Whirlwind effort makes dying boy's dream vacation a reality

By MARY BROWNFIELD

MONTEREY PENINSULA residents banded together to create an all-expense-paid final week of fun for an 8-year-old Texas boy expected to succumb soon to a brain tumor. Peter Barr and his family arrived in Carmel on Valentine's Day for a vacation that was cut short when his condition took a dramatic turn for the worse, necessitating a rushed flight home.

Del Mesa Carmel resident Terri Brazinsky — who organized the effort to successfully solicit about $3,000 in goods and services, and an equal amount of cash — said several dozen generous donors made the family's final trip together more memorable and love-filled than she had ever imagined.

"The true story has become how this community pulled together in 12 days to make this possible," she said Wednesday. "It's a love story about the Monterey Peninsula that happened on Valentine's Day."

Brazinsky first learned about Peter, who was diagnosed with an inoperable brain tumor in December 2006 shortly before his 7th birthday, from neighbors Phyllis Kurtz and her husband, Bob, the little boy's second cousin. According to Brazinsky, the "diffuse intrinsic pontine glioma" was discovered after Peter "started withdrawing from being what his dad called 'an energetic charmer' who made other

FOR SALE ON CRAIGSLIST: $30M BIG SUR RANCH

By CHRIS COUNTS

WITH AN estimated 30 million users a month and a massive inventory that ranges from new jobs and used cars, to old trinkets and contemporary dating arrangements, Craigslist is a place where you can find just about anything. But the appearance last week on the popular website of a 360-acre oceanfront Big Sur ranch — offered for $30 million — came as a shock to some who believed the property had been preserved as open space.

In 2003, the Big Sur Land Trust was given a one-sixteenth interest in the ranch as a donation. Local media reports at the time hailed the donation as an important first step in keeping the property from being further developed.

But according to BSLT spokesperson Rachel Saunders, the Carmel-based nonprofit couldn't find a way to buy out the other 19 parties who own a piece of the ranch.

"The bottom line is that it was financially out of reach," Saunders conceded.

Despite the fact the ranch is on the market, the BSLT hasn't given up hope the property will be preserved in its present state.

"We are still open to working with existing and new [property owners] to come up with a scenario that would protect the conservation values of the ranch," she said.

The BSLT is specifically interested in preserving the ranch's historic character, its native maritime chaparral and the views for passing motorists.

Thieves break through wall to steal $$$ wine

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WINE-SAVVY BURGLARS committed a heist at The Cheese Shop in Carmel Plaza early last Sunday morning, cutting a hole through the store's back wall and making off with more than $15,000 in rare vintages.

According to Carmel Police Sgt. Mel Mukai, the suspects broke into the shop on the lower level of the shopping center by cutting through sheetrock from a service hallway that connects several stores. Although the Plaza's alarm system was turned off, motion sensors recorded activity in the hallway between 4:56 a.m. and 5:16 a.m. Feb. 10.

The thieves first cut a small, triangular hole in the wall, perhaps to insert a probe to determine the best spot to make access, and then cut away another section of sheetrock large enough to fit through, according to Mukai.

Inside the shop, which has a cheese counter at the front and wine, including a small bar for tasting, at the rear, they found their targets.

"They were very selective about what wines they took. They were higher end and more exclusive," Mukai said. The burglars stole 47 bottles worth a combined $15,914, including multiple vintages of highly sought after Napa Valley wines produced by Bond Estates, Dalla Valle Vineyards, Harlan Estate and Peter Michael Winery. They swiped five bottles of cult wine Screaming Eagle valued at $4,475 total and a 6-liter bottle of Silver Oak, another Napa Valley vintage, worth $650.

"The employees initially didn't notice anything when they walked through the front door, until they reached the back room and saw the damage and the various boxes that had been strewn on the floor," Mukai said.

Cheese shop owner Kent Torrey, who has operated the business for more than 30 years and was preparing to open a sister store in Santa Barbara this week, said the thieves knew what they were after.

"They targeted very rare, expensive wines," he said.

Scenic Road house could get fake lawn

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CITY'S building code practically insists on wood windows, no matter how convincing a vinyl version might appear from the street. Fake lawns, on the other hand, might be OK.

The Carmel Planning Commission discussed a Scenic Road resident's application to install 140 square feet of artificial turf in his front yard last week but delayed deciding until its members could review a complete landscape plan for the property.

Senior planner Sean Conroy recommended against putting the lawn in the front yard not because it's fake, but because the city's design guidelines say that "lawns visible from the street are inappropriate to the forest set-

SURF N SAND GETS COMMISSION'S OK FOR WINE TASTING

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SURF N Sand can offer customers sips of select vintages after all.

Nothing in the store's application for a permit to offer wine tasting changed between last December, when the Carmel planning department recommended denial, and the second hearing on the matter Feb. 13. Instead, senior planner Sean Conroy took another look at the conundrum and devised a possible solution.

Surf N Sand, a 3,000-square-foot store that carries wine, spirits, books, magazines, greeting cards and snacks, is located at Torres and Sixth in the residential-commercial district. Since half of its sales involve beer and wine, the city considers the shop out of conformance with the zoning code, and Conroy reported most of the other items it carries are also disallowed.

"Nonconforming uses cannot expand, and no changes to nonconforming uses are allowed that might extend the life of the use," according to Conroy's report to the planning commission. "The RC District is primarily a non-retail zone."

But that zoning does permit full-line markets, and next door to Surf N Sand is Bruno's Market. Though they operate under separate business licenses in independent storefronts, they are owned by members of the same family and share a parking lot. If the two were connected, Conroy said, the wine tasting could be permitted as part of the market.

"The presence of a full-line market next door, sharing the same parking lot and owned by the same family, creates a situation not anticipated by the zoning code," Conroy wrote. Bruno's is run by Fermin Sanchez, while Surf N Sand is presided over by son Ryan Sanchez.

"Creating a common entrance between the two is not feasible," Conroy said during last Wednesday's hearing, addressing a recommendation planning commissioners made when they considered the application last December and delayed voting so other options could be explored. They had also suggested combining the stores' business licenses, but the Sanchezes said that would be unlikely.

"Staff looked at the possibility of tying the approval of the wine tasting to Bruno's Market, as long as the market was there," Conroy continued. "With common ownership on the same site, we could see them as the same use. That's the approach we took, and staff is recommending approval."

Just 64 square feet

In his report, Conroy wrote, "It can be argued that the intent of the municipal code is met because the full-line market and wine shop are adjacent, and patrons of one business can conveniently shop at the other."

He suggested several conditions on the permit, including restricting the tasting area to 64 square feet — approximately 2 percent of the store's floor area — and prohibiting Ryan Sanchez from posting signs advertising the service.

Last October, when Sanchez requested permission to offer wine tasting, he said the service would make customers happy and help the store develop better relationships with vendors. Wine tasting would probably be offered for two or three hours in the mid-afternoon Tuesdays or Wednesdays, when traffic is slow.

Representing the Sanchez family at the hearing, attorney Jim Heisinger said he appreciated Conroy's revised take on the situation and suggestion of tying the approval to the continued operation of Bruno's.

Carmel Residents Association member Monte Miller agreed.

"I think they did a nice job of compromising, and I like the idea very much of having wine tasting," he said.

"Staff wrote it up very nicely," commented planning commission chairman Bill Strid. "It's too bad we couldn't come up with that last time."

Commissioners unanimously approved Surf N Sand's permit for wine tasting.

TIME TO STRUT YOUR STUFF!

When it comes to suspension components, your vehicle's springs function to absorb road shocks, and it is the shock absorbers' job to dampen the bouncing spring. Without "shocks" the vehicle would bounce uncontrollably when it hit a bump. Some vehicles have only shocks, which are part of the overall suspension, while others have just struts, which are complete suspension assemblies. Without them to dampen the spring oscillations from road shock, the vehicle would bounce over bumps and be very difficult to control and handle. Instead, they preserve driving manageability by keeping the tires on the road and not allowing them to bounce. So, when your vehicle does bounce, it is time to inspect the shocks and/or struts.

