Two more drown at 'Mortuary Beach'

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A RUSH to rescue a teenage girl caught in rough surf at Monastery Beach Sunday left two people dead and authorities wondering how best to impress the dangers of the ocean on visitors.

Modesto residents Mark and Jessica Darrough, father and daughter aged 47 and 24, were members of a church group that stopped to spend time on the scenic stretch of sand March 16.

But tragedy struck when another of their group, a 13-year-old girl, was hit by a wave and swept into the choppy waters whipped up by strong winds.

"She was sitting on the sand holding her dog on a leash, and the wave just came up and rolled her into the water," Dana Jones, state parks sector superintendent for the Monterey area, said witnesses reported. "A number of people went into the ocean after her — up to eight people were in the water at one time, from what we've been able to determine — and one was able to pull her back in." But by then, some of the others were in serious trouble of their own.

Her rescuer was a Seaside man, Noe Gomez, who was not a member of the group. But Jessica Darrough was caught in the surf, as was her father, Mark, who apparently went in after her. The other would-be rescuers had all made it back to shore.

The high surf and winds complicated efforts to rescue the pair. Even before the call for help came in, according to Cal Fire Battalion Chief Dennis Carreiro, firefighters were aware of the rough seas and already knew they wouldn't be able to use their inflatable boat should a rescue be needed — an observation Carreiro confirmed when he arrived at Monastery Beach.

STEELHEAD GROUP SEEKS CRIMINAL CHARGES AGAINST CAL AM WATER

By KELLY NIX

A STATEWIDE conservation group is asking the State Water Resources Control Board to prosecute officials with California American Water Co. for the company's overpumping of the Carmel River.

In a March 13 letter to an attorney for the SWRCB, Bob Baiocchi, director of the California Salmon and Steelhead Association, said the water company's bosses should face fines or jail time for allegedly harming the river's population of steelhead trout.

"Besides civil charges, we believe that criminal charges must also be recommended for the board against officers of the California American Water Company," Baiocchi wrote, not naming any Cal Am employees.

In the letter, Baiocchi, whose organization is based in Graeagle, said Cal Am "willfully and knowingly" harmed steelhead habitat by illegally diverting the river water, the Monterey Peninsula's primary supply.

In 1995, most of Cal Am's pumping from the Carmel River, which had gone on for decades, was suddenly declared to be illegal by the SWRCB. But the company was allowed to continue pumping 80 percent of its usual supply while trying to develop a replacement supply. Cal Am's permits for a desal plant and other new water projects are on hold with a different state agency, the California Public Utilities Commission. But the interim pumping from the Carmel River has gone on

Big fuss over 'barely visible' cross

■ County demands a permit; FBI, sheriff, post office investigate harassment

By PAUL MILLER

IF YOU take a drive along Tierra Grande Road, which clings to a mountain above mid-Carmel Valley, you'll see expensive homes with flower-filled gardens and expansive views of sun-splashed, oak-studded hills.

If your eyesight is good, you might also catch a glimpse of a simple cross erected on top of a distant hill.

One Tierra Grande resident, when asked about the cross, said, "It's barely visible."

Another said, "I can dimly see it, but only if I really look."

When viewed with the naked eye, a cross on a hillside in Tierra Grande can barely be spotted. Even under magnification, it is indistinct. But somebody in the neighborhood is harassing the owner — a devout Christian — and trying to force him to take the cross down.

But the owner of the religious symbol, realtor Larry Scholink, who is a devout Christian and erected the cross on his 40 acres as a statement of his faith, has been the sub-

Firefighters shave heads to help foundation fight kids' cancer

By MARY BROWNFIELD

HIS 14-WEEK-OLD son spent a week in the hospital at UC San Francisco while doctors tried to diagnose the child's unexplained weight loss. Though the little boy finally checked out fine, the experience left a lasting impression on Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance paramedic Graham Evans, who met many young cancer patients at the medical center.

In response, he decided to shave his head. It was not just an act of solidarity with those kids, but to raise money for a foundation seeking cures. St. Baldrick's bills itself as "the world's largest volunteer-driven fundraising event for childhood cancer research," in which thousands of people shave their heads and use the gesture to raise awareness about the illness and solicit support from family and friends. In 2007, the nonprofit raised $12.8 million via more than 18,000 shavers who lost their hair at 402 events in 46 states, Washington, D.C., and 13 countries.

On his personal page on the St. Baldrick's website, Evans recalled his time with his infant son at the medical center.

"Sleeping by his side in the hospital and trying to stay brave for him, when I was so scared, was one of the hardest things I have had to do in my life," he wrote. "Being at UCSF was also very eye-opening. I was able to see firsthand the children and parents who were struggling with cancer. My wife and I knew how fortunate we were to have a healthy child."

Fellow firefighter joins in

After receiving a timely email from Evans detailing his goal, Carmel Fire Capt. Mitch Kastros decided to offer up his locks as well. Having lost his nephew to cancer of the central nervous system three years ago, Evans' email struck a note, especially since it was sent on what would have been Danny Kastros' birthday.

"Mitch has done a wonderful thing to honor the memory of our precious Danny," one of his family members wrote in another email urging people to donate to the cause.

Evans, who set a goal of $3,000, had his head shaved during an event at the medical center at UC Davis March 14.

"You try to raise money before you get shaved," said Evans, whose hair is brown and curly when it's not an eighth

Did you know...

Golf tournaments, car shows, and rock concerts draw big crowds on the Monterey Peninsula these days, but the record seems to have been set in 1946, when as many as 150,000 people gathered for a patriotic parade through New Monterey and downtown. It was part of the Monterey Centennial, which was really a celebration of the 100th anniversary of the western expansion of the United States. Navy Commodore John Sloat landed 225 marines and sailors in the 150-home village of Monterey on July 7, 1846, and seized a 600,000-square-mile section of Mexico for the U.S. The area was called Alta California. Now we call it California, Nevada, Arizona, Utah, and parts of Wyoming, Colorado, and New Mexico. The U.S. takeover didn't require a single shot because Mexico's troops had already withdrawn from Monterey, the territorial capital, giving up what they considered a lost cause. Sharper Image closing on Ocean Ave.

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SHARPER IMAGE — which moved into a corner store at Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street three years ago after 16 years in the Carmel Plaza — is set to shut its doors for good. The company's former fleet of 184 stores across the nation is being reduced to 88, according to Aileen Arnold, assistant manager of the Carmel shop.

"Last week they told us we were one of the locations that were closing," said Arnold, who has worked in the Carmel high-tech gadget store for a year-and-a-half.

Citing weak sales since 2004 and net losses since 2005, generally poor economic factors and a sliding stock price, the San Francisco-based retailer filed for bankruptcy in February. Arnold learned the bad news about her employer when everyone else did.

She does not know when the store will close its doors but said the liquidators have already arrived to move its gadgets, luggage, tools and other items out the door as quickly as possible.

Sean Conroy, senior planner with the city, said the store is supposed to file documents with his department detailing the plans for liquidating its merchandise and closing. In the past, "close-out sales" continued for months as companies funneled vast amounts of merchandise through them. Deciding such practices were bad for business and created eyesores, city officials adopted regulations in 2005 stating a store can hold its going-out-of-business sale for no longer than 45

Peninsula residents do what they're told with their batteries

By KELLY NIX

TWO YEARS after the state banned batteries from landfills, the Monterey Regional Waste Management District said Peninsula residents are doing their part to recycle batteries.

In 2006, the state said it was no longer OK to throw away batteries in household trash, requiring their disposal at hazardous materials facilities. "They are literally kind of pouring into our hazardous waste collection facility," said Jeff Lindenthal, public education and recycling manager for MRWMD. In the fiscal year 2005/2006 the waste management district took in 5,600 pounds of batteries from Peninsula cities. In 2006/2007, it collected 11,600 pounds of batteries.

"We are on pace right now this year to exceed it," Lindenthal said. Residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea have been battery recycling champs, turning in more old batteries than most Peninsula cities. "They never expected to get the amount they have," Lindenthal said. Sandy Farrell, Carmel's executive assistant, said Mayor Sue McCloud, who is on the MRWMD board, hauls between 130 and 150 pounds of batteries to the hazardous disposal facility every month when she attends board meetings. The batteries are collected in small cylinders. "We have locations for drop off at the main branch of the library, the police departject of a three-year campaign of harassment from an anonymous neighbor demanding the cross be removed.

And after a resident of Tierra Grande complained, county building officials are telling Scholink he needs a permit for the cross — including design review complete with a site plan, survey and setbacks — and will have to pay double permit fees of up to $1,000 because the cross is already in place.

“The cross is just two four-by-sixes nailed together and stuck in the ground,” Scholink told The Pine Cone. “It’s important for people who believe in the Kingdom of Jesus Christ to stand up for their faith.”

Seven years ago, he put up the cross on a grassy meadow above an equestrian arena used by his large family — wife Shonna and five children, ages 5 to 17 — and also for annual charity events to give “at risk” youngsters the opportunity to learn about horses.

For several years, the 12-foot-tall cross attracted little attention. And that’s probably for good reason: The nearest neighbor with a view of it is at least a quarter mile away.

But suddenly in late 2004 or early 2005, large volumes of unsolicited mail began arriving at Scholink’s home and office, and at his parents’ P.O. box in Carmel.

“Whoever is behind this started signing up for all sorts of financials reports from public corporations, catalogues and consumer handbooks, and promotional materials,” Scholink said. “They used a phony return address in Hawaii, and they asked for all this material to be sent to me.”

In an obvious campaign of intimidation, the material was addressed to “Remove Scholink Bigot Cross,” “Larry Scholink Remove Your Bigot Cross,” “Shitlink remove your cross,” and the like.

