HERALD'S HIT PIECES DON'T STAND UP TO SCRUTINY

■ Plenty of allegations about Monterey County judges, but not much to back them up

By PAUL MILLER

TWO VETERAN Monterey County Superior Court judges expressed dismay this week at what they called "unfair and inaccurate articles" about them published by the Monterey County Herald May 28. A detailed examination of the stories, by reporter Virginia Hennessey, shows the judges' dismay is well founded.

"The article about me showed a basic lack of understanding of the legal process and legal terminology, to say the least," Judge Robert Moody told The Pine Cone. "Also, I was utterly misquoted." The story about him was headlined, "Judge Moody's comments termed unsettling."

The other judge, Russell Scott, said the story about him — was which spread across the top of the Sunday front page and headlined, "Judge Scott subject of probe" — contained "some things which are completely untrue, at least one thing which could not be true, and several things which are probably untrue."

A prominent media critic offered his assessment of the stories about Moody and Scott. "The Herald has allowed certain defense attorneys to hide behind a cloak of anonymity to cast aspersions against judges they, and obviously the Herald, dislike, leaving the public with no way to judge the credibility of its sources," said Pebble Beach resident Bob Kohn, author of "Journalistic Fraud," a book acclaimed for its study of objectivity in journalism. "It would be fine if the Herald were to write an editorial directly criticizing the judges, but by using its news pages to give anonymous voice to what the paper doesn't have the courage to say itself is among the worst kinds of journalistic fraud."

Earlier this week, the Herald carried an editorial calling for more openness and less secrecy at the courthouse. But after receiving detailed questions from The Pine Cone about inaccuracies, inconsistencies and unsubstantiated allegations in the May 28 stories, the Herald's executive editor, Carolina Garcia, replied with only a brief e-mail: "We stand by our story."

However, numerous Monterey County defense lawyers — a group alleged by the Herald to be the source of the complaints about Moody and Scott —

Dramatic Big Sur rescue

■ Turbulent river nearly claims the life of hiker

THE DRAMATIC rescue of a day hiker illustrates just how dangerous the Big Sur River can be after a winter of heavy rains. An off-duty Monterey police officer, Adam Costa, captured the moment over Memorial Day weekend when state parks lifeguard Liam Murphy was about to rescue an unidentified woman who slipped on a rock and fell into the turbulent waterway. Thanks to the proximity of Murphy, the woman, who was unable to swim, was hauled safely to shore after he tossed a lifesaver to her. She grabbed it while she struggled to keep her head above the churning water. Fortunately, state parks only began stationing a lifeguard at the popular Big Sur River Gorge Swimming Hole at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park the day before.

"When Liam arrived for duty, he wanted to test the waters so he jumped into this swirling hole," reported Dana Jones, Big Sur sector superintendent for state parks. "He quickly learned that moving river water is nothing to mess with. Later, this experienced lifeguard told me that he was very surprised at how deceptive river water is, and that during his little dip he was actually scared. And that he was lucky to make it out."

Business tax headed for November ballot

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AS VOTERS defeated a countywide sales tax hike for transportation projects Tuesday, the city council decided 4-1 to ask residents to raise taxes paid by Carmel businesses. The increase, from 88 cents per $1,000 gross receipts, to $1 per $1,000, will appear on the Nov. 7 ballot and would bring in an additional $60,000 to $70,000 a year for the general fund.

Heeding public and council members' concerns aired last month, finance manager Joyce Giuffre and city administrator Rich Guillen removed an unpopular provision that would automatically increase the tax rate based on inflation. They recommended June 6 the council put the proposed tax increase to voters.

Guillen and Giuffre cited a Ralph Andersen & Associates study showing revenue from the business license tax, which is fourth in the top five income generators for the city, increased 2.2 percent a year during the past 13 years. The study also concluded most neighboring cities charge higher taxes and take in more business license fees. The consultant said Carmel would not lose its competitive edge in attracting businesses.

Regardless of the council's decision, property owner John Wagner suggested the city "do a better job of determining who's

Condors bring chaos to ridgetop homes

By CHRIS COUNTS

AS THE poster child of the drive to reintroduce endangered species into the wild, the California condor has been embraced as a symbol of all that is good in the evolving relationship between humans and the natural world. But just don't tell that to a few frustrated Big Sur residents who have discovered condors can be a real pain in the tail feathers.

Like the human visitors who flock to Big Sur, condors appear fascinated by the homes of the local rich and famous. But unlike people, the enormous birds don't seem interested in trivialities like art, architecture, landscaping or even a nice view of the ocean. They are, quite simply, looking for a handout.

"If they get a friendly response from a homeowner, they'll realize he's not a threat," explained Joe Burnett, field supervisor of the Ventana Wildlife Society's Condor Restoration Program. "If someone is glad to see them, they'll feel welcomed."

And that's where the trouble begins. In addition to becoming dependent on humans for food, condors are capable of causing a remarkable array of property damage. Here are just a few reports of such mischief from Big Sur:

- After an out-of-town resident left a screen door open, a condor entered the house, shredding the upholstery on a sofa;
- A ridgetop resident said condors used their talons to dis-

Condors seem to have taken a liking to some of Big Sur's most extravagant homes. Here, three condors visit the appropriately named "Wild Bird," the former home of Nathaniel and Margaret Owings.

FOODS FOR THOUGHT

It has already been established that genetics, drugs, disease, and loud noise may all play a role in contributing to hearing loss. Now, one of the first studies to suggest a link between poor nutrition and hearing loss indicates that women with impaired hearing have lower levels of both vitamin B12 and folate. Vitamin B12 is found in high concentrations in eggs, milk and meat while green vegetables, peas, and beans are rich in folate. As we age, some adults are less able to absorb vitamin B12 from food. With this in mind, the Food and Nutrition Board of the Institute of Medicine recommends that people over 50 get most of their vitamin B12 from supplements.

Many elderly patients are reluctant to admit a loss of hearing because of embarrassment or fear. It is extremely important that adults over the age of 65 be screened regularly. A study of elderly patients has shown that untreated hearing loss increases psychosocial difficulties and reduces functional health. Founded in 1979, VICTORIAN HOME CARE/ RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES raises the quality of in-home care to a higher level. We provide the best home care, geriatric care and geriatric care management for seniors or adults with physical and / or mental challenges in and around Monterey and Santa Cruz, California.

P.S. Healthy lifestyle choices, such as quitting smoking and eating nutritious foods, may help avert hearing loss.

Life on the full-time picket line

By KELLY NIX

WHEN THE driver of a black Volvo speeds by, honks his horn, then makes an obscene gesture with his middle finger, the three picketers outside the SFB Morse Pebble Beach gate, to whom the message was directed, shrug it off.

"As long as they don't get out of the car, we're OK," said Jehu, 23.

Jehu is one of more than a dozen people — most, if not all, from Mexico and Central America — hired by Carpenters Union Local 605 to protest DMC Construction Inc.'s policy of not paying government-set "prevailing wages" on private construction jobs.

From 7 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., the sign holders plant themselves in at least four Pacific Grove locations holding signs and banners with the words "DMC CONSTRUCTION INC. UNFAIR TO WORKERS & the COMMUNITY."

Although passersby might mistake them for disgruntled union workers demanding higher wages from their employer, the picketers are not union members nor carpenters. They are paid solely to picket.

The arrival of picketers is a daily event outside the offices of DMC Construction across the street from Safeway in Pacific Grove and at several other locations on the Monterey Peninsula. And it has been for more than a year.

Production gives locals a lesson in the high price of fame

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ACTORS WANTED. No experience necessary, but check-writing ability a must.

Actress Betty White donated her time to the Monterey Film Commission to appear in Carmel Thursday for the shooting of "Where's Marty?" And Peninsula residents lacking her credentials and itching to appear on the big screen — or itching to put their dogs on the big screen — can get parts in exchange for cash.

Written and directed by film commission board member Nola Rocco, the low-budget "travelog romantic comedy" will be released in late fall and is intended to promote local tourist destinations while raising money for the commission, which promotes the county as a film location and provides scholarships.

"Where's Marty?" — which tells the story of New York City residents Joanne Smith and Jonathan Smith, strangers who meet for the first time as tourists in Monterey and fall in love with the help from "matchmaker archangel" Marty — includes its share of celebrities.

White, who was filmed sitting on a bench in Piccadilly Park reading a copy of The Pine Cone, as well as actor/artist Tony Curtis, comedian George Lopez and Blue Dog artist George Rodrigue, make cameo appearances.

But "the people who are acting in the film are all community people — all local people," Rocco said. Doing what would be taboo in Hollywood but makes for creative fundraising in Monterey, each donated money to get a role.

Cannery Row fixture Ted Balestreri gave the greatest gift, $5,000, to play Marty. Carmel housewife Lydia Moran ($3,000) is the "leading girl," according to Rocco. Myles Williams, Post Ranch Inn co-owner and a $3,000 contributor, plays the leading male. Farmer/developer Basil Mills and restaurateur John Pisto also make appearances.

Dogs needed

Denny LeVett also has a part, as does his canine-friendly hotel.

"There's this incredible dog and dog-owner scene at the Cypress Inn," Rocco said.

