D.A. warns of widespread elder abuse

■ Calls for regulation of caregivers

By KELLY NIX

THE PEOPLE who are supposed to be caring for the county's seniors are actually the ones who commit most of the financial crimes against them, according to Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Lisa Poll, who heads the DA's Elder Abuse Prosecution Unit.

Those paid to take care of elderly residents account for two-thirds of financial elder abuse, which includes embezzlement and theft, she said.

But prosecuting offenders is a difficult task since the home caregiver industry isn't regulated. "There needs to be some sort of oversight put in place," said Poll. "The lack of regulation makes the home care industry rife with abuse."

While nurses who care for the elderly are regulated, caregivers are not. No training or certification are necessary under the law, and anyone can care for a senior and get paid for it.

Tough to prosecute offenders

Because there are no specific laws for caregivers to follow, it places the burden on prosecutors to prove a caregiver intentionally took advantage of a senior.

And elder abuse cases are loaded with hurdles not present in other crimes. Elderly victims often won't report caregivers for fear of jeopardizing their own care.

"They think, 'If this person is arrested, who will take care of me?'" Poll said.

As a result, many cases go unreported to police, Poll said. And when cases are reported, law enforcement often misperceives a criminal offense as a civil matter.

"[Police] may not take the case," she said, "because they are not trained in the academy to deal with financial abuse cases."

Unscrupulous caregivers often play on the emotions of their senior victims. Some will steal money or ask for loans, and later, when caught, contend the money was simply a gift — something difficult for prosecutors to disprove.

"If there was any regulation of the industry and laws that prohibited gifts and loans, some of those defenses could be shut down," Poll said.

Recovering from cancer surgery, Smith says he's 'very much better'

■ Plans to return to board of supervisors soon

By KELLY NIX

AFTER SEVERAL weeks of recovery following surgery to remove an abdominal tumor, Monterey County Supervisor Jerry Smith said Wednesday he hopes to return to work by the end of the month.

The 4th District supervisor, who has been on medical leave since March, is undergoing chemotherapy.

"I'm doing very much better," Smith said in a phone interview from his home Wednesday. "It was just one of those situations where I was diagnosed with cancer, but it was operable."

Smith, 61, said he's eager to resume his duties after being away for several weeks.

"The diagnosis is for a full recovery," he told The Pine Cone. "I feel really strong and I'm basically going through the treatment phase."

Smith was admitted to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula in March where doctors removed the tumor. Before his interview with The Pine Cone, the nature of Smith's illness hadn't been publicly disclosed and he wasn't in a condition to talk to news media.

"In all honesty," he said, "from March 19 until two weeks ago, I was sedated pretty heavily."

Smith said he's received an outpouring of support from

Split council wants Maserati's garage redesigned

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SAN CARLOS Street residents Tor and Katherine McPartland may have a really nice car, but they can't build a garage to keep it in, a divided Carmel City Council decided Tuesday. At least, not yet.

On a vote of 3-2, the council granted a neighbor's appeal, overturned the design review board's unanimous approval of the detached single-car garage in the front setback of the McPartlands' home and asked the board to look at the project again.

Alleging a garage built at the front property line would violate residential design guidelines, neighbor Patricia Troxell asked the council to require it be redesigned and built elsewhere on the lot. Otherwise, she said, it would wreck her view of the street and Sunset Center, limit her enjoyment of her front yard, reduce the value of her property and be dangerous because the street is busy.

"To have an overwhelming structure like this takes away from the character of our village," she said.

The only option?

Planner Nathan Schmidt recommended the council deny the appeal, since the proposed garage would meet city codes, be lower and smaller than the limits in the ordinance, and "add diversity to the street."

Residents Monte Miller and Barbara Livingston also said planners should consider placing the garage in another location on the property, and a couple of other neighbors sent letters expressing concerns similar to Troxell's.

But designer Ben Wise said the front of the lot is the only option.

"I have carefully studied the site, and this seems to be the only logical location," he said. "I worked with staff and think staff has made their support of this garage clear."

P.B. FIRE DESTROYS HOME OF RLS HEADMASTER

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A DECORATIVE lamp apparently set a ficus on fire in Joe and Marilee Wandke's home at Stevenson School, gutting it last Thursday night, but investigators don't know whether an electrical problem or the light's proximity to the plant caused the blaze.

While working at home alone at about 8:40 p.m. April 26, Marilee Wandke, whose husband is headmaster of the school, heard the smoke alarm sounding at the other end of the house, according to Pebble Beach Fire Battalion Chief Dennis Carreiro. She discovered smoke and fire in a corner of the master bedroom, and by the time she had dialed 911 and fled outside, the fire had spread down the hall.

Four minutes later, fire engines arrived from the station a little more than a mile away from the campus on Forest Lake Road.

"We got there and had fire rolling out the door already," Carreiro said.

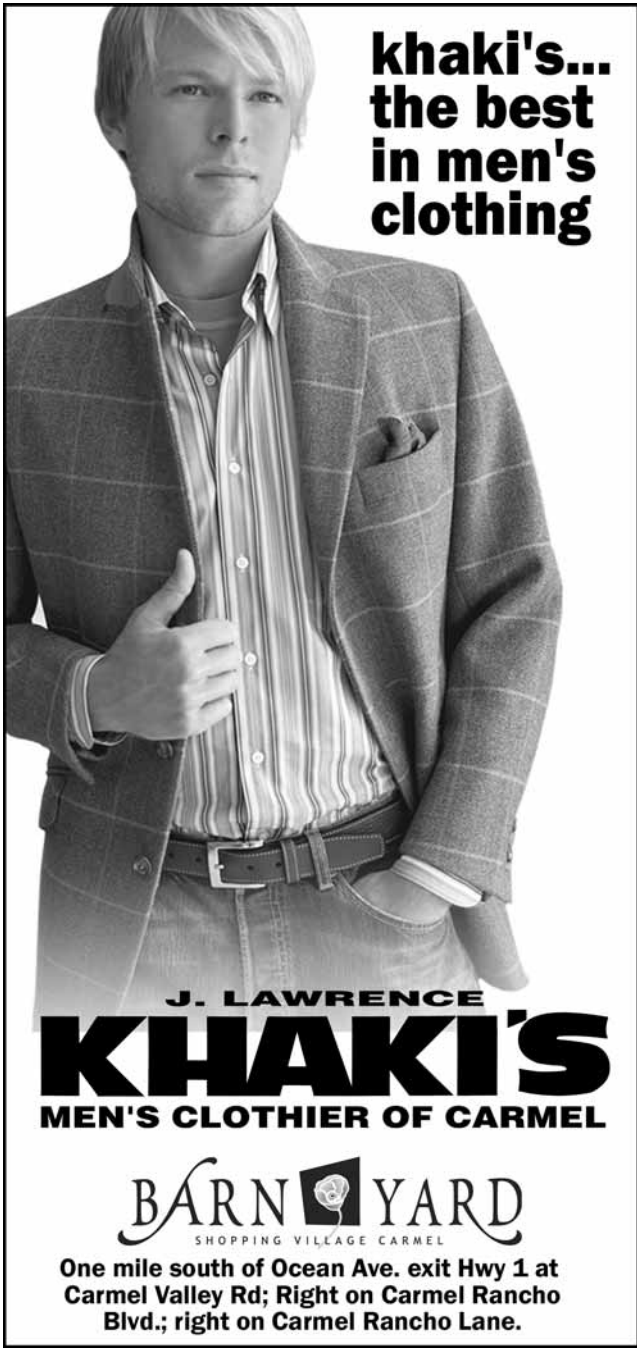

A total of 25 personnel from PBFD, neighboring Cypress

Objections to the idea of a garage on the front property line of this San Carlos Street house were enough to convince a slim majority of the city council to overturn the project Tuesday.

THE WOMAN who recently got out of jail after serving time for stealing a wealth of gold coins and other valuables from her 99-year-old great aunt has been arrested for allegedly threatening the elderly woman and her associates.

Cynthia Hurley was arrested last week after making threats against her great aunt, Lillian King, King's attorney, Robert Rosenthal, and Nader Agha, co-conservator of King's estate, said Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Lisa Poll.

"One [threat] was verbalized to [Hurley's] counselor and involved all three of those individuals," Poll said. "And the second incident just involved Nader Agha on April 23."

Poll said details of the threats aren't public now but could be revealed at a May 10 court hearing in Salinas. Hurley was in a courtroom Tuesday for appointment of a public defender and remains in custody at Monterey County Jail.

"One of the terms of [Hurley's] probation is not to harass, threaten or harm the victim or co-conservators in the case," Poll said.

Hurley made the first alleged threat to a drug counselor, who told authorities, Poll said.

Rosenthal declined Wednesday to comment on the the case because it is still pending.

Hurley's arrest for violating the terms of her probation is the latest in a seemingly unending saga involving her and King.

In a plea bargain in October, Hurley pleaded no contest to stealing valuables from King while both lived at King's oceanfront estate in Pacific Grove.

Did you know...

