Whale bones unearthed at Trader Joe's site

These large whale bones — the top one is about 20 inches long — were among many found at a construction site in Monterey.

Archeologist called in to evaluate discovery

By KELLY NIX

WHEN THE new Trader Joe's opens in downtown Monterey this fall, it won't be selling antique whale bones and vintage car bumpers.

But that's exactly what construction workers unearthed while working on the foundation for the new 12,000-square-foot Trader Joe's building at 570 Munras Ave.

"What they found was a pit full of whale bones," said Ellie

City catches small break from Flanders Mansion judge

By PAUL MILLER

A MONTEREY County Superior Court Judge won't be changing his Feb. 21 order that the city can't sell Flanders Mansion without going through several more legal steps.

But Judge Robert O'Farrell did side with the city in amending the order to remove any immediate obligation that the city restore the old mansion.

"It is not the court's intention that they immediately go out and fix it," O'Farrell said during a hearing May 18. "Rather, that they simply take whatever stopgap measures are necessary to prevent further decay until this matter is resolved either by an appeal or the council taking further action."

Despite that small victory for the City of Carmel, the judge let the rest of his ruling stand, despite strenuous pleas from attorney Bill Connors that he alter it — at least to make it clear what the decision was based on.

"We need to see a factual basis, not just a panoply of legal conclusions," Connors said. "We need to know which facts the court looked at and agreed with."

He said judges "must defer to the wisdom of the legislative body" — in this case, the Carmel City Council — "unless there are facts that

Desal cost soars as permits drag on

$230 million and climbing

By KELLY NIX

THE ESTIMATED cost of California American Water's Coastal Water Project, which would provide the Monterey Peninsula with a drought-free water supply, has increased a whopping $40 million because of permitting delays, a spokeswoman for the water company said this week.

The price of building a desal plant in Moss Landing and various other components of the water project goes up about $800,000 every month construction is delayed, said Catherine Bowie, Cal Am's community relations manager.

"The proposed project was $191 million, and it's now gone up to $230 million," Bowie said. "And the timeline has also been extended. We now think the project won't be done until the end of 2012."

And that timeline may be too optimistic. Even construction of a pilot plant to test the feasibility of desalinating water from the Moss Landing harbor is a year behind schedule.

"We want our ratepayers to be aware of the increase in costs," Bowie said.

"We are doing everything we can to move the project as quickly as possible."

The water project, which will be funded by Cal Am's 40,000 customers through incremental rate increases, would supply 11,730 acre-feet of water per year.

The desal plant is seen as the only way to comply with a 1995 order from the state to come up with an alternative to pumping from the Carmel River. Cal Am was ordered to reduce pumping because of harm to the river's environment, including native populations of steelhead trout and red-legged frogs.

But other environmentalists oppose a desalination plant in Moss Landing because of the harm the plant's intake and outfall could do to marine organisms.

Time is money

Before Cal Am can construct the full-scale, 18-million-gallon-per-day desalination plant, it must operate a 280,000-gallon-a-day pilot desalination plant at the Moss Landing power plant, which is the proposed site of the larger facility.

The test plant is expected to operate for 12 months. The water it produces would not be consumed.

Components for the pilot plant were delivered last summer. But getting the test plant up and running has proved a challenge. Although the coastal commission approved the pilot plant in December, it faced several delays, including earlier challenges by two commissioners and a lawsuit filed by activists.

In April, a judge rejected a request from the activists

NO NEW CONTRACT FOR SUNSET CENTER EXEC

By MARY BROWNFIELD

JACK GLOBENFELT — the New Yorker hired to run the newly renovated Sunset Center in January 2005 — will leave in September. After negotiations failed, he and the nonprofit Sunset Cultural Center Inc.'s board of directors decided not to renew his contract, which expires June 30.

"We were in discussions about continuing on, and we couldn't come to some kind of agreement that would be workable for me under the circumstances, so we decided just not to continue. I'm disappointed — I liked it here — but the stars weren't aligning," Globenfelt said. "I wanted a longer-term contract than they were willing to offer."

The result would have dictated where Globenfelt's wife, Lisa, calls home. During the past two-and-a-half

Chamber hopes council will test-drive free trolleys

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A YEAR ago, the Carmel City Council declined to bring free Monterey-Salinas Transit trolley service to town because the city would have to pay for it.

On Tuesday, the council will have another go — and this time, the trolleys would cost riders and the city nothing, according to Carmel Chamber of Commerce CEO Monta Potter.

The chamber and the Crossroad shopping center would foot the bill for two months of free MST trolley service on the regular bus route between downtown and Carmel Rancho Boulevard.

"People who know about it say if it's free, people will get on," Potter said Wednesday.

See TROLLEY page 21A

A Monterey-Salinas Transit trolley will pick up and drop off riders in Carmel for free if the chamber of commerce, which will help pay for it, convinces the city council to OK the deal.

'Click it or Ticket' means zero tolerance for unbelted motorists

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THIS YEAR'S statewide Click It or Ticket campaign kicked off May 14 and, in just over two weeks, Carmel police officers cited 225 unbelted motorists in town.

Cpl. Steve Rana, the city's main traffic cop who is often seen aboard his BMW motorcycle, said that number is more than double for the same period last year.

The annual PR and enforcement effort, funded by California taxpayers, runs through June 3.

"We've been knocking them out here for this campaign," Rana said. By the time the effort ends, he expects he and the other patrol officers who signed up for overtime shifts dedicated to enforcement of seat-belt and other traffic laws will have issued 250 tickets.

Since the Click It or Ticket effort began, officers have been cruising town looking for the telltale sign of no strap extending over the shoulder of a driver or passenger.

"If it isn't, we advise them of the crackdown, notify them that it's zero tolerance during the campaign, and give them a citation," Rana said.

A driver not wearing a seat belt can be ticketed, and so can a passenger who isn't buckled up. But if the passenger not wearing a seat belt is younger than 16, the driver will be held responsible.

The fine for someone with a clean driving record is $94, but anyone with any moving violation in the past three years will pay a whopping $211, according to Rana.

Penalties for carrying children without required safety seats are much higher. A first-time offender will be fined $351, though completing a safety course can reduce it to $51. And someone caught more than once not restraining their small kids could be fined as much as $851. According to the vehicle code, children who are under 6 years old or weigh less than 60 pounds must ride in "a child passenger restraint system meeting applicable federal motor vehicle safety standards," usually in the rear seat. Rana said he has yet to ticket a person for having an unrestrained child in a vehicle during the campaign.

But he said most of the unbelted people cited by Carmel police had only driven a short distance before being pulled over. Many said they were preparing to put on their belts but hadn't gotten to it yet. Most of the offenders are local.

"You've got to put it on before you start your car," he said.

In 1978, 20th Century Fox bought the Pebble Beach Co. for $72 million, including golf courses and hotels. Thus began a flurry of buying and selling of the property that lasted for 20 years. The next step came in the early '80s when investor Marvin Davis bought Fox for $722 million, gaining title to a slew of holdings, including Pebble Beach Co. "I never fall in love with any asset," Davis told Golf Digest, "but I came closest [with Pebble Beach]." Nonetheless he allowed his arm to be twisted in 1990 when Japanese investor Minoru Isutani agreed to pay $841 million for the Pebble Beach Co. alone. Council adopts $13M spending plan at sparsely attended hearing

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITHOUT ANY comments from the public, nor any questions submitted in writing, the Carmel City Council unanimously adopted the city's 2007/2008 budget last Tuesday. The $13,082,439 spending plan, which includes a $206,645 bump in revenues over the draft released April 24, will take effect July 1.

City administrator Rich Guillen said a strong third quarter motivated him and the other members of the budget team — administrative services director Joyce Giuffre and city treasurer Dewey Evans — to be more optimistic about the city's finances.

"In the past, we've been conservative, and every year we come back and say property taxes increased," Guillen told the council. "There's nothing that indicates we need to continue to be conservative."

"I'm not sure I'm with you on that," Mayor Sue McCloud commented, but she didn't further challenge the revised budget figures.

Guillen said California American Water Co. has been paying lower fees for doing business in the city than it should have, so he calculated a $25,800 increase in the "franchise fee" budget category for the coming year.