RLS student settles suit with school, son of Beach Boys singer

By KELLY NIX

A FORMER Robert Louis Stevenson School student received nearly $50,000 this week following a lawsuit in which he claimed the son of Beach Boys lead singer Mike Love and another classmate assaulted and harassed him.

Eliot Muckerman, who turned 18 years old Thursday, also sued RLS for "failing to provide adequate supervision and security" at the school.

"We just don't comment about civil suits like that as a matter of policy," said RLS director of advancement Donna Igleheart.

The incident, which happened April 2003 when Muckerman attended RLS, cites Brian Love and Roger Sitkin as those involved. Brian Love's father, Mike Love, owns a home in Pebble Beach.

Muckerman was "assaulted and battered," and was subject to mental torment and harassment by the students, according to court documents filed May 22.

As a result of the beating, Muckerman had an abrasion to the right side of his scalp and suffered emotional distress. He had to undergo "emergency care" and saw four doctors, which cost $7,716 in medical expenses, court records indicate.

Money on his birthday

Per the settlement, RLS paid Muckerman $32,200, while Love paid $7,500, and Sitkin, $10,000. The money was to be paid to Muckerman on his 18th birthday.

Muckerman's Oakland-based attorney, Jose Luis Fuentes, with the law firm Siegel & Yee, did not return a phone message from The Pine Cone.

Muckerman's mother, Sharon Shuteran, who is a county judge in Colorado, declined to comment on the case.

Muckerman, who couldn't be reached for comment, finished high school in Colorado Springs but will enroll at a college in Massachusetts in the fall, according to court documents.

Visitors center celebrates birthday with open house

MORE THAN 43,000 tourists have asked directions to the Hog's Breath Inn, been directed to the most romantic B&B in town or learned the latest talent lineup at Sunset Center since the Carmel Chamber of Commerce's visitors center opened on San Carlos Street a year ago. To celebrate its first anniversary, the chamber will host an all-day open house at the center Thursday, June 15.

Chamber staff and eight volunteers helped 15,292 people by phone and 27,852 in person, distributed copies of the chamber's "Guide to Carmel," and offered brochures, maps, magazines and souvenirs during the past year.

Business tripled since the visitors center moved to its new downstairs location from its former upstairs office a few doors away, according to chamber CEO Monta Potter.

The open house, which will run from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday, will include food, drinks and prizes.

The visitors center is located on the west side of San Carlos Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues. For more information, call (831) 624-2522.

Council finalizes calendar girls' gift

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH NO change in city attorney Don Freeman's opinion that Carmel's acceptance of $40,000 raised through sales of a philanthropical group's tongue-in-cheek nudie calendar could expose it to lawsuits, the city council narrowly voted Tuesday to accept the cash, which will pay for furniture, computer and telephone upgrades, and other relocation expenses related to the firehouse retrofit.

"This was a well-intentioned citizen effort that enjoyed considerable support from the community, with good reason," said councilman Mike Cunningham, who pulled the item off the consent calendar June 6 to discuss it. "Despite its intentions, it ran into some difficulties not anticipated by its proponents, and that disappointed a lot of us, including me, but it's a fact of life. It was associated with some activities we deemed significant enough to not accept the money."

Cunningham asked if Freeman's worries had disappeared since summer 2004, when he and city administrator Rich Guillen said Carmel would not take the calendar girls' cash and forbade them from using city property, or even the city's name, in the risqué fundraising venture inspired by the British comedy, "Calendar Girls." The 2005 Carmel Fire Belles calendar features 12 local women varying in age from their 50s to their 80s posing scantily clad or cleverly concealed.

"The legal opinion hasn't changed," Freeman said. "Is the city at risk for a potential lawsuit?" councilman Erik Bethel echoed. "I think that's the big issue."

Carmel Valley Village resident Paul Ingram, who also wanted the item pulled and had to wait more than four hours to make his comments, said he believed the city's initial rejection of the cash was "a polite way for you, the city council, to say, 'Thank you, but we can't be a part of this stunt.'"

Ingram called the calendar "an ill-founded attempt to mimic a sort of pseudo-pornographic imagery," and as the father of daughters aged 12 and 22, he worried accepting the money would amount to condoning something hurtful.

"Sadly, the message our culture sends to girls and young women these days is that you must use your sexuality in

Instead of reminiscing, recent grads take on art scene

By CHRIS COUNTS

TYPICALLY, WHEN old classmates meet, they sit around, drink a few beers and wax poetic about their youthful escapades and indiscretions. When a group of local art school graduates recently decided to get together, though, they agreed to meet in an art gallery instead of a pub.

Beginning Saturday June 10, the Lauryn Taylor Gallery will host "Point of Origin," an exhibit featuring the works of Chi Birmingham, Kodiak Greenwood, Ryan Ford, John Nelson, Matt Rainwater, Liz Russell and Rachael Short. The gallery will host a reception that evening from 6 to 9 p.m.

As a gallery owner, Taylor has listened to artists pitch all sorts of ideas for exhibits. But she had never heard anything quite like the plan hatched by Birmingham and Greenwood.

"Chi and Kodiak came to me with this amazing PowerPoint presentation," Taylor recalled. "They showed me the works of a group of young artists they wanted to include in the show. And they also wanted to execute the entire the show, from inception to completion."

For Birmingham and Greenwood, curating the show offers the young artists a hands-on opportunity to learn the business side of art.

"Kodiak and I graduated from college in the last year, and many of our friends are in the same position," Birmingham explained. "We're looking for a way to maintain our art making practice outside of school, and we're looking for a way to connect with an audience."

Immersed in the creative process, many artists find it difficult to focus on the business side of their craft. But not Birmingham and Greenwood.

"This has been a blast," said Birmingham with the unbridled optimism of a recent college graduate. "Marketing is like throwing a party."

Greenwood, Rainwater and Short are recent graduates of the Brooks Institute in Santa Barbara. Birmingham and eligible and collecting that tax.”

Wagner, who pays on his commercial and residential rental incomes as required, said, “For the past two years, I’ve been making an informal survey of people who have rental properties in Carmel. I have not talked to one person who has a business license or who thinks they need a business license.”

According to the municipal code, everyone who earns money in the city — with the exception of “special events and transportation of persons/goods,” and teachers who have fewer than 10 students — must pay the business license tax. Wagner’s comments worried councilman Gerard Rose, who also wondered if taxing homeowners would drive up rents in an already costly place to live.

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac countered the proposed increase would only amount to 12 cents more for a $1,000 monthly rental. “I don’t see how it impacts affordable housing,” she said, “I just don’t.”

Councilman Mike Cunningham said businesses already pay enough taxes and suggested the city is in fine financial shape. He favored prudent spending over increasing revenues. “This isn’t a wise thing to do,” he said. “We want this economic engine to hum, not put a rock in the road.”

Bethel agreed it would not make sense to impose more taxes on businesses still feeling the strain of a slow economy, but he remarked the increase would not amount to much on an individual basis and said he would like it more if the funds were earmarked to promote businesses in town.

‘I don’t get it’

Guillen was frustrated by the evident lack of support. “A year ago, the council basically said, ‘We want more revenue growth,’ and this is one of the items brought forward,” he said, at a cost of $10,000 for the Ralph Andersen study and another $7,000 to put the measure on the ballot. He cited the failures of paid parking, a business improvement district and other income-boosting efforts. Guillen plans to propose a tourism improvement district to help cover costs of promoting the city, but if the council wouldn’t OK the ballot measure, working on the district would be “a waste of time.”

He also said no one has called him to protest the proposed business tax increase, which has the support of the Carmel Innkeepers Association and the Carmel Chamber of Commerce.

“I guess that’s my frustration,” he said. “I don’t get it.” Rose wanted to exempt long-term rentals from the tax, but Hazdovac cautioned against rushing into such a change.

She moved the council approve the resolution to put the increase on the November ballot, and Bethel seconded the motion. Casting the sole dissenting vote, Cunningham called the tax hike “not equitable, strategically unwise and unfair.”

Afterward, McCloud asked the business community to campaign in favor, since laws prevent the city from spending taxpayer dollars to do so. “I would hope this gets some support — some fliers from the chamber, or something,” she said. “I make that hopeful request of those in the audience.”

Written arguments for and against the tax must be submitted to city clerk Heidi Burch by Aug. 11, with rebuttals due the following week. City attorney Don Freeman’s impartial analysis of the ballot measure will also be due Aug. 18. Because it would benefit the general fund, the increase would need only a simple majority approval to pass.

voters in 2000 that would facilitate the Pebble Beach Company's plans for a new golf course in Del Monte Forest while downzoning large tracts of Monterey pine forest from "residential" to "open space."

At a June 14 meeting in Santa Rosa, coastal commissioners will decide whether or not to allow the ballot measure to go into effect.

"Unless something unexpected from left field occurs," said Mark Massara, director of the Sierra Club's California coastal program, "there is no legal or scientific basis upon which to approve this thing."

A report from the coastal commission staff — which has long campaigned against allowing significant new development in Pebble Beach — urges the commission to reject the zoning changes as "inconsistent with Coastal Act environmentally sensitive habitat and wetlands policies."