Point Lobos is the "greatest meeting of land and water in the world." Many sources credit this quote to Robert Louis Stevenson. (For example, United Airlines magazine in January, 1996.) In fact, the statement was made by Francis McComas (1875-1938), who came here from Australia to paint. Sports Illustrated, in June, 1999, claimed that Stevenson described Carmel Bay as "the most felicitous meeting of land and sea in creation." But Stevenson didn't say that one either, according to Roger G. Swearingen, an expert on the Scottish author, based in Santa Rosa. "The Sports Illustrated quote sounds to me like somebody's embellishment of the McComas comment," says Swearingen. So, McComas gets full credit for a memorable remark.

Study of consolidated Peninsula fire departments to be released

■ Monterey, Carmel, P.G. already share some services

By MARY BROWNFIELD

MONTEREY FIREFIGHTERS are now available to respond to major incidents in Carmel-by-the-Sea, according to the agreement that took effect April 16. For $20,000 per year, fire supervisors from Monterey are dispatched, along with Carmel firefighters, to fires, ocean rescues, technical rescues, certain alarm activations, serious hazardous materials incidents and mass casualty situations in Carmel.

Earlier this year, Pacific Grove signed a contract with Monterey for the same service, and Carmel joined in when the city council approved it April 3. The city already contracts with P.G. to have its fire chief, Andrew Miller, and his assistant chief oversee Carmel's fire department.

With only six full-time firefighters on staff at the station on Sixth Avenue, city councilman Gerard Rose said at the April hearing, "The new agreement will enhance and further ensure there will be a complete response [to any emergency]. Carmel does a good job of keeping things quaint, but police and fire is not something we want to be quaint at."

Afterward, Miller said the new agreement would ensure a supervisor is available to respond to emergencies at any time of day and would save the city about $40,000 a year.

Carmel's three former supervisors still work for the department but have different duties, including manning the fire station, responding to emergencies and training other employees.

"The big expense was paying for a 24/7 duty chief, which was something like $60,000 per year," Miller said.

Monterey Fire officials have toured the city, met with the full-time staff and been informed of particular hazards, inoperable hydrants, emergency response plans and other logistics of tending to emergencies in town.

Consolidation study due

The agreement also gives the three cities the chance to see how they work together — something they may be doing to a greater degree in the future. The prospects of sharing emergency services are contemplated in a study which may be released this month.

City councils in Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel agreed last summer to pay Citygate Associates $50,000 for the feasibility analysis, and Miller said the mayors, city administrators and fire chiefs met last week to discuss its conclusions.

They shared ideas and asked that more information be included to "make it more comprehensive," Miller said.

He did not want to reveal the study's conclusions prior to its public release, but it was also unveiled last Monday for about 50 workers from the three departments, including union presidents from Monterey and Pacific Grove, and Capt. Mitch Kastros from Carmel.

"The goal of these meetings is to make sure all the information is there that we need in order to take the issue to the rest of the councils and the public," Miller continued.

The mayors, city administrators, fire chiefs and possibly the vice mayors are set to discuss it again May 7, after which the consultants will prepare the report for public review.

Miller said he expects a meeting will be set soon to release the study and solicit comments from residents and the cities' elected officials.

Splash, splash at last, but more $$ needed

PARENTS, SCHOOL board members, district administrators, fans and swimmers gathered April 27 to officially dedicate the Bob Walthour Aquatic Center at Carmel High School — a long-planned and much anticipated project mostly paid for with bond funds and money raised by the Friends of Carmel Aquatics.

In addition, CHS parent Mike Rianda helped acquire the high-quality pool for the school well below its actual cost. Construction, which involved removing the decades-old pools, readying the site for the new pool, and installing it and the required infrastructure, was completed this spring.

But FOCA still needs to raise money to pay for a new scoreboard and other necessities. The group has been selling commemorative tiles and recently received $25,000 from Carmel Rotary in honor of coach Jim Agen, and $25,000 from Granite Construction.

"We still have about $100,000 left to raise," Merrie Potter said.

Following the dedication, the Carmel High teams competed in their final meet of the season against Pacific Grove. Potter reported they were victorious.

For more information or to contribute to the pool project, visit www.carmelpool.org.

FAILED BANK ROBBER PLEADS NO CONTEST, FACES LIFE IN PRISON

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MAN whose clip fell out of his gun as he tried to rob a Crossroads bank last summer pleaded no contest to felony bank robbery charges, Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo announced April 26.

Tyrone Foisy, the 46-year-old Carmel Valley resident who was wrestled to the ground by the bank manager after the clip incident, is set to be sentenced next month and could receive 45 years to life under the state's Three Strikes law because of previous felonies.

Tyrone Foisy, as he was being taken into custody last summer.

The attempted robbery occurred at Wells Fargo Bank July 31, 2006, when Foisy walked in wearing a hooded sweatshirt, sunglasses and bandanna, and carrying a loaded handgun.

"Foisy threatened to kill bank employees if they didn't give him money," Steve Somers of the DA's office reported. "The robbery was thwarted by the bank manager who, not realizing that Foisy was robbing the bank, approached him from behind to try and determine why he was shouting."

When Foisy turned to face the manager, the ammunition clip fell from his gun. A few bullets escaped and rolled along the floor, and the manager grabbed for the weapon, even though a round could still have been in the chamber.

The pair fell to the ground, and Foisy used a can of pepper spray to temporarily blind the manager, who was nonetheless undeterred. Another bank employee helped pin the robber to the floor.

Sheriff's deputies took Foisy into custody and investigated the crime scene that included cash spilled on the floor during the attempted armed robbery. Emergency medical tech-

Activists offer riverside hikes, lobby Congress for protection

By CHRIS COUNTS

IN AN effort to raise the public's awareness about the importance of local waterways — and to enlist help in lobbying Congress to protect more local rivers — a consortium of environmental groups is offering guided group hikes this weekend along Big Creek and the Arroyo Seco River.

Friends of the River, a statewide river conservation organization, has teamed up with the Ventana Wilderness Alliance, the Ventana chapter of the Sierra Club, and other conservationists, community leaders and activists to form the Ventana Wild Rivers Campaign. The goal of the campaign is to convince Congress to bestow Wild and Scenic River status on nine local rivers and creeks. The designation would require they be "preserved in a free-flowing condition."

The public will have a rare opportunity to visit the Big Creek watershed in Big Sur Saturday, May 5, when guide Julie Anne Hopkins leads a hike through the Landels-Hill Big Creek Reserve, a rugged 4,200-acre property that serves as a biological field station for students attending the University of California at Santa Cruz and is usually closed to the public. For reservations, directions and other details, call (831) 566-6012.

On Sunday, May 6, guides Stan Mellin, Catherine Sheen and Dennis Palm will lead hikers into the Arroyo Seco watershed. The river, which flows east from the crest of the Santa Lucia Mountains, is the last of three major tributaries of the Salinas River that remains undammed. About 19 miles of the river are located within the boundaries of Los Padres National Forest. For more information about the May 6 hike, call (831) 375-7430.

The Arroyo Seco River supports steelhead that spawn in the Salinas River watershed. Its riparian habitat home to the California spotted owl and the Southwestern pond turtle, two species environmentalists want the federal government to protect.

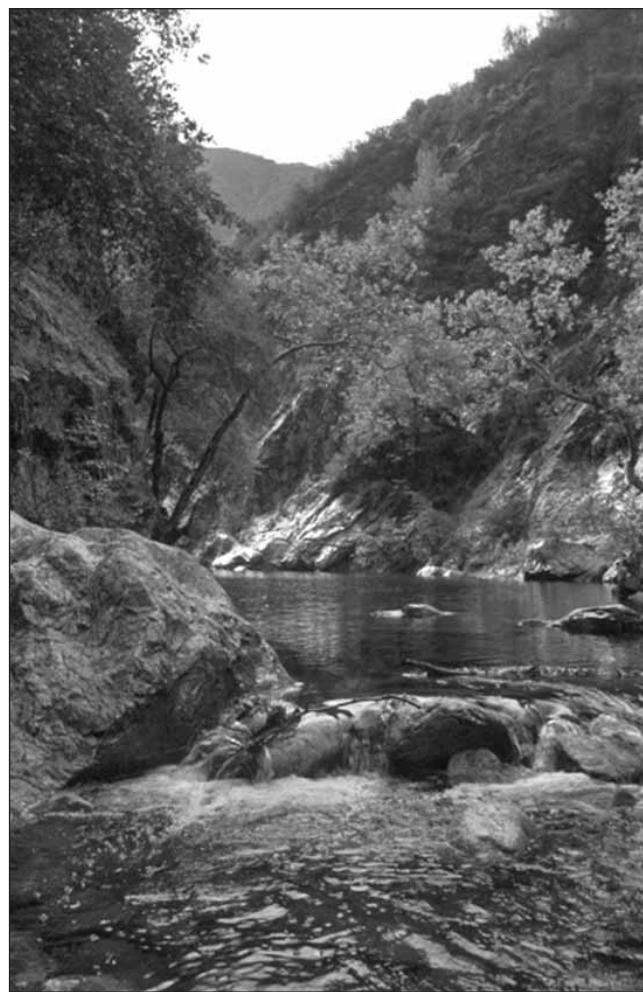

"The Arroyo Seco River is also one of the most popular recreation destinations in the Santa Lucia Range," explained Hannah Schoenthal-Muse, Central Coast Rivers coordinator for Friends of the River. "The river flows through a series of deep rocky gorges that provide a rugged setting for camping, hiking, swimming and white-water kayaking. And most of the people who visit the river every year are locals."

