DRONES WILL HELP CATCH POT GROWERS

By CHRIS COUNTS

GROWING MARIJUANA on local U.S. Forest Service land is about to get more difficult.

A non-profit group — the Ventana Wilderness Alliance — will begin this weekend to team up with forest service personnel in an effort to clean up back country marijuana gardens. Meanwhile, the forest service recently spent $100,000 on two remote-controlled drones to help the agency monitor remote and rugged terrain for evidence of illegal growing operations.

VWA volunteers and forest service workers will hike along the Nacimiento River Saturday and Sunday to reach an illegal garden. Their goal is not to catch the growers, but to dismantle their infrastructure.

"Cleaning up gardens makes it much harder for growers," explained John Bradford, Monterey district ranger. "Growers will use the same places again and again if they are left alone."

While growing marijuana on government land is clearly illegal, the forest service and the VWA are also concerned about the effects of growing operations on the environment. "Growers leave behind all sorts of things, like garbage, pesticides, PVC pipe and other hazardous materials," Bradford said. "It's a growing problem, and we see more of

Water district desal plant back on drawing board

By KELLY NIX

WITH PENINSULA residents facing severe cutbacks in pumping from the Carmel River, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is considering building a desalination plant deemed years ago to be "infeasible."

Newly elected MPWMD director Bob Brower has proposed bringing back the Seawater Desalination Project, a plant in Sand City that was shelved in 2004 as a new water supply for the Peninsula because an engineering firm concluded it was flawed.

Doris Day's birthday a big deal on the www

By CHRIS COUNTS

AN ESTIMATED 2 million listeners tuned into the Internet broadcast of a local radio show last week to wish a collective "Happy 84th Birthday" to America's Sweetheart.

For six years, the Monterey Peninsula AM radio station KIDD ("Magic 63") broadcast an April 3 tribute to Doris Day, entertaining a devoted — if somewhat modest — audience. But all that changed two years ago when

Voters choose McCloud, Talmage, Sharp

County Democrats say they may challenge results

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH JUST under half the registered voters in Carmel-by-the-Sea casting ballots, the three candidates who already occupied seats behind the dais in Carmel City Hall were elected Tuesday, according to final results released by the Monterey County Elections department late Wednesday afternoon.

Mayor Sue McCloud prevailed over token opponent Dogman McBill, while councilman Ken Talmage and councilwoman Karen Sharp, who had been appointed to replace members who left, were elected to four-year terms in close victories over challenger Michael LePage.

According to the official numbers released Wednesday — following the tallying of 84 ballots uncounted on Election Day — a total 1,373 ballots were cast by 49 percent of the city's 2,781 registered voters. While 329 people used the polling places at Sunset Center April 8, 1,044 opted to vote by mail.

In the mayor's race, 926 chose McCloud, while 312 voted for McBill.

The council race was much closer, with Sharp netting 784 votes, Talmage receiving 769 and LePage getting 747.

The election was nonpartisan, with candidates not declaring any party affiliation. But Thursday afternoon, the chair of the Monterey County Democratic Party announced his organization might challenge the results, because the ballot language instructed voters to "vote for two," while voters were actually allowed to vote for just one.

According to Democratic chairman Vinz Koller, the "vote for two" language was illegal and might have prevented LePage from being elected.

Couple injured attempting to extinguish drapery fire

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A MAN went to the hospital and a woman was treated at the scene after they tried to put out a blaze in their Mission Street home Sunday night, according to Carmel Fire Capt. Bruce Meyer. The fire began when a candle ignited drapes in front of a sliding glass door in their upstairs bedroom.

The curtains caught fire while resident Tim Rebert's back was turned. Seeing the flames, he ran into the bathroom, drenched some towels in the bathtub, which had been filled earlier, and attempted to extinguish them.

But the flames quickly ran up the curtains to the ceiling and Rebert sustained first- and second-degree burns trying to put out the fire himself, according to Meyer. He then went downstairs and outside. But the other resident, Joann Castiglioni, remained inside and tried to fight the fire with water from a bathtub.

"When we were en route, we had an update from FireComm [Monterey County Emergency Communications] saying an occupant was inside the residence refusing to leave," Meyer said. And Castiglioni managed to put out most of the flames.

"She flung water on the fire and got it almost all the way out," he said.

Firefighters extinguished what was still burning, removed debris and investigated. An engine crew from the neighboring Cypress Fire Protection District assisted and stood by in case the fire erupted again, and a Monterey duty chief arrived to take over command of the incident. Meanwhile, emergency medical technicians and paramedics treated the residents.

Castiglioni "suffered some smoke and heat inhalation, but she refused to go the hospital." Rebert was taken to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula for examination and treatment of the burns, which were relatively minor, and was later released.

Firefighters estimated the damage was $5,000 to the building and $5,000 to its contents, though the numbers could climb.

County, cities seek tax dollars for emergency call system

By MARY BROWNFIELD

IF A tsunami, forest fire or terrorists were to hit Carmel, residents could be quickly and simultaneously alerted via a telephone emergency notification system, police chief George Rawson told the city council April 3. The system isn't in place yet, but the state will award tax dollars to counties seeking to install such technology, and Monterey County wants some.

"Monterey County smartly reached out to all its cities," to see if they would participate in the grant application, Rawson said, since taking a regional approach should improve the chances of obtaining a share of the $2 million offered by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger through his Office of Homeland Security.

The TENS would be programmed with people's home, work and cell phone numbers to quickly disseminate customized outgoing messages, and Carmel emergency agencies could use it to contact everyone during a citywide emergency. But if an incident affected a specific area, the TENS could be programmed to alert the appropriate group. For example, residents in the tidal wave zone might be told to seek higher ground.

"Each city will be able to have access to it and customize the system the way we want to deliver outbound messages," Rawson said.

The county's emergency communications users advisory council is taking the lead on the project and will "approve final system specifications, vendor selection, operational policies and procedures, cost sharing formula, and other issues related to administering the project," Rawson said in his report to the council.

While cost estimates are still being analyzed, the formula for splitting the bill would be based on population. Using preliminary figures provided by the county, and depending on how many cities ultimately sign on, Carmel's share would be less than $5,000 over three years, according to Rawson. It could be as low as $2,500. "This is a commonsense opportunity for us to participate in a great project," he said.

Even if it doesn't get the grant, Rawson added, Monterey County is planning to install the telephone emergency notification system.

"This is very timely, because at some of our campaign coffees, this issue has come up: 'Is there a way we can communicate with everyone if there's a disaster?'" commented councilwoman Karen Sharp, who was elected this week after being appointed to replace Mike Cunningham last summer.

Councilman Gerard Rose made a motion to adopt the resolution authorizing participation in the grant application, and the mayor and other council members unanimously agreed.

First Tee needs help

THE FIRST Tee of Monterey County, which helps kids learn life skills through the game of golf, needs volunteer coaches for students enrolled in the program at the Laguna Seca Golf Ranch off Highway 68. And the adults need not even know how to swing a club or make a putt.

The volunteers are mentors and role models who help guide the kids through the approved lessons, according to The First Tee, which is "an initiative to impact the lives of young people by providing learning facilities and educational programs that promote character development and life-enhancing values through the game of golf."

Although classes include golf instruction on full swing, chipping and pitching, organizers said golf skills are not required for volunteers. The nonprofit's accompanying life skills programming is based on the "Nine Core Values of The First Tee: honesty, integrity, respect, responsibility, confidence, courtesy, judgment, perseverance and sportsmanship."

