Wayward dump truck plows into P.B. home

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TOM HEFLING arrived at his Sloat Road home Monday morning just moments after an unoccupied dump truck careened down the street, through an intersection, across a vacant lot, through an oak tree and over a flower bed to crash into the front of his house. The 15-ton truck, operated by 33-year-old Watsonville resident Frank Ortiz, caved in part of the garage wall and cut into the eave, coming to rest near Hefling's front door. No one was injured.

"I just came back from the post office and thought, 'Jeez, what did I miss?'" said Hefling, a longtime Del Monte Forest resident who appeared unperturbed, and perhaps even a little amused, by the large truck embedded in the front of his house. "I just missed it by a couple of minutes."

The incident occurred around 11 a.m. Oct. 2. Ortiz said he had been standing at the rear of the Peterbuilt dump truck using a button-activated reversing mechanism to hook the three-axle rig to a trailer parked on Sloat Road when the truck "jumped twice" and then began rolling down the hill.

"I ran after it, but I couldn't catch it," Ortiz said. With other people working and walking in the area, and Sloat Road being one of the Forest's busier streets, Ortiz said he was terrified the truck would hit someone. Though upset at the damage to Hefling's house, he was relieved no one was

Firefighters cut the power to the house, as the crash affected some of the lines. But the building appeared structurally sound, and Hefling checked inside to survey

Coastal commission concerned about desal energy use

■ Permits to be reviewed for impact on global warming

By KELLY NIX

ON THE heels of Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger's efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, the state's coastal commission announced it will place new scrutiny on desalination plants because of their high energy use.

Concerns about emissions from desalination plants "is an emerging issue," said Tom Luster, coastal commission analyst, at a desal symposium last week in Monterey. "That will be part of our review for desal with the new state attention on greenhouse gases. We will be looking at what sort of emissions would be due to a desal proposal."

On Sept. 27, Schwarzenegger signed a bill to reduce the state's greenhouse gas emissions comparable to 1990 levels, or about 25 percent.

The commission's new directive could pose additional challenges for desal operators who are coming under steady fire from environmentalists and the coastal commission for their opposition to desal plants that use once-through cooling, a method that kills marine organisms.

The commission's new emphasis on greenhouse gases will require desal applicants to provide more information in

Bank building not historic despite last-minute twist

By MARY BROWNFIELD

BARNET SEGAL'S name is on buildings throughout the Monterey Peninsula, because the foundation he founded before his death distributes money to nonprofits and other worthy endeavors.

He opened Carmel's first bank, helped found the Carmel Art Association, was first president of the Carmel Business Association (now the chamber of commerce) and issued loans for many buildings in town, but he is not an historically significant figure, a divided city council decided Tuesday night. At least, not in terms of his association with the former savings and loan building at Dolores and Seventh where he sold insurance in semiretirement.

The council discussed Segal's importance to determine whether it should reconsider an earlier decision the 34-year-old structure — currently occupied by Homescapes Carmel and slated for demolition by developer John Mandurrigo — is not historically significant.

That vote had council members Mike Cunningham, Gerard Rose and Erik Bethel against requiring the bank building be saved, and Mayor Sue McCloud and councilwoman Paula Hazdovac in

CHOMP to open new ER, ICU, operating rooms

By KELLY NIX

COMMUNITY HOSPITAL's new, 100,000-square-foot South Pavilion, set to open at the end of October, will mean shorter waiting times for patients and state-of-the-art technology for better treatment. The building also includes an emergency room about four times bigger than the old ER, a new intensive care unit and eight high-tech operating suites.

Dogs seeking limelight urged to camp it up at calendar casting call

By MARY BROWNFIELD

"I'M SURE we'll be hearing from the cat lovers," Mayor Sue McCloud said at the start of Tuesday's city council meeting. But everyone knows Carmel-by-the-Sea is a doggy kind of town, and McCloud invited people with photogenic pooches living in Carmel and Carmel Valley to show up for the "Canine Casting Call" at Carmel Beach Saturday, Oct. 14. There, an "American Idol"-inspired production will commence as three judges select the 12 pets who will star in the city's first official dog calendar. Half the $10 entry fee, and part of the proceeds from selling the calendars once they're published, will benefit the SPCA.

Anda-Burghardt agency co-owner Jeff Burghardt, whose company was hired by the city to help market Carmel, said he was surprised to learn no one else had published a local dog calendar.

"It will take advantage of a well known aspect of the city and not only create a fun thing, but regionally and nationally generate awareness," Burghardt said.

But he wanted the endeavor to "become a much bigger thing than creating and selling a calendar," so he decided on a Westminster-meets-"American-Idol" production.

"I thought, 'Let's blow this thing out and have a lot of fun doing it, and get the SPCA involved,'" he said. "The casting is almost a bigger event" than the calendar itself.

So next Saturday, eligible dogs (who live in zip codes 93921, 93922, 93923 and 93924) will be filmed and photographed as they strut their stuff on stage at Carmel Beach. Burghardt said the video will be streaming on a website, www.carmelcalendar.com, and a "yearbook" including every dog's photo will be posted there afterward.

KSBW evening news anchor Erin Clark will host the event, and judges Walt DeFaria, Denny LeVett and Sherrie McCullough will undertake the tough challenge of selecting

City hopes 'gateway monument' sign will lure lost tourists

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A STONE sign at Highway 1 and Ocean Avenue would help visitors, and their checkbooks, find their way to Carmel-by-the-Sea, according to city councilman Erik Bethel. He proposed asking Caltrans for permission to build one in the public right of way at one of the main city entrances, and the council, with the exception of Mayor Sue McCloud, agreed Tuesday.

RENDERING/ERIC MILLER

One of architect Eric Miller's rough sketches of a 'gateway monument' sign at Highway 1 and Ocean Avenue that would lead tourists into town includes his favorite features — an iron finial, tile roof and lamp on the Carmel stone tower.

With a donation from Carmel businessman Denny LeVett, architect Eric Miller will design the monument. He already drafted some rough plans for free and presented them Oct. 3. In his "romantic idea of what it could be," Miller proposed a Carmel stone expanse with a tower at one end and a curving, low wall in front. "Carmel-by-the-Sea" would appear on a background of bricks arranged in a herringbone pattern, and a bench-like ledge would span the length below it. The tower could be topped with a tile roof, a finial or some other adornment. The monument would likely be placed on the northwest corner of the intersection, though city administrator Rich Guillen's staff report suggested the southwest corner as an alternative location.

"It uses residential materials in a way that feels like it could be an archaeological fragment of an old home," Miller said. "Because it's primarily a residential community, and a residential community of artists, so it shouldn't just be a straight line, just a boring sign."

Based on that concept, Guillen estimated building the monument would cost $50,000 to $100,000 in city tax dollars and/or community donations.

Bethel said the idea of a monument sign — and the discovery Caltrans has a program allowing public entities to apply for them, but only until Dec. 31 — arose because visitors reported having trouble finding the city. He said the chamber of commerce and the Carmel Residents Association support the idea.

But councilman Mike Cunningham worried about working with the state agency and ending up with a design too expensive or impractical to build. He was reluctant to risk wasting LeVett's money, as well as Miller's and the city's time, so he suggested the architect draft designs that could work in multiple possible locations. He also recommended the council set a cost target and said the design should fit well with Carmel's community character.

Bethel said the council only needed to answer one ques-

Jack London's efforts pay off to help fight Lou Gehrig's Disease

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE WINNER of the 2006 Toyota Prius was happy, and so was Jack London's owner Steve Whitfill, who walked away from his first car raffle with $33,000 for the ALS Bay Area — enough, he said, to cover a year of caregiving for a Lou Gehrig's Disease sufferer in the clinic at Ryan Ranch.

Last Monday, Whitfill told of how he and Jack London's Grill co-owner Jack Hill, friends, family, professional athletes, caddies and perfect strangers helped sell 484 raffle tickets at $100 each for the car. He initially feared he would be unable to sell enough to pay off the Prius and make a sizable donation to the foundation that helps ALS sufferers and their families.

But buyers forked out the bucks. Whitfill, a graduate of Louisiana State University, said he even had the help of friends visiting from the Pelican State who eventually raised 10 percent of the money donated to the ALS Foundation.

Whitfill said he heard one of the Louisianians exclaim, "We made 53 phone calls from out here, and not one person turned us down!" Some of those contributions came from elected officials in Louisiana, according to Whitfill, who said the visitors and donors expressed a desire to return the charity bestowed on them in the aftermath of last year's hurricanes.