Suspension components are not only crucial for your comfort, but for you and your family's safety as well. If you've noticed bouncing in your ride come to us as soon as possible. We have the modern diagnostic equipment, top of the line tools, and experienced technicians to help you with your suspension system. Call us to set an appointment today. Please don't wait until it needs to be towed to us. Let us perform preventative maintenance on a regular basis before that happens.

P.S. Springs hardly, if ever, need replacing. Shock absorbers/struts wear out on a regular basis.

Did you know...

Chinese settlers first arrived in Monterey County in 1851 when a junk that sailed 7,000 miles from southern China drifted into a cove at Point Lobos. Four or five families aboard built wooden houses on the west shore of the cove, one of which still stands and is used as "The Whalers Cabin" museum. The Chinese immigrants fished and harvested abalone for years before some moved to Stillwater Cove in Pebble Beach in 1868 to live on land leased from David Jacks, and some moved to Point Alones in Pacific Grove to help establish a larger fishing village. The village, at a site now filled by Stanford University's Hopkins Marine Station, thrived for more than three decades as the Chinese fishermen caught tons of squid and dried it for export. It burned to the ground in 1906, in a fire many believe was deliberately set by hostile neighbors.

Police arrest parolee for prowling

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PACIFIC GROVE police officers took a 24-year-old parolee to jail after one of them spotted him lurking in the carport of an Ocean View Boulevard residence early the morning of Feb. 7, according to Cmdr. John Nyunt. "We've had burglaries all over the city," he said, "and an officer saw this guy in a carport looking through stuff."

The officer notified other cops in the field and cruised past to get a closer look at the suspicious man, who apparently saw the police cruiser and jumped behind the wheel of a used Yellow Cab parked nearby.

When police tried to stop him, the driver refused to pull over, though Nyunt said he was not speeding. Eventually they boxed him in and brought the car to a stop.

During questioning, the suspect gave a false name and would provide no identification, according to Nyunt, so police took him to the station and ran his fingerprints through the computer system. They learned he was Jorge Gonzalez, a Seaside parolee whose prior convictions include burglary, possession of stolen property and resisting arrest.

Nyunt reported Gonzalez' car contained numerous items that appeared to have been stolen, including cell phones, a GPS unit and a compressor. "We're still trying to identify the victims," he said.

Gonzalez also allegedly possessed burglary tools, and Nyunt said he had been rummaging through boxes stored in the carport when the officer first spotted him.

"Individuals know that communities such as Pacific Grove and Carmel are considered a safe haven, and people don't lock their doors," Nyunt said, adding that residents persist in believing, "This is not going to happen here."

"We're not asking people to be paranoid, but to take care of themselves and their property," Nyunt continued. "Criminals know where the pickings are good."

Gonzalez was booked into Monterey County Jail on charges of prowling, possessing burglary tools, providing false information to a peace officer and driving while unlicensed.

Wave drags man off beach at Limekiln State Park

A SAN Luis Obispo man was swept into the sea while hanging out on the beach at Limekiln State Park shortly after midnight Feb. 16. According to California State Parks rangers, 27-year-old Christopher Partridge was at the beach with several friends "just past midnight when a powerful set of waves hit the shore."

They reported one of his companions attempted to save him "but was nearly swept under as well, when another large wave hit the both of them."

Another of Partridge's friends ran to notify authorities he had been pulled in by a wave, and rangers, assisted by Monterey County Sheriff's Search and Rescue, Big Sur Fire Brigade and the U.S. Coast Guard, embarked on an extensive search. They used ocean vessels and helicopters to look for Partridge throughout the night and following day, eventually calling off the search early Saturday afternoon.

Partridge's body was recovered Sunday, and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office officially released the man's identity Feb. 20. Sgt. Mike Richards of the coroner's office said Partridge drowned, and toxicology results are pending.

According to the San Luis Obispo Tribune, Partridge, his cousin and some friends had been watching the waves that night, and he was hit while walking down toward the water. It reported his cousin, Eric Kleiner, had tried to rescue him.

A MAN'S bizarre tale of being randomly interrupted during his McDonald's meal by a kid who punched him in the face and then chased him around the restaurant with a stun gun appears to have been less than accurate, according to Pacific Grove Police Cmdr. John Nyunt.

"It turns out the victim knew the suspect," he said.

The incident occurred just after 5:30 p.m. Feb. 4 in the fast food restaurant in the Country Club Gate shopping center on Forest Avenue. Initially, the man stated he was simply eating when a male juvenile confronted him, punched him in the face and then chased him around the restaurant with a stun gun before running outside and jumping into a white car with North Carolina plates.

A woman who witnessed the altercation called police and ran after the car to take down the license plate number, according to Nyunt.

"Apparently they were throwing chairs at each other also, so we may end up charging everyone with a crime," he said, adding that the license plate number, as well as some other witnesses, yielded useful information.

"We have identified all the players," he said. Now police just have to find all of them, including the victim, to sort out exactly what happened and determine who may be guilty of what.

Police dog's noble paws left lasting impression on Peninsula

By MARY BROWNFIELD

EVEN THOUGH the German shepherd stopped patrolling the streets several years ago, people still ask about Canto, the dog that worked alongside Monterey Police Officer Mickey Roobash for six years. Born in 1997, Canto retired in 2005 and died last month.

"This is the most painful, yet proud memorandum I have had to write in my career as a police officer," Roobash said in the memorial he wrote following the death of his beloved dog. "I am sad to inform everyone that Canto, my partner and closest friend over the past nine years, passed away on Jan. 28, 2008, at 1107 hours, while being comforted by our county police chaplain, Father Carl Faria, at the Monterey Animal Hospital."

That moment marked the end of a long and significant chapter in Roobash's life and career. Since he first joined the department 15 years ago, he had dreamed of initiating a K-9 program.

In 1998, Monterey Police Chief Gary Brown, who had served in San Clemente at a department that had dogs on the payroll, "overheard from staff I was training on my own and had an interest," Roobash recalled. The chief requested he develop a proposal for the City of Monterey. Roobash happily obliged and requested officers from the City of Marina, which "has had police dogs forever," to come demonstrate the canines' obedience, discipline and skill.

During some public demonstrations, a few women — including one whose grandson had been rescued by search and rescue dog several years prior — became devoted to the cause and were "instrumental in selling this program to the public," Roobash said.

While he had proposed bringing one dog into the department, the fundraising was so successful that MPD eventually took on a second, named Charp, which enabled seven-day-a-week K-9 coverage.

"It really became one of the biggest community-involved programs for the City of Monterey," recalled Roobash, who also helped Carmel and Pacific Grove establish their K-9 programs.

(The programs were short-lived. Carmel and P.G. have no police dogs now and must request assistance from other agencies, including Seaside P.D., Marina and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office, when they need canine help searching for and apprehending suspects.)

Love at first sight

Master Canine in Riverside raised and trained Canto, and later provided Charp as well.

"The type of dog we wanted was one that was very friendly with the community, yet strong enough to respond when needed," Roobash said. "We wanted a dog that was very social and yet had a lot of nerve."

Roobash met Canto in May of 1999, when the pup was 2 years old.

"From the moment I picked up Canto's leash, I knew he was a special dog," he wrote in his memo. They attended a month-long training in Riverside and then routinely underwent maintenance training. His patrol car was specially outfitted to carry Canto and equipped with a remote control to open the door from a distance.

"I spent 10 hours a day with him working, plus at home, plus in training," Roobash said. "During the next six years, I probably spent more time with him than with anyone."

K-9s and their handlers are expected to be available 24/7 and always carry pagers.

"He's your pet, but you have to be careful with police dogs, because they are also police department property," Roobash said.