For more information, contact Nick Nelson (nnelson@thefirstteemc.org), or Barry Phillips (bphillips@thefirst-teemc.org) at (831) 444-7200. Laguna Seca Golf Ranch is located on York Road in Monterey off Highway 68.

Did you know...

A favorite photograph in Pacific Grove – the postcard perfect "Magic Carpet" just west of Lovers Point – is the pink and lavender blooms that burst forth each spring. The brightly colored blanket along the coast - which lasts through August - is actually ice plant used as ground cover in a 2.6-mile-long shoreline garden that was planted by a resident who lived nearby. Hayes Perkins retired from an adventurous life of travels and settled in a two-room cabin near Lovers Point in 1942. The shoreline was covered with natural poison oak at the time. After watching kids play along the shoreline and break out with rashes, Perkins decided to remove the poison oak. He single-handedly pulled it out and replaced it with a colorful array of flowering ice plant (mesembryanthemum), geraniums, calla lilies, and scarlet aloe. It took him six years. The city later adopted his legacy and named that stretch of shoreline Perkins Park. Next week: Point Lobos History

Balestreri named Citizen of the Year

TED BALESTRERI, chief executive officer of the Sardine Factory Restaurant and Cannery Row Company, has been named Monterey Peninsula's 2007 Citizen of the Year.

The Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce honored Balestreri March 28 at the chamber's 100th Annual Awards Dinner at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Monterey. Balestreri was selected for the award in recognition of his unmatched commitment to the Monterey Peninsula, according to the chamber.

Forty years ago, Balestreri, along with partner Bert Cutino, founded the world-famous Sardine Factory Restaurant in Monterey's rundown and nearly abandoned waterfront canning district, spurring the revitalization of Cannery Row.

At the helm of the Cannery Row Company, Balestreri continued to lead the evolution of Cannery Row into one of the country's premier travel destinations, and has remained dedicated to bolstering the Monterey Peninsula's growth and prosperity, the chamber said. He is presently on the Board of Trustees for Robert Louis Stevenson School, Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, and the Panetta Institute of Public Policy, as well the CSU Monterey Bay President's Council. He has also been a major contributor to scholarship funds through local and national educational foundations.

When to Buy

Financial advisors in our newspapers and magazines love to write about this subject, suggesting that we buy when sellers are willing to negotiate, when interest rates are low, when others are buying, etc., etc.

The reality is that there is no ideal time—in the abstract—to buy your home. The best time to buy is when you can afford to buy, and need to buy a home that suits the needs of your household, and have found the right home to fulfill your needs and wishes.

It's true that we've seen home prices skyrocket in certain years, and that people who bought when home prices reached their peak weren't always pleased with the results. But the problem didn't reside in the home, nor did problems show up in the real estate deals, nor even position of the stars in the heavens. The problem showed up when people bought more than they could afford to buy, particularly when they used a mortgage loan they didn't understand and found, months after the deal closed, that the monthly payment started to rise insidiously.

There may be no better time to buy than that magical moment when very few people think they should, and interest rates are low, and the market is coming into recovery. But that is a moving target, very hard to hit. A good home at a fair price with financing that fits the buyers' profile—that is surely the definition of a good deal for a buyer. Ueberroth fund helps low-income women get mammograms

By KELLY NIX

THE BAD news is the National Cancer Institute estimates about 180,000 women in the United States this year will be diagnosed with breast cancer, with more than a quarter of them eventually dying of the disease.

The good news is if breast cancer is detected and treated in its early stages, the chances of survival are high.

For low-income women on the Monterey Peninsula, who may put off seeing a doctor to screen for the disease, there is the Sherry Cockle Fund, created to help low-income women pay for the test.

"It's a fund that provides free mammograms to women who otherwise might not be able to afford them," said Janet Dunn, coordinator for Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula's Breast Care Center.

A mammogram is an X-ray of the breast to detect tumors that cannot be felt. Mammograms can also find tiny deposits of calcium in the breast that can indicate the presence of breast cancer.

The fund, named for Pebble Beach Co. co-owner Peter Ueberroth's longtime assistant, Sherry Cockle, covers the entire cost of a mammogram for women who are asymptomatic. It was created in 1990 with $50,000 from the Ueberroth Family Foundation matched by $50,000 raised from the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am golf tournament.

"Last year," said CHOMP spokeswoman Brenda Moore, "the Ueberroths were so pleased with the results [of the program], they donated another $50,000."

CHOMP charges $323.40 for a screening mammogram. "Women who are symptomatic," Moore said, "may qualify for free or reduced-cost diagnostics through our Sponsored Care Program, which provides financial assistance for patients who don't have the means to pay."

Dunn said the Breast Care Center is still trying to promote the Sherry Cockle Fund, which many women are unaware exists. The Breast Care Center is also looking for donations to the fund.

"There was a lady who called me, and she was kind of struggling to pay for her mammogram," Dunn said. "She said she didn't have medical insurance. She didn't know about the fund."

Women apply at the Breast Care Center to determine if they are eligible for the grant. If they are, an order is given for the test.

"Some women who can't afford a mammogram may qualify for one through the Sherry Cockle Fund, or they may qualify for a government assistance program that would pay for it," Moore said. "We try to direct them to the most appropriate program."

Cockle retired in Carmel Valley before being diagnosed with late-stage breast cancer. Although Cockle ultimately died of uterine cancer in 1987, the fund was created to highlight the importance of testing for breast cancer.

The National Cancer Institute recommends women age 40 and older have mammograms every one to two years since older women are more prone to breast cancer.

Cockle worked for Ueberroth for more than 20 years, during the building of his travel empire and through his role with the 1984 Olympics Games. She also helped Ueberroth set up his office in New York in the 1980s when he became baseball commissioner.

To find out more information about the Sherry Cockle Fund or to donate to it, call the Breast Care Center at (831) 622-2760.

Thank You Carmel-by-the-Sea

Thank you Carmel-by-the-Sea for giving me the opportunity to serve you on the City Council for the next four years. I love the village and its people and will work hard to find the proper balance between individual needs and community priorities.

Thank you to two great candidates, Ken Talmage and Michael Le Page, who made the race exciting and brought focus on key issues.

Thank you to my husband, Dave Sharp, who was not only patient with his "absentee" wife but who was a hard working member of the team.

Thank you to the many friends who walked the streets of Carmel with me, stood at the post office, hosted meetings in their homes for me to meet many of their friends and associates, worked on mailings and were generous with advice and good ideas.

Thank you to the many people I met for the first time who shared with me their concerns about Carmel.

Thank you to those who posed the hard questions that had me scurrying about finding answers in areas where I did not have ready replies.

And thanks to a free society that allows us to run our own affairs at the local level in an open and democratic way.

SPRING Into Action!

Conserve water now to make a difference in the summer.

Conserving water is important during any time of year, and taking special care to be efficient during springtime can make a big difference. Almost 50 percent of residential water use is outdoors. Limiting the use of sprinklers and automated irrigation systems during April and May means water will be available in the dry months ahead.

HERE ARE A FEW WAYS YOU CAN "SPRING INTO ACTION" NOW:

- Wait before you water outdoors. Keeping your sprinklers off during April and May saves you money and helps protect our environment.
- When you do need to water, do it in the early morning when there is less wind.
- Replace high water use plants with water-efficient varieties.
- Give your irrigation system a spring tune-up and repair all leaks and worn nozzles.
- Renovate your irrigation system and incorporate water-efficient products, including weather-based controllers, rain shut off devices and drip irrigation systems.
- Apply mulch in landscape beds to reduce water loss.
- Consider replacing portions of your lawn with water-efficient plants, ornamental grasses and decorative hardscapes.