In 1992, Congress granted Wild and Scenic status to the Big Sur River. In 2005, the U.S. Forest Service concluded the Arroyo Seco River was the only other waterway in Monterey County eligible for federal protection.

"We were very disappointed the study only recommended protection for the Arroyo Seco River," Schoenthal-Muse said.

The VWRC is also seeking Wild and Scenic protection for Tassajara Creek, Church Creek, Big Creek, Carmel River, the North and South Forks of the Little Sur River, Nacimienta River, San Antonio River, San Carpofo Creek and Willow Creek.

"We want to make sure the pristine areas at the headwaters of these watersheds are protected in perpetuity," Schoenthal-Muse explained. "We're convinced that all nine of these rivers and streams are eligible for federal protection. These are amazing, pristine rivers. They are ecologically diverse. They have so much to offer."

Today's Modern Dentistry

Presented by Frank J. di Bari, DDS

TELL GRAMPA TO WATCH HIS SWEETS

While most people associate tooth decay with children who have a fondness for sweets, cavities may also be a problem for those approaching middle age and beyond. The reason for this is that gums begin to recede as we get older. This leads to exposure of vulnerable tooth roots, which do not have the benefit of enamel coating to protect them. Unlike the exposed crowns, tooth roots also have minimal exposure to topical fluoride. So, to protect aging teeth against "senile decay," older patients are urged to ask their dentists about possible fluoride applications, as well as way to improve saliva flow.

Dentists are experiencing a quiet revolution in their offices as the number of older patients increases steadily. As dentists, we know that this burgeoning population group is wearing fewer dentures and is keeping their natural teeth longer. Also, we know that some patients in this group require special consideration because reduced mobility and dexterity may make daily oral hygiene difficult. To schedule an appointment, please call our office. Open by appointment, we accept most insurances and credit cards.

P.S. It is as important to brush and floss bridges and other dental restorations as it is to clean natural teeth.

Dr. di Bari, is a dentist in private practice at 20 Dormody Ct. here in Monterey. He may be reached at 373-3703.

A TALL ORDER

According to a study involving adults with an average age of 80, most of the seniors experienced difficulties bathing. Among the problems that the elderly adults encountered were falls, trouble getting into the bathtub, and bumping their legs on the sides of the bathtub or the threshold of the shower stall. In efforts to remedy these problems, many of the seniors performed such unsafe maneuvers as holding onto the shower door or towel bar for balance. One even resorted to utilizing a lawn chair as a shower seat. Needless to say, these practices are unsafe. If you (or someone you know) experiences difficulty using the bathroom, contact an occupational therapist, who can teach safe bathing methods.

As a caregiver, you may be responsible for bathing and dressing your loved one. In addition to respecting his or her pride, you have the additional responsibility of keeping your loved one safe. VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES is here to assist with a family's concerns as well as the resident's needs. Our in-home care program assists older adults in maintaining their independence at home, or can ease the transition to a new setting if needed. We handpick and hire only the most dedicated and qualified caregivers.

P.S. Seniors should incorporate elements of "universal design" into their homes, which removes barriers that prevent the easy use of all of the home's functional elements such as kitchen appliances and bathroom fixtures.

Good Old Days Parade participant dies in scooter accident

By KELLY NIX

THE LOCAL motor scooter community was shocked this week to learn about the fatal accident of one of their own, a 78-year-old Cachagua man who just a week before his crash rode in the Good Old Days parade in Pacific Grove.

Paul Sparks was riding his 2006 Suzuki Burgman west-bound on Carmel Valley Road April 28 when he struck the Honda Accord driven by 18-year-old Salinas resident Chelsea Bachman, according to the California Highway Patrol. She reportedly began to turn and suddenly stopped directly in Sparks' path.

Sparks was one of a group of riders, mostly members of the Vespa Club of Monterey, who rode in the Good Old Days Parade April 21. Sparks was unknown to club members until the day of the parade.

"He was real soft spoken," Roger Vandevent, president of the Vespa Club of Monterey, said of his first impression of Sparks. "He just wanted to go riding."

Wei Chang, a club member who had posted an advertisement about the parade on Craig's List, said he had a brief conversation with Sparks about his Burgman, one of the largest scooters available.

"He said he would like to participate in the parade with the group," Chang said. "And I said, 'Great.'"

Ken Jones, the club's secretary/treasurer, said he was playing golf Monday when he heard from a golf buddy a scooter-ist had been involved in a fatal accident.

"One of the guys said, 'You better stay off Carmel Valley Road,'" Jones recalled. "He said a scooter rider got killed there, but he didn't have any details at all."

On Monday, Jones read a news report about Sparks' death.

"It's a reality we live in, but it's sad," Jones said. "And it helps us all be a little more careful and understand the risks we have on a scooter."

Sparks wasn't a member of the Vespa club but had taken steps to become one, including attending a club meeting the Tuesday after the Good Old Days parade. He would have been the club's oldest member.

Sparks worked as a business machines associate at Staples in Seaside, where he had been employed for about six months, according to a store employee. He had family back East and visited them once in awhile.

Michael Jones, owner of the Cachagua Store and A Moveable Feast Catering, said Sparks would come in every Sunday for brunch and bring George, his toy poodle. Jones usually made George an egg-white omelet because the dog had kidney problems.

"He was a sweet dog," Michael Jones said. "We served George at a table. He sat in a high chair."

Coincidentally, George died just a week before Sparks was killed, Michael Jones said.

On April 21, Paul Sparks was photographed getting ready to participate in a Pacific Grove parade. A week later, he was killed on his scooter in Carmel Valley.

Sophomore's Shakespeare study triumphs at state

"WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE and the Authorship Controversy: A Study in Literary Triumph and Historical Tragedy," won its writer, Santa Catalina sophomore Allegra Krasznecwicz, top honors in a statewide competition sponsored by the California Historical Society.

Each year, the group organizes a research paper competition to observe History Day in California. The theme for this year's contest was "triumph and tragedy in history." Krasznecwicz' victory, which she achieved at the April 26-29 finals in Long Beach and shared with two other students, reportedly marks the first time a Monterey County student has won the contest at the state level in 15 years.

In March she also won the Monterey County competition, sponsored by the Lyceum, which put her in the running at the state level.

Krasznecwicz will take her award-winning essay to the National History Day competition in Maryland next month.

Ticket sales, fewer jobs put Sunset in the black during third quarter

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SUNSET CENTER is in the black for the quarter but in the red for the year, executive director Jack Globenfelt reported to the Carmel City Council Tuesday. But he characterized the third quarter — which included some lackluster performances and decreased attendance in January, February and March — as “spring training” and said the center already hit some “home runs” during the current quarter, which ends at the close of the fiscal year June 30.

Total performance revenues were $55,220 ahead of budget, at $244,160, from Jan. 1 through March 31, but Globenfelt said rental income from the center’s historic presenters, such as the Carmel Music Society and the Monterey Symphony, was $33,328 below budget, at $73,567.

“This drop is due to a decline in attendance from the previous fiscal year by the Historical Presenting Partners and fewer performances by outside promoters,” Globenfelt reported. The shows arranged by Sunset Center staff were mixed, with Paula Poundstone’s well attended while others broke even or lost money. The separate Performance Carmel series, which offered one event in January and two in March, also yielded disappointing results.

Due to the decline in attendance, “fees and other income” totaled $56,065, rather than the target $83,022. The center closed the quarter with revenue from all sources $5,065 below the anticipated $378,857. That figure does not include the city’s $178,250 subsidy for those three months.

the expenditure side, though the quarter ended with a favorable balance.

The costs of presenting performances were greater than anticipated, coming in $96,352 in the red at $261,955, and ticketing services cost $2,909 more than expected, for a total of $52,317.

That overspending was more than offset by savings in salaries, benefits, payroll taxes and other direct expenses, which were budgeted at $245,283 but were actually $141,155, “as a result of personnel changes, better staffing utilization and less overtime by casual laborers,” according to Globenfelt.

He said conservation efforts developed by Sunset staff helped keep utility bills and other maintenance and insurance expenses $4,531 under budget, at $65,168.

Overall, expenses were $9,399 lower than anticipated, which put Sunset $4,334 in the black for the third quarter. The fiscal year to date, however, shows a $8,201 deficit as cost savings of $33,037 have failed to make up for the $41,237 gap in revenues.

But with two months left, Globenfelt predicted Sunset will finish the year on track.

“We expect the remainder of the year to be close to our projections. While we have pushed to lower costs and raise income, it cannot be anticipated that these results can be sustainable in the future,” Globenfelt’s report concluded. “Costs for services, materials and artists’ fees continue to rise, and we are expecting substantial competition for performers and entertainment in the market.”

Nonetheless, he told the council the fourth quarter is showing well, with several well attended performances already past.

“We had a lot of home runs in April.”

Happy Birthday May 2007

recently pleaded guilty to taking more than $100,000 from a 78-year-old quadriplegic Monterey woman.

"He said 'if you give me $110,000 for a down payment on a house,' Poll said, "'I will take care of you for the rest of your life. You will have a free place to live and you won't have to worry about anything anymore.'"

The man, who will be sentenced in August, didn't buy a home and instead spent most of the money on personal items.

"Some of these victims don't have family to care for them," Poll said. "And they will do just about anything for those who take care of them."