Fumiye Kodani passed away peacefully at home in Carmel Highlands on February 11. She was 89 years old. Fumi, as she was known, was born in Salinas to Sannosuke and Suye Sakoda and spent her lifetime in this area. She attended local schools and graduated from Salinas High School in 1936.

During WW2 her family was relocated to Poston, Arizona. There Fumi met Seizo Kodani, of the pioneering Japanese family of Point Lobos. They were married in Poston on February 6, 1943. After WW2 Fumi and Seizo returned to Point Lobos and established their home.

Fumi raised three daughters while working full-time. For over 30 years she was the devoted cook and companion to Ansel and Virginia Adams, of which she was most proud. Fumi had many interests including gardening, cooking, knitting, painting with her sister, Edna Ishikawa, and hiking and backpacking in the Sierras with nephews and nieces. She was an enthusiastic member of the local race-walking club established by Giulio di Petra.

Fumi leaves three daughters, Eugenie Childress and Marilyn Kodani, both of Carmel Highlands, and Lucinda Stenek of Honolulu, and three grandchildren.

The memorial service for Fumi is on Saturday, February 23 at 2PM at El Estero Presbyterian Church in Monterey.

The family wishes to give special thanks to Jody MacFarlane and Marquita from VNAHospice for their kindness and caring during the past several months. Thank you also, to Richard Marquez, caregiver, for his friendship and kindness to Fumi over the past four years. The family request contribution to VNAHospice or El Estero Presbyterian Church.

Criminals steal cars, contents

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CAR-RELATED CRIMES continue to plague Carmel-by-the-Sea, where residents and visitors frequently fail to lock their doors.

According to Carmel Police Sgt. Mel Mukai, 11 people reported their unlocked cars were ransacked by suspects who stole whatever miscellaneous valuables they could find. The thefts occurred between the afternoon of Feb. 14 and the morning of Feb. 15.

The victims mostly reside at the northern end of town. Thieves struck multiple cars parked on the same streets, Mukai said, including those in the areas of Guadalupe and Sixth, Guadalupe and Fifth, Lobos and Fourth, Lobos and Third, Santa Rita and Ocean, Santa Rita and Third, and Carpenter and Third.

"They were all thefts from unlocked vehicles — nothing was forced entry," he said.

They stole cash and coins, a hunting knife, a guitar, cell-phone chargers, CDs and an iPod. Other cars were ransacked, though nothing appeared to be missing.

Mukai encouraged any other victims, as well as anyone who might have noticed anything suspicious in the area during that time, to contact Carmel P.D. at (831) 624-6403.

Stealing wheels

Carmel Police Sgt. Mike Calhoun reported people have also been stealing cars. A Vizcaino resident told police her Volvo was taken from near her home Feb. 13 after she left the keys inside.

"Then Thursday at around 2 a.m., this car was recovered on Mesa Court," Calhoun said. During the investigation, officer Chris Johnson noticed another car parked nearby and ran its license plate number through the system.

"That was stolen out of Watsonville," Calhoun said.

It's not uncommon for criminals to take advantage of unlocked cars, especially when the keys are left inside.

"They steal it, and if there's anything inside it, they rummage through and then dump the car," Calhoun explained. "Or they use it to commit their thefts and then dump the car."

Mukai and Calhoun encouraged residents and visitors to always lock their cars and homes.

Big Sur chefs at chanterelle cook-off

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHEN A heady mix of locals and culinary types meet in Big Sur this weekend, the subject of conversation will focus on one of the coast's most mysterious but best loved residents — the chanterelle mushroom.

The Big Sur Lodge will host the second annual Big Sur Chanterelle Cook-Off Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 22-

"It's like a Big Sur mushroom love-in," beamed Jack Ellwanger, one of many volunteers helping to organize the fundraising cook-off.

The festivities begin Friday at 6 p.m. in the lodge's restaurant. An opening ceremony will be followed by a "community celebration." Wine will be provided by J. Lohr and Heller vineyards. Capping off the evening will be a fundraising silent auction and jazz from the Big Sur Steelhead 4.

Saturday starts off with a 9 a.m. mycological talk at the lodge, followed by a mushroom walk and lunch. Ranger Chuck Bancroft of Point Lobos State Reserve and members of the Fungus Federation of Santa Cruz will provide expert commentary. From 1 to 3 p.m., the lodge's conference center will host a panel discussion on chanterelles.

Mushroom enthusiasts return to the restaurant at 4 p.m., where the cook-off's Grand Competition will begin. Prizes include Best Featured Dish, Most Creative Recipe, Best Presentation and a Peoples' Choice Award. Judges include chef Wendy Brodie, former Ventana Inn general manager Paul O'Dowd and Jack Czarnecki, a chef, restaurateur and cookbook author who is considered by some fungus lovers to be "the uncontested czar of mushrooms in America." Music will be provided by Mountain Jam and poetry by Carol Shadwell. A second fundraising auction will follow at 6:30 p.m.

A handful of local restaurants will feature their own chanterelle breakfast specials Sunday morning. Meanwhile, the cook-off concludes with a workshop and lunch at the conference center at noon.

For those unfamiliar with the wonders and delights of the chanterelle, the brightly colored yet elusive fungus just happens to be a chef's best friend.

"Our chefs love to cook with chanterelles," Ellwanger explained. "They have a passion for foraging for them, they

Group protests renaming of San Simeon park after Hearst

By KELLY NIX

A BIG SUR conservation group is taking issue with a bid by members of the California State Parks Commission, including former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood, to rename San Simeon State Park after newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst.

Next week in Chatsworth, the state parks board will consider changing the name of the park, best known for its floundering elephant seals, to Hearst San Simeon State Park. Eastwood is vice chair of the commission.

But the name change isn't sitting easy with PelicanNetwork, a group whose president argues the 540-acre park shouldn't be named after Hearst, who he says was "nefarious," a "profligate prankster" and generally a "bad character."

"This is an awful idea," said Jack Ellwanger. "He squandered his father's fortune on pranks at the public expense, starting wars, creating 'Yellow Journalism,' and railing in his scandalous papers against anything he didn't like but usually was a public good."

California State Parks Superintendent Nick Franco said renaming the park makes sense because of the Hearst family's long history with the land.

"Half of San Simeon State Park is land from the Hearsts," Franco said.

At an Aug. 24, 2007, commission meeting, a representative from the Hearst Ranch Conservation Project proposed the name change, a proposal supported by Eastwood and other commissioners.

Also in August, the commission voted to reclassify William Randolph Hearst State Beach and add the land to San Simeon State Park, another reason for the name change, Franco said. Renaming the park would make it less confusing to visitors while retaining the Hearst name.

Ellwanger called the state park quintessential coastal landscape and argued it shouldn't be associated with the Hearsts.

"It's marvelous place," he said. "And to put the name Hearst on it is grotesque and celebrates all the worst instincts. [Hearst] represented all of the worst stuff of America."

At the meeting in August, commission chair Bobby Shriver said the more the commission could "use the Hearst name, which is a world-wide brand for this area, the better."

"I think it not only works from a branding point of view for the parks," Shriver said, "but also I think it does recognize the Hearst family's hard work, and the state's hard work and the parks department."

San Simeon State Park is among 48 state parks Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger has proposed closing to help save $13 million.

Besides PelicanNetwork, Franco said nobody else has come forward criticizing the move. He also said PelicanNetwork has already had ample time to weigh in on the idea of the name change.

"We had public meetings," Franco said. "And we had a public workshop in November to consider the change."

But Ellwanger said his group didn't even know about the proposal until this week.

"We never got any notice," he said. "They make no effort to encourage public participation."

According to its website, the PelicanNetwork, which Ellwanger said is 5,000 members strong, is composed of "networks and people who care about natural and cultural history."

'It's a marvelous place, and to put the name Hearst on it is grotesque'

Ellwanger said he's planning on attending the commission meeting Feb. 28 and 29 in Chatsworth to voice his opposition. Visitors to the group's website have begun signing a petition in opposition of the name change.