Get your free water-saving devices, helpful tools, and information about rebates that are available for installing water-efficient irrigation products and indoor high-efficiency appliances from California American Water today!

Garbage bills to grow

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE PRICE of trash pickup in Carmel-by-the-Sea will rise almost 12 percent, according to a rate change narrowly approved by the city council last Thursday. Waste Management, the company contracted to haul away garbage, yard trimmings and recyclables in Carmel's one square mile, sought the rate hike to offset increases in disposal fees at the Marina landfill, fuel costs and annual inflation, as well as to turn a small profit.

Haulers collected 8,056 tons of refuse from Carmel customers in 2007, according to district manager Felipe Melchor. While dumping it at the landfill cost $346,427 last year, the per-ton fee of $43 increased to $45 in 2008.

He also cited skyrocketing fuel prices, which rose by more than half, from $68,316 in 2005 to $106,611 in 2006, just for servicing Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Finally, he pointed out, the company's contract with the city provides for rate adjustments based on 75 percent of the annual change in the Consumer Price Index, which grew 2.91 percent in 2007.

But even with that additional 6.7 percent, "Waste Management will provide services at an annual loss," he said, so the company requested an additional 5 percent, bringing the total potential increase to 11.7 percent.

What they do

Among the services the company provides to Carmel-by-the-Sea customers, "backyard premier service," which allows people to avoid having to haul their cans to and from the curb, tops the list.

"Carmel is the only city in Monterey County that has that service," Melchor said. Carmelites also enjoy "free cleanup weeks" four times per year, when they can add up to seven cans or bags of waste to be collected without additional charges, while most other communities have two cleanup weeks each year.

The contract also stipulates Waste Management contribute $18,000 per year to youth and nonprofit organizations within the city, and Melchor pointed out the company undertakes quarterly newsletters, school outreach, community events, neighborhood and association meetings, display materials, waste assessment and activity reporting.

Councilman Gerard Rose complimented Melchor on the trash company's service and employees.

"Your drivers are unbelievably courteous," said

Park district enticing you to turn off the tube and go outside

By CHRIS COUNTS

A RECENT study by the National Academy of Sciences indicates Americans are visiting parks less as they spend more and more time in front of their computers and televisions.

But by publishing an activity guide that offers almost as many options as a satellite dish, the folks at the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District are hoping locals will get outside to smell the spring wildflowers.

"It's a user-friendly way for the public to connect with our local parks and open space," explained Jackie Nelson, environmental education supervisor for the park district. "It's about getting people outdoors and having fun while they're doing it."

The park district last week unveiled "Let's Go Outdoors: Your Adventure Activities Guide." At a cost of $19,000, the agency ordered 52,000 copies of the 16-page guide, which was mailed to residents who live within the park district, which extends from Big Sur to the south, Carmel Valley to the east and Marina to the north. The cost of mailing the catalogs was $4,400. The guides were also distributed to libraries, recreation centers and visitor centers.

Featured in the guide is a dizzying selection of spring and summer activities. There's a class for kids about snakes ("See snakes slither and watch them wiggle.") and another for teens about writing ("What's Bugging

You?"). For anyone looking for a good stretch, there is "Yoga on the Beach." If you're interested in getting a closer look at Monterey Bay, you can take "Gilligan's Kayak Tour," or travel more leisurely on a 65-foot sailboat ("Science Under Sail"). There are otter-watching tours ("Sea Otter Safari"), bird-watching excursions ("Find Feathered Friends") and even a course on arachnids ("Spiders!").

For the creatively inclined, the catalog includes workshops on nature photography ("Snap Shots to Paradise"), painting ("Exploring Watercolors") and sketching ("Drawn to Nature").

In all, the catalog features more than 90 events, lectures, classes and activities, and draws upon the talents of 25 instructors. Some activities are free, while others charge to cover the costs of materials and instruction.

"This is our inaugural edition," explained Joseph Narvaez, the park district's environmental program director. "We'll publish two issues every year. And we'll offer different classes when the seasons change."

For more about the park district, call (831) 372-3196 or visit www.mprpd.org.

Hands needed to stuff goody bags

EACH OF the more than 10,000 participants in this month's Big Sur International Marathon and related events gets a bag full of goodies, race information and sponsor pamphlets. And someone has to stuff them. Or, more accurately, lots of people are needed to stuff them.

Race organizers are hoping a crowd of volunteers will show up at the Big Sur International Marathon's warehouse, located at 840 Fir St. in Sand City, this Saturday, April 12, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. to help fill thousands of goody bags.

"Interested individuals can help for any length of time and do not need to sign up in advance," said marketing communications director Julie Armstrong. Students enrolled in local schools can receive community service credit for doing some of the work.

"The Big Sur International Marathon is truly a community event utilizing nearly 2,000 volunteers in its efforts to stage one of the world's premier running events," she reported.

For more information about the April 12 packet stuffing or the races set for April 26-27, call (831) 625-6226 or visit www.bsim.org.

Lyme disease becoming a serious problem in California

SPECIAL TO THE PINE CONE

THERE IS a serious disease spreading in California that no one seems to want to talk about, and it hits home here on the Monterey Peninsula. It could even be called an epidemic — but studies show it's an epidemic that could be turned around fairly easily. The month of May is National Lyme Disease Awareness Month, and here in California, the first week in May has been designated Lyme disease Awareness Week.

To most people this does not mean much and, in this case, ignorance of the disease could be extremely dangerous. Lyme disease is most often thought of as an East Coast disease, but deer ticks have been found in 56 of 58 counties in California, and Lyme disease cases have been reported in 52 counties.

Lyme disease is transmitted by the western black-legged tick, or deer tick. Given the abundant deer population on the Monterey Peninsula, education about the transmission, treatment and prevention of this disease needs to be readily available. Residents and visitors enjoy the wide variety of outdoor recreational activities the Peninsula has to offer. Whether those activities include strolling through the Pebble Beach forests or hiking the trails in our parks or surrounding hills, knowledge about Lyme disease can enhance everyone's enjoyment of these outings and also prevent illness.

Lyme disease is a serious infectious illness and is the second-fastest-growing infectious disease in the United States. According to research published by the American Society of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene, there were more than 1,300 cases in California between 1993 and 2005. Because the symptoms of the disease can easily be mistaken for something else, the reporting of cases may be far lower than the actual number of cases. All of the numbers, however, are cause for alarm given the fact that effective treatment is readily available; the problem has been in the early identification and diagnosis and immediate treatment. When treatment is delayed, it can become much more difficult to treat and recovery may take quite a bit longer, since Lyme can involve many of the body's systems. But when treated promptly with antibiotics, the infection can be cured and complications can be avoided.

To this end, two local women, whose families have been severely impacted the disease, have organized a Lyme disease awareness event on the Monterey Peninsula so that other families might not endure what they have gone through.

Nick Harris, Ph.D. and Christine Green, M.D., both experts in the field, will be the featured speakers at the event to be held at Pasadera Country Club in Monterey on Thursday, May 1, from 5 to 7 p.m. It is free and the public is invited to attend. For more information please contact Kathy Newell at (831) 659-7711 or Judy de Regt at (831) 620-1250.

DRIVER STOPPED BY DEPUTY IN NICK OF TIME

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A WOMAN driving with her BMW ablaze told the Monterey County Sheriff's deputy who pulled her over on Carmel Valley Road Friday night that she didn't realize her car was on fire until she stopped, according to Cypress Fire Capt. Dan Frost.