The Pebble Beach Co., on the other hand, contends the development will provide unprecedented protection for the most vital parts of the pine forest since it will limit future development. And so do many residents of Del Monte Forest, where Measure A was approved more than five years ago by a 2-to-1 margin.

"We hope the commissioners will see past all of this one-sided rhetoric that the staff has put out and actually vote on the issues," said Rick Verbanec, president of the Del Monte Forest Property Owners.

"The Del Monte Forest Plan: Forest Preservation and Development Limitations," which would be facilitated if Measure A goes into effect, includes an 18-hole golf course, driving range, equestrian center, 160 hotel rooms, underground parking at the Lodge and Spanish Bay, 60 new employee residences, 34 residential lots, and road and infrastructure improvements.

According to the coastal commission staff report, the development would harm areas home to Monterey pines, Yadon's piperia and the federally protected California red-legged frog.

"For example, the contemplated golf course that would be allowed under Measure A could be expected to result in the direct loss of 63 acres of native Monterey pine forest (and over 10,000 individual trees)," the staff report notes. "It would also result in the loss of 36,000 individual piperia plants, or 21 percent of the known population of this listed endangered species."

The Pebble Beach Co. claims those figures are exaggerated.

The staff report also says the Monterey pine is "globally rare," a claim contradicted by the Pebble Beach Co. and other supporters of Measure A, including Bruce Cowan, a former Sierra Club member.

"There are literally millions of native Monterey pines in California, and many more planted pines throughout the world," Cowan said.

Restoring the forest through development

If the commission OKs Measure A, the Pebble Beach Co. would place more than 900 acres (nearly 500 within Del Monte Forest) of forest and other land into conservation as open space. In addition, the company would prohibit hundreds of home lots, allowed under zoning approved by the coastal commission in the 1980s, from being developed in the forest.

"The opposition ignores the hundreds of thousands of Monterey pines and Yadon's orchids that will be protected in perpetuity on the nearly 900 acres of preserved lands being added to the hundreds of acres Pebble Beach Co. has previously donated," Cowan said. "It also ignores that the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, which listed the Yadon's rein orchid, and the California Department of Fish and Game have supported the final plan with all of its land dedications and other

Carmel Plaza gets OK to close street for reopening block

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE NEWLY remodeled Carmel Plaza can close two city streets to hold a Cirque du Soleil-inspired grand reopening party Oct. 21, the Carmel City Council unanimously decided June 6. The event will celebrate the Plaza's extensive facelift and the arrival of two new anchor tenants — upscale clothier Wilkes Bashford in the former Saks Fifth Avenue and eclectic retailer Anthropologie at the center's rear. The council last approved a shutdown of Ocean Avenue for a party when Tiffany & Co. opened at the Plaza a year ago.

Marketing manager Ryan Williams said the 3 to 6 p.m. event would include food and drink stations, a trio of live musicians, strolling performers and "mini-events" inside stores and throughout the Plaza courtyard. Three Cirque du Carmel shows, each lasting 15 minutes, will take place on a stage under a large tent at the corner of eastbound Ocean Avenue and southbound Mission Street.

The party will be open to the public, though Williams could not say how much tickets will cost. The Plaza will pick up the tab for the event, including paying the city for any public services it requires, so all ticket proceeds will benefit the Carmel Youth Center and the Boys & Girls Clubs of Monterey County.

Williams said crews would arrive at 3 a.m. Oct. 21 to begin setting up the tent and stage. They would return in the evening and have everything torn down by 10 p.m.

Community services manager Christie Miller said the Carmel Community Activities and Cultural Commission heard Williams' presentation last month and voted 4-0 to recommend the council approve the event concept and authorize the street closures, which will only affect part of each block.

Councilman Mike Cunningham asked about noise impacts at 3 a.m., and Williams said Plaza management advised companies bidding for the work to plan on being as quiet as possible.

Cunningham also asked if Williams notified nearby merchants and learned he had. "I have not received one phone call to date,"

Williams told the council.

Councilman Erik Bethel called the updated and upgraded Plaza "fantastic," and said he is looking forward to the party but hopes the shopping center might consider subsidizing some of the tickets so people who can not afford them might attend.

The council unanimously voted in favor of the street closures, the tents and the serving of alcohol on public property, in case drinks are poured in the tents, not just on the private property of the Plaza.

City to run golf course

THE PACIFIC Grove city council Wednesday voted 5-2 to allow the city to run its municipal golf course when the current operator's lease expires at the end of the year.

The council voted to hire one full-time golf pro and 12 to 14 part-time workers who will be responsible for the golf cart rentals, driving range and other duties.

Numerous supporters of a private concession spoke out against the city running the course. Council members Ron Schenk and Susan Goldbeck voted against the move.

Peter Vitarisi, who currently runs the golf operations, is retiring at the end of the year when his lease runs out.

order to manipulate your circumstances," he said.

Mayor Sue McCloud and council members Paula Hazdovac and Gerard Rose, all of whom attended a celebration at the Films in the Forest showing of "Calendar Girls" May 23 to accept the $40,000 check from Friends of Carmel Fire House Inc., voted to officially accept the money June 6. Cunningham and Bethel dissented.

Median money

But all five voted to receive $100,000 in donations, pledges and in-kind contributions to re-landscape five medians on Ocean Avenue.

According to the resolution adopted by the council, Pine Inn owners Richard and Mimi Gunner are contributing $20,000 for the strip between Lincoln and Monte Verde streets, the Carmel Plaza is donating $20,000 for the median on its block, John Plastini and Shreve Archer are giving $10,000 each for the block from Mission to San Carlos, and the Leidig and Draper families are donating $20,000 for the strip between San Carlos and Dolores.

Carmel Rotary is giving $10,000, and the Carmel Chamber of Commerce and Denny LeVett are each contributing $5,000, for the block between Dolores and Lincoln.

Landscape architect Michelle Comeau designed the project for free, and designer Kathleen Coss, who also serves on the forest and beach commission, is managing and planning the effort.

Carmel Residents Association member Linda Anderson, who pulled the item from the consent calendar but did not have to wait until the end of the meeting to comment, asked if public hearings would be held on the design, which includes lighting.

The council and the forest and beach commission have already seen the drawings, with the latter approving the removal of more than a dozen unhealthy or unwanted trees and shrubs from the medians in February.

Guillen said the plans will go out for bid, and comments will be taken when the council decides whether to accept contractors' offers on various aspects of the project.

Psychologist's nonprofit helps kids fight domestic violence

By MARY BROWNFIELD

HE DOESN'T know it, but a 10-year-old Cupertino boy played a major part in Carmel therapist Julianne Leavy's life.

When she was in school studying clinical psychology, she counseled a boy whose father abused his mother.

"He was in an extremely violent home and emotionally it was affecting him," Leavy recalled the 1993 case. "He was scared every day of his life."

She created a safety plan so the boy could avoid the fall-out at home. And two years ago, she formed the nonprofit Harmony at Home to help end the cycle of abuse in families.

"It evolved with this first case — this was what I wanted to do, how I wanted to help children," said Leavy, who moved to Big Sur with her family when she was 10 and graduated from Carmel High in 1982.

Fresh out of graduate school, Leavy took on the more traditional tasks of helping victims fleeing abusive homes. She worked in shelters and served as a therapist for the YWCA in Monterey and Community Human Services in Seaside.

"I realized that there weren't any programs focusing on prevention — on children and ending that cycle," she said. Children of abusive parents can become abusive adults or enter abusive relationships. "I had been trying to effect change with the parents, and that wasn't working."

'Planting seeds'

She opened her own practice in Carmel in 1996 and developed a school-based program, Sticks & Stones, for children and families suffering from domestic violence, drug and alcohol abuse, loss and abandonment, and trauma.

"If things weren't changing in the home, we could start planting seeds, teaching the children there are alternatives to violence and ways to express their feelings," she said. "Anger is OK — it's how to express it."

In September 2002 she published, "The Innocent Victims: A Handbook for Parents and Caregivers of Children Exposed to Domestic Violence." She wrote the book for foster families, grandparents, mothers in shelters and other adult caregivers of children exposed to domestic violence so they might understand how the kids are feeling and reacting. Leavy received a grant to distribute 20,000 copies to agencies and shelters throughout the United States.

The story features a mother and son who flee an abusive home.

Leavy said she's received positive e-mail from readers around the country, including abuse victims who have left violent homes. "That's been an important piece of the work we do."

Harmony's role

Leavy continued working in her own practice until 2004, when she started Harmony at Home, "so I could be directly responsible and effective in raising money for these programs."

Through her new nonprofit, Leavy hopes to expand Sticks & Stones by asking donors to give $7,500 to "adopt" a school so a counselor can work with kids there.

She also wants to distribute more copies of "The Innocent Victims."

And in 2005, Harmony at Home took over a program called, "What about the children?" that was started in 1997 by a group of private therapists.

WATC helps "children understand the feelings they're having about the divorce," Leavy said. "The goal is to walk away having them realize it's not their fault."