Some of the companies that received these requests with bizarre mailing addresses contacted Scholink to see if he really wanted annual reports for, say, National Retail Properties, Inc.

“If this is not a hoax, and you would like to be added to our mailing list, please let me know,” said a December 2006 email from the Investor Relations Department of Fluor Corporation.

“This is in fact a sick joke,” Scholink responded.

Thousand of pieces of unwanted mail have been received over the last several years. And the campaign continues.

“Whoever is doing this is devoting a lot of time and energy,” Scholink said. “It’s been pretty much continuous.”

And that’s not all. In late 2006 a stack of leaflets appeared at the Mid-Valley Safeway asserting that Scholink was neglecting his children. It asked shoppers to complain to Child Protective Services.

Law enforcement gets involved

Last fall a complaint was filed with the Monterey County Building Services Department. Officials there sent Scholink a letter informing him that his cross, which does not have a foundation or any utilities, needed a permit.

Scholink is appealing that requirement. And he has asked the FBI, the Monterey County Sheriff’s Office the U.S. Postal Service to investigate the campaign of mail harassment and fraud, which all three agencies have done. But they have not caught the perpetrator.

In the mean time, as a Pine Cone reporter knocked on doors on Tierra Grande Road this week — at homes with the most direct view of the distant cross — not one resident expressed any concern about it.

“I think it’s absolutely shameful that somebody would complain,” said a woman leaving her driveway in an expensive SUV. “And I think it’s ridiculous for the county to say he needs a permit.”

“Somebody definitely needs to get a life,” said another resident as he tended his garden. “I can see the cross, and it doesn’t bother me at all.”

“I’m Jewish, but I think people are entitled to their own beliefs,” said a woman who said she could see the cross from her kitchen window. She invited a reporter inside to take a look. The distant cross could be seen — but just barely. “It’s not exactly in your face,” the woman said.

“Don’t you think they are taking these rules and regulations a bit too far?” said an elderly woman as she supported herself with a walker and tried to see the cross from her dining room window.

(The Pine Cone is protecting these residents’ names to prevent them from being harassed.)

For his part, Scholink said he’s not about to back down. “If every reminder or display of Christianity disappears, maybe Christianity and its immutable world view will go away along with it,” he said. “The good news is the God of the Bible and his son Jesus Christ are here to stay. In fact they own the place.”

The sleeves are 3/4 sleeves with a cuff that goes up or down nicely. The Tencel fabric keeps your body the perfect temperature – not too warm or too cold. Today I wore the patterned tank under the Sharon blouse unbuttoned to the waist. Just perfect!

Meg's Health Notes

Presented by
Meg Parker Connors, R.N.

WATCH FOR WEIGHT LOSS IN AGING PARENTS

Most likely, changes in your aging parents’ appearance are gradual. Watch carefully for whether your parents have experienced any weight loss. Although it could be just what the doctor ordered, it could also be an indication that something is wrong. Your first thought may be a serious medical illness, and this is wise to consider. Make sure your parents talk to their health care providers about the change. However, weight loss could also be due to the fact that while they may be otherwise healthy, cooking has become too challenging for your parents. Difficulty grasping pans, planning meals, or reading labels could be keeping them from cooking. With home healthcare services, the solution may be easier than you anticipated.

VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES features an in-home care program that assists older adults in maintaining their independence at home, or can ease the transition to a new setting if needed. We handpick and hire only the most dedicated and qualified caregivers. Our mission and promise to our clients is simple—to provide the best care possible, as many hours as we are needed. Out of respect for our clients and their families, we respond to the sometimes complex physical and emotional issues faced by those we serve with open hearts and open minds.

Keep Your Credit Cards, Boost Your Credit Score

An expert on the subject, Liz Pulliam Weston, says it plainly. “If your goal is to improve your credit score, don’t close any of your current accounts. Closing credit cards and other revolving accounts can never help your score, and it might actually hurt it.”

Three simple points: First, if you close accounts without actually reducing the amount of debt you have, the ratio of the amount of debt you have to the amount of debt your credit cards qualify you for goes up. As a result, your credit score can go down.

Second, if you close out old accounts, it makes your credit history look younger. The older your credit records are, the more your credit score likes them.

Third, your credit score looks most fondly on accounts in which you keep the ratio between how much you’ve owed and how much you can borrow relatively low...but it also likes to see regular activity in those accounts, however small.

This is counter-intuitive to many of us who assume that we should lower the number of credit cards we have, getting rid of—and not using—as many cards as possible. But remember that the credit report seeks to measure how well you’ve borrowed and repaid on your credit cards and other accounts. could decide the fate of the would-be town — argues that proponents of Carmel Valley’s incorporation should be required to prepare an expensive environmental impact report.

While proponents and opponents have wrangled in court and in the media, the Monterey County Local Agency Formation Commission — the agency charged with determining whether the issue should go on the ballot — generally stood aside from the fray until its decision in October 2006 that required backers to fund the EIR.

As a result of that decision, LAFCO was sued in March 2007 by proponents, who insisted the agency be bound by an earlier decision that an EIR would not be required. In response to the suit, LAFCO is mounting a defense that echoes much of the same criticism opponents have leveled at the incorporation proposal.

Will the town create traffic?

The 48-page response — filed by the Ontario law firm, Best, Best & Kreiger — includes the argument that incorporation would create more traffic on Carmel Valley Road.

“Traffic that does not currently exist will likely be generated by new employees and citizens to travel to the newly formed town’s facilities ... new traffic patterns would be created upon incorporation because new government employees and citizens would be traveling to new town offices to conduct new town business ...”

Attorney Michael Stamp, representing incorporation proponents, dispelled the idea traffic would increase if Carmel Valley became a town.

“They’re just speculating,” Stamp said of LAFCO. “They’ve identified seven potential employees [who would work for the new town]. They’re making the assumption that those seven employees will not live in Carmel Valley and will impact traffic by coming to Carmel Valley.”

Is affordable housing required?

LAFCO also insists the new town would be required by law to construct affordable housing, resulting in impacts that would need to be studied by an EIR.

“Immediately upon incorporation, the Town of Carmel Valley would be obligated to meet certain regional needs allocations with respect to affordable housing,” LAFCO argues.

Stamp brushed off the notion that the new town would be required to build affordable housing.

“Affordable housing obligations are regional,” he explained. “Each jurisdiction is required to plan for them. The Town of Carmel Valley would have to plan for affordable housing just as Carmel, Seaside and the county are doing.”

But just because local governments are required to plan for affordable housing doesn’t mean any project will be built in the near future, Stamp said. “Developers don’t like to do affordable housing. It’s hard to build, hard to market and hard to sell. Go to Carmel and show me where all the affordable housing has been built,” Stamp maintained.

Shifting boundaries and moving targets

Because there is so much contention over the proposed boundaries of incorporation, LAFCO is arguing an EIR is the best way to determine which alternative set of boundaries would best serve the would-be town.

“It is apparent from the record that there is a split between property owners and residents from the eastern portion of the area proposed for incorporation referred to as ‘The Village’ and those on the west end, referred to as ‘The Mouth of the Valley.’

According to Stamp, the boundaries of incorporation have been previously set, and any attempt to alter them is simply an obstructionist tactic.

“It’s a moving target,” he countered. “You have to draw a line somewhere.”

A hearing on the lawsuit is scheduled in Monterey County Superior Court Thursday, April 24. Stamp said he expects a decision within 90 days following the hearing.

Earthbound Farm offers ‘Food to Live By’

QUAIL LODGE will host an educational — and tasty — culinary event Saturday, March 29, when Myra Goodman, cofounder of Earthbound Farm and author of “Food to Live By: The Earthbound Farm Organic Cookbook,” and Sarah LaCasse, Executive Chef of Earthbound Farm, present “Food to Live By.”

Organized by Quail’s Lifestyle Academy, the event will highlight “the importance of organic food and sustainability.” For $75 per person, plus tax and gratuity, the afternoon will include a cooking demonstration featuring recipes from Goodman’s cookbook, and a discussion of the importance of choosing organic food and why cultivating without chemical pesticides and fertilizers matters. Chefs will prepare lunch inspired by the cookbook and made with organic produce from the Earthbound Farm’s fields and farm stand next door to Quail Lodge. Heller Estates, an organic vintner located in Carmel Valley, will provide the wine for the afternoon, and guests will also receive signed copies of Goodman’s cookbook and have a chance to meet the author.

Food to Live By will be held in the Peninsula Ballroom at Quail Lodge Resort. The cooking demonstration will begin at 11:45 a.m., with the three-course lunch set to start at 1 p.m. For more information and to make reservations, call (831) 620-8820 or visit www.quailodge.com.

Storm runoff could be captured, sold to city's schools

By KELLY NIX

PACIFIC GROVE will pay a Southern California engineering firm $45,000 to determine if it's practical to capture the city's stormwater so it can be used for irrigation.

The P.G. City Council Wednesday approved hiring Irvine-based engineering firm Malcolm Pirnie, Inc., to evaluate the idea of catching winter runoff and storing it in an unused reservoir near David and Carmel avenues.

Although the city for some time has been researching the idea of using the water to irrigate its municipal golf course and parks, it's now looking at possibly selling the water to the Pacific Grove Unified School District.

"The reservoir is very close, and it's a very short hop to the schools," said Mayor Dan Cort.

The proximity of the reservoir to Robert Down elementary and the city's middle and high schools — and the fact they're downhill from it — means less infrastructure would need to be built to deliver the water, Cort said.

Two weeks ago, Cort and city manager Jim Colangelo met with Pacific Grove Unified School District Superintendent Ralph Porras to discuss the possibility of selling the captured water to the district.