Ellwanger believes Eastwood, who could not be reached for comment Thursday, wouldn't continue to support the name change if he knew the PelicanNetwork's members were against it.

captures hours of the stillness of a forest at night. But when the nighttime meanderings of a mountain lion were recently recorded by the camera, researchers at the reserve celebrated like their team had just won the Super Bowl.

"There was a lot of yelling and screaming," recalled Rada Petric, who recently graduated from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro with a bachelors' degree in biology. "We were all pretty excited. Unfortunately, we're not studying cougars."

Petric, 23, is one of four young researchers at Hastings who are supplementing their college education by studying mice. Their project specifically studies high-pitched noises emitted by the tiny rodents.

"They produce ultra sonic vocalization that's above human hearing," Petric explained. "Our project is to determine what those vocalizations are for."

The primary function of the thermal imaging camera is to record the activities and behavior of mice, not larger mammals. The mountain lion cameo was simply an added bonus.

In an eerie video that's posted on the Hastings website, the unmistakable shape of a mountain lion slinks across the computer screen. The camera not only vividly captures the cat, but also its delicate, warm footsteps.

At one point, a bat flies through the frame, and after about a minute of seemingly aimless wandering, the lion moves out of the camera's view.

In addition to recording the appearance of a lion, the camera also recently caught the image of what researchers are calling the "mystery mammal."

"Everybody's guessing it's a ringtail," Petric said. "We've eliminated everything else."

The elusive ringtail cat, noted for its dramatic black and white ringed tail, is actually not a feline, but a cousin of the raccoon. Nocturnal, shy, solitary and timid, the ringtail — like the researchers — has a particular fondness for mice. In fact, early California homesteaders reportedly domesticated ring tails to keep down the mouse populations.

Plenty of mice

Fortunately for the researchers, Hastings boasts a healthy mouse population. For the past two months, Petric and the other three researchers — Catherine Carney, Eden Gonzalez and Jessica Brig — have been gathering data about the chattering mice.

"We set traps to catch the mice," Petric explained. "Then we put transmitters on them."

With the ability to track a mouse's movements and record its vocalizations, researchers hope to figure out what the heck mice are talking about that we can't hear.

According to Petric, it is possible that the conversations are related to mate selection or the raising of offspring. Complicating matters is the fact that two distinct species of mice live at Hastings, the monogamous California mouse and the not-so-monogamous brush mouse.

For now, the researchers' job is to simply accumulate as much information as possible for six months, and then return to North Carolina, where data will be analyzed and the mystery of what the mice are saying will, they hope, be unraveled.

In the meantime, Petric and her fellow researchers are having a blast collecting data, even if it means getting up at 3 a.m. and to check mouse traps.

"It is so amazing here," said Petric of the reserve. "And this is such an awesome project."

Free advice on estate planning

WHILE THE Carmel Foundation primarily exists to serve its 4,000 members, it frequently invites the public to take advantage of its offerings. On March 19, the nonprofit will host "Trusts and Estate Planning: What you Need to Know," an hour-long presentation by banker Liza Horvath and attorney Charles Des Roches.

Horvath, vice president and regional trust manager for First National Bank of Central California, and Des Roches, who works with the firm of Noland, Hammerly, Etienne & Hoss, will discuss:

- what people should know about trusts and why they should have one;
- trusts vs. wills;

- myths about trusts;
- do's and don'ts in estate planning;
- situations in which a trust can help, and
- the importance of charitable giving.

The free talk, which is open to anyone interested in learning about estate planning, will be held from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 19, in Diment Hall at the Carmel Foundation, Lincoln and Eighth in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The foundation, which receives no tax dollars, is open to anyone age 55 and older, and offer classes, low-cost meals, food delivery to shut-ins, transportation and other services. It is also the city's largest provider of low-cost housing for seniors.

ting and should be avoided.”

“The proposed artificial turf is a convenient and attractive product that may be appropriate in small areas located in the rear yard of the property,” Conroy wrote in his report to the commission. “However, the guidelines strongly discourage the use of formal lawns, whether natural or synthetic, in the front yard of a property.”

He recommended removing the lawn from the plans or putting it in the rear, though he admitted Scenic Road isn’t quite as forested as the rest of the city and “has a different dynamic” as a result.

“It’s a very nice product,” Conroy said of the lawn manufactured by Heavenly Greens. “It’s something the commission will probably see more of in the future as the quality becomes much better than in the past.”

In fact, some other homes, including one with a large garden on Carmel Point, already feature artificial turf.

Sidney Widrow, who lives in the Scenic Road house with his wife, said many homes in Carmel have lawns. During a lengthy presentation, he showed several photos to back his point.

“It’s amazing how many people have lawns of varying types,” he said, wondering why he shouldn’t be allowed to have one, too. “All I’m asking is to be able to put in a small lawn surrounded by shrubs so it would not be visible to people on the pathway, only from the house.”

Their neighbors, Stephen and Patricia Schott, sent a letter in support of the application.

But chairman Bill Strid said commissioners should see a full landscape plan in order to better understand the overall vision for the garden.

“I certainly think it’s something I could support,” Strid said before soliciting comments from other members of the planning commission, most of whom had no issue with the idea of artificial turf and were receptive to Widrow’s proposal.

The exception was Robin Wilson.

“I’m appalled staff has said this product is attractive and useful. I see we’re one step away from plastic trees in our front yards,” he said, adding that he was unconcerned about the desire for a lawn in front of the home. “Astroturf seems to be a terrible, terrible breach of the standards of landscaping in this town.”

Widrow said he wanted to install the Heavenly Greens turf rather than real lawn in order to cut water use.

“We are living under drought conditions, and if you pay attention to what’s happening at the state level, things are going to get worse,” he said, referring to a recently drafted order that would require California American Water Co. to halve its pumping from the Carmel River within six years.

Strid defended the fake grass. “I have seen this product in Carmel Point and other cities,” he said. “From a distance, it’s pretty remarkable, and even from close up, it’s remarkable.”

Carmel Residents Association President Roberta Miller

sided with Wilson and said she couldn’t believe commissioners were even debating the issue.

“It fades and looks really bad,” she said. “As far as the drought’s concerned, the opportunity to plant trees and do drought-resistant plants works very nicely in a natural setting.”

The commission is set to revisit Widrow’s proposal next month after he provides a landscape plan.

WINE

Torrey speculated the perpetrator planned the heist after tasting wine there.

"The two prime boxes I think were the trigger for this whole thing were the Screaming Eagle," he said, of which a single bottle can fetch more than $3,000 on the open market.

The others included vertical collections — several vintages of the same producer — and rare wines that have gained value because of their age. Some received perfect 100-point scores from wine critic Robert Parker.

Soon after learning of the break-in and determining what was missing, Torrey sent emails to restaurants and wine businesses "to try, if anything, to make it more difficult for the person to get rid of it."

He's been impressed by the response, including condolences from friends and colleagues, and help from producers such as Screaming Eagle, which alerted auction houses where the wines might appear.

Torrey said he's not dwelling on the loss, though it will cost him and his insurance company a lot of money.

"I will be able to buy more wine; I will have the ability to sell more wine," he said. "And I've put a curse on that wine. I hope that the person selling them trips."

PETER

spring, before it was discovered last August that the tumor was growing again," she reported. The family decided against further treatment, since none has been demonstrated as effective, so he could spend the remainder of his assuredly short life feeling as well as possible.

"With the brain tumor he has, most children last four months, and he's lasted more than a year," Brazinsky said.

Sea otters

Phyllis Kurtz said Peter's dying wish was to see sea otters. "So I said, 'We can make that happen. We have sea otters,'" Brazinsky recalled. "I'm sure she didn't believe me, but I said, 'I'm going to get going on this right away.'"

On Jan. 29 — Peter's birthday, coincidentally — she emailed everyone in her address book about his plight and her hopes of bringing the family to the Peninsula to make his final wish a reality.

