When a bat calls, what does it say?

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SUSAN WHITFORD is eavesdropping on bats. The San Diego State University graduate student is spending the summer recording the utterances of the nocturnal winged creatures for her master's thesis, which will analyze the diversity of bat species in Monterey County and their travels through the urban, undeveloped and agricultural areas.

Her ultimate goal is to help determine how to balance the needs of humans and wildlife with the cultivation and preservation of diverse natural habitats.

"It's an exciting project, because I not only get to work with wildlife but get to work with people, too," said Whitford, who began recording bats' echolocation calls — which they use to navigate in the dark and home in on prey — in mid-June and plans to finish in August. Her study area runs from the northern boundary of Monterey County to Greenfield, including Carmel-by-the-Sea and other Peninsula cities, as well as the Big Sur Coast. It incorporates residential neighborhoods, farmland, vineyards and urban and rural parks such as Devendorf Park and Point Lobos State Reserve.

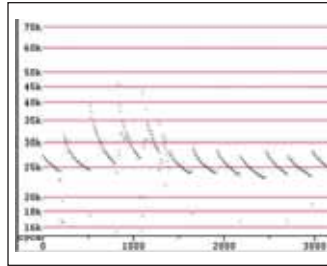

Whitford said she chose to study bats because they are a good indicator of how wildlife moves through urban areas. A bat can fly dozens of miles in its nightly quest for food.

Elections head to push for increased voter turnout

■ Peninsula residents vote far more than their inland counterparts

By KELLY NIX

VOTER TURNOUT in Salinas Valley and South Monterey County for the June 5 election on the county's general plan was pitifully low — something the registrar of voters is aiming to improve.

While more than half of Monterey Peninsula's 49,000 registered voters cast their ballots in the June special election, fewer than 5,000 voted in the City of Salinas and a little more than 6,000 in South County.

"It is a matter of what is on the ballot," said Linda Tulett, Monterey County registrar of voters. "It has to mean something for the voters to turn out."

First District Supervisor Fernando Armenta, whose area includes the City of Salinas, said low voter turnout in his district in the June election, which included three measures related to the general plan and one for the Butterfly Village development, wasn't surprising.

"It's hard when people aren't getting the bare minimum to meet their basic needs," Armenta said. "And then you want to get them to do something that's not going to put food on the table. It's not that their unmotivated, it's that their focus is somewhere else."

And turnout is just part of the problem, Tulett said. Getting people registered to vote is another. Out of about 80,000 residents counted in the 2000 census, only 15,674 people are registered to vote in Salinas District 1, while 17,815 out of 80,000 are registered in District 3. In the Monterey Peninsula, which has about the same number of residents as the other supervisorial

Bach Festival begins search for full-time managing director

By PAUL MILLER

WHEN HE took over as executive director of the Carmel Bach Festival in May 2005, longtime orchestra member Jesse Read knew he had his work cut out for him.

His predecessor, Willem Wijnbergen, was not popular with many of the festival's musicians, former artistic director Nana Faridany was dying of cancer, and the festival's finances had taken a major hit during the reconstruction of Sunset Center.

But just two years later, Read, who has divided his time between the Bach Fest and his job as director of the School of Music at the University of British Columbia, believes stability has returned to the 70-year-old summer festival — enough so he can give up his management role and return to just being the orchestra's principal bassoonist.

"It's a decision I made last summer, that it was time for the Bach Festival to once again have a full-time manager," Read said Monday during a session with reporters backstage at Sunset Center.

He and the president of the Bach Fest's board of directors, Cyril Yansouni, announced the festival has retained a search firm to screen candidates to be Read's replacement. While they spoke, music wafted through the walls as musicians rehearsed for the opening of the Bach Festival July 14.

"It will be hard to replace Jesse, because he has a unique talent for the artistic side of the festival, as well as the development side,"

Ordinance: Building materials must be recycled

By MARY BROWNFIELD

DEBRIS FROM construction and demolition accounts for much of what lands in the landfill, and the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea wants to ensure people recycle and reuse as many cement chunks, old doors and discarded bath tubs as possible. With little discussion and no objections, the city council unanimously passed a law last week making it illegal to send such scraps to the dump.

According to the new "Deconstruction, Demolition and Construction Material Recovery and Diversion from Landfills" ordinance, which will take effect in early August, 100 percent of inert solids — concrete, asphalt, brick, ceramics and clay — and 50 percent of all other debris must go to "bonafide facilities" for reuse or recycling. Before a building permit can be issued, an applicant must submit a plan for meeting those requirements, either by sepa-

Pacific Grove may use windmills to power municipal buildings

By KELLY NIX

A LARGE energy corporation has turned down Pacific Grove's bid to install solar panels on rooftops in an effort to reduce the city's energy use by as much as 80 percent.

In March, the Honeywell Corporation surveyed the city's government and school buildings to determine the viability of installing solar panels, which could have saved the city as much as $30,000 per month in energy costs.

"Honeywell didn't believe that our power needs and rooftop space were adequate for their program," said P.G. city manager Jim Colangelo.

But, in a town that has steady onshore breezes, there's already talk of another possible alternative energy source.

"The technology is moving so quickly that wind generation is an option," said Mayor Dan Cort. "There are portable units that you can put in your backyard that generate an immense amount of power."

While windmills could provide an alternate source for everyday power, they could also provide an energy backup in case there was an interruption of power due to an emergency, Cort said.

"These wind generators could provide backup power under any circumstances," Cort said.

In some communities, windmills have been criticized for being unsightly and for killing birds.

"You would probably have them in any kind of open space where you could capture the wind. I don't think you could put them on roofs," Cort said. Since becoming mayor in 2006, he has spoken much of making Pacific Grove more "green" and "sustainable."

Cort said he discussed with Colangelo last week the idea of employing wind generators, such as those manufactured by Ecosphere Technologies, Inc.

According to the Florida-based company's website, one of its units is a "portable, self-contained micro-utility that has been designed to use the power of the sun and an optional wind turbine to provide clean electricity, convert the most contaminated ground water to purified drinking water, and deliver wireless Internet connectivity."

The solar energy and wind turbine system would allow its energy to be routed back into the PG&E grid, which in turn would benefit the city, Cort said.

"PG&E would have to pay us for whatever power we provided them," he said.

Cort has also proposed using the dried up, 25 million-gallon reservoir behind the P.G. Middle School to capture stormwater runoff so it doesn't enter the city's ocean waters, Point Sur was especially hazardous for sea travelers during the 100-year period from the mid-1800s, when marine traffic increased dramatically, to after World War II, when radar became common. Brave sailors died in shipwrecks, but ironically, some Central Coast residents profited, rushing to beaches to scoop up lumber and other goods that washed ashore. The good ship Ventura foundered off the coast in 1875. This accident gave impetus to construction of the Point Sur Light Station, which opened in 1889. Even after the lighthouse began operation, shipwrecks happened - partly because vessels plied perilously close to the rocky shores to avoid headwinds. The light station is open for tours; moonlight tours are powerfully evocative. Call 831-625-4419 for details.

Board: GPU5 could be finished within a couple of months

By KELLY NIX

WITH A delicate armistice seemingly in place between opposing sides on the county's general plan, Fifth District Supervisor Dave Potter believes a compromise plan could be completed in about two months.

On Tuesday, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors decided to continue using the county's 1982 plan while using GPU4, the most recent general plan, finalized in 2006 but rejected by voters last month, as the template to craft a revised plan.

"There's this perception that the board doesn't work very well on issues," Potter said. "I felt very good about Tuesday's meeting. There was no acrimony. There was an understanding that court is not the place we should be going."

The supervisors' decision came in response to the June election, when voters cast their ballots for four measures, three related to the county's general plan. Measure A, a slow-growth alternative plan backed by LandWatch, failed, as did Measure C, which asked voters to approve GPU4.

Measure B, which asked voters if they wanted to repeal GPU4, was also defeated. County counsel Charles McKee determined the results meant GPU4 could be implemented.

But supervisors, at the request of activists on both sides of the land use debate, decided not to adopt GPU4 but to compromise on a modified plan. Potter said he was encouraged to see the spirit of cooperation at Tuesday's meeting.

"I thought the board came very quickly to agreement on the fact that we really should not let the hard left or the hard right drive us into some box," he said.

The supervisors also placed a 45-day moratorium on development while the new plan is being worked out.

"I don't think it will go for much more than a couple of months," Potter said in regards to completing the new plan. "Six weeks is what we had hoped."

Second District Supervisor Lou Calcagno said supervisors should "use GPU4 as a benchmark to start dialogue and discussion on GPU5."

Calcagno's suggestion echoed earlier comments by many who addressed the board.

"Beneath the polarized positions and extreme points of view we expressed during the campaign," said Tony Pete, a Pacific Grove resident. "We want to make something that is much less controversial and polarizing. It really is an opportunity to move forward, an opportunity to maybe in some ways redeem ourselves."

Third District Supervisor Simon Salinas shared similar sentiments.

"This is the time for us to tell everybody to chill out a bit and hold off on those lawsuits until the board makes a decision," Salinas said. "Hopefully, at the end of the day, we will make a compromise that is a betterment for Monterey County."

A special board of supervisors meeting was set for Tuesday, July 17, to set parameters for the planning commission as to what should be modified.

"We might list areas that are off-limits for further discussion," he said.

But Potter said he's confident the planning commission will revise the plan so it satisfies both sides.

"I think they developed a mutual respect of the diversity of opinions," he said. "They may be better equipped to give the board the sort of pathway to consensus."

Bob Perkins, executive director of the Monterey County

Farm Bureau, said he supports revisiting the traffic and water issues in GPU4 but opposes modifying other portions.

"There are some things I would urge you not to spend time revisiting," Perkins said. "The ag element and wine corridor have been well visited."

Glenn Robinson, of the Carmel Valley Association, urged the formation of small study groups composed of equal numbers of Measure A and GPU4 supporters to help revise the new plan.

Potter said it's essentially do or die for both sides of the land use issue to come together. The troubled general plan process has cost the county $7 million and eight years.

"Walking away from the table this time really isn't an option," he said. "It's kind of the last call to compromise."

'This is the time for everybody to hold off on the lawsuits and wait for us to make a decision'

Peninsula motorcyclists Ride to Work July 18

FOR 16 years, a small group of motorcycle enthusiasts, including Aerostitch RiderWear founder Andy Goldfine, have been urging the people who own the nation's 8 million motorcycles to take two-wheeled transportation to work instead of four. The 2007 Ride to Work Day is set for Wednesday, July 18.

As founder of the nonprofit Ride to Work, Goldfine touts the economy, efficiency and environmentally friendly aspects of commuting on a motorcycle or scooter, as well as the fun. Motorcycles and scooters get good mileage and can fit as many as five to a parking space. He estimated that if the expected 150,000 people who two-wheel to the office on Ride to Work Day ditched their cars in favor of bikes every day, they would collectively save 15 million gallons of gas.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, of the total 129,141,982 commuters nationwide in 2003, only 147,703, or 1.1 percent, regularly rode motorcycles to work. Goldfine hopes to boost this number every year by publicizing Ride to Work Day, making municipal governments aware of the benefits of commuting on two wheels, and encouraging employers to support their motorcycling employees. Cities throughout the country have adopted proclamations in support of Ride to Work Day.

PacRep's 'Miss Weatherspoon' continues at Circle Theatre

THE CIRCLE Theatre on Casanova Street in will host performances this week of PacRep Theatre's "Miss Weatherspoon."

The play, which was nominated last year for a Pulitzer Prize in Drama, tells the story of a cantankerous older woman whose unnatural fear of death inspires her to commit suicide — again and again. Unfortunately for Miss Weatherspoon, the powers-that-be in the universe conspire to keep reincarnating her.

"Miss Weatherspoon" will be presented Friday, July 13, at 7:30 p.m.; Saturday, July 14, at 2 p.m. (matinee) and 7:30 p.m.; Sunday, June 15, at 2 p.m. and Wednesday, July 18, at 7:30 p.m. The play will continue through July 22.