"If there are no additional issues related to it and they get to save money," Colangelo said, "I don't know why they wouldn't want to do it."

The price of the water wasn't discussed, Colangelo said.

It's estimated the city could yield at least 150 acre-feet, or about 49 million gallons, of water from the project, which would also allow P.G. some bragging rights.

"We believe there is only one other agency in California, possibly the U.S., that has implemented runoff recycling," according to a February letter from Malcolm Pirnie to city officials.

The city would like to collect all its runoff, but rain that flows on lower parts of the city would be too expensive to pump uphill.

"We are trying to avoid pumping it up to the reservoir," he said. "We would rather collect the water uphill from the reservoir."

Pacific Grove is also looking at ways to tap into the city's underground springs, where plenty of water flows but is not being used. Existing storage tanks near the golf course could hold the water.

Besides replacing water that would otherwise be taken from the overdrafted Carmel River, the reservoir project could save the city several hundred thousands of dollars per year. Last year, the city used 117 acre-feet of water at a cost of nearly $370,000, according to a city report presented to council. And those rates are likely to go up.

Although the project is likely to cost millions, Cort said he's confident the city could obtain grant or state tax money for it.

"If we find it as viable as I believe it to be," Cort said, "the state will provide grants and funding because of the immense possibilities."

The reservoir, built by the Pacific Improvement Company in 1888 but unused for years, is part of a corporate yard for the California American Water, Co.

Cal Am officials have expressed interest in the project.

Pacific Grove has already completed its Urban Runoff Diversion Program, which diverts "dry weather" runoff from the city's streets to a sewage treatment plant in Marina operated by the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency.

Malcolm Pirnie will perform runoff analysis, evaluate treatment requirements, calculate average and peak irrigation demands, and provide an estimated cost for the project. The study is expected to be completed in four months.

P.G. drops police takeover idea (for now), explores others

By KELLY NIX

PACIFIC GROVE has dropped the idea of Monterey taking over its police department and is now considering having the larger city operate its library and building inspection department.

In January, the city announced the possible police shake-up, an idea that has been shelved, Pacific Grove city manager Jim Colangelo said this week.

"Monterey is concerned about taking on all that responsibility so quickly," Colangelo said. "They would see a huge increase in workload."

But a takeover of the P.G. library and building division could make those departments run more efficiently, Colangelo said.

This year, the Pacific Grove City Council approved a library budget of $480,000, which would make it possible for the library to be open 20 to 25 hours per week.

But preliminary talks with Monterey's senior librarian, Kim Bui-Burton, indicated Monterey couldn't necessarily ensure more operating hours, Colangelo said.

They might be able to provide better operating hours.

He said Pacific Grove's librarian has been directed to work with Monterey to draw up a proposal that would outline details of an arrangement.

"We are really looking to maximize services with that same amount of money," he said.

The city has also had informal talks with Library Systems & Services, LLC, a private company that manages public libraries, including the Riverside County Library system. The company approached the city about a possible deal, Colangelo said.

Pacific Grove Mayor Dan Cort said it's not who runs the library, it's how it's run.

"If it operates effectively," Cort said, "who we collaborate with is not as important as the effectiveness of our library. Period."

Since November, the city has farmed out many of its inspections of construction sites to Monterey's chief building official, John Kuehl — an arrangement which could become permanent.

"In the first couple of weeks, John was able to come in here and get it down to 24-hour building inspection times," Colangelo said. "That means if you call in today, you will get an inspection tomorrow."

Previously, it took three to five days to line up an inspection, he said.

Although the city obtained proposals from private companies offering their own building services, it hasn't responded to them since its temporary arrangement with Monterey has been so successful, Colangelo said.

"Right now, we are saving a lot of money by not having to pay a full-time chief building official," he said.

In addition, forging a formal agreement with Monterey would allow P.G. to tap into the city's computer network,

PLEASE READ THIS IMPORTANT INFORMATION
To Water Users in the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District
From the MPWMD Board of Directors

On January 15, a Draft Cease & Desist Order (CDO) was issued against California American Water (CalAm) by the State Water Resources Control Board (SWRCB)

What does the Draft CDO say?

- ◆ In 1995, the State ordered CalAm to reduce diversions of water from the Carmel River by 76% (Order 95-10). CalAm has not yet met that goal.
- ◆ Over pumping of the Carmel River continues to cause significant harm to wildlife, steelhead, other fish, and their habitat.
- ◆ CalAm would need to reduce the amount of water it is currently allowed to take from the Carmel River by 15% starting October 1st 2008.
- ◆ Further reductions equaling 50 percent would be required starting October 2014.

What could approval of the Draft CDO mean to us?

- ◆ The State could fine CalAm $1,000 per day as well as other penalties. Those costs could be passed on to CalAm customers.
- ◆ Emergency plans could be put into effect, including water rationing for households and businesses; a moratorium on new or expanded CalAm water connections; and outdoor watering restrictions (e.g. on businesses, golf courses and parks).

Order 95-10 Requires:

- ◆ Until CalAm achieves the full Carmel River diversion reduction, the Order limits water use to 20 percent below pre-1995 levels.
- ◆ Find an alternative water supply (e.g. desalination or recycled water) and make one-for-one reductions in unlawful diversions from the River.
- ◆ Obtain "appropriate permits" for water diverted from the River.

CalAm Customers Used 28 Percent Less Water in 2007 than in 1988

Additional Water use reductions may be required if the State adopts the Draft Cease and Desist Order.

CalAm Water Demand by Customer Type in 1988 and 2007
Customer Type	Reported Demand		Reduced Demand
	1988	2007	From 1988
	Acre Feet	Acre Feet	Acre Feet	(%)
Residential	7,954	6,508	1,446	18%
Multi-Residential	2,261	1,302	959	42%
Commercial	3,836	3,029	807	21%
Industrial	100	93	7	7%
Golf Course	1,271	421	850	67%
Public Authority	1,649	963	686	42%
Other	208	59	149	72%
Total	17,279	12,375	4,904	28%

What has been done to conserve/find other sources of water to date?

- ◆ CalAm customers (households, businesses, golf courses, cities, etc.) collectively have achieved the 20% conservation limit in Order 95-10 every year but one, since 1996. In fact, the community used 28% less water last year than it did in 1988.
- ◆ The MPWMD Aquifer Storage and Recovery Project has been constructed, used successfully and is in the process of being expanded. This project draws water from the Carmel River when it is plentiful and stores it in the Seaside Groundwater Basin for use when the river is dry.
- ◆ MPWMD facilitated construction of the Pebble Beach golf courses' recycled water project; greatly expanded the Water Conservation Rebate program; is analyzing the potential for cloud seeding; and is actively supporting MRWPCA's proposed purified recycled water project. MPWMD is studying five desalination project proposals: CalAm; MPWMD; Pajaro Sunny Mesa; REPOG and Seawater Desalination Vessel.
- ◆ MPWMD proposed construction of a dam and a desalination project in the 1990's but they were not approved by voters.

What are CalAm and the MPWMD doing about the Draft CDO?

- ◆ CalAm has filed a protest with the SWRCB due to concerns for health, safety and other reasons. This has triggered an SWRCB public hearing in June 2008, and consideration of a decision by the State which could approve, modify or reject the Draft CDO.
- ◆ MPWMD will be participating in the SWRCB hearing and considering a position on the Order.
- ◆ Before the hearing, MPWMD will reactivate a Citizens Advisory Committee to study the Draft CDO, and conduct a special meeting to receive public opinion on the matter.

What can CalAm customers and concerned citizens do?

- ◆ Attend the April 1 SWRCB public input meeting on the Draft CDO set for 1 PM in the De Anza Room at the Portola Hotel & Spa, Two Portola Plaza, Monterey.
- ◆ Voice your opinions on the Draft CDO at the April 21 MPWMD Board Meeting at 7 PM at the District office. Also, contact the SWRCB, California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC), your legislators, local elected officials, community groups, and neighbors by phone, fax or letter.
- ◆ If you have already been conserving, reusing and recycling water, keep up the good work!
- ◆ All water users—including businesses, hotels, golf courses, parks, industries, schools, institutions and households should do their fair share to stop water waste and water loss.
- ◆ Advocate sustainable ways that the District can improve water reduction/recycling/reuse or augment the current supply.

Lower Carmel River during rainy and dry seasons. The District is pursuing water supply projects to reduce the amount of water pumped from the river to restore streamflow and benefit fish and wildlife.

so long criminal charges are warranted, Baiocchi maintains. "Under criminal actions, you go after the officers or the managers allowing all these unauthorized [actions] to occur," Baiocchi told The Pine Cone. Cal Am responded strongly to the Baiocchi's comments. "We absolutely have not engaged in any criminal activity," said Cal Am community relations manager Catherine Bowie. "We regularly meet with the National Marine Fisheries and California Department of Fish and Game, who participate in the development of a quarterly Water budget also approved by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District. These agencies are well aware of our activities on the Carmel River, and we are in full compliance with all of our permits and orders."

Local group disagrees

The vice president of the Carmel River Steelhead Association, which monitors the steelhead population and performs fish rescues, said his group doesn't take Baiocchi's position. And he said he doesn't even speak for the group.

"That's his personal opinion, not the formal position of CSSA," vice president Frank Emerson told The Pine Cone Wednesday. "It's an intriguing idea, but we haven't even discussed that."

While Baiocchi also placed some blame on the state water board for not doing enough to stop Cal Am from overpumping the river, he accused the water company of being too slow in building a desal plant.

"Cal Am has it made," he said, "They are breaking the law and taking the water, but are charging people for it."

Emerson said his group, based on the Peninsula, acknowledges Cal Am's efforts to build its Coastal Water Project, which includes a desalination plant in Moss Landing, have been delayed by conflicting state regulators, environmentalists and others.