Margarite Alvarez, CEO of Community Care and Choice

Home Health Care, a locally owned, state licensed, Medicare certified agency that offers in-home skilled nursing and rehabilitation services, said for every elder abuse case that is reported, there are many more that are not.

"I think the statistic is for every one case that's reported, four go unreported," Alvarez said. "I can say that is a low figure."

Embarrassment, shame and diminished mental capacity are other reasons elderly victims don't report abuse, Poll said.

"It's all the same issues that are in domestic violence," she said. "But on top of that, there is the extra layer of the mental and physical health issues."

When a caregiver is charged with a crime, Poll said judges often impose lenient sentences against offenders that don't match the severity of the offenses.

"The law hasn't caught up," she explained. "It's a matter of educating the courts and raising awareness of the issues so there isn't such a disparity in sentences."

There is also the issue of resources. On any given day, Poll has from 30 to 50 elder abuse cases on her desk. The county simply doesn't have the funds to augment the elder abuse unit.

Family members cheat too

It's not only paid caregivers who are the problem. Family members who care for their relatives compose nearly one-third of those who cheat seniors, Poll said.

For example, Lisa Karne MacAdams and her daughter, Christi Schoenbacher, bilked a total of $230,000 from MacAdams' 75-year-old mother, according to Poll.

"They convinced her to cash in an annuity," Poll said. "Once that ran out, they put her in a home and sold off all her jewelry and furniture."

Schoenbacher and MacAdams also maxed-out the elderly woman's credit cards and left town after dropping her off at a senior care facility, she said.

"They abandoned her," Poll said. "She was of sound mind and didn't need to be there."

There is currently an arrest warrant for MacAdams and Schoenbacher.

Perhaps the highest profile family-related elder abuse case in the county involves Cynthia Hurley, who pleaded no

WHEN TO REFINANCE

While the primary reason for refinancing is generally to reduce your monthly mortgage payment—usually by taking out a refinancing loan with a lower interest rate—it has always been important to make certain that the monthly savings will pay for the cost of taking out the refinancing loan before you sell the home. How long, in other words, will it take your monthly savings to cover the full costs of refinancing?

Another concern is whether, by replacing your existing home mortgage loan with a new one, you might be increasing your overall expense of financing the home by stretching the term of your existing loan with the new one. The old one, after all, may be fully paid off in fifteen years; if so, it's time to do the math before jumping into a new 30-year loan with a lower mortgage rate.

The secondary reason for refinancing, in any case, is that you want out of the loan currently financing your home purchase. Perhaps you have an adjustable rate mortgage whose future has become worryingly uncertain, or perhaps you have a 5-year "hybrid" loan that is about to roll over into an adjustable mortgage whose terms are unattractive to you. In these cases, it will pay to sit for an hour or two with your trusted mortgage advisor and real estate professional and check all your options. Remember: A low initial monthly payment doesn't always mean the loan will be the most economical choice over the long haul. ## Tribute to Jeffers

THE LIFE and poetry of Robinson Jeffers will be celebrated at the Tor House Garden Party Sunday, May 6, from 2 to 5 p.m. The event provides a showcase for Jeffers' home, Tor House, which is one of the Monterey Peninsula's most revered landmarks. "It's an architectural gem," explained Alex Vardamis, president of the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation. "The house is exactly as it was when Jeffers and his wife, Una, lived there."

A string quartet of Carmel High School students — Noah Freedman on violin, Kendall Rookey on violin, Kris Hubby on viola and Melissa Martin on cello — will perform at the event. Flutist Marc Rush and bagpiper Ed Jarvis will also play Celtic music. The party will feature poetry readings, an afternoon tea, a silent auction, gifts for sale and plein aire painting in the garden. Admission is $15 for the general public and $10 for seniors. Children under 12 are not permitted. For more information, call (831) 624-1813 or visit www.torhouse.org.

While most caregivers are honest, Alvarez said it's too easy for dishonest people to avoid detection.

"If you are a hairdresser, you have to be licensed," Alvarez said. "If you are tattoo [artist], you have to be licensed. Why would someone who puts their hands on elderly people and has access to their money and funds not be licensed? Does that make any sense whatsoever?"

'A step in the right direction'

Alvarez has led the local charge for regulating in-home caregivers and has held two conferences in Monterey to provide family caregivers with the tools to be successful. Both conferences were well attended.

And there is a move toward regulation. Assembly Bill 853, the Home Care Services Act of 2007, introduced in February by 9th District Assemblyman Dave Jones, seeks to license caregivers.

While Alvarez said she believes the bill doesn't go far enough in regulating independent caregivers, she said it's a step in the right direction given the rising popularity of home care.

"The area for abuse is going to get bigger and bigger," Alvarez said, "because there will be a shift from hospitals and nursing facilities to home care because it's less expensive."

On April 30, the bill was referred to the California State Assembly Committee on Appropriations.

Asking the right questions

Before hiring a caregiver, Poll said there are some simple questions people should ask.

"What are their qualifications for hiring?" Poll said. "Do they do a criminal background check? What kind of training do they provide and what is their financial policy for gifts?"

But Alvarez said those intent on cheating the elderly — most of whom are independent caregivers and don't work for an agency — will come up with acceptable answers.

"There's no way you can tell by asking questions," she said. "Some of the biggest [offenders] are also the best caregivers."

Mission uses iPods to interest 4th graders

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ALL CALIFORNIA fourth graders study the history of the Catholic missions built throughout the state in the late 1700s and early 1800s. And when students pick a particular mission for their special projects, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea hopes they'll choose the Mission San Carlos Borromeo del Río Carmelo.

In hope of establishing a competitive edge, the Carmel Mission, founded in 1771 by Father Junipero Serra and widely considered the crown jewel of the 21-mission system, last month became the first to offer a video podcast. The narrated, eight-minute program can be downloaded from the city's website, www.carmelcalifornia.com, and then transferred to any video player, such as Apple's video iPod. (Most iPods only play back audio and cannot play the Mission video podcast. The latest versions of iTunes, available free from Apple Computer, will play the podcast on most desktop computers, as will YouTube. It can also be viewed on the city's website.)

"This program is a very significant step forward for the mission in its approach to continuing the teaching that really is the basis of the missions in California," said director of operations Lou Sanna. Missionaries aimed to colonize the land for Spain, teach residents about Christianity and expose them to what they "believed was a better way of life."

Taking advantage of 21st-century technology, the Carmel Mission video podcast will help fourth graders, their families and other visitors learn about this important aspect of the state's history, according to Sanna.

The idea was spearheaded by Anda-Burghardt ad man Jeff Burghardt, whose Monterey firm was hired to handle Carmel's public relations and advertising. The concept stemmed from his company's creation of short videos for the city website that provide "the insider's view of Carmel."

Newsworthy or otherwise interesting happenings make good video clips, and Burghardt thought a video podcast might encourage mission-visiting kids and their families to come to Carmel.

"It was one of those middle-of-the-night thoughts," he said.

Burghardt said his objectives were to attract visitors to the city, connect students with the history of the mission, offer travelers a new way to research the destination or take a self-guided

Visit of WWII aircraft offers bomber's eye view of the Peninsula

By MARY BROWNFIELD

EVER WONDERED what the world looks like from the gunner's seat in the nose of a B-25 Mitchell World War II bomber? Or wanted to pretend to be the bombardier in a B-17 Flying Fortress, or peer out from behind the .50-caliber machine guns of a Consolidated B-24 Liberator?

All three of those historic aircraft will be in Monterey and available for 30-minute flights next week, when the nonprofit Collings Foundation brings its annual Wings of Freedom tour to town. With the goal of honoring veterans and educating Americans about national history and heritage, the bombers will be open for tours on the ground and available for flights at the Monterey Jet Center May 11-14.

Carmel Highlands resident and Cypress Fire Capt. Chris Hartzell, an airplane buff, has twice opted to "fly a mission," as the foundation bills it.

"In the B-17, you get to feel what it was like to be the bombardier," he said. "But the B-24 has the most panoramic view. It was really tough to pick between the two."

According to the Collings Foundation, B-17s and B-24s "were the backbone of the daylight strategic bombing campaign of World War II." The nonprofit owns the only B-24 in the world that still flies, and the B-17 is one of nine across the United States that can take to the air. The B-25 is similarly rare.

"I have always been into World War II bombers. I used to make models of them back when I was 8 years old or so," Hartzell said. "And the B-17 — I don't know what the attraction is, but it's always been my favorite plane."

After years of checking out the historic aircraft whenever it came to town, Hartzell finally took one of the 30-minute flights.

"It was the most awesome thing," he said.

"There's easy access to get into the nose. It's a great view — fantastic — and in the B-17 you can actually stick your head out the tail as the thing is flying. It's really cool."

Hartzell and his then-girlfriend (now wife) Ame Wells rode in the B-24 a few years later in celebration of his birthday.

That aircraft has tight spaces and is harder to explore during flight, but it affords great views at the waist gunner's vantage point, where the side panels are removed.

"You can stand in the window with a .50-caliber gun and look out," he said. There's usually a bottleneck at the prime viewing spot in the front of the plane, so Hartzell advised waiting for the initial rush to subside so as not to spend too much time in line and consequently miss the stunning aerial views available from other areas of the plane.

And take ear plugs.