Tina and Scott Barr, Peter's parents, planned to bring him and their three other children, ages 17, 15 and 12, to the Peninsula in March. But the young boy's condition worsened, so they decided to take their other kids out of school and move the date to Feb. 14.

With only 12 days to go before their arrival from McKinney, Texas, Brazinsky kicked her efforts into high gear. With her emailed plea circulating among friends and colleagues, and daughter April McNeill posting it in a few key locations, donations and offers poured in.

Pam Sheppard offered two rooms at her Horizon Inn gratis for four nights, and Andrew Johnson, program manager of sea otter research and conservation at the Monterey Bay Aquarium, proposed a special behind-the-scenes tour that would include feeding otters and taking a short boat trip. Monterey Bay Whale Watch donated an excursion, and Charlie Sammut, owner of Wild Things in Salinas, contributed a two-night safari stay, during which a trained elephant would deliver breakfast one day, and an equally adept orangoutang would bear the meal the next. A touring company in Elkhorn Slough sponsored a boat trip there, and several restaurants stepped up to provide meals. In addition, gift baskets overflowing with goodies, complete with spending money for the kids, were put together by Trailside Cafe owner Lisa Allen for each family member.

"They responded in an amazing way," said Brazinsky, a 39-year Peninsula resident. "It's overwhelming."

The adventure

The Barrs flew from Texas to Oakland Feb. 14 and were met by a limousine reserved and paid for by a Santa Cruz man who heard about Peter's story.

"They loved the limo ride, since they had never had one before!" Brazinsky said.

They arrived at the Horizon Inn, and the following morning embarked on their whale-watching trip. That afternoon included sandcastle building at the beach.

"Peter did not want to be known for his tumor," she commented. In fact, a television station in Texas had carried a story about a few other similarly afflicted children, but he wanted no part of it. "He didn't want publicity."

Consequently, Brazinsky wanted to respect the family's privacy and had no expectations of spending time with them, so she was deeply touched when she and her husband, John, were invited to dine with them Friday night.

"It's a special, special family going through a horrible, horrible thing," she said.

The next day included breakfast donated by the Trailside Cafe, swimming and tennis for the family at the Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach, and dinner hosted by Little Napoli in Carmel.

During Sunday's Elkhorn Slough Safari, Peter saw more than 90 otters, to his great delight, and he sat on the captain's lap to help command the boat.

But during lunch at Pasadera Country Club about an hour later, Peter "suddenly could no longer sit or swallow," Brazinsky reported.

On the family's website, Scott Barr wrote, "Peter asks with increased frequency to be able to go home to sleep in his bed and be with his doggy, Scamp. He is having increased difficulty swallowing and speaking, and he can no longer stand or sit up on his own. He has indicated problems with swallowing, and he can hear almost nothing that we say unless we are looking right at him and speaking in a very loud voice. It's time to be home so that we can prepare Peter and ourselves for what we think may be our last days together. We ask for your continued prayers at this time; we appreciate them now more than ever."

The family left the Peninsula at 5 a.m. Monday.

"Our wonderful neighbors and church members have already reached out to us en masse, and we feel like we have just received the world's largest group hug," he continued. "God bless the wonderful people of Monterey County for making our trip possible, and we feel so sad that we weren't able to take advantage of all that they offered us."

The following day, the couple "ran an errand that no parent should ever have to run." They finalized Peter's funeral arrangements at the mortuary and made plans to bury their son in a cemetery where, "when you stand still, you can actually hear birds singing, as opposed to trucks driving up and down U.S. 75." They selected his marker — cast bronze, with images of a polar bear, Peter and "a mountain scene complete with the pine trees he loves to smell at Grandma's cabin in Utah."

Thursday morning, Barr reported Peter was able to speak and asked for a fruit smoothie, much to everyone's delight.

Brazinsky thanked everyone who contributed to Peter's Animal Adventure. "You heard of a dying child wanting to see some sea otters, and this has grown into a gift of all time from a community that was ready, willing and able to share," she said in an email.

"We realize that he himself has full knowledge and acceptance that his end is nearly here. We can stand proud that we have all joined hands to make his last weeks a little richer and a whole lot more fun," she wrote. "We have truly shared and generously offered the bounties of what this community has to the Barr family of Texas, along with our love. Pat yourself on your collective back, my friends."

Tina and Scott Barr and their four children — 8-year-old Peter, who is dying from a brain tumor and dreamed of meeting sea otters while he still had a chance — Nathan, 17; Spencer, 15, and Lindsey, 12, came from Texas to the Peninsula for a dream vacation organized and paid for by generous residents.

WHY WAIT TO BUY?

"Bottom-fishing": a scary term often used when real estate prices have eased and seem on the verge of easing further. We don't advise it.

Actual bottom-fishing tends to yield up the least attractive fish, the ones who scrape the bottom of the sea and gobble up the most toxic of foods. That's relevant here. Because most buyers who wait anxiously for just the right moment—when home prices reach their cyclical bottom—end up losing far more than they gain. That moment is always impossible to pick out, especially when it is happening. And when it has passed and the market has moved into genuine recovery, there is no "rewind" button. It's gone.

And what, precisely, is gone? Not just the lowest possible price, but also the opportunity to negotiate the most favorable possible terms of purchase. As the market nears recovery, sellers' attitudes and flexibility quite naturally begin to firm. There is a sense that a stronger market is just beyond the horizon, and sellers are less inclined to do back flips for capable buyers.

Not that you want to demand back flips of your seller, but here is the truth about a buyers' market. Though buyers are in the driver's seat in most transactions, there is a kind of equal opportunity at work. The chances of negotiating a transaction that truly benefits all parties are far greater than they are in the heat of a sellers' market, when even the sellers are forced to act and react too quickly to engineer truly constructive terms of purchase.

Rather than waiting, most of us will benefit most greatly by working at the far more thoughtful pace allowed by a buyers' market...and no waiting for the fish on the bottom of the sea. For help call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

Old world art and modern technology meet in printmaking show

By CHRIS COUNTS

BETWEEN THE time cavemen started using red ochre to create images of prehistoric beasts and greeting card companies began mass-producing postcards of the “Mona Lisa,” printmaking evolved into a rich form of fine art.

Three new exhibits opening Friday, Feb. 22, at the Pacific Grove Art Center pay tribute to the various and evolving forms of printmaking — from traditional techniques such as engraving, etching and woodcut printing, to the wonders of digital technology.

“What makes it so fascinating is that we’re presenting work that was made in very old ways, work that was made with new digital ways, and work that combines the two,” explained Joan McCleary, director of the art center.

The highlight of this dazzling display of printed artwork is “Personal Impressions,” the 94th annual membership exhibition of the California Society of Printmakers. Featuring 250 members throughout the world, the society — founded in 1913 — is the second oldest of its kind in the United States.

“It’s very prestigious group,” McCleary explained. “They have a very strict juried process and it’s quite difficult to get in.”

The society’s membership includes Pamela Takigawa of Carmel Valley, a gifted printmaker whose striking prints of owls often adorn the walls of the Carmel Art Association.

In addition to “Personal Impressions,” the art center will present two smaller exhibits, “Triad Cross Pollination” and “Captured Views.”

The former features a collection of mixed-media monotypes and solar etchings by three San Francisco Bay Area printmakers, Linda Fillhardt, Valerie Magee and Mercy Smullen. For the past decade, the three friends have collaborated in a creative partnership, sharing techniques, ideas and studio space. All three are members of the California Society of Printmakers.

“Captured Views” combines Ilse Buchert Nesbitt’s woodblock prints with the printed words of poet Kristina Baer. A resident of Rhode Island, Nesbitt collaborated with Baer — a Pacific Grove resident — on “Captured Views: Impressions of 10 Gardens.” Like many printmakers, Nesbitt has an affection for and fascination with old-world technology. To create her prints, she employs a vintage 1897 letterpress.

