Mighty storm floods, wrecks and leaves Peninsula in the dark

PINE CONE STAFF

IT WAS the biggest storm in a decade, bringing down hundreds of trees, damaging roads and homes along the coast, flooding low-lying neighborhoods, threatening the water supply, knocking out power to most homes and businesses, and bringing life on the Monterey Peninsula to a virtual standstill for several days.

At the height of the storm Friday morning, with winds gusting up to 80 mph and rainfall totals approaching 4 inches, trees collapsed on at least five houses in Carmel, two in Pacific Grove and five in Pebble Beach, according to repair crews.

One of those struck the home of Joe and Kate Cardenas on Sloat Road in Del Monte Forest.

30,000 homes and businesses without power, many for more than four days

"My wife was sitting on the couch reading a book about longevity," Joe Cardenas said. "There was a loud noise from the fireplace and all of a sudden this big tree crashed about three feet from where she was sitting." Their daughter's bedroom was destroyed — fortunately, she was out of the country at the time.

At the height of outages, more than 30,000 PG&E customers were in the dark because of about 400 separate damaged power poles, lines and other equipment. The utility brought in crews from as far away as Southern California and Washington state, many working 16-hour days, to help the massive reconnect effort.

And with the power also out to its wells and pumps, California American Water Co. asked its customers to keep water use to an absolute minimum. A boil order was issued in Carmel Valley after one storage tank ran completely dry.

Along the coast, the worst was to come Saturday morning, when high tide coincided with a massive storm surge.

Beaches disappeared under the roiling sea and small boulders were tossed onto oceanfront roads in Carmel, Pebble Beach and Pacific Grove. A beach cottage belonging to the Monterey Peninsula Country Club had its front wall pushed in by huge waves.

But homeowners along the Carmel River Lagoon — long a battleground between them and government agencies charged with protecting the welfare of the indigenous steelhead trout — were the hardest hit as storm swells rushed over the sandbar at the mouth of the Carmel River, sending the lagoon to record levels.

"It's 12.6 feet, and that's the highest it's ever

Haitian priest's visit highlights church's charitable efforts

By CHRIS COUNTS

A HAITIAN priest, the Rev. Walin DeCamps, will visit St. Dunstan's Church in Carmel Valley Friday to give the congregation a firsthand account of their charitable efforts in his country.

For 25 years, the church has helped fund a school for children — St. Andre's School and Church — in Hinche, a city of about 50,000 in central Haiti.

According to Richard Hawkins, co-chair of St. Dunstan's Haiti project, it is unlikely the school could operate without the assistance of the Carmel Valley church.

"Our congregation provides more than 300 scholarships every year for students," Hawkins explained. "There are about 750 students in the school, so we support nearly half the student body."

Public schooling is not available in Haiti, widely considered the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

"All schools in Haiti that are functioning are supported by nonprofits," he said. "Without our help, it is unlikely these kids would be going to school."

That's because day-to-day survival is a more pressing concern.

"There is great political turmoil in Haiti," Hawkins said. "Many people live in fear."

Haitians are also unable to count on even the most basic utilities and services.

"They have no electricity and very poor quality water," Hawkins explained.

At least one hot meal

The congregation has supplied the school with computers, microscopes, maps, calculators, games, tape recorders and even light bulbs. They also purchased a propane stove so students can be assured at least one hot meal each day.

DeCamps' visit will put a face on the long-distance charitable effort.

"The purpose of this visit is to update the congregation on what's going on down there," Hawkins added.

St. Dunstan's will host a wine and cheese reception for DeCamps from 3 to 5 p.m. For more information, call (831) 624-6646.

Did you know...

Before there was a raceway at Laguna Seca, there was road racing through Pebble Beach — sports cars averaging more than 60 mph on a 2.2-mile circuit with sharp turns on parts of Portola Drive, Drake Road, and Stevenson Drive. The Sports Car Club of America started the races in November 1950, charging $1 admission and attracting 10,000 spectators. Phillip Hill Jr. of Santa Monica won that first Pebble Beach Cup in a Jaguar, then went on to win many racing prizes, including the world Grand Prix championship in 1961. There were only seven Pebble Beach Cup races before they ended in 1956, after Ernie McAfee of Los Angeles died on impact when he smashed his Ferrari into a tree on Stevenson Drive, just short of a cluster of hundreds of race fans. The off-road track at Laguna Seca was built the following year.

DIVINE ASSISTANCE

St. Joseph is the patron saint of carpenters and, in more recent times, homesellers. In order to hasten a sale, some people bury a small statue of the saint in their front yard. We have no data on the effectiveness of this marketing technique, but we do know from those running religious supply stores that the little statues are "flying off the shelves." In California's capital city, you can even buy statues at the Sacramento Association of Realtors® store.

The use of buried statues of St. Joseph has been traced to St. Teresa of Avila, who buried a statue in the ground where she hoped to erect a convent. (It should be added that St. Joseph is a patron saint of family...and of patience.) Though buyers are not necessarily Catholics, sellers generally strongly advise the buyers not just to bury the statue, but also to include prayer in their search for a buyer.

At the very least, then, the practice gives them a prayer, and possibly even a sense that something mysterious is helping to get the home sold. With a firm faith in praying and then paddling the boat to shore, rather than just waiting for help, may we suggest that you work with the real estate professional of your careful choice to arrive at the best possible asking price for your home, to help prepare the home to look its best to potential buyers, and to build a marketing program, including relevant buyer incentives, that will generate interest in the home. With all of this going for you, the best possible results could come quickly. # Attic fire severely damages house after power restored

MARY BROWNFIELD

IN THE third serious structure fire in Carmel in less than two weeks, a blaze started in the attic of a Junipero Street home early Monday morning and destroyed the kitchen before firefighters extinguished it.

After a neighbor reported the fire, the man who lived in the house, Robert Frey, was awakened by a police officer hammering on his door and windows just before 6:30 a.m., Jan. 7, according to fire investigator Jim Gunter. Frey escaped without injury and was out of the house by the time firefighters arrived.

Carmel Fire Capt. August Beacham said thick smoke was billowing from the house and flames were scorching an exterior wall.

"The smoke was impressive when we got there," he said. "There was a large amount of fire in the attic."

Firefighters cut holes in the ceiling of the living room and other parts of the house to fight the flames in the open space above and rushed to put out the fire in the kitchen. "An aggressive interior attack limited the fire damage to the kitchen/dining area."

During the effort, a firefighter who arrived with one of the ambulances was injured and taken to Community Hospital, according to Beacham.

After their initial successful attack, firefighters used a thermal imaging camera to ensure nothing else was burning and there were no hot spots in the roof. They remained on scene with a hose at the ready in case of flare-ups before concluding the fire would not re-ignite and packing up. The last engine left the area around 10:45 a.m.

At the scene, P.G. Fire Chief Andrew Miller speculated the outcome would have been worse had the fire occurred when the weather was dry, because Frey's 56-year-old home and others nearby are made of wood and surrounded by large trees.

Cause unknown

One fire official said he did not think the fire was suspicious.

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

Assailant wields stick, uses words

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Driver stopped for an unsafe lane change on Ocean Avenue and found to be driving on a suspended license. Subject cited and released, and her vehicle was impounded for 30 days. Vehicle towed/stored by Carmel Chevron.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Observed an intoxicated subject, a 31-year-old male, on San Carlos Street who refused to comply with officers' commands and ran into a bar (a public place also). He was taken into custody and lodged at county jail.