"The sheriff's deputy was driving northbound on Highway 1 between Carmel Valley Road and the high school, and he saw this lady coming southbound in a BMW station wagon with the right headlight on fire," he reported.

The deputy, Mike Shapiro, notified dispatchers of the vehicle fire shortly before 10 p.m. April 4 and made a U-turn to pursue the driver, pulling her over near Carmel Middle School.

"She told the officer she was unaware her car was on fire," Frost said. But it definitely was. "He also extinguished the fire, so he was a full-service sheriff's deputy."

While the Cal Fire dispatcher radioed for a battalion chief, multiple engines and crews to respond to the reported vehicle fire on Carmel Valley Road, Frost, whose engine was the first on the scene, canceled the others after discovering the flames were already out.

His crew investigated.

"It appeared there was a short at the headlight and it actually caused the fire," he said. Frost wondered if the car's high intensity headlamps might be to blame but said research afterward revealed no recall notices or warnings.

The BMW wagon sustained enough damage that the owner could not drive it.

"It had to be towed because the fire got into the electrical system," he explained.

Frost also pointed out how much worse the outcome might have been if the fire had spread to the engine compartment or the fuel system. "She was very lucky, and the car was salvageable," he said.

Meeting to address residents' lagoon worries

IN RESPONSE to concerns by residents of a low-lying neighborhood adjacent to the Carmel River Lagoon which flooded Jan. 5, county officials will host a meeting Monday, April 14, at Mission Ranch.

"We requested a meeting to try and improve the county's emergency plan," explained Mary Jane Hammerland of Homeowners for Effective Lagoon Management. "We would like to address the time-consuming protocols that are required to declare an emergency. We feel the county and the residents could have been better prepared. We need to work out a better plan."

According to Hammerland, 13 homes near the Carmel River Lagoon were flooded as a result of the big storm which ravaged the Monterey Peninsula Jan. 4-5. High surf and heavy rains sent the lagoon above flood stage. The storm was not a surprise.

"If we had sandbagged a couple days before, nobody would have gotten wet," Hammerland added.

The meeting starts at 3:30 p.m. For more information, call (831) 624-7570.

Report: LBAM spraying, illnesses may not be linked

A REPORT released by the state Thursday concluded it's impossible to determine whether there is a link between reported illnesses and a moth-confusing pheromone sprayed by planes over Monterey and Santa Cruz counties last fall.

The 32-page document, released by the Office of Environmental Health Hazard Assessment, analyzes the reports of symptoms made by citizens during and after the substance was sprayed.

The analysis concluded most of the reports did not have enough adequate information to determine whether there was a connection between the reported health issues and the application of CheckMate, the pheromone.

"It is not possible to determine whether or not there is a link between any of the reported symptoms and the aerial spraying," the report indicated. "First, medical tests are not available to diagnose or confirm that an illness resulted from exposure to the pheromone formulations of CheckMate OLR-F and LBAM-F."

The California Department of Food & Agriculture performed aerial spraying of CheckMate six times over the Monterey Peninsula in September and October.

Of the 463 reports of symptoms reported to the CDEA, 57 percent from were Monterey County.

The Office of Environmental Health Hazard Assessment, Department of Pesticide Regulation and the California Department of Public Health contributed to the report.

The CDEA issued a statement from its secretary, A.G. Kawamura on the report.

"It's my hope today's report will help ease the minds of those concerned about the Light Brown Apple Moth eradication program and open a positive dialogue," Kawamura said.

About 3 ounces of CheckMate formulation was distributed per acre within the aerial-application areas, the report indicates. Another round of spraying over the Monterey Peninsula is scheduled to begin June 1.

CITY BACKS REGIONAL WATER PLAN

THE CARMEL City Council took the "important and symbolic" step last week of adopting a resolution in support of the Monterey regional water planning projects proposed by a group created by the California Public Utilities Commission Division of Ratepayer Advocates.

The Regional Plenary Oversight Group, which comprises representatives from public agencies, stakeholders and citizens, met almost a dozen times in 2007 to create a list of projects that would collectively fulfill water needs in Monterey County between Pajaro and the Carmel Highlands.

The components include aquifer storage and recovery, desalination plants, recycled water, diversion of Salinas River water, conservation, treatment of brackish water and other measures, including power generation from methane gas at the Marina landfill.

Last Thursday, city clerk Heidi Burch advised the council three parties — the Monterey County Water Resources Agency, the Marina Coast Water District and California American Water Co. — drafted a memorandum of understanding requiring them "to collectively focus their efforts in an expeditious manner."

"The city's support of a regional water supply planning solution is important and symbolic," she wrote in her April 3 staff report. "Staff will remain active in REPOG until it is disbanded, and lend ongoing support to implement a regional water supply solution."

According to the resolution, the REPOG projects and water management programs "appear to be cost effective for ratepayers, have great regional benefit and result in an acceptable implementation strategy," and the plan demonstrates "viability, acceptability and is worthy to be evaluated technically."

The council also stipulated the REPOG measures be considered in the environmental impact analysis of proposed water projects, such as the desalination plant Cal Am is planning to construct in Moss Landing.

Wells Fargo again selected to provide municipal bank services

JUST AS it has for the past two decades, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea will continue banking with Wells Fargo, the council decided without discussion last Thursday.

After city treasurer Dewey Evans and administrative services director Joyce Giuffre suggested a review of the city's banking needs, the council decided last September to request proposals from prospective institutions.

"The review was intended to enable the city to create efficiencies, make improvements where possible, take advantage of new technologies and look at reducing its banking costs," Giuffre wrote in her April 3 staff report.

Four banks submitted bids: Wells Fargo, First National, Bank of the West and Comerica. Evans and Giuffre reviewed the proposals and met with bank representatives before suggesting Carmel stick with the institution it has used for more than 20 years.

"It was determined that Wells Fargo can provide the variety of services currently needed at a competitive price, as well as any additional banking services the city may need," Giuffre wrote in her report, which recommended the council approve a three-year contract with the bank for an estimated $10,000 per year.

In exchange, Wells Fargo will continue holding the city's general, payroll, Section 125 (pretax) and workers compensation accounts, and providing such services as desktop deposit, CDROM image delivery, web-based program information, ACH and wire, branch cash, general disbursement and credit card processing.

The council unanimously approved the agreement as part of its consent agenda.

YOUR AUTO COLUMN

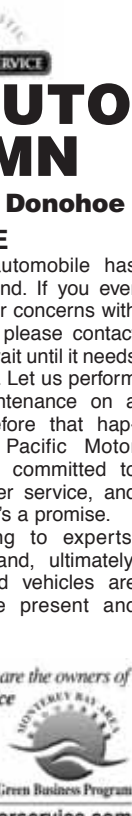

Presented by Kevin & Sue Anne Donohoe

THE COST OF GASOLINE

The recent rise in the price of gasoline has irritated many motorists, but let's consider its relative cost. Even if the price of gasoline doubled in this country, Americans would still pay less than drivers in Europe, where the cost hovers around $5 per gallon in countries such as the United Kingdom, Germany, and the Netherlands. Moreover, after being adjusted for inflation, the recent "record high" prices for gasoline do not even compare with 1979 prices, when a gallon cost about $3.78 in 2004 prices. It should also be mentioned that a nationally known sports drink costs about $10 a gallon, and some bottled waters cost twice that amount. Having said all this, increased fuel efficiency is a worthy goal. Every action we take with you and your automobile has your safety in mind. If you ever have questions, or concerns with your automobile, please contact us. Please don't wait until it needs to be towed to us. Let us perform preventative maintenance on a regular basis before that happens. Here at Pacific Motor Service, we are committed to excellent customer service, and quality work. That's a promise.