Whitfill also raised cash during the Bruceski 5 dinner and auction held at his Carmel restaurant during September's First Tee Open. The Bruceski is named for pro golfer Tom Watson's longtime caddie (and Jack London's regular), Bruce Edwards, who died of ALS three years ago. Whitfill said caddies and golfers bought tickets and donated auction items.

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

Vulgarity unwelcome in library

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Victim reported the loss of a digital camera with telescopic lens in a black camera bag while patronizing Carmel Beach at the foot of Ocean Avenue on Saturday, Sept. 16. If located, please notify reporting party.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Victim reported the loss of a zippered black leather portfolio-style notebook while in the business district. If located, please notify reporting party

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Reporting party wanted to report receiving harassing phone calls from an ex-girlfriend while at work.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic collision, hit-and-run on public property on Seventh Avenue. Vehicle was drivable.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Suspected vandalism on Mission Street. A resident called to report possible vandalism to her property that may occur on Sept. 19. She stated she spoke to a contractor friend of hers who told her someone else was going to vandalize her property. She then in turn called that person and she stated they told her they were mad at her and they were going to remove the lights she placed on the outside of her apartment. She wanted police to call the person and stop the vandalism before it occurred. She stated the number, which the officer noted to be long distance, and was advised to call if anything happened to her property. A courtesy call to the subject will be attempted. Information only report.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine, rescue and ambulance responded to a request for public assistance for a water leak at Oak Knoll and Forest. Emergency personnel discovered a broken garden pipe along with a broken main valve that could not be shut off to a water meter. Cal Am was notified and a representative was on scene within 10 minutes. The rep was able to temporarily secure the main and then called for a crew to come and make necessary repairs. At this point the scene was secure, so the engine and rescue returned to the station. Ambulance remained on scene until the Cal Am rep was completed and then returned to the station.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ambulance responded to a mutual aid request from Westmed for a medical emergency on Viscaino. A female in her 80s suffering from cardiac arrest was transported to CHOMP.

WHAT TO TAKE FOR THAT BURNING FEELING

If your engine is idling rough, it may be that you have a burned valve. This can be diagnosed with a compression test that measures the pressure in all cylinders. When the pressure gauge reads lower than normal, pressure is leaking out of the combustion chamber. A burned valve, which can no longer hold a leak-free seal due to overheating, is usually limited to exhaust valves because they run much hotter than intake valves. To repair a burned valve, it is necessary to remove the cylinder head, replace the bad valve, and reface/repair the valve seat. If one valve has failed, preventive maintenance and common sense usually dictate that they all be replaced while you are at it.

your car to us immediately if you sense a rough idle. By taking care of the problem as soon as possible, we might be able to prevent further costly repairs. Preventative maintenance is always the most cost effective way to keep your car in great shape. Please don't wait until it needs to be towed to us. Let us perform preventative maintenance on a regular basis before that happens.

P.S. a bad exhaust valve will also appreciably increase exhaust emissions because it allow unburned fuel to leak into the exhaust.

Salinas man dies in fall from Big Sur cliff

EMERGENCY WORKERS recovered the body of 57-year-old Salinas resident Reginaldo Garcia Gomez from the rocks at Rocky Point in Big Sur Sunday afternoon after receiving a report of a person in the water.

Members of the Monterey County Sheriff's Search and Rescue Team, as well as California State Park rangers, were called to the scene and retrieved Gomez' body from the rocky area near the shoreline. Firefighters also responded.

The coroner's office conducted an autopsy Monday afternoon and concluded the cause of death was multiple blunt force injuries due to the fall from the cliff. According to the coroner's office, Gomez died of a fall from the rocks above the ocean when he suddenly collapsed for "undetermined reasons." Law enforcement officials said they do not suspect foul play.

Clues hard to find in Pebble Beach arson

AN ARSONIST set another fire in Pebble Beach last Monday directly across from the remains of an earlier suspicious blaze, according to Dennis Carreiro, a chief with the California Department of Forestry. The incident occurred the evening of Sept. 25 in the Morse Botanical Preserve next to a sign on the Crawford Trail asking anyone with information about the July arson fire to notify authorities.

"So somebody has some guts," Carreiro said. The vegetation fire, which consumed about three-quarters of an acre in the reserve near Congress and Bird Rock roads, followed a much smaller but similarly suspicious burn off Sunridge Road at 4 p.m. Sept. 24.

Because the Sept. 25 fire was at night, no aircraft were deployed to fight it, but a total of six engines from Pebble Beach Fire and the California Department of Forestry, as well as two inmate crews from the state department of corrections' Gabilan Camp, attacked it.

"We had a couple of engines stay on it all night long, which is our normal MO for fires in high-threat areas," Carreiro said. "It was in thick vegetation, so we wanted to have people patrolling it to make sure there were no hot spots and nothing had crossed the lines."

They also had to fell some large trees burning from the inside.

"The biggest tree was about 60 feet tall," he said. "It was a dead tree that had fire in it. I believe it was a pine."

Carreiro reported investigators had not found any physical evidence of arson but said there was "no accidental reason" the fires might have started.

"Arson is one of the toughest crimes to prove, because many times, the physical evidence is burned in the fire or destroyed inadvertently by firefighters while they are fighting the fire," he said.

Today's Real Estate by MAUREEN MASON Certified Residential Specialist

HAPPY BUYERS AND SELLERS

A recent study commissioned by the National Association of Realtors® (NAR) sought to find out how homebuyers and sellers felt in 2005 about the real estate professionals who assisted them in buying and/or selling a home. The study was based on 7800 8-page surveys, from the roughly 145,000 sent out to those across the country who bought and/or sold in that year.

Of all the homebuyers, 85% said they would use their real estate professional again in any future transaction. Of all the homesellers, 82% said the same thing.

This is a phenomenal endorsement of the real estate profession—though it doesn't suggest that you shouldn't choose your real estate and mortgage advisors carefully, making certain you feel they hear and understand your wishes and needs. The NAR study also showed that sales of homes through real estate professionals brought in appreciably higher selling prices and that the more sophisticated a homebuyer or homeseller became through carefully study of all the Internet now offers them, the more likely he or she was to call on a real estate and mortgage professional for assistance. For assistance call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

IN THE height of harvest season, Monterey County Sheriff's deputies have been busy finding and destroying marijuana gardens on public lands.

In separate raids Sept. 21, 22, 25 and 27, they removed thousands of plants growing in Arroyo Seco, Carmel Valley and Big Sur.

According to the sheriff's department, which oversees the federally funded County of Monterey Marijuana Eradication Team, a random flyover located the largest of the gardens in Los Padres National Forest near Miller's Lodge. On Sept. 22, deputies working with sheriff's narcotics detectives, state special agents and members of the U.S. Forest Service cut down and removed 17,152 marijuana plants with a potential street value of more than $85,760,000. They also reported finding fertilizers, pesticides, canned food, a campsite and a gravity-flow drip irrigation system, but no suspects.

On Sept. 25, the same group located three marijuana gardens in a remote area of the national forest east of Carmel

NEITHER A TENANT NOR A LANDLORD BE

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A LONG-BREWING dispute between a landlady and one of her Carmel tenants that led to court but was finally settled last month illustrates the risks tenants — as well as landlords — assume when they get involved in rental property.

Trisa Pocci, who was evicted from the Comstock cottage she rented on Ocean Avenue for a dozen years, says her landlady failed to disclose problems with the home and wouldn't reimburse her for repairs. But the owner's attorney says Pocci prevented necessary work from being done, was paid what was owed her and received plenty of time to find a new home.

"If the landlady had said the fireplace is inoperable, there's lead-based paint, there are plumbing problems and the front window leaks every winter — if some of these things would have been brought to my attention, I could have made an educated decision about whether to live here or not," said Pocci, who began renting the 700-square-foot, one-bedroom, one-bathroom cottage for $775 per month after moving here to care for her ailing mother. She also said the driveway is unsafe and the house contains high levels of carbon monoxide.

According to Marilyn Dorman, executive director of the Monterey County Housing Advocacy Council, "The landlord is responsible for making sure everything is in working order, that it's safe and meets health and safety standards." That includes electricity, heat, hot and cold running water, a toilet and cooking facilities. In short, tenants have to be able feed, clean and take care of themselves.