Carmel area: A traffic stop on Highway 1 and Oliver resulted in a DUI arrest of a female driver.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 30

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Civil assist on Junipero Street. Subject wanted to report a verbal argument between her and her estranged boyfriend and requested a restraining order. After questioning, it was apparent that no crime had been committed at this time, and no threats of any kind had occurred. But the reporting party was advised on where she could get more information on a private restraining order.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Reporting party said she last had her wallet near the Cypress Inn on Lincoln Street on Dec. 29.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic collision — hit-and-run on public property on Monte Verde Street. Non-injury accident involving a parked vehicle. Suspect fled scene in vehicle.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: An ongoing child custody issue was reported to Carmel P.D. today. The grandmother called and stated the father of the child failed to bring the child back home. He was contacted by the grandparents and stated he missed the bus and would bring the child back the following day. The grandparents stated they have court documents stating the child should have been dropped off at 1630 hours today at Carmel P.D. The whereabouts of the father and the child are unknown at this time. The RP was not concerned for the child's safety but did mention the father is very unstable.

The RP wished to file a report that the father failed to bring the child back but did not want police to contact the father. Neither the RP, child, mother, or father live in the City of Carmel. Sheriff's office would not take the report.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Juveniles contacted behind Flanders Mansion. Upon investigation, two of the juveniles, age 16 and 17, were found to be in possession of tobacco and tobacco paraphernalia.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a reported medical call on Monte Verde Street. At scene, assisted the medic with the assessment and loading of a patient for transport to CHOMP.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a reported medical call on Dolores Street. At scene, assisted the medic with assessment and loading of a patient for transport.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a reported medical call on Santa Fe. Transported to CHOMP.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a reported structure fire at Scenic and Santa Lucia. Investigation showed a past-tense chimney fire extinguished by the tenant. Checked for any hidden fires or hazards and found none.

Carmel area: Suspect contacted at Highway 1 and Rio Road, and consent search conducted. Suspects had in possession narcotics and were under the influence. One suspect cited. The second suspect was arrested and transported to Monterey County Jail.

Big Sur: Suspect took a large amount of cash from his employer as he went off shift.

Pebble Beach: A victim at Holman Highway and Haul Road reported unknown person(s) smashed the window to her Mercedes and stole her purse, which was sitting on the passenger-side floorboard. Case continues.

Carmel Valley: A driver was stopped at

Man uses hose to save kids from drowning

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A CURIOUS Pebble Beach resident who noticed two boys with bicycles near the rushing Carmel River helped avert a tragedy Sunday afternoon.

En route with his wife, Linda, to pick up his sister-in-law at Quail Lodge, Dennis O'Brien looked out the window as they drove over the narrow Rancho San Carlos Road bridge that crosses the river.

"I noticed a couple of boys down there with their bikes," he said, and he figured they were up to something. Returning a few minutes later, O'Brien looked for the boys but couldn't see them.

"I rolled down the window and could hear them yelling," he said.

O'Brien sprung from the car as his wife dialed 911. Yelling to the boys that help was on the way, he ran down a path near the bridge and into a backyard, from which he could see them in the water hanging on to a branch. "They were freaked out," he recalled. "Their eyes were as big as saucers."

Grabbing a garden hose he found in the yard, O'Brien crashed through the poison oak and brambles that lined the steep riverbank.

"I was able to get this long garden hose into the water," he said. "The two kids were pretty brave — the older one wanted the younger one to grab the hose first."

The 11-year-old took hold as the older boy climbed higher up on the branch, according to O'Brien. The woman whose backyard he had run through also provided an inner tube to help them stay afloat.

Bracing himself against a tree and holding on to the hose, O'Brien realized he couldn't pull them ashore. He continued talking to the boys, calming them and assuring them more help was on the way.

"The last thing I wanted to do was jump in the water," he said, but he would have done anything to avoid newspaper headlines about two boys drowning in the Carmel River.

As they talked, the boys asked O'Brien if he had a cell phone, and the younger asked him to dial 911 — which he said had already been done.

"The other one asked me to call his mother, and I said, 'Right now I don't think she wants to hear from you. Let's get you out of the water first,'" he said. The trio heard sirens as fire engines from Cypress and Carmel Valley fire protection districts approached.

Cypress Fire Capt. Dan Frost said both agencies responded since the incident occurred on the border between the two jurisdictions. Ambulances, sheriff's deputies and Pacific Grove Ocean Rescue came as well. A second fire engine went to

Carmel Valley lodge workers donate long hair en masse

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A DOZEN coworkers gave up their ponytails during a haircutting marathon at a Barnyard salon Saturday.

What took years to grow and only seconds to sheer has been bound in rubber bands and shipped to Locks of Love, a Florida-based nonprofit that provides custom-made prosthetic pieces to children suffering long-term hair loss due to medical conditions.

"Nobody cried," reported Gina Martin, assistant to Bernardus Lodge Executive Chef Cal Stamenov. "Everyone was in very good spirits."

And that was in spite of the fact Yolanda's Hair Salon had no electricity due to the winter storm that struck the Peninsula Friday.

Martin, who organized the mass donation, learned about Locks of Love a few years ago when the charity collected hair during a fundraising relay race.

Locks of Love accepts hair of 10 inches or longer to make hairpieces for kids who have lost their hair due to illness — mostly alopecia areata, which has no known cause or cure. The donated locks can be any color and permed or darkened, but not lightened.

"I thought it was a really cool idea, a good way to give back," Martin said. "But my hair at the time was about 3 inches long."

She began growing it out with the idea of one day donating a ponytail of her own, but she didn't tell anyone her plans until a couple of years later. When she estimated her locks would reach 10 inches in another four or five months, she mentioned her goal to Stamenov.

"The next day, his wife, Linda, called me and said she would do it with me," she said, and Martin wondered if others would be interested. The lodge's guest services manager was, and the women decided to put a sign-up sheet in the office.

"It seemed like every week, someone else was signing up," Martin said. A dozen people from several different departments committed to the cause, including one man: Greg Frey, who works as a line cook under Stamenov at Marinus.

"Everybody volunteered — there was very little pressur-

STORM

been," said an employee of the Monterey County Public Works Department as he surveyed the scene. His crews were unable to begin bulldozing the sandbar because it was constantly overtopped with big waves.

Early Saturday morning, dozens of homeowners had to be evacuated as water rose in the streets and, for as many as 10 of them, in their garages and living rooms.

Fortunately, the river broke through the sandbar on its own about 7:30 a.m. As the water rushed back to sea, the floodwaters quickly receded.

Frank Emerson of the Carmel River Steelhead Association watched as the river began flowing.

"This situation is ideal for the juvenile trout, because the tide is high so the lagoon isn't draining too quickly," Emerson said. But human residents wished the lagoon had never gotten so high.

"They say they tried to wake us up at 3:30 a.m., but the power was off so they couldn't ring doorbells," said Mary Jane Hammerland. "Finally, a fireman woke us up at 6:30, saying we had to get out and get our cars out. This is the second time this has happened in 10 years."

She ruefully noted her street is called River Park Place, "because that's where the river parks."

And she observed that evacuations in her neighborhood were hampered by a lack of manpower.

"There were so many emergencies happening in so many places, we didn't have the firefighters we need to get everything done."

■ Carmel activates command center

For the first time in 10 years, Carmel Police Chief George Rawson fully activated the city's emergency operations center in the basement of the police department as the raging storm struck the city with high winds Jan. 4. The center combines public works, fire and police operations in a single room so the three agencies, which usually operate independently, are better coordinated and more efficient.

The last time the EOC was fully activated was when it ran for three straight days during the brutal winter storms of February 1998, according to administrative coordinator Leslie Fenton.

Jan. 4 saw close to 20 people working in the EOC.

"I could tell as I got here a little before 8 that the winds were getting pretty strong and the calls coming in to the police department were significantly increasing," Rawson said. "It was everything from alarm activations, to trees down. With a forecast that winds were going to get pretty high, I decided the probability of having a lot of demands for service at one time was significant."

He was right. During the 24 hours that included the storm, the police department logged more than 100 calls, and fire crews were dispatched on about 40 calls for wires down, trees onto cars and houses, and other emergencies between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m.