The details

While the half-hour flights costs $425 in the B-17 or the B-24, and $325 for the waist gun or $400 for the front fuselage in the B-25, people may pay much less to take tours of the aircraft while they are parked on the tarmac at the Monterey Jet Center. Adults pay $10, while children 12 and under are $5. The organization says the fees are considered donations and are tax deductible.

With the caveat that flight schedules are always subject to weather, the aircraft are set to arrive in Monterey the afternoon of Friday, May 11, and be open to the public from 3 to 5 p.m. On Saturday and Sunday, May 12-13, the hours will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and the planes will also be available Monday morning, May 14, from 9 a.m. to noon. Whenever possible, flight times are scheduled to occur before or after those hours.

During the past 17 years, the Wings of Freedom tour has made more than 2,000 visits to airports throughout the United States.

Among the restored aircraft owned by the Collings Foundation in Stow, Mass., are a 1909 Bleriot XI, Fokker DR-1 Triplane, Boeing PT-17 Stearman, North American AT-6 Texan, Grumman TBM Avenger and several others. The foundation is restoring to flying condition a North American A-36 Apache, a Lockheed T-33 Shooting Star and a Douglas A-26C Invader, and it also organizes a Vietnam Memorial Flight featuring the McDonnell F-4D Phantom II, the Douglas TA-4J Skyhawk and the Bell UH-1E Huey.

To reserve a flight on one of the Wings of Freedom aircraft while they are in Monterey, call (800) 568-8924. For more information about the local stop, call tour coordinator Carl Trebler at (831) 883-4142. To learn more about the Collings Foundation, visit www.collingsfoundation.org.

BURNED

Fire Protection District and Pacific Grove Fire Department responded and contained the blaze to the house, but almost everything inside was destroyed, and the building itself will have to be torn down.

Crews worked at the scene for about five hours. After dousing the blaze, they spent considerable time pulling whatever they could salvage out of the wreckage, including a large number of family photographs.

"It's amazing, the pictures that were saved," Carreiro said. "The Wandkes were very appreciative, to say the least."

Julie Pitts, who works in the school's office of advancement, said the couple is staying with friends while figuring out what to do next.

"The house will need to be leveled, because there's nothing that can be saved," she said. Constructed in 1958, the 3,700-square-foot home was first occupied by the school's founders in 1959. Stevenson, then a boys' school, had been operating for seven years.

The hallway contained black slate salvaged from the roof of Carmel's old Sunset School, and ivy growing on a fence outside was clipped at George Washington's Mt. Vernon, N.Y., home, according to Pitts. She said the house was built large enough to accommodate gatherings of faculty, parents, students and alumni.

"The Wandkes have lived there for almost 24 years, and even though the school owns the house, that was really their home," she said. "They are probably just taking care of getting their basic lives back in order. When something happens like that, you suddenly realize you don't have your vitamins or your glasses or your cell phone — stuff you take for granted."

She said they are grateful for the support from the community and the school.

Plenty of water

Carreiro said the Pebble Beach Community Services District's ongoing multi-million-dollar work replacing old water mains with 8-inch lines and installing new hydrants helped ensure they had plenty of water to use on the fire. He praised PBCSD for investing in the effort to upgrade the California American Water Co.-owned system.

"You don't have a fire department doing much good if you don't have water," he said.

(Twenty-nine hydrants in the City of Carmel were put out of service last fall, and much of the old 4-inch water lines are corroded. Since then, more than a third of the fireplugs have been replaced or repaired and connected to other lines. Plans are in place to ensure fire protection until the work is completed.)

In addition, fire officials said the smoke alarm may have saved Wandke's life and helped keep the fire from spreading beyond the house since the fire department arrived moments after her 911 call.

Whether the home will be rebuilt is unknown, according to Pitts. "There hasn't been any discussion of that, yet," she said. "It's too soon to say."

Plans have long been under way for a new president's house off campus on Silver Court, but Pitts did not know the status of that project. She also could not say if the school's insurance company had assessed the amount of the loss. Carreiro estimated it at $2 million, based on the resale value, including the land. The cost of replacing the structure would be much lower.

Everybody Needs a Break Now and Then

Even the most dedicated of family caregivers periodically need some "time off" in order to replenish their energy and renew their spirits. But their commitment is so great that they have difficulty giving themselves permission to take a break.

Besides, the logistics — and the worry — involved in finding a qualified substitute or in taking their loved one to a care facility can be overwhelming.

We can help.

Our Home Care Coordinator will visit you to discuss your needs and wishes. Then, when the time comes, we will carefully select a Personal Attendant to be at home with your loved one while you are away, and to follow the routine that you have established. We'll do everything possible to make this temporary absence comfortable for your loved one and for you. It's worth a try, isn't it? Because you can't take good care of anyone else unless you take care of yourself.

PacRep Theatre's acting school offers kids cure for stage fright

By CHRIS COUNTS

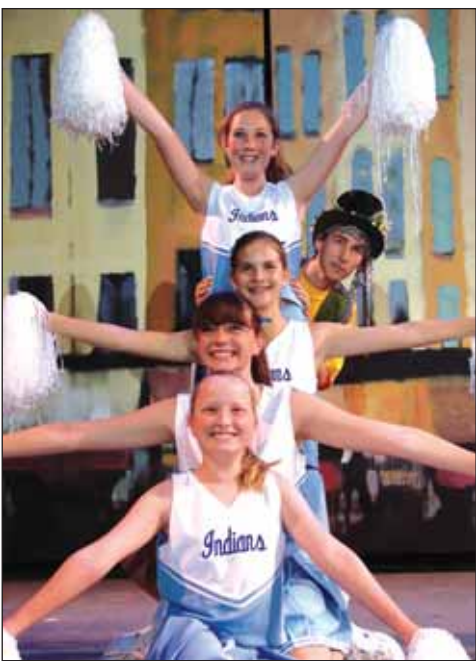

FOR MANY children, there is nothing scarier than getting up in front of an audience and speaking.

A handful of local youngsters, though, luckily have no such apprehension. Thanks to PacRep Theatre's School of Dramatic Arts, the talents of these youthful actors and actresses — who range in age from 6 to 18 — will be on display this week when the Golden Bough Playhouse hosts a new play, "Earthsapoppin'."

"We know that very few of these kids will make acting their careers, but they get a lot out of the experience, not the least of which is getting up in front of a crowd and being comfortable," said Walt deFaria, a longtime Carmel resident who wrote the play. "It's a great thing to have happen to them."

"Earthsapoppin'" tells the story of two young aliens who are sent to Earth from the planet Zyron, which is slowly decaying. The Zyrons are considering Earth as a new home, and the pair of adolescent aliens are charged with determining if the planet is a viable option.

The two young Zyrons land on Earth sometime in the 1970s. They find themselves in the midst of tryouts for an

Octogenarian painter: It takes a lifetime to make an artist

By CHRIS COUNTS

IN A world of ATMs and high-speed Internet connections, where impatience has almost become a virtue, the creative process remains indifferent to urgency and deadlines. In fact, as Rip Matteson has discovered, art reveals its greatest gifts only after a lengthy passage of time.

"It's a lifetime job," explained Matteson, 89, of his evolution as an artist.

Matteson will be joined by local artists Christine Crozier, Mary Fitzgerald Beach and Mark Farina in new exhibits opening Saturday, May 6, at the Carmel Art Association. The gallery will host a reception from 6 to 8 p.m.

A resident of the small San Francisco Bay Area unincorporated community of Kensington, Matteson joined the art association in 1950 shortly after establishing the art program at Monterey Peninsula College. A resident of the Monterey Peninsula for 15 years, he once served as dean of instruction at MPC.

Matteson is best known, though, for his work as a cartoonist. His cartoons have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, Playboy, Punch and many other national publications.

An accomplished figurative painter, Matteson has long made a study of the beauty of the feminine form.

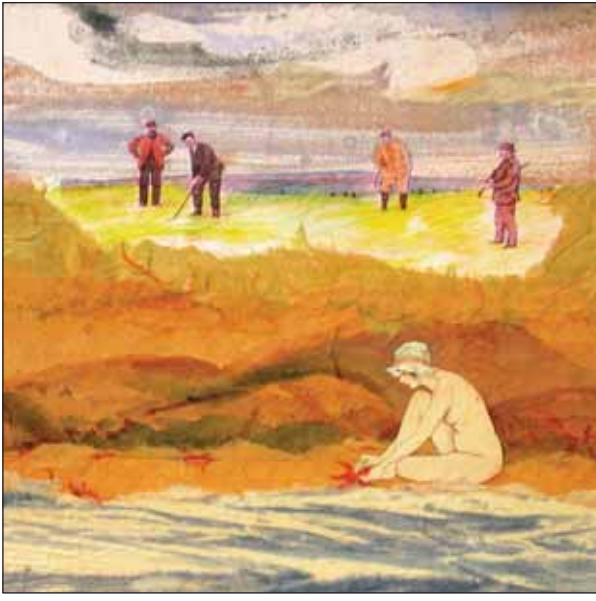

"In my view, painting, like music and dance, should be about beauty, pleasure and feeling good," he said.

But for a painter to be successful, he must also contend with failure.

"You have to realize you are on a road worth following," he said. "I'm glad I hung in there."

For Matteson, one of the biggest hurdles he faced was his habit of comparing his work with that of his favorite artists.