P.B. hosts equestrian competition

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOR THE next three weeks, equestrians from as far away as New Zealand will converge upon the Monterey Peninsula for the 60th annual Pebble Beach Equine Classic, offering plenty of thrills for horse lovers of all ages.

"To watch these huge, powerful horses going over jumps is just incredible," said event coordinator Susie Swanston. "They're amazing."

The Classic begins Tuesday, July 17. The Pebble Beach Equestrian Center, located in the Del Monte Forest, will host the event, providing a stunning natural backdrop for the competition.

"People just love coming here, and each arena is special in its own way," Swanston said.

Formerly known as the Pebble Beach Equine Festival, the event was started in 1947. More than 1,200 equestrians will compete for $215,000 in cash prizes at this year's event, which continues through Aug. 5. Despite the large number of competitors participating in the Classic, Swanston said she has a waiting list of riders hoping to get in.

"This is a big one," she said. "And it will be our best one yet."

Proceeds from silent auctions and several special events will benefit Gaits of Hope, a program offered by the nonprofit Rancho Cielo and its Silver Star Youth Program, a 100-acre ranch that serves as a school for at-risk children and teens. Gates of Hope provides at-risk youngsters ages 6 to 18 with an opportunity to learn valuable life lessons by working with horses. Rancho Cielo is located in the foothills of the Gabilan Mountains.

To make the event more appealing to youngsters, the equestrian center will feature a bounce house, an 18-foot slide and a mechanical bull on Saturdays. A game gallery will be open to youngsters every day.

Admission to the event is free, although spectators are required to pay $9 per car to enter Pebble Beach for the day. The equestrian center is located at Portola Road and Alva Lane. For more information, call (831) 624-2756 or visit www.ridepebblebeach.com.

Dachshunds to descend on Carmel Beach for Weenie Roast

By MARY BROWNFIELD

“IT’S JUST a gigantic weenie roast,” said Carmel Dachshund Club cofounder Kim Edmundson. “It’s exactly what it sounds like.”

So he succinctly described the free party slated for Carmel Beach Sunday afternoon that will likely draw more than 100 of the diminutive Dachshunds and their owners, who travel from as far as Santa Barbara and Sacramento to attend the annual canine affair.

Edmundson and Jean Hontalas began holding the annual roasts four years ago after starting their club, which meets the first and third Sunday of each month.

“We’re the only dog club in Carmel that meets regularly,” said Edmundson, a Carmel resident and Hollywood studio musician who owns two Dachsies — 15-year-old Spike and 6-year-old Butch.

“I got my first one in 1989,” he said. “I had a 200-pound Saint Bernard before I got the Dachshund, and I decided to go the other direction.”

He and Hontalas met while walking their dogs in town one day and decided to start a club for like-minded fans. The group’s first meeting included 17 pups, and its gathering now attract dozens more.

“We do the ‘parade,’ where we stroll down Scenic with the dogs on leashes to 12th Avenue,” Edmundson explained the bimonthly gathering. Down on the beach, they unleash their hounds, “sit for a while and let them play. It’s an absolute riot.”

Imagine that riot times three or four, and add to it edible weenies and buns provided by Bruno’s Market owner Fermin Sanchez and his Dachshund, Noel.

“Everyone’s invited, even if people just want to come by and watch,” Edmundson said. “We will have some games and stuff, and the SPCA is going to be there handing out some information. At least, I hope so — I’ve invited them.”

The party starts at noon July 15 and “is all about the dogs and letting them play and run around just going crazy.”

Chamber of commerce offers two China tours next year

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ANYONE WHO missed out on the incredibly cheap opportunity to visit China last spring — and anyone who wants to go again — should break out the checkbook to lock in a spot on one of two tours set for next spring. The Carmel Chamber of Commerce, which organized trips for its members and their friends and families in February and March this year, announced 2008 travel dates of March 26-April 3 and March 27-April 4.

Organized by a Chinese company called Citiline International, which strives to acquaint American business leaders with the rapidly growing Asian superpower, the trips include stops in Beijing, Suzhou, Hangzhou and Shanghai. They will cost $1,499 per person — $100 more than this year — including round-trip airfare, hotels, transportation, tour guides, admission to sites, and three meals per day.

The jam-packed tour schedule, which has visitors board buses early in the morning and arrive at their well appointed hotels each night, will include visits to historic sites, such as Beijing's 9,999-room Forbidden City, the Great Wall, the stunning gardens of Suzhou and Hangzhou, and the bustling Bund — Shanghai's Wall Street. Interspersed are stops in demonstration rooms and shops of government-owned factories where carved jade, silk embroidery, pearls, cloisonné, green tea and other wares are created and offered for sale.

Optional side trips, such as a canal boat ride through the old neighborhoods of Suzhou (known as the Venice of the Orient), a nighttime float on the Huangpu River to see the bright lights of Shanghai, and a rickshaw ride through the historic Hutong area of Beijing to have lunch with a family at their home, cost a little extra.

Chamber CEO Monta Potter, who visited China with the group this year, also said returning travelers will have the option to fly to Xi'an to see its famous terra-cotta warriors. The thousands of statues of men and horses were part of the mausoleum of Qin Shi Huang, who became the first Emperor of China and started work on his tomb when he ascended to the throne in 264 BC at the age of 13. Peasants uncovered pottery while digging for a well near the royal tomb in 1974, and the site is still under excavation. Potter said the Xi'an side trip, which will replace the stops in Suzhou and Hangzhou, will cost an extra $450.

This year's China trips filled quickly, with the February journey organized after spots for the March tour evaporated within weeks. Potter anticipates a similar rush for the 2008 dates, and the only way to secure a spot is by writing a check

The General Plan Update Project

Creating a Vision for Carmel's Future

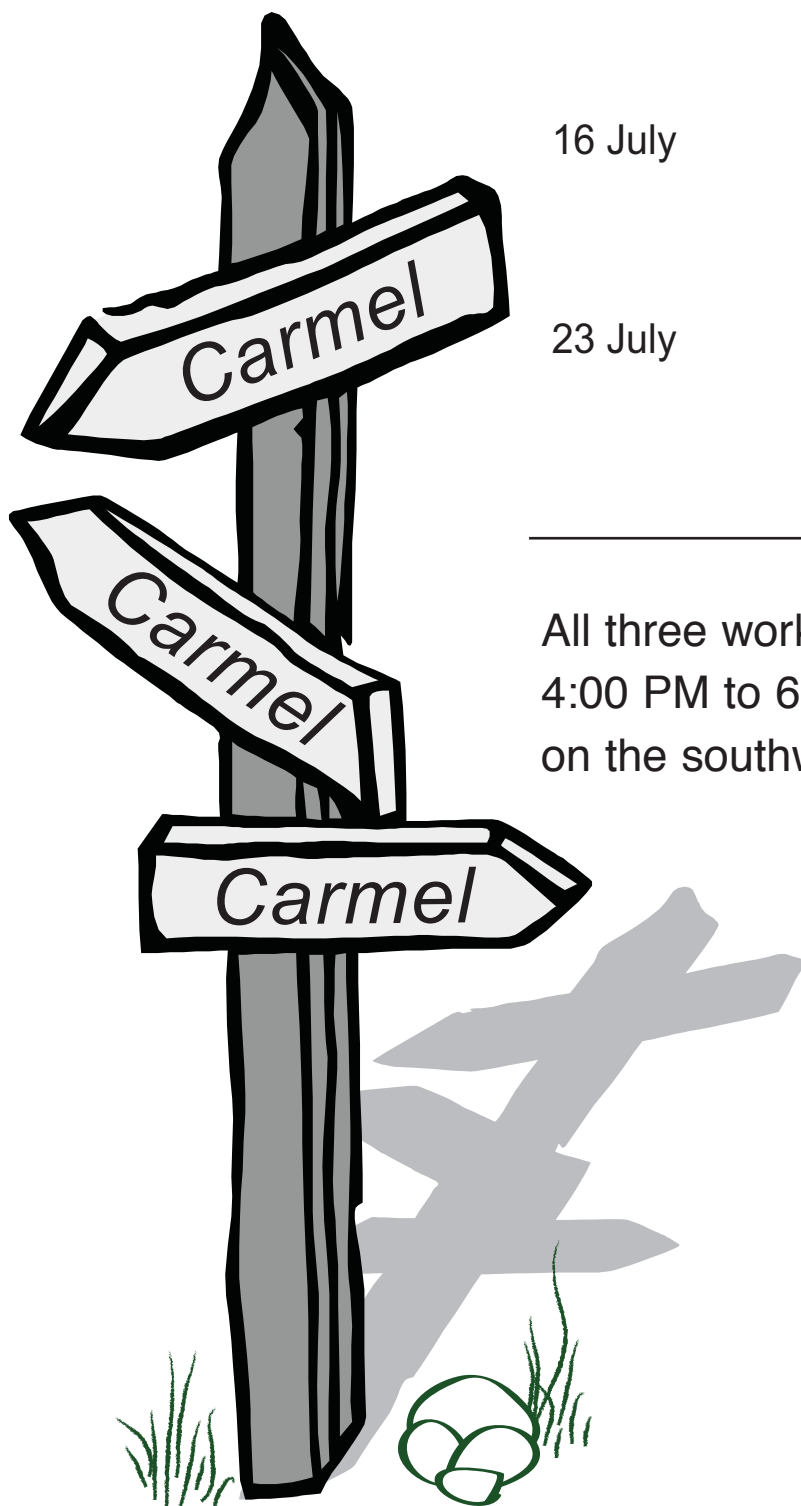

As part of the City's effort to update your General Plan, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea will be conducting three public workshops seeking your ideas about the future direction and vision for the City of Carmel. You are invited to attend and share your ideas.

We want to know what YOU think about important topics such as public safety, traffic and noise in residential areas, parking in the downtown and near Carmel Beach, maintenance of our open space, parks, and public services, and environmentally sustainable practices.

At each workshop, you will learn about important issues that Carmel will likely face in the next two decades. In a creative workshop environment we will consider your ideas, and those of your neighbors, on how Carmel should address these concerns. The result will be a collection of ideas and suggestions that will form the basis of policies to guide future decision-making in the City through the year 2030.

No experience is required! You don't need to be familiar with public meetings, politics or technical issues. This will be a very collaborative process; everyone will have a chance to contribute his or her thoughts and ideas. All you need to bring is your enthusiasm, good ideas, and civic pride in knowing that you will be helping your city and improving the quality of life in Carmel.

Date	Agenda Item	Topics
9 July	Open Space & Conservation	Parks and recreation, energy conservation, trees, recycling, water use and environmental sustainability
16 July	Public Safety & Public Facilities	Fire, flooding, earthquakes, tsunami, and how to manage and maintain our civic buildings, streets and drainage facilities
23 July	Circulation & Noise	Traffic circulation, trucks, buses and bicycles and noise from construction, traffic and other sources

All three workshops will be held on Monday evenings from 4:00 PM to 6:00 PM at the Carmel Women's Club auditorium on the southwest corner of San Carlos Street and Ninth Avenue.

Light refreshments will be served.

To avoid conflicts with the Bach Festival we request that you please not park across the street at Sunset Center

Carmel Valley lion evades trappers — for now

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOR NEARLY two weeks, a mountain lion thought to be responsible for the disappearance of local pets has eluded trappers in Carmel Valley.

The California Department of Fish and Game issued a depredation permit June 30 for the lion. The permit is good until July 15.

“The permit is still active and we’re trying to get the offending animal,” explained Terry Palmisano, a senior wildlife biologist for fish and game. “Typically, we issue permits for 10 days, but we made this one a little longer because of the Fourth of July.”

If the lion isn’t caught by Sunday, it’s likely the permit will be reissued, she said.

Trappers are taking a low-key approach in their efforts to catch the lion.

“In a case like this, where you have a lion in a suburban neighborhood, we’ll set a trap and wait for it to come back,” she explained. “There’s a pretty good chance we’ll get the same animal.”