With the power out at city hall, city administrator Rich Guillen sent his employees to work in the EOC, according to Rawson. Some took calls and others monitored radio traffic and dispatched.

"It all was very intense, and there was very little quiet time on those frequencies," Rawson said.

Every call was logged on a board to help ensure those of the highest priority received immediate attention.

"This is what the incident command system is all about: It sets up all the departments in one centralized area and allows us to communicate information as one group to eliminate duplication of work and be as effective and efficient as we can," Rawson said. The system helped avoid repeated dispatches to the same emergency.

Including the EOC staff and the police officers, firefighters and public-works employees in the field, more than 45 city employees were working on storm-related incidents Friday. A representative from the Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross also assisted.

The EOC dispatched police and public-works crews but continued the routine practice of transferring calls for the fire department to Monterey County Emergency Communications rather than dispatching firefighters directly. County communications handles dispatching for 15 fire departments.

Leslie Ragghianti, operations supervisor for Monterey County Emergency Communications, said a 24-hour period would usually include 100 to 115 calls. Jan. 4 saw 518 calls come in.

"I went out and sat down and started taking calls, and I am a supervisor and normally work in an office — that's how busy we were," Ragghianti said. "It can get very loud when you have 18 people on the phone talking and phones ringing."

But not all the calls were worth their efforts.

"We had a lot of people calling 911 to find out when their power was going to be restored," she said.

She praised her employees for dealing with the frenetic pace and being able to sort out multiple reports of the same incidents.

Room for improvement

Rawson summoned the EOC workers for a meeting Wednesday to find out "exactly what went well and what maybe could be done differently or better, and make sure our services are not being redundant and we're not wasting precious resources."

Dispatchers could wear headphones so they don't struggle to hear radio traffic in the noisy room, and fire calls might be dispatched directly rather than routed through the county communications center, for example.

Rawson also said the storm was a reminder of how important it is for residents to have the proper information and supplies to be able to shelter in place for at least a few days. By early Friday afternoon, 16 streets were closed or blocked, power was out all over the city, and trees had fallen on five houses and numerous cars. Some residents were evacuated because of leaning trees in soggy soil.

Almost a week later, a few small sections of Carmel were still without power, and the Red Cross continues to hand out help, supplies and advice. The Carmel Foundation, the non-profit senior organization, became a refuge for members seeking warmth, food and conversation, and police officers and volunteers canvassed town checking on older residents to ensure they were warm, safe and fed even if they had no electricity at home. In addition, almost 30 members of the Carmel Innkeepers Association offered reduced rates to residents displaced by the storm.

"If your house is dark and cold, and you have no power, people have to make sure they have some abilities to keep warm, cook and have light," Rawson said. "Without a contingency plan, things get pretty brutal."

■ P.G. Fire receives most calls

During the weekend storm, the Pacific Grove Fire Department received more emergency calls than any other fire agency in the county.

As the storm pummeled Pacific Grove, P.G. Fire was flooded with an extraordinary 85 calls from citizens reporting a variety of storm-related hazards such as downed trees, which landed on houses and cars.

"It's my understanding," said P.G. Fire Chief Andrew Miller, "that countywide, this was the highest call volume that has ever been experienced in a 24-hour period, and Pacific Grove had the highest share of all those calls for fire service."

On top of responding to dozens of storm-related calls, emergency crews had to respond to unrelated medical emergencies.

"We were just going from call to call to call," Miller said. Although strong winds and rain caused damage up and down the coast, no serious injuries or deaths were reported.

"From a damage standpoint," he said, "we had numerous trees down and limbs that I can't even count. We had cars destroyed by trees and trees into homes. There were a couple of pretty challenging times."

Normally, P.G. staffs four firefighters on two fire engines. But because of the extraordinary number of emergency calls, Miller said he called in four more firefighters and a couple of ocean rescue staff to work overtime.

Personally," Miller said, "I'm extremely proud of P.G. for its ability to respond and manage the storm, especially considering its severity."

In all, P.G. Fire received 126 calls from Thursday Jan. 3 to Sunday, Jan. 6, Miller said.

Low-lying sections of Ocean View Boulevard and Sunset Drive were closed to traffic through the weekend, and sections of the hiking trail through Asilomar State Beach were lost to the storm.

On 20th Street, residents became particularly frustrated by the lack of progress in clearing their street and getting power restored. A week after the storm, a huge California buckeye still blocked the road, with no sign of anyone preparing to remove it.

But at least their power was restored Tuesday afternoon, while some isolated neighborhoods were still without. But Miller said there hadn't been any emergencies related to people using candles or non-electrical heaters.

City manager Jim Colangelo said police officers and other employees incurred overtime during the storm.

"We had extra officers out there, including the chief and commanders, responding to calls," he said. "We had so much out there from downed trees."

Colangelo said rumors that P.G. didn't have enough manpower to cut down trees blocking roads was untrue and that the only reason P.G. crews won't clear a road of a downed tree is if it's near a power line.

"If we see a tree that is a dangerous condition near a power line," he said, "we contact PG&E and they take care of it with their own crews."

Despite the damage, Colangelo said the city was lucky.

"The good news is there were no serious injuries because of this," he said. "You saw some of the trees that went into the houses, and the fact that nobody got hurt is just amazing."

At Grove Market, owner Charlie Higuera came up with an innovative solution to the problem of the loss of refrigeration. Sunday, he staged a big barbecue in an adjacent parking lot, with dozens of chicken breasts slowly cooking over coals.

"This is the best chicken I've ever had," said Stacy Middleton, who said it was also the worst power outage she could remember in her 22 years living on the Monterey Peninsula.

■ Storm hits Pebble Beach hard

Like Pacific Grove, Pebble Beach emergency services were stretched thin, and firefighters and other personnel were asked to work longer hours to respond to numerous downed trees and power lines.

"We had lots of overtime," said Pebble Beach Community Services District general manager Craig Anthony. "I think the fire department on Friday responded to 58 calls, so they were pretty busy."

Downed trees were the biggest problem in Pebble Beach, with several homes severely damaged, Anthony said.

And a worker at the Pebble Beach Company had to be transported to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula after he was struck by a falling tree.

The Lodge at Pebble Beach and the Inn at Spanish Bay went to generator power to keep their guests comfortable. One of the hotels was without PG&E service for three days.

Anthony said the fire department was allowing residents without power to take showers and charge their cell phones at the facility. Southern California Edison and power agencies from other states are assisting in restoring power to Pebble Beach.

"A lot of residents are getting pretty frustrated that the power still isn't on," he said Tuesday.

The Monterey Peninsula Country Club's beach house overlooking Spanish Bay was heavily damaged Saturday morning when powerful waves ripped through the building, saturating carpets and leaving seaweed and other ocean debris inside.

"The waves did come through the beach house, and it flooded out quite a bit," said Mike Bowhay, MPCC general manager. "There was really no structural damage other than

REMEMBER YOUR COFFEE!

According to recent research, drinking coffee does more than merely help you awaken in the morning. French researchers have found that drinking more than three cups of coffee a day helps protect older women against some age-related memory decline. Women who drank a minimum of three cups of coffee daily had 33 percent lower odds of having verbal memory declines and 18 percent lower odds of having visual and spatial memory declines compared with women who drank one cup (or less) per day. The memory-improving effect of coffee was also found to depend on age, with women over 80 reaping more benefits from coffee than those 10 to 15 years younger. Curiously, men did not gain the same benefit.

At least six studies indicate that people who drink coffee regularly are up to 80 percent less likely to develop Parkinson's Disease. Other research shows that compared to not drinking coffee, at least two cups daily can translate to a 25 percent reduced risk of colon cancer. For more information, please call VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES. We provide the best in home care and geriatric care management for seniors or adults with physical and/or mental challenges in and around Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties.

P.S. Some studies suggest that coffee might block the buildup of proteins that lead to mental decline.