“Visually, this is going to be a very exciting show,” McCleary added. “We’re very pleased and excited to be hosting it.”

The art center will host a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. The show will continue through April 3. It is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave.

For more information, call (831) 375-2208 or visit www.pgartcenter.org.

FolkYeah! returns to Big Sur with eight bands

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE LATEST edition of the FolkYeah! Big Sur concert series comes to the Fernwood Resort Friday and Saturday, Feb. 22-23.

Headlining Friday’s lineup is Six Organs of Admittance, a band that is essentially a vehicle for the many talents of singer and guitarist Ben Chasny. Hypnotic, dreamy and mysterious, his music explores the territory that lies between indie rock, folk and psychedelia.

Also performing Friday will be Howlin’ Rain of Santa Cruz, San Francisco-based singer-songwriter Donovan Quinn and I’m A Gun, a Seattle rock trio.

Howlin’ Rain, a up-and-coming band with an affection for melodic, groove-oriented rock, recently signed a recording deal with Rick Rubin’s American Records. Rubin, one of pop music’s most respected record company executives, is perhaps best known for a critically acclaimed series of acoustic records he produced for Johnny Cash near the end of the country singer’s life.

The Entrance Band, Golden Animals, Damazed and singer-songwriter Matt Baldwin perform Saturday. Baldwin is a native of Pacific Grove.

The music begins at 9 p.m. Tickets are $12 for each night. Fernwood is located on Highway 1, about 25 miles south of Carmel. For more information, call (831) 667-2422.

Youth group offers musical experience, cure for stage fright

By CHRIS COUNTS

MOST TEENAGERS would tremble in fear at the mere thought of it, but a local 17-year-old violinist will perform this weekend in front of an orchestra and an audience, and play a challenging solo by one of the greatest composers of the 20th century.

Genevieve Micheletti, a senior at York School, will perform with Youth Music Monterey’s Honors Orchestra at Sunset Center Sunday, Feb. 24.

“It’s very difficult to stand up there all alone with an orchestra accompanying you,” said Lorca, executive director of Youth Music Monterey’s Honors and Youth orchestras. “But it’s something they work hard at and should be proud of. It’s a wonderful learning experience.”

Micheletti will be featured as a soloist when the Honors Orchestra plays Sergei Prokofiev’s Concerto for Violin No. 2. The orchestra will also perform music by other great composers, including Tchaikovsky, Strauss and Brahms.

Stamenov candidate for esteemed award

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CAL STAMENOV, Executive Chef of Marinus Restaurant at Bernardus Lodge in Carmel Valley, is one of 19 nominees for Best Chef in the Pacific region — an award bestowed by the James Beard Foundation. Named for the late teacher, journalist and consultant "widely considered the father of American gastronomy," the foundation seeks to "celebrate, preserve and nurture America's culinary heritage and diversity in order to elevate the appreciation of our culinary excellence," according to Gina Martin, Stamenov's assistant.

Accomplished chefs known for setting high standards are eligible for the award, and during his years running Bernardus' kitchen, Stamenov has received copious praise for his creative dishes, inventive use of unusual ingredients and dedication to locally cultivated products. His work has netted a high ratings from Zagat and four stars from Mobil, among other accomplishments.

A candidate may work in any kind of dining establishment and must have been a chef for at least five years, with the three most recent years spent in the region. James Beard Award judges receive a list of about 20 nominees in each category and narrow the group to five finalists.

The field of more than 400 judges nationwide includes previous James Beard Award winners, the awards committee, 25 leading regional restaurant critics, food and wine editors, and culinary educators in each of the 10 regions.

Though specific criteria are different for each category, judges seek individuals whose contributions to their field are unique and long-lasting.

The winners will be announced Sunday, June 8, at the James Beard Foundation Awards Ceremony in New York.

YOUTH

A gifted young musician, she is the recent winner of Youth Music Monterey's annual Concerto Competition and serves as concert master for the orchestra.

According to Lorca, the Honors Orchestra — and its companion, the intermediate level Youth Orchestra — offer invaluable-experience for young musicians. Led by professional conductor and former Santa Cruz County Symphony music director John Larry Granger, the two orchestras include over 130 students from 36 schools. The musicians travel from as far away as Hollister, Gilroy and Santa Cruz.

"We offer the opportunity for young musicians to come together to play in ensemble," explained Lorca. "This is really the only opportunity like it in the county. Many of our students are going on to play music in college, and we want to offer them experience without having to look outside the county."

The concert starts at 2 p.m. Tickets are $5 for students, $10 for seniors and $15 for adults. For tickets, call (831) 375-1992 or visit The Bookmark in Pacific Grove. Tickets will also be available at the door. For more about the two orchestras, visit www.youth-musicmonterey.org.

about 12 miles south of Carmel, the Smith Ranch was home to historic Westmere Inn, an important stop on the stage line that once traveled the Old Coast Trail between Monterey and Big Sur. The ranch's founder, Richard Smith, actually drove the horse-drawn stage that navigated the route, explained Jim Somerville of Sotheby's International Realty, who has the listing and put the property on Craigslist. While the completion of Highway 1 in 1937 rendered the stage obsolete, the inn continued to operate until it burned down in 1959. A weathered sign, with the word "Westmere" in old English letters, is still visible from Highway 1.

A new owner might decide to bring the inn back to life. The Big Sur Land Use Plan, approved by the California Coastal Commission in 1984 indicates the owners of Westmere "may reestablish the historic use as a lodge of 24 units that reflects the historic character of the site in design and scale." But to comply with critical viewshed regulations, "the new lodge should use the original site, which is hidden from public view."

According to Somerville, the property has seven lots "that are legal but haven't been recorded."

While the ranch offers two existing "rugged cottages," Somerville believes some further development on the property is feasible. But he's also well aware of the complexities of building on the Big Sur Coast, and he said he's not shy about relaying that information to prospective buyers.

"There are many different ways the property could be developed as long as the owners keep in mind they are dealing with coastal living," he explained. "The California Coastal Commission scrutinizes things very heavily. Everything on the coastline has to be very low key and blend in with the surroundings. But people also have their property rights, and that's very important to consider."

Given the cost of local real estate, residents are accustomed to seeing nine-figure home prices. And while the ranch's $30 million price tag might look a little out of place at an online swap meet like Craigslist, it apparently isn't a record for the San Francisco-based Internet company.

"Spenny houses are not new on Craigslist," noted spokesperson Susan MacTavish Best. "We've certainly had houses well over $30 million on the site. There's a house in San Francisco [selling] for over $60 million right now. House listings on Craigslist run the whole gamut, from users selling houses in Massachusetts for a dollar, to palatial mansions in the tens and hundreds of millions."

Somerville said he put the property on Craigslist because of the site's popularity and "because it's free."

The Private Norberg Story

Me and the General
World War II at the homefront

Gunnar Norberg

Gunnar Norberg volunteered to serve in World War II. He was rejected: bad eyesight. Later he was drafted – then rejected: bad eyesight. Eventually the demands of the Great War led to his being drafted again; this time he was inducted – but then could not be assigned to combat overseas. Bad eyesight! First, his skills were tested on camp KP, but that only provided the motivation to be of greater and less unpleasant service to the Army – by explaining Why We Fight, running a camp newspaper, being driven around by the General, forming a football team and symphony orchestra, and even engaging in a little skulduggery now and then! For Gunnar, it was a different kind of war! Here's his memorable memoir, from the home front....

Plea to readers: Please help catch the wine thieves

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

LAST WEEKEND'S break-in at The Cheese Shop at Carmel Plaza is already covered on the front page by Mary Brownfield. But I'd like to help owner Kent Torrey put out an APB on what was stolen in case any readers happen to cross paths with the swiped collection of rare and collectible bottles and vertical vintages. The list of lost wine reads like a gourmet wish list. These thieves knew exactly what high ticket items to take.