She suspects the lion is a young male in search of new territory. “Most of the trouble is caused by young males,”

Palmisano said.

Once trapped, the lion will be euthanized, she added.

Palmisano said local residents can take steps to reduce the possibility of encountering a lion.

“I really want to stress that we live in mountain lion country,” she said. “They’re just doing what mountain lions do. They don’t make a distinction between a rabbit and a house cat.”

“People need to take steps to ensure the protection of their livestock and pets. If you leave them out at night, you stand the risk of them being taken by lions, bobcats or coyotes.”

Palmisano suggested residents bring animals inside at night or build enclosures to protect them.

“It’s the most responsible thing you can do,” she suggested.

Fire department loses one avid tinkerer but gains another

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHEN YOU only have six full-time workers, even a single staff change can be disruptive. But the transition at Carmel Fire Department this week, when veteran engineer Bill Scott completed his last shift and longtime part-timer Kenny Hutchinson III replaced him, could hardly have been more seamless.

Not only is Hutchinson well acquainted with the job, he's a tinkerer, like Scott, and will take over the responsibility of helping maintain the department's fleet, including the vintage 1923 LuVerne engine Scott painstakingly restored, cared for and occasionally drove.

"I really enjoy the mechanical stuff, working on the engines and with the equipment," said Hutchinson. "It's a pretty easy transition for me, because I've been here for almost six years. I know everybody."

Raised on the Monterey Peninsula, and the son of a sheriff's deputy in Stanislaus County, Hutchinson's interest in the fire service arose through talking to his former brother-in-law, who worked for CFD, and Capt. Mitch Kastros, who still does. Hutchinson met Kastros on the job at Monte Vista Market in Monterey.

"I used to talk to him a lot," he said. He took the introduction to fire service course at Monterey Peninsula College "to see if it was something I wanted to do."

It was, so in 1999 he completed the fire academy, added certification as an emergency medical technician to his credentials and applied to the Carmel department at Kastros' urging. He joined as a part-time firefighter in March 2002 and rose to "intermittent engineer," to begin filling shifts for vacationing and sick engineers two years ago.

The job includes "a lot of the stuff I enjoy doing — it's hands on, mechanical, and there's something new and different every day," he said. "You never know what's going to happen."

But the full-time position gives Hutchinson health benefits and a more predictable schedule.

"I don't have to work two other full-time jobs," said Hutchinson, who was also doing construction with his stepfather and did additional projects on his own when he could. "As an intermittent, I never knew when I was going to be back. Now I can set some goals and accomplish some projects, like maintaining our aging apparatus."

Nonetheless, he'll still be tinkering at home in Seaside, too, whether on his own motorcycle or a buddy's race car.

"A couple of years ago, I took the motor out of my four-wheel drive and put it my boat," he said. "I always have something. And if I don't, my friends do."

Off to Oregon

So do Bill Scott's friends, who will undoubtedly miss being able to take their cars and motorcycles to his house when they need a mechanic's help.

During his seven years as a full-time engineer, Scott helped keep the fleet running and spent an inestimable number of hours restoring the beautiful LuVerne. At his retirement party Tuesday night, Scott received a vintage photo of the engine soon after its delivery.

"I like tinkering," explained Scott.

Hailing from Ohio, he came west in 1977 "to escape the weather," after working through college. One of the more unusual items on his resume is his couple of years at a funeral home, where he would "help with running services, go out and pick up the bodies, staff the place at night and answer the phones." The only 9-to-5 job he ever held was as laborer in a machine shop before he went to college.

In Southern California, Scott was an EMT for two ambulance companies and worked a six-year stint as a part-timer with the Orange County Fire Department.

"They needed engineers and I was suited for the job, so they sent me through both academies [engineer and fire] at the same time," he said.

But eventually traffic, crowds, overdevelopment and smog drove him away, and he chose the beautiful, clean Monterey Peninsula — home of the famed Laguna Seca raceway where he had attended races — as his new home.

Carmel Fire hired him as a part-time firefighter in summer 1988, and Scott moved into a vacant part-time engineer position a year later. He was an interim engineer for nine years until being promoted to the full-time position in 2000.

In addition to tinkering, Scott said, "I like the fact you don't know what's going to happen from day to day."

In fact, he liked the job so much he had planned to stay longer, but Scott said he did not want to continue sitting by "watching the city slowly dismantle the fire department," which has lacked its own chief since Bill Hill retired in early 2001 and is the subject of a study on consolidation with other Peninsula fire departments.

Carmel, like other municipalities, has been looking for ways to trim its ever-increasing personnel, medical and retirement expenses. Scott is eligible for payouts from the state retirement system based on his years of service and salary, which was about $69,000, according to Jane Miller in city hall. He could also elect to receive medical coverage, of which the city would pay $90 per month.

"I was going to stay a few more years, but I just don't want to work for the city anymore," said Scott, who sold his Los Laureles Grade home last month and moved to Bend, Ore.

Today's Modern Dentistry

Presented by Frank J. di Bari, DDS

A GROWING POSSIBILITY

If recent research provides any indication, it may someday be possible to grow new tooth enamel from cultured cells. This breakthrough would enable dentists to produce tissue that could be used to replace damaged or missing enamel. Ordinarily, tooth enamel cannot regenerate because it is formed by a layer of cells that is lost by the time the tooth makes its appearance in the mouth. As part of the new research, scientists found that developing epithelial cells continued to proliferate when the cells were cultured on top of special "feeder" layers of cells. When these epithelial cells were mixed with cells from the middle of the tooth (dental mesenchymal cells) and placed on miniature "scaffolds," enamel-like tissue formed after four weeks.

For more information or to schedule an appointment, please call our office. Our office combines a gentle approach with the latest advances in dental technology to keep your family's smiles in tip-top shape. Even if you have lost all your natural teeth, you should still see your dentist for regular oral cancer exams. If you have trouble with swelling, numbness, sores, or lumps in your mouth, or if it becomes hard for you to chew, swallow, or move your jaw or tongue, these problems could be signs of oral cancer. Open by appointment, we accept most insurances and credit cards.

P.S. Currently, one of the best ways for the dentist to replace missing enamel on worn or damaged teeth is to use a bonding procedure that involves coating the tooth surface with a coat (or coats) of plastic resin.

Dr. di Bari, is a dentist in private practice at 20 Dormody Ct. here in Monterey. He may be reached at 373-3703.

Meg's Health Notes

Presented by Meg Parker Conners, R.N.

CAN A SUPPLEMENT PRESERVE HEARING?

According to researchers, inadequate levels of folic acid may be linked with age-related hearing loss (presbycusis). This finding came out of a study in which elderly men and women with signs of age-related hearing loss and low folic acid levels were given an 800-gram supplement of folic acid daily for three years. At the end of the study, researchers found that those taking the supplements experienced no significant drop in their ability to hear low-frequency sounds. The thresholds of the low frequencies increased by 1.0 decibel in the folic acid group and by 1.7 decibels in a placebo group. While this is a significant finding, many older individuals have trouble hearing high frequencies. However, anything that preserves hearing is noteworthy.

Food manufacturers are required by the FDA to add folic acid to enriched grain products such as breakfast cereals, bread, pasta, and rice so that each serving contains at least 20 percent of the daily requirement. Dark leafy greens are also a good source of folic acid, as are legumes such as lentils and chickpeas. If you have loved one who needs home care, please consider VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES. Our in-home care program assists older adults in maintaining their independence at home, or can ease the transition to a new setting if needed. We handpick and hire only the most dedicated and qualified caregivers.

P.S. In the United States, many foods contain supplemental folic acid due to its benefits in protecting against birth defects.

Worn piston rings allow the passage of hot engine gases into the crankcase. If a ring job is indicated, the cost of performing this work should be compared against the cost of rebuilding the engine. This latter fix offers the advantages of providing a clean engine block to prevent cooling problems and reboring the cylinders to restore perfect roundness, thereby ensuring maximum compression, power, and control of oil consumption. The crankshaft is also machined to restore a perfect fit. On the other hand, if the crankshaft has not worn excessively, if the camshaft bearings are in good shape, and other important components are okay, then simply honing the cylinders and replacing the rings may be all that is necessary.

If your piston rings are failing you could be damaging your car with every single second of use. We recommend regular preventative maintenance to all of our coveted customers. With regular check-ups we can monitor your engine, and prevent extensive damage resulting from a problem that could be fixed right away, which would end up saving you money in the long run. Please don't wait until it needs to be towed to us.

P.S. Wear of piston rings, which are the circular components fitted into grooves in the pistons, can be confirmed by a compression test.

Carmel Valley racer to exercise newly rekindled need for speed

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHEN HE races at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca during next weekend's Red Bull U.S. Grand Prix, Carmel Valley resident Hawk Mazzotta will compete for the checkered flag in front of the largest crowd he's encountered since he first took to the track seven years ago at the age of 17. The July 20-22 event includes MotoGP — motorcycle racing's top championship series — and the American Motorcyclist Association nationals in which he's riding. But it will also mark his return to Laguna after a four-year hiatus that included soul searching and nail pounding, not to mention bull riding.

Sponsored by Spectrum Motorsports in Irvine to race a Yamaha in the extremely competitive AMA 600 Supersport class against dozens of other riders, Mazzotta is glad to be back.

"I need racing in my life," he said. "Working hard in that off time made me really appreciate the opportunity to go into a racing career and not pound nails the rest of my life."

In a sport increasingly contested by people who started riding motorcycles not long after learning to walk, Mazzotta has his work cut out for him.

"I'm 24, so I have to make it happen right now," he said. "The kids are so young these days."

Mazzotta started racing motorcycles professionally in 2000 but left to drive cars on a team with his brother, Zac, after a season that included a major crash at Daytona. In 2003, he returned to two wheels, but getting injured in another big crash gave him cause for pause.

"I wasn't sure I wanted to dedicate my whole life to motorcycles, and that's what you have to do to make it," he said.

Getting bullish

Mazzotta did carpentry work with his brother, including building a spec house, and they surfed in Nicaragua. They worked on their father's cattle ranch and got into team roping.

Then they learned of a Morgan Hill man who trains bucking bulls for rodeos.

"My brother and I would drive up every Wednesday and sign our lives away to get on these bulls," Mazzotta said. He even toyed with the idea of competitive bull riding.

But in six months, he suffered a concussion and internal bleeding, and aggravated an old leg injury after falling during his first rodeo.

Mazzotta also spent time on his own small ranch east of Carmel Valley Village working with horses and doing some carpentry. And then last fall, he received a call from a motorcycle team wanting him to substitute for an injured rider in the final races of the season. Mazzotta had barely touched a race bike in three years.

He warmed up by riding a Ducati 999 in the Toyota 200 at Willow Springs. Two weeks later, he jumped on a plane bound for Mid-Ohio raceway.

Rain kept most people off the track and delayed the races, but being one who likes riding "in the wet," he decided to practice anyway.

"Rain really evens things out. A lot of the trick stuff goes out the door, and it comes down to pure rider talent and feel," he said. "You have to be 100 percent focused. In the dry, you can get away with a lot of mistakes."

Unfortunately, another rider made one.

"He hit me and took me out," Mazzotta said. "There were only two of us on the whole track!"

Fortunately, the crash didn't sideline him. And his competitive fire was re-ignited. He recruited his mechanic from 2003 and worked feverishly to solicit sponsors and line up a bike.

Too late to get help from any of the major motorcycle manufacturers, Mazzotta settled on a 600cc Yamaha, with help from Spectrum Motorsports.

He acquired more than a dozen other sponsors, including Bravo Condoms, Shoei Helmets, Alpinestars, Dunlop and Graves, and received support from his friends and family, including girlfriend Havah Ward, who has accompanied him to every race this season.

"The moral supports is huge," he said. "It all came together for me after being out of the sport for four years."

Four out of six gears ain't bad

The season began March 7-10 at Daytona, the track where a crash at 160 mph sidelined his first big racing effort seven years earlier.

"The first lap, it was like, 'What the hell am I doing here?'"