Bowhay said the beach house, which hosts private events, would be repaired soon.

Big Sur takes it in stride

While Peninsula residents suffered the most, in Big Sur the memorable weather event — which dumped a reported 6 inches on Monterey County’s South Coast — barely made a dent in the lives of locals long accustomed to emergency preparedness.

“I was so ready,” explained Martha Karstens, assistant chief of the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade. “I had my rain gear and my rain boots ready to roll. But I never got out the door.”

Karstens said she was surprised by how little the storm affected the Big Sur community.

“It was almost laughable,” she said. “There were a few little rock slides here and there, but ‘little’ was the key word.”

She said Big Sur residents are used to huddling around a wood stove with candles and a good book.

“We’re prepared when the power goes out,” Karstens observed.

According to Karstens, residents had help in preparing for winter this year. She suggested recent culvert work by Caltrans workers — in response to concerns that clogged culverts played a big role in the amount of damage the highway sustained from El Niño storms in 1998 — is paying big dividends.

“They’re doing a great job,” she said. “They’re the unsung heroes here. Rain or shine, they’re doing their job keeping the road open.”

For the folks at Caltrans, heavy rain typically means lots of hard — and often wet work. But the agency charged with keeping Highway 1 open in Big Sur had a surprisingly slow week.

“We did very well,” declared Jim Shivers, a Caltrans public information officer. “Despite heavy rains, the highway stayed open all weekend. That was great news. I’m sure the local residents and business owners are happy.”

Remarkably, there was not a single report of a delay along the scenic highway, Shivers said.

“We would be the first to know,” he insisted.

Solar power aids fire brigade

With electrical and phone service cut off due to storm damage, the Mid-Coast Fire Brigade turned to an unlikely source of help in an effort to communicate with the outside world — the sun.

Even when power and phone service fail, the brigade’s volunteer firefighters are able to communicate with each other by two-way hand-held radios, but only for about a day. Unfortunately, the brigade’s main repeater at the Glen Devin Ranch is dependent on electricity to operate. Power went out Friday morning, Jan. 4, and the repeater’s battery backup ran out of juice after about 24 hours.

Thankfully, the brigade had one more technological trick in its arsenal. Two years ago, a second repeater was installed on Bonafacio Hill at the Chapman Ranch. The new repeater is able to recharge itself with the aid of a solar panel. And because the panel worked — even under cloudy skies — the fire brigade was able to stay in contact with the outside world in the event that fire, medical or law enforcement personnel were required for an emergency.

In an effort to provide uninterrupted phone service, MCFB chief Cheryl Goetz is urging the phone company that serves the area — AT&T — to install a cable that connects the utility company’s phone panel to the electrical panel inside the brigade’s fire station, which is just a few hundred

Service, memorial fund for woman killed in crosswalk

A MEMORIAL service for Rebecca Tarumoto will be held Thursday, Jan. 17, at Carmel Presbyterian Church.

Common blood types desperately needed

THERE IS a shortage of A-Positive and O-Positive blood, and Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula's Blood Center is urging people to donate.

During the winter, cooler weather, illness and travel keep some donors from giving blood, which has led to a low inventory of the most common blood types, according to the Blood Center.

"We really like to have 100 units of A-Positive and 100 units of O-Positive," in stock, said Sharon Paddock, Blood Center supervisor. "This past week, we have been in the 50-to-60-unit range, and it's making us a bit nervous."

The Blood Center is open from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays; and from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, Wednesday, and Fridays. It is at 576 Hartnell St., across from the Monterey Post Office. Drop-ins are welcome, or appointments may be scheduled by calling (831) 625-4814.

Donors must be older than 16 and weigh more than 110 pounds. More information on donating blood may be found on Community Hospital's website, www.chomp.org.

Tarumoto, 62, died in October after being struck by a car in a crosswalk at Junipero and Ocean in downtown Carmel. She was airlifted by helicopter to a regional medical center in San Jose but succumbed to her injuries more than a week later.

"We had a memorial service up in Saratoga, where we lived for about 30 years," said her husband, David Tarumoto. "But then we moved down here, so we're going to have a service with all the friends we were fortunate to have made here."

Born Sept. 21, 1945, to J. Sydnor and Renee Mitchell in Richmond, Va., Rebecca Tarumoto graduated from Virginia Commonwealth University and received a master's degree in English from the University of Michigan.

She was an active member of the Carmel Foundation and participated in numerous writing programs and workshops, winning competitions with her "witty, colorful writing."

Following the Carmel Presbyterian service, which will be held at 2 p.m. Jan. 17 and is open to all, another memorial will be planned for family and friends in Virginia.

In addition, David Tarumoto requested the city establish a fund as a tribute to his late wife, and on Tuesday night, the Carmel City Council formally established the Rebecca M. Tarumoto Memorial Fund account to accept donations. So far, about $625 has been raised. The exact nature of the memorial has yet to be determined.

In addition to her husband, Tarumoto is survived by her children, Victoria of Santa Cruz and Tony of Carmel; and her brother, James, of Richmond, Va.

Tax-deductible donations in her memory can be sent to the Rebecca M. Tarumoto Memorial Fund, City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, P.O. Box CC, Carmel, CA 93921.

Artists seek creative inspiration in discarded and disregarded objects

By CHRIS COUNTS

BEFORE THERE were art supply stores, artists often turned to unusual sources to find materials to help them express their creativity. A new exhibit at the Carl Cherry Center, "Construction: Crossing Borders," is evidence that spirit of resourcefulness is alive and well in the 21st century.

The exhibit, which opens Friday, Jan. 11, presents work by Dore K. Bodenheimer, Virginia Ray and Leighton McWilliams and highlights the use of found objects, hand-made papers and common curios in creating 3-D "assemblages."

"We wanted to do an entire exhibit devoted to the art of assemblage," said Robert Reese, executive director of the center. "We particularly wanted to focus on the use of things not necessarily thought of as art objects. And we wanted to look at it from three different points of view. Each artist is using the format of assemblage in a different way."

Ray said the search for materials is an important part of her creative process.

"I'm drawn to the challenge of transforming something that seems ordinary into something that has significance and beauty to it," explained Ray, who lives in Santa Cruz and teaches workshops in creating prayer flags at Big Sur's Esalen Institute. "Ordinary things can be extraordinary in the right kind of light."

From rummage sales to walks along the beach, Ray is always looking for something to incorporate into her assem-

Golden Bough hosts return of PacRep's 'High School Musical'

By CHRIS COUNTS

ACCUSTOMED TO working with adults, PacRep Theatre creative director Stephen Moorer is trying to catch his breath after directing more than 40 local high-school students during the rehearsals for "High School Musical," which opens at the Golden Bough Playhouse next week.

"The energy these kids bring to rehearsals is amazing," Moorer said. "We have the class clowns from every school. I'm ready to hit the pillow at the end of the day."

"High School Musical" tells the story of Gabriella, a bright but shy new student, and Troy, the captain of the basketball team, who meet at a karaoke contest. The pair discover they have more in common than just singing, and a romance blossoms. But an assortment of conflicting events — a basketball game, an academic decathlon and a school play — complicate matters.

The production features Don Dally as musical director, Susan Cable as choreographer and a cast of more than 40 Monterey County high school students.

Kenny Neely, a recent graduate of Monterey High School, and Daniel Renfer of York School share the role of Troy, while Katie Hazdovac of Pacific Grove High School and Brittany Kessler

DINER'S DUTY: HELPING OUT WITH STORM'S AFTERMATH

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

WE SHOULD all breathe a sigh of relief that last week's storms weren't worse than they were (although power at The Pine Cone office was still out when this was written). On my singular day sans power (Saturday), I needed 100 percent game-day assurance and watched the Steelers/Jacksonville debacle at a local sports bar I will refrain from berating for bad food and service. Needing to nurse the wounds of a most heartbreaking loss, we headed to Montrio for some liquid consolation, where general manager Kathy Solley shared how hard some of the downtown restaurants (www.downtowndining.com) had been hit during power outages. Thousands of dollars of perishable products had been lost, not to mention business in general. I know they are not alone, and although purse-strings are generally pulled pretty tight post-holidays, maybe we can all show a little extra bit of love to the restaurants and local retailers that were hit by these storms during the next few weeks.