Harmony at Home raises money for scholarships to the $350, four-week class. In a new pilot program, outreach workers in Alisal Union School District will identify those in need, "and then our coordinator will reach out and see if they want to participate," Leavy said. Harmony at Home will help with meals, transportation, baby-sitting — whatever's necessary.

"It's set up so they have no reason not to come," she said.

The group also collaborates with the Big Sur Land Trust to offer summer camps for troubled young women "who have shown interest in having goals, plans and dreams but haven't had the ability to support that."

At the Glen Deven Ranch on Garrapata Ridge or the Mitteldorf Preserve in Rancho San Carlos, the week includes counseling, journaling, art, drama and dance for about 10 girls.

"Children who are witnessing abuse and are exposed to it have a lot of pain inside, and they haven't developed healthy ways to express the pain, so they take it inward," Leavy said. "I see a lot of drug and alcohol abuse, and cutting — self-mutilation. The emotions are so intense and unbearable, they like feeling physical pain because it relieves emotional pain for a brief moment."

The camp, run by therapists who volunteer their time, helps the teens develop productive ways to handle that pain, according to Leavy.

But the nonprofit itself needs help, and Leavy hopes getting its message out will garner support.

"There are a lot of agencies that are doing wonderful work with these different populations," she said. "But I feel Harmony at Home is coming from different place. Our focus is on prevention."

weren't hesitant about criticizing the Herald and coming to the judges' defense. Not one of them backed the Herald's allegations.

The presumption of innocence

According to Hennessey, during a court session May 25, Moody "made comments questioning one of the basic tenets of the American justice system — the presumption of innocence."

She quoted Moody as calling the presumption — which requires that a person accused of a crime be found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt — a "legal fiction."

And then Moody showed further disregard for a "cornerstone of the U.S. justice system," according to the Herald, by stating from the bench that the presumption of innocence doesn't apply during sentencing of a person already convicted. At that stage in a trial, a judge can consider anything which is not inconsistent with a jury's verdict and which the judge believes is supported by a "preponderance of the evidence," Moody said.

Hennessey got a shocked reaction from San Francisco Public Defender Jeff Adachi to these events. "For a judge to display such willful disregard for one of the basic tenets of our judicial system is sad and wrong," Adachi said.

No local attorneys were quoted by The Herald agreeing with Adachi's pointed criticism. Moody said there's a good reason for that.

"'Legal fiction' is a special phrase, commonly used in courtrooms," Moody told The Pine Cone. "It means, 'something presumed to be true even though it may not actually be true,' and that's exactly what the presumption of innocence is." He said he considers it a sacred principle during trials and is always very careful to instruct juries to follow it.

Legal dictionaries support Moody's definition of "legal fiction." (For examples, see <http://dictionary.law.com>, <http://legal-dictionary.thefreedictionary.com>, <http://www.reference.com/> or <http://www.legal-explanations.com>.) And several local attorneys backed him.

"That's what 'legal fiction' means," Monterey attorney Jim Newhouse said. "The court is required to instruct the jury that the defendant is presumed to be innocent, even if he's not."

He called Moody, "tough but fair."

A prominent Salinas defense attorney, who didn't want to be identified because he has a case pending before Moody, said he thought it was "unfortunate" Moody used the phrase "legal fiction" because a lot of people might not be familiar with it.

"But I'm sure he wasn't being disrespectful of a defendant's rights," the attorney said. "He is always very careful with his instructions to the jury about the presumption of innocence."

Another veteran Salinas defense attorney, Miguel Hernandez, said he didn't recall learning the phrase "legal fiction" in law school. "But, by his own conduct, Judge Moody showed what he thinks the phrase means. He's very diligent about requiring juries to swear to uphold the presumption of innocence."

"Judge Moody is a conservative guy with a strong sense of right and wrong," said Larry Biegel, who has decades of experience as a criminal defense attorney at the Salinas courthouse. "I have never seen him do anything in court I thought was biased, and I have never seen him undermine the presumption of innocence."

'Defense lawyers never speak the truth'

According to the Herald's reporter, another "unsettling" thing about Moody was his comment, allegedly made to her during a conversation in his chambers, that "defense lawyers never speak the truth." Moody vehemently denies making this statement.

After having the Moody "quote" related to her by Hennessey, one local defense attorney, Juliet Peck, expressed outrage at the comment.

"It's really very extreme and raises serious questions," and is "deeply unsettling to the entire defense community and should be to the entire legal community," Peck told the Herald.

But Moody, who has been on the bench in Monterey County almost 20 years, not only denies saying "defense lawyers never speak the truth," he maintains it is ridiculous to think he would say such a thing.

"This was a conversation about the national media's penchant for saturation coverage of sensational cases and the way they present litigants' attorneys as though they were neutral experts," Moody said. "In those situations, the attorneys will always be advancing their clients' interests, not seeking the truth."

Several local attorneys agreed Moody wouldn't make a blanket statement that defense lawyers are liars.

"I can't believe Bob Moody would say something like that," said Biegel.

"He has certainly never said anything like that to me," said an attorney who did not want to be identified.

"That sort of comment surprised me, because I have had the contrary experience in Judge Moody's courtroom," said Hernandez. "He's always respectful."

"I think the Herald should be more careful about slinging mud — especially on such flimsy grounds — about someone who has so much respect in the community," said another experienced local attorney who did not want his name used in this story.

Scott 'faces disciplinary panel'?

In her front-page May 28 exposé, Hennessey reported the California Commission on Judicial Performance is investigating Scott for having "a pro-prosecution bias." A photo of Scott accompanying the story carried a caption that said he faces a "disciplinary panel."

The source of this information, according to Hennessey, was "lawyers who spoke on the condition of anonymity." Their information was provided to the Herald in "recent weeks" according to the story.

The alleged investigation was prompted by a sworn declaration filed last November by Scott's former clerk, Crystal Powser. Earlier, seeking what she described as "revenge" against a traffic commissioner, Richard Rutledge, who had broken off their engagement, Powser filled local news media with lurid details of her sexual escapades at Monterey County courthouses. In her November declaration, she provided more graphic details of an encounter with yet another local judge, Michael Fields, and alleged serious misconduct by him in handling a judicial disciplinary hearing in Ventura County. The declaration also contained a brief allegation against Scott: That he had used Powser to prompt the district attorney to ask certain questions during a criminal trial in his courtroom.

"There are two things that are very disturbing to me," Scott said. "First of all, that Virginia Hennessey would invite a judge to engage in inappropriate behavior by asking me to comment on matters she knows I am duty bound not to discuss. And, secondly, that the way I found out there could be a confidential inquiry by the commission on judicial performance was by reading about it on the front page of Sunday's Herald."

When the commission gets a complaint about a judge, it conducts a preliminary inquiry to see if the complaint has any merit, Scott told The Pine Cone. "If they determine the allegations are unfounded, the judge never hears about it. If they determine the complaint may have some merit, they notify the judge and give him a chance to respond." But Scott said he has received no such notice. Without a formal investigation under way, it is completely untrue to say he "faces a disciplinary panel."

The executive director of the Commission on Judicial Performance, Victoria Henley, would not comment on the specifics of any inquiry into Scott. But she confirmed that if any judge were the subject of a formal investigation, he would be informed of it. Until such a formal investigation is concluded and charges are filed, there is no possibility of a judge facing a disciplinary panel, she said.

Allegations without substantiation

Hennessey's stories also include a charge, based on Powser's November declaration, that attorneys who disqualified Moody from a case were always given Scott as a substitute, and vice versa. Disqualifying a judge is commonly called "papering."

According to Hennessey, Powser alleged that "then-Presiding Judge Terrance Duncan approved a system whereby all of Scott's papered cases went to Moody and vice versa." While Powser did claim Moody and Scott routinely got each other's cases, her declaration includes nothing about why it was done and does not say Duncan approved it.

In her story, Hennessey went on to report that "many defense attorneys said the purported system, which they view as retaliatory, has continued under Presiding Judge Stephen Sillman." But the story did not provide one quote from or reference to any attorney who said the judge-switching scheme involving Moody and Scott ever happened, much less that it continues. The Pine Cone could not locate a single defense attorney who would say he was part of Hennessey's "many."

Sillman told The Pine Cone there is no "formal policy" of the court for reassigning cases after a judge is papered. "Case assignments are and will continue to be based on allocating judicial resources in a manner that maintains efficiency in court operations, reduces internal scheduling conflicts for attorneys, and promotes the fair and expeditious resolution of cases before the bench," he said.

Later in her story about Scott, Hennessey reported it is "unclear whether the commission [on judicial performance] is investigating the conduct of Moody, Duncan or Sillman," and added, "Sillman denied rumors that the commission issued private letters of censure to him and Scott." Both these statements were printed without any supporting facts.

And Hennessey went on:

"Several defense attorneys said the alleged practice of reassigning Scott's and Moody's cases to each other was unfair if not unethical."

This was followed by a quote from Biegel, who supposedly said, "I think it's terrible. It shouldn't be done like that. Like a punishment. It should be done on a revolving basis."

But Biegel told The Pine Cone he called Hennessey after the story appeared to complain about the way this quote was used.

"I made it very clear to her that having my cases switched between Moody and Scott had never happened to me," Biegel said. "I have never seen that in Monterey County, and I've been practicing here for 31 years."