The spending plan's main revenue sources are property taxes, sales taxes and hotel taxes, which are projected to come to $6.44 million for the coming year.

Also, the cost of worker's compensation insurance dropped by $37,545, due to fewer claims.

With income up and some expenses down, Guillen proposed spending the extra cash on developing a street maintenance plan, Fourth Avenue landscaping, updating the policies for identifying historic resources, and giving Monterey ad man Jeff Burghardt's firm, Anda-Burghardt, the additional $25,000 he requested to help market the city.

June vote on trust money

Councilman Mike Cunningham asked whether the council was certain the proposed budget would adequately fund each department, and Guillen said city hall staff and department heads collaborated during several meetings to create the spending plan.

"We have asked staff to put together a budget reflecting their needs," McCloud added. "For us to get involved and assume we know how a department functions ... is really beyond what we should be doing."

Measure A wrong choice for county

“Allowing major changes to the general plan only through a countywide ballot would be a mistake that could take decades to correct. Ultimately, it is Measure A's fatal flaw.

“Measure A should be defeated. Measure B, which is intended to overturn GPU4, should be defeated. Measure C, which adopts GPU4, is the one worthy of a yes vote.”

Starry lineup for Flag Day in Devendorf Park

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AN OPERA singer who travels with the 3 Tenors, the commander who oversees the Defense Language Institute, a beloved folk singer, a bagpiper, the mayor, and other speakers and singers — as well as cake and coffee — should be more than enough to attract a crowd to the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea's Flag Day Celebration at noon Thursday, June 14.

"It really is a topnotch program," said retired U.S. Army Maj. Gen. William Gourley, who hopes the lineup will draw crowds to Devendorf Park at Ocean Avenue and Junipero Street downtown.

Flag Day, proclaimed in 1916 by President Woodrow Wilson, honors the anniversary of the official adoption of the Stars and Stripes. June 14 will also mark the U.S. Army's 232nd birthday.

Festivities will begin at 11:30 a.m. with bagpiper Missy Jenkins "getting everyone cranked up a little bit," according to Gourley. At noon, a color guard representing the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines and Coast Guard will raise the flag, and Gourley will lead the Pledge of Allegiance. An Army Lt. Col. chaplain will bestow the invocation. Myles Williams will sing the National Anthem, and Dixie Dixon will perform a patriotic medley.

Mayor Sue McCloud will offer welcome remarks prior to the keynote talk by Col. Pamela Martis, commander of the DLI.

"She's awesome," Gourley said.

Finally, opera singer Elise Rotchford, who tours with the famed 3 Tenors, will sing "God Bless America," and perform a duet of "This Land is Your Land" with Williams.

"We'll have the audience chime in," Gourley said.

And for anyone who works up an appetite celebrating the flag, the city will provide cake and coffee.

Robin Polly Dunning

December 19, 1960 ~ May 19th, 2007

Robin Polly Dunning left her beloved family to be with God and her parents on May 19th. She was born in Pasadena on December 19th, 1960. She died suddenly in Sacramento of cerebral hemorrhage, surrounded by her family, having just offered the final, beautiful tribute at her niece's graduation celebration.

Robin was a graduate of Pasadena High School and the University of California at Davis as a Psychology major. A resident of Carmel for the past ten years, she was actively involved in her son Brandon's sports and activities, her recovery community and her church. Robin's passions and dimensions were many and diverse. She was as comfortable in heels at the symphony as she was in her cowgirl boots watching bull-riding; she found great joy in music and dancing; she loved the excitement of a Giant's game and gentleness of nature and animals. Finding meaning in making a difference to others, she had worked with students with learning disabilities and mentored single mothers with addictions. At the time of her death, Robin was a ranch and property manager in Salinas.

She is survived by her adoring and adorable son, Brandon Clark Dunning, her cherished siblings Tracy (Eric), Cindy (Chris), Hal (Hilary) and Kimberly, her surrogate mother Aunt Mardy Love, her nieces and nephews who loved their Auntie Robin, her cousins and her aunt Sylvia McCormack, her extended family Suzanne and Terry McGowan who will be raising Brandon, the McGowan/Faverty children, her devoted friend Loren Cloninger, and her many loving friends and members of her spiritual communities in recovery and worship. All will miss her humor and her laughter, loved her beyond measure and never stopped believing in her.

In recent years Robin had traveled with her church to help in the rebuilding efforts following Hurricane Katrina. Touched by that experience and dedicated to mission work, she had nearly completed her training to travel to India with her mission group. In lieu of flowers, donations in her memory may be made to the Robin Polly Dunning Memorial Mission Scholarship Fund c/o Shoreline Community Church, 2500 Garden Road, Monterey, CA., 93940.

A service in celebration of her life will be held at 2:00 Sunday, June 3rd, at the Shoreline Community Church. In lieu of the black of mourning, attire as bright as Robin's smile is requested.

Valley man arrested on suspicion of breaking in, assaulting ex-girlfriend

A 21-YEAR-OLD Carmel Valley man was arrested May 20 for allegedly breaking into his teenage ex-girlfriend's Carmel house and shoving her after she ordered him to leave. Monterey County Sheriff's Sgt. Scott Ragan said deputies arrested Colby Grewell on Laureles Grade following the altercation.

Grewell reportedly forced entry into the 16-year-old girl's house and, when she told him to get out, "he followed her through the house, grabbed her and threw her to the ground," Ragan said.

He was gone by the time deputies arrived, but they knew him from prior contacts, according to Ragan, who said Grewell attempted suicide in Carmel Highlands with a shotgun several years ago and severely damaged his face.

"I think he's gotten some tickets, his driver's license has been suspended, and I think he crashed his car a month or two ago," said Ragan, who reported Grewell is also on probation.

A deputy spotted Grewell driving east past Garland Park, evidently toward his home in Carmel Valley Village.

"The deputy chased him, got past Los Laureles grade and saw another deputy heading west," Ragan said. Since neither spotted him on Carmel Valley Road, they figured he had turned north on Los Laureles Grade.

"They found him walking — he had parked his car," he said. "He wasn't real cooperative. They had Tasers on him and he eventually did what we told him to do."

Activists want Big Sur locals to have say in coastal trail

By CHRIS COUNTS

A STATE agency that wants to build the 1,200-mile California Coastal Trail from Oregon to Mexico is seeking a consultant to design the Big Sur section of the hiking route. Meanwhile, a Big Sur activist wants the local community to have more say in where the trail goes.

Trish Chapman, a project manager for the California Coastal Conservancy, will make a presentation about the trail at the Big Sur Multi-Agency meeting Friday, June 1, at the Big Sur Lodge Conference Center. Located in Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park. The meeting, which starts at 10 a.m., will provide an opportunity for Big Sur locals to sound off on the trail. But Jack Ellwanger said the hearing isn't enough.

"The conservancy intends to hire an outside consultant to develop a Big Sur Coastal Trail Master Plan without any public involvement at all in the selection process," insisted Ellwanger, an activist who founded an environmental group called the Pelican Network. "We need a clear commitment from the conservancy that the trail planning process will in fact reflect the community's needs, values and aspirations. Where the trail could go, what purposes it would serve, and how it would be achieved need to be openly discussed."

A group of activists will present its own proposal for the trail at the June 1 meeting.

Dick Wayman, a spokesman for the conservancy, said his agency intends to address community concerns about the trail.

"We're aware of their concerns, and I can tell you their fears are unfounded," he said. "We always work with the local community. We could not build a trail without the community's support."

According to Wayman, the process of selecting a consultant to plan the trail will take about two months. The agency is contributing

Small city pays big for workers' comp

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TAKING CARE of city workers injured on the job cost Carmel taxpayers $270,801 during the nine months that ended March 31.

While that might seem a lot of money for a city as small as Carmel, human resources manager Jane Miller said it's $70,000 less than the same period two years ago and seems to be trending downward.

"Almost every city is paying a lot for workers' compensation, but the prices are going down because of the legislation that was enacted a few years ago which limits the number of medical visits, and there are more strict criteria for the treatment you get, so it prevents over-treatment," she said.

During the first three quarters of the 2006/2007 fiscal year, the city paid out about $185,000 in workers' compensation claims — not just for new complaints filed this year, but for 20 claims opened during the past several years.

The city self-insures for claims smaller than $250,000.