Despite a mechanical miscalculation that left Mazzotta riding without second and sixth gears, he went faster than he had all weekend, finishing 27th out of 62 riders.

His best finish so far was at rainy Road America in Elkhart Lake, Wis., June 1-3, where he started in 29th place and finished 15th. In an extremely competitive class with many factory-sponsored riders on the latest and best equipment, any finish in the top 25 is hard earned and well respected.

And while heat, not rain, is likely at Laguna Seca, Mazzotta is thrilled to be riding during the Red Bull USGP in front of huge crowds at the track where his dad raced vintage cars not long ago.

"It's going to be rad," he said. "MotoGP is the ultimate."

When he's not focused on his own efforts, Mazzotta said he'll be rooting for Honda's Nicky Hayden, who finished first at Laguna the last two years and won the 2006 world championship, and John Hopkins, another American who rides for Suzuki. A third, Colin Edwards, known as the Texas Tornado, races a Yamaha.

"And we get to come back in September," he added. This year, Laguna Seca scheduled the AMA national championship series to return for a second date, Sept. 15-16.

The powerful Yamaha YZF-R6 affords ample wheelie opportunities, but Carmel Valley resident Hawk Mazzotta will likely keep the front wheel planted — since popping up can cut speed — until after he crosses the finish line during his race at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca's Red Bull U.S. Grand Prix this weekend.

OXYGEN TAKES WOUND THERAPY TO NEW FRONTIERS.

There's a new kind of healing at Community Hospital. It's 100-percent pure, concentrated oxygen. A higher concentration than the air we breathe. It can help mend hard-to-heal wounds, such as those often experienced by people suffering from diabetes.

Hyperbaric oxygen enhances white blood cell activity to treat infection, promotes the development of new blood vessels, and decreases swelling. You simply lie on a padded table, slide into a sealed chamber, and just breathe. The healing has begun.

Our wound care center is the only one on the Central Coast providing hyperbaric oxygen to heal wounds. And our treatment team is certified and credentialed, which means you get the highest level of expertise with the most state-of-the-art equipment.

all the way to the Chualar," she explained. "We have the potential of finding 16 species in the area, and with the varied land uses, we'll see how species' diversity differs. I'm not looking at actual numbers of bats but trying to figure out which species are where."

To find out, just before dusk on survey nights, Whitford sets out a device called an Anabat II at her study sites to record the bats' echolocation calls on a flashcard similar to that found in a digital camera.

She retrieves the bat detectors soon after dawn and downloads the calls, which Analook W software converts to graphic files. While some species' calls look similar, Whitford uses "predictors" to distinguish them from one another.

"This is a non-invasive survey, which is really nice," she said — meaning she doesn't catch any bats.

During the course of her study, Whitford might record as many as 3,000 files each month.

"I could have 100 files from a single site in one night, but it could be the same bat flying around in circles," she added.

Whitford wouldn't mind recording more and is hoping to acquire additional equipment and add survey sites.

She also said people she's met during the course of her study have been receptive and interested in the topic — a response she anticipates encountering when she gives a presentation at a bat conference in Mexico in late August.

"People are really enthused, because they don't know a lot about bats," she said. "But farmers know how beneficial they are — how many insects they eat." Many bat species are also pollinators.

Old stomping ground

The study represents a return to familiar ground for Whitford, who graduated from UC Davis with a degree in ecology and evolution, and then worked for the Santa Lucia Conservancy for seven years as a wildlife biologist.

"I always liked being outdoors, and my boss introduced me to bats," she said. After catching her first bat, she realized exactly what she wanted to study during her eventual return to graduate school. She enrolled at San Diego State last August and will get a degree in geographic information science, which she sees as the key to effective management of environmental resources on a large scale.

While monitoring the locations of different species of bats fulfills the wildlife component of her research, using tools like Google Earth and historical aerial photographs will help her paint a picture of the area's geography, down to plant species and locations of riparian corridors, and show how it has changed over time. Once she begins to analyze the summer's data, Whitford hopes to learn how the changing environment affects the bats, and what elements determine where they live and how they travel through the area.

"It's critical to natural resources management and ecology to have a landscape perspective on what's going on in the ecosystem, and to understand how the human landscape rating the materials on site or delivering them in bulk to a processor.

When the law was introduced for the council's consideration in June, city administrator Rich Guillen said the Monterey County Integrated Waste Management Task Force developed it to help jurisdictions avoid potential $10,000-per-day fines for failing to meet the state mandate that at least half of all waste be recycled. Carmel meets that threshold most of the time, but Guillen said the state may soon raise it to 75 percent.

The ordinance identifies "designated recovered and reusable materials" as:

- masonry, including asphalt, concrete, rock, stone and brick;

- wood, including untreated, unpainted and uncontaminated lumber, fencing and construction wood;

- trees, tree parts, shrubs, stumps, logs, brush and any other plants cleared from a site;

- scrap metal such as pipes, siding, window and door frames, slate and fences;

- wood and asphalt shingles, stone, slate and other roofing materials; and

- salvageable items such as wallboard, doors, windows, fixtures, toilets, sinks, bath tubs, architectural remnants and appliances.

"Demolition and construction debris," 50 percent of which must be diverted, according to the ordinance, includes discarded materials that are not water soluble and are non-hazardous, as well as clean cardboard, paper, plastic, wood and metal scraps.

Guillen said the City of Salinas already adopted the ordinance, and other Monterey County jurisdictions are poised to.

"This ordinance was developed as model ordinance proposed to be used countywide," he said last month.

During the drafting of the law, city planners asked contractors Al Saroyan and Chris Tescher and other "interested parties," what they thought of the proposed rule, according to Guillen. He said their concerns focused on whether the recyclables would need to be separated at the job site, which could create clutter on the property and streets.

"After deliberating on this issue with the members of the subcommittee and Monterey Regional Waste Management District officials, the building contractors were satisfied with the requirements outlined in the ordinance," Guillen reported.

The law also provides exceptions for certain projects. A waste reduction and recycling plan need not be submitted, nor the associated administrative fee paid, for:

- projects requiring no building permits;
- residential construction of less than $20,000 in value;
- commercial construction of less than $40,000 in value;
- residential demolition/deconstruction of less than $5,000 in value;

- commercial demolition/deconstruction of less than $10,000 in value;

- roofing projects;
- work requiring only plumbing, electrical or mechanical permits;

- seismic tie-down projects; and

- installation of certain prefabricated structures, as well as other minor work.

At the June meeting, councilman Mike Cunningham wondered if the contractors found those exceptions acceptable.

Mayor Sue McCloud, who has been active in developing the ordinance and bringing it to the city for adoption, responded, "It's been at least a year that we've been dickering with this, and at this point, it's been accepted by the task force."

Guillen also said the law could be amended later if needed.

Following the council's unanimous vote in favor of the ordinance at its introduction June 5, the proposal returned for a second reading and final approval at the July 3 meeting. Without discussion or any modifications, the council unanimously adopted it, and as with most new city laws, it is set to take effect 30 days later.

The state may soon require that 75 percent of a town's waste be recycled

Jazz and Blues Company hosts adventurous New York jazz quintet

By CHRIS COUNTS

JAZZ SINGER Barbara Sfraga insists she and her adventurous musical partners are committed to achieving some measure of commercial success. They're just taking the scenic route to get there.

"None of us want to be starving artists," Sfraga said. "We feel like we're taking a longer road because we're exploring new territory. When artists do that, they often have more staying power because what they're doing is real."

Barbara Sfraga and Center Search Quest perform at the Jazz and Blues Company on San Carlos Street Saturday, June 14, offering local music lovers a glimpse of jazz might sound like in the future.

"We transcend our instruments," Sfraga said. "The bass plays the drums, the voice plays the bass and so on. We're anything but traditional. We operate with no boundaries."

While each of the New York-based quintet's members has a firm foundation in jazz, they're not afraid to put a new spin on a jazz classic or a jazz spin on a great rock 'n' roll song. When Sfraga and company aren't reworking a tune by Billie Holiday, Hoagy Carmichael or Duke Ellington, they're reinventing Cream's "Sunshine of Your Love," Jerry Lee Lewis' "Great Balls of Fire" or Bob Dylan's "Every Grain of Sand."

"We like the fact we can turn on a dime and go anywhere," she said. "We can morph into anything at anytime."

'Kindred spirits'

The story of Barbara Sfraga and Center Search Quest began in 1989, when bass player Christopher Dean Sullivan joined with percussionist Michael T.A. Thompson to form Center Search Quest. Sfraga stepped into Harlem's Lenox Lounge one night in 2002 when Thompson and Sullivan were playing and was immediately captivated by the duo's sound.

"I recognized immediately that we were kindred spirits," recalled Sfraga, who quickly teamed up with the pair.

Pianist, vocalist and songwriter Mala Waldron joined the fledgling trio in 2003, and reed player Allen Wan was added to the group a short time later.

According to Sfraga, the members of the group have remarkable chemistry with one another.

"This group is like a family," she said. "We're tight friends who would do anything for each other. There is a wonderful give and take among us and there's a camaraderie you normally don't find in the music world."

Apparently, the players don't have to worry about their egos getting in the way of the creative process. Sfraga said the group will soon drop her name from its title, a move she has long endorsed.

"We're really a collective," she explained. "We're in that awkward stage between names. I never wanted my name [out in front], but the others fought me. Now they're seeing why. We're getting reviewed as my project. It's our project."

Despite the group's somewhat unconventional approach to jazz, Sfraga is convinced they will find a larger audience.

"It takes a little longer to reach the ear canal, but once it gets there, it stays there," she said of the group's sound.

This week's performance in Carmel showcases a group that is as comfortable playing in front of an audience as they are recording in a studio.

"We're having so much fun," she said. "That really shows up when we play live. The music is very infectious because there's so much love on the stage."

The concert starts at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $40. The venue is located at Fifth and San Carlos. For more info, call (831) 624-6432.

Barbara Sfraga and Center Search Quest — self-described kindred spirits — bring their infectious sound to KRML's Jazz and Blues Co. this week.

Chef Ramirez follows the call of the wild at Jack London's

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

EXECUTIVE CHEF Jose Ramirez came to the Monterey Peninsula 27 years ago from Tepalcatepec,

Executive Chef Jose Ramirez was influenced by Cajun chef Paul Prudhomme as exemplified in his menu at Jack London's Grill and Taproom.

Michoacan, Mexico, and immediately snagged two jobs in Carmel-by-the-Sea restaurant: He became a dishwasher at Charlie O's by day, and a dishwasher by night for Jack London's.

He's never left Jack London's, staying with the popular grill and tap room through three moves — all within a few blocks of one another — rising through the ranks from dishwasher to prep cook to cook to executive chef.

His brother Antonio had paved the way for him and was already established here in Jack London's kitchen before Jose arrived, a 20-year old Mexican cowboy eager to make his way on the Central Coast of California.

He learned English by watching television, reading and a lot of dictionary work, he said. And at the same time he watched the prep cook and the chef while he washed dishes, and within a year and a half was working full time at Jack London's, prepping while someone else tended the dishes.

At that time, Jack London's was a small but much frequented establishment tucked away in a courtyard between Fifth and Sixth on the east side of San Carlos. The menu was of the pizza and hamburgers genre, and Jose learned this "basic stuff," as he called it, and the preparation of soups and sauces, as well.

The restaurant then, as now, was co-owned by manager Steve Whitfill and a San Francisco attorney named Jack Hill who joined forces in 1986 when they bought Jack's.

When the small pub-style eatery outgrew its quarters in the courtyard, it changed locations in the early '90s, moving onto San Carlos, still between Fifth and Sixth, to Cactus Jacks, with Mexican fare incorporated into the menu.

All the while, Jose had been working alongside Adan Rodriguez, learning from him. By that time, Jose was reading cookbooks and culinary magazines, getting ideas for the expanded menu with a Mexican influence.

"I read how to make new dishes, and then I'd do it," he explained.