But the laws requiring landlords to disclose certain facts about their properties — if someone died there recently, if it was contaminated by illegal drugs, if it contains asbestos, if a registered sex offender lives nearby, if there are explosive munitions within a mile, if it contains lead paint or if the drinking water does not meet state standards — did not exist when Pocci began renting in 1994, according to the property owner's attorney, Doug Oldfield.

Repair remedies

Pocci said she handled many problems on the property without compensation, such as sewage backups, toilet leaks and lead-based paint dust. She said she took care of the house

Supervisors delay Sept. Ranch vote

After a lengthy hearing this week, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors decided to hole another public hearing on the proposed subdivision at September Ranch in Carmel Valley.

Jim Morgens, longtime owner of the 891-acre ranch, wants to build 94 market-rate and 15 affordable units. The planning commission recommended that be trimmed to 73 market units and 22 affordable ones.

The next hearing will be Nov. 14.

"We have no capacity to enhance improvements on Carmel Valley Road," said Paula Lotz with the Carmel Valley Association. "The rural center is also in a 100-year flood plain."

Representatives from the greater Monterey Peninsula, Toro Park also provided commissioners with an earful about their own area plans, including concern about a workforce housing project in Monterey.

The planning commission has until Oct. 25 to complete its recommendations for the general plan.

"Obviously, the job we have in front of us is an immense job," said commissioner Keith Vandevere.

Commission hears C.V. concerns

A PROPOSED rural center at the mouth of Carmel Valley should be deleted from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors' proposed general plan because it will cause traffic and other problems, activists reiterated to county planning commissioners Wednesday night.

The concern was among many brought before commissioners, who are wrangling with how to incorporate local area plans into the latest incarnation of the general plan.

Walk, talk, picnic at Flanders Mansion

THE FLANDERS Foundation, the non-profit that has sued the City of Carmel to stop it from selling the historic mansion within Mission Trail park, will host a free, guided walk through the nature preserve Saturday, Oct. 21. It will end with a brown-bag lunch on the lawn of the mansion the foundation hopes to preserve and keep in public ownership.

The group's president, Melanie Billig, and environmentalist Joyce Stevens will discuss the history and biology of the nature preserve and the adjacent Lester Rowntree Native Plant Garden. Billig will also talk about the history of the mansion, which was built eight decades ago and purchased by the city in 1972. Participants are encouraged to wear comfortable shoes and bring a lunch. The walk will begin at 10:30 a.m. Oct. 21 at the Rio Road entrance to Mission Trail Nature Preserve across from the Mission. For reservations, call (831) 626-3826.

P.G. Mayoral hopeful reports laptop theft

By KELLY NIX

PACIFIC GROVE City Councilwoman and mayoral candidate Susan Goldbeck is offering a $1,000 reward for the return of a $3,500 laptop computer which she said was stolen from her home. The computer contains all of her campaign materials and personal information, Goldbeck said.

She returned to her Ninth Street home after being at a candidates forum Tuesday night to find her Dell computer had been swiped. "It's a big setback for me, because all of my campaign stuff is in there,"

Goldbeck said. "I don't know if [the theft] is campaign-related or not."

Goldbeck said the computer was on a desk in plain view of the street through a front window. There was no forced entry and it appears someone entered through an unlocked window or a back door of the home. The burglar didn't ransack the house and didn't take a printer and computer monitor that were next to the laptop.

"Nothing else was touched," she said. "They came in to get that."

Goldbeck, who is an attorney, said her client list was also on the computer but that she has a backup of the information.

Pacific Grove police are investigating the crime.

Thursday was the deadline for candidates to turn in their campaign disclosures, which Goldbeck said was difficult to do since all of her information was on the computer.

"I am so tired and working so hard that I just don't need this right now," she said.

For the $1,000 reward, Goldbeck has requested the person in possession of the computer contact Pacific Grove City Hall at (831) 648-3100, at which information about the exchange will be provided.

Carmel Holistic Veterinary Clinic

NOW OFFERING BOARDING AND DAY CARE

How long have you been an established veterinary practice in this community?

The Carmel Holistic Veterinary Clinic first opened eight years ago in a space no larger than 700 square feet. It was immediately welcomed by the community and the clinic has been growing ever since. With this latest expansion the clinic now occupies about 5000 square feet.

What made you decide to open a boarding facility?

The idea of offering boarding has been on my mind for years. The main reason is that I wanted to offer high quality boarding services to my clients. When dog owners go out of town, I want them to rest assured that their beloved pets are well taken care of in an environment that nurtures them mentally, physically, and emotionally.

What sets your facility apart from others?

This facility is unique for a number of reasons; first, there is the veterinary supervision of the boarding facility. We have a full staff of veterinary professionals using holistic methods that integrate traditional Western medicine with alternative modalities to provide superior patient care. Second, we have put extra effort into providing a fun, nurturing environment to our boarding guests. We have space devoted to group play, an onsite dog trainer, several staff members devoted to interacting with and caring for our guests, and plenty of all-natural dog treats.

I heard you also have doggy day care, is that true?

Yes, that's true. Sometimes people need to work, run errands, or simply like to bring their dogs in just to play. Daycare provides a fun interactive environment for dogs to spend the day when you can't be with them. This way the dogs don't have to spend the day home alone, and when you pick them up they go home tired. And as Lisa, our trainer, always says, "a tired dog is a well behaved dog."

Is it available for clients to come by for a tour and ask questions?

Our new facility is officially open and we invite anyone, who wants a tour and information packet, to pay us a visit. If you can't make it, just give us a call and we'll be happy to answer your questions over the phone.

Do you have an open house planned?

Yes we do! It's scheduled for Sunday October 29th, 12 p.m. to 3 p.m. With Halloween in mind we will be having a dog costume contest, with judging at 2:30 p.m. The winner will go home with a basket of fun goodies including treats, 5 days of free day care and a gift certificate for an obedience lesson from Lisa Giesick. There will be refreshments available, and staff on hand to give tours and answer questions.

Will Your Insurance Die Before You Do?

Client Background:

Janis had purchased a $3,000,000 universal life policy in 1990; at the time of purchase she was told that she would pay 10 premiums of $23,700 and that the policy would generate enough return internally to pay the mortality charges thereafter. When we met Janis in 2004 she was still paying $23,700. In fact, when we requested an in-force ledger from the carrier we found that at the current interest rate, $23,700 would be needed each year through age 100.

Why? We moved from a world of double digit and near double digit interest rates in the 80's and 90's where illustrations were prepared at 8%,10%, even 12%, to the real world of today with interest rates of 4% to 5%.

Trespassing charge against dog-watering activist dropped

By CHRIS COUNTS

A MISDEMEANOR trespassing charge was dropped this week against Helaine Clark, a Rippling River resident and local activist who claimed she was only trying to provide water for a dog she believed was neglected.

"I never broke any law," insisted a relieved Clark. "It took the district attorney four months to figure that out."

Clark was charged with illegally entering private property May 28 after a neighbor witnessed her giving water to Montana, a golden retriever, at 19 Calle De Los Helechos in Carmel Valley. Clark said she routinely passed the property on walks through the neighborhood and adjacent Garland Ranch Regional Park.

"It was day two of a three-day weekend," Clark recalled.

"There were no signs that anyone was home. I said to myself, 'They might not be home for one more day.' It was just my motherly instinct to give her water."

Clark said the incident was not the first time she became concerned for Montana's welfare. She said she once found the dog roaming the neighborhood and returned her to the property.

According to the Monterey County Sheriff's Office, the charges were requested by Michael Cappitti, who said he had previously warned Clark to stay off his property. Salinas attorney Juliet Peck, though, successfully argued Clark committed no crime.

"She was the real heroine here," said Clark. "I was really lucky she represented me pro bono. The district attorney's office wouldn't even let me see the police report."

For Clark, the dismissal of charges was bittersweet. "I think the district attorney's office should be using tax dollars for better things," she said.

Clark's case had been scheduled to go to a jury trial Oct. 16.

in the new quarters," said Steven Packer, CHOMP's president/CEO. "We see this project as an opportunity to increase service to our community."

Oct. 11, from 4 to 7 p.m., the public is invited to attend an open house and ribbon-cutting ceremony for the South Pavilion.

Construction of the new south wing is part a $170 million multi-phase expansion that has been a decade in the works. The Forest Pavilion, expected to be completed in a few months, will add 120 new patient rooms.

The long-overdue upgrades are necessary, in part, to treat a growing patient base on the Peninsula, according to hospital officials.

