared in a recent dish at L'Auberge with poached Sonoma chicken, black truffles and spätzle.

Salinas, and I'm sure it will work well here."

And it might continue to spread through the county that contains some of the world's most beloved golf courses.

"We're starting to have some discussions in South County, so it's really starting to take off," Nutt said.

Parents interested in learning more about The First Tee's golf lessons, life skills curriculum, memberships and scholarships may attend the introductory class at Laguna Seca Nov. 21. For more information, to volunteer or to sign up, call (831) 442-6922 or e-mail Nick Nelson, director of golf and programming, at nnelson@thefirstteemc.org.

SENIORS MAY GET DEPRESSED AROUND HOLIDAYS

While holiday stress can contribute to depression in any age group, seniors are at an increased risk for depression during this time of year. The holidays can trigger memories of a spouse, friend, or loved one who has passed away. If family members live far away, seniors may feel isolated. Adjusting to a fixed income may also add stress to a person who has been used to buying lots of gifts for the holidays. Those who used to cook large holiday meals and entertain the entire family may be discouraged if they become physically unable to handle such tasks. Family members and friends can help by connecting regularly with the seniors in their lives at this time of year.

The holidays can often mean loneliness for loved ones confined at home. HELP-AT-HOME will refer you to caregivers who make a difference. In addition to companionship, our home aides provide a full range of services, from home-making and personal care services to transportation and running errands. We offer a safe, stable, and caring atmosphere in your own home. Our services are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. For more information call (831) 655-1966 or (831) 655-5014.

P.S. Local agencies and community centers often step up their senior activities over the holidays, which can keep seniors engaged and combat loneliness.

DOES REAL ESTATE LOSE VALUE?

This is a rather touchy issue for some of us. Many financial advisors have for years warned that real estate could be on the verge of drastic price decreases. You could wake up one morning soon, one such advisor has warned repeatedly, and discover that your home lost half of its value overnight.

This kind of Chicken Little declaration sells a lot of books and magazines and newsletters apparently. (Remember the dire warnings in a best-seller about another great depression theoretically approaching in the 1980s? Disaster never quite hit shore.) History proves such predictions wrong, though—not because we can do nothing but repeat the past, but because real estate is so much more than a commodity like silver or tulip bulbs.

Based on national data, there has never been a year in the past 100 years when real estate lost value. Factor in the ravages of inflation, and you will find value losses as high as 3.8% (in 1982) and add in the destructive effects of severe changes in our economic infrastructure like the deconstruction of our defense industries and you will find losses as high as 4.4% (in 1989). And if you look in specific communities, especially in Southern California, you will find rather severe losses of value in 1991-1996. These years were later termed a local real estate depression.

So it is true that real estate values in certain areas have even fallen below the balances on the loans used to purchase the homes. But look again. Those very homes were among the ones that have gained the most value in recent years, and real estate has again proven itself to be the strongest support for personal wealth during uncertain financial times. We—and our financial futures—are best served if we pay little heed to the ever-present Chicken Littles and base our financial planning on provable reality. CORKY BLUFORD, 2, Berry Christensen, 5, and Tally Christensen, 8, left to right, are Carmel Beach walking companions who know how to pose for an impromptu photo shoot.

No sooner had we said, "Let's take their photo now," than Berry and Tally hopped up on a rock beside the walking path, and Corky positioned himself in front of the two sisters.

It's no wonder they know just what to do: Corky's mom, Suzy Bluford, has been teaching puppy manners at Sunset Center since 1984, as well as the dog sport, agility, in Carmel Valley and at The Crossroads for some time. All three are graduates of her classes.

Corky, a male Pyrenean shepherd, quite rare in the U.S., was in search of his favorite leash which somehow was lost on the walking path during an outing last weekend. The imported Canadian leash is blue and white and made of thick cotton. If found, call this columnist at (831) 274-8662 and we'll notify Corky.

Corky's faun-colored fur, ruffled every which way by the strong sea breezes, shone in the morning sun which cast long November shadows of the canine trio.

Sisters Berry (short for Mulberry) and Tally (short for Tallyho) have grown up on Carmel Beach, which they visit daily with Mom Linda. Tally goes right into the surf for a swim, Corky runs through the shallows and Berry, with her short little Jack Russell legs, ventures into the ponds left by receding tides. Berry's sister, Dyna, comes later in the day, preferring the tranquility of a one-on-one with Mom.

Mom Linda and Dad Craig live on an 11-acre Jacks Peak spread where Australian shepherd Tally has space to herd 12 chickens and a turkey in and out of their pens, and where four family cats don't put up with any of that nonsensical herding at all.