Still another move was in store. When the space occupied by the Red Lion pub became available in Su Vecino Court one block west on Dolores Street — still between Fifth and Sixth — Jack's moved in, refurbishing it to make it the attractive restaurant it is today with its dark green plether booths and mahogany walls and ceiling in the main dining room, which has a diner capacity of 65. In contrast, the informal tap room seats 35. As a bar oriented to sports, television sets abound. Outdoor dining in the court is pleasant on sunny days and dogs are always welcome.

Manager Whitfill hails from Texas, but has a bachelor's degree from Louisiana University in Baton Rouge. He has a predilection for the unique cuisine of that region — both creole and Cajun — and to expand the menu at Jack's, he had Jose attend a seminar in Monterey given by Paul Prudhomme, the nationally famous Cajun cook. Prudhomme demonstrated the art of blackened white fish which Jose incorporated into Jack's menu, and jambalaya, which is now served once a month as a special, along with creole dishes.

"I like to cook Mexican food but I became curious about Cajun — it's spicy, like Mexican. I like both, but what I learned at the seminar was a good basis for what we serve here now," Chef Jose said.

This influence can be seen in the present Jack London's grill and taproom menu under the heading "Louisiana Purchase." Chef Jose makes a Big Easy gumbo du jour in a 20 ounce bowl, shrimp (prawn) creole, andouille stuffed pork chop, artichoke creole, Bayou fried chicken breast dinner,

Memorable dishes at the Hyatt and great wine at Cima Collina

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

I'M A tad late in reporting this, but Mark Ayers has signed on as executive chef at TusCA, the Hyatt Regency Monterey's culinary newcomer. He's also executive chef at the Highlands Inn. Ayers joined the team of consulting wine director Mark Buzan, Chef Neil Dunn and general manager Darryl Brewer. I wasn't so hot for TusCA the last time I was in, but a recent visit proved quite promising. Service — my biggest complaint — seemed to have worked out its kinks. The kitchen, although not quite yet flawless, put out memorable dishes such as an oven roasted seasonal vegetable platter appetizer, braised ox tail ragoût paparadelle and cacciucco (Tuscan fish stew). There were a few misses, but mostly in part to cooking times, and not taste combinations or quality of ingredients, which were spot on.

LONDON'S

Cajun chicken fettuccine, and of course, the blackened white fish, generally using the firm-fleshed tilapia.

An in-house smoker was added to the kitchen, and Chef Jose learned to smoke baby back ribs and St. Louis-style ribs. The baby backs are referred to on the menu as "lean and mean," while the St. Louis variety have "more meat to eat."

The specials at Jack's are always something to look forward to. For instance, on Tuesdays Chef Jose prepares chile verde and a chile rellenos; on Fridays a different fish dish is offered, such as the recent pecan-crust salmon with a red pepper coulis. This weekend, he's offering Alaskan halibut with mango salsa — a long way from the pizza and hamburgers that made up the menu at the earlier Jack's. Hamburgers still appear on the permanent menu, notably the Call of the Wild Burger, now simply referred to as the Wild Burger, and a vegetarian garden burger.

Although fish and shellfish are always popular items at Jack's, also featured are a full eight-rib rack of New Zealand roast lamb with herb and garlic crust; a 12-ounce rib eye steak; andouille pork chop stuffed with andouille sausage and bread crumbs and smoked prime rib au jus.

Chef Jose is assisted in the kitchen by Rodriguez, brother Antonio, Sigifredo Orosco, Mauricio Michante, Alejandro Cruz, and Francisco Hernandez.

Aside from his restaurant life, Chef Jose is a family man, married to Silvia, who has given him two sons: Jose Miguel, now 23, married with two sons of his own and two stepchildren, and Francisco, 19, who plays football in Monterey and Pacific Grove. His mother and father, three other brothers and five sisters still live in Michoacan. He and Silvia plan a family visit in December.

Jose has inspired his sons to join him in learning the martial arts with instructor Bob Ingersoll in Seaside. "In 1973 in Mexico, I saw a Bruce Lee movie, and I liked it so much. When I moved here, I had the opportunity," he said. He has learned Tae Kwon Do, then switched to Hap Kido. Although he doesn't do tournaments, he holds a fourth degree black belt and currently has a fourth degree masters belt. Son Jose Miguel has a brown belt in Hap Kido, and Francisco, a black belt.

Jack London's Grill and Taproom is located off Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth in Su Vecino Court, Carmel-by-the-Sea. It is open daily for lunch and dinner from 11 a.m. until 11 p.m., with the bar remaining open until midnight on Friday and Saturday. For information or reservations, call (831) 624-2336.

The Hyatt Monterey overlooks the Del Monte Golf Course, and with a new executive chef, the food and atmosphere are almost as good as the view.

Later in the week, I was in between meetings and in need of an hour of so of Internet connection, so I swung back by the Hyatt and thoroughly enjoyed the Fireplace Lounge's new look (and T-Mobile connectivity). I admit, I was super stressed upon arrival, but before I was able to bang out my first email, the comfort of a sleek new butter leather chair and the background tunes of "Whatever Lola wants, Lola get..." coaxed me into a state of calmness and, dare I say, feeling kinda hip by Monterey standards. The new lobby décor is undeniably sexy, the music selections chic, and if I weren't in work crisis mode, I'd have ordered myself a Grey Goose martini straight up with two olives in a heartbeat and soaked up the refreshingly urban vibe. My advice: Give TusCA a shot — it's getting better and better — and if you're in the neighborhood and looking for a nightcap or a place for a saucy tête à tête, the Fireplace Lounge is worth putting on a pair of party shoes and a fresh coat of lipgloss.

TusCA at Hyatt Regency Monterey, 1 Old Golf Course Road, Monterey, (831) 372-1234, open for lunch daily from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., and for dinner daily from 5:30 until 10 p.m.

■ Cima Collina's tasting room is open

I swung by Cima Collina's new Carmel digs and Tasting Room Guru Michael Donahue ran me through the current releases, which all blew my mind. Winemaker Annette Hoff had the chops to make kick-ass wine before she took on Cima Collina and her wine is really at the top of my most loved favorites coming from Monterey County. And the price points are insanely reasonable for the quality — especially with her Pinot Noirs. Swing by and check out the fantastic art exhibit by Carol Chapman and Fred Slautterback. The place is slightly tricky to find — it's tucked on the west side of San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh in the Paseo Courtyard, but well worth the hunt. Plus, the tasting room is open until 6 p.m. (or so), so on Fridays (wink wink) you can hit Cima Collina (and Southern Latitudes Galante's tasting rooms) before the Jazz Series at Carmel Plaza.

■ The summer drink to be seen with — rosé

Last summer, New York Times' Sunday Styles declared rosé the official drink of young American cool. The trend continues full speed ahead and there are several local wineries adding to pure summer bliss with their versions of this pretty refresher:

■ Ventana Vineyards 2005 Dry Rosado ($14);

■ Marilyn Remark Winery 2005 Rosé de Saignee ($22);

■ Tudor Wines Radog 2005 Rosé of Pinot Noir ($16);

■ Hahn Estates 2005 Vent de Lucia/Dry Rose ($7);

■ Heller Estate 2006 Merlot Rose ($20).

Bruce Forman and Cow Bop performing last Friday at the kickoff of Carmel Plaza's summer Friday evening music and wine-tasting series.

■ The 15th Annual Winemakers' Celebration is coming up

Mark your calendars now for Saturday, Aug. 11. Monterey County Vintners and Growers Association is hosting its 15th Annual Winemakers Celebration at Custom House Plaza. Tickets are $35 in advance, $40 at the door or $50 for VIP admission, which gets you a Riedel Sparkling Wine Glass

— 1967 to 2007 —

Forty years ago, these pristine coastal highlands captivated Clint Eastwood. Today, his vision has inspired a community that's not only close to Carmel, but one that will always remain in harmony with nature.

High atop the Monterey peninsula, though less than ten minutes from Carmel and Monterey Bay, Tehama offers you both unspoiled vistas and easy access to city life. From here, you can see Point Lobos, Carmel Bay, Monterey Bay and more. What you can't see is the tireless attention paid to stewardship of the land — 85 percent of which will remain untouched.

"Taking an interest in the land was the only way to protect it."
Clint Eastwood

upgrade and select reserve wine samples. Since it's a special anniversary year and crystal is the worldwide symbol for celebration, each attendee will be entered to win a set of four Bohemia Crystal glasses etched with their family's name or logo, paired with a Bohemia Crystal decanter (donated by Wine Concepts). They're giving away 15 fabulous gift sets — the only catch is you must purchase your ticket before July 15. As usual, there will be live music, wine-centric seminars and a silent auction. To see who's pouring this year — the list is long and there are several newcomers — visit www.montereywines.org.

■ Bye-bye Masters, hello Pebble Beach Food & Wine Event

OK, the name isn't all that all that imaginative or inspiring, but the Pebble Beach Company is in cahoots with David Bernahl (the Richie Rich look-a-like from Pacific Tweed) and Rob Weakley (formerly of the Highlands Inn) to launch a brand new epicurean extravaganza styled after the Concours d'Elegance. The dates for the inaugural event are March 27-30, 2008. Details are coming shortly as celebrity chefs sign on for the festivities — more than 125 wineries and 25 celebrity chefs are slated to participate. Stay posted for more details at www.pebblebeach.com.

P.G. staff recommends sales tax increase

By KELLY NIX

IN THE City of Pacific Grove's latest step toward financial sustainability, city staff have recommended placing a measure on the Nov. 6 ballot that would increase the city's sales tax by 1 percent to help pay for services.

If approved by voters, the sales tax, which would climb from 7.25 percent to 8.25 percent, could "prevent severe service reductions, restore reserves and fiscal health, and/or fund services that are currently unaffordable," indicates the staff report released Thursday afternoon.

At its July 18 meeting, the P.G. City Council is expected to weigh in on the tax increase, which would raise an estimated $1.3 million in revenue per year.

The city's staff recommended the ballot measure include a "sunset provision," which would eliminate the tax after five years unless extended by the voters in a future election.

The staff also suggested appointing a subcommittee of the city council to develop specific ballot language for the council's consideration at its Aug. 1 meeting.

According to the report, the tax increase could prevent layoffs and avoid reductions in the services the city provides its residents.

A recent survey conducted by the city indicated 53 percent of Pacific Grove residents support a sales tax increase. While the survey suggested relatively strong support for services, there were also significant concerns about waste and financial mismanagement.

The cost of placing a measure on the ballot could be $20,000 to $30,000, the staff report outlines.

If the city council votes against placing the measure on the ballot, city staff will develop options for restructuring city services.

an aspiring glass artist.

"If you're going to be a successful artist, you have to be a business person," said Leonoff, whose work will be featured in an exhibit, "New Glass Forms," which opens Saturday, July 14, at the Masaoka Design Gallery in Carmel Valley Village. "You need a marketing strategy. If people don't see your work, you'll be a starving artist."

After graduating from Pepperdine University in 2002, Leonoff moved back to Carmel Valley as he pondered his next move.

"I didn't want to go the corporate route," recalled Leonoff, who graduated from Carmel High School in 1997. "I was more interested in becoming an entrepreneur."

Before leaving for Pepperdine, Leonoff worked for Masaoka creating stained glass. When he returned to the Monterey Peninsula, he reconnected with the Carmel Valley gallery owner, who introduced him to the wonders of blowing glass.

"Alan opened my eyes to glass as an art form," he said. "After I started blowing glass, I discovered I had a passion for it."

Despite his affinity for glass blowing, Leonoff admitted he feels more like a student than a master.

"It's not easy," he conceded. "You don't master it in a couple years. It takes a lifetime."

In an effort to refine his skills, Leonoff has made annual summertime pilgrimages to art schools and workshop centers. Just recently, he returned from a two-week stint at the Pilchuck Glass School in Washington — a trip he described as a "step up the ladder."

"It's a hard school to get into," he explained. "It's a very creative place where a lot of people in the glass world want to go."

The young glass artist learned a few tricks while he was away.