"We have seen a steady increase of patients," Packer said. "We treat 48,000 to 51,000 patients a year in a facility that was designed for 12,000."

CHOMP was built in 1962, and there have been no major upgrades to the hospital since 1971, when some patient beds were added. The new pavilions will increase the size of the hospital from about 317,000 square feet to 515,000 square feet.

The new emergency facility, adjacent to the Oak level parking garage, will feature 20 new patient rooms and three express care rooms for treatment of less critical patients.

"All of the patient rooms have glass doors so there is more privacy," Packer said. "I think that is something patients will appreciate."

Rooms surround the nurses station, allowing doctors and nurses to monitor patients visually. Half of the patients admitted to CHOMP enter through the emergency room, Packer said.

"The new department will allow us to provide services in a more timely fashion and in a more comfortable and less cramped venue," he said.

The emergency department also has a larger waiting area with large circular skylights, a children's play area and triage rooms where patients will be checked in upon arrival.

In the treatment rooms, most of the medical equipment, such as monitoring and scanning devices, will be mounted on a rotating boom, allowing for less clutter and more open floor area.

"There's a lot of dedicated space for specific purposes," said Lauren Elsensohn, spokeswoman for CHOMP.

The South Pavilion also features an expanded intensive care and critical care unit twice the size of the previous unit.

"Our current ICU has 10 rooms and the new one has 20," Elsensohn said. "All the rooms have a lot of natural light."

WARMING

the application process.

"For instance, a lot of applicants say they will use the most energy-efficient equipment," Luster said. "We will ask for more detail and what that means and how much less energy they will be using."

The bulk of electricity used in desal plants goes toward powering pumps, which must push water molecules through tiny membranes with great force. About 70 percent of the electricity in the United States is generated by burning fossil fuels.

"The [power consumption] figures I've seen recently are for 50-million-gallon-per-day desalination plants," Luster said. "They take roughly 30-35 megawatts of electricity." That's the same as 350,000 100-watt lightbulbs.

Catherine Bowie, community relations manager for California American Water Co., said the company was surprised to learn of the coastal commission's new concern about greenhouse gases.

"Climate change, in my opinion, argues for desalination," Bowie said. Most global warming forecasts call for increased rainfall during shorter periods of time and longer dry seasons, she pointed out. "There is an increased likelihood of drought. I think climate change argues for a more reliable portfolio that is not weather dependent."

70,000 light bulbs

Cal Am wants to build a 10 million-gallon-per-day desalination plant in Moss Landing as an alternative to pumping from the Carmel River. Another company, Poseidon Resources Corp., is seeking a plant twice that size in Moss Landing on behalf of the Pajaro/Sunny Mesa Community Services District.

Larry Gallery, senior vice president of the Monterey Bay office for RBF Consulting, the consultant working for Cal Am, said Cal Am's plant would use about 7 megawatts.

Greenhouse gases, which occur naturally and by human activity, are blamed for global warming, which may cause increases in sea levels and changes in precipitation patterns. The changes could alter the frequency and intensity of weather events, such as floods and droughts.

Luster said the commission will focus its concern on large er desal plants, although he didn't specify a size range. He said the commission reviews each desal proposal on a case-by-case basis.

There are several ways to reduce energy use in the desalination process, including using more efficient pumps and membranes, and various recovery devices to capture what would otherwise be wasted energy.

Gallery said Cal Am's proposed desal plant, which would use the Moss Landing power plant's intake and outfall system, would incorporate an energy recovery system for its brine discharge segment.

Cal Am needs an alternative water supply because it's been ordered by the state to reduce pumping of the Carmel River by about 70 percent to offset the environmental detriments to the steelhead trout and red-legged frog populations. Cal Am contends a desal plant would provide a drought-free solution for the Monterey Peninsula.

A new dam on the Carmel River, which would provide a reliable water supply for the Monterey Peninsula at a small fraction of the energy used by a desal plant, is considered out of the question, since federal wildlife officials put the red-legged frog and steelhead trout on the endangered species list. The trout is plentiful in many parts of the world and is in no danger of extinction; however, its population in the Carmel River has shrunk during the last 30 years. A local population loss is all the Endangered Species Act requires for a species to be listed, according to federal officials.

Get your costumes ready for city parade

THE CITY of Carmel-by-the-Sea will soon join the ranks of the nonagenarians, and to celebrate, it will hold a birthday bash and Halloween parade Saturday, Oct. 28.

"Everyone welcome — dogs, children and adults alike!" the city's community services department announced, listing those groups in the usual order of importance. Clothed canines, adorably costumed kids, city dignitaries in fancy cars, firefighters and police officers, musicians and a multitude of others will fill out the parade, which is open to all and follows a course through downtown. Those preferring to spectate line the streets to catch the sweets flung by parade participants.

Walkers should meet at San Carlos and Ninth at 10:45 a.m., and the parade will begin at 11. The route will include part of Ocean Avenue. And afterward, the annual barbecue will be held at Sunset Center from noon to 1 p.m. Tickets to the barbecue are $12 for chicken (250 available) and $5 for hot dogs (150 available) and may be purchased at Carmel City Hall on Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, and Nielsen Bros. Market at the corner of San Carlos and Seventh. There will be no refunds, but if the party is canceled, this year's tickets may be used next year.

For more information on the parade or the party, call (831) 620-2000.

Fixed Rates Lower Than Adjustable??

I often wonder over the last 23 years if I would ever see a fixed rate lower than an adjustable. This is the first time I can remember. During my 12 years as a top loan consultant for Home Savings I made almost 500 million dollars worth of adjustable rate mortgages. I know these loans backwards and forwards. Most loan brokers do not. Please call me if you would like to discuss if it would be appropriate for you to switch from an adjustable to a fixed rate mortgage.

Cartoonist has exhibition at CAA

THE CARMEL Art Association is hosting artist Gus Arriola's "Black and White and Read All Over" exhibition beginning Saturday, Oct. 7, from 6 to 8 p.m.

Arriola, an award-winning cartoonist, will exhibit 50 original "Gordo" Sunday and daily comic strips. Arriola retired Gordo in 1985 after 44 years of national syndication. At its peak, it was published in 270 U.S. newspapers.

Five years ago, the State Office of Historic Preservation recommended that Arriola's former Carmel home be considered an historic resource because of the importance of the Gordo in exposing readers to "Mexican folklore, history and art."

The opening reception Saturday is set for 6 to 8 p.m. at the Carmel Art Association's Center Room. The exhibition runs until Oct. 31.

The gallery, on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Landscapes art exhibit opens Sunday

WINFIELD GALLERY in Carmel will open an exhibition entitled "Intimate Landscapes" this Sunday, Oct. 8, at noon.

The exhibition features landscapes by local and out-of-state artists and is curated by University of California, Santa Cruz professor and artist Frank Galuszka.

The show includes art from 20 artists such as Martha Erlebacher, David Ligare, Andrea Johnson, Jack Zajac, Helen Miranda Wilson and Russell Chatham.

"A lot of them are real landscapes that have a feeling that you are there," said gallery owner Chris Winfield.

The exhibition will run until Nov. 20, after which it will move to Santa Cruz.

Winfield Gallery is located on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh. Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Saturday, and 12 to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information, call the gallery at (831) 624-3369.

Remembering 'Grandpa' and his beloved Big Sur Inn

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOR A couple million visitors each year, a trip to Big Sur is simply a two-or three-hour drive along a scary highway with lots of great views. To some, however, a journey down the coast becomes a life-altering event.

For Anita Alan, the author of a new book, "Big Sur Inn: The Deetjen Legacy," a trip to Big Sur was certainly more than just a scenic detour.

One day in 1961, Alan (whose real name is Paula Walling) was driving south along the coast from San Francisco. Traveling with a couple friends, she had hoped to make it to the San Fernando Valley, where her mother lived. But apparently destiny had other plans.

"I had this old Chevy that was running on four of its eight cylinders, and so was I," recalled Alan.

Thankfully, when Alan's car broke down, the Big Sur Inn was just a short walk away. A rustic but charming collection of hand-crafted cottages tucked into a steep redwood canyon, the Big Sur Inn was built in the late 1930s and early 1940s by a charismatic and somewhat eccentric Norwegian named Helmuth "Grandpa" Deetjen.

Deetjen was, by all accounts, quite a character. The inn he created is a cozy, funky Big Sur legend, where an overnight stay or a Sunday morning breakfast can be a memorable experience.