P.S. According to experts, hybrid vehicles and, ultimately, hydrogen-powered vehicles are the wave of the present and future.

each year.”

Even the topsoil growers bring into the back country can wreak havoc. Typically purchased at nurseries, the soil is often laden with seeds from exotic plants, which can quickly overwhelm native vegetation.

The marijuana eradication project began when VWA President Tom Hopkins approached Bradford about a year ago and suggested a collaborative effort.

“This is the first time we’ve tried anything like this,” Bradford said. “It took a little time to work out the details.”

About 15 people will participate in the cleanup effort. Bradford said the approximately 1.5-mile hike in to the site will be difficult.

“This will be a good test case,” he added. “If it works out, it will be a major help to us.”

Drones on the job

The U.S. Forest Service recently spent $100,000 on two battery-operated thermal-imaging drones to aid in their search for marijuana gardens throughout California. Resembling miniature gliders, the drones weigh about 4 pounds each, can travel up to about 30 mph and have a range of about two miles. They can also fly up to 7,000 feet.

“Our guys work in remote locations,” explained John Heil, forest service spokesman. “The drones’ thermal imaging capabilities allow law enforcement agents to pinpoint marijuana fields and size up dangers before going in. Knowing more about what they’ll confront will make them a lot safer.”

A two-person crew on the ground will operate the drones.

According to Heil, more than 6 million marijuana plants have been discovered growing in California’s 18 national forests since 2000.

Heil said the drones will be used in all 18 national forests in the state, including Los Padres National Forest.

“By late summer or early fall we expect them to be flying over California,” he added.

- Automotive facilities that do car washing as an incidental business activity, such as new and used car dealers, car rental agencies, auto body shops, etc.
- Equipment rental or maintenance – if washing of equipment is performed

You are invited to attend a free Workshop where representatives from local communities, and portions of Monterey County, will describe their Proposed Approach to Managing the Discharges of Wash Water from Commercial Washers. From page 1A

At the April 21 MPWMD board meeting, district engineers will give directors an estimate of how much it will cost to complete an environmental impact report for the project, which could provide from 6,000 to 8,000 acre-feet of water per year.

In March, the district placed the proposed water project at the top of its list to pursue.

"It's probably the least controversial of all the projects out there," Brower told The Pine Cone.

But in 2004, engineering studies determined that certain aspects of the seawater intake and brine discharge facilities of the plant were infeasible and that it might not be possible to yield 8,400 acre-feet of water from the operation, the amount sought at the time.

Big cutbacks loom

Since the Sand City project was abandoned, the MPWMD and water provider Cal Am are under increasing pressure to come up with an alternative to drawing water from the Carmel River. In January, the State Water Resources Control Board proposed a cease and desist order calling for Cal Am to reduce pumping from the river by 50 percent within six years.

That directive comes 13 years after the state water board issued Order 95-10 compelling Cal Am to limit pumping from the Carmel River, its main water source.

So Brower said the Sand City plant should be revived. "We are running out of time to wait for regional solutions to take place," said Brower, who was elected in November. "We desperately need this plant."

Publicly owned and environmentally friendly

Brower believes the Sand City project could be built more quickly than Cal Am's proposed Moss Landing desal plant, which is slated to produce about 11,000 acre-feet.

Cal Am's project has been tied up at the California Public Utilities Commission, which for three years has been working on an environmental impact report.

The Sand City project could be approved by MPWMD directors and would not likely require voter approval, Brower said. And because the water district would own it, the PUC would not be involved.

It's also appealing because it would be publicly owned, which would likely appease local water activists opposed to a privately owned water project. And Brower wants to limit the size of the desal plant to match the amount of water being overpumped from other water sources. He's proposing a desal plant that would provide no new water — not even for lots of record.

"It's a universally accepted project by the board since this plant would not provide more growth," Brower said.

Cal Am community relations manager Catherine Bowie said Cal Am's desal plant, dubbed the Coastal Water Project, was also planned for no growth.

But because of strong conservation efforts and the proliferation of other water-saving projects, the amount of water needed now is thought to be about 4,500 acre-feet less than it was when the CWP was first proposed. So Cal Am's plan might provide a small amount of water for infill housing, business expansions, remodels and the like.

"I think it's a false argument that our plant allows for growth and the Sand City plant doesn't," she said. "It's more complicated than that."

Another benefit to the Sand City project, Brower said, is that the desal operation would not use an open ocean intake to draw in water like Cal Am's CWP proposes. That method, called "once-through cooling," is loathed by environmentalists and the California Coastal Commission, which is taking steps to eliminate the technology in the state.

In the past few months, several water activists have offered their support of the proposal which board members now refer to as the 95-10 project.

"It certainly makes the project easier if they are behind it," Brower said. "The roadblocks that normally would come out wouldn't be there."

Concerns by some

But there are already a host of concerns over the Sand City proposal being voiced by some who feel it could take the steam out of other projects that are farther along.

"It's really important that we are all moving in the same direction," Bowie said, "It's not the time to pull out alternatives."

The exploration of the Sand City proposal comes as the Regional Plenary Oversight Group, a group formed by the California Public Utilities Commission, has gained a lot of support for its multifaceted approach to providing the Peninsula with a water supply. The MPWMD has never formally endorsed the REPOG proposal.

Brower said he's not opposed to the REPOG proposal and said the Sand City desal operation could be an component of the REPOG proposal, which also includes using recycling water from the Marina sewage treatment plant and capturing stormwater runoff.

"It's not out of sync at all," Brower said. Fifth District County Supervisor Dave Potter, who also sits on the MPWMD board, said he's concerned about the cost of the project and the fact it only allows for replacement water.

"When you look at it historically," Potter said, "they were draining the district's coffers to start up that project. The district was paying for all of the preliminary environmental and planning work for the project, and I just don't think that's the district's responsibility to fund that."

Sand City Mayor David Pendergrass, who is also on the board, said he has worries about the price, especially since the district doesn't have the money to pay for it.

His city is building a 300-acre-foot desal plant. That tiny desal operation is going to cost $11 million with $2 million just in preparation costs, including drawing up the environmental impact report.

"Can you imagine how much it will cost for a 6,000- to 8,000-acre-foot plant?" Pendergrass said.

Brower conceded the operation would be expensive.

"The district would have probably have some issues with financing with respect to this project," Brower said. "It would probably end up being in the water rates somewhere, whether the district builds the plant or some other entity does."

Unlike Cal Am, the doesn't have to get approval for a rate increase from the PUC. Instead, the MPWMD could just decide on its own to bill the Peninsula's nearly 40,000 water customers for the project through an increase in the district's user fee tacked onto their monthly water bills.

Water intrusion and state park obstacles

Then there's the fear the 95-10 project could damage Sand City's 300-acre-foot plant by inadvertently intruding into the same brackish water source Sand City has legal rights to. If that happens, Pendergrass said the city would likely sue the district.

"I'm just concerned that they don't intrude on our project and don't destroy it," he said. "We are not going to let that happen."

The exact location of the desal plant hasn't been chosen, but the district has said it could be placed on the west side of Fort Ord, land which is controlled by the California Department of Parks and Recreation.

"I find it hard to believe state parks would want any element of a desal facility on its property," Potter said.

Brower maintained the district's project has the support of the hospitality industry.

But Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce President Moe Ammar said, at first glance, the project doesn't appear to go far enough. It wouldn't, for instance, provide water to allow for a new hotel to go in downtown P.G., which he said is needed.