■ I hate to admit it

As I write this, my boyfriend is refilling his wine glass with Merlot from our Bota Box. I'm going to totally blow his sommelier cred by saying this, but we are enjoying the Bota Box. Full disclosure: A long, long time ago, I gave a friend's mother hell for drinking wine from a box (it was one of our first meetings, and needless to say, my criticism was not well received). In those days, I thought consuming boxed wine was so déclassé, but I'm humbly on the verge of changing my tune. I recently received a selection of wines from Bota Box (www.botabox.com), produced by Delicato Family Vineyards. Every year, Delicato harvests thousands of acres of grapes from all over California including the San Bernabe Vineyard in Monterey. Here's the deal: Each box contains the equivalent of four bottles of wines and once you pop the handy little dispenser open, it will stay fresh for one to two months. Nice, right? The beauty of these little bag-in-a-box wine wonders is that they only cost around $18 — less than a buck a glass, if my math skills serve me right. The B.F. and I have hemmed and hawed and mulled over the quality of the Bota Box more than any wine-swilling people ought to, and the verdict is that it does absolutely nothing to offend our palates. It's by no means complex or all that interesting in the grand scheme of what each varietal potentially has to offer. But it's pleasantly quaffable and made better than expected, especially for such a low price. Considering the preconceived notions I've had regarding boxed wine (c'mon, I'm not alone), that isn't such a bad place be.

■ In-flight wining and dining

After taking more than 100 flights in 2007, I stopped keeping track. Obviously, I love to travel, but for the most part, air travel is a major hassle these days, and I appreciate any effort airlines make toward making the experience easier. One of my favorite new trends in air travel is the upped in-flight culinary factor. In most cabins, coach passengers are still stuck with pretzels, peanuts and $5-a-pop alcoholic beverages. But, increasingly, First, Business and International OBI & MAGGIE King, 3, are basenji brother and sister who live in Carmel Valley. Nattily attired in matching red quilted coats when we met them Wednesday morning at Carmel Beach, they were out for a second run on the beach that day.

Mom Marie and Dad Steve bring them to the beach every day after picking up coffees to go from Wild Goose Bakery Cafe in the Village. Although Obi, a male, and Maggie, his sis, have a two-acre fenced-in spread to run around, they prefer the beach with its ready supply of dogs (particularly Obi) to chase and by whom to be chased.

The basenji dog is originally from Central Africa where it is honored as a hunting dog that doesn't bark. The breed has an unusually shaped larynx which permits it to yodel and imitate sounds.

Obi, who is full of mischief, eats seaweed and then regurgitates it. Maggie, who prefers more ladylike pastimes, collects seashells. But together they get into trouble. Take for instance the new upholstered chair at home with its under netting. They gleefully tore holes in the netting and then went on their way. No one would have been the wiser if Maggie hadn't had a piece of telltale netting hanging from her mouth.

On the first Friday of every month, Obi and Maggie, along with Mom and Dad, can be found at the south end of Carmel Beach with a group of dog lovers who gather at sunset to socialize, have a little wine and food, and let their dogs play together. The group has its own website at wagmorebarkless.org, but it is not exclusively for barkless dogs.

As basenjies have more the temperament and personalities of cats, they love comfort. It's no wonder they like to sleep with Mom and Dad – under the covers.

Chef Balestrieri's domain: Cantinetta Luca and Bouchée

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

"I ENJOY fine dining of complex food, but my personal preference is for a form of soul-filled food," Executive Chef Jason Balestrieri explained.

By that, he means less manipulation in the preparation and presentation. "It's what we do here at Cantinetta Luca and what we're starting to do at Bouchée."

Balestrieri, who serves as executive chef of both Carmel-by-the-Sea restaurants, said it's that kind of food that transports him back to childhood and what his diners say is just like food they've had in Europe.

Balestrieri grew up in Milwaukee, Wis., where his parents were high-school sweethearts with widely diverse ethnic backgrounds: His father was a first-generation Sicilian growing up in Wisconsin, and his mother was of Irish/Welsh extraction. He said it was a dramatic household, but also one where the basics were emphasized.

"I've come to realize I'm an advocate of simplicity and getting my hands 'dirty' — making things from scratch."

In fact, Balestrieri makes salami for both restaurants. You can see them hanging in a glassed-in curing room for salumi at Luca. "To be able to say I've made these from scratch and that I can improve them is something valuable."

This pride in creation is an extension of growing up in Milwaukee. "My mother used to can tomatoes, peaches and pears, and put up pickles and jams and jellies. We had a full vegetable garden in our backyard and a pear tree. My grandparents, who lived a block away, had a peach tree."

These fond memories are evident in his expression, his eyes, as he reminisces.

Although Balestrieri has been a California resident since 1993, Milwaukee figures prominently in his formative years. He put in four years at the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee on a soccer scholarship. "Playing soccer, I never thought I was going to be in the restaurant business, but I was always interested in food. I read Gourmet and Bon Appetit magazines." In 1989 he enrolled in a trade-school culinary program and graduated two years later.

"When I first started studying cooking, I had to buy my first knife. It cost $25, which was a lot then. I learned how to sharpen and use it properly — how to cut an onion. I realized I was learning the text book method of things my mom used to do when I watched her in the kitchen — the use of onions and garlic in dishes and when to incorporate them. I learned how to make good chicken soup.”

Ruminating on his evolution from athlete to cook, he said, “I never thought I’d be using a knife instead of playing soccer.” But he’s still a fan of the game and would like to play it if he could find a good, local after-hours team.

Trouble is, there are few “after hours.” He and his wife, Melody, a registered nurse, have a 3-year-old son named Pierce. On his two nights off a week, he takes care of Pierce while Melody works at Natividad Medical Center. When he’s working at Luca and Bouchée, she’s at home with Pierce.

When they met, Melody was in the restaurant business cooking and overseeing the front of the house. She was enrolled in the California Culinary Academy but decided not to continue.

It was because of Melody and Pierce that Balestrieri decided to move his family out of the L.A. area to the Monterey Peninsula. He had been working on the line at Patina restaurant in Los Angeles alongside long-time friend Chef Walter Manzke. In fact, the two shared digs together for a while before the couple met and married.

Manzke became the executive chef of L’Auberge Carmel when it opened here in 2004 after owners David and Kathleen Fink added the hotel and restaurant as a second property after Bouchée. Manzke was heralded far and near for his degustation dinner extravaganza at L’Auberge and for creating fine dining at Bouchée.

It was Manzke who told Balestrieri about the concept of Cantinetta Luca as a third Fink enterprise in Carmel and asked him to come to the Monterey Peninsula. He didn’t hesitate a minute. Carmel would be a better place for his little family. He worked at Bouchée until Luca opened.

Enamored with the idea of sunny California, he was shocked at the floods and mudslides in Los Angeles and at the fires that followed. But last week in Carmel was the most bizarre week of weather he had ever experienced, he said. With the high velocity winds and drenching rain came outages in Carmel that shut the restaurants down.

Although both restaurants have gas ovens and ranges, the ventilation hoods over the stoves are electrical and by law must be operating. “We lost 100 reservations both Friday and Saturday, and although the power came back on at 6:30 Saturday night, we didn’t have enough time to do the prep work which usually begins at 3 in the afternoon,” he said.

Bouchée recently has been reinvented, Balestrieri said, with new decor by Kathleen Fink and an open kitchen. A new menu will be initiated this spring — “more casual, simpler food, less expensive, more approachable,” according to Balestrieri. “It will be a modern French bistro.”