He said his quote was in response to a hypothetical question: "What if this is happening?" But it was used to make it seem as if Biegel were confirming it is happening.

"What was missing from my quote was the hypothetical part," Biegel said.

Several weeks ago, he said he papered Scott in a criminal case and was reassigned to Judge Richard Curtis. "So I couldn't exactly be 'exhibit one' on that subject," Biegel said.

Several other attorneys interviewed by The Pine Cone agreed that, while judges apparently do not like being papered and it often seems attorneys are given a substitute judge they would like even less in order to discourage the practice, there was no evidence Moody, Scott, Duncan and Sillman had any special arrangement to favor prosecutors.

And public defender Glen Nolte and defense attorney Tom Worthington said they believed reassignments were done for convenience or ease of scheduling.

"It happens to both sides," said a longtime Monterey attorney.

The Pine Cone could not find a single local lawyer who supported Powser's or the Herald's allegations about judicial papering.

But another attorney spoke up about his quotes being misused by The Herald.

"At the very end of the interview, Virginia Hennessey asked me about Judge Moody supposedly saying the presumption of innocence was a legal fiction," said Miguel Hernandez. "I told her 'I wasn't in the room and I didn't hear the conversation, so I can't defend him on that.' She used the quote to make it sound like I was criticizing him, which I wasn't."

BOWING TO PRESSURE

Tires usually lose about one pound of pressure per square inch (psi) per month. So, give your tires a quick visual inspection at every fill-up, and try to use a digital tire pressure gauge as often as possible. Properly inflated tires are safer, improve gas mileage, and extend the life of tires. On the other hand, neglected, under-inflated tires can get dangerously low, build up heat, wear unevenly, and wear out prematurely. All of these undesirable factors will likely lead to poor handling and reduced mileage. To get an accurate pressure reading, check the tire pressure when the tires are cold. Look at the owner's manual or the label on the driver's side post for proper inflation pressure.

HAVING AN IMPOUND ACCOUNT

In the eastern United States, if you talk about an impound account, you'll probably get a blank look for a while, and eventually the easterner will say, "Oh, you mean an escrow account." Different areas, different names. Different people, different priorities.

An impound account collects your property taxes and insurance on a monthly basis, then makes the payment when it is due—generally semiannually. Good idea? It depends on how you like to handle your finances. Some loans, especially those with minimal down payments, require impound accounts. What do you do, though, if the choice is yours?

Here's what it comes down to: If you'd prefer to have someone else collect a monthly sum from you and then make your semi-annual property tax payments for you, then you may view an impound account as something of a convenience, not to mention a possible release from emotional hassles. If, however, you take no pleasure in handing your money over before it is actually due and payable—given that you prefer to keep your money under your own control, thank you, and perhaps to be earning interest on it as well—then an impound account may not look very good in your eyes.

It's your call entirely. And that, in itself, is a good thing. For help with your real estate needs call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

The alligator who taught Jimi Hendrix a thing or two

By CHRIS COUNTS

IN CARMEL, perhaps the most dog-friendly place in our solar system, residents are accustomed to sharing a dining room or a bar with a fuzzy, four-legged patron. But the thought of an alligator lounging about in one of the city's swank watering holes would probably be a bit much for even the most devoted animal-loving local.

Monterey's own "Alligator" will play at the Sugar Reef restaurant Saturday, June 10, at 8 p.m.

Despite never having a hit record, the 64-year-old Alligator has managed to carve out a lasting niche for himself in the annals of rock 'n' roll. The son of a full-blooded Choctaw Indian and a native of the backwoods of the Louisiana Bayou, Alligator was a child prodigy who toured Europe with a gospel group at the tender age of 10. By the time Elvis shook his pelvis on "The Ed Sullivan Show" in 1956, the 12-year-old Alligator was already dazzling audiences with his larger-than-life stage persona and guitar wizardry.

These days, he takes a tasty mix of musical ingredients — including blues, country, r&b, Cajun, gospel and even ska — and stirs them into a spicy concoction. While his approach hasn't exactly lit up the Billboard charts, it has allowed one of the Monterey Peninsula's genuine musical treasures to earn a living doing what he loves for more than half a century.

Baby Alligator takes the stage

The longtime rocker won't be the only alligator in Carmel this weekend. When he plays at the Sugar Reef, Alligator is bringing along the Baby Alligator, too.

Just 8 years old, "Cowboy" Dhani Lenoir inherited more than just a fondness for cowboy hats from his father.

"Dhani's a miniature version of me," explained the senior Alligator, a regular performer on the casino circuit in Reno and Las Vegas. "He first went on stage at 2, and he played in front of 15,000 people at 3. That kid can just walk out on a stage and people who are slouching in their chairs sit upright. He has become quite a showman."

No kidding. Like his dad, Dhani plays the guitar with a style and a flair that recall rock legend Jimi Hendrix. But perhaps even more remarkable than the spectacle of an 8 year old plucking guitar strings with his teeth is the story Alligator tells about where Hendrix picked up the technique.

"Somebody said to me, 'There's a guy down the street imitating you,'" he recalled. "It turned out to be Jimi. I was playing the guitar behind my back in the late 1950s. Later, people would say to me that I did a great Hendrix act. It used to bother me, but in a radio interview Jimi named me as one of the main influences for his wild stage act."

In 1967, Alligator toured Europe with his oldest son, Byron, who is now 47. Between shows, the elder Lenoir introduced Byron to Hendrix, whose career was just starting to take off.

"Byron was playing saxophone at the time," remembered Alligator, the father of nine children. "After meeting Jimi, he never played sax again. He became infatuated with Jimi."

Today, nearly four decades after meeting his idol, Byron lives in France and continues to enjoy a successful career in Local musical treasure Alligator will be joined by his 8-year-old son, Dhani, when he performs at the Sugar Reef restaurant in Carmel Saturday, June 10.

The musical offerings just get better and better ...

THE MONTEREY Peninsula is home to an inordinate number of jazz musicians — many of them world class — who may move away from time to time but always seem to find their way back.

Michael Lent, who made his reputation locally during the early 1980s playing guitar for the Roger Eddy Band, moved to Los Angeles in the '90s and quickly landed work as a studio musician, a gig with Jeffrey Osborne, and finally a prestigious seat as lead guitarist for Barry Manilow.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

Currently performing with Manilow 30 weeks a year at the Las Vegas Hilton, Lent has moved back to the Monterey Peninsula on a part-time basis, and he will begin a regular monthly gig at Monterey Live on Alvarado Street.

At a recent Monterey Live performance, Lent managed to pull off the first Roger Eddy Band reunion in two decades — a night of music that featured Lent, Eddy, bassists Larry Antonino and Dennis Murphy, plus keyboardist Dave "Dasher" Kempton. He is excited about the prospect of playing his own material and promises to bring in an array of special guests from out of town.

Lent performs this Friday and Saturday (June 9 and 10) at the intimate Monterey venue and will be joined by fellow Manilow bandmate Ron Pedley on keyboards, drummer Kim Edmundson and bassist Dennis Murphy. Expect a wide variety of electric jazz. The music starts at 9 p.m. For tickets and information call (877) 548-3237.

Also performing June 10 at Monterey Live (with pianist Roger Kellaway), Bruce Foreman is an internationally known jazz guitarist who commutes between Southern California and the Monterey Peninsula.

Comfortable in a variety of musical settings, in addition to performing regularly with Kellaway, Foreman is an in-demand session musician and the founder of the JazzMasters Workshop. His playing was featured in Clint Eastwood's Academy Award Winning film "Million Dollar Baby". Foreman's gig at Monterey Live starts at 7 p.m.

A variation of Forman's latest project, Cow Bop, a hot jazz and western swing band, will make a stop at the KRML Jazz and Blues Company Saturday, June 17, at 7:30 p.m. Forman will be joined by David Jackson on bass, Mike McKinley on drums, George Young on saxophone, Pinto Pammy Forman on vocals, and whiz kid Noah Freedman on jazz violin. Across Highway 1 at the mouth of the Carmel Valley, Bixby Bistro offers live music five nights a week, and Friday night (June 9) will feature vocalist Jacqui Hope accompanied by pianist Bob Phillips. Hope, who teamed up with jazz guitarist Joseph Lucido for many years, is a sensuous and sultry jazz diva who recently returned from an extended stay in Hawaii. Other artists performing at Bixby Bistro this month include Johnny Fabulous on Saturday and Sunday; pianist Sonny G on Wednesday, June 14; vocalist Erin Gray with pianist Don Pendergrass on Thursday, June 15; and on Friday, June 17, a special feature dubbed "Night of the Divas" featuring Gray, Hope and Holli Moon accompanied by Bob Phillips. For starting times and reservations, call (831) 626-1814.