"People keep getting in the way," Emerson said, "That's unfortunate, because it's a drought-proof water supply and allows our own utility to meet our needs without violating any laws."

orate extravaganza with David Bernahl, said they decided to invite more culinary stars, enlarge venues and offer more tickets to ensure locals get in on the myriad lunches, dinners, wine tastings, cooking demonstrations and other offerings planned for March 27-30.

"We were pretty much sold out, so we added more chefs and added a lot more tickets," he said Monday from the Carmel office that has become his home during the weeks leading up to the PBF&W. Weakley's been working from predawn to well past dark daily to put the finishing touches on a weekend that's garnering widespread attention and should be a happening on the Monterey Peninsula calendar the week after Easter each year.

Weakley expects about 3,000 people to eat and drink in Pebble Beach during the course of the four-day event, which is more than filling the niche vacated by the Masters of Food & Wine after 21 years at the Highlands Inn. Weakley worked for Hyatt overseeing the Masters before setting out to create his own event with Bernahl, who is a co-owner of Pacific Tweed clothing store.

The lineup

The result of their efforts is a staggering array involving more than 50 top chefs and 230 wineries. Opening Night, held from 6 to 9 p.m. Thursday at the Inn at Spanish Bay, will feature 20 chefs and 125 vintners.

Wine tastings focusing on Spain, Oregon, women in winemaking and others, as well as cooking demonstrations by Mark Miller and Jacques Pépin, will take place Friday morning, followed by five lunch options — among them A Celebration of France in Club XIX and Fusion at its Finest in Roy's — and an afternoon of five wine seminars, as well as demos by chefs Thomas Keller and Ming Tsai. The day will conclude with A Night of Stars Dinner in the ballroom of the Inn at Spanish Bay, and The Lexus Rare Wine Auction & Dinner — "the most exclusive event of the weekend" — at the Beach & Tennis Club.

Saturday will include a similar schedule, with wine talks on zinfandels, blending, Rieslings and screw caps, and demonstrations by chefs Tom Colicchio and Todd English planned for the morning. Afternoon sessions will focus on The Art of Blind Tasting, Harlan Estate and three other wine topics, along with cooking demonstrations by chefs Gary Danko and Charlie Trotter. Guests with dinner in mind can seek seats at the Grand Finale Dinner at Spanish Bay or The Lexus Grand Finale Dinner at the Beach & Tennis Club.

In between will be The Lexus Grand Tasting — "the must-do experience for anyone who loves food and wine" — set for noon to 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, with a different group of 16 star chefs each day and more than 200 wineries participating.

The PBF&W will wrap up Sunday with talks on the Grand Crus of Monterey and a retrospective tasting of Dom Pérignon, chefs' demonstrations by Ted Allen and Michel Richard, and The Lexus Grand Tasting.

Drawing in the neighbors

"We have tickets available for almost everything, because we added some chefs," Weakley said, including Iron Chef Masaharu Morimoto, Richard Reddington of Michelin 1-Star restaurant REDD, and Craig von Foerster, Executive Chef of Sierra Mar at the Post Ranch Inn in Big Sur.

"He'll be doing a big Monterey agriculture presentation in the Grand Tasting," Weakley said. "He's going to do stuff using local ingredients with broccolini from Mann Packing, Driscoll strawberries and produce from Tanimura & Antle. We just added that last week."

Weakley said the Grand Tasting, which will be held in the two-acre tent at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center, represents one of the PBF&W's best bargains for locals. For $165 per person, guests can spend three hours sampling the edible and drinkable creations offered by top chefs and wineries. Attached to the main tent will be an expansive 3,200-square-foot kitchen arranged so people can watch their chefs at work.

"Our local sales have not been what we expected, but now they're really starting to come in. Six weeks ago, we were almost sold out, and none of the locals had had a chance to buy tickets," he said. "That's why we sat down to make the decision to grow the event, to make sure tickets were available, because we're just like them — we never buy tickets until the last minute."

In addition to offering tickets a la carte to chef's demonstrations and wine tastings that had previously only been available to guests purchasing packages, organizers decided to open the Chef/Winery Charity Golf Tournament to 18 fortunate players who will take on the challenges of the beautiful Pebble Beach Golf Links alongside the likes of Thomas Keller, Roy Yamaguchi and other big names in the food and wine world. The tournament, set for 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday, costs $1,000 per person.

"We built a very big event for year one," Weakley said. "It was one of those things we needed to do to get the national exposure and make a huge splash."

And they successfully marketed the concept to key sponsors, such as presenting partner American Express Publishing, which owns Food & Wine magazine, Travel + Leisure, Travel + Leisure Golf, Departures and Executive Traveler.

"All their editors and publishers will be there," Weakley said, and will take part in introducing events and serving as emcees. "They are the most involved."

Lexus "has been an amazing partner," he continued. The luxury car producer will provide shuttles and a large fleet to transport the chefs and others. In a nod to Lexus, anyone arriving at the Grand Tasting behind the wheel of one will receive free valet parking.

"Everyone else has to self-park," Weakley said. "If you're driving a Ferrari or a Rolls Royce, sorry."

Artist with culinary flair will show work in Plaza store

By MARY BROWNFIELD

IN A nod to the Pebble Beach Food & Wine event the final weekend in March, upscale clothier Wilkes Bashford will host a food-and-wine-inspired gathering Friday and Saturday, March 28-29, to present painter Guy Buffet and his works.

Known all over the world for his distinctive paintings depicting chefs, waiters and French cafés, Buffet will exhibit original pieces and limited edition prints at the Carmel Plaza store from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

The Paris-born Buffet first dabbled in art as a young boy, drawing on napkins and linen tablecloths in the family restaurant, before his mother gave him his first set of paints and canvases for his 12th birthday. Soon, his creations decorated the establishment, and he sold his first watercolor to an American tourist dining there.

At 14, he attended the Beaux Arts de Toulon and later studied advanced painting in his home city.

After signing on with the French Navy, the 18-year-old became its official artist and was ordered to “paint the world,” eventually hanging exhibits in some of the far-flung places his ship visited.

One of Buffet’s early exhibitions was in the Hawaiian Islands, and he chose to settle there after being discharged. In addition to garnering support from a prominent Hawaiian family, he undertook commissions for the Hawaii State Foundation on Culture and the Arts, creating major public murals.

Over the decades, Buffet has become a commercial success, creating works for major corporations and appearing at special events. One project included set and costume design for two ballets in the San Francisco Bay Area, and his art has been widely reproduced.

According to Wilkes Bashford’s Carmel store manager, Maria Murray, Buffet recently moved to the Monterey Peninsula, choosing it as his new primary residence over abodes in Hawaii and the French Riviera.

“This will be his breakout event for the area,” she reported.

World renowned artist Guy Buffet, hailed for his portrayals of chefs, waiters and French cafés, will showcase his work at Wilkes Bashford in Carmel Plaza Friday and Saturday in a nod to the Pebble Beach Food & Wine event.

Bach Fest talks set

ORGANIZERS OF the Carmel Bach Festival will present two lectures at the Carmel Woman’s Club in March and April.

At 10 a.m. Saturday, March 29, David Gordon will share the story of Bach’s “magnificent ‘job application,’ the Mass in B Minor,” which will be the featured choral work during the Bach Fest’s Saturday main concerts when the event runs July 19 through Aug. 9.

And on Saturday, April 5, Dr. Grant Voth will discuss the development of the concerto and “explore this art form as a powerful metaphor for music and life.” Voth will provide an overview of the selection of concertos to be presented during the festival.

The Carmel Woman’s Club is located at San Carlos and Ninth. For more information about the lectures, call (831) 624-1521 or email info@bachfestival.org.

Weakley said jeweler Lussori, located on Ocean Avenue, will bring some precious pieces to the event, while KitchenAid and All-Clad are providing equipment. Other supporters include Sentient Jet, Southern Wine and Spirits, and several Monterey County produce growers.

Ripple effect

Weakley also said the PBF&W seems to be having the ripple effect he and Bernahl hoped it would, with area restaurants and hotels booking up. The two Pebble Beach dinners each have about 500 spots — and a quarter of those will be filled by sponsors — leaving hundreds of other distinguished diners, not to mention many of the winemakers, chefs and their entourages, to eat elsewhere on the Peninsula.

“A lot of the restaurants are already seeing the effects,” Weakley said, with some spots in Carmel, like Bouchée, reportedly full. “We really wanted to see that. We really want to make sure it’s good for the community.”

In addition to squaring away the weather — Weakley and Bernahl ordered 75 degrees and sunny for all four days — they have representatives from more than 40 media outlets attending, which should garner a lot of good press for the event and the Peninsula.

And with PBF&W week set to always follow Easter, the dates are already nailed down for the next three years, according to Weakley. The 2009 Pebble Beach Food & Wine will be held April 16-19.

“We have some pretty cool chefs signed up for next year already,” Weakley said.

But first things first. For more information on this year’s event and to purchase tickets, visit www.pebble-beachfoodandwine.com.

Seascape painter: Have brush and easel, will travel

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE PAINTER Barry Marshall maintains a work space in Pacific Grove, his real "art studio" is just about anywhere where the pavement meets the sea.

Marshall will host an exhibit of his work Saturday and Sunday, March 22-23, at his Pacific Grove studio, offering art collectors not only a glimpse of the painter's impressive volume of work, but a fascinating snapshot of a man who has turned his love of the coastline into a creative passion and a steady paycheck.

By STEVE VAGNINI

By arranging classical jazz standards and exploring original compositions on their 2005 debut recording, "Introducing," University of Southern California classmates Matt Roberts, Perry Smith, John Story and Brady Cohan established the New West Guitar Quartet as a jazz group with a promising future.