Here's a list of the stolen wines (includes multiple bottles): 2000 Bond Melbury, 2000 Bond Vecina, 2001 Bond Melbury, 2001 Bond St. Eden, 2002 Bond Melbury, 2003 Bond Melbury, 2003 Bond Pluribus, 2001 Dalla Valle Maya and 1997 Dalla Valle Maya.

Also, 1999 Dalla Valle Maya, 1996 Harlan, 1997 Harlan, 1998 Harlan, 1999 Harlan, 2003 Harlan, 1997 Peter Michael Les Pavots, 2000 Peter Michael Les Pavots, 2003 Screaming Eagle, 2004 Screaming Eagle, 2002 6 liter Silver Oak Alexander Valley and 1999 1.5 liter Meursault Premier Cru Perrieres, Albert Grivault. Any information or leads that might help The Cheese Shop catch the thieves will be greatly appreciated. Please call (831) 625-2272.

Coco Beat will provide the dance tunes, Richard Myers will surprise guests with his magic, Pine Cone cartoonist Bill Bates will charm with caricatures, and guests will feast on sumptuous appetizers while bidding in live and silent auctions. Tickets are $60 per person in advance or at the door, with advance tickets including $5 in “lucky bucks” for chips and raffle tickets. Proceeds will support academic programs and the school’s career center.

To purchase tickets, send payment to Padre Parents, P.O. Box 222780, Carmel, CA 93922, or call (831) 625-7149.

Valley Ranch, Carmel Valley could become the next “it” spot on the Peninsula. Find it: 27 E. Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley; (831) 659-1280 or www.volcano-grill.com. Open daily, except Tuesdays, from 4:30 to 10 p.m.

Last weekend was spent soaking up all sorts of culinary goodness at The Broadmoor in Colorado Springs for its 6th annual Salute to Escoffier event and to work on an article about the property’s famous Penrose Room. Colorado has exactly one restaurant which boasts AAA’s highest rating, five diamonds, and it’s the Penrose Room. The man behind the success (OK, one of the many talented people) is Executive Chef Bertrand Bouquin, formerly of Club XIX at the Lodge at Pebble Beach.

Finally got around to trying Island Taco this week and my Baja-style fish taco and Mexican Caesar salad were pretty darn tasty. Owned by the brothers behind r.g. Burgers, Nadeem and Nabeel Bahu, Island Taco fills the much needed niche for fresh and affordable cuisine. Plus it boasts a lively atmosphere and friendly service to boot. Find it: The Crossroads Shopping Village, Carmel; (831) 624-8454. Open daily from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

This weekend, I took a group of lawyer friends who were in town for the Death Penalty Defense seminar to Monterey Fish House. I have a bad habit of writing this place off as a tourist destination, but it always exceeds my expectations — especially when compared to the nightmare of a fish house in my neighborhood. The always-buzzing ambiance, deft service and simple, yet tasty fish preparations are a refreshing change from the usual fish-on-the-dish found at many of the mediocre joints along Cannery Row and Fisherman’s Wharf.

I’m out of space, but have a recap of Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association’s annual fundraiser Denim & Diamonds coming next week. All I can say is that Rachael Martinez, Carmel High School grad and past MCVGA scholarship recipient, is my new hero. Stay tuned!

No backroom deals?

OUR CONGRESSMAN, Sam Farr, was quoted in the Monterey County Herald last week assuring his constituents “there won’t be any backroom deals” among the Democratic Party’s superdelegates to hand the party’s presidential nomination to Hillary Clinton.

But later in the same story, Farr said the reason Clinton “has more superdelegates is because she’s been in Congress longer.” Huh?

A backroom deal is one that’s made outside of the electoral process and out of the public eye. If Clinton has more delegates “because she’s been in Congress longer,” isn’t that the very essence of a backroom deal?

Farr didn’t say she has more superdelegates because she’s the more experienced candidate, or because she won several early primaries, or even because she has been running a better campaign. He said it’s because she’s been in Congress longer, which means she’s had time to develop close personal and collegial relationships with many of her fellow senators and representatives. Therefore, according to Farr, many of those officials, who are accorded superdelegate status by their party, are committed to support Clinton for president — regardless of what happens in the primaries. But don’t worry, folks. There won’t be any backroom deals to prevent Obama from getting the nomination!

On NPR this week, former Colorado senator and Democratic presidential hopeful Gary Hart, who had outsider status in the 1982 primaries and was opposed by the Democratic Party establishment, said Clinton and her former-president husband are busy calling Democratic superdelegates throughout the country reminding them of favors — and especially fundraising — done by the Clintons in years gone by. He pointed out that the very reason to have superdelegates is to allow a nominee to be selected who wasn’t favored by the electorate in the primaries. Otherwise, why have superdelegates at all? His insights are much more believable than Farr’s self-contradictory analysis.

If the people who run the Democratic Party are sincerely concerned about maintaining the integrity of the party’s nominating process, instead of giving superdelegates the power to undo the results of the primaries at the convention in August, they can instead offer a proposal to strip the superdelegates of the power to vote on the party’s nominee. Let them attend the party and get a lot of attention from the news media. But don’t give them veto power.

While we’re on the subject

ONCE AGAIN in this election year there’s a lot of talk in the news media about doing away with the Electoral College and electing presidents by a nationwide popular vote.

This all sounds well and good. However, to do so would require a constitutional amendment, which must be ratified by three-fourths of the state legislatures in the country.

It is true the Electoral College disproportionately favors smaller states. It was set up that way on purpose, so the smaller states among the original 13 would ratify the Constitution without fear of having their interests swamped by the more populous states. For the same reason, the Founding Fathers divided our country’s legislative power between the House of Representatives, where each member represents roughly the same number of constituents, and the Senate, in which a member from California represents 72 times more people than one from Wyoming. Imagine how the people in Wyoming, South Dakota, Nevada, Delaware and quite a few other states like that arrangement!

So it’s fine to have lots of conversation about doing away with the Electoral College. But it will never happen. Because the smaller states won’t let it happen.

Dear Editor,

Your newspaper is certainly entitled to its opinion regarding the salary earned by Joe Donofrio, general manager of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District.

However, to put the record straight, Mr. Donofrio’s benefit package is negotiated in closed session by five intelligent, resourceful and fiscally responsible board members. It is based on an annual evaluation that is entirely performance and goal based.

His current salary reflects 10 years’ longevity and exemplary service to the district and taxpayers.

Your editorial quoted salaries of agency heads dating back to 2005. To provide a more accurate comparison, Mr. Donofrio earned $180,696 in 2005.

Mary Dainton, Board President, Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District.

Editor’s note: Based on the figure provided by Dainton in her letter, in 2005 Donofrio had approximately the same salary as the executive director of the Monterey Bay Aquarium, a vastly more complex organization with 10 times the revenue of the MPRPD.

Why nobody trusts politicians

Dear Editor,
Your Feb. 15 editorial (“Wasting the public’s $$$”) was nice work. This salary paid to the general manager of the regional park district is a perfect example of:

1. Why California is broke.
2. Nobody trusts politicians.

The system is profoundly broken.

Gary Weitz, Pebble Beach

‘Extremely justified’

Dear Editor,

Your Feb. 15 editorial about salaries at the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District was very hard but extremely justified. I see that kind of stuff all over the place, but usually not at the expense of taxpayers. It usually is at the expense of stockholders or the middle class grunts who show up every day.

I think we all should take a look at what is happening at the top. Forget about athletes was established in 1915 and is a legal newspaper for Carmel-by-the-Sea, Monterey County and the State of California, established by Superior Court Decree No. 34750.

WHEN IN DOUBT, SHARE A BEAR

TEDDY BEARS with Heart — the local den of the worldwide nonprofit Good Bears of the World — is searching for help distributing furry creatures to those in need all year long.