"Getting to know Grandpa was difficult, but forgetting him was impossible," Alan wrote. "Everyone could agree on that, whether you loved him or wished you had never met him."

Shortly after arriving at the inn, Alan, who worked as a flight attendant, struck up a friendship with its grand patriarch. Deetjen was wary of the seemingly endless flow of young people who poured down the coast from the Bay Area in the 1960s. He even posted a sign at the inn that said, "No Beatniks." But he liked Alan.

"I was a young person with long hair, but I had a job," she said. "Maybe that's why he tolerated me."

For Alan, Deetjen was more than a gracious host. He became an important paternal figure in her life.

"I lost my father and my grandfather when I was young," she said. "The Big Deetjen's Big Sur Inn is one of Monterey County's coziest overnight destinations. A new book tells the history of the inn and its colorful founder.

Sur Inn felt like home."

On that first trip, Alan and her friends ended up staying at the inn for a week. During that time, Deetjen gave them an introduction to the stark, isolated but alluring beauty of Big Sur.

Alan, in particular, was struck by the wild community and its stunning natural background. One day, she hiked up a hill and came across Big Sur's newly constructed Captain Cooper School. She resolved to teach at the new school and make Big Sur her home.

A Big Sur initiation

Ten years later, Alan finally made good on her vow. After accepting a job teaching at the Cooper School and renting a cabin on Apple Pie Ridge, she looked forward to living in a place she had dreamt about for a decade. But instead of a warm welcome, Alan received a heavy dose of reality, Big Sur-style. First came the devastating Molera fire of 1972, which was followed by a winter of torrential rains and mudslides. Then her mentor, Helmuth Deetjen, died.

"Welcome to Big Sur," remembered Alan, shaking her head.

Very quickly, Alan learned perhaps the greatest lesson about living in Big Sur.

"The routine in Big Sur is that there is no routine," she said. "You learn how to accept change."

For the next 25 years, Alan lived in Big Sur. She married, raised a son and became part of that far-flung but tight-knit community of fiercely independent souls that populates Monterey County's south coast. Then one day, as quickly as Alan's Big Sur odyssey began, she decided to move to Pacific Grove.

"I was at Bookworks one evening," she recalled. "It was raining very hard and the water was coming down the hill in such a torrent. And I thought to myself, 'If I was living in town, I'd be home now.'" And just like that, Alan resolved to relocate to civilization.

But Alan's Big Sur journey wasn't over. Once a stewardess

Taxpayers will help Monterey wineries demonstrate their excellence

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

AS A wine region, Monterey County has excelled at producing fine Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Syrah, but seems a wee bit slow on mastering the fine art of self-promotion. The way I see it, if you've got it, flaunt it. We're growing some exceptional grapes and have an extraordinary amount of talent in our winemakers. Our wines win big awards, land on some of the nation's finest wine lists and have a far-reaching reputation. (Vice President Dick Cheney even served a Monterey County wine at his birthday party last summer in Jackson Hole.)

Even more remarkable is that, on a recent trip to Baltimore Md., I was informed by a local wine retailer that they can't keep Kali Hart Pinot Noir on their shelves. Morgan Pinot Noir was a close second in sales. Baltimore is a beer-drinking town through and through, so this fact tickled me to no end.

Of course, I picked up a bottle of each as a sign of cross-country solidarity and espoused each winery's virtues at a soiree later that evening to a captive audience of curious wine enthusiasts.

Monterey County's viticultural areas have something big to boast about and I know we have it in us to do it with a bit more modesty and style than some other uppity wine regions. That's why I'm so thrilled the Monterey County Vintners and Growers Association will use the $282,474 "Value-Added Producer Grant" it got from U.S. taxpayers courtesy of the Department of Agriculture to get the word out we're now a wine-growing region to be reckoned with. The MCVGA proposal was one of only eight projects selected in California and received the second largest award in the state.

The money has been designated for the "Monterey Wines: The Road to Growth" initiative. This program is geared toward raising awareness of Monterey appellation wines, creating greater demand and ultimately increased returns to the winegrowers. As part of a tour to Sacramento and Orlando, 25 members of the MCVGA are expected to meet with the media, trade and consumers in March and April of 2007 to demonstrate firsthand made from Monterey County grapes. California and Florida are the two largest wine consuming states in the nation.

Additional funds from the grant will be applied to the production of a video that will provide overviews of each of the nine designated American Viticulture Areas in Monterey County, an advertising campaign in the national tour markets, and a restaurant program that promotes Monterey County wines. "We received a similar grant from the USDA in 2004. The initial funding of $125,000 from that program greatly helped our association to raise awareness about the high caliber of grapes and wines coming from Monterey," stated Rhonda Motil, executive director of the MCVGA. "The fact that we were awarded a second grant is a validation of our ability as a wine region to execute a successful brand awareness campaign. It also allows us to make further inroads into key markets that will benefit the California wine and grape industry as a whole."

Paraiso Vineyards hosts charity event for CASA

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

"Those privileged to touch the lives of children and youth should constantly be aware that their impact on a single child may affect a multitude of others a thousand years from now."

EACH YEAR, millions of children are reported as abused or neglected to child protective agencies in the United States. These children tend to have higher rates of suicide, depression, substance abuse, problems in school and other behavioral problems later in life. But the child abuse rate in Monterey County remains considerably lower than California overall, due in part to local outreach and awareness programs like CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocates) of Monterey. CASA works to prevent abused, neglected and abandoned children from becoming lost in the juvenile dependency system and helps to find them safe, permanent homes as quickly as possible. It also provides community awareness of child abuse, neglect and child welfare policy. CASA receives funds from diverse public and private sources: foundation grants, government tax dollars, corporations, individuals and special events, such as the annual charity fundraiser Paraiso Vineyards hosts.

This year's benefit for CASA of Monterey County will take place Saturday, Oct. 21. The Smith family, owners of the 400-acre Paraiso Vineyards, will host the event at their spectacular estate high in the Santa Lucia Mountains. A four-course dinner created by Hullabaloo, with wine tasting of special vintages, will be followed by dancing, a live auction and Cirque Du Soleil-style performances. Fifty percent of all proceeds from items purchased at the Paraiso Boutique, as well as the live auction, will benefit CASA.

*The details: The event will start at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 21, at Paraiso Vineyards, 38060 Paraiso Springs Road. The event will cost $100 per person. ## Zagat Survey loves Marinus

OF THE thousand-plus San Francisco Bay Area restaurants visited by more than 7,400 customers who picked their favorites for the Zagat Survey's "2007 San Francisco Restaurant Guide," Marinus at Bernardus Lodge in Carmel Valley ranked fourth in the Top Food category. Last year, it was No. 22.

According to the publisher of the by-consumers-for-consumers guide, surveyors dined out an average of 3.2 times per week, "which means this year's ratings and reviews are based on roughly 1.3 million meals." They focused on San Francisco and the surrounding cities, but listings include restaurants in the Napa area, the East Bay and south into Monterey County.

Marinus, located in Bernardus Lodge at Carmel Valley Road and Los Laureles Grade, is headed by executive chef Cal Stamenov and known for its sophisticated fare and indulgent special events, such as the wintertime Truffle Dinner showcasing France's black truffles and Italy's white.

The only restaurants in the Top Food category — reserved for establishments suitable for a special occasion — ranked higher than Marinus were the renowned Gary Danko, Thomas Keller's French Laundry and Cyrus, located in Healdsburg. Gary Danko also took top honors for Best Service and Most Popular.

and a teacher, Alan now wanted to be a writer.

"I've been writing since I was a teenager," she recalled. "I was the one who would write to prisoners in jail or to soldiers who needed someone to write to."

Coming full circle

While she was still living in Big Sur in 1978, Alan became editor of a monthly newspaper, the Big Sur Gazette. Published by Coast Gallery owner Gary Koeppel, the Gazette only lasted a couple years, but the experience inspired Alan to keep writing, eventually leading her to write the book about the Big Sur Inn.

While writing it, Alan was struck by how much the inn meant to so many different individuals.

"It was so wonderful to meet people whose feelings about the place mirrored mine," she said. "I was overwhelmed by those feelings on almost a daily basis."

"Big Sur Inn: The Deetjen Legacy" is more than just a tribute to a charming old inn and its builder. Not only are its pages filled with historical images from Deetjen's personal archives, but Kodiak Greenwood of Big Sur has supplied a wealth of stunning color photographs depicting the natural beauty of the area.