As music majors at USC, NWGQ became the first group ever to receive the coveted Thornton Protégé Grant. With the release this year of its second album, "Wide Awake," on Art Song Music, NWGQ continues to fuse the improvisational elements of jazz with the performance standards of a chamber group. The group brings its unique blend of four part guitar harmonies to the KRML Jazz and Blues Company this Saturday, March 22. The music starts at 7:30 p.m. Call (831) 624-6432 for reservations.

Performing this weekend at the Hyatt Regency Monterey's Fireplace Lounge, guitarist Michael Lent first made his name locally playing in the Roger Eddy Band in the 1980s. A native of Pacific Grove, Lent left the Monterey Peninsula in 1989 to pursue a musical career in Los Angeles and quickly landed a gig with Jeffrey Osborne. The young guitar slinger never looked back. Since leaving Pacific Grove, Lent has performed with an impressive array of artists, including Marie Osmond, Ricky Martin, Shania Twain and Ronnie Laws, and he has been performing regularly with Barry Manilow since 1997.

Spending approximately 30 weeks a year in Las Vegas with Manilow, Lent also manages to work on his own

Director's daughter joins screening of silent film

FOR AN 80-year-old, black-and-white silent movie, King Vidor's "The Crowd" did pretty well the last time it was shown at the Carl Cherry Center.

"We screened the film a couple months ago, and we sold out," said Robert Reese, executive director of the Cherry Center. "So it seemed like a natural to bring it back."

"The Crowd" will be presented Thursday, March 27, offering movie lovers a chance to see what is considered by

Fukumotos have come full circle to Flying Fish Grill

MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

CHEF KENNY Fukumoto has been on the Carmel restaurant scene for 33 years. Carmelites know him and his wife, Tina, as proprietors of Flying Fish Grill at Carmel Plaza, where a fusion of Asian and California cuisine flavors combine in the restaurant's predominately seafood original dishes.

Fukumoto started his career in the '70s in another creative field: environmental sculpture. After earning his degree in Northridge, he went to work for a company that fabricated Plexiglass and poured resin sculptures as centerpieces for shopping centers and corporate campuses. Some of the structures were 30 feet high.

But fate took a hand in changing his profession. Fukumoto's father-in-law, who was part owner in a Carmel restaurant, died suddenly. The Fukumotos came north to help out during the family's bereavement. They didn't keep the restaurant, but Kenny, who always enjoyed cooking and had learned Japanese cuisine from his mother, decided to go into the restaurant business.

A subterranean restaurant in Carmel Plaza, Isabella Italian Restaurant — beneath Patisserie Boissiere — became available in 1975. The Fukumotos thought it would be the ideal location for a Japanese restaurant, but the Plaza's leasing agent was skeptical about Fukumoto's cooking skills, as his professional experience was, in Fukumoto's own words, "exactly zero."

"We invited him to our home for a Japanese dinner, and with me cooking and Tina serving, we convinced him to lease the space to us," he said.

They named the downstairs 40-seat restaurant Shabu-Shabu after the Japanese clay pot cookery that entails swishing very thin slices of rib-eye steak and fresh vegetables in very hot broth at the table. The cooked ingredients are then combined with lemon shoyu and sesame aioli dipping sauces, and served with steamed rice.

The restaurant was a hit right from the start, not only because of its unique cuisine, but because the restaurant interior was designed to resemble a Japanese farmhouse, with low tables and an all-wood interior. Chef Kenny, who is handy with tools, did the design work and carpentry alone. "We had our customers leave their shoes at the door and change into paper slippers," he said.

Although the business was going well, they sold it in the early '80s and opened the much larger, 200-seat Robata Grill in The Barnyard, which he also designed, and for which he created the wooden interior.

When Robata Grill was established and going well, they sold it and opened the 150-seat Jimmy's American Restaurant, running that from 1986 to 1990, when they changed the concept completely to Ciao Mein. That went well from 1990 to 1993, when the Fukumotos had to take back the lease from the proprietors of Shabu-Shabu, who weren't doing well with the once-popular restaurant.

So, coming full circle, the Fukumotos found themselves again with the charming, small, provincial Japanese restaurant. They raised the tables to normal height, dropped the no-shoes rule, and changed the name to Flying Fish Grill, creating a new logo and suspending papier maché fish from the ceiling to exemplify the restaurant's new direction. Chef

Kenny designed the logo and made the ceiling flying fish himself.

He also created the menu, featuring black bean halibut, rare peppered ahi, yin-yan salmon, almond sea bass, grilled salmon, escolar (a pacific whitefish), tempura prawns, scallops and gulf prawns, and seafood pasta. A boneless half chicken with ginger-soy glaze and a grilled, sliced New York prime steak are also offered, as well as a seafood clay pot dinner, known as yosenabe, a beef clay pot (the original shabu-shabu), and a vegetable clay pot dinner.

Ten first courses are also available, such as tempura appetizer, crispy spring rolls, California roll, panfried oysters, spicy tuna tartare, shrimp curry soup and nikumaki (green onion beef roll).

While Chef Kenny and Tina work the entrance, longtime manager Richard Rosendale, who has been with the restaurant for 15 years, takes care of the front of the house and doubles as head waiter, and, knowledgeable about wine, sits in on tastings with the chef.

Chef Kenny writes the menu, creates the recipes, makes all the sauces and oversees the three-man kitchen staff, assuring consistency. A cold-line cook and a hot-line cook, plus a

Tudor Wines, El Bulli, Easter ramekins and Hula's

By CHARYN PFEUFFER

AFTER WHAT seems like an endless period of waiting, Tudor Wines is joining the ranks of Carmel Valley Village tasting rooms. Well, it's not exactly a tasting room, but instead a tasting space set up inside Garden Bistro Restaurant. Wines from the Tudor, Oh, Radog and Otter Cove labels will be poured for an $8 fee. Join winemakers Dan Tudor and Richard Oh on Saturday, March 22, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. for a complimentary grand opening tasting. Find it: 6 Pilot Road, Carmel Valley Village; (831) 659-5020. Open during lunch and dinner hours, Tuesday through Sunday.

I just walked in from dishing all things food- and farm-related with local farmer/winemaker Steve Quinn at ye olde Running Iron in Carmel Valley Village. Quinn collaborates on several local foodstuff efforts, from olive oil with Bruce Sterten (of Cedar Lane Vineyard in Arroyo Seco fame), to Syrah with Nancy Rohan and Jon Kasky (of Carmel Valley Bird of Paradise Catering fame), to his solo heirloom tomato project. We talked about the role the farmer plays in what ends up on the consumer's plate, how so many diners simply don't make that connection, and how many chefs don't buy locally when we have this amazing bounty in our backyard. Everyone in the culinary world looks to California for cues — I realize this more and more as I travel food circles abroad. It sure would be nice if more folks (consumers and industry) spent a little extra and supported their local farmers and foodstuffs whenever possible. Please don't make me feel preachy — it's a simple sentiment that makes like good for all involved.

I've meaning to thank Michael Jones of Cachagua General Store for being such an invaluable resource of information on all topics wining and dining pertaining to Spain. We're headed to Spain next month for a multitude of occasions: my 35th birthday, a long-awaited reservation at El Bulli and a pre-major-move adventure slash real vacation. Jones' photos and brilliant accounts of his January/February dining adventures on his blog <http://cachaguastore.blogspot.com> have left me salivating more than Old Yeller in his rabid post-wolf-bite final scenes. I cannot thank you enough for sharing your experiences and for your spirited emails and suggestions. I am counting the days 'til jamon and Manchego excess.

My 48-hour whirlwind in Cancun was a bit maddening thanks to the fine folks at TSA and an action-packed itinerary. A definite highlight was dining at MB at AQUA Cancun, where I encountered a four-top sharing a bottle of Morgan Twelve Clones Pinot Noir. I swear, if I had to tell you what Monterey County wine I see most in my international travels, it is Morgan Winery. Anyway, I full-on assaulted the unsuspecting diners with a college-credit-worthy tutorial on the Santa Lucia Highlands, Morgan winemaker Dan Lee and what is going on in our local world of Pinot Noir. I'm not sure if I scared the bejesus out of them or if they left intrigued. But either way, they claimed to love their bottle of wine.

I don't do Easter (or any religious-based holidays, for that matter), but I can appreciate any celebration that involves brunch, and better yet, egg dishes and Bloody Marys. Since my travels to Spain last June — and an overabundance of Sherry in my world — I've perfected what I consider to be ideal egg dish. Actually, it's more like four bites than a main entree, but it's so rich and delicious, you must try it. Here's how you do it: take a small bowl or ramekin. Add a tablespoon of heavy cream and swirl so it coats the sides of the container. Add 1/2 teaspoon of maple syrup (do not stir). Crack a whole egg into the center. Float 1/2 teaspoon of sherry on top. Pop into a preheated 425-degree oven until yolk of egg is semi-firm. The cream around the edges should slightly brown, and the egg should be bubbling. Sprinkle with finely chopped chives and your favorite chunky-style sea salt. Sink your spoon into the bottom, taste and say "mmm..."

Aww shucks — there's all sorts of love being spread at Hula's in Monterey. Last Friday of the month, join Rita's Love Lounge. Hula's stays open late (serving drinks only) with DJ Melody spinning. Starting in April, Hula's is giving back 10 percent of its total sales every Monday to a local

the Year for the 27th Assembly District. Co-owner of the first officially "green" restaurant in Monterey County (with chef/hubby Ted), Cindy has played a major role in spearheading local sustainable seafood efforts, revising the Pacific Grove grease trap ordinances and educating trade and consumers on advocacy issues. I don't need to sing Cindy's praises — she's one of the area's most effective cheerleaders, advocates and hostesses all rolled into one spunky blonde package. Here's to you!

dishwasher make up the kitchen trio.