"I'm not Matisse," he insisted. "I'm not Gauguin. It took me a long time to get past these giants. I'm Matteson. And I like who I am." Despite working as an artist for more than half a century, Matteson has no plans to retire anytime soon.

"I figure I've got about 15 years left as a painter," he said. "I'll slow down then, but in the meantime, I'll just make the most of each day."

Old buildings and bright flowers

While Matteson is fascinated with the feminine form, Crozier focuses her creative impulses on the colorful gardens that often adorn California's historic missions and adobes.

"While my paintings are kind of based on plein aire, most of them are too big to have been painted on site," she said. "I try to maintain a loose and spontaneous feel about them. I think it shows in the work. They're almost abstract. I'll look more for the emotional feeling of a crabapple tree than its representation."

Fe, New Mexico, Crozier has lived on the Monterey Peninsula for two decades. She resides in Pacific Grove.

Old magazines and new paintings

For Beach, an old magazine inspired a new look at an old game.

Beach, a resident of Jacks Peak since 1968, came across several World War I-era French magazines that her late father brought back from Europe nearly nine decades ago. She became fascinated with the advertisements in the publications, which featured a remarkably refined artistic style. Often a beautiful woman would be featured in the foreground, while the background would depict a scene involving multiple people engaged in some activity.

So inspired, Beach created a series of collages about golf — using watercolor on rice paper — that capture that distinctive World War I-era artistic style.

A docent at Point Lobos State Reserve and the Monterey Bay Aquarium, Beach has been a member of the art association since 1969.

Plein aire painter stays true to his aim

While many artists can't resist the urge to reinvent their craft with each new painting, others move forward with a steady focus on an existing style. Farina, a prolific plein aire painter, clearly falls into the latter category.

"Many artists go off on different tangents," Farina explained. "Mine is sort of an ongoing tangent."

For the past decade, Farina's landscapes have become a familiar sight in local galleries, just as his easel has become a familiar sight in beautiful natural places like Point Lobos and Carmel Valley.

An art instructor at Monterey Peninsula College, the Carmel Adult School and the Pacific Grove Art Center, Farina joined the art association in 2003. He lives in Pacific Grove.

The Carmel Art Association is located on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth. The venue is open every day from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The show will continue through June 5. For more information, call (831) 624-6176 or visit www.carmelart.org.

"Earthsapoppin'" also comments on the state of the Earth's environment. "We didn't want to preach, but the play does convey a subtle message that it's good to be green."

Despite the message, deFaria said the play is filled with lighthearted fun. "There will be lots of singing, dancing and gags," he said.

The play was written to provide age-appropriate roles for the kids, deFaria explained. "Our actors play characters their own age," he said. "I'm always looking for material for young people."

"Earthsapoppin'" also offers deFaria a chance to team up with his longtime creative collaborator, composer Stephen Tosh.

"In my mind, Stephen is a genius," deFaria said. "He is a serious composer."

Managing a cast of energetic youngsters no doubt has its challenges. But deFaria received more than just a few helping hands along the way.

"The thing that makes it all work is the support of the kids' parents," he explained. "They are our stage hands."

"Earthsapoppin'" will be performed at the Golden Bough Friday, May 4, at 7:30 p.m.; Saturday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m.; Sunday, May 6, at 2 p.m.; Friday, May 11, at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, May 12, at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, May 13, at 2 p.m. The Golden Bough is located on Monte Verde, between Eighth and Ninth.

Seaside noodles, hanging meat and Big Sur in the Big Apple

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

LAST WEEK was a food-and-wine-fueled tour de force as I rang in my 34th year.

After bestowing two dozen roses upon me when I returned from Baltimore, my boyfriend racked up endless supplies of brownie points by taking me to Manresa in Los Gatos. Bar none, it was the best meal I've had in California and the things that Chef David Kinch does to foie gras makes me blush.

On the way up, we stopped at new-ish wine bar Cava, in Capitola, and on the way back at Savannah-Chanelle's tasting room and then Soif in Santa Cruz, rounding out the most delicious 24 hours I've had in recent memory.

The celebration continued Tuesday night as Ryan Williams of Carmel Plaza and I tore it up at Cantinetta Luca and I fulfilled a deep-seated food fantasy — to surround myself with the hanging casings of curing meat in the meat locker. So heavenly. The next night Stacy Hendricks, PR diva for Downtown Dining, and I continued the celebration with a far less-than-satisfying meal at the Village Fish House. Thankfully, the Running Iron saved us just in a nick of time. It's been a fantastic week.

Simple Pleasures

Now that we live in Carmel Valley, it's a bit of an effort to go out in Seaside and beyond. A recent meal at Noodle Bar reaffirmed the necessity to make that extra effort. If you haven't been, go. Pho (a rice noodle soup) was a damp-weather necessity in my diet while I briefly lived in Seattle and Noodle Bar's No.3 (with rare beef) could become a regular fixture on my local ethnic food roster. Plus, it's quite possibly the best $17.20 bargain date for two.

Go: Noodle Bar, 1944 Fremont Blvd., Seaside, (831) 392-0210; 11 a.m.-8 p.m. Mon-Sat.

Big Sur Takes on the Big Apple

Sierra Mar Executive Chef Craig von Foerster and Post Ranch Inn's management entourage took Greenwich Village by storm last week with a sold-out dinner at the prestigious James Beard House. Eighty lucky guests plunked down $150-$200 apiece for a five-course "Taste of Big Sur." Von Foerster schlepped thousands of dollars of local ingredients, as well as Kobe beef from Japan, cross-country for the soiree and made New Yorker's tongues wag with regionally inspired dishes such as an appetizer of Open-Faced Dungeness Crab Sandwiches with Meyer Lemon Sabayon and California Spiny Lobster with Sweet Pea Purée and Truffle-Carrot Foam. With the completion of Sierra Mar's kitchen revamp on the horizon (early July), I bet the stellar turnout (and glowing feedback) will spark bigger and better things to come from von Foerster's fancy new kitchen. Stay tuned for photos of the event online at www.jamesbeard.org.

Girls' Night Out

Ladies, put on your party shoes, leave the men folk at home. Château Julien Wine Estate has planned an evening that's all about you. June 15, the Carmel Valley winery is hosting its second annual "Chai Soiree-a Girls' Night Out." The Chai, which sits adjacent to the winery and is built in a traditional French style, will serve as the backdrop for an evening of makeovers, massage, fortune tellers, caricature drawings and lots of retail therapy opportunities. Terry Teplitzky of Michael's Catering is whipping up a strolling feast with a salad station, gourmet crepe bar and plenty of PMS-worthy desserts, paired with Château Julien wine. Make plans to reconnect with old gal pals, talk about boys and even get beautified.

So as to not scorn the fellows, a "Wine & Cigars" event will take place simultaneously in the Château for any male counterparts.

The Chai Soiree-a Girls' Night Out takes place June 15 at 6:30 p.m. at Château Julien Wine Estate, 8940 Carmel Valley Road.

tour via iPod, and draw more web surfers to the city site.

Burghardt proposed the concept to the Mission and received the necessary materials to write the podcast's narrative.

"The people at Anda-Burghardt did the initial dialog," Sanna said. "And then we did the editing on it for correctness."

Sanna has watched the podcast several times but has not downloaded it, since he doesn't own the right kind of player. His grandchildren do and probably have, though.

"That's the beautiful part: These kids can download it and study it at their leisure," he said. "We have received feedback that's all very positive. People are excited about it, and we're happy to be the first mission to use this technology for teaching."

Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud said she's routinely surprised by how many adults remember which missions they studied in grade school, and she hopes the new media will help make Carmel stand out even more.

"It's a very memorable podcast and shows how technology can bring things to life," she said.

Globetrotting Carmel Valley-ites

While we're on the subject of one of my favorite countries, Nancy Rohan and Jon Kasky of Paradise Wine Bar in Carmel Valley just returned from a three-week, most-fabulous European excursion to Italy and France. Not only did Nancy pick up some luscious leather goods and glass artisan jewelry pieces in Italy (this woman has stellar taste), the culinary duo brought back some of their favorite recipes and shared them with the Thursday night Rock 'n' Roll crew, for an extra special "Festa Italia" evening. The two had me at "homemade tasty meatball" and then sent me to places not legal to print with their cannolis. The orange zest was a nice touch, and this is coming from a Philly native who has Isgro Pasticceria on speed dial.

Pinot Envy in the Santa Lucia Highlands

Anyone who is wine savvy or reads the major wine magazines knows the Santa Lucia Highlands is growing and producing some of the state's best cool-climate Chardonnay and Pinot Noir. Well, this region of winemakers is finally getting some much earned props with The Wine Artisans of the Santa Lucia Highlands, an alliance of the appellation's winegrowers and the wineries that rely on the district's world-class fruit. On Saturday, May 19, they are hosting a wine tasting featuring the most prized vintages and special reserves of Pelerin, Roar, Morgan, Testarossa, Pisoni, Loring, Pessagno, Tondre, Siduri, Paraiso, Manzoni, Hahn, Robert Talbott, La Rochelle, Novy and others. My favorite truffle fanatic, Cal Stamenov of Bernardus Lodge, will be making gourmet savories for the strolling oenophiles.