Everybody Needs a Break Now and Then

Even the most dedicated of family caregivers periodically need some "time off" in order to replenish their energy and renew their spirits. But their commitment is so great that they have difficulty giving themselves permission to take a break.

Besides, the logistics — and the worry — involved in finding a qualified substitute or in taking their loved one to a care facility can be overwhelming.

We can help.

Our Home Care Coordinator will visit you to discuss your needs and wishes. Then, when the time comes, we will carefully select a Personal Attendant to be at home with your loved one while you are away, and to follow the routine that you have established. We'll do everything possible to make this temporary absence comfortable for your loved one and for you. It's worth a try, isn't it? Because you can't take good care of anyone else unless you take care of yourself.

Democracy not in action

IRONICALLY, ONE of the principal functions of the judicial system designed by the Founding Fathers is the thwarting of majority will.

In many cases, this is done for a perfectly good reason — to protect individual liberty.

When the Supreme Court ruled in the 1950s, for example, that all children had an equal right to a good education, in the 1960s that all citizens had an equal right to vote, and in the 1970s that women had the right to terminate an early pregnancy, what the justices were saying was that those rights had to be respected even if a majority of citizens, acting through their legislators, didn't want them to be in a particular instance.

In fact, a large number of significant Supreme Court decisions throughout this nation's history have involved the nullification of duly enacted laws which the court decided were in conflict with Constitutional principles, even though those laws have to be presumed to have been backed by a majority of citizens represented by the legislators who passed them.

Increasingly, however, the courts are also being asked to overrule decisions made by democratic majorities on battlegrounds far below the Constitutional level. Such lawsuits have become so common that they amount to abuse of the courts and, indeed, the very concept of majority rule.

And that's where Flanders Mansion comes in.

Three months ago, the Carmel City Council decided unanimously that the old mansion should be sold.

The decision came after two consecutive municipal elections when Flanders Mansion was a key issue. In both cases, the keep-the-mansion candidates lost, and the get-rid-of-the-thing candidates won. Never has there been a clearer case of a decision being made by the city council with the backing of a majority of the public. It is contemptuous of our representative form of government to pretend otherwise.

Nevertheless, the small group of citizens who were on the losing side in the dispute over whether the mansion should be sold refuse to accept the perfectly valid result of a years-long citywide debate.

Their lawsuit, in effect, asks a judge to bar the people of Carmel from selling their own property.

It's a suit that should never have been filed.

Democracy in action

WHEN THE city council decided earlier this year that 300 homes in the town qualified as "historic resources," worthy of mandatory protection by the zoning code, they did so after plenty of discussion about the broad outlines of the city's historic preservation policies. But there wasn't much debate over the merits of the individual homes on the list.

Those homeowners, however, were given an opportunity to appeal, and appeal they did — almost 100 of them.

The first group of five appeals will be heard in the council chambers Monday (Nov. 21) at 4 p.m. during a meeting of the city's historic resources board.

If you want to see how democracy works at the local level, you should attend that hearing.

Flanders haunted?

Dear Editor,

I have grown up living next to the Flander's Estate. Our house was right next door and the Flander's was empty for the majority of the time.

Actual, it was rumored to be haunted, which was very exciting for a kid. We would have the 'nerve' to look in the windows and then piece together all the stories we knew about the place. There was one about the Flander's boy having died in the house. I do not know to this day the truth. All I know is for years I thought it was a beautiful if perhaps haunted house. The idea of selling it is a good one. I have been waiting for years to see it brought back to life.

Carolyn Snorf Akcan, Carmel

'Meanness and desperation'

Dear Editor,

In response to Ms. Robbins letter attacking Bob Sinotte (Oct. 21): Bob is our neighbor, and we have discussed Rancho Cañada Village with him. He, like Glenn Robinson, has praised the generous affordable housing of this proposed development, but has not endorsed it. He, like the community at large, is weighing the development's merits against its downsides.

Bob's support of the new Safeway is the same as most of us who shop there, including the unanimous approval of the Carmel Highlands LUAC.

Using Ms. Robbins' logic, if Bob Sinotte is pro-development, then so are all those who have praised or endorsed valley projects, including Sam Farr, school officials, the San Francisco Chronicle, Mr. Robinson and Ms. Robbins.

Attacking the character of those opposed to incorporation is a sign of meanness and desperation. When city proponents accept the fact that both sides are equally concerned about the valley, sensibility and civil discourse will follow.

Writing contest winnings helped man build home

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHEN LIV Carver first stepped into what would become her home at the corner of Monte Verde and Seventh, the sun broke through a cloud-covered sky and poured in.