Chef Kenny conceived of shabu-shabu as a signature dish for his original restaurant because of memories of his mother. Both parents were first generation Japanese Americans and were put in internment camps during World War II. Kenny was a small boy during that hard period and doesn't remember much of it. His family was released when he was about 3 and moved to West Los Angeles to start their lives over again. He fondly remembers his mother serving shabu-shabu on chilly winter evenings. It has always been a comfort dish for him.

Now, in Flying Fish Grill, he said his signature dish is pan-fried, almond-crusted seabass served with whipped potatoes and a stir-fry of Chinese cabbage and rock shrimp.

Another dish Flying Fish Grill is known for is Alaskan halibut with fermented Chinese black beans, ginger and scallions steamed in paper pouches and served with steamed vegetables.

Flying Fish Grill, located on Mission between Ocean and Seventh in Carmel Plaza, is open for dinner five nights a week, Tuesday through Saturday. Call (831) 625-1962 for information or reservations.

Thursdays in Santa Cruz along West Cliff Drive, and the rest of the time along Ocean View in Pacific Grove," explained Marshall when asked about his "studio" hours.

A native of Gloucester, Mass., Marshall moved to California five years ago after a particularly cold and bleak northeast winter.

"I came out here with just my van and my paints," he said. "I said, 'I want to paint so badly I'll live in my van if I have to,'" he recalled.

Marshall escaped frigid northeast winters to land in chilly Pacific Grove, where he fell in love with the fog.

"I don't like a pristine blue sky," he conceded. "I would rather have the fog."

Employing a style reminiscent of the early California plein aire painters, Marshall uses strong brushstrokes and glazes to capture local landscapes and seascapes.

By setting up his easel near some of the coastline's most popular scenic vistas, Marshall is assured of an appreciative audience. His paintings have sold well, and at times he has struggled to keep up with the steady demand for his work.

"This one guy who liked my work had just bought an office building in San Jose," Marshall recounted. "He said, 'I think I'll decorate my building with your paintings.' He bought 14 the first day, and he came back for 11 more the next day."

For a painter who was willing to live in his van to come to California, Marshall has little to complain about.

"The only bad thing about doing what you love to do is that time goes by twice as fast," he added.

Marshall's studio is in Suite 2014 at the Russell Service Center, which is located at 2032 Sunset Drive. He'll be there from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day. Then it's off to Hawaii for what he is calling, "an extended vacation."

Gallery owner hosts exhibit for ailing brother's art

As he fights for his life, a cancer-stricken Brooklyn, N.Y., artist will present a retrospective of his work at a Carmel gallery owned by his older brother, Chris Winfield.

The Winfield gallery will host "David Winfield: The Brooklyn Years, 1979-2007," an exhibit opening Saturday, March 22.

After graduating from art school three decades ago, David Winfield moved to Williamsburg, a Brooklyn suburb with a strong artistic culture. In the shadow of New York City, the artist combined drawing and woodworking, creating an original style.

"His work is quirky," Chris Winfield said. "That's what I like about it. 'Highly inventive' is a term I would use to describe his work. He uses a really odd combination of mediums. He puts them together and creates his own wacky world."

Unfortunately, the younger Winfield's health is failing. "He underwent a whole series of treatments, but the cancer seemed to come back," explained Chris Winfield.

With the future uncertain, there is a sense immediacy to the exhibit. "He's now undergoing some new treatments, and he's working as hard and as fast as he can. His artwork is all he has at this point."

The gallery, located on the east side of Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, will host a reception from 5 to 7 p.m. The show will be on display until April 18. For more information, call (831) 624-3369 or visit www.winfieldgallery.com.

many critics to be one of the greatest of all silent films. As an added bonus, Vidor's daughter, longtime Carmel resident and artist Belinda Vidor Holliday, will be on hand to talk about the groundbreaking motion picture.

Because Vidor achieved considerable financial success as a director in the 1920s, he was able to persuade MGM to back the film, despite its bleak subject matter, its absence of a proven actor or actress, and its lack of a happy ending.

"The Crowd" — which features James Murray and Eleanor Boardman (Vidor Holliday's mother) as lead characters — tells the story of an ambitious but undisciplined office worker who marries and starts a family. Against the backdrop of a big city, the experiences marital stress, financial setbacks and personal tragedy. Curiously, several alternate upbeat endings were reportedly filmed but never used.

Vidor received his first Oscar nomination for "The Crowd," which achieved only modest success at the box office. The film turned out to be one of the last silent movies — the motion picture industry quickly embraced sound, and Vidor became one the great innovators of "talkies." He also is credited by the Guinness Book of World Records with having the longest career of any film director, dating from 1913 to 1980. He passed away in 1982.

The screening of "The Crowd" is part of the center's ongoing "Back Story" series.

"We offer one film a month," Reese explained. "There are a lot of people in the community with some relationship to the films we've wanted to bring here. We're bringing those people here to talk about aspects of the films we wouldn't normally know about."

The movie begins at 7 p.m. and will be followed by Vidor

Holliday's talk. Tickets are $10. The Cherry Center is located at Fourth and Guadalupe. For more information, call (831) 624-7491 or visit www.carlcherrycenter.org.

She is also cofounder of the Emily Dickinson International Society and serves on the faculty at CSUMB.

Proceeds from the reading will benefit radio station KPXA's "Poetry Slow Down" program. Tickets are $15 and include a signed copy of Mossberg's chap book, "If You Promise To Let Me Write This Down I Will Give You An Ice Cream."

“The turbulent conditions and high surf precluded us from launching the boat,” he said. “It would have put the crew at risk.”

The Highlands engine, California State Parks lifeguards and rangers, and a Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance were among the first to arrive. Learning of the severity of the situation and the number of victims, CRFA paramedic David Jedinak radioed for three more ambulances, bringing in help from CRFA and Westmed.

Another fire engine from Rio Road, Pacific Grove Ocean Rescue, Monterey County Sheriff’s deputies and the California Highway Patrol also came, and a U.S. Coast Guard cutter was dispatched from Monterey Harbor.

A key player was state parks lifeguard supervisor Eric Abma. “Eric got on scene and started to pull on his wetsuit, and one of the rangers, Chuck Bancroft, spotted Jessica Darrough and shouted, ‘There she is!’” Jones reported. “And he felt she was close enough, he wanted to go in and get her.”

Despite the conditions — water temperatures in the low-50s and waves about 12 feet — Abma plunged in without his wetsuit. He managed to get Jessica Darrough to shore, and emergency crews immediately went to work attempting to resuscitate her.

Working together, paramedics got her stabilized and into a waiting ambulance for the ride to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, where she was placed on life support. (Hospital doctors pronounced her dead shortly before 9 a.m. Tuesday, March 18.)

Meanwhile, rescuers spotted Mark Darrough floating in the water. Abma, now wearing his wetsuit, and lifeguard Eric Sturm went in after him.

“They got a rescue belt on him, and got him back in with ropes and throw lines, because the conditions were bad out there,” Carreiro said.

The patient was unresponsive, Jedinak reported, and the paramedics made every effort to resuscitate him.

“From the time of the call, to the time he made it to the three paramedics who were waiting to treat him, it had been about 40 minutes he had been exposed to the water,” he said.

“We gave him every possibility of surviving,” Carreiro commented, but Darrough was pronounced dead upon arrival in the emergency room at Community Hospital.

The paramedics also treated the others who had been in the water, but whose cases were not critical. Jedinak said three people were taken to the hospital in the remaining two ambulances, cared for and released. “It was truly a really remarkable effort by every person who was there,” he said.

Known dangers

Monastery Beach, also called San Jose Creek Beach, carries the macabre moniker, Mortuary Beach, due to its long history of fatalities. A popular scuba spot in part because of Monterey Bay’s deep ocean canyon, divers have lost their lives there, frequently after becoming separated from their partners and getting entangled in the kelp. Other victims, like the Darroughs, were swept in or entered the water willingly, unaware of the currents, the force and size of the waves, and the water’s frigid temperature.

“I’ve never been on a good Monastery call,” Jedinak commented. “Generally, the outcomes are really negative.”

“We get called there several times a year for things like this,” Jones agreed. “It’s not a good beach to be in the water.”

But how to effectively convey that message to the people drawn to the beach beside Highway 1 just north of Point Lobos? Some 22 signs dot the sand, and while several carry mild messages, like those admonishing people to keep their dogs on leashes, many warn of the dangerous conditions.

“This stretch of beach has more signs than any other quarter mile of beach,” Jones observed.

And more are in the works. Final approval of a new sign that would better illustrate the specific dangers at Monastery Beach is under way in Sacramento. That project was initiated several months ago, according to Jones, who hopes the signs will be in place by summer.

But others think a more shocking message is in order. Several people, including veteran firefighters and those who have carried out multiple rescues at Monastery Beach, suggested the signs show just how many people have died there.

“Maybe that would give a higher sense of caution to people stopping by,” Jedinak said. Jones has heard that suggestion but said it would be an unusual step for state parks.

More importantly, she said, people should remember to exercise caution whenever they’re near the surf. If the sand is wet, a wave has been there and likely will be again. And if there are signs, visitors should read them and heed them. She also recommended calling the parks office for advice on which beaches to visit. Some are better for swimming than others, for instance.

“We’ll tell them the best place to go,” she said, adding that she hopes people will learn from the needlessly tragic events of March 16. “Don’t go in the water after a person, or a dog, or a ball. Call 911, and be a good witness,” she said.

While acknowledging the impulse to plunge in after someone who needs help — especially a family member — can be very difficult to resist, she said, “Those are the people who we seem to end up pulling out.”

ment and city hall," Farrell said. "And they are all used. It's working very well."