"I'm not saying we would be opposed to it, but we would like to see something that would allow us to get out of our economic misery," he said.

On April 21, MPWMD staff members are expected to outline the expenses of completing the EIR and an estimated cost for the project. The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. at the MPWMD conference room at 5 Harris Court at Ryan Ranch in Monterey.

Octogenarian business group hosts celebratory lunch

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL Chamber of Commerce will celebrate eight decades of promoting the city and its businesses Thursday, April 17, with a membership luncheon at Rancho Cañada Golf Club.

According to chamber CEO Monta Potter, membership records do not exist from the early years, but a 1967 copy of its "Guide to Carmel" includes more than 30 businesses that remain involved today. Among them are visitor-serving businesses such as inns (including La Playa and the Cypress Inn), galleries (Garcia and Winters) and shops (Robert Talbott and Conway of Asia), and those catering to residents, including Knapp Hardware, Ailing House Pest Control, Nielsen Bros. Market, Wells Fargo Bank, California American Water Co., Ron's Liquors and Tostevin Accountancy. Among the oldest members is The Carmel Pine Cone, which was founded in 1915.

Besides The Pine Cone, Potter named some of the city's longest-lived businesses. The Carmel Art Association, a non-profit cooperative of area artists, was established in 1927, while Carmel Realty Co. was started by Rose C. De Yoe in 1913 and is now owned by Shelly Mitchell Lynch. The Carmel Bach Festival is the only event in the 40-plus club.

The business organization's 80th anniversary also prompted Potter to dig into the group's own history. Unfortunately, the organization hasn't kept much in the way of archives, but early Pine Cone articles mention the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, which changed its name to the Carmel Business Association in 1931. The group embraced the chamber name again in 2003.

"In those two early Pine Cone articles, it says things like, 'the secret chamber of commerce,'" Potter said. "They imply a lot of things, which makes it kind of interesting."

At the luncheon, the long-standing members will be honored and pose for a group photograph, according to Potter, while those who have been part of the chamber for five, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30 and 35 years will also receive recognition.

In addition, past presidents have been invited and will be named. Mel Campbell, who was president in 1966, recently celebrated his 100th birthday "and still drives himself to Rotary," is set to attend. Potter said the group's first female president, who served in 1961-1962, was shop owner Gladys McCloud, mother of Mayor Sue McCloud.

County supervisor Dave Potter will speak, and KSBW TV news anchor Erin Clark will emcee the lunch Potter said all members, along with anyone else who wants to attend, are invited at a cost of $30 per person. The Carmel Chamber Membership Luncheon, which should be "short and sweet," is set for 11:30 a.m. Thursday, April 17, at Rancho Cañada Golf Club, 4860 Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley. For more information, call the chamber at (831) 624-2522.

the radio station began streaming its broadcasts on the Internet.

It turns out that cyberspace has brought together vast legions of tech-savvy Day fans, many of whom operate websites dedicated to the music, film and animal welfare icon. News of the birthday broadcast quickly spread across the internet. "There are hundreds of websites dedicated to Doris," explained Anne Dickinson, whose husband (and KIDD deejay), Ed, helped host the tribute. "They all love Doris. It's quite a phenomenon."

Much to the delight of a couple million listeners, Doris made a surprise guest appearance on the show at 11:30 a.m.

"Doris was on for about 30 minutes," Dickinson recalled. "She cried on the air."

Day evidently enjoyed herself, because she made another surprise radio appearance on Ed Dickinson's show just three days later.

In addition to thanking her listeners for all the flowers she received, Day told the audience she was particularly touched by a quilt she was presented by fans. Assembled by seamstress Barb McFadden of Oklahoma City, Okla., the colorful 8-foot-by-8-foot quilt features 456 stitched dogs, dog bones and cats. After completing the quilt, McFadden sent it to other fans, each of whom inscribed a personal birthday message.

Dickinson just shakes her head when she contemplates the size — and enthusiasm — of Day's enduring fan base.

"Twenty people flew in from around the world to stay at the Cypress Inn [which Day co-owns] on her birthday," she added. "They're like a cult, but a good one."

According to Dickinson, the outpouring of her fans' affection clearly meant a lot to Day. "She just choked up over it," she added. "She's just the sweetest person in the world."

ELECTED

"You really don't want a ballot design flaw deciding an election but when you have an election this close and a ballot error this serious, you really have to take a look at whether that is what happened here," said Koller. "We therefore reserve our right to challenge the results of this election."

But county registrar of voters Linda Tulett said the "vote for two" ballot language has been used in the past without anyone minding. Any challenge of Tuesday's election results would have to be done in court, she added.

Assessing the campaign

After the vote totals were announced, the candidates said they learned from their campaigns, citing Carmelites' passion for their town, willingness to participate in volunteerism and the public process, and desire to voice their concerns.

"One of the things I heard a lot is some people thought we need more communication with citizens," Sharp said. She encouraged residents to attend more meetings, speak their minds, and serve on the city's boards and commissions. "People in this community are so intelligent and well educated. It's unique, and I think we all know that, but it never ceases to amaze me."

Talmage also touched upon the issue of communications. "I think we need to understand when we're talking about an issue and have a number of people chiming in, we are not all coming at it from the same direction," he said. "That's why sometimes we don't hear what another side has to say."

Talmage said the election reaffirmed for him people's desires for attentive listeners and independent thinkers on the council.

"The lesson was loud and clear that that's what people want," he said.

McCloud said she "was certainly happy with the outcome" and reiterated her appreciation for Talmage and Sharp applying for appointment to the council and then pursuing new four-year terms.

She lauded the benefits of "having a team that's been working together," and pointed out that two days after the April 15 swearing in, "we start working on the budget." The victors also put updating the general plan and refurbishing the Forest Theater in time for its centennial in 2010 among their top priorities.

LePage was disappointed with the results, of course, "but this whole experience for me has been a maiden journey, and it led to a deeper connection with this community," he said. "I have no regrets at all, and I feel like I've achieved a lot."

He praised those who volunteered and worked hard on his campaign, and pledged to play a more active role in city hall.

"I've really raised my image and recognizability with the community. You realize that something like this changes you forever — you have to respond to that," he said. "I'm more than happy to step forward and represent people who feel like they need to have a voice down there at the council." LePage said he will also continue to serve on the design review board.

Process holds up count

On Tuesday night, many were surprised by the unusually long time it took to learn who had won. Past tradition has had candidates, supporters and voters gathered at city hall for an election night celebration as results were announced, hands were shaken and cake was cut. With absentee ballots counted prior to the polls' closing, and punch cards tallied by machines in moments, attendees customarily learned the outcome within an hour of the last ballot being dropped.

But on April 8, no one knew who the victors were until 11:45 p.m., and even then, the remaining 84 uncounted ballots could have swayed the results.

"Two years ago, it was done very differently," Tulett said.

This year, Tulett's office waited until after the polls closed to count absentee ballots along with the votes at the polling places, which she said state law requires.

The city wanted the ballots counted in town, Tulett said. Punch cards used in the past have been replaced with paper ballots that require voters to draw a line between two halves of an arrow. The county has machines to count the new ballots, but they are not portable. So the only way to count them within the city limits was by hand.

"If this is the way Carmel wishes to do it in the future, then this is the way it's going to be," Tulett said.

In other words, slow.

But if the city decides to consolidate its election with a general or countywide election — a concept which is routinely discussed and may come up again soon — or have ballots tallied in Salinas, the results could be released more quickly.