"If a worker has an injury, we pay directly for medical bills and time off for the injured worker," Miller said.

To protect it against large bills, the city subscribes to the California Association of Counties Excess Insurance Authority that also provides a review process to cut medical bills in half. The year-to-date cost of that membership was about $63,000 as of March 31.

Miller said the city also paid an administrator about $23,500 during the same period to help manage and keep track of the workers' comp cases.

"Our administrator told us our open claims have gone down, so they're reducing our premium for next year," she added.

Police cost the most

Of the $185,000 paid out during the nine-month period ending March 31, $135,000 went to current and former police department employees, according to Miller.

"We had 12 individuals who were covered by those payments, six of whom are retired," Miller said. "They accounted for 73 percent of the costs."

Two former officers who retired on permanent disability have costly heart claims.

"You can go to the hospital and spend $40,000 easy, and that's after workers' compensation has had it discounted," Miller said. Heart-related payments this year included one for $15,000 and another for $40,000.

The workers' comp tab also included about $15,000 to settle a knee claim filed by a police officer who was on the job less than two months. That person will not receive coverage of future medical bills.

In addition Miller listed three back claims, two knee claims, two claims related to "upper extremities and repetitive motion," and a few miscellaneous claims.

The remaining $50,000 went for claims in other departments, mostly public works and building maintenance. The fire department only had one major medical complaint during the past five to seven years — an assistant chief who retired with a knee injury — and the city also closed a $22,000 back-injury claim filed by a library employee due to damage from lifting.

So far this year, four workers filed claims for on-the-job injuries, and only one involved time off.

"The three others were minor — a dog bite and things like that," she said.

The low number of new claims shows improvement in how the city handles them and trains employees, according to Miller.

"A lot of times, we realize we have to change the ergonomics, and we have had training in the library for proper lifting and things like that," said Miller, who also helps

FINANCIAL TIPS FOR NEWLYWEDS

It's June - a popular month for weddings. If you're getting married this month, you have much to think about. But once the wedding festivities are over, take some steps that relate to your future financial well being.

First, establish some financial goals. You and your spouse can become disciplined money managers if you're both working toward some joint long-term financial objectives.

Here's another tip: Don't put off investing. If you can get into the investment "habit" right away, it will serve you well throughout your married life.

Also, take advantage of retirement plans. If you and your spouse are both working, you may each have access to a 401(k) or other employer-sponsored retirement plan. Contribute as much as you can afford to each plan.

By following these suggestions, you can help start your married life off on solid financial footing.

College ballplayers looking for more than just fun in the sun

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE COUNTRY'S best collegiate baseball players don't want a summer vacation. Instead, they vie for roster spots in the ultra-competitive Alaska Baseball League and Cape Cod Baseball League, where major league scouts keep a watchful eye out for the next Derek Jeter or Alex Rodriguez. And the California Collegiate League is almost as competitive.

In this summer's CCL, the Monterey Bay Sox will battle teams such as the San Luis Obispo Blues and the Santa Barbara Foresters as players refine their skills and hope to get a shot at the major leagues.

The Bay Sox open the 2007 season Saturday and Sunday, June 2-3, when they host the Monterey Wolfpack, an independent team made up of primarily Monterey Peninsula College players and local high school standouts. The games start at 2 p.m. and will be played at the college.

The Bay Sox begin league play the following weekend when they take on the Clovis Outlaws.

"There really hasn't been this high a caliber play in the Monterey Peninsula since the military left," explained Dennis Marshall, Bay Sox owner and bench coach.

Despite playing in just their third season, the Bay Sox haven't had any trouble attracting talented ballplayers. Not surprisingly, though, the team is scrambling to find homes for all its players as the season quickly approaches. The Peninsula's well documented housing crunch threatens to untrack the Bay Sox upcoming season. The team is currently seeking sponsors to provide homes for six of its players who are visiting from out the area.

"They will hardly be there at all," Marshall said. "They'll be traveling and playing ball all the time. They only need a place to sleep."

Among the players returning from last summer's Bay Sox include catcher Trevor Howell of Sonoma State University (and Pacific Grove High School), slick-fielding shortstop Geno Fata from San Jose City College, centerfielder Larn Randell of Texas State University at San Marcos, infielder Carter Motley from Gavilan College, outfielder Nik Edmondson of St. Peter's College (Jersey City, N.J.) and pitchers Andrew Berger from Lehigh University (and Stevenson High School), Kevin Asselein of Sonoma State University, Jason Sims of Sonoma State University and Nick Powers of Monterey Peninsula College.

Other noteworthy players include infielder/outfielder Chris LoPiccolo from Monterey High School, outfielder Benny Gardner of Monterey Peninsula College and lefthanded pitcher Thomas Incaviglia from California State University Monterey Bay.

Randall Bispo, the head baseball coach at North Salinas High School, will manage the team. Rich Givens of Hartnell College will serve as pitching coach.

The Bay Sox will play 48 games in June and July, hardly a relaxing summer even by major league standards.

"It's a very demanding schedule," Marshall explained. "The players really have to be committed."

Monterey Peninsula College will host the Bay Sox' home games this season. To "adopt" a player or for more information, call (831) 624-3070 or visit www.montereybaysox.com.

Rotary, students team up

THANKS TO a collaboration between the Carmel Valley Rotary Club and students from Carmel area schools, local service groups recently received $3,000.

"Elementary and middle school students have wanted to participate in community service, but often didn't know how they could do so at the school level," explained Warren "Pete" Poitras, spokesperson for the C.V. Rotary club. "We decided to provide a vehicle for students to achieve their desires and broaden their educational experience."

The club raised money to be contributed to worthy causes, which students from local schools researched and identified, including the Matt Haines Memorial, Shelter Outreach, Suicide Prevention of the Central Coast, YWCA Larson Safe House and Friends of Carmel Valley Library.

WILBUR BRANSFORD, almost a year old, is a Chihuahua, Jack Russell terrier and dachshund mix, and therefore trilingual.

Wilbur has the most appealing mannerisms: He lifts one ear while keeping the other lowered, and raises his front right leg while cocking his head slightly. If you can resist this, you either have great inner strength or a heart of stone.

Wilbur lives in Carmel with his Mom Marilyn, Dad Kent and four siblings: Ben, 13, a Carmel Middle School student, Anna, 9, who attends Carmel River School, Otis, 2, and Tabby, 3. The latter two are cats — Otis is black like a panther and Tabby is, well, a tabby.

Every morning, Auntie Jennifer Lund of Lula's Chocolates goes walking with Wilbur and Mom Marilyn at Carmel Beach, which is where we met.

Wilbur came to be a Bransford when he was adopted from Animal Friends Rescue Project which had saved him from the Big Sleep when the King City SPCA was unable to find a home for him. A caring foster mother in Salinas took Wilbur in until a suitable permanent home could be found for him. As luck would have it, Ben and Anna found Wilbur on the AFRP website, arranged a meeting, and fell in love with Wilbur on sight.

Now Wilbur is going to have another sibling soon.

Maggie, a 4-month-old border collie mix, is in the process of being adopted by the Bransfords from the SPCA and will soon be ensconced in the Carmel family circle.

In the meanwhile, Wilbur and the cats do everything in tandem, using telepathy to communicate. When mealtime rolls around, the three come into the kitchen as one to be fed, line up and look up at Mom expectantly. At night, lying about the house, they all arise in unison, pad together to one of three family beds they have evidently preselected, and curl up together for a companionable night's sleep.

Big Sur residents don't want CHP officer to live elsewhere

By CHRIS COUNTS

AFTER NEARLY losing ambulance service in February, Big Sur residents are now facing the likely loss of their resident California Highway Patrol Officer by the end of June.

CHP officer Jim Covello will continue to patrol Highway 1 along the Big Sur Coast, but the fact that he may be forced to commute to his job from the Monterey Peninsula has stirred an outcry among community members who want at least one law enforcement official to live among them.

Last August, Covello and his family were told they had six months to find a new place to live after the California Department of Parks and Recreation, which owns the former Navy housing at Pt. Sur where the Covellos live, determined the building was not suitable for habitation. Then, in April, a deal was struck where the Covellos would move just a few miles south to Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park. Now, state parks insists that sewage issues make that move impossible.