In 2003, the White Album Ensemble began a tradition at the Rio Center for the Performing Arts, presenting the Beatles' "White Album" live in concert. An eight-piece band made up of some of the area's top musicians, the group has gone on to perform a series of popular concerts recreating such classic Beatles albums as "Rubber Soul," "Revolver,"

"Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Heart Club Band" and "Magical Mystery Tour." Next Saturday, June 17, the White Album Ensemble will debut their performance of the Beatles' final two records, "Abbey Road" and "Let It Be" at the Golden State Theatre in Monterey. Recreating the landmark albums live, in their original song sequence, and with exact instrumentation whenever possible, the performance is a must see for all Beatles fans. Showtime is at 8 p.m. For tickets and more information, call (831) 372-4555.

Europe as a Jimi Hendrix impersonator.

"Byron is tall, he looks like Jimi, and he plays like Jimi," beamed his proud father.

Meanwhile, young Dhani is doing his best to follow in his dad's footsteps.

"I expect that whatever direction he takes, he will have a good foundation in American roots music," Alligator explained. "He loves Hank Williams and Chuck Berry and all that stuff."

In many ways, though, Dhani is just another 8-year-old kid. A third grader at Colton School in Monterey, the aspiring rock 'n' roller is also a good student.

"He's always been an avid reader," Alligator said. "If he's reading a book and cartoons come on the television, he goes back to his book."

The Sugar Reef is located on the southwest corner of Fifth and Dolores. For more information, call (831) 620-0700. To celebrate the release of his second recording (and his ninth birthday!), Dhani will play at Storm the Tower (formerly Morgan's) Sunday, June 25, at 5 p.m. For more information, call (831) 373-5601.

Make it a Winery Weekend with MST's Carmel Valley Grapevine Express

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

UNTIL VERY recently, I'd never taken a Monterey-Salinas Transit bus. I've spent plenty of time on public transportation in more urban environments. But I admit I was skeptical about this mode of mobility on the Peninsula. Once I made a round-trip from Pacific Grove to Salinas, an experience that wasn't exactly stellar, mostly because of the crazy elderly fellow who kept shouting obscenities at the absurdly patient driver (kudos to you).

Not entirely ready to give up on our local gas-friendly means of transportation, I decided to give MST another go when it started running Line 24, the Carmel Valley Grapevine Express. Living in Pacific Grove, I've learned you have to be extremely careful when it comes to kicking up your heels, and, when it comes to wine tasting, it is very easy to get ahead of yourself. That's why I decided to play it safe by taking the bus. And I was even able to give my designated driver the day off!

As the name indicates, the Carmel Valley Grapevine Express offers locals and visitors a self-guided tour of our local wine-tasting venues. With magazines such as Wine Spectator and Wine Enthusiast bringing attention to the area's new artisan vintners, and with the traditional growers getting more and more fame, now is a perfect time to hop aboard MST and experience the fantastic grape-growing efforts of our region.

The Carmel Valley Grapevine Express runs Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays and begins at the Monterey Bay Aquarium. It makes its way along Cannery Row and stops at the Monterey Conference Center, Monterey Transit Plaza, The Barnyard and Carmel Rancho before continuing about 12 miles from Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road.

The 11 stops: Taste of Monterey & Bargetto Wine, Baywood Cellars & Silver Mountain Vineyards, The Bountiful Basket at The Barnyard (offers wine, beer and gourmet oil and vinegar tastings), Rancho Cellars, Boëté Winery & Parsonage Village Vineyards, Château Julien (the only combined winery and tasting room in Carmel Valley), Heller Estate, Talbott & Georis (Heller's wines are 100 percent certified organic with dry-farmed vineyards; Talbott specializes in Chardonnay and Pinot Noir), Joullian Vineyards & Château Sinnet (Joullian makes delicious estate reds and three styles of Chardonnay), Paradise Wine Bar, Bernardus Winery and San Saba.

Many wine tasting rooms charge a fee ($3 to $5) for wine tasting, although some will apply this fee toward a purchase. You typically get an opportunity to taste three to six wines. If you're traveling with someone who doesn't mind sharing, buy one wine tasting and you both can sip from the same glass. A simple rule for casual wine tasting is never visit more than three wineries in a day. I'd stretch it to five if you're taking MST and have a safe way to get home once the ride is over. If you break this rule, not only are you likely to get tipsy, all the wines will start to taste alike, serving more trees and habitat than houses. The Pebble Beach Co. development would also create jobs, support services, charitable contributions and tax revenues to continue forest maintenance and habitat restoration.

Alan Williams, president of the Carmel Development Company, planners for the development, is hopeful the commission will consider the public favors the measure.

"About the only people we have against us is the Sierra Club and the coastal commission staff," Williams said. "And I say staff because I'm not so sure the commission will come to the same conclusion."

But the coastal commission staff report says the areas slated for development in Measure A — about 600 acres in two dozen locations in Del Monte Forest — also contain "significant wetlands habitat" and developing those areas "could be expected to result in significant impacts to these resources."

The report also criticizes the plan for allowing an equestrian center in the Sawmill Gulch conservation easement, a former quarry area the coastal commission previously required to be restored and protected as mitigation for the Pebble Beach Co.'s Spanish Bay project.

"The proposal to allow intensive recreational development at Sawmill Gulch is not consistent with the Coastal Act," the report indicates. "Approving this land use change for a protected conservation easement area would also set an extremely adverse precedent for the hundreds of conservation easements in the coastal zone."

But the Pebble Beach Co. sent a letter to the coastal commission last week proposing to move the equestrian center from Sawmill Gulch to the Pebble Beach Co.'s corporation yard at Sunridge and Lopez.

Verbanec said the concession could sway commissioners who are on the fence about the project.

"If they don't have to give up those easements then they might be willing to pass Measure A," he said.

Massara said the offer to move the equestrian center is a last-ditch effort to convince commissioners to approve the project.

"It seems clear to me that the coastal commission welcomes the idea of some final development plan for the Del Monte Forest," Massara said. "But whatever they [Pebble Beach Co.] propose has to be consistent with the fact that the last remaining Monterey Pine trees are ESHA."

"The coastal commission is supposed to be preserving land, encouraging coastal access, encouraging coastal accommodations and encouraging coastal recreation," Williams said. "And that's all this project does."

The June 14 coastal commission hearing in Santa Rosa, at which commissioners are expected to decide the fate of Measure A, begins at 9 a.m. at the Fountain Grove Inn, 101 Fountain Grove Parkway.

Sandy Claws

By Margot Petit Nichols

PUNKIE & LULU Mane, 10 and 8, respectively, are sisters and good friends. Punkie is a black and white toy fox terrier, and smiling Lulu is a fawn-colored Chihuahua.

They get along famously and sleep together in their doggie bed in the day and with Mom Joyce and Dad Lenny at night. They have special pet stairs to help them climb onto the master bed.

They have been Manes since they were pups. Little Lulu was so tiny when she was young, she fit inside Mom's bathrobe pocket and delighted in being carried about the house in that manner, all warm and snugly.

The Mane home is in the countryside of Petaluma, and as all country residents can attest, they are fair game as a dropping-off point for displaced cats. The Manes have adopted seven felines who arrived, one by one, on their doorstep. Punkie and Lulu have taken to all the cats except Katie, who scratches. The other six cats give Katie a wide berth when passing her, and Lulu and Punkie don't let Katie up on the bed. All the others are invited up for an occasional sleep-over.

Punkie and Lulu are here on a vacation from Petaluma and the cats. They travel well on short trips and come to Carmel twice a year. While here, they are always treated to chicken, so they associate Carmel with gourmet food, as do many other visitors. At home, they split a can of all-natural dog food for dinner.

When we encountered them on the beach Thursday in the late afternoon, they had just completed their constitutional and were longing for a rest. When last we saw them, they were toddling off to the Cypress Inn for refreshments and to meet the locals.

John (Jack) B. Robertson

May 7, 1916 ~ May 29, 2006

John (Jack) Butler Robertson, age 90, died at his Pebble Beach home on Memorial Day, May 29, which was appropriate for a retired Naval officer. A native of Chicago, he was born May 7, 1916. Jack received his BA from Northwestern University and retired from the US Navy as a Captain after 28 years of service. Jack has made his home in Pebble Beach for 38 years but, for the past 65 years, he loved spending his summers with his wife in Farmington, ME at the house where they spent their honeymoon. Jack taught at San Carlos School for one year and at St. Angela's School for three years.

Jack was a member of St. Angela Merici Church. He lent his beautiful voice to his parish choir and to the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society.

Jack loved playing golf and served as a Marshall at the AT & T. He was a skilled calligraphist, enjoying walking and, also, anything related to Scotland.

Jack was preceded in death by his wife, Betty, in 2005 and by his sister, Jane Robertson. He is survived by his sons, John (Charlotte) Robertson of Juneau, AK and their children, John, Isaac, James and Ann and William "Bill" (Jane) Robertson of South China, ME and their children, William and Emma; his daughter, Elizabeth "Betsy" Johnson of Pebble Beach, her children, Amy (Andy) and Andrew and her grandchildren, Hallie and John Douglas and Jack's sister, Elizabeth Beith of Elburn, IL and her son, Bill (Karen).

At Jack's request, no services will be held. Following cremation under the direction of The Paul Mortuary, inurnment will take place at Fairview Cemetery in Farmington, ME. Contributions are suggested to the Salvation Army, PO Box 1884, Monterey, 93942 or to Doctors Without Borders, 6 E. 39th St., NY, NY, 10016.