Swearing in set

The mayor and two council members will be sworn in at city hall Tuesday, April 15, at 3 p.m. And for the first time, people who want to see the action in city hall live, but not in person, will be able to watch activities unfold via their computers. Granicus, which the council hired to webcast its meetings, will launch that service with the swearing-in ceremony. To watch it and future meetings, visit www.carmel.ci.ca.us.

Eye patches, hooks — and floppy ears — at Carmel Beach fête

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A CONTINGENT of costumed Cavalier King Charles spaniels and their equally festive owners will converge on Carmel Beach Saturday, April 19, for the 7th Annual CKCS Beach Party. Set for 1 to 4 p.m. on the sand at Scenic and 13th, the gathering will present an unusual sight for passersby.

"We have a pirate theme this year, so we hope to see lots of Cavaliers and their friends and families decked out in appropriate attire," wrote organizer Janet McTurk.

Attached was an invitation featuring her dog, Lilly, and another pup, Lexie Harrington, in full pirate regalia and flanking a treasure chest. (The amiable Lilly apparently exhibited the same spirit as she has when festively costumed to help McTurk ring the Salvation Army bell outside the post office each December, when she was always joined by fellow Cavalier Harry Dodds.)

"I remember the year he wore the tuxedo and top hat at the beach party," McTurk said of Harry, who died recently. "He really did walk around with a mayoral attitude."

Though it is free to attend, organizers recommend donations of $15 per adult, $5 per child or $40 per family to benefit the Animal Friends Rescue Project based in Pacific Grove. Everyone who donates will receive one raffle ticket, with more available for purchase, and those funds will also go to the AFRP. "These hardworking people, mostly volunteers, do a great job of helping our four-legged friends, both dogs and cats, who have not led lives as fortunate as our Cavaliers," McTurk said.

Regardless of whether people donate, she continued, "We are happy to have you enjoy an afternoon at the beach with a great gang of two- and four-legged attendees."

Event organizers could use some help with setup that morning, as well as during the party, when volunteers greet guests, hand out name tags, sell raffle tickets, set out food, man the pirate tattoo booth and preside over the piñata — "nothing too onerous, but activities which will ensure everyone has a great time," McTurk said.

To RSVP or obtain more information about the Cavalier King Charles spaniel beach bash, email lillyofcarmel@yahoo.com or call (831) 626-6524.

Back from the brink, art festival seeks volunteers

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE CARMEL City Council voted unanimously last week to back the town's beleaguered art festival, providing more than $30,000 to help cover the event's expenses. All the festival needs now, according to organizer Tammi Tharp, are a few helping hands.

"We need manpower," explained Tharp, president of the festival's board of directors.

Specifically, Tharp is looking for volunteers who can staff the festival's information booth, which will be located in Devendorf Park. People are also needed to help with the setup and breakdown of the event.

Tharp also urged the local business community to get involved with the festival.

"We can always use sponsors and donations," she said. "For as little as $250, a business or an individual can be a supporter of the event."

Just two weeks ago, organizers canceled the 15th annual festival, which was set for May 15-18. Citing financial concerns, they aimed to bring the event back in 2009. But the city council stepped in and offered its support.

"It was unexpected, but we're thrilled about it," Tharp added. "Now we have three to four weeks of hard work."

The four-day festival, which is presented by the Carmel Gallery Alliance, features a plein aire competition, an art exhibit for Carmel youths, a sculpture show in Devendorf Park, a "quick draw" contest and a day of arts-related activities for kids.

Wendy Brodie brings art to food at her cooking classes

By HILARY HANLON

YOU MIGHT think of cooking class as something austere and spiritless, where everyone wears starched, white hats and smocks and speaks in hushed tones as they handle stainless steel knives and shiny, copper pots.

But you can throw away all of these conventional concepts when considering a class with Carmel Highlands resident Wendy Brodie.

"I love to teach people how to beautifully present food in a way that reflects what they care about and like," said Brodie.

Born in San Francisco to two artist parents, Brodie's love of art was encouraged.

"As a child, I used to watch Julia Child with Mom, but I also loved to sew and to work with ceramics," she said. "I liked to get my hands in my art rather than be connected to an instrument removed."

The desire for that kind of in-depth, personal involvement helped her decide on cooking as a career.

"I realized that cooking connected me with people. The art of food became my journey of self discovery and how I learned about myself and my place in relationship with others," she says.

BRODIE

who has more than 30 years experience in the hospitality industry and is a well known resident of the Monterey Peninsula.

Making a dish your own

One of the things that makes her classes fun is her emphasis on personal expression and creativity.

"You can give any 10 chefs the same chocolate chip cookie recipe, and you'll get 10 different versions of it," she chuckled.

Rather than present a menu in one standard way or according to her own idea, Brodie leaves room for what the student likes.

"For example, if someone doesn't like cilantro in a Mexican dish, that's fine. We leave it out," she said.

Her belief in improvisation influences the relaxed tone of the classes.

"If someone wants to cook something they ate in a restaurant or saw somewhere, that is great. I work from a planned menu but I want the guest-students to be free to express themselves. I also like to stretch myself and do new things," she observed.

While deferring to her students' tastes, and encouraging them to discover their own sense of art in food, Brodie has every reason to promote herself and her accomplishments. A graduate of the first class of the California Culinary Academy of San Francisco, she has held executive chef positions at prestigious world-class resorts, has been guest chef at 5-star hotels all over the world, is one of the featured chefs in the Masters of Food & Wine cookbook, and was awarded Chef of the Year of the Monterey Peninsula in 1982.

Furthermore, in 1991, she was selected to attend Madeleine Kamman's graduate program at the School for American Chefs at Beringer Wine Estates and was inducted as an honorary member of the American Academy of Chefs.

Today, her popularity continues to soar, and in addition to keeping busy with ongoing catering work and holding cooking classes, Brodie and her husband produce and host their own weekly television show, "Art of Food," broadcast daily on Comcast cable.

Anyone can cook

Everyone is welcome at Brodie's cooking classes. Individuals, couples or friends who want to learn together, novices with little or no experience in the kitchen, and seasoned cooks who want to expand their culinary horizons.

"It's like a party where we all contribute to the learning.

However, if someone who signs up would really prefer just to sit back and listen, that's OK, too," Brodie said.

"Usually a group of 10 or more gathers for a class, and it's fantastic when there are varying degrees of experience. Even the most advanced cooks in our group can be motivated by some fresh insight by another who is newer to it all," she said.

On the day or night of a class, there's an aura of celebration at Brodie's home. When participants arrive, there is a casual meet and greet time in a spacious living room before a crackling fire where abundant windows provide spectacular views of ocean and forest on Brodie's 4.5-acre lot above the sea. Then, guests are led into the impressive kitchen area and seated around an oval-shaped granite countertop for interactive learning.

"The whole evening is really intended to be an unforgettable experience. We go all out — from the lavishly set table, to the gorgeous flowers, to an array of Monterey County's exceptional beverages throughout ... and there are also some fun treats along the way," Brodie said.

To sign up for a class, call Brodie at (831) 626-9000 and tell her what type of menu you want to try and whether you want to prepare a lunch or a dinner menu. Plan on a three- to four-hour class for lunch menu and a four- to five-hour evening class for dinner. The cost is $125 per person for a lunch menu and $150-plus for a dinner menu, plus wine. The minimum group size is six. You can also learn more at her website, www.wendybrodie.com power of color in our daily lives," explained Joan McCleary, director of the Pacific Grove Art Center. "His work excites the senses."