"I've been doing a lot of engraving to create imagery, color patterns and texture on the glass," he explained.

Leonoff and Masaoka will present a glass-blowing exhibition Saturday at the gallery from 5 to 6 p.m. An opening reception will follow from 6 to 8 p.m.

"I love the process and the medium," Leonoff said. "And I like sharing the process so people can understand and appreciate the art."

The gallery is located at 13766 Center St., behind Will's Fargo Restaurant, in Carmel Valley Village. For more information, call (831) 659-4953 or visit www.alanmasaoka.com.

Art walk returns to Pacific Grove

The art walk returns to Pacific Grove Friday, July 13, from 6 to 9 p.m., just one month after reports of its demise turned out to be unfounded. After the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce announced June 12 that it would pull its support of the event, gallery owners agreed to fund the art walk on an interim basis. Meanwhile, Pacific Grove Mayor Dan Cort said the city would back the event as well.

According to gallery owner Robert Lewis, the chamber of Creating pieces such as this vase requires glass blowing and scoring techniques which can take years to master, according to Nick Leonoff.

commerce will obtain an alcohol permit, and insurance problems have also been ironed out. "The event will really be back to normal when we serve wine again," Lewis said.

Artist offers tips for free

Longtime Carmel artist Dick Crispo will present a free demonstration in acrylic and mixed media painting at the Carmel Art Association Wednesday, July 18, at 7 p.m. The nonprofit art association is located on the west side of Dolores, between Fifth and Sixth. Holland meets C.V. at Bernardus dinner

MICHELIN 2-STAR Chef Onno Kokmeijer of Ciel Bleu Restaurant in Amsterdam's Hotel Okura will "integrate contemporary California cuisine with Dutch ingredients and techniques" when he and Bernardus Executive Chef Cal Stamenov collaborate on an elaborate dinner at Marinus Restaurant Thursday, July 26.

The country's small, but the Netherlands' "cuisine-loving community has created culinary traditions based around exotic recipes, vegetables, herbs and spices from all four corners of the world," according to organizers, and Stamenov and Kokmeijer emphasize quality, simplicity, local expertise and methodology in their creation and preparation of recipes.

The dinner, priced at $150 per person (including tax and gratuity), will begin at 6:30 p.m. with an outdoor Champagne reception, followed by a six-course tasting menu paired with award-winning wines from Bernardus Winery.

For reservations, call (831) 658-3550 or visit www.bernardus.com.

districts, nearly 50,000 are registered to vote.

Tulett, who is chair of the Bay Area Outreach Committee, a voter outreach program composed of registrars from 12 counties and the Secretary of State, is hoping to boost registration in districts where few people participate. She said there will be a bigger drive by the group in next year's presidential election to motivate people to vote.

"The group will meet more often," she said. "The efforts are certainly going to be higher."

The BAOC usually meets at least one time before each election to discuss election issues, including ways to get voters registered and to the polls.

The campaign to motivate Monterey County residents to register and vote will include radio and television commercials, bilingual fliers and brochures, and press releases, Tulett said.

Although registering more people to vote is a good step, making sure they cast a ballot is another hurdle.

"You can lead someone to fill out a registration form," Tulett said, "but you can't lead them to vote."

"It's an ongoing issue in general," said 3rd District Supervisor Simon Salinas. "You have a lack of interest and apathy."

And Districts 1 and 3 have a high percentage of migrant workers and undocumented residents. While their numbers are counted for creating legislative districts, many of them can't or simply don't vote. "A lot of the folks that come here and work in agriculture don't want to establish roots," Salinas said. "But slowly, more and more of those people are realizing they have to engage in local politics."

In District 2, the North County area represented by supervisor Lou Calcagno, nearly 11,909 of its 30,709 registered voters took to the polls. In District 4, supervisor Jerry Smith's area, which includes Seaside, South Salinas and Marina, 12,687 of its 29,924 registered voters cast their ballots.

Prior to the June election,

Salinas and Armenta said they tried to rally voters, often going door to door. But an off-year special election, a confusing ballot and the belief by many a general plan doesn't have a direct impact on daily life didn't help bring throngs to the polls.

"It was tough to get people interested in the general plan election, with all the technical jargon," Salinas said. "And it's difficult dealing with people who don't have a history of participating."

Although the 2008 presidential election will undoubtedly bring out voters who would otherwise stay home, Salinas said ongoing voter outreach, not just before an election, is necessary.

"It's just trying to get people engaged," he said.

Because life happens in the kitchen.

which are considered by the state to be Areas of Special Biological Significance.

The reservoir could also be the site for the wind generators, which could also be used to purify the water for potable needs in case of an emergency, according to Cort. The reservoir, which hasn't been used in decades, could provide an alternative water supply for the city's golf course and parks.

Ecosphere spokesman Jean Michel Cousteau, son of the late Jacques Cousteau, said the system is "revolutionary in the fact that it will use only the power of the sun and wind to create and store the energy needed to run water filtration components, pumps or motors" and can be used to "provide water and electricity for a small village. Multiple systems could be used throughout a village to power its school, water system, buildings and communications systems."

Cort said the city hasn't yet given up the idea of installing solar panels on city buildings and is in discussion with two other companies about the possibility.

"We are also talking about possibly a bond measure to buy the equipment ourselves," he said. "We could realize savings of $20,000 to $30,000 a month."

BACH

Yansouni said. "Three years ago, we were searching for our soul, and the benefits of having Jesse take over were a lot higher than the drawbacks of not having a full-time person."

"Jesse has been ideal, of course," said conductor Bruno Weil. Noting that Read has played with the Bach Fest orchestra nearly 30 years, Weil added, "The greatest thing for me has been the wonderful communication. You don't have to convince him or explain things to him artistically."

Concertmaster Elizabeth Wallfisch was equally enthusiastic: "Jesse has just been fantastic. When he took over, morale had dropped like a stone, but now it's very high and there's a tremendous sense of expectation and civility."

But Weil and Wallfisch didn't disagree that a full-time manager who lives in Carmel would be a good idea.

"There should be more presence here," Weil said. "Jesse lives in Vancouver, and I am not very close, either. I am in Germany."

"I've wondered how on earth Jesse's managed, actually," Wallfisch said. She said a lot of the credit for keeping things running goes to finance and administration manager Elizabeth Pasquinelli.

"The festival is such a big ship, it's essential to have someone fulltime, but it's got to be the right person," Wallfisch added.

The search for his replacement will take several months, Read said. He and Yansouni were careful to allay any fears that the new person might be hired without consultation from the musicians who give the Bach Festival its artistic excellence.

"We're going to be extremely prudent and careful," Yansouni said. "Jesse will be consulted, and so will Bruno Weil and Libby."

The new executive director doesn't have to be an expert in Baroque music, Read and Yansouni agreed.

"But you have to respect other people and like to understand what their experiences have been and understand the community," Yansouni said.

The Carmel Bach Festival runs from July 14 to Aug. 4 and offers dozens of concerts and lectures. For program and ticket information, see the special section inside this edition of The Pine Cone, or go to www.bachfestival.org.

HOW LONG WILL YOUR HOME LAST?

We don't tend to think of houses aging to the point of being uninhabitable, but it can happen if homes are not maintained with care. The same is even truer of the appliances in our homes, without proper care they can become unusable.

The National Association of Home Builders recently issued a study that estimated the amount of time various parts of a home should last. The most basic parts of a home—its foundation, drywall, plaster, pipes, basement and framing—should last at least fifty years, the study asserts.

The median age of a house in America today is 32 years, four years older than when the NAHB did its last such survey in 1993, meaning that homebuyers should be that much more aware of the condition of the most basic elements in the construction of the home they choose to buy. Some of those elements, though, have far more durability than they used to. Kitchen cabinets, for example, used to last 15 to 20 years; now, they're expected to last 50 years. A good paint job used to last 3 to 5 years; now, thanks to chemical improvements, it lasts 15.

Some things, mainly because they've become more complex, don't last as long—refrigerators, for example, and water heaters. You can view the complete NAHB study at www.nahb.org/fileUpload_details.aspx?contentID=72475. For answers to your questions call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

Don't let it go by

IF PEOPLE who live in Paris hardly ever visit the Eiffel Tower, and most Chinese have never laid eyes on the Great Wall, and many residents of New York have never set foot at the top of the Empire State Building, it's understandable, we suppose, that so many Monterey Peninsula residents let the Bach Festival go by every summer without attending a concert.

Things that are always there can easily be taken for granted, or can even seem boring. And some people may not be expecting the performance level of local concerts to be very high. (The Peninsula only has 100,000 residents — not exactly a big city that would readily attract world-class talent.)

But we've spent quite a bit of time backstage during warmups for this year's Bach Fest, and we would like to call everyone's attention to the exceptional talent found among the orchestra, soloists and chorus that will be performing not only works by J.S. Bach, but also by Vivaldi, Beethoven, Handel and numerous other composers during the festival, which runs through Aug. 4. These musicians come to Carmel every summer from all parts of the globe and, truly, the quality of their musicianship is on par with anything you would hear at Lincoln Center or the Royal Albert Hall.

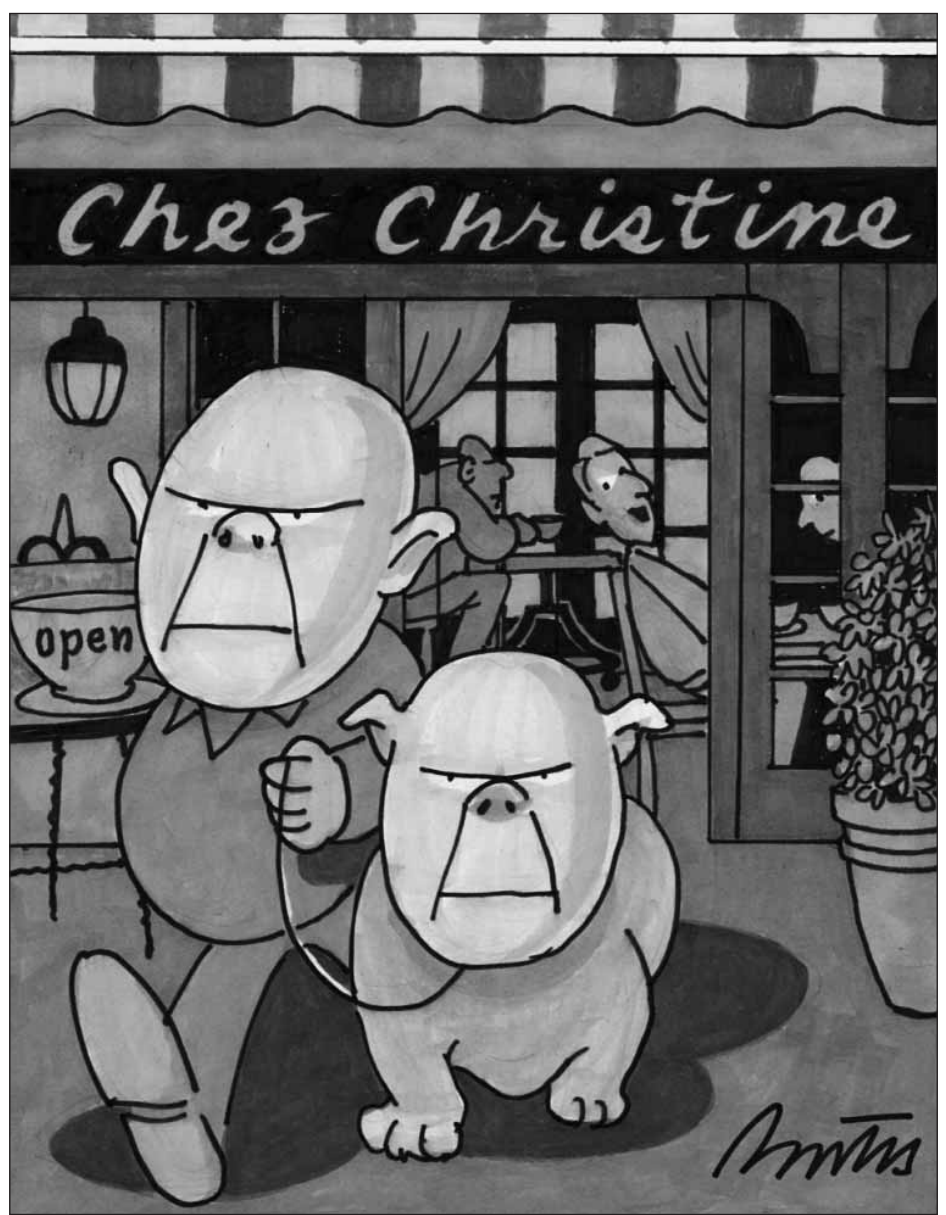

We asked Maestro Bruno Weil which concert he's most excited about, and he singled out the "Aha! Bach" program on Tuesday evenings as one which would be particularly good for people who aren't very familiar with the works of Bach. The Sunday program includes the St. Matthew Passion, which has been called the greatest classical work of all time. The Mission Concert (Wednesday evenings) is always impressive — not only for its music, but for its setting. Etc., etc.