But Peninsula residents' diligence has created its own challenges. When the state banned batteries from landfills, it didn't provide any funding for recycling programs, leaving local waste management agencies to absorb the cost.

"Our board told local cities we would accept batteries free of charge if they set up their own collection sites," Lindenthal said.

It costs the district 30 to 50 cents per pound to ship the batteries to a recycling company. In 2006/2007 that cost the district about $5,500. The MRWMD is looking at obtaining grants to help pay for battery collection, Lindenthal said.

"It's becoming a significant expense," he said.

The MRWMD sends batteries in 55-gallon drums weekly to a Hayward recycling facility where they are inspected, sorted and packed up before being shipped to another facility — a battery "breaker" — where they receive final processing, either by heat or chemical treatment, to remove the lead, plastic and acid.

According to Lindenthal, very few MRWMD customers still throw batteries into their household trash. "We have been quite impressed that people have done a good job in keeping them separate," he said. "We do inspect the waste that comes into the facility. I would say out of eight to 10 loads we've looked at, we might have found a half-dozen AA batteries, very few."

There are more than two dozen places on the Peninsula to drop off old batteries. "We encourage people to start a pail of batteries and when it's full, drop it off," he said.

To take some of the cost burden from the MRWMD, it would like to see stores that sell batteries establish a program where they take them back when they're dead, Lindenthal said. Those stores would themselves be responsible for shipping them to a recycling center.

Under AB1125, enacted in 2006, the state already requires that stores selling rechargeable batteries take back dead ones without a fee to customers.

For more information about battery recycling and drop-off locations, visit www.mrwmd.org or call the MRWMD at (831) 384-5313.

Santa Catalina students honored

WHAT BEGAN as a learning assignment for a Santa Catalina School junior landed her several unexpected art awards.

Rosemary Hall, 17, was one of six Santa Catalina students who won local and regional art recognition. All of the winners are in Dana Hart-Stone's art class.

For Hall's work, which began as a practice project in monotyping, she won two Gold Key awards presented by the Alliance for Young Artists & Writers through the Scholastic Art and Writing Awards of 2008.

"We got a printing press and our teacher was teaching us how to use it, and I just went crazy," Hall said. "When they announced I won in an assembly, I was totally shocked."

In creating monoprints, which combines printmaking, painting and drawing, an artist applies paint to a surface, such as paper, and runs it through a press. Other materials, such as string, leaves or fabric, can be applied to add texture.

Hall used images of beetles, storks and string in her colorful work to win the Gold Keys.

"We get large sheets of paper and we use water-based oil paints," Hall said. "We cut out images from magazines and newspapers, and just use the outlines."

Creative writing and art pieces from Santa Catalina students were among 100,000 entries judged, and among the 10 percent to win Gold Key awards.

Hall's classmates, Amber Clarke for painting and Ariana Patterson for ceramics and glass, also received Gold Keys.

The Gold Key winners will be judged at the national level in New York, with the results announced in April.

Additionally, several other Santa Catalina students won awards in the Youth Art Competitive 2008 at the Walter Lee Avery Gallery in Seaside.

Kristina Wasserman received first place for sculpture; Rachael O'Leary, first place for graphics; Amber Clarke, second place for painting, and Lauren Boczek took honorable mention for photography. Hall also received an honorable mention for graphics.

Wasserman, 18, created a French horn from wire to take the first place spot. She won a $50 gift certificate to a local art store.

"It was cool, because I got to take my parents and show them what I'm doing. They haven't seen my artwork before," she said.

Hart-Stone said he teaches his students, many of whom have graduated from Santa Catalina to attend top colleges, to incorporate meaning into their work. He encourages students to work after hours on their projects.

"They are here before school, during school, after school, on the weekends and in the evening," he said. "Our kids do pretty phenomenal work."

At the shaving, Evans noticed a 9-year-old leukemia patient had brought a fleet of young donors. "His five buddies came and had their heads shaved," he said. The boy got to administer one of the haircuts himself.

Kastros, who is in the process of raising $5,000, gave up his hair — and learned this week just how warm it had kept his head — on St. Patrick's Day.

While in San Jose at the March 17 shaving, he met a child sponsored by St. Baldrick's and invited him to come visit the Carmel Fire Station.

"They're supposed to submit a document if they're doing a close-out sale, detailing what they're doing," Conroy said. "I don't think they have done that." He said administrative assistant Margi Perotti, who handles code enforcement, has been talking with Sharper Image officials regarding their compliance with the law.

The bankruptcy is also affecting holders of Sharper Image gift cards, which can only be used if the holder purchases merchandise worth at least twice as much.

Failing that, the person can file for reimbursement as part of the bankruptcy, which is not guaranteed, or wait out the financial storm in hopes the card will eventually be honored in full.

WHAT CAN INVESTORS LEARN FROM GARDENERS?

Spring is here. Soon it will be time to plant flowers or vegetables. But even if you're not a gardener, you can learn some valuable lessons from one - especially if you're an investor.

Just as gardeners pick seeds or plants that are appropriate for their particular plots of land, you need to choose investments that are suitable for your needs. But gardeners don't usually grow only one variety of flower or one fruit or vegetable - and you shouldn't stick with one type of investment vehicle. Choose a variety of investments that can help you make progress toward your objectives. Diversification does not guarantee a profit or protect against loss.

And just as gardeners nurture plants through all types of weather, you need the patience and discipline to stick with appropriate investments through good times and bad.

So the next time you see some industrious gardeners at work, take note. They may have something to offer you.

Exclusionary foolishness

ONE OF the U.S. Supreme Court's gravest mistakes during the last 100 years was its adoption of a sweeping rule excluding evidence from criminal trials if the evidence was obtained through an illegal search.

First imposed on the nation by the high court in 1914 — and greatly expanded in the 70 years that followed — the exclusionary rule was one of the principal causes of the nation's tremendous increase in crime rates during the 1960s and 1970s.

So precious is the rule to criminal defendants, and so widespread its scope, the rule has become a routine part of nearly every criminal trial. Indeed, a defense attorney who didn't try to suppress evidence against his client would probably be considered negligent.

And that explains why the attorney representing a man accused of setting fires on Jacks Peak tried to suppress an extensive list of evidence against his client. Found by police in his car and at his home were all sorts of materials that might be used by an arsonist and miscellaneous other contraband. They found the evidence after connecting the accused arsonist to the fires by placing a GPS tracking device on his car — an illegal search, the accused arsonist's attorney maintained. Fortunately, Monterey County Superior Court Judge Terrance Duncan ruled against the motion to suppress the evidence, and the trial against the accused arsonist will proceed, with a jury deciding his guilt or innocence.

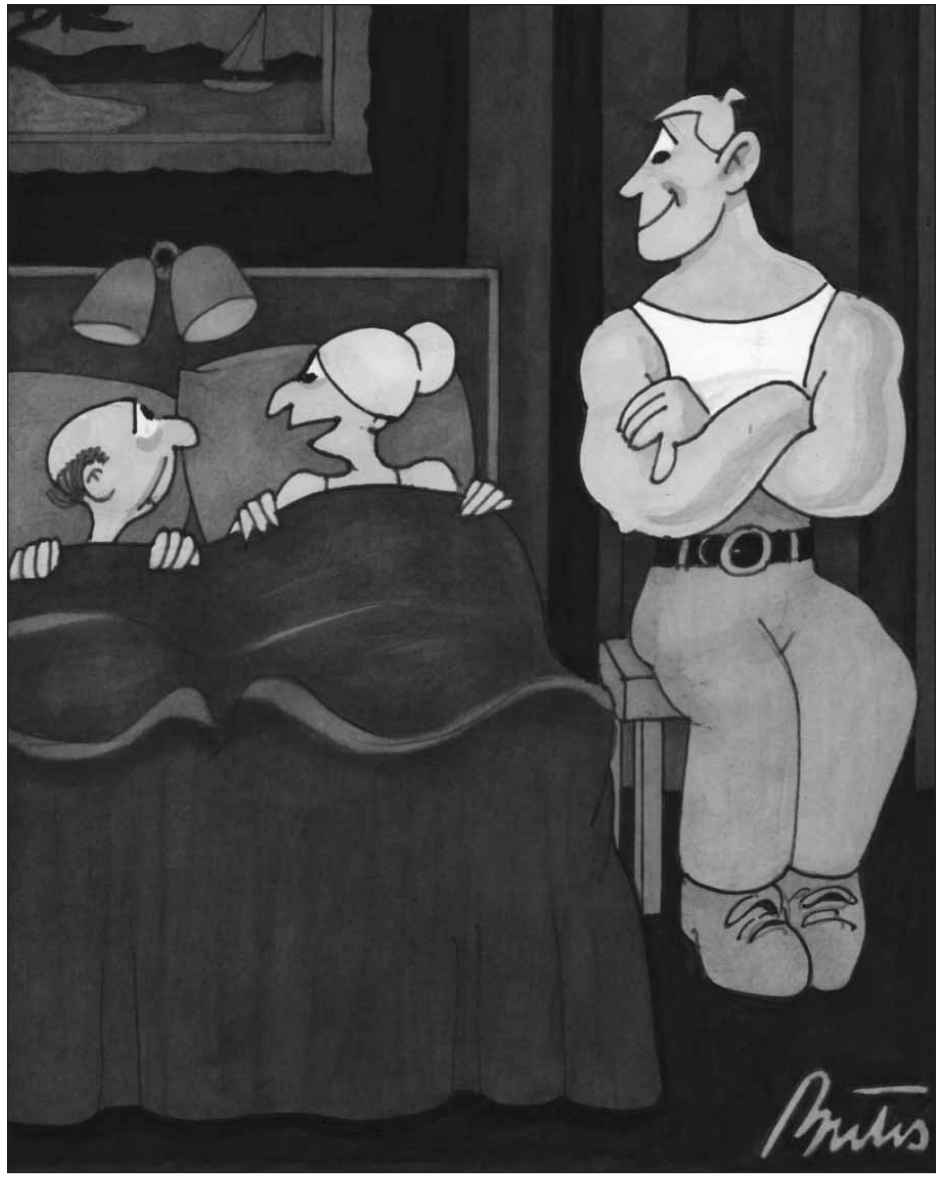

But some communities haven't been so lucky in protecting themselves against violent criminals. The most outrageous example of evidence excluded from a criminal trial after a supposedly illegal search was a 1996 decision by a U.S. District Court judge in New York. As related by an online legal journal, before the trial of an accused drug dealer, Judge Harold Baer excluded a taped confession and 80 pounds of cocaine and heroin. New York police officers obtained the evidence after they stopped a car that four men had hurried away from when they noticed police. According to the judge, rather than indicating possibly criminal behavior, the men might have run because they had good reason to fear abusive police officers in that particular neighborhood. Thus, the judge decided, police lacked the probable cause they needed to stop the car.