GO: To learn more about the Wine Artisans of the Santa Lucia Highlands or to buy tickets, visit www.santaluciahighlands.com. The event takes place May 19, from 3 to 6 p.m. at Paraiso Vineyards. Tickets are $85 per person.

friends, family and community members since his illness. The St. Francis Xavier church in Seaside, where he has been a member for 40 years, as well as other local ministries, have also been supportive.

"I can tell you," Smith said, "I'm overwhelmed from the heartfelt wishes."

Second District Supervisor Lou Calcagno, who has been in contact with Smith since his absence, said he's looking forward to his colleague's return.

"We have extra loads on us because we have taken over some of [Smith's] committees," Calcagno said. "But we have been working around it and at this point there have been no real rough situations we couldn't handle with the four of us. I'm hoping for a speedy recovery for Jerry."

Smith said he would do his best to return to his supervisor chair by the end of May.

"I want to thank everyone for their well-wishes, their prayers and their support," he said.

GARAGE

The board first considered the plans in February but delayed voting until March in order to address the neighbors' concerns. Upon approving the application, board members required the McPartlands to lower the garage to 7.5 feet in height. "I believe the design review board carefully studied our application and considered all these comments that have been made by the neighbors," Wise said.

Mayor Sue McCloud asked if the couple had considered a carport, but Wise said they own an expensive car (a Maserati) that's already been keyed once and needs to be protected.

"When you're backing out of my driveway now, you don't really see the road until you're in it, so the garage won't have anything to do with the visibility," added Tor McPartland. "San Carlos is a busy street — you just have to take care."

"I think it's fine the way it is — it conforms to all of our codes," councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said as she made the motion to deny Troxell's appeal.

Councilman Gerard Rose agreed and said he respected the DRB's deliberations.

"They're not potted plants. Their opinion is to be considered," Rose said. "Unless we change the code to say we're not going to allow zero-lot-line garages because they will affect someone's view, we have to allow it."

Council members Ken Talmage and Mike Cunningham proposed moving the garage. "To me, it isn't whether the project lives up to the guidelines," Cunningham said. "I think it does." But he said it could do a better job.

McCloud said she could only approve if the garage were shifted to the west and its roof pitch lowered. She also said the site could be graded to drop it further and possibly eliminate the need for stairs at the rear of the building.

Talmage asked if Hazdovac would amend her motion to include the changes, but she declined. "No. I do not want to become a planning commissioner or a design review board member," she said.

City administrator Rich Guillen suggested the council send it back to the board "We don't even know if your recommendations can work," he said.

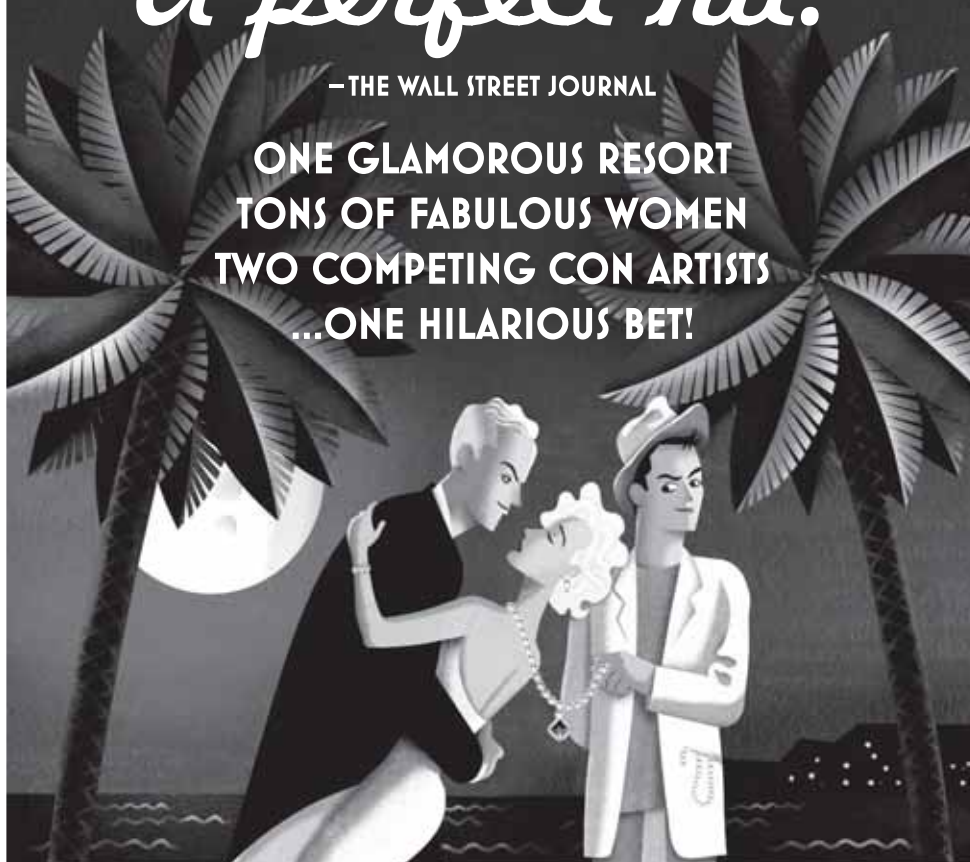

City attorney Don Freeman agreed, and McCloud moved to grant Troxell's appeal and remand the McPartlands' garage application to the design review board. The motion passed 3-2, with Rose and Hazdovac dissenting.

THREATS

Hurley was sentenced to a year in jail but was released early for good behavior and for time already served.

ROBBER

nicians, paramedics and firefighters treated the manager and other people in the bank for exposure to pepper spray.

At the time, a sheriff's sergeant said Foisy was a member of the Aryan Brotherhood, and upon his arrest, investigators learned he was on parole after serving time in prison for a previous robbery, according to Somers. Foisy also reportedly told the Federal Bureau of Investigations he committed two other bank robberies in Monterey County while on parole.

Foisy is set to appear before Monterey County Superior Court Judge Lydia Villarreal for sentencing June 7 and is anticipated to request dismissal of six prior violent felony allegations so he might avoid a life sentence.

"The district attorney's office will vigorously oppose his request," according to Somers.

CMS music gets high marks

THE CARMEL Middle School orchestra and concert band each received the highest ratings possible at a music educators association in Salinas April 20.

The music, under the direction of CMS music teacher Nancy Fowler, received "unanimous superior" status, at the CCS California Music Educators Associations' Large Group Festival at Hartnell College, Fowler said.

There are 20 students in the string orchestra and 53 students in the concert band, Fowler said.

In February, Rosenthal, on behalf of co-conservators Agha and Richard Bollenbach, sued Hurley for abuse of an elderly person, fraud and deceit, oppression and malice. Because Hurley apparently has no money, the lawsuit could be seen as a formality, though it could produce damages in case she ever comes into a large sum of money. But she's probably no longer in King's will, if she ever was.

Besides recovering King's valuables, Agha and Bollenbach want Hurley to pay them at least twice the value of the money and property that were taken, as well as unspecified punitive and attorney's fees and costs.

King was removed from her home in the 1600 block of Sunset Drive in Pacific Grove Sept. 16, 2005, after police officers found her living in squalid conditions, which included piles of trash inside the home.

The amount of money in valuables and cash Poll could prove King had stolen was about $900,000, though Rosenthal has said he believes King is missing much more than that.

Hurley had moved to Pacific Grove from Texas to take care of her aunt, who in turn allowed Hurley to live on the scenic property.

NOW OFFERING BOARDING AND DAYCARE

The Benefits of Doggie Daycare

By Oliver Boekbinder

It is too often the case that our canine friends are left home alone. Dogs are social animals and enjoy interacting with each other and with people. A dog left home alone is missing out on a great opportunity to have fun. In addition, unsupervised canines can display some very loud and destructive behavior as a means of coping with the boredom and anxiety that can result from being lonely. Furthermore, dogs that do not interact with other dogs and people on a regular basis are at risk of becoming fearful and aggressive.

Our preferred alternative to this loneliness is doggie daycare. Rather than sitting home alone and unsupervised, our daycare visitors spend their time playing in supervised groups. This group play facilitates a dog's ability to communicate with other dogs and play in a friendly manner. Daycare dogs also interact with our staff members thereby increasing their comfort around strangers. Daycare generally helps a dog feel comfortable in any situation involving groups of dogs and people.

Another benefit of daycare is the exercise. Dogs, just like people, benefit from regular exercise. This activity maintains their health and helps them live longer, happier lives. Also, a dog that has been alone and inactive all day can be over excited and unmanageable, but a daycare dog is tired, and a tired dog is a well behaved dog. If you feel your dog could benefit from days spent playing with friends, give us a call to schedule your first day of daycare at no charge*.

*$49 exam fee applies for all first time visitors to our clinic and dogs that have not been examined by our doctors within the past 12 months. We perform a general health exam on all daycare and boarding dogs prior to admission to ensure a healthy environment.

In the summer of 2006, Hurley told The Pine Cone she sold tens of thousands of dollars' worth of coins during a three-year time period, but she said it was because there wasn't enough income from the five properties King owns in Pacific Grove to pay the roughly $50,000 they cost every year in taxes and upkeep.

Got Roots?

Do roots grow in your sewer line?
 Do you have frequent sewer line backups?
 Do you call a plumber more than twice a month?