“We want more dogs — we have 10 dogs, but we want 20. Wouldn’t you want to be in a film with your dog that also has Tony Curtis and Betty White in it?”

One Pacific Grove pooch, Bosco, already has a part, and roles of the limo driver, surfers, blondes and redheads, waiters and waitresses, security guards, golf caddies and many others that garnered donations between $150 and $2,000 are already sold out.

But Rocco still needs travel agency customers, tourists riding the Movie Tour Bus, diners in several Peninsula restaurants, dancers at Mission Ranch, parents and kids at the Monterey Bay Aquarium, airport passengers and beach bums. Donations for those parts run from $100 to $300.

Rocco said the idea of using movie making for money making arose during a meeting of bored board members.

“We do a fundraiser every year to support the commission, and people on the board got tired of sit-down dinners and silent auctions,” Rocco said, so the president suggested a new approach.

“It’s an incredible idea that’s never been done before,” said Rocco, a screenwriter who volunteered to tackle the task of crafting a screenplay for actors who aren’t really actors.

“I thought it was a fabulous idea,” she said. “It wasn’t easy to sit down and write — it was tricky to come up with a story that would be funny, interesting, bring in all the areas of the county and make it not only interesting to local people, but to people who are not local,” she said. “I’m also directing it, and I have to tell you, it’s been hysterical. We have had the camera crew on the floor laughing.”

Like all artistic endeavors, those involved commit their share of bloopers — tripping and falling, getting their luggage caught on various fixed objects, using banned words, saying their lines backward.

After the crew finishes shooting around July 4 — with the exception of filming at the Monterey Jazz Festival in September — the group will work with a professional editor from Los Angeles, who is donating his time, to complete the 90-minute film by late fall. “Where’s Marty?” is set to debut at the State Theatre in downtown Monterey sometime between Thanksgiving and Christmas, and it will appear in area hotels.

“They will put it in the TV loop [which is available continuously in hotel rooms] to show guests some ideas of what to do and where to go,” Rocco said.

The film could be entered in competitions and will be taken to tourism conventions across the country, according to Rocco. “And we’ll be selling DVDs.”

For more information on “Where’s Marty?” and to see a list of available parts, visit www.montereyfilm.org.

John Ross Tolan

John Ross Tolan passed away Wednesday May 24 2006 at Community Hospital of Monterey Peninsula. He was 59. He was born in Oakland, CA in 1947. He attended Carmel High School, where he was an all league football player in 1964 and '65. He worked as a carpenter on many houses on the Monterey Peninsula. He enjoyed the outdoors, especially fly fishing at the family cabin in Warner Valley and rockfishing off the coast in Big Sur. He is survived by his two sons, David and Jamie Tolan, his mother Nancy Tolan, his fiance Deborah Cowsill, his sister Susan Corl and numerous relatives. A life celebration of John’s life will be held at 1pm on Sunday June 25th at the community park in Carmel Valley. The family suggests donations should be sent to California Trout, Inc. 870 Market St. Suite 1185 San Francisco CA 94102, or your favorite charity.

PICKETS

"Many people have the mistaken impression that those are our employees out there," said Andy Miller, commercial division manager for DMC. "When we tell them what is going on, their whole perspective changes. People have been misled."

While holding up a sign all day is not a difficult job, the picketers, who range from teenage to middle age, have to stay on their feet most of the time and are exposed to the weather. Most wear hats to protect their faces.

On a sunny day in May in front of the Sally J. Griffin Senior Center in Pacific Grove, Brigid, who appears to be in her mid-40s, holds a large sign with another picketer, a man probably 20 years younger. Brigid, who is a hairstylist at night and on weekends, doesn't mind picketing since it offers her time to practice what she really wants to do.

"I'm studying to become an evangelist," she said through a Pine Cone interpreter.

Dressed as if going to church, she passes the time by reading "Sueña y Ganaras el Mundo" (Dream and You Will Win the World,) a religious book she bought at her church.

"It's a really good book," she said. "You should read it even if you are not a religious person."

Using a pen in her left hand to mark passages in the book, she simultaneously supports the protest banner with her right.

"I'm used to standing," she said.

'I am not authorized to speak'

Brigid, like the other picketers, heard about the job through friends, most of whom live in Salinas. She, along with many picketers, are bused into Pacific Grove by the union every morning and picked up after work.

She declined to say how much the union paid her and whether she was paid in cash or by check. Instead, Brigid, who didn't speak English, reached into her pocket and pulled out a strip of paper that read, "I am not authorized and have been told not to speak regarding this hand billing or picketing activity.”

Questions and comments were directed to Local 605 field representatives, who were contacted but declined to speak to The Pine Cone on record. Two other local union leaders also refused the request. They directed questions to two San Jose union leaders who did not return phone messages.

One picketer, who didn't want to be identified, said they're all paid just under $9 per hour and don't receive benefits.

“They are paying them more than minimum wage,” Miller said. “But the union is paying them a lot less than what our carpenters make, and I'm sure a lot less than what the union pays their own carpenters. Still, if you do the math, the picketing is a significant investment for the union. You are talking more than $180,000 a year.”

DMC, which calls itself the “Monterey Peninsula's leading building contractor,” pays its employees based on merit and skill, as opposed to the “prevailing wage.”

On Wednesday, six sign-holders stood outside the DMC office at 1219 Forest Ave. Although there have been a few run-ins with local union leaders and DMC employees, Miller said the picketers keep to themselves.

“They are very nice people making a living,” he said. “I have nothing against them. They are just trying to make a paycheck.”

Just down the road, Jehu, his brother Robelio, 21, and Sergio, 23, stake themselves outside the SFB Morse Pebble Beach gate five days a week.

With an AM/FM radio tuned to a Spanish station and a bottle of Aquafina water at his feet, Robelio, a recent immigrant to the United States, said he doesn't mind the job.

“We have to lean into the radio because we can't hear it because of the traffic noise,” he said.

A baseball hat keeps the sun out of his face, and a hooded sweatshirt keeps him warm when the fog rolls in. When his feet get tired, Robelio grasps the sign frame while sitting on a portion of the Highway 68 guard rail, which he pads with an old jacket.

The picketers get two breaks, one at 9:30 a.m. and at noon for lunch. Local 605 does not provide a portable toilet for the picketers. If the three have to use a restroom, they go about a quarter-mile to Safeway on Forest Avenue.

Sergio, who is originally from Michoacan, Mexico, used to work at Olive Garden in Salinas, where all three live.

“They paid more money,” he said. “When I'm done with this job, I might go back to work there.”

He sends a portion of his monthly income to his parents in Mexico.

Jehu has two children, a toddler and a 6-week old. His wife worked until a couple of months before the arrival of their newest baby. “They pay was OK,” he said. “But now with just one income it's harder.”

Although the work is fine for now, Jehu and Sergio said they have similar, long-term goals.

“I want to work in construction,” Sergio said. “But I want to study English first because that's very important.”

While many of the sign-holders didn't know exactly what they were picketing for, they didn't seem to care.

The union has targeted DMC for about one year. Before that, it went after two other local construction companies.

“We have been told it's a two-year plan,” Miller said. “I'm not so sure all the union members know all this money is being spent toward that.”

Local 605 gained notoriety in 2005 by placing a giant inflatable rat, complete with fangs, in front of Robert Louis Stevenson Lower and Middle School, where DMC was working. Some parents expressed outrage at the stunt.

Pacific Grove Police Cmdr. Tom Uretsky said the police department hasn't had any problems with the union-hired protesters.

“The majority of our complaints are from people who just don't like picketers,” Uretsky said.

Despite the effort to discredit DMC, Miller said the union activity seems to have had no negative effect on the construction company.

“If anything, it has increased awareness of our company, and our business seems to be increasing,” he said. “Whether they are directly responsible, I can only guess.”

'Vexatious litigant' goes head to head with sushi restaurant

By KELLY NIX

THE DISABLED man who filed more than 400 federal lawsuits against Central Coast restaurants and businesses alleging violations of the Americans With Disabilities Act will soon square off with a Carmel restaurant.

Jarek Molski, who was deemed a "vexatious litigant" in federal and state court, claims he injured himself while using a restroom at Robata Grill in the Barnyard shopping center on Dec. 5, 2003.

"He claims he suffered injuries to his upper extremities from lack of a hand rail at the toilet, and fumbled with a door handle that could have been more pressure-sensitive," according to court documents filed by Doron Ohel, Robata's Cupertino-based attorney.

On June 19, the two parties will meet in a San Jose courtroom in an effort to resolve the claim. Molski is seeking punitive damages of $4,000 per day from the restaurant.

Molski also claims he was "embarrassed and angered" as a result of the alleged incident.

According to court documents, in nearly 200 cases Molski filed, he claimed injuries to his upper extremities. It was "not uncommon for him to make multiple claims for injuries he purportedly sustained on the same day."

In a four-day period in 2003, Molski filed 16 federal lawsuits claiming he sustained at least one injury each day, court documents indicate.

Molski's lawsuit was the "proverbial straw that broke the camel's back," and it forced Robata's owners to the verge of bankruptcy, court records show. Robata has since remedied all ADA violations.