That kind of ridiculous decision not only lets criminals go free and endangers law-abiding citizens, it erodes confidence in the courts and the law.

It is important to remember that broad principles such as the exclusionary rule would be adopted by Congress or the various state legislatures if they had popular support. The only reason for the Supreme Court to impose them from on high is that the people don't want them. And that causes a loss of confidence in, if not resentment of, the Supreme Court itself.

Fortunately, more recent court decisions have limited the scope of the exclusionary rule. Perhaps the day will soon come when it is eliminated entirely. Even in cases of gross police misconduct, the remedy should be to punish the offending officers, not the public.

Talmage, Sharp 'deserve your vote'

Dear Editor,

I have attended Carmel city council and planning commission meetings, I serve on the community activities and cultural commission and have observed members of the council and commissions "recusing" when presented with a conflict of interest of an agenda item or live within 500 feet of a property. This seems a fair system.

A city council candidate has said that, if elected, he would make a strong statement against the Carmel Convalescent Hospital Development (which is located in unincorporated Monterey County) when a proposal is presented to the county planning commission. How would this candidate who lives within 500 feet of this property be able to participate in any discussion or decisions of this development when and if presented to the council?

Incumbent council members Ken Talmage and Karen Sharp have shown consistent leadership and have worked hard to keep our city safe and solvent. Talmage and Sharp donate countless hours to many local nonprofits, as well as their time serving on the Carmel City Council. They deserve your support and vote on Tuesday, April 8.

'Firefighters' concerns deserve a hearing'

Dear Editor,

I was astonished to see an ad in The Pine Cone coming from city hall commenting on fire department staffing. I am concerned that the city administrator communicates to Carmel residents on this important issue through an ad funded by taxpayers while the same issue is kept off the city council agenda because "it could be expensive" and would be "better to tackle after the election." It seems to me that the place for the city administrator to communicate with residents about the adequacy of staffing levels of the fire department is at city council meetings, which are held precisely for that purpose. It is at those meetings that the public can weigh in and that the members of the city council are able to represent our interests by making sure that those staffing levels are adequate and that our firefighters are getting the support they deserve. Fire safety is one of the most critical issues facing our village. The firefighters have alerted us to the fact that all may not be well with the way the city has been treating the firefighters and that our village may be facing risks that most of us were not aware of. Taxpayer-funded advertising by the city administrator will not reassure residents. Only an open dialog before the city council can do that.

Let's have a toast!

Dear Editor,

Forty years ago this month, Ron Pollacci opened Ron's Liquors on San Carlos Street between Ocean and Seventh. He still opens the business every morning and still knows most of his local customers by name. Surely Ron's Liquors is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, business in Carmel still owned and operated by the same individual.

Prior to opening his store, Pollacci managed the now-closed Ted's Liquors on Dolores Street for 10 years and, for two years before that, he worked at the long-gone Cork 'N' Bottle on Ocean Avenue. This year marks his 52nd year of working in Carmel. I hope that everyone walking down Dolores will stick their head in the door of the store and wish Ron a well deserved, "Happy Anniversary."

County mayors oppose desist order

THE MONTEREY County Mayors Association voted unanimously to oppose a cease and desist order issued by the state compelling California American Water Co. to drastically reduce pumping of the Carmel River. Thursday, all 12 mayors sent a letter to the State Water Resources Control Board stating their objections.

In January, the SWRCB issued the draft order, which calls for a 50 percent reduction of pumping from the Carmel River within six years.

The mayors also requested that a June hearing to hear testimony from Cal Am and others be held on the Monterey Peninsula, not in Sacramento as it's scheduled.

A 1995 order by the SWRCB states that "people on the Monterey Peninsula must continue to be served water from the Carmel River in order to protect public health and safety.

"Nothing has changed except the exemplary conservation record of the users and economic downturn nationally and statewide," the letter reads.

The 12 mayors who signed the letter are Sue McCloud of Carmel, Dan Cort of Pacific Grove, Chuck Della Sala of Monterey, Dennis Donohue of Salinas, John Huerta, Jr. of Greenfield, Ralph Rubio of Seaside, Joseph Russell of Del Rey Oaks, David Pendergrass of Sand City, Gary Willmot of Marina, Jeff Pereira of King City, Richard Ortiz of Soledad and George Worthy of Gonzales.

which tracks the status of building permits, making it more convenient for customers, Colangelo said.

P.G. jobs at stake?

Although it's unclear how P.G. jobs would be affected by an agreement with Monterey, Colangelo said it's possible Monterey could fire existing P.G. library and building division workers and hire its own.

"It's too early in the exploration [to determine] if they would pick up those employees, or how it would work," Colangelo said.

It's also unknown how Pacific Grove employees with accrued vacation and sick time would fare if they became employees of Monterey, Colangelo said. Would those hours transfer to Monterey, or would P.G. pay out those to employees? Would employees with seniority at P.G. maintain that status as Monterey workers?

"Balancing things become a very complicated," he said.

If an agreement with Monterey is successful for the library and building division, the city will again explore the possibility of contracting for its police services and the city's public works department, Colangelo said.

TRUCK

p.m. March 14, according to Cypress Fire Capt. Ray Alexander.

"He didn't smell anything — just noticed the temperature gauge rising — went about 100 more feet and pulled over," said Alexander, who was stationed at Carmel Hill that day and arrived on the scene a few minutes after a dispatcher alerted crews to the vehicle fire. "Then he noticed flames coming out, and he then opened the hood."

The rush of air fueled the blaze.

"It burned really fast," Alexander said. "It went from the engine compartment through the passenger compartment and into the rear compartment."

Cal Fire Battalion Chief Buddy Bloxham said two engines — one from the Carmel Hill station and the other from Rio Road — "arrived within four minutes to find a fully engulfed commercial vehicle."

As officers with Carmel Police Department and the California Highway Patrol directed traffic, firefighters sprayed foam on the Chris Wilson Plumbing & Heating truck to extinguish the flames.

No one was injured, though the conflagration caused about $30,000 in damage to the truck and its contents, making it a total loss. Alexander said the company owner arrived while fire crews were still there and had the truck towed away.

Cal Fire investigator Cliff Williams is looking into the cause.

MISSY WOLCOTT, 2 in May, is a white toy poodle who has a stash of toys in her Carmel home. She's supposed to keep them in a corner, but Mom Diane says Missy spreads them out so the entire room looks like a toy shop.

When she was just a tiny tot, she took great delight in tearing out the stuffing of her soft toys, but now that she's almost a mature 2, she keeps them intact. She exhibits no favorites, but goes from one to another in the spirit of fair play.

Missy has several fave spots for her outings: Carmel Beach, the Pebble Beach polo field – where she runs in circles – and downtown Carmel-by-the-Sea, where she has play dates with her boyfriend, miniature poodle Grayson, at his mom's antique shop.

Mom Diane had two other poodles before Missy, but they sadly passed away. Both were females, named Tammy and Peanut. When Mom was ready for another little poodle, she found Missy on a Bakersfield kennel website. Good friend Pauline Allen drove over to pick up Missy when she was 9 weeks old, and in doing so was named Missy's godmother.

Missy likes a diet of Mom's food laced with kibble, loves to snuggle up to Mom at night, and when Mom opens the front door, Missy immediately sits down and waits for instructions like a good girl.

She rarely gets into mischief, but a trouble-making gopher in her back garden instigates frenzied chases leading to its hole that wind up with Missy having a very dirty muzzle – and no gopher.

were no signs of distress. There was adequate ventilation and there was ample water in a dish for both dogs. The majority of the vehicle was in the shade, and a sun shade was found along the front seat area. It was apparent that the dogs had moved it from the dashboard by bumping into it. A notice was left on the vehicle, and the dog owner later contacted the officer by telephone. No violation was noted; however, the officer talked to the owner about care provisions when leaving a dog unattended in a vehicle.

Big Sur: A partial human skull was discovered by hikers on a hillside below Bixby Bridge. There were no obvious signs of suspicious trauma. It is believed the death occurred in the last few months, and the skull may have washed up from the ocean. After a search by Monterey County Search and Rescue members, the coroner's office and an archeologist, the remaining remains have not been located. The skull will be taken to UC Santa Cruz for further studies to determine age, race, sex, etc.

Carmel area: A rock was thrown through a kitchen window.

Carmel Valley: A juvenile called in to report she had been shot by a BB gun while walking on Robinson Canyon Road. It was later determined that the reporting party had been shot by another juvenile shooting an air gun.