"It is our goal to fill requests for bears needed by caregivers in the Monterey area, such as police and fire departments, emergency services, hospitals, nursing and convalescent homes, and support organizations for abused children," said Teddy Bears with Heart founder Susie Hanson, a self-described teddy bear addict. "In order to fill these needs, we need community support."

Though toy drives are usually associated with the holidays, Hanson reported her group received requests for 250 bears this month and 300 in March.

"We are in desperate need of teddy bears," she said, identifying the perfect bear sizes as 8 inches for police and fire departments, and 16 inches for hospitals.

Teddy Bears with Heart is also seeking members and is open to anyone interested in helping. Hanson hopes businesses will participate as well.

"We did have our first teddy bear drive, and thanks to many local people, we were able to gift over 250 toys and bears," Hanson reported. "But our cause is a year-round endeavor. We need your help to continue giving."

CANTO

those in hiding, Canto seized people who were often violent, mentally disturbed or under the influence of drugs.

"He saved us on so many different occasions where it could have been a fatal situation," Roobash said. "There were several people who were apprehended by means of being bit by the K-9, and I would run into them in town later when they were cleaned up, and they would say they were grateful."

In his memo to Monterey P.D., Roobash briefly discussed the dog's accomplishments.

Though he was a PR dream, Canto was also "feared by criminals. His tactical responses resulted in the disbursement of very large and unruly crowds, such as the Mardi Gras riot [on Cannery Row in 2001] and similar incidents," he wrote. "Canto was responsible for the safe arrest of more than 50 hardcore criminals without a single complaint or accidental bite to a citizen or on-duty personnel."

A particularly violent confrontation with an armed suspect nearly killed Canto in September 2003, but the dog helped "save the lives of his brothers and sisters in blue," according to Roobash.

They and others were commended by the Monterey City Council.

Adept searcher

The duo came to Carmel two or three times when requested by police officers to help search for burglary suspects.

But Roobash remembered another incident, during which officers got into a pursuit with a suspect who abandoned his vehicle on the highway. "It was almost 45 minutes by the time we showed up, and we located this guy in about 15 minutes within half a mile of the scene," he said. "He was really good at finding people."

Canto also competed annually in the police and fire games, bringing home about a dozen medals in apprehension, obedience and searches, and he always got along with whatever other animals he encountered during a mission.

"With multiple agencies, multiple officers and multiple civilians, he never showed a sign of aggression or presented a threat to any of them," Roobash added.

While on patrol in Roobash's squad car, the big dog had a habit of sticking his head through the opening in the barrier that separated them.

"As I was driving, he would put his head over my shoulder, just to let me know he was there," Roobash recalled.

The dog also knew how to play — even when on duty.

"He loved swimming. One time I was doing business-related work near where the paddle boats are," he said, referring to Lake El Estero. "I was talking to my partners and throwing the tennis ball afterward, and the next thing I knew, he was doing laps in the lake."

In 2005, it was time for Canto to shed his badge and retire to civilian dog life.

"He didn't like being at home, but there's a point where you have to retire," Roobash said. "I would put on my uniform, and he would be wagging his tail, ready to go."

Instead, Canto had to stay home with the miniature pinscher and the cat.

In concluding the memorial memo he wrote in honor of his "beloved family mascot and ever trusted vigilant protector," Roobash wrote, "You were the Monterey Police Department's first dog, and I was proud to be your handler. I know that the City of Monterey is a better place because of being touched by those four noble paws."

WHEN CHANGING JOBS,
DON'T SHORTCHANGE
YOUR 401(k)

Your 401(k) plan is a popular retirement savings vehicle. But what should you do with your 401(k) if you leave your job before you retire? Let's consider your options.

First, you could cash out your plan, but some money will be withheld for taxes and you might have to pay a penalty. Even worse, you'll lose a key source of your retirement income.

If your employer allows it, you could leave the money in your 401(k) even after you leave your job. Or you might be able to roll over your 401(k) to your new employer's plan.

Another alternative is to move the money to an IRA, which can provide you with a variety of advantages, such as almost unlimited investment choices.

Before making any moves with your 401(k), consult with your tax advisor. Take your time and make the choice that's right for you.

Meg's Health Notes

Presented by
Meg Parker Conners, R.N.

POSITIVELY!

An optimistic outlook leads to longer life say researchers, who studied over 7,000 adults since their college years in the 1960s. Those who were optimistic in their youth had a lower risk of dying over the next four decades than their more pessimistic peers. This finding is simply one more in a body of scientific evidence that links optimism to longer life. One of the many possible reasons for this association between a positive outlook and a longer life may be that optimists are less likely to suffer from depression, which is known to adversely affect physical health. Whatever the reason(s), it pays to adopt an outlook that negative events are only temporary and should not affect self-esteem.

Prolonged illness, disability or simply the challenges of aging can significantly alter the lifestyle of older adults. Daily responsibilities can become difficult. However, efficient coordination of medical, personal and social services resources can enhance the quality of life. For older adults and their families, the care management program at VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES assists people in maintaining their independence at home and can ease the transition to a new setting if needed.

P.S. If a person is motivated, there are many aspects of personality that can be modified to a certain degree.

all have their own secret places where they find them, and they have recipes for cooking them that are evolving almost every day. Cooking with chanterelles is a knockout.”

Ellwanger reported chanterelles are appearing on menus all over Big Sur.

“You can go to Cielo restaurant at Ventana any day of the week and try some new delicacy made with chanterelles,” he said. “I just had a chanterelle cappuccino there. At the Redwood Grill, you can get a chanterelle pizza.”

Ellwanger said the cook-off will highlight another one of Big Sur’s treasures — its chefs.

“There are some great chefs here in Big Sur,” he said. “They’re all publishing their own cookbooks. We aim to make Big Sur a culinary destination.”

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Big Sur River Restoration Project.

“We’re on the brink of losing our steelhead and our lamprays,” warned Ellwanger. “We’re loving the river to death.”

The project aims to revegetate denuded river banks with native plants, build a series of small pedestrian bridges to reduce erosion, clear manmade obstructions in the river channel, and install interpretive signs in an effort to educate visitors about the riparian habitat’s sensitivity.

“We’re going to bring the fish back,” Ellwanger promised.

The Big Sur Lodge is located inside Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park, which is located on Highway 1 about 26 miles south of Carmel. For more information, call (831) 667-2025 or visit www.pelicannetwork.net.

Best of Sandy Claws

By Margot Petit Nichols

BERET ROLAND, 4, is a small briard with one ear that sticks up while the other obstinately lies flat. It is only right and good that she is named Beret, as briards are an old French breed of dog originally from Brie.

Beret has been a valued and loved member of the Roland family for three years, although she lived with two other families before that. The penultimate family ran a newspaper ad announcing she was up for adoption. Suzanne Roland answered the ad, met the former owner in the Del Monte shopping center parking lot, and the change of family was a fait accompli in a matter of minutes. Mom Suzanne took one look at Beret, with her fluffy, long fur, raised ear and endearing smile, and her heart turned over.

Now, three to four times a week, Mom Suzanne and Dad Chandler drive to Carmel Beach from Marina to bring Beret and her stepbrother, Neige, a giant snowy white Great Pyrenees, whom loyal readers will remember affectionately from our Sandy Claws column of Oct. 15, 2005. Although much smaller than 15-month-old Neige, Beret is the alpha dog in the Roland family, and Neige follows her around dutifully.

At the beach, Beret leaps ecstatically into the ocean, hits a wave and comes out. She does this over and over, never swimming, always keeping on her feet. She feels it's the neatest game in the world.

Beret's other idea of fun is to bark at and chase birds, rodents and/or cats. The chase is just a game and Beret never harms any of her prey. Once, she caught an injured bird, but just touched it gently with her paw and kindly left it in peace.

At night, Beret and Neige pile into Mom and Dad's master bed. By morning, everyone is clinging to a favorite spot, and Beret is balancing on a lower corner, her four limbs hanging half on and half off.