"We can't handle any more sewage at our treatment plant," explained Loren Rex, state parks superintendent in Big Sur. "We're at capacity."

Still, Rex said he's not ruling out the possibility that state parks will be able to provide CHP housing in the future. He said his agency is trying to solve the sewage problem.

"We're moving forward," he said. "We're trying to make it happen."

Frank Pinney, Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade chief, believes it is essential that a CHP officer lives in Big Sur.

"The reductions in law enforcement services in the Big Sur area forced on the Monterey County Sheriff's Office by budget constraints were met with a positive backup commitment from the resident CHP and CHP leadership," Pinney explained. "Their role in the community and in the safety of the traveling public became even more essential."

Pinney said the loss of a resident CHP officer would put an additional strain on an already overextended fire brigade. "Our volunteer firefighters have taken on an increasing responsibility for public safety as the paid services shrink down to near zero," Pinney said. "With no resident officer, we will have to wait for an available unit from Monterey/Salinas area to be dispatched, increasing our time at the site [of an emergency] by a factor of up to two hours or more. This is time away from families and jobs which becomes an unnecessary and unfair surcharge on our volunteers."

Pinney believes a solution to the CHP housing dilemma is possible if agencies and elected officials work together.

"We strongly urge the leadership of the two agencies that have the power to resolve this housing impasse to exercise the will to arrive at a plan that will keep the resident CHP officers in Big Sur," he said. "This is the opportunity for our political leadership to take a strong stand."

Fifth District Supervisor Dave Potter said his office has been "besieged" by concerned residents.

"It seems like the Big Sur community has a constant public safety dilemma," Potter said. "It's very frustrating. Public safety is an area of utmost concern. I don't want to see a shortage of coverage down there for even a short period of time."

PRICE, PRICE, PRICE
While a home's location is still very important--there are few things more important to a local real estate market than its location close to an area where economic growth is creating jobs at a rapid pace--the issue of price has become equally important. Not just selling price...asking price.

Today, a property whose asking price is way off the mark probably won't even be looked at, much less have offers made on it.

Why is this? Two reasons, though there are probably more.

First, we've all become a great deal more sophisticated about real estate. We're not wild horse traders, we're dealing with one of the most important investments in our lives.

Second, most Americans have grown increasingly value conscious. Recent surges in real estate sales have been inspired by the possibility of buying a home that will suit the buyers' needs well into the future with financing that will help keep the cost of living down, rather than by some spending mania.

Buyers are looking for a house that is priced right--before they even look at the house. You need the assistance of a seasoned real estate professional to gather all the data and come up with the right price. It will make your home sell faster--and far more profitably, as many recent studies have shown. Questions? Just call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

POSSIBLE HELP FOR MIGRAINES

Typical migraine sufferers waken in the morning with varying degrees of headache pain. Those who experience such headaches contract their temporal muscles during sleep an average of 14 times more intensely than those who do not experience headaches. This problem may be helped by wearing a small, removable, clear resin matrix oral insert that is fitted to the patient's front teeth and worn while sleeping. With the device in place, the intense activity of the temporal muscle (which closes and clenches the jaw) is suppressed to less than one-third by preventing any contacting of the back teeth. By reducing this neuromuscular activity, migraine headache pain as well as the associated tension-type headaches may be reduced.

For more information about the topics in this column, call our office. Visit your dentist and hygienist regularly for check-ups and professional cleanings. These visits are very important -- even if you're one of those people who rarely gets a cavity -- because the dentist also checks for the early signs of gum disease, oral cancer, and other potentially serious problems that can only be detected during the dental visit. Open by appointment, we accept most insurances and credit cards.

P.S. In this country, an estimated 23 million persons over age 12 suffer severe migraine headaches.

Dr. di Bari, is a dentist in private practice at 20 Dormody Ct. here in Monterey. He may be reached at 373-3703.

WALKING EXERCISES YOUR BRAIN

It stands to reason that a brisk walk strengthens leg muscles and is healthy for the heart. But, did you know that as little as three hours a week of brisk walking can actually reverse brain deterioration caused by aging? This is, in fact, the finding of recent research that found that aerobic exercise can increase the amount of "gray matter" (neurons) as well as "white matter" (the connection between neurons) in the brains of older individuals. Until recently, it was thought that age-related brain shrinkage and cognitive decline were inevitable and that the brain cannot grow new neurons. However, this new study shows that exercise can reverse the brain shrinkage and natural wear-and-tear that begins in mid-life.

Popular wisdom, as well as some scientists, had long held that the way to stay mentally sharp was to do mental gymnastics. Crossword puzzles, reading, taking up a musical instrument and generally challenging the mind were supposed to stave off the mental ravages of old age. That has been hard to prove, but support for the brain benefits of physical exercise has become stronger. VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES is here to assist with a family's concerns as well as the resident's needs.

P.S. Swimming, biking, and walking are all activities that have been found to provide anti-aging brain benefits.

Meg Parker Conners is an RN and owner of Victorian Health Care Services and Victorian Residential Care Homes. For assistance, call 655-1935.

Valley Volunteers thank residents for thermal imager enabled the Valley Volunteers to purchase a T-3 Max Thermal Imager and other needed firefighting equipment, according to association president Mike Cappetti, who said the group wanted to publicly thank the donors.

"The local community responded wonderfully," Cappetti told The Pine Cone.

In thanks, the group drafted a letter addressed to Village residents.

"The T3 Max Thermal Imager provides heat-sensitive imaging in dark, smoke-filled areas which helps firefighters contain fires and save lives," Cappetti wrote.

Firefighters recently used the imager to look for heat and flames at a structure fire in the Upper Circle area of the Village.

"Donations from the people of Carmel Valley Village have made this all possible," he continued. "And a special thanks to the Robert Talbott family."

Hastings needs new truck

CARMEL VALLEY'S Hastings Reserve, a 2,000-acre biological field station for University of California students, is seeking a donor of a four-wheel-drive truck. "Our 1987 Chevy diesel needs to be replaced," explained Mark Stromberg, reserve director. "We have done just about everything we can to keep it going." Stromberg said he received an offer of a two-wheel-drive truck, but the reserve's uneven terrain and dirt roads require four-wheel-drive.

Jon Peter Lewis, American Idol class of 2004, plays Monterey Live

By PAUL MILLER

IT'S BECOME a cliché that you don't have to win American Idol to win American Idol.

Clay Aiken was runner-up in 2003 and became a pop superstar. Chris Daughtry finished fourth last year and quickly went on to produce two of the biggest hits of the decade. Jennifer Hudson did no better than seventh place in 2004 and ended up winning a Best Supporting Actress Oscar for her role in "Dreamgirls."

This week, a Top 10 finisher from the third season of American Idol who has released an album on his own label and toured extensively since jousting with Simon, Paul and Randy brings his own unique sound to Monterey Live on Alvarado Street.

"I always grew up wanting to be in the music business, and being on American Idol helped me turn that dream into a reality," Lewis said.

He became an instant teenage sensation when he competed in front of 30 million TV viewers with Jennifer Hudson, Fantasia Barino and Diana DiGarmo during American Idol's 2004 season.

People Magazine even dubbed him, "Idol's newest heart-throb."

Fame can be fleeting. But it can also be fun.

"For a long time, I couldn't walk through an airport without people saying, 'Hey, you're that guy!'" Lewis told The Pine Cone.

It was quite a switch for the resident of West Yellowstone, Wyo., who acted in local theater while he planned to go to medical school.

"I was appearing in 'Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat,'" he recalled. "I had a brand-new VCR, and one of my roommates had a tape of American Idol."

He had never seen the show during its first two seasons. But when he watched the tape, he thought, "I can do this."

A quick trip to Honolulu for regional tryouts brought him face to face with Hollywood realities.

"The moment you're standing in line, they're passing out pieces of paper for you to sign," Lewis recalled. All the contestants give Fox the right to use video of them any way the network chooses. "The documents specifically said they could make fun of you if that's what they wanted to do."

After passing muster with front-line producers who sort through tens of thousands of contestants, Lewis and other potential finalists performed in front of American Idol's top execs, Ken Warwick and Nigel Lithgow.

"Only the best of the best and the worst of the worst get to audition for Simon Cowell, Paula Abdul and Randy Jackson," Lewis observed.