Is it demanding to have to write a traditional Italian trattoria menu for Cantinetta Luca and a French bistro menu for Bouchée?

“Not really,” he said. “Both cuisines are Mediterranean — not exactly unfamiliar territory to me.”

About two days a week, when chef de cuisine Kevin Hincks is off, he works the line at Luca right alongside his kitchen staff, and when chef de cuisine Jesse Kloskey has his nights off at Bouchée, Balestrieri can be found on the line there.

Cantinetta Luca is located on Dolores and Bouchée is on Mission. both between Ocean and Seventh avenues. For information or reservations, call Luca at (831) 625-6500 or Bouchée at (831) 626-7880.

"I could not find any ignition source," said P.G. Fire investigator Jim Gunter. Crews from Cypress, Monterey and Carmel Valley fire departments also responded to the call.

In interviewing Frey about the fire, Gunter learned wood rats — rodents about the size of kittens — had inhabited the attic. "They like to chew on the insulation on wiring," he said.

In addition, the power that had gone out during the storms was restored earlier that morning, though it went off again.

"I've been collecting things since I was a kid," said Ray, who was trained to be a painter and a printmaker. "I walk in nature a lot, and I try to incorporate the items I find into my Firefighters put the ballpark damage estimate at $250,000 to the structure, including smoke and water damage in the other parts of the house, and $50,000 to its contents. Frey's insurance company will conduct its own investigation to try to identify the cause and determine what must be rebuilt and what can be saved.

John Hanson, the city's building official, helped Frey get in contact with his insurance company, and a roofing contractor installed tarps to protect against further water damage. Hanson said Frey relocated to a hotel, and neighbors and the Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross assisted him.

"He's pretty upset," Hanson said. "I think he's lived in the house for a long time."

work. Some things wash up on the beach."

Williams, who serves as an associate professor at the University of Texas at Arlington, combines photography and found objects.

"He looks at a theme or subject from two seemingly different points of view," said Reese of Williams.

Bodenheimer, who also lives in Santa Cruz, incorporates objects like tangles of fiber, weathered wood, broken glass, circular objects and crushed metal into her work.

"The elegance of simple objects such as tools and machinery, taken out of context, amazes me," Bodenheimer writes on her website.

The exhibit continues through Feb. 18.

The Cherry Center, which is located on the corner of Fourth and Guadalupe, will host a reception from 5 to 7 p.m. The gallery is open Monday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

a-pop alcoholic beverages. But, increasingly, first, business and international class cabins are rolling out healthful meals, with higher quality ingredients, often celebrity-chef-inspired. Ditto for cocktail menus and wine lists.

If you're flying out of Monterey Peninsula, here's what you can expect:

First class on United Airlines features Starbucks coffee and premium Champagne brands, while international first-class flights boast a Charlie Trotter-designed menu. Appetizers include roasted mushroom duck tart and seared sea scallops with organic kalamata olive-caper vinaigrette and fig chutney. A choice of four entrées includes apricot curry braised lamb medallion with Israeli couscous and spicy roasted eggplant.

US Airways was the first airline to bring Wolfgang Puck's world-famous fare to the skies, in coach class on domestic flights, no less. They manage to do the impossible — make reheated egg omelets in first class taste good. Standard issue complimentary beer, wine and cocktails round out a reliably positive eating experience.

From low-carb breakfast options, to warm mixed nuts and Pillsbury Southern-style biscuits, American Airlines first class palates are comforted at every turn. Wine consultant Diane Teitelbaum pairs entrées like miso chicken with Wente VS Sauvignon Blanc from Livermore Valley.

■ Iron City bound

I'm over and out on Thursday for a long weekend in Pittsburgh to celebrate the B.F.'s parents' 49th anniversary. I loaded up on practical warm winter wear, scoured the Internet for dining recommendations and took my expert carry-on only packing skills to an entirely new level. I'll be back with a full wining and dining recap from the Keystone State next week. Stay dry.

trade off playing Gabriella. The chief antagonists in the musical, Sharpay and Ryan, will be played by Bri Slama, a recent graduate of Santa Catalina School, and Robbie Lee of Pacific Grove High School.

As a movie, "High School Musical" was one of the most successful films the Disney Channel has ever produced, while the soundtrack sold more CDs in 2006 than any other pop recording. Moorero said it's obvious why the musical was so popular.

"The score is incredibly memorable," he said. "You walk out tapping the tunes and singing the songs. I can see why the

Selling books and baking goodies for charity

KELLER WILLIAMS Realty presents its first-ever Book Faire and Bake Sale Saturday, Jan. 19, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at its Carmel office.

While the staff at Keller Williams is best known for its local real estate expertise, it's also capable of baking up some tasty homemade items. And for anyone who loves to read, the event promises a bounty of affordable treasures with prices as low as 25 cents per book.

All proceeds benefit the Food Bank for Monterey County. Keller Williams is located at 26200 Carmel Rancho Blvd. For more information, call (831) 622-6200.

musical has become such a phenomenon. It's like a fever. It just keeps catching."

Last winter PacRep debuted its production of "High School Musical" at Santa Catalina School. Moorero is looking forward to staging the production at the Golden Bough.

"The staff is so much closer to the audience at the Golden Bough," he added. "There's so much more intimacy. This show fills up the room to the rafters."

PacRep will present a preview of "High School Musical" Thursday, Jan. 17, at 7:30 p.m. The musical opens Friday, Jan. 18, at 7:30 p.m. and continues through Feb. 17.

Tickets range from $7 to $20. The Golden Bough Playhouse is located on Monte Verde Street between Eighth and Ninth. For more information, call (831) 622-0100 or visit www.pacrep.org.

Financial Focus

by Linda Myrick, AAMS
Financial Advisor

MAKE SOME FINANCIAL RESOLUTIONS - AND STICK TO THEM

It's time to make New Year's resolutions. Here are a few financial ones to consider:

- Boost your 401(k) contributions. If your salary goes up every year, increase your 401(k) contributions at the same time.
- Fully fund your IRA. Write out a check to your IRA each time you get paid, or, better yet, have the money automatically sent from your checking account. A systematic investment plan does not guarantee a profit or protect against loss. Be sure you consider your financial ability to continue investing through periods of low price levels.
- Build an emergency fund. Put away six to 12 months' worth of living expenses in a liquid account, and only use the money for emergencies.
- Cut your debts. The less you owe, the more you can invest.
- See a professional. If you've never worked with a financial advisor, make 2008 the year to start.

By following these resolutions in 2008, you can help position yourself for financial success - for many New Years to come.

Club pros prepare for battle

A FEW weeks before professional golfers and celebrities hit Pebble Beach during the national pro-am, the men who help people become better players will hold a tournament of their own to see who's top dog on the Monterey Peninsula.

"We decided in the wintertime, when things are a little more quiet in the community, to do a local event," said Bill Sendell, head pro at Spyness Hill. "We would have a little competition and see whose club pros would come out on top."

The second annual Monterey Peninsula Club Pro Cup will be held Jan. 14 at Corral de Tierra and Jan. 15 at Poppy Hills. Two-man teams representing 22 golf courses will compete, and the public is invited to watch. The teams typically comprise the head pro and an assistant pro.

The tournament even has some sponsors:

Fairway & Greene clothing, Wizard Winery and Couch Distributing. Other businesses and groups also pitch in.

"Last year was first time," said Sendell, who came up with the idea. "Tehama came out on top."

"All of us like to compete and got into the business because we love golf," he said. Perhaps surprisingly, "a lot of us don't play enough golf. We get busy with work and doing what we do, and sometimes we forget to play."

a bridge lower down the river in case the boys let go and couldn't get out of the water.

Emergency workers outfitted in life jackets and armed with floatation devices formed a "human chain," according to O'Brien. "We held on to each other so no one would fall."