CONDORS

lodge tiles from his roof.

■ The surface of an outdoor massage table — marked by a series of long parallel gashes — was destroyed by condors.

■ In search of a drink, a condor poked a large hole in a tarp covering a pool.

■ Numerous hot tub covers have been upended by thirsty condors.

The condor's preference for high-end homes seems to be have more to do with their dramatic locations than anything.

"They typically choose homes on ridge tops because they're like runways in the sky," Burnett said.

So what does a resident do if a condor moves into his backyard?

"Don't put out a welcome mat," Burnett suggested. "Try to chase them away."

And if all else fails, bring in the heavy artillery: the garden hose.

VWS also recommends beleaguered homeowners install a motion-detecting automated "Scarecrow" sprinkler system if condors are giving them trouble.

"They cost us about $90 each," Burnett explained. "We've donated a handful of them. We set them up temporarily, and then we pull them off after the condor gives up."

Evidently, condors like to drink water, not bathe in it. But the birds are noted to smell particularly rancid, so maybe a good bath wouldn't be such a bad thing. For now, though, the condors' aversion to water is a big help to researchers, who hope to make the birds more independent.

"You're better off hosing them," Burnett insisted. "It's tough love. They don't need a helping hand. They're close to being wild condors. Their next generation will be."

Not ready to settle down

In late March, The Carmel Pine Cone reported the discovery by the VWS of the first evidence in more than 100 years that condors are trying to breed in Monterey County. After hacking through some of Big Sur's backcountry brush, a researcher stumbled upon a nest, which was located in the hollow of a burned-out redwood tree.

Sadly, Burnett reported this week the nest has been abandoned by the young condor couple. But he said the discovery is still cause for optimism.

"We were very excited about the discovery, but realistic at the same time," he said. "[A pair of young condors] have a lot of issues to work out. They mate for life."

Burnett equated the nesting attempt with "playing house." "It's a great sign," he explained. "They're practicing for the real thing."

As recently as 1987, only 27 California condors survived, all in captivity. With the species on the brink of extinction, the VWS began releasing condors into the wild in 1997 and now monitors 38 condors in Central California. For more information about the VWS, visit www.ventanaws.org.

A crucial moment

IF ALL politics is local, then next week's hearing by the California Coastal Commission on the future of Del Monte Forest is a crucial moment for democracy in this state.

That's because, while commissioners, their staff, representatives of the Pebble Beach Co. and members of the public will spend hours in Santa Rosa Wednesday discussing the Monterey pine, hotel rooms, golf and horses, underlying all that talk will be a single question: Should the will of the voters of Monterey County be respected?

The coastal commission staff is famously contemptuous of local voters, private property owners, city councils, and even (on occasion) the commissioners they work for. They have also been known to thumb their noses at the U.S. and California Constitutions when it suited them. From the moment Measure A was passed by the Monterey County electorate five years ago, it was a foregone conclusion that the coastal commission staff would try to keep the measure from going into effect. They certainly didn't disappoint, waging a nonstop campaign against the P.B. Co.'s plan to eliminate most new development in the Forest and protect hundreds of acres of trees while building a new golf course and a few hotel rooms. The coastal commission staff worships only one god, and that is the God of No Development. All other considerations fall by the wayside. To them, the public's will, as expressed at the ballot box, is just a triviality.

Thankfully, however, the coastal commissioners themselves are actually in charge. And most of them are elected officials who bring the respect for voters the holder of an elected office naturally feels.

This does not mean the nearly two-thirds vote in favor of Measure A by the people of Monterey County in November 2000 should automatically warrant a yes vote by the coastal commission on the measure. But it absolutely requires commissioners to give serious consideration to the reasons behind that overwhelming public mandate:

■ That the level of development approved for Del Monte Forest by the coastal commission in the 1980s — many hundreds of homes in place of untouched forest — cannot be ignored as a possibility for the future. The current coastal commission might not allow so much development to take place. But a future one could. And so could a court. By offering to turn those residential tracts into dedicated open space, the P. B. Co. is doing a tremendous public service.

■ That the native Monterey pine forest cannot simply be left alone. Surrounded by the cities of Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel, and interspersed with residential neighborhoods, it must be managed to remain intact. Doing so will require expertise, effort and money. The development envisioned by Measure A is the only way anyone has offered to come up with that money.

■ That private property rights are an important part of the American system of liberty and justice for all and must be respected.

Will coastal commissioners take the time to weigh these important principles? We will find out on Wednesday.

Letters to the Editor

Supports new equestrian site

Dear Editor,

One factor working against the Pebble Beach Co.'s Measure A is the proposed easement transfer. This would have involved exchanging several acres of easements in some old sand mining pits with little habitat value for much larger conservation easements in natural forest presently zoned for hundreds of houses.

Easement exchange could set a precedent. People in Pacific Grove's Del Monte Park neighborhood where I live have opposed it because the new equestrian center would be too close to the neighborhood.

But now that the P.B. Co. has proposed moving the equestrian center to a former rock quarry adjacent to the company's corporation yard with no easements involved, everyone can benefit. If Measure A is approved by the coastal commission, nearly 900 new acres of Monterey pine forest will be preserved in conservation easements. The greenbelt at the foot of Del Monte Park, presently zoned for up to 56 houses, will be an easement. The golfers will be happy. The P.B. Co. will be able to finance continued maintenance of the forest — paid for by golfers and hotel guests — instead of selling real estate. The Sierra Club will keep the easements they have fought so hard to retain, and restoration of these sand mining pits can continue.

About all those crosses

Dear Editor,

It was a perfect day, thanks to the stunning spring weather and the spontaneous outpouring of emotion from everyone on the beach: volunteers, beachgoers, Carmelites, Cachaguans and tourists. For at least a day everyone got together to experience and remember the loss of all those brave souls in Iraq. It reminded me that it is not just the physical beauty of our area that draws us here and keeps us despite the crazy rents: Carmelites are a special breed.

Also, will everyone please stop yelling at the Carmel Police and city for messing with us? Did we have a permit? No. Did we need a permit? No. We had no media, only 20 guests, no pamphlets or protests, no flags, no music, no booze, no sponsoring organization. My friends and I did it ourselves as private citizens on a public beach. Would the city have granted us a permit? I doubt it. Would the decision have been political? No. Mayor Sue may be a Republican (I am not sure, but everyone seems to think so ...) and a former CIA person, but who can argue about a Memorial on Memorial Day? The permit would have been declined for bureaucratic reasons. Were the police grumpy at the apparition of 2,500 crosses on their beach without notice? Absolutely.

Did Corporal Steve Rana threaten us with arrest in any way? No. Did he tell us to go home? No. Did he, albeit grudgingly, thank us for the sentiment? Yes. The Carmel cops are mostly veterans, after all.

And, finally: Did the Carmel Police and city make us dismantle the memorial early? Not really. Corporal Steve did express his desire that we break down earlier than later, but I am a restaurant guy who had worked three weeks straight and been up since 3 a.m., and I had to be back in Cachagua by 6 p.m. to cook. The 4 p.m. breakdown time was mutually agreed upon, and like everything else in the day, was kismet. The crosses were reverently carried up the 13th Avenue stairs by old people, yuppies, middle school girls, surfers and slackers, most with tears in their eyes.

The fact that so many crosses had filled the beach and were gone so quickly was a fitting metaphor for the whole purpose of the day: remembering the dead. Those kids were all here, and now they are not.

So, please, if you call the city, don't yell. Say thanks for their forbearance, and perhaps encourage them to let us do it with their blessing next time.

 Al Smith's
"Carmel Legends"

When one speaks of a "Carmel House," everyone gets an immediate mental picture of what a Carmel house looks like. Yet it's like a dream; the more one tries to examine a detail, the mistier the whole scene becomes until it dissolves in a melange of stone walls, picket fences, soaring gables. Black Forest chimneys and small-paned windows. There's a reason for this, for Carmel contains almost every kind of architecture in the world.

In the 20's a man named Hugh Comstock made a contribution to Carmel style, which is where most dreams begin. It happened by accident, as many good things do. His wife, Mayotta, made hundreds of rag dolls which she called "Otsy Totsies" and sold to Carmel visitors. To house her growing collection, thoughtful Hugh built her a full size doll house with arched doorway, leaded windows, a crooked chimney and exposed structural members, all the ingredients of a cottage in fairyland. As the doll collection continued to grow, he built more doll houses. People loved them, and today Carmel is dotted with Comstock houses. Most of them built in the 20's and 30's. Perhaps the best known is The Tuck Box, a tiny tea house on Dolores Street. A number can be found together in the vicinity of Torres and Sixth Avenue. Two even bearing the names of Hansel and Gretel.

The source of the odor was difficult to find, so hotel maintenance and PG&E were notified. After about 30 minutes the odor dissipated completely and did not register on the gas detector. A secondary search of the complex showed the area was clear, so PG&E was canceled. The hotel staff was advised to contact the fire department if the smell returned again. At this point the call was completed and all units returned to the station at 0703 hours. The hotel did call PG&E to have a representative inspect the boiler room appliances when available.