The highs and the lows

Though confident about his chances, Lewis wasn't really expecting to make it to the Top 10 — a benchmark of success for the show, since at that point American Idol contestants start getting paid and are guaranteed a spot on the summer tour that follows the TV season. But when he was eliminated, he wasn't expecting that, either.

After racing cars and painting seascapes, artist ready for new adventure

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOUR DECADES after selling a successful car dealership to become a full-time landscape painter, Ed Fawcett is closing the downtown Carmel gallery he and his wife, Marge, have operated for seven years.

"We've been doing this for 40 years," explained Marge Fawcett. "Now we're ready for a new adventure."

The couple will move into a new home in Aptos shortly after vacating the Fawcett Gallery at the end of June.

Before becoming an artist, Ed Fawcett operated a thriving car dealership in San Jose, where he sold Volvos, Porsches, Ferraris and Triumphs. Not content to simply sell cars, he was a regular participant at Pebble Beach sports car races from 1952 to 1956.

A self-trained artist, Ed Fawcett had work featured in a one-man show at the Lahaina Art Society on the Hawaiian island of Maui in 1970. The exhibit went over so well that Fawcett decided to sell his dealership and open an art gallery. For the next 10 years, the Fawcetts operated a gallery in Lahaina.

The Fawcetts moved to Carmel in 1980. Two decades later, they opened their gallery on Dolores, across the street from the Carmel Art Association.

Although Ed Fawcett recently suffered a stroke, the 85-year-old landscape artist will continue to paint. But Marge Fawcett said the couple will miss their gallery and its patrons.

"We've really enjoyed being in Carmel all these years,"

Ed Fawcett, who raced sports cars in Pebble Beach during the 1950s, will close his Carmel art gallery at the end of June.

A chef who really knows how to wow his colleagues

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

IT MUST be every chef's nightmare to plan and execute a sumptuous, elaborate dinner for more than 100 chefs — probably the most discerning audience he will ever have — but for Executive Chef Willi Franz, it was an exciting and joyous challenge he could groove on.

Two weeks ago, he prepared such a feast for the 33rd annual Monterey Peninsula Chef of the Year Award dinner for the American Culinary Federation's local chapter at the Monterey Marriott Hotel.

It's where Chef Willi, as he prefers to be called, reigns supreme on a daily basis. The Monterey Marriott has been his home turf for more than a year, and he has put on many splendid banquets during that time. But he outdid himself at the Chef of the Year Award dinner in May.

Following a Champagne reception at which hors d'oeuvres were passed, the banquet began in earnest with amuse bouche of pistachio-crusting Australian lamb loin with Maui onion flan and Camembert cream.

An appetizer course followed: Pan-seared breast of game hen, sourdough herb dumpling and Scottish white pudding (a sausage) with Chalone velouté and Hungarian paprika-infused oil.

By now, readers will be getting the idea this was no run-of-the-mill hotel banquet. Next, a salad was served composed of a roulade of blue wheat and roasted almond crepe filled with Rosso Bruno tomato and fresh buffalo Mozzarella accompanied by micro greens and Champagne-curry emulsion.

To cleanse the palate before the entrée, an intermezzo was served of pomegranate granité with spring melon.

Chef Willi Franz in his neat-as-a-pin office at the Monterey Marriott

There were two entrées served simultaneously: Grilled Wyoming buffalo tenderloin with caramelized shallots, and macadamia toasted halibut with Frangelico beurre blanc. Garlic ranch fingerling potatoes and grilled asparagus accompanied the meat and fish.

The portions were small enough to allow diners to eat everything placed before them, and each course was paired with outstanding California wines.

The pièce de resistance was pure genius: Following the dinner of highly sophisticated, avant-garde foods, Chef Willi devised an all-American dessert which was a paean to baseball. Three miniature desserts were fashioned to look like a hot dog in a bun (two miniature lady fingers enclosed a raspberry chiffon “hot dog” with a sweet, simulated mustard; a “box” of French fries cleverly created wholly from a small square of angel food cake; and an ice cream cone assembled with a tiny coronet holding a Swiss chocolate truffle as the ice cream. The effect was brilliant and witty in concept and dazzling in its artistry. It tasted good, too.

Chef Willi, Barre Miller — his executive sous chef — and four line cooks were called out before the diners to receive a well earned standing ovation.

As executive hotel chef, Willi conceives, plans and executes such a culinary tour de force — and at the same time is in charge of an entire kitchen and its staff. He puts on functions for 500 in the hotel’s banquet rooms and wedding receptions and special gatherings of 200 in the Ferrante Room high atop the Marriott; supplies all the food for conference functions (up to 1,200 guests) at the Portola Plaza conference center just up the street from the Marriott, and also sees to it guests are served breakfast from 6:30 to 11 a.m. and luncheon from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the hotel’s Three Flags Restaurant. His kitchen also prepares food for the Marriott’s Characters Sports Bar and Grill. Whew!

Chef Willi gives credit to Miller and the kitchen crew. “I spend 80 percent of my day writing customized menus, working on my computer, then there’s payroll and accounting, but 20 percent of my day is showing, teaching, advising my staff.”

Outgoing, creative, dedicated, and taking pleasure in being a mentor, Chef Willi exudes energy and enthusiasm.

All of these traits were evident in his 30-minute television shows, “Chef Willi’s Corner,” which he did for a community television station even while he was executive chef at the Hyatt at Dulles Airport. He mentored high school students on camera, giving them a unique opportunity to gain self confidence. “I like working with students and encouraging them,” he said.

“While I was at Dulles, I had the opportunity to do different, creative things,” he said. He did ice carvings in competition, for which he was awarded a medallion, participated in various food shows, won a contest in tallow sculpting, took second place in an American Culinary Federation’s Grand Buffet competition, and for five years in a row made a 2,000-square-foot gingerbread village displayed in the Hyatt lobby at Christmastime.

He’s also appeared on The Food

Network’s “Ready, Set, Cook!” program of under-the-gun frenetic culinary innovation.

When his wife, Debbie, was offered a good job in Monterey, he said goodbye to Hyatt, and they moved to California in February. It was the first time here for Willi.

As fortune would have it, the 2006 Masters of Food &

Wine was taking place at the Highlands Inn. Hungarian chef Janos Kiss, a longtime friend of Chef Willi and corporate chef for Hyatt, Chicago, was one of the celebrity chefs featured at the Masters. Chef Willi visited him on location, and Kiss, delighted to see his old friend, said, “Get a knife and help us out.”

When Kiss heard Chef Willi was looking for a job here, Kiss contacted Bert Cutino, co-owner of The Sardine Factory Restaurant in Monterey and honorary board member of the American Culinary Federation, Monterey. Soon after, Chef Willi was contacted by Marriott Hotel, Monterey, and offered the executive chef position.

He’s been here more than a year now, and is enjoying his job, his marriage, and the Monterey Peninsula. And being creative.

she said. "We've made such wonderful friends."

■ Bigger not better at art center

When it comes to raising money, the folks at the Pacific Grove Art Center know that bigger does not necessarily mean better. In an effort to boost its depleted coffers, the non-profit art center will host an opening reception for its annual "Tiny Treasures" fundraiser Friday, June 1, from 7 to 9 p.m.

"This is one of our two big fundraisers of the year," explained Joan McCleary, director of the art center. We have received some really beautiful work this year. Many longtime donors have faithfully contributed pieces, and some of the work from new and younger artists is just incredible."

The pieces — which can be no larger than 7 inches by 9 inches — include oils, watercolors, acrylics, collage, jewelry, needlework and sculpture. The gallery will host a drawing for the miniatures Wednesday, July 11, at 7 p.m. In the meantime, tickets are available at $3 each or 10 for $25.

Also opening June 1 at the art center are exhibits by the members of the Monterey Peninsula Art Foundation, painter Ron Reeves Meadow and photographer Gregory Weeks.

The MPAF, which operates an artists' cooperative gallery on Cannery Row in Monterey, is a local non-profit group with more than 80 members. The exhibit, titled, "California Dreaming," offers MPAF members a chance to comment on the State of California.

Meadow, a mixed-media artist who lives in Felton, will present a show called "Florescence."