"There is somewhat of a scrapbook nature to the book," Alan explained. "I found these pieces of information like Grandpa Deetjen would find pieces of building materials for the inn. When I was writing the book, it was just one fortuitous find after another."

Alan will present a talk on Deetjen and the Big Sur Inn at the Monterey Public Library Saturday, Oct. 7 at 2 p.m. A book-signing will follow.

Admission is free, but reservations are required. For more information, call (831) 646-3949.

SIGN

tion. "We're trying to determine whether or not we want the option to have this sign in the future," Bethel said. "We're not committing ourselves."

Maria Murray, resident, business operator and past chair of the Carmel Chamber of Commerce board, said, "I don't think having a sign welcoming everyone into our community is a bad thing. It's a good thing."

Resident Jim Price suggested situating it to be visible to northbound and southbound traffic, and Sarah Berling asked if the sign could include an arrow pointing toward downtown, as visitors often ask the way to the city center.

"We could have a bronze statue of Sue pointing," Rose responded.

"This is an opportunity to do something that might make a difference in the appearance of that intersection," he said.

Bethel assured the council it and the public would have plenty of time to opine on the design of the sign, as only the preliminary details — location, placement, dimensions, materials, proposed message and preliminary sketches — are due Dec. 31.

The city would have to approve the final design before submitting it to Caltrans, but the state agency will have the final say, McCloud pointed out. She also worried no one had contacted the residents near the intersection and said it "would be a huge political mistake" to submit the application without doing so.

But Rose and Bethel said talking to them before Caltrans determines whether the sign can even be installed would be premature.

"All we're looking at is, is it a good idea to have a sign?" Rose said. "That's all there is to it."

"And I think it's more than that," Cunningham said.

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said the process seemed "backward compared with what we normally do," and Bethel responded, "The way Carmel normally does things is to not do anything."

His comment drew a sharp rebuke from McCloud, who said his was an "unfair characterization" and a "discredit to all that's been done."

The council voted 4-1 to submit the gateway monument sign application to the state and sign on Miller to design it within the confines of the city's commercial design guidelines. Guillen suggested a construction cost limit of $100,000, which could be revised later as needed.

Basking in the afterglow (and only waiting for about $1,200 unpaid raffle ticket sales to arrive), Whitfill said last week he wanted to express "emotional mega thanks to all of the people who donated time, money and support to make this the best year ever for the Bruceki."

Hurley pleads guilty in financial elder abuse

By KELLY NIX

CYNTHIA HURLEY, the Pacific Grove woman charged with stealing hundreds of thousands of dollars from her great aunt, pleaded guilty to one felony count of financial elder abuse in a Salinas courtroom Thursday.

Hurley, 47, was charged with stealing nearly $150,000 in gold and silver coins from her great aunt, Lillian King, 98, who she had been taking care of at King's large estate on Sunset Drive in Pacific Grove.

Per Hurley's plea bargain, she will receive 365 days in county jail and felony probation. In addition, Hurley will relinquish her 30 percent interest in her aunt's Pacific Grove properties in lieu of paying restitution. The crime carries a maximum of four years in prison. If Hurley violates the terms of her probation, she could still face prison.

Hurley will be sentenced by Superior Court Judge Russell Scott Nov. 7.

In September 2005, King was removed from her ocean-front mansion on the 1600 block of Sunset Drive when police found her living in squalid conditions. The property was condemned.

Police officers found King in livable conditions after the Pacific Grove SWAT team raided the house looking for drugs. They found a small amount of marijuana.

In an interview with The Pine Cone, Hurley said she sold some coins to pay for taxes on King's numerous properties in P.G.

Valley. Helicopters carried law enforcement personnel into the gardens, where they found fertilizers, pesticides and a campsite. A drip irrigation system watered the 3,440 marijuana plants. Deputies also reported seeing several suspects fleeing upon the helicopter's arrival, but they were unable to find them.

The marijuana, which officers said had a value of more than $17 million, was flown out by helicopter and destroyed.

Two days later, narcotics detectives, deputies and U.S. Forest Service rangers raided another garden two miles east of Chews Ridge in Cachagua that was found during a random flyover. The garden was broken into multiple plots, and officers found fertilizers, pesticides and a campsite. The 4,548 marijuana plants were apparently being watered by hand. The plants and a half pound of processed marijuana, estimated to have a potential street value of more than $22,700,000, were carried out of the garden and later destroyed by deputies. Again, the suspects had already fled.

And on Sept. 21, COMMET members destroyed a pot garden on national forest land south of Big Sur. Deputies flown into the area removed and later destroyed 613 plants with an estimated street value of more than $3 million. They also found fertilizers, pesticides and battery-operated timers to control the drip irrigation system that fed the plants.

Meg's Health Notes

Presented by
Meg Parker Connors, R.N.

PERCEPTION BECOMES REALITY

Seniors who accept the notion that losing one's hearing is a natural part of aging may actually increase their odds of having poor hearing during their later years. Accepting this and other age-related stereotypes can have actual consequences on the ability to hear. According to a study of people aged 70 years and older, those who accepted more negative stereotypes about the elderly were more likely to perform worse on a hearing assessment three years later. It is thought that being more inclined to accept the negative stereotypes makes one less likely to seek professional help for the problem. This is the first study to demonstrate that seniors' age stereotypes can predict sensory perception.

Hearing problems can make it hard to understand and follow a doctor's advice, to respond to warnings, and to hear doorbells and alarms. They can also make it hard to enjoy talking with friends and family. All of this can be frustrating, embarrassing, and even dangerous. The most important thing you can do if you think you have a hearing problem is to go see a doctor. At VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES, our goal is to provide the care, services, and compassion our clients need and deserve.

P.S. A positive attitude can overcome many things that might otherwise be obstacles.

Meg Parker Connors is an RN and owner of Victorian Health Care Services and Victorian Residential Care Homes. For assistance, call 655-1935.

HOSPITAL

The operating rooms feature flat-panel video screens to allow doctors to immediately access a patient's most recent medical history, such as MRI or angiogram results.

"A doctor might want to look at CT scan information, for example," Packer said. "Maybe the CT scan was obtained in Ryan Ranch last week. We can bring it up. The point is we are bringing information into the operating room to assist the surgeon at the time of surgery."

CHOMP has hired more nurses for the South and Forest pavilions in light of the expansion, Packer said. The hospital will add more physicians, who work as independent agents at CHOMP, as needed. "We have really increased our hiring in anticipation of the opening of these buildings," he said.

State officials have been visiting the hospital weekly. The hospital is still awaiting a final certificate of occupancy from the state before it can open to the public. "We are trying to offer patient care by the end of this month," he said.

Forest Pavilion

Wearing a hard hat and a business suit, Packer escorted a reporter through the partially completed Forest Pavilion, which he hopes will be open by Christmas.

Located on the northeast side of the existing hospital, the Forest Pavilion will add 120 new private patient rooms, complete with showers, high definition TVs and daybeds for visitors of patients to spend the night.

"Everything was designed with the patient in mind," Packer said.

The Forest Pavilion also includes visitor waiting areas overlooking a waterfall and healing garden.

The expanded facilities at CHOMP, which also include a parking garage that opened in 2003, were paid for three ways.

A capital campaign raised $24 million, including $600,000 from CHOMP employees.

A $100 million tax-exempt bond, to be repaid from hospital revenues over the next 30 years, funded the bulk of the project.

The remaining funds came from reserves CHOMP saved during the last decade, Packer said.

favor of protecting it. This week's hearing was a last-ditch attempt to reverse the earlier decision the building could be torn down.

Principal planner Brian Roseth and city attorney Don Freeman advised the council to first decide whether Segal was important in Carmel's history.

"If you can't answer that question with a 'yes,' then none of the other questions need to be looked at," Roseth said, such as whether the tie between Segal and the modern building, designed by architects Walter Burde and Will Shaw, is strong enough to warrant mandatory preservation. "Staff recommends you find Barney Segal was an important person."

Until this summer, Segal had not been tied to the building's history in the environmental impact report or during public hearings. It was only after the council declared it was not historic and was preparing to adopt findings supporting demolition that Elinor Laiolo presented information on Segal and his links to the property.

Seizing an opportunity to save the building, residents, business people and architects wrote letters saying Segal was extremely important and the city should protect the building where he sold insurance for a dozen years toward the end of his life.