"I had seen pictures of it in the real estate office window, and I thought the house really looked charming," Carver recalled. And then, while walking to the beach one gloomy day, her daughter pointed out that the wood-sided, two-story home was having an open house.

"We walked in, and the sun was suddenly streaming through all the windows — there are a lot of windows. I just loved it, and it reminded

The Carvers' house can barely be glimpsed through all the foliage. But along with the privacy, Liv and John Carver manage to enjoy plenty of sunlight.

$200 was a lot of money in 1904, and the house it helped build is celebrating its 100th birthday me of my grandparents' house in Norway," Carver recalled.

That was 15 years ago. She and her husband, John, bought the house, which turned 100 this year.

Its first occupants were a professor at Stanford and his wife. "He liked to write stories," Carver said. "He entered a contest and won $200. In 1904, that was a lot of money."

The next year, they bought the lot at Monte Verde and Seventh and one next to it, and they resided at the Pine Inn while their cottage was built. It was finished in 1905.

Over the years, subsequent residents made substantial changes, according to John Carver. They walked in a porch, added more windows and expanded the second floor, but Liv Carver said the house looks little different from the outside. Two eaves on the east side indicate the original and more recent roof lines.

The Carvers held a centennial party at the house Nov. 6, not only to honor their home's 100th birthday, but to thank all the friends and family who have helped Liv Carver since she suffered a stroke a year ago. "You really find out who your friends are when something like this happens."

Ridgeline development dispute settled

By CHRIS COUNTS

TO RESOLVE a conflict, sometimes you have to give an inch. In the case of Terese and Mark Mahady, that inch turned out to be 62 feet.

After a flurry of meetings and site visits, the Mahadys and their neighbors agreed on a plan where their home at 344 El Caminito Road would be located 20 feet back from where it was originally situated, thereby not impairing the neighbors' view. Surprisingly, after the Mahadys revised their plans, the neighbors received more than they had hoped for. "We ended up moving it 62 feet back," explained Terese Mahady.

At a Sept. 6 Carmel Valley Land Use Advisory Committee meeting, the Mahadys unveiled plans for a one-story, 2,903-square-foot home and a detached, 600-square-foot guest house.

The LUAC, a watchdog agency usually tough on development, endorsed the project 3-2. LUAC chair Janet Brennan described the house as "very modest."

But neighbors unleashed a torrent of criticism. One neighbor, Nancy Mayer, complained the house "would be a huge hulk looming over our yards, dominating the ridge, spoiling a beautiful, serene view, and lighting up the skyline like a beacon at night."

Even Mayer said she is satisfied with the latest plans. "The Mahadys agreed to make some considerable changes, and they're doing a lot to keep it out of the viewshed," she said.

Terese Mahady said she's glad the conflict is over. "We're pleased that the neighbors are pleased," she said. "We had hoped we would be playing in the dirt by now. We're moving forward with getting our building and grading permits. It's full speed ahead."

person staff focuses on projects for clients in education, and their experience is voluminous, he said, adding that he would also hire consultants. WR&D architects designed the theater at Rutgers University. Locally, their work includes Carmel Unified bond projects, the Palma High School chapel, Stonecreek shopping center, the pit row suites at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca, Calvary Chapel, the Monterey County animal shelter and many commercial and residential properties. The firm also has offices in Clovis, Salinas and San Francisco.

Annette Yee Steck suggested researching other firms, "if it helps make the administration more comfortable." But Lostrom said WR&D deserved the contract.

"You reward loyalty. On the first bond, we didn't know anything," Lostrom said. "The history they have is worth so much."

The board should be prepared to defend its decision if someone questions the logic of hiring WR&D without seeking other proposals, Biasotti said.

Lostrom made a motion to hire Ruhnke's firm for all of the bond-funded projects. It passed 3-2, with Steck and board president

Dan Hightower dissenting.

Group of seven

The school board also heard Monday that the oversight committee will ensure the district keeps its bond-related promises to voters, but it will not have any direct say in how the money is spent. Appointed by the board, committee members will represent business, seniors, taxpayers, parents and guardians, and the general public, according to district business manager Judy Long. They can't be school district employees or officials, and they must serve for two years, without pay. The committee will provide an annual report to the public, and its meetings will be subject to the Brown Act.

Once the Nov. 8 election results — which preliminarily show 72.77 percent of voters cast ballots in favor of the $21.5 million bond — are certified by Monterey County Elections next month, board members will officially declare their results in January and will have 60 days to appoint committee members.

They did not determine what procedures and guidelines they should use to select them. Steck, who helped form an oversight committee for Los Angeles Unified School District, volunteered to work with administrators and return to the full board with recommendations.