"He's a chiropractor and a self-taught artist," McCleary said. "That's a pretty unusual combination. I think his work is stunning. He uses vivid and intense colors, particularly deep pinks and turquoise."

Weeks, a Carmel resident with an affinity for photographing the subtleties of redwood forests, will offer a collection of images titled, "Nature's Hand – Mankind's Hand."

Flutist Marc Rush will play Irish music at the reception. The exhibits will be on display until July 12. For more information, call (831) 375-2208 or visit www.pgartcenter.org.

■ C.V. festival seeks sponsors

The Carmel Pine Cone has joined the third annual Carmel Valley Art and Wine Festival as a sponsor, and now the organizers of the event are looking for support from other businesses and individuals.

Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce president Kathleen Hendricks is encouraging locals to get involved with the festival. "From sponsorship opportunities, to simply displaying our festival information, supporting the event is a great way to promote your business to the hundreds of people attending," explained Hendricks.

Carmel Valley Village will host the festival Saturday, June 16, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The event will feature wine tasting, food, live music and, of course, lots of art. For more information, call (831) 659-4000.

■ Big Sur Gallery offers reception

Artists Melissa Lofton and Hans Peter Kaindl will be featured at a reception at the Big Sur Gallery in Carmel Saturday, June 2, from 3 to 5 p.m.

Lofton, the daughter of Early California painter Richard Lofton, is a lifelong resident of Big Sur and Carmel Valley. A graduate of the Santa Catalina School, University of California at Davis and the Monterey Institute of International Studies, Lofton is best known for her colorful and lively renderings of local landscapes. In particular, she has made an extensive study of the elegant and colorful madrone trees that surround her Big Sur home.

Pacific Grove woman charged in elderly husband's murder

By KELLY NIX

THE ARRAIGNMENT of a Pacific Grove woman charged with killing her 85-year-old husband has been postponed until next week.

Lynne Nicole Feurer, 65, was taken into custody by officers Tuesday on suspicion of killing Joseph Francis Cupita in their home on the 300 block of Eighth Street.

"The investigation has led us to believe there was an altercation between Mrs. Feurer and Mr. Cupita that may have resulted in his death," Pacific Grove Police Sgt. Cameron White said Wednesday.

During a brief hearing in a Salinas courtroom Thursday, Feurer's arraignment was postponed until Tuesday, June 5, so she can retain an attorney. Feurer was arrested by Monterey police just after midnight Tuesday after a bartender at the London Bridge Pub reported she was drunk and had made a confession. "She had made comments to some patrons that she had killed her husband," White said.

Monterey police contacted Pacific Grove police, who in turn discovered Cupita's body after performing a welfare check at their home, White said.

White wouldn't say whether Feurer had confessed the crime to police or whether she had any injuries.

A coroner's report will determine when and how Cupita was killed, White said. Feurer was booked into Monterey County Jail on $1 million bail.

Neighbor Linda Nichols said she had casual conversations with Feurer, who is known as Nicole, during the eight years she's lived next door to her.

"They moved here when I moved here," Nichols said Tuesday. "Nicole and I were just speaking neighbors. I really didn't know [Cupita]; I just knew he was quite elderly."

Although friends have said Feurer and Cupita were married, police couldn't confirm their relationship.

Feurer, a Seaside High School teacher, often traveled out of town with Cupita, Nichols said.

Even though Nichols said the two were known to argue, she was shocked to find out that Feurer had been arrested in Cupita's death. "This is Pacific Grove. Nothing ever happens here," she said.

Cupita's death is the city's first homicide since 2002, when Ignacio Sanchez, 27, was gunned down in a robbery attempt near the Monterey Bay Aquarium. Anthony Joel Estrada was convicted of the crime and sentenced to life in prison.

Perhaps the city's most high-profile homicide was that of Kris Olinger, 17, who was repeatedly stabbed to death on the city's recreational trail. Two brothers are in custody for the homicide but haven't yet gone to trial.

demonstrate the council failed to base its decision on facts in the record."

For example, in his ruling, O'Farrell agreed with the preservationists who sued the city that Flanders Mansion is a park. But Conners said the city needs to know what led O'Farrell to that conclusion.

"The city council found that the mansion is not a park because it has not been used as a park," Conners said. While O'Farrell seemed to rely on the fact that the underlying property is zoned for park uses, Conners said "the same logic would show that the courthouse is a single family residence," since that's how the land the courthouse occupies is zoned.

"There's nothing in the record to indicate that the mansion is, in fact, a park," Conners said.

Susan Brandt-Hawley, attorney for the Flanders Foundation, participating in the hearing by speaker phone, said, "Mr. Conners has repeated the arguments he's already made, and we've already responded to them." She urged the judge to let his ruling stand.

Except for clarifying the language about the city's obligation to repair Flanders mansion, that's exactly what he did.

The city has not announced whether it intends to appeal O'Farrell's ruling.

years, she remained in New York, where she owns and operates a clothing store for women and children.

"I was either going to move my family or not move my family," Globenfelt said. "I couldn't be bi-coastal any longer."

Their children and grandchildren also reside on the East Coast.

"We're sorry to see him go, but it was a mutual agreement, and there are certainly no hard feelings or anything like that," said Perry Walker, chairman of the SCC board. "He is a consummate professional."

Though his contract ends at the end of the month, Globenfelt agreed to stay on through the end of September to provide SCC time to find his replacement. His remaining through the beginning of fall will also see Sunset through the Carmel Bach Festival and the scheduling of performers for the coming season, and Globenfelt said he might occasionally consult for the center even after he heads east.

Walker credited Globenfelt with bringing talented performers and popular shows to Sunset, which reopened in 2004 following a $21.65 million renovation. With more than 40 years' business experience that included stints with the Fresno Convention Center, the Harlem Globetrotters, the Nassau County Coliseum and the Lehman Center for the Performing Arts in New York City, Globenfelt tapped into his entertainment contacts and abilities to make Sunset popular with entertainers and patrons.

"He had a good feel for what could play in as unique a venue as Sunset, because it's very small," Walker said. "He was able to start from a dead stop and get us going, which is really quite remarkable."

Globenfelt made dance a permanent component of the theater schedule, with much-praised groups such as Smuin Ballet committing to multiple performances each year, Walker pointed out.

Globenfelt said he is proud of the diversity of the programming. "People have been very responsive to that," he said. "People have come up to me and said, 'This is the best show I've ever seen here.'"

Performers enjoy appearing there as well, both men reported.

'Always tension'

Globenfelt also put together a core staff of professionals who "put on shows and take care of the center and do all the things we're charged to do by the city," Walker said, though some former employees have complained it was not a good place to work under his leadership.

"When you want to move an organization in another direction, there's always that tension with individuals who don't want to go in that direction, or their skill sets don't match," Walker explained.

Among Globenfelt's few regrets is not being able to figure out how to accommodate groups that can no longer afford to present shows at Sunset.

"That really is a disappointment, because I think it really should be used more by local organizations," he said. "But it's just the cost of running the facility is expensive. There's got to be a way to circumvent that."

Globenfelt, who also owns a promoting and music recording company in New York and has worked with a cabaret group in the area for 16 years, called running Sunset "a great experience."

"I have enjoyed it tremendously. I love the community and love the people — it's just time for me to go on to that next phase of my life — supposedly the non-working phase," said Globenfelt, who will likely end up working full time on his various pursuits and helping his wife expand her business.

Walker said the board is crafting a job description and initiating a search for a new executive director, who Globenfelt said will have to be multitasking and savvy, since the job involves recruiting performers, fundraising, crunching numbers, attending meetings with numerous boards and organizations, overseeing the budget and maintenance, and managing the center's staff.

When asked who the ideal candidate might be, he responded, "P.T. Barnum!"

Reese, an archeologist hired by the building contractor to evaluate the bones. Because the bones aren't connected, "they would have been discarded presumably sometime during the whale industry, which takes us back to the 19th century."

A crew with Daniels & House Construction Co. was nearly done compacting soil to accommodate the Trader Joe's foundation two weeks ago when it came across the find, said project manager Jay Tulley.

"It was at the very end of the dig," Tulley said. "We were feeling really lucky we hadn't found anything. And in the last few feet, we ran into some stuff."

Work was stopped immediately so Reese could assess the bones, which were quickly determined to be whale.