Structures can be declared historic because of their architecture or association with an important event or person, but because the former savings and loan is less than 50 years old, Roseth said the reason should be "of exceptional importance."

Representing Mandurrigo, attorney Miriam Schakat acknowledged Segal was important but said his connection to the building was too weak to require its preservation. She said he spent most of his productive working years, including founding the Bank of Carmel in 1923 and establishing the Carmel Savings and Loan Association in 1940, elsewhere in town. He moved the S&L to an old telephone exchange building at Dolores and Seventh in 1958 but sold his shares in the business before the structure was demolished to make way for the building designed by Burde and Shaw. It was constructed in 1972 and Segal occupied an office in it, selling insurance until 1983. He died two years later at the age of 87.

Historic preservation consultant Sheila McElroy said Segal "was indeed a major contributor to the city of Carmel and was known for many things," so the Carmel home in which he lived from 1939 to the end of his life would be a better candidate for preservation. That house, across the street from city hall, has not yet been reviewed for historical significance, Roseth said after the meeting.

"The association between Barney Segal and the Homescapes building is anemic at best," McElroy wrote in a letter to the city.

Several speakers urged the council not to allow Mandurrigo to demolish the former savings and loan.

"I want to reiterate the fact that Barney Segal was a person of outstanding stature in the history of Carmel-by-the-Sea," Laiolo said.

Slim majority unconvinced

For the purpose of declaring a building historic against its owner's wishes, "it's clear it has to be someone who is enormously important," Rose said.

"Personally I really like this building, and I really don't like the idea of it being torn down," he said. "But it's not my property, and I think there must be a bar very highly set before we tell a property owner he can't do what he wants to do, and unfortunately I don't believe that bar has been met."

McCloud and Hazdovac, both of whom knew Segal, strongly disagreed.

"I don't know how you could have anybody who is more important than Barney Segal," McCloud said.

"Finding someone more historically significant would be very difficult," Hazdovac commented.

The women pointed to his foundation, which financed part of the library and the Sunset Center remodel among other notable projects.

"There was no one who got up in favor of demolishing this building — not one," Hazdovac added, referring to the six members of the public who commented. Many also submitted letters to the city, and Hazdovac said numerous people told her they were upset the city would let anyone tear down the old bank building.

"Because he was such a wealthy man, he endowed a lot of things that are carrying on good work, but I don't believe that equates with historical significance," Cunningham said. "As wonderful a person as this man was, he didn't rise to that level."

Bethel said the council already spent a long time discussing the significance, or insignificance, of the Homescapes building, which Mandurrago plans to tear down in order to construct new business and living space with an underground garage.

Cunningham made a motion to find Segal did not pass "the scholarly test of historical significance," and Rose suggested adding the phrase, "for the purposes of this building," so the fates of other structures linked to Segal "would not be prejudiced."

Freeman and Roseth advised the council to determine Segal's importance separately.

"I will be extremely disappointed if council votes for this, because I don't believe the benchmarks are that clear, and to dismiss this man's reputation this way — I just don't know how you can do this," McCloud lamented. "It's not a blot on our discussion but a blot on our history to fail to recognize someone of this stature. And I hope the foundation doesn't ask for their money for Sunset back."

Just as McCloud and Hazdovac were the dissenters on the council's decision in June to find the building was not historic, Cunningham's motion was approved 3-2, clearing the way for Mandurrago's plans.

MAKE GOOD USE OF RETIREMENT PLAN DISTRIBUTIONS

Are you getting close to retirement? If so, you know that one of your biggest challenges will be to maintain an adequate cash flow.

That's why it's essential that you take your 401(k) and IRA distributions at the right time - and in the right amounts. You must begin taking distributions from your traditional IRA or 401(k) in the year in which you turn 70-1/2. If you don't take required minimum distributions on time, you might have to pay the IRS a penalty tax - so make sure you know your dates.

To determine the appropriate level of distributions to take, consider how much Social Security you will receive, along with how much income you might have coming in from your investment portfolio.

By planning carefully, you can keep your distributions working for you throughout your retirement.

DISPUTE

for years but eventually realized she should not be paying for routine maintenance and started withholding part of her $1,200 rent.

According to state law, a tenant may underpay in certain circumstances.

"If it's something that's worn out, it's the landlord's responsibility to fix it," Dorman said. "But that doesn't mean it's going to get fixed right away."

According to the state handbook on tenant/landlord rights, the defects must be serious and directly related to the occupant's health and safety, the repairs can't cost more than one month's rent, the tenant can't withhold funds more than twice in 12 months, and the occupant must not have caused the damage, must inform the landlord of the problem and must provide enough time for completion of the work. Generally, "reasonable time" amounts to 30 days.

And a tenant who withholds rent could end up paying for everything. If the defects are not serious enough to justify underpaying, the landlord can sue to recover the money or file for an eviction based on the nonpayment of rent. If no notice or time were given before the tenant ordered the repairs, the court can mandate the resident pay the full rent or order an eviction to proceed.

Tenants may also abandon the residence if repairs go unmade, though if they're found in the wrong, the court could require they pay back rent. They can also continue living in the dwelling while not paying rent, but Dorman said tenants should put the money aside to show they will pay when the problems are fixed.

"The defects must be substantial — they must be serious ones that threaten the tenant's health or safety," according to the handbook. The conditions cited in a court case in which the tenant used that remedy included collapse and nonrepair of the bathroom ceiling, no heat in four rooms, blocked plumbing, exposed and faulty wiring, an illegally installed and dangerous stove, and the continued presence of rats, mice and cockroaches, as well as "many violations of the local housing and building codes."

How bad is bad?

"When I first talked to Ms. Pocci, I got the impression there was this property that was about to be condemned, and how could anybody live there?" Oldfield said. "It's a 70-year-old house. I was amazed at the difference between what she was complaining about and what I saw."

He said she was unwilling to let people in to work on the house, and he also maintained she was reimbursed the funds she paid out.

Whatever the situation, Dorman advised renters to document any issues in writing. "Otherwise," she said, "it's just the tenant's word against the landlord's."

In June, Pocci received notice she would have two months to move out. She believes it was a "retaliatory eviction" for her withholding part of her rent and refusing to pay for maintenance, but Oldfield said it was because the owner wanted to reroof the house and Pocci objected.

"I want to fix the roof, and if you're telling me I can't replace the roof, then maybe you need to move and find a place a little more modern," Oldfield said, adding that his client provided three times the 30 days' notice required in the rental agreement.

Pocci engaged in lengthy communications with her landlady via Oldfield, who eventually filed an "unlawful detainer" — eviction lawsuit — against her. Pocci contacted Teri Scarlett of California Rural Legal Assistance in Monterey for help.

"She was very upset," Scarlett said. "She lived there for many years, and it sounds like she did a lot of the repairs herself and she was never reimbursed for them" — a practice she said is not uncommon in areas like Carmel where prices are high and availability is low. Tenants, especially if they have low rents, tolerate poor conditions for fear of reprisal if they complain.

A tenant can withhold rent, but only under very limited circumstances

Although she has not seen the house, Scarlett said, "It sounded badly in need of repair. I'm sure that's true of a lot of places in Carmel, because they are very old, but if the landlords are going to rent them out and make money that way, they need to be responsible and make those repairs."

"It's just because it's so old," Oldfield said. "It's got typical Carmel old-house problems."

Pocci moved out in September and has since found a new home to rent.

the damage. The garage wall was splintered and bowed inward, but otherwise the interior appeared unharmed.

"It's good thing the truck wasn't loaded," observed Lopez, or it could have crashed well into, possibly even through, Hefling's house.

Lopez was also relieved the runaway truck's wheels turned to take it off the pavement, as a construction crew was working in the road just down the hill.

A heavy hauler from Doc's Towing pulled Ortiz' dump truck away from the house after firefighters dismantled the stone garden planter to ensure nothing would puncture the fuel tank, according to Lopez.

"Then the guy started it and drove it away," he said. "But it was missing a few parts."

Our employees work in our clients' homes, so we are very careful about screening for any past offenses. We also check driving records and test for substance abuse. In addition, we bond our employees for your protection.

We handle all the payroll-related details such as withholding of taxes, payment of workers compensation and compliance with all government regulations, which grow more complex each year. We train them upon employment and pay them to attend continuing education classes. And we reward them with the best benefit package of any local home care agency.

All this takes place behind the scenes. What you see is a friendly, professional Personal Attendant backed up by a supervising Home Care Coordinator and by every procedure we have established for your protection.