If so, you could be a victim of "The Clog"

Tips for preventing clogs:

1. Inspect your sewer lateral and repair cracks and joint separations that allow roots in.
2. Don't use the sewer as a dumpster! "Flushable" baby wipes, diapers and feminine hygiene products catch on roots.
3. Don't use toxic copper root killers! Use a mechanical snake or call a licensed plumber.

YOUR AUTO COLUMN

Presented by Kevin & Sue Anne Donohoe
 MORE MILES TO THE GALLON

If you are serious about getting better mileage, slow down. On the highway, wind drag is responsible for about a 10 percent loss of economy for every 5 mph over 60 mph. Maintain constant highway speed by using cruise control. Also be mindful that the air conditioner uses less power at highway speeds than the drag caused by open windows (with the AC off). In addition, a drop of 6 pounds per square inch (psi) under the recommended tire pressure can increase fuel consumption by 5 percent. Changing the spark plugs, fluids, and filters at the recommended intervals helps maintain engine efficiency. And, ignoring the check-engine light and failing to replace components such as oxygen sensors unnecessarily increases fuel consumption.

There are many ways to improve your current gas mileage, and once attained, to maintain a good gas mileage. We know that gas is a huge expense, and we want to help you get the most out of every dollar spent on fuel. Fortunately our automotive experts can help you make your vehicle go farther on less gas. Call us today and schedule an automotive consultation. Please don't wait until it needs to be towed to us. Let us perform preventative maintenance on a regular basis before that happens.

P.S. A dirty air filter can increase gasoline usage by four percent.

When nature comes to call

MOST PEOPLE think if they led more natural lives, they'd be healthier and happier. But they're wrong.

As P.J. O'Rourke once wrote, "I have two words for anybody who longs for the good old days: Modern Dentistry."

Primitive humans lived close to nature. Too close. To them, the natural world was a dangerous place where starvation, sudden fatal illnesses and attacks by hungry animals were common threats — not to mention the dangers from the next village. Even a bad toothache wasn't much of a worry when you were dying of yellow fever, hadn't eaten in a week or had a spear in your gut. But nowadays, thanks to the accomplishments of civilization, the slightest disruption in the food supply or outbreak of a contagious disease produces demands for a congressional investigation.

As he conquered terrible illnesses, learned how to provide plentiful food, eliminated the danger from animals that were bigger than he was and started enforcing laws, modern man invented his own dangers, of course. The mass slaughters of the 20th century came about when the instruments of civilization were employed without its mercies. Just 65 years ago, European peoples were senselessly killing each other as quickly as they could.

But all the deaths in all the wars in all the centuries pale in comparison to the destruction wrought by man's natural enemies. Indeed, if just one of mankind's discoveries — antibiotics — had never been made, hundreds of millions of people who are alive today would not be. Are they the ones who always ask for unpasteurized fruit juice?

On a more prosaic level, the mountain lion that's been eating dogs in Big Sur is giving the people in that community a close call with nature. They can hardly be blamed for objecting.

Likewise the people who got sick (a few died) from eating raw spinach tainted with e Coli last year. Believe it or not, that was a perfectly natural occurrence. Bacteria have been making people sick as long as there have been people. (That's why cooking was invented.) But nobody gets sick because their food was grown with properly used synthetic fertilizers.

So when you hear people yearning for medicine, clothing, food, and even things such as cosmetics, soap and vacations, to be more "natural," what you're really hearing is nothing more than a fantasy dreamt up by people who've been liberated from the dire circumstances of their forefathers.

'Keep Monterey County liveable'

Dear Editor,

Before voting on the general plan measures, voters should follow the money trail.

Measure A backers — the League of Women Voters, LandWatch and the Sierra Club — are those who want to keep our county liveable with more open space, farmland and affordable housing, while still allowing reasonable growth.

The enormous machine fighting against Measure A is fueled by major donations from development and real-estate interests, who stand to profit greatly from more houses, more shopping centers and more intense development.

If you want to keep Monterey County liveable, Vote YES on Measure A.

For the whole confusing ballot, please remember "YES, YES, NO, NO is the only way to go!"

Linda Anderson,

NO on Measure A!

Dear Editor,

As a concerned citizen and member of the Monterey County community for more than 20 years, I have been following the progress of the GPU4 and Measure A.

What concerns me most about Measure A is its seeming complete lack of flexibility. Coming from a business background, I know that any plan has to be a living document. Communities, like businesses, grow and change, and our ability to support them has to do the same. Measure A, however — written by out-of-town lawyers without input from our communities — would set regulations in place without change for 25 years.

If you look at the changes that have occurred in our communities during the last 25 years and appreciate that the rate of change is accelerating, how can we support anything that inhibits our ability to adapt?

Please, vote NO on Measure A!

Peninsula and will be sending all three of my children to college next year. Provisions of the Measure A plan concern me because they add fees up to hundreds of thousands of dollars on new single-family homes, making our affordable housing crisis worse. Every home built (from one to 19 units) will have to pay an in-lieu fee for not providing affordable housing on site (the county exempts fees on building one to two units). Property owners wanting to subdivide land for their children would need to pay for a countywide campaign (costing hundreds of thousands of dollars), in addition to paying in-lieu fees. Large developers will be the only ones able to afford a countywide vote and local residents will have to give up their dream. With more stringent requirements (Measure A requiring 30-40 percent below-market-rate housing), there is no question that many developers will simply not build the homes because of profitability, which is exactly what many supporters of the plan want: No building. As I send my children off to college, I support expansion of the airport as my children and grandchildren certainly won't be able to live here.

Vote NO on Measure A

What if it's too late?

Dear Editor,

As Monterey County approaches the vote on Measure A we are again reminded what a dirty business the democratic process can be. The newspapers and airwaves are full of charges and countercharges of deception, hypocrisy and incompetence as both sides maneuver down the home stretch to June 5. Unfortunately, election campaigns are among the products in our country that are not subject to statutory consumer protection provisions. There are no guarantees that the elected products will perform as promised or legal penalties for deceptive advertising. The only warranty the voters have is the option to exchange the merchandise every four years for something that they think will work better. This is the deciding factor for my vote. General plan comparisons are irrelevant compared to the fact that LandWatch, and shamefully, the League of Women Voters, want me to surrender my right to influence land use through future elections and lock in Measure A for 25 years. That is more than six election cycles! We have options to change supervisors next year in three districts if GPU4 turns out as bad as LandWatch claims it is. What will we do if we find, too late, that LandWatch's approach is wrong?

The changing meaning of 'arms'

Dear Editor:

If we arrange in a line all of the weapons developed by mankind for killing humans, beginning at one end with the club and the rock, and progressing with weapons of increasing lethality through the spear, arrow, broad-ax, musket and AK-47 to poison gas and nuclear devices, we find that, beyond some point in that line, the American people have declared that private ownership of arms under the Second Amendment to our Constitution is prohibited. That point is very far up the scale from the level the founding fathers had in mind when they expressed their concern for a well-regulated militia. If they had been able to foresee the inventiveness of later generations, would the Second Amendment have been written as is, or even written at all? Shouldn't our presumably intelligent and civilized society take another look at where that cut-off point should lie instead of worrying whether one's neighbor is crazy?

Financial Focus

by Linda Myrick, AAMS
Financial Advisor

“PROS” AND “CONS” OF INVESTMENT CLUBS

Are you thinking of joining an investment club?
Consider the “pros” and “cons” involved.

On the “pro” side, investment clubs can be fun, social experiences in which you can learn a fair amount about investing. Also, by asking members to invest $50 or $100 a month, a club forces people into an investment discipline they might otherwise lack.

On the negative side, even the most active club can only look at a fraction of the many investment opportunities available. Also, the decisions of an investment club can never really take the place of recommendations tailored to your individual needs - and you can only get that type of guidance from a qualified, experienced financial advisor.

If you decide to join an investment club, make the most of it - but keep its benefits in perspective.

Sandy Claws By Margot Petit Nichols

LINDY KREGER, 11 months old, is a sweet, charming yellow Lab – from a family of three other sweet, charming yellow Labs – who is still the baby of the family. She likes to climb up on an ottoman as a launching spot to jump into Dad Leon's lap as he sits in his Eames lounge chair.

One has only to look at the gentle expression on Lindy's face to know she loves children. When Lindy goes to Carmel Beach daily with her sisters, Mae, Hannah and Emma, she'll seek out little children, wag up to them and invite a friendly pat.

She's in her element at the beach, joyously going in for a spirited dip with the others. When the beach romp is all over for the day, Lindy, Mae, Hannah and Emma line up at Mom Judy's station wagon, putting their forepaws on the car and assuming the position for a rub-down and dry-off with fluffy towels.

Lindy's best friends, outside the family, are Ali, a black Lab, and Curly, an English bulldog with whom she has been carrying on a flirtation for many months. The dalliance has now escalated to kisses on the face.

At home, Mom Judy says that Mae and Lindy are "completely imprinted" on each other. Real blood sisters, they do everything in tandem. They'll grab opposite ends of a leggy stuffed monkey and, yoked together, will run from one end of their Pebble Beach garden to the other.

When bedtime rolls around, the four Labs clamber into Mom and Dad's bedroom, taking up their habitual positions: Hannah and Emma on dog beds on the floor, Mae on top of, but at the foot of the bed; and Lindy next to Mom with her head on the pillow – as befits the baby of the family.