"Whenever you do a dig and find bones, you are supposed to stop and get an archeologist to establish if they are bones of significance," said Monterey building official John Kuehl.

If human bones are uncovered during excavation, they must be recovered before construction can continue.

The whale bone find isn't too surprising since in the 1800s, the whaling business boomed in Monterey. Humpbacks and gray whales were killed and brought ashore so their blubber could be removed and heated to extract oil, which was used in lamps and other applications.

The Trader Joe's lot, which Reese said was likely a dump site at one time, also contained antique 7-Up and root beer bottles and an old car bumper.

"It looked like it could have been from the 1920s or '30s," Reese said. "It could have been from a Model T."

Tulley said the crew only had to stop work for part of the day while Reese sifted through the bottles and bones.

Some of the whale bones that are in better shape were given to a school, while others are being saved to be donated to a museum.

P.G. council expected to OK lighted crosswalk

THE PACIFIC Grove City Council next week is expected to approve the installation of a lighted crosswalk at Sunset and 19th Street, where a 72-year-old high school coach was killed when he was struck by a vehicle.

The council on June 6 will consider a contract with the Pacific Grove Unified School District to accept funds for the crosswalk, which is expected to cost $87,500.

The crosswalk will be paid for with money from the district's capital improvement fund.

Richard Chamberlin was killed Feb. 9, 2006, when a 74-year-old driver struck him as he crossed Sunset Drive. Chamberlin was a longtime Pacific Grove High School track coach and was on his way back from a wrestling match at the school when he was killed.

The same crosswalk is used by dozens of high school students each day on their way to and from school.

INSURANCE

employees obtain new equipment and whatever else they need to reduce discomfort and prevent future injury.

But the California workers' comp system presumes workers should be paid even for dubious injuries, especially in the public safety sector. The Labor Code assumes certain injuries are work related, such as a police officer or firefighter who suffers from heart disease, hernia, back trouble, or even pneumonia or cancer, unless the city can prove the injury or illness originated elsewhere.

The city can delay paying a claim for 90 days in order to investigate it and can take even longer if it receives anonymous tips or other information.

"You've seen those kinds of stories, where people get video," of supposedly injured people behaving perfectly healthy, she said. "We use those investigative tools."

And while the penalties for fraud are high, she said, "It's not the easiest thing to prove, either."

Miller said she has not seen any fraudulent claims filed in Carmel.

TRAIL

will take about two months. The agency is contributing $100,000 of state taxpayer dollars toward the cost of hiring the consultant and is trying to raise an additional $75,000 by getting a Federal Highway Administration grant, which would be funded by taxpayers nationwide.

Construction of the trail began in 1972 after California voters passed Proposition 20. In 2001, legislation called for the trail's completion. But huge obstacles along the coast — including sizable parcels of private property and military installations such as Vandenberg Air Force Base and Camp Pendleton — are in the way. Even some residents of Pacific Grove have resisted completion of a footpath along the city's entire shoreline. According to the coastal conservancy's website, the trail is "roughly half complete."

Friday's Big Sur meeting will also feature presentations by PG&E on tree trimming and a project to divert birds from power lines. Caltrans will present an update on the Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park left-turn channelization project.

TROLLEY

"During July and August, the chamber and the Crossroads will pay $2,500 each to cover the cost of the fares."

The free trolley — which resembles a cable car and seats 28 — would begin running along the regular Carmel bus route June 30 and continue through Labor Day. Depending on whether passengers want to embark or disembark, it could stop about every two blocks on the trip through town, near the beach, along Rio Road past the Mission and the Crossroads, and up Carmel Rancho Boulevard, where it would turn around at Brinton's. The route is currently served by a small bus that runs every half hour between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. daily.

"It's a great way to get around," Potter said, adding that a chamber survey of member businesses indicated most support the idea. Those who don't are primarily downtown shopkeepers who fear it will take customers away.

"I've been doing a survey and have got more people responding than ever," she said. Of 148 responders, 128 (86 percent) said the trial trolley is a good idea, 13 said it's not, and seven indicated, "Don't know."

According to a letter to Mayor Sue McCloud from Potter, chamber board chairman Michael Adamson and vice chair Thompson Lange requesting the council consider the proposal, the trolleys would:

■ Enhance the visitor experience. The trolleys look better than buses, and they would be a great way to get close to the beach, the mission, all local areas or just to take a ride and see the sights.

■ The trolleys would help ease traffic during the busy summer months, especially during the Concours week in August. There is parking available in the mouth of the valley so that people can park there and take the trolley in.

■ We've got an excellent public transportation system here, and getting people out of their cars into public transportation is great for the environment.

In addition, it could relieve parking congestion and help people save money as gas prices creep toward $4 per gallon.

"People have trouble finding a parking spot, and the stores tell us stories of people stopping shopping because they have to move their cars," Potter told The Pine Cone.

Supporters hope the city council will see it their way and OK the trial run. Even though the bus route is not changing and the free trolley service requires no city money, proponents still want its approval of the plan before they move ahead. The council is set to discuss the trolleys at its regular meeting Tuesday, June 5.

Pine Cone poll solidly against Measure A

FINAL RESULTS of the Carmel Pine Cone poll of subscribers to the paper's email edition show that opposition to a LandWatch-backed general plan ballot measure remains strong with just a few days to go before the June 5 election.

"Among our Internet subscribers, 51 percent said they are opposed to Measure A, and just 31 percent said they favor it," Pine Cone Publisher Paul Miller said, with 18 percent expressing no opinion.

A competing ballot measure backed by the county board of supervisors, Measure C, was supported by participants in the poll by a margin of 44 percent in favor to 32 percent opposed, with 24 percent expressing no opinion. According to Miller, 188 people participated in the poll.

to issue an injunction against construction of the pilot plant because it would be privately owned. The merits of the lawsuit are set to be argued in a Monterey courtroom in June.

Meanwhile, the California Public Utilities Commission is reviewing the cost of the Coastal Water Project, which also calls for aquifer storage and recovery facilities.

A consultant for the PUC working on the environmental impact report for the Coastal Water Project estimates the draft EIR will be released in the first quarter of 2008.

BUDGET

The budget proposes spending $2,673,132 for police, $1,678,154 for fire, $1,028,340 for public works, $879,465 for the library, $762,914 for administrative services, $815,106 for administration, $740,836 for community planning and building, $457,661 for forest and beach, $328,574 for building maintenance services, $313,101 for information and technology, and $205,014 for community services.

Council members briefly discussed their own $187,067 budget, which includes $50,000 earmarked for the community housing trust heavily campaigned by McCloud. The trust helps qualified people purchase homes. "We voted on it six months ago, so I don't know why we're revisiting it," Cunningham said. "It was 3-2 against it. I don't see why that didn't hold."

McCloud said, "I ask council to look deep inside themselves and ask how to say, 'No,' when we provide no affordable housing for people under 55."

Council members decided to discuss the trust money again during the June meeting, leaving the $50,000 in "placeholder" status in the 2007/2008 budget.

They also allocated $50,000 for implementing whatever recommendations result from a comprehensive tree study being conducted by a contractor at the request of the

Jewelry, cash stolen from under bed

WHILE A new resident of Carmel Valley Manor recuperated after falling and injuring herself, someone stole the jewelry and money she had kept in a box underneath her bed, according to Monterey County Sheriff's Sgt. Scott Ragan. "She was out of her room for a couple of weeks," he said. "When she got back, she discovered someone had stolen some jewelry and cash."

Ann Pigozzi, 86, told deputies May 16 a suspect or suspects had taken $300 in cash and about $50,000 worth of jewelry, including rings, watches, earrings and necklaces.

forest and beach commission.

In addition, the council suggested Guillen research the best strategy for replacing antiquated computers in city hall. (The police department is already scheduled to receive new equipment.) And it asked him to look into more quickly paying off the short-term debt that helped fund Sunset Center's $21.65 million renovation.

No members of the public submitted written questions to be answered by staff at the May 22 meeting, and no one in the sparse audience in chambers at city hall offered comment on the spending plan.

Sunset goals not met

When the council handed management of Sunset Center to an independent nonprofit three years ago, it expected city subsidies to eventually drop, not increase. During the current budget, Carmel taxpayers gave $713,000, but Sunset Cultural Center, Inc., requested the council increase the "enabling grant" to $750,000 for 2007/2008.