Frost reported Monterey County Sheriff's Deputy Jesse Villasenor pulled the younger boy to safety, and the older boy was assisted from the branch.

By the time they were brought ashore and bundled into the ambulance to get warm and checked out, the brothers had been in the water about 30 minutes, according to O'Brien. The boys were wearing swimsuits and had obviously planned to go in.

"They told the sheriff they were building a dam," Frost said. "The parents had given them permission to go to down to the river, but they had no idea they were going in the river."

Afterward, O'Brien coiled the hose back up and placed it where he had found it. He was preparing to leave when a firefighter from Carmel Valley asked his name and thanked him. O'Brien did not want to take credit for rescuing the kids, who were taken to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula for precautionary checkups.

"Every so often, something inside you tells you to look a little bit closer or pay attention," he reflected. "It was just one of those fortunate unfortunate events."

Lucile Lioud Low

June 14, 1920 - January 3, 2008

Lucile Lioud Low, age 87 died at home, in Carmel on January 3, 2008. Born June 14, 1920 in Saint-Denis, France, she was the only daughter of Robert and Lucie Lioud. Mrs. Low graduated from the Sorbonne in Paris with a degree in Pharmacy in 1944. She married Kirby P. Low in France in September, 1945 and moved to the U.S. A resident of Carmel since 1951, Mrs. Low taught French at the DLI for 12 years and she retired working for the State of California. Mrs. Low was an active parishioner of the Carmel Mission and attended daily Mass until recent years. She will be remembered as a loving wife and mother, for her walks to the post office, as well as the beach, and for the wonderful knitting.

Mrs. Low was preceded in death by her husband of 60 years, Kirby P. Low. She is survived by her brother, Claude Lioud, of France, his wife, Jeannette Lioud, her brother-in-law, Peter A. Low, of Albuquerque, N.M. and her five children and five grandchildren.

Donations may be made to VNA Hospice, 6 Quail Run Circle, Ste. 101, Salinas CA 93907.

ing going on," Martin said. Even an employee's 4-year-old daughter, Galilea Vera, decided to donate her hair.

"Galilea stole the show," Martin said of the little girl, who arrived at the salon Saturday afternoon. "She got up there like a princess."

Martin and Goleyar Karimnouri were the first to climb into the chairs and lose their locks that morning, and all day long, they and their fellow donors were surrounded by supportive friends, family and coworkers. Breakfast bagels and donuts, drinks and Bernardus' fine wines fortified them until Stamenov brought lunch.

"Even Chef Cal got in the chair and got a haircut as a way to show his support," Martin said.

When Jessica Satow, who works for pastry chef Ben Spungin, had her ponytail lopped, Spungin arrived and distributed his signature handmade chocolate truffles.

During his turn in the chair, Frey couldn't help mugging it up as Yolanda Rudy and her helpers separated his long hair into four ponytails — one on top of his head, one on each side and one in back — and then chopped them off with scissors.

One of the women began tacking the ponytails up on the wall of the salon, and Martin reported hers was the shortest, at about 11 inches.

"We had some that were 12, 13 and 14 inches," she said. In addition to new hairdos, the women received mini makeovers.

Rudy donated all of the haircuts.

"She was absolutely amazing to work with," Martin said. "She and her staff really helped us celebrate!"

Martin said she might grow her short hair long again to make another donation in the next few years. If that effort even remotely resembles the Jan. 5 haircutting extravaganza, recruiting people to join her shouldn't be a problem.

"It was more fun than I even expected it to be," she said. "And I thought it was going to be great."

Presented by Kevin & Sue Anne Donohoe

ALL CHARGED UP

To provide the electricity to keep the battery charged, the alternator and the voltage regulator work in tandem. While the alternator generates the electrical current necessary to charge the battery and power the electrical components as the engine runs, the voltage regulator controls the amount of current the alternator produces. Without the voltage regulator, the amount of current produced by the alternator would damage electrical components and the battery. Normally, the alternator and the voltage regulator are reliable components that provide trouble-free service. So, if there is a reduction in current, it is far more likely that the alternator drive belt is to blame rather than a defective alternator or regulator.

We have knowledge to properly repair and more importantly maintain your entire electrical system whether you own a car, truck or SUV. We recommend that you get regular check-ups for your vehicle. Bring your vehicle to us for preventative maintenance, it will keep your car running stronger and longer which will end up saving you money over the life of your vehicle. We are located at the corner of Figueroa and Franklin, just west of Jack's Park in Downtown Monterey.

P.S. Because a loose alternator drive belt can significantly reduce the current output of the alternator and cause the battery to run down, belt tension should be checked frequently.

When a wire breaks

TRANSPORTATION IS one of the essential things that make modern civilization — and the cities that are its highest achievement — possible.

But it's not the movement of people or goods that is most important. It is the movement of energy.

The first thing people need to live is the energy they get from food. And unless food is moved quickly and efficiently, everybody has to eke out a living from the land around them. The human race tried that (and is still trying it in a few pitiful corners of the world). Average life expectancies of fewer than 30 years, which prevailed everywhere until the modern era, are pretty much all you need to know about what a miserable way hunting and gathering, or small-scale agriculture, was to live.

Thousands of years ago, people began to move food and other essential commodities by water. Thus, the earliest cities required access to a river, lake or ocean. Moving water was also the earliest source of energy for processing and manufacturing, which allowed cities to grow even larger, as people diversified ways to acquire food by working at something else. This specialization resulted in explosive growth in many beneficial fields, such as engineering, chemistry and medicine. In the Renaissance, innovations and inventions began to come at a rapid pace.

One of these was the discovery of steam power, fueled by burning coal. Suddenly, factories could be located someplace other than on a river. Not only that, but machines no longer had to hold still. The railroad, the steamship, the motor car and the airplane are all refinements of this basic idea.

And with the discovery of electricity and the invention of efficient ways to generate and move it, the number of civilized gadgets available at low prices exploded. Today, when we use any one of the hundreds of things we call "necessities" we stand squarely on the shoulders of the clever people who invented these devices, and their antecedents, during the last five centuries.

Another benefit of modern technology and science is that humans live far longer and healthier and in much greater comfort than their ancestors could have dreamed. Not only that, but these days very few families in developed countries know the sorrow of the death of a young child. As recently as the 19th century, even in the United States and Europe, the exceptional family was the one that had not lost a baby to disease.

And that brings us to the importance of the wires that fell into the streets of the Monterey Peninsula last weekend. It's amazing how different one's home seems when it has been dark and cold for several days. And that's because of more than just temporary discomfort and inconvenience. It's because the thin wires on the poles outside not only connect us to the power plant. They connect us to our civilization.

Letters to the Editor

Carmel's Gaza Strip

Dear Editor,

The "Golden Rectangle," highly touted by local realtors, is a lovely area to reside in, and it is equally understood that it takes second place to the city's commercial interests, should an emergency occur. Such being the case on Friday at 8:45 a.m. when a power failure, caused by wind and rain, began all over town. By Saturday afternoon, commendably, power was restored in the business district and the lights were blazing in shops, establishments and galleries. Not so in many residential areas of the one-square-mile city, which certainly cannot be called remote, nor rural. Six days after the storm, trees and branches were still blocking roads, and power was still nonexistent in residential areas, specifically San Antonio and Scenic Road. Residents were forced to leave their homes after so many hours of hope, persistence and eventual disappointment in local services, to seek shelter with friends or local hotels to obtain basic comforts and care for invalid persons. It is deplorable to live in a city that disregards its permanent residents to that extent. And by the way, thank you for your efforts, Carmel city maintenance crew, wherever you worked, and PG&E, a truly "unequal" Energy Supplier.