Some might suggest it's an obligation to your community to patronize local arts groups. But nevermind any altruistic or civic-minded motivations. The Bach Fest is so good, you owe it to yourself to attend.

Civility at last?

IN A democracy, losers can be nearly as numerous as winners. An election, after all, can be decided by a 50.1 percent to 49.9 percent margin — or even smaller. With that in mind, we'd like to congratulate everybody at the board of supervisors' hearing this week for their willingness to compromise in the search for a county general plan. And we'd like to remind them that a promise to cooperate doesn't just extend to circumstances when they get their way. It also means being civil when they lose. The way things have started out, when GPU5 is finished, it's inevitable both sides will feel they've won some and lost some. Hard as it may seem to believe, it's possible they will then shake hands and congratulate each other for their sincerity and good faith — instead of calling each other names in the paper, filing lawsuits and circulating petitions. After everything they've been through, the people of Monterey County deserve no less.

The only hope for preservation?

Dear Editor,

We have seen costly advertisements in your paper suggesting the Leidigs are unique and perhaps our only hope for the preservation of the old Carmel Convalescent Hospital. Actually, they have no choice. Existing law requires that the historic building be preserved and the exterior be treated in accordance with the Secretary of Interior standards.

Some time ago, an architect from San Francisco asked me to investigate the property. His client wanted a determination of a feasible use and conforming design for the hospital within the law. He was too late, as Leidig already had an option, but he exemplified a commonplace approach.

The Leidigs seem to be telling us that they will undertake costly preservation because of their family's love for our community. Let us be realistic: The San Francisco developer I represented knew of the historic building, the law and the costs. Any builder would.

If the Leidigs' high-density project, which conflicts radically with the existing general plan, is rejected, we can hope that another buyer will come along and will propose a project that will not upset the entire neighborhood. We have the signatures of more than 600 people who oppose the Leidigs' annexation. Another builder may be willing to conform with the general plan, perhaps make fewer millions, and we neighbors would be supporters.

Minority opinion?

Dear Editor,

The Carmel Convalescent Hospital project is not about "the mere idea of redevelopment" or "workforce housing." It is about annexation to Carmel-by-the-Sea. It is about increasing density of "one of the best places in the world to live." It is about money-making by developers who are not residents of Carmel.

The developer has proposed annexation and rezoning without submitting a development plan for review by the city and by its residents. His family has accused residents opposing annexation of being a "minority," and yet:

ple opposing annexation have been obtained — with very little effort and in a very short period of time. Given the population of this city, this is hardly representative of a “minority.”

■ Among the many sections of the city’s general plan governing annexation and zoning of sphere of influence areas, Section O1-21 requires the city to have a plan for annexations. As of this date, Carmel does not have such a plan. Therefore, the developer’s proposal for annexation to our city and increased density would require our city to violate its own general plan.

This “place for free expression” should heed the words of Perry Newberry, our former mayor. He ran on this platform: “If you hope to see Carmel become a city ... if you want its growth boosted ... if you have less regard for the unique character of Carmel than for the opportunity of money making ... if you truly want Carmel to become a bustling hustling wide-awake lively metropolis ... don’t vote for Perry Newberry.” The residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea responded by overwhelmingly voting Mr. Newberry into office.

Dog mishaps

Dear Editor,

My wife and I, residents of Camel for 30 years, are becoming increasingly intolerant of the freedom dogs have in our town.

Recently, while returning my yard waste receptacle to my backyard, a dog on a leash with a “friendly” owner leaped at me and bit through my glove, opening a wound on my hand. Thus a police report, conversations with a veterinarian’s office, a doctor visit, a tetanus shot, penicillin for five days and other hassles that I didn’t need.

On a walk to town a week ago, we observed a woman with two young girls walking out of a local restaurant. One of the girls stepped in a fresh mess of sloppy dog feces. Obviously, mother was very angry and frustrated.

On another occasion, we were walking on Lincoln Street when a large female dog with a woman in front of us abruptly stopped, squatted and urinated on the sidewalk, leaving a nice puddle around which we needed to navigate.

While walking on the beach one day in the past we saw a young woman in a bathing outfit sunning herself and resting. A male dog ambled up to her, lifted its leg and urinated on her. She was furious and probably wanted to kill the “beast,” but it ran off to its owner somewhere.

We know that Carmel likes being labeled a “dog-friendly town,” but more and more we are observing and experiencing happenings such as those indicated above. I don’t know if there are answers for these problems without being more restrictive, but I believe more attention needs to be given to concerns of the local citizens as well as visitors.

We know others who feel as we do.

Gene Tolhurst,
Carmel

Wonderful windows

Dear Editor,

As a resident of Carmel, I want to express my kudos to the window designer at Wilkes Bashford. I appreciate how often the windows are changed and how innovative and current they are. It is a real inspiration for me when I see those window as I pass the “gateway” to downtown. Bravo for taking such care and putting so much thought into your work. It really shows, and you should know that it is being appreciated.

Harrison Library book sale

THE FRIENDS of Harrison Memorial Library will host its 35th annual book sale Aug. 16-18 in the hall and patio of All Saints Church at Lincoln Street and Ninth Avenue. The event is a major fundraiser for the group, which helps buy materials and pay for programs at Carmel’s main and children’s libraries.

Held the same weekend as the Monterey Historic Automobile Races at Laguna Seca and the Pebble Beach Concours d’Elegance, the sale will feature “a vast collection of donated and sorted books (hardcover and paperback), CDs, records, collectibles and tapes offered at extremely modest prices,” according to the group, which declared it “a very popular Carmel event!”

Shoppers are encouraged to stop in, browse and buy. Refreshments will be available. For more information, call (831) 626-8845.

Sandy Claws By Margot Petit Nichols

FIDDLE MADSEN, 6, was a little, round, 8-week-old ball of fluff when Dad Ken discovered and adopted him while passing through Fiddletown on a road trip.

The fact that Fiddle was almost completely blind and partially deaf mattered not to him, so in love with the little Australian shepherd was he.

Five years ago, Dad Ken married Mom Susan, whose golden retriever, Molly, became Fiddle's sister. And, more than that, Molly, then 8, became Fiddle's eyes and ears, bringing Fiddle back to Mom and Dad when he wandered too far down Carmel Beach on an outing.

Molly died not long ago and Fiddle misses his sister's companionship and her kind ministrations. But life goes on, and Mom and Dad bring Fiddle down to Scenic Road twice a day in Fiddle's spiffy, mint condition 1940 Buick convertible with pristine white walls. Fiddle sits in the back seat and either rests his chin on the folded convertible top, enjoying the sea breeze playing in his fur and tossing his ears about, or rests his paws on the front seat, "like Snoopy," looking between Mom and Dad.

Fiddle, now completely deaf, is no longer able to go down by the water because he could scamper off and not hear his folks calling to him or see them from a distance. But he enjoys his walks on the Scenic walking path and saying hello to other dogs out for a stroll.

Every so often Fiddle attends Aussie training camp in Prunedale, where the proprietor is so taken with him, he's allowed to sleep in the trainer's bedroom.

Mom and Dad have a trip to Italy planned for later this year. They'll have no qualms about Fiddle: He'll be in good hands in Prunedale.

BACH

Carmel Bach Festival

Inside

- Mozart, Beethoven, Handel join Bach on ambitious, colorful programs
- Profile of J.S. Bach
- Concert schedule & ticket info

JULY 14 - AUGUST 4, 2007

70th Bach Fest also offers Mozart, Beethoven and Handel

ONE OF the strengths of the Carmel Bach Festival has long been its ability to combine baroque and more modern music with class and elegance.

This year's Saturday night concerts (July 14, 21 and 28 at 8 p.m.) are a good example, offering well known pieces by Bach and little known ones by more recent composers who were invariably influenced by him.

The works by Bach on the Saturday program include two cantatas, BWV 70, Wachet! betet! betet! wachet! (Watch ye! pray ye! pray ye! watch ye!), and BWV 110, Unser Mund sei voll Lachens (Make our mouth full of laughter), along with the A Major Concerto for harpsichord and the D Major Suite. So far, this program promises to be pure pleasure since the pieces will be surely be very well played and well sung, as they invariably are in the Carmel festival.

Afterwards, the Saturday program, conducted by Bruno Weil, gets more adventurous, with pieces by two later composers who followed in Bach's footsteps. Every western composer since Bach has been influenced by him, from Brahms to Miles, but they don't always admit as much in the titles of their pieces. Arvo Part, the Estonian musician born in 1935, wasn't a bit shy about identifying his inspiration, writing "Collage Ueber Bach" in 1964. Part grew up Soviet, with all the stylistic restrictions that implies, and his breakthrough came around the time of this piece, with his fervent adoption of older techniques, polyphony and Gregorian chant. "Collage Ueber Bach" is one of his first pieces in this style. It should be an interesting performance.

The Saturday finale will be a choral work by German composer Max Reger (1873-1916), who drew heavily on the counterpoint employed by Bach.

■ Not to be missed

Bach's Saint Matthew Passion, which will be performed Sunday afternoons (July 15, 22 and 29 at 2:30 p.m.), is possibly THE most important piece of classical music ever written, and has thrilled audiences the numerous times it has been performed in the 70-year history of the Carmel festival.

Each summer, Bruno Weil conducts an outstanding group of musicians from around the world in a three-week array of performances of works by J.S. Bach and other giants of classical music. The Carmel Bach Festival's home, Sunset Center, which reopened in 2005 after an extensive renovation, has become the Monterey Peninsula's principal concert venue.

Composed in 1727, and performed for the first time in Leipzig on Good Friday in 1729, the work sets part of the Gospel of Matthew to music, interspersed with chorales and arias. Conducted by Weil, with full orchestra, chorale, and the festival's wonderful soloists, it promises to be a memorable performance.

Wallfisch, are entitled "Inspirations, Intimates and Rivals."

The program will begin with two popular violin concertos by the great Bach, the first in E Major, BWV 1042, and the second in A Minor, BWV 1041. These will be followed by music of Vivaldi, Telemann and J. C. Bach. Vivaldi bears the same relation to Bach as Verdi to Wagner: his music is sunnier, a bit more superficial and, simply, Italian. Under Ms. Wallfisch's fingers, sparks will fly off the violin! Telemann, who I believe is in Guinness for having written the most music of anybody ever, was also a contemporary of Bach's, but a German. He wrote beautiful music, perhaps less challenging than Bach's, and very popular in its day. His cantata for the death of a sweet singing canary will be sung, preceded by the D Major horn concerto.

It is hard for us nowadays to imagine the extant to which young J.S. Bach was plunged into music from his babyhood. Johann Christoph Bach was an accomplished professional composer, and the twin brother of J.S. Bach's father. Prior to the Bach we celebrate every year in Carmel, J.C. Bach was the most accomplished composer in the family. The festival's Monday night concert will be concluded with his aria, Ach dass ich Wasser genug haette (Oh that I would have enough water) — perhaps chosen especially for the perennially thirsty Monterey Peninsula.