After Sunset Center was renovated four years ago, 60 percent of the organizations using it did not return, according to board chairman Perry Walker, because it was too expensive.

"So we started presenting shows, to the point now we are the largest presenter at the center," he said. "We are taking the risks on the shows — that's something we never dreamed we would do."

According to SCC's 2006/2007 budget, it cost $211,165 to produce its Performance Carmel series, and $546,741 to produce the Sunset Center Presents programs, such as the Smuin Ballet and the Four Tops.

"It's very, very difficult for us to come out in the black," Walker said.

Other presenters, who brought Lily Tomlin and "In the Mood" to Sunset, paid rent and other fees to SCC to use the theater.

But longtime users of the theater, such as the Monterey County Symphony, are struggling to make their programs break even, let alone pay, he said.

In the short term, Sunset Center management requested the larger subsidy to help boost marketing efforts and cover operating costs. "When you have to reduce your budget, you have to reduce your programs," Walker said. "There is a relationship between the enabling grant and the number of performances at Sunset." He suggested the city and SCC consider developing a more efficient way to run it.

"We have to figure out long-term what's the best way to structure Sunset," he said. "The assumptions we went in with are not matching up. We need to bring them back into focus in reality, and we stand ready to help you on that."

Councilman Ken Talmage observed that Sunset is the city's third most expensive department, at about $1.4 million per year.

He said discussions need to continue to determine the best way to "bridge the gap between the city funding and what it takes to run Sunset Center in the real world."

The council decided to give the center $750,000 in the 2007/2008 budget, which it approved unanimously.

Editorial

The next drought will have to be worse to be as bad

A FEW weeks ago, we used this space to point out that it might not be a bad thing for the Monterey Peninsula to be plunged into a drought like the ones of the late 1970s and '80s.

Very little rain fell this winter and, if it is dry again next year, we could very well be forced to return to the terrible days of water rationing.

That would mean dying gardens, unflushed toilets and calls from activists for hotels to shutter some of their rooms — things which old-timers know are not just an inconvenience. They also invariably threaten the jobs of thousands of Peninsula residents, cost millions of dollars in economic losses, and, if the aquifers dry up completely, pose a dire threat to public health.

Renewed public outrage at the lack of a dependable, drought-proof water supply — which has been expressed over and over again, but not much during the recent extended period of above-average rainfall — might provide the impetus this community needs to finally get a new water project.

But in one key respect, the Monterey Peninsula is better prepared for a drought than it was the last two times around. Since the last bitter dry spell, a reclamation project has been built that turns millions of gallons of sewage every month into irrigation water for the golf courses of Pebble Beach. Thanks to the P.B. Co. and other sponsors, the fabulous greens and fairways of Pebble Beach, Spanish Bay, Spyglass, Poppy Hills, Cypress Point and the Monterey Peninsula Country Club are much better prepared for another drought than the rest of us. And this isn't just a matter of protecting the leisure time of the rich. Keeping these golf course playable, no matter how little it rains, is vital to the local economy. Hotels, restaurants, retail stores, local governments, etc. — whether in Del Monte Forest or surrounding communities — would be in dire straits if the courses dried up and golfers stopped coming from far and near to play them.

Furthermore, by not relying on potable water to keep the grass green, the golf courses participating in the reclamation project also help keep the river from being overpumped. Since the first phase of the project went online in 1994, thousands of acre-feet that would have been pumped over the hill from Carmel Valley have been left in their native watershed.

So while government agencies charged with protecting and enhancing the Monterey Peninsula's water supply have accomplished very little during the last 30 years, a privately funded project has done much more. If a drought is beginning, at least we don't have to worry about the Pebble Beach Co., Cypress Point and MPCC going out of business.

‘Embarrassed and ashamed’

Dear Editor,

How can the major weekly of Monterey County devote a large portion of its entire newspaper explaining the importance of a YES vote on Measure A while our own village weekly takes a pro-growth stand against it? As a local resident, I am embarrassed and ashamed. We, who live here, treasure our environment and fight to protect it.

Let's be fair and examine exactly what interests are really behind defeating Measure A by reading the list of “No on A” supporters in the full page ad you ran in this last week's edition. The real estate industry, hotel industry, winery owners, large land owners and growers, chambers of commerce, city business associations, business owners and land developers are all the sponsors of defeating Measure A. Why? Because all have special interests in growing this area as much as possible and the financial gain that will come from it. It's called big business, money, and how to maximize it.

You may be the current owner of our treasured local newspaper, but your views, and that of those looking to defeat Measure A, do not represent the majority of those of us who live here, vote here, raise families here and have fought for over a century to keep the unique and irreplaceable beauty of our county from falling blight to the very same forces of money that created places like San Jose and Fresno in a very short period of time. We don't intend to entrust our future quality of life to special interests or into the hands of five supervisors, four of which funded the majority of their campaign with contributions from developers, large land owners and the real estate industry.

We, the voters, should decide our future. The choice is simple for all of us who believe in self determination and protecting what is valuable and irreplaceable: That is a resounding YES on A! Please vote. It's your future.

Michael McGibney, Carmel

"It definitely came as a surprise" when Ryan Seacrest informed him, on live TV, that he had been voted off. "I had never even been in the bottom three before."

A few weeks later, Fantasia was named the winner. And then the American Idol tour began.

"We played in 51 cities and made quite a bit of money," Lewis said. But when the tour was over, he didn't really like any of the show-business offers that came his way. So he invested in real estate in Phoenix and devoted himself full-time to songwriting.

The result was an original album, "Stories From Hollywood," that reflects some of the experiences Lewis had on the nation's most popular TV show. One of the songs, "Boy Next Door," has also been remixed into a upbeat dance version that promises to be a hit.

Friday night at Monterey Live, he'll be performing some of the songs from the album and several completely new ones he's written. His manager, Judy Lieber, said one of the new songs, "Beautiful," is "absolutely wonderful."

Lewis will be accompanied by his bass player, Sky Elobar. Also on the bill Friday are the groups Ghost Tree and Efata. The show begins at 9 p.m. For tickets, go to www.montereylive.org or call (877) 548-3237.

Forty years ago, these pristine coastal highlands captivated Clint Eastwood. Today, his vision has inspired a community of distinction without disturbing what drew him to this enchanting land.

For generations now, Carmel has radiated an irresistible allure. It beckons all who appreciate art, nature, culture, golf, and breathtaking beauty. Here, less than ten minutes from Carmel, the 2,000-acre refuge of Tehama will be home to just 90 owners who value their privacy and expect the extraordinary – secluded homesites, inspiring views, a world-class Social Fitness Center, a private Golf Club whose membership is by invitation only, and inviting restaurants for both casual and fine dining. A unique community. An exceptional setting. A short-lived opportunity.

"Taking an interest in the land was the only way to protect it."

Two are better than one for sculptor

Two simultaneous receptions Friday, June 1, will celebrate the sculpture of multi-talented Carmel Valley artist Sukhdev Dail.

The Lyons Head Gallery in Carmel Valley Village will present a reception from 4 to 9 p.m. Meanwhile, Dail will host a reception for his larger pieces in his garden, which is located at 233 Country Club Drive, about a mile from the Lyons Head Gallery at 12 Del Fino Place.

"He does large pieces that are quite magnificent," said Whit Taylor, manager of the Lyons Head Gallery. "They're classical in the best sense, but he uses a variety of modern techniques.

In addition to creating sculpture, Dail is an accomplished painter, illustrator and photographer. A native of Punjab, India, he has also worked a director of animation for a variety of Hollywood film studios, including MGM and Universal.

Throughout the afternoon and evening, Dail will travel back and forth between the two venues. For more information, call (831) 659-4877.

"And people say, 'I always wear a seat belt on the highway, but when I come into town, I unbuckle it.' That confounds me, because in town, you're seven times more likely to get into an accident than on the highway."

Rana also reminded motorists they have to wear them properly. "It's not a rib harness, it's a shoulder harness," he said. "More damage can happen with it underneath the ribs than over the shoulder."

Most people mind their manners when they're cited, but a few philosophically disagree with the government telling them they have to wear seat belts.

"It's common sense to keep yourself safe," Rana said. "And those who are inside your car with you."