Dieter Back, Carmel

'Negative comments unfair'

Dear Editor,

As a veterinary professional I feel great sadness when I hear of the loss of a beloved pet. The full page ad displayed Dec. 21 in The Pine Cone was full of grief and I am deeply sorry for the person(s) who suffered the loss of their canine family members. As a representative for the members of the veterinary community in our area, I can attest to the quality of veterinary care and compassion we, as veterinarians, share for our profession, our patients and our clients. Unfortunately, bad things happen despite our best intentions and all patients do not improve. Some die. The negative comments directed at the Santa Cruz Veterinary Hospital in this ad were unfair. I have a collegial relationship with this group, and I can attest to the quality of care provided for by the doctors and staff that work there. I understand freedom of speech is important, but ethics are also important. I would encourage the editors of The Carmel Pine Cone to edit publications that unfairly and publicly discredit well-meaning individuals.

Ann Gratzek, President, Monterey Bay Veterinary Medical Association

feet away. While the fire station is powered by electricity, it features a backup propane generator.

Currently, AT&T's backup system utilizes a battery that works for about 24 hours. Goetz said that isn't a viable solution.

"When the battery goes dead, there's no way for a resident to call 911 if there's an emergency," she explained. "That's a huge problem."

Tree work pays off

Much of Palo Colorado Road winds its way toward Botcher's Gap under the dense canopy of redwoods, oaks, laurels, maples and madrones. The eight-mile-long county road has long been vulnerable to closures as a result of falling trees during bad weather, and the recent die-off of tanbark oaks — a result of sudden oak death — only compounds the problem.

Worried that the dying oaks were a significant fire risk, Goetz lobbied government agencies in May to remove as many dead trees as possible.

"I contacted the county and Cal Fire to see what they could do," she recalled.

The agency charged with providing power along Palo Colorado Road, PG&E, sent a work crew down the coast in late August. Two months later, it completed a project that cleared much of the dead wood along the county road.

"PG&E did a wonderful job," she said. "We were really lucky. Only one tree came down on the road during the storm."

That young tree, not a dead oak, still managed to take out an electrical wire, which temporarily cut off power to much of the area.

Fire strikes during storm

In the midst of last Friday's big storm, most Big Sur residents didn't even notice the fire at Rocky Point Restaurant.

While Goetz said the cause of the fire is still under investigation, she suggested its cause appeared to be "electrical" and "storm-related."

Mid-Coast firefighters were joined at the scene by Cal Fire crews stationed in the Carmel Highlands. The fire was quickly extinguished. "The fire basically burned through one wall upstairs," Goetz reported. "They were very lucky."

Conservation urged

Ironic as it may seem, water conservation is still the order of the day for residents of the Monterey Peninsula.

Last week's storm provided enough rainfall to boost the water supply to normal levels for this time of year. And with power restored to pumps, Cal Am was back to normal by mid-week. But water conservation measures have nothing to do with how much it rains.

Last year, the Peninsula received only 55 percent of its average rainfall. The water year is measured from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30.

"As of Jan. 7, 8.7 inches of rainfall have been recorded at the San Clemente Dam site, which is 111 percent of the long-term average," said Darby Fuerst of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. More than six inches of that fell last week.

"The rainfall has certainly helped our situation," said Catherine Bowie, Cal Am community relations manager. "But coming off of a dry year, we're still going to have to get some more wet weather this month and in February and March before we're back to normal."

And she noted that the Peninsula's need for a long-term water solution stems from the lack of her company's water rights in Carmel Valley, not from variations in rainfall from one year to the next.

Bowie said some residents still have their sprinklers and outdoor irrigation set to automatically turn on, something Cal Am is discouraging.

"Outdoor use makes up about half of the water consumed by residents and businesses," she said.

"Landscaping simply does not require that level of watering right now. Also, check for leaks inside your home and have them repaired as soon as you notice them."

POLICE LOG

Delfino Place and Carmel Valley Road for mechanical violation. The driver was cited for driving on a suspended driver's license, violation of probation and other miscellaneous violations.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 31

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Responded to a Lincoln Street bar to a report of possible vandalism to a window. Upon investigation, there was no damage to the window and it was determined that no crime had taken place.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Reporting party misplaced purchase made from a store on Ocean Avenue while patronizing other shops in the commercial district. If located, please notify RP.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Monte Verde Street resident reported someone dumped large bags of garbage into her garbage can. There were wet blankets inside the bag along with opened mail. The officer checked with Salinas Police Department to determine if a crime had occurred, but they did not have any recent crimes reported under that name or address.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle stopped on Rio Road for expired registration and the juvenile driver was found to be driving with another juvenile, causing the 16-year-old driver to be in violation of her provisional license. She was also found to be in possession of Vodka. Cited and released to her parents.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance were dispatched to a medical emergency on Casanova. Upon arrival, found a female in her 90s without complaint. Patient refused treatment and signed a medical release form.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance responded to a report of a water leak at San Carlos and Seventh. Upon arrival, found a small leak coming from the street around a patch in the asphalt. Cal Am notified.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine, ambulance and Monterey chief were dispatched to a coastal incident at Scenic and 12th. Upon arrival, it was determined that the victim had self-extricated from the water. Paramedic from the ambulance made contact with the patient and determined no medical existed. CFD also requested the response of the Monterey County Sheriff's Dive Team. The dive team was canceled nine minutes later.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ambulance responded to Portola Road for a male patient with a possible broken arm. Code 2 to CHOMP.

Carmel area: Suspect No. 1 reported a disturbance with suspect No. 2 over a civil issue at The Barnyard. Case suspended.

Carmel area: A subject on Ocean Avenue reported that numerous employees received harassing telephone calls.

NEW YEAR'S DAY

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance were dispatched to a medical on San Carlos Street. Upon arrival, found a female in her 80s with complaint of nausea and vomiting. Patient loaded and transported to CHOMP.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: On New Year's Eve, units responded to fireworks seen at Carmel Beach. A subject was seen shooting off fireworks and was contacted at 0001 hours. The fireworks were confiscated and the subject, a 55-year-old male, was issued a citation for possession of the fireworks.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance were dispatched to a vehicle/pedestrian accident at Ocean and Forest.

Upon arrival at 1244 hours, found a male in his 50s complaining of shoulder pain after being struck by a vehicle at a low speed. Patient loaded and transported to CHOMP by ambulance. Police also responded and took a report. A female driver had struck the pedestrian. Investigation continuing.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance were dispatched to a medical at Del Mar. Upon arrival, found a female in her 30s complaining of anxiety. Patient signed a medical release form.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance were dispatched to a fire alarm activation at Lincoln and Fifth. Upon arrival, firefighters found an alarm sounding with smoke from burned food in one of the units. Smoke ejector used to clear out smoke and system reset.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: At 2053 hours, a report of a fire alarm activation at Carmel Plaza was received. Fire engine and ambulance responded. Carmel police on scene gave update of water flow and smoke showing from Lenny's Deli on the first floor of the Plaza. Upgraded to structure fire. Chiefs from Monterey and Pacific Grove, engines from Cypress Fire, second ambulance and a second Carmel Fire engine responded. Attack lines taken to entrance of deli, thermal imaging camera indicated fire in the area of the range and hood system. Fire controlled and extinguished by sprinkler system. Interior crew checked for extension to rear access area and adjacent businesses. Water damage occurred to adjacent businesses and smoke damage to business on floor above. Fire damage limited to range and hood system. Carmel police officer was first on scene. He reported door to business was open and heavy smoke at ground level. No employees on scene. Does not appear that hood system activated, ed, but a discharged fire extinguisher was found toward the rear exit of the business. There appeared to be dry chemical residue in the area of the fire origin. Fire investigator called. Carmel P.D. on scene investigating with Carmel building official. Salinas Rural Fire investigator also on scene. Business owner was on scene. Monterey Health Department notified. Damage estimated at $5,000 to structure and $10,000 to contents. Cause under investigation.