A very expensive fish

THE PEOPLE of this country expect their legislators not to mislead them when they pass laws. And they expect the executive branch to enforce the laws in a way which is based not only on the laws' language, but on common sense.

Thus, when Americans were told, back in the 1970s, that a powerful new federal statute, the Endangered Species Act, was required to prevent plants and animal from going extinct, most of them supported it. They understood that once a species goes extinct, it is lost forever, along with its DNA (which could be vital to the genetic diversity of the planet) and any unknown future benefit the creature might hold for mankind.

Many citizens also felt it would be immoral to continue to sacrifice any of Earth's life forms for the sake of ordinary, and easily replaceable, human pursuits. A fish, for example, shouldn't be killed off just so another hydroelectric dam could be built. A lizard shouldn't be eliminated for another housing development.

Thus, when the steelhead trout in the Carmel River was listed as a threatened species in 1997, hardly anyone questioned the classification. Even when the cost of restoring the fish's habitat rose to the tens of millions of dollars; and when federal wildlife officials started interfering in the annual opening of the Carmel River Lagoon sandbar; and when they announced a new dam would not be permitted on the upper Carmel River because the dam might interfere with the trout's spawning; and when they started recommending that one of the old dams be torn down; and with pumping from the Carmel River severely restricted, preventing landowners from developing empty lots, and homeowners from adding on, and business owners from expanding their services if any new water would be required; and with the cost of a replacement water project climbing past $250 million — even with all of that, most people raised no objections to the demands of the National Marine Fisheries Service and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service that the steelhead trout be protected. The people raised no objections because they were constantly told (even in this newspaper) that the steelhead trout was threatened with extinction.

But that is not true. It turns out the steelhead trout (Oncorhynchus mykiss) is one of the world's most plentiful fish and is in no danger whatsoever of going extinct.

A NMFS official admitted as much. When asked if the local trout is same species as trout found throughout the West Coast and in many rivers and lakes of North America, and which is for sale in Seattle fish markets for $5.99 a pound, Dick Butler answered, "They're the same species, but for management purposes we divide them into distinct [geographic] populations." In other words, the steelhead trout is unprotected in numerous rivers and streams of the Pacific Northwest and Alaska. But it is a crime to kill one here.

It is perfectly OK with us if the people of California or the United States, acting through their representatives, decide to spend their tax dollars protecting local populations of otherwise plentiful fish with the same vigor as species which are truly endangered. It would certainly be OK if the people of the Monterey Peninsula decided on their own to spend hundreds of millions of their hard-earned dollars to protect the fish of the Carmel River. But if the people of this community are to be forced by distant bureaucrats to spend huge sums protecting the local population of an otherwise plentiful fish, this decision should be made after full public disclosure of the facts. The Endangered Species Act is not the "Threatened Local Population of Any Species Act." Nor is it the "Protect Genetic Diversity At All Costs Act." The people have been hoodwinked about what constitutes an endangered species. And it's costing them plenty.

Letters to the Editor

Never too late to learn

Dear Editor:

For an invaluable learning experience, council members Gerard Rose, Mike Cunningham and Erik Bethel should request an audio tape from the city clerk of the council's Oct. 3 agenda item relating to Barney Segal and the Burde Bank Building. Only by listening to an audio tape — not viewing a video — will they grow in understanding of how poorly they conducted themselves. They should listen carefully to the comments of their senior members on council — McCloud and Hazdovac — and listen carefully to the public testimony of residents — Dahlstrand, Laiolo, Bell, White, Lagerholm — who have lived and served this community for years and who, with one exception, knew Barney Segal and who all respect the bank building for its unique Bay Area Regional Style of architecture. The councilmen had the previous testimony of the local chapter of AIA to support preservation of the building; and they had information from the National Trust for Historic Preservation stating that a case can be made to save notable buildings of the recent past from the wrecking ball.

I have never felt more desperate for the future of our village than I did at the Oct. 3 council meeting. Rose, Cunningham and Bethel presented to the audience an arrogant ignorance and disrespect for the traditions of our village and how this village was developed. As Mayor McCloud said, the minority viewpoint was held by two members of council (McCloud and Hazdovac) who actually lived here when Barney Segal was alive. In this case the councilmen should have respected the mayor's experience and followed her lead to preserve the bank building and honor Barney Segal. That would have been the noble and correct and courageous thing to do. Their hands were not tied.

'A viable antidote'

Dear Editor:

At their Oct. 3 meeting, the Carmel City Council allowed the demolition of the former bank building at Seventh and Dolores to happen. The council members who voted to overturn the historic designation of the Barney Segal bank building are either totally ignorant of the soul of Carmel's character or are bordering on being political cowards. Their abject dependence on the fine print of the rules of historic designation plus splitting and resplitting hairs, all without addressing the big picture, suggest they are unsuitable for the job of stemming Carmel's continuing slide toward civic mediocrity.

The real issue here is the preservation of an exceptionally fine piece of Carmel archi-ecture. Having "blown" the chance to do so in earlier hearings on the building's importance in the community, those in the majority now tried to avoid the problem completely. The issue is basically a subjective one. This, therefore, calls for a subjective judgment, as the two council members who were raised here, to their eternal credit, showed.

Historic preservation, or the designating of significant community assets, or whatever you want to call it, is a process intended to identify and preserve the community's treasures. Preservation has been in use in one form or another for centuries and has long been recognized worldwide as a viable antidote to the depredations of rank commercialism and its attendant blighting effect. Citizens have an inherent right to protect what makes their community unique and livable, and this transcends the rigid interpretation of property rights as many current and past examples show.

When will Carmel citizens see an understanding of this by their government?

'Eyes full of tears'

Dear Editor:

It is so sad to see one of Carmel's landmarks close its door. We will have a hard time explaining to our family when they all come here Thanksgiving holidays that their favorite eating place is no longer there. We hope the downtown landlords pay more attention to the community than their own bank accounts.

To all of you at Pernille Restaurant: We will miss you. Thanks for all wonderful things you did for our children and grandchildren. No place will have your food and service.

With eyes full of tears,
thanks,

Bombers' final gathering

THE LAST convention for the U.S. Air Force 454th Bomb Group — of which Carmelite and former B-24 pilot Chuck Poland is president — will be held Oct. 19-22 at the Crowne Plaza Hotel in Arlington, Va. Of the group's 5,000 members who flew B-24s out of Southern Italy during the World War II years of 1944 and 1945, only 441 survive, according to Poland. So far, 202 men have signed up for the convention, but he desperately hopes the rest will join them.

Poland said he invited President George W. Bush and his father to the convention. The President couldn't commit, and the former President Bush declined but sent a letter commending the group and thanking the men for their service. "As veterans of the United States Armed Forces, you are heroes in the truest sense of the word," he wrote. Poland asked anyone with information on the whereabouts of members of the 454th, or any members who wish to attend the convention, to call him at (831) 625-0147.

Sandy Claws

By Margot Petit Nichols

FRECKLES DINEEN, 9, has no visible freckles until she rolls over for a pat on her tum. She was named by brother Tommy, now 16 and a student at Carmel High School.

Freckles was adopted from the SPCA when she was just a pup. Mom Patrice was told Freckles was part Jack Russel and part shepherd, but as she grew, she took on whippet overtones. Whatever her heritage, she runs like the wind on Carmel Beach four or five times a week when Mom drives her in from Carmel Valley Village.

As we watched her from above the beach on Wednesday, we were impressed by her seeming indefatigability as she zoomed happily along the strand, dashing into the ocean from time to time, chasing tennis balls tossed by Mom with her long-distance Chuckit ball thrower. Onlookers would never guess Freckles had an operation for cancer recently and has defied all odds to date.

At home, Freckles has a collection of tennis balls which Mom keeps finding in every part of the house. When she moves furniture to vacuum, four or five balls roll out from underneath.

Freckles has many endearing qualities, among them her fondness for young children and her love of cats. At home, she and tiger cat Kitty, 11, curl up together on a sun spot on the living room rug – but when someone enters the room, they separate immediately, as if to deny their unusual friendship.

Other pets at the Dineen home are five koi fish and a python named Snake. An uninvited skunk dropped in on Tommy's birthday party recently, and an unruly band of raccoons dismantled the doggie door by pulling the whole frame off while the family was on vacation several years ago. But that's probably par for the course in rural Carmel Valley, and Freckles takes it all in stride.