■ Bach speaks

Tuesday nights (July 17, 24 and 31 at 8 p.m.), the "Aha! Bach" concerts are the only other main concerts besides the St. Matthew Passion devoted entirely to J.S. Bach, and are more than just music. Drawing on last year's successful "Aha! Mozart" program, this year's concerts will come with narrative from Weil and the festival's education director, David Gordon, who will provide context — some of it in Bach's own words — revealing "the music, thoughts and life of J.S. Bach."

For my part, I'm not sure this is necessary. But it also won't do any harm. Bach's music can survive any kind of packaging and arranging and still speak to us loud and clear.

■ 'From Darkness to Light'

The Wednesday night Mission Concerts are always fun to be at, for the atmosphere, candlelight, church acoustics, and processional. This year's program (July 18 and 25 and Aug. 1 at 8 p.m.) is daring — a mix of choral pieces, none by Bach, but all devotional.

Don Carlo Gesualdo's 400-year-old music is harmonically exceptionally and is often discussed in textbooks on harmony — more often discussed than sung! It will be a privilege to hear it in the Mission.

The three remaining composers, Francis Poulenc, Richard Rodney Bennett, and Randall Thompson, are all 20th century masters — one French, one English and one Yank.

I am sure it will be instructive to hear

Poulenc's devotional music immediately after Gesualdo's, both highly chromatic and colorful, written more than three centuries apart.

Bennett, still kicking at 72, has always been too eclectic for my taste: He can do it all, in all styles, and is a real pro, but unlike Arvo Part, has never chosen a single style to be his voice. An excerpt from his "Sermons and Devotions" will be sung at the Mission.

The Wednesday concert will be wrapped up with Thompson's beautiful "Alleluia," a piece every American choir sings all the time, and which is practically unknown in Europe. Go figure, it's a great piece!

The Mission Concerts will be conducted by Andrew Megill.

See CONCERTS page 7BF

Wednesday night concerts at the Carmel Mission Basilica, which include a stately procession by members of the chorale, are always a bit.

■ A year to remember

1685 was a good year for music: Bach, George Frederick Handel, and Giuseppe Scarlatti were born. What a crop! This incredible vintage year has been made a feature of the Thursday Concerts called "1707 Composers" (July 19 and 26 and Aug. 2 at 8 p.m.).

In that year, the three were all 22 years old. Aside from giving listeners a chance to hear what were their differences and similarities already at that age, this concert will give them a chance to think about just how amazing it is that they could give the world such good music at 22! These concerts will also be conducted by Megill.

■ If it's not baroque ...

Friday's Main Concerts, "A Bouquet Of Symphonies" (July 20, 27 and Aug. 3 at 8 p.m.), remind me of a quibble I have with the very first page of the program, to wit, "Scarlatti, Handel, Beethoven and other baroque composers"

Ludwig von Beethoven, 1770-1827, was in no possible sense of the word, a baroque composer! This is not just a typo, but rather evidence of a disturbing trend in classical music performance practice,

Remembering the maestro: Sandor Salgo, 1909-2007

ACCORDING TO his official obituary at Stanford, where he taught music and music appreciation from 1949 to 1974, Sandor Salgo was more than just the driving force behind the Carmel Bach Festival for 36 years, conductor of the Marin Symphony for almost as long, and maestro of the San Jose symphony for almost two decades. He was also a very popular professor.

"Students enjoyed Salgo's music-appreciation classes," the Stanford News reported soon after Salgo died Jan. 20 at the age of 97. "One of his most popular, on his beloved Beethoven, ranked second in enrollment at the university for years — just behind a course in human sexuality."

It was Salgo's passion for music that left an indelible impression on his students — and on the musicians who

the trend of enlarging the amount of music called "baroque" — and therefore given over to the original instrument crowd, while shrinking the amount that can legitimately be played on modern instruments.

There is simply nothing to be gained by calling Beethoven baroque, and the Friday night programs, under the direction of Weil, will surely not make the case that Beethoven was a baroque composer. However, it has been cleverly designed to show how to get there from here — to get to Beethoven's symphonies from the late baroque, and let us hear the steps in between.

Bach's ninth child, Johann Christoph Friedrich, was, like almost the whole family, a professional composer. His Symphony in B-flat Major will open the concert. Listen for characteristic signs of early classicism: less fugal writing than before, easier-to-hear tunes with a clearly subordinate accompaniment, bigger dynamic contrast, and the last vestiges of harpsichord support.

Next comes Haydn who, even more than Bach, is considered Weil's specialty. Haydn, like Mozart, traveled a great stylistic distance in his life, from late baroque to high classic. His B-flat Major symphony, number 102, is a delightful work, utterly classical in style.

And that brings us to Beethoven, whose 8th symphony needs no introduction to any music lover. But I will bet anything that hearing it right after J.C.F. Bach's and Haydn's work will show many familiar passages in a brand new light.

played in his orchestras.

"He brought so much joy and energy to his work that everyone around him was inspired," said the Bach festival's former general manager, Nana Faridany, in a 2004 interview. "Sandor was the one who transformed the festival from a rather small-town event into the great thing it is today."

His impact on the Bach festival was more than in just organizational innovations such as expanding the festival to three weeks or adding a professional chorale. He taught his audiences that the heart of Bach's music was not in the music, but in the words.

"Salgo demonstrated this in his programming of the great St. Matthew and St. John passions, and the Mass in B Minor, rotating them year after year as the festival's principal touchstones," a critic wrote in the San Jose Mercury News.

A native of Hungary, Salgo studied the violin before emigrating to the United States in 1939. For all his musical achievements, he wasn't the only musician in his family. For many years, his wife, Priscilla, was director of the Carmel Bach Festival's chorus.

To honor Salgo and his formidable legacy, "All three performances of the Saint Matthew Passion this season will be dedicated to the memory of Maestro Salgo," the Bach festival announced.

The festival will also present a concert in memory of Sandor Salgo on July 23 at 8 p.m. in Stanford's Memorial Church. The Festival Chorale, under the direction of Associate Director Andrew Megill, will present the Mission concert repertoire. Admission will be free, but you should call (831) 624-1521 for reservations.

The Bach festival has also announced the establishment of the Sandor Salgo Conductor Chair. To donate to this endowment chair, call the Bach festival office or visit www.bachfestival.org.

Who was Johann Sebastian Bach?

By DAVID MILLER

THE MAN whose musical genius is celebrated at the Carmel Bach Festival, and who inspired generations of other great composers, has a reputation for having been a dour, serious person who worked hard all the time and didn't laugh much.

While we will never know how much laughter there was in the Bach household for the simple reason that certain well documented events of his childhood would have made any one of us into a humorless person, if not outright depressed.

Think of it: In 1695, young Johann Sebastian lost his mother, then his father remarried within a few months, only to die soon after. Bach was, at the age of 10, left in the care of a stepmother whom he had only just met.

Even for the 17th century — when serious illness routinely carried people off while their families watched helplessly, waiting for antibiotics to be invented and invoking the Will of God — this was serious stuff.

Perhaps inevitably, the situation with the stepmother didn't work out and the 10-year-old was soon bundled off to live with his brother, Johann Christoph, then 24 and just married.

Johann Christoph, like virtually the whole family, was in the music business, making a living playing, singing and composing in the service of a church, duke, or town.

This big brother became Bach's harpsichord and composition teacher and, surely in an effort to keep his pupil from outgrowing his instruction too quickly, did not allow the youngster to study a manuscript containing pieces by several then-famous composers. Johann Sebastian tried to get around this rule by copying the forbidden pieces by moonlight over several months. Of course his disobedience was punished and the copy destroyed, which must have been heartbreaking, yet another assault on a normal childhood.

Childhood ended

By the time J. S. Bach was 15, whatever childhood he had was over. He moved to Lüneburg in the north of Germany to sing in the Matins Choir, first as a boy soprano, then as a tenor. It must have been clear to him even then that his whole life would be music, whatever form it might take: singing, fiddling, playing keyboards, teaching, arranging and composing.

He was, at 15, a hardworking, professional, underpaid musician, and would remain so for the rest of his life, moving from one North German town to another, following the work.

Bach made his music in the service of orthodox Lutheranism, which was rather high-church with elaborate music, as opposed to the then-fashionable Pietism, in which music played a much smaller role.

Pietism, a bit like present-day Charismatic Christianity, with its emphasis on a personal relationship to God, may not have gone as far as altar calls and speaking in tongues, but it was of that general tendency.

Lutheran Orthodoxy — a direct descendant of Martin Luther's break with the Catholic Church in 1521 — was Bach's faith, and it went for solemnity and glory in the service of God, and, above all, more music. Did he adhere to the faith because that's where the work was?

On the contrary, Bach evidently was completely sincere, and, lucky man, never seems to have had doubts.

It is well documented that Bach didn't suffer fools gladly. He hated having to teach Latin and music to unruly teenagers, and he regularly refused to do so, to the repeated distress of his employers. He also couldn't bear inferior musicians, and in a story on which all biographers agree, once took off his wig and threw it at an incompetent harpsichordist!

He sometimes showed an indifference to the rules, as when he asked for, and got, a month off from Arnstadt to go to Lübeck and hear the Danish composer and organist Buxtehude, and showed up back at work four months later, not even having written to let his boss know.

We know how important Bach's music is, but in his day, he was unfavorably compared to Telemann and Kuhnau, and many others who are now completely forgotten.

Despite all of this, Bach was not a revolutionary. He accepted his calling and his station. He set himself the task of making his faith audible, and succeeded to an extent that is still not completely known.

His music speaks strongly to our secular age, meaning even more than it meant to the devout Lutherans of 1750 Leipzig. Who knows what comfort and inspiration people will draw from him in the future. •

This painting by Balthasar Denner is believed to show J.S. Bach with three of his 11 sons.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF HAROLD LAND
 Case Number MP (AMENDED)

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of HAROLD LAND.
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by FURMAN SHEPPARD in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY. The Petition for Probate requests that FURMAN SHEPPARD be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

A hearing on the petition will be held on in this court as follows:

Date: August 2, 2007
 Time: 10:30 a.m.
 Dept.: TBA
 Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Design Review Board of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea will conduct a public hearing in the City Hall Council Chambers, located on the east side of Monte Verde between Ocean and Seventh Avenues, on Wednesday, July 25, 2007. The public hearings will be opened at 4:30 p.m. or as soon thereafter as possible. Note: one or more of the items may be on the Consent Agenda. Items on the Consent Agenda will be approved without discussion unless someone requests otherwise. For all other items staff will present the project, then the applicant and all interested members of the public will be allowed to speak or offer written testimony before the Board takes action. Decisions to approve or deny the project may be appealed to the City Council by filing a written notice of appeal with the office of the City Clerk within ten (10) working days following the date of action by the Design Review Board and paying a $260.00 appeal fee as established by the City Council. For those projects listed as appealable to the California Coastal Commission, appeals may be filed directly with the Coastal Commission for no fee, by filing a written notice of appeal with the Coastal Commission's Central Coast office in Santa Cruz. Such appeals must be filed within ten working days of the Coastal Commission's receipt of the City's Final Local Action Notice.

If you challenge the nature of the proposed action in court, you may be limited to raising only those issues you or someone else raised at the public hearing described in this notice, or in written correspondence delivered to the Design Review Board or the City Council at, or prior to, the public hearing.

Real Estate Profiles

These are some of the professionals you can count on for your real-estate related needs.

ERIC L. MARSH

As an independent Real Estate Broker with over 30 years of practical experience, I've learned I don't need all the sales. I've provided a full range of residential real estate services including estate management, to hundreds of customers and clients, a few people at a time. This has allowed me to give them and their property the care and attention they deserve. I answer my own phone and handle all the paperwork personally - so you don't have to rely on, or deal with automated phone systems, well intentioned staff or assistants. My only goal is to "Provide Personalized Service with Professional Care" and ample business has always followed - one good deal at a time.