Silva's work will be featured in one of three new exhibits opening Friday, April 11, at the art center.

A native of Brazil, Silva moved to California a decade ago when he was 22. During a brief stint in Monterey, he began a series of paintings of abstracted jellyfish and other sea creatures that set the tone for his emerging style. He later settled in San Francisco's Castro district, where he began to incorporate found objects into his work, giving it a three-dimensional look. Both fascinating and disturbing, Silva's work is capable of exuding sensuality, humor and horror at the same.

Silva's pieces will share the art center's David Henry Gill

Gallery with his longtime creative partner, Bloum. "The show will just knock you out," McCleary predicted.

Born in France, Bloum is the granddaughter of Niki de Saint Phalle, a noted sculptor, painter and film maker. Like Silva, Bloum works in bold colors and incorporates a variety of mediums into her compositions, which often explore the theme of consumerism.

Also opening at the art center will be an exhibit, "Women and the Things They Carry" by ceramic artist Mark Tanous, and a group show by artists who maintain studios inside the art center. The studio art exhibit will present work created in a wide variety of mediums, including acrylics, collage, fiber, hand-painted silk, mixed media, needlework, oils, photography, printmaking, sculpture and watercolors. Participating artists include Juanita Anderson, Marale Childs, C.K. Copeland, Debra Davalos, Mark Farina, Mary Fletcher, Joann Kiehn, Russell Levin, Connie Pearlstein, Marybeth Rinehart, Dante Rondo, Sherard Russell, Julie Brown Smith, Frank Sunseri and Julie Terflinger.

The art center will host a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. For more information, call (831) 375-2208 or visit www.pgart-center.org.

Rose, who has observed them moving the trucks during pickups to pass, assisting people and flagging drivers by when they're blocking lanes.

Regardless, councilman Ken Talmage wanted more facts behind the numbers Melchor cited.

"I think all the people in Carmel wish their income went up 11.7 percent," he said before asking why the fuel hike was listed separately when it's also part of the CPI calculation.

Melchor said gas costs are only partially reflected in that index and went on to explain his reasons for asking for the full increase.

"The majority of our competitors are looking for profits of 8 percent to 10 percent," he said. "We've been operating in the negative. This would bring us to a profitable margin of about 2 percent."

Mayor Sue McCloud acknowledged some costs had to be passed through to customers, such as the dumping fees, but she found rising expenses within Waste Management alarming.

"What have you done to cut your costs?" she asked, reading through the year-end financial statements for 2005 and 2006, when maintenance and repairs grew from $65,328 to $110,094, collision damage rose from $7,819 to $13,856, rent went from $13,538 to $28,475, and telephone and utilities increased from $6,331 to $12,008.

The figures are "hard to swallow," she said.

The company installed a new telephone system, which explained the increased expense in that category, and has made efforts elsewhere to streamline, according to Melchor, such as setting more efficient routes for its drivers and replacing the worn bottoms of containers for $80 rather than buying new bins for $500.

While she appreciated the council's scrutinizing the numbers, former Mayor Jean Grace described the proposed $2-per-month price increase — as it would appear on her bill — as "the biggest bargain we've gotten."

"I think they do a terrific job," she said. "I've never seen such cheerful people working in your pickup service."

Carmel Residents Association member Monte Miller agreed.

Working with any utility requires certainty the public's money is being spent wisely, according to Rose, who said he would not be comfortable granting an increase to one that was poorly run or doing a mediocre job. But Waste Management seemed worthy.

"A 2 percent profit margin is not unreasonable for a utility," he said.

Rose cautioned Melchor that should the company return next year with a similar request, he could expect greater scrutiny and questions from the council regarding its finances. The council voted 3-2 to approve the rate hike.

Correction from last week

Sandy Claws By Margot Petit Nichols

CAL RONDO, 9, a 100-pound Labrador who had to be carried up that incredibly long flight of stairs at Pacific Grove Art Center by his dad for 6 months, is now able to make it on his own.

Cal was having arthritic trouble with his back legs, and surgery was advised. Kind Dad Dante, hoping to avoid the knife, treated Cal nutritionally with supplements. As Cal showed improvement, Dad gradually reduced the Omega 3, MSM and glucosamine chondroitin dosages until finally, Cal was all better. Now he runs on Carmel Beach almost daily, takes the art center stairs with ease, and backpacks in the High Sierra when the aspens turn yellow. Dad calls him "the comeback kid."

Dad Dante is an artist and a photographer with a studio at the center. Constant companions, Cal and Dante do everything together except surf at Carmel Beach. While Dad surfs, good dog Cal plays the role of a surfer dog, waiting on the beach and keeping a protective eye on Dad in the water.

Dante inherited Cal from a neighbor eight years ago and said Cal is the nicest gift he's ever received. Described as "the most loving and calmest dog on the beach," Dad also praised Cal for his friendly, non-confrontational attitude that borders on Buddhist monk-like: the Dalai Lama of Carmel Beach. "Children love him, and he loves children," Dad said.

Cal and Dante live in Carmel. At home, Cal sleeps on his own futon sofa, and when he accompanies Dad to the art center, he has another futon sofa there for refreshing snoozes.

If you love Sandy Claws, be sure not to miss a single one!

After 15 years, library foundation's donor plaque is filling up

By CHRIS COUNTS

SLOWLY BUT surely, the Carmel Public Library Foundation's Maybeck Plaque is filling up.

Created in 1993 to honor donors who contributed $10,000 to the foundation's general endowment fund, the wood plaque hangs on the wall across from the circulation desk in the Harrison Memorial Library lobby. Designed to accommodate 100 donor names — and commemorate $1 million in gifts — the plaque now has just 10 spaces left.

According to Carol Nordahl, executive director of the foundation, interest from the endowment fund will help pay for the maintenance and expansion of library programs.

"The foundation wants to increase the size of endowments to provide additional funds for expanding youth services, local history programs and senior outreach programs," she explained. "The money will also help us keep up with modern technology. There are always more things a library would like to do."

In addition to honoring the foundation's generous donors, the plaque pays tribute to Bernard Maybeck, an architect who played a prominent role in the design of the library more than 80 years ago. The plaque contains an inscription of a quote by Maybeck, "Here you can reach all that is within you."

While most of the names on the plaque are of individuals, several local businesses are featured on it, including Granite Construction, Il Fornaio and Saks Fifth Avenue (which closed its Carmel Plaza store in January 2005).

The Carmel Public Library Foundation is a nonprofit group that provides funds for Harrison Memorial Library. Each year, the foundation buys more than 4,800 books, videos, periodicals and audio books. The group also purchase books and craft supplies used by more than 1,300 children.

For more information about the foundation, call (831) 624-2811 or visit www.hm-lib.org/pages/syl.

After taking the photo, they noticed someone inside their rental car rummaging through their personal effects. They confronted the man, who had taken an iPod and a Garmin GPS device. The man pushed one of the victims and ran to a waiting 2001 VW Jetta. The Jetta sped away, but not before the victims recorded the license plate. At 1818 hours Monterey County Sheriff's deputies spotted the vehicle traveling on Highway 1 near Rocky Point and conducted a felony traffic stop on it. Three subjects in the vehicle were detained and later interviewed. It was learned that the stolen property was thrown from the vehicle when the suspects saw the deputies. All of the property was recovered. One suspect, a 19-year-old Monterey resident, was arrested on suspicion of robbery and was lodged at the county jail.

Editorial

Why it was our lead

TO UNDERSTAND the significance of the new water purification facility at the Carmel sewage treatment plant, and why we made its completion and testing our lead story last week, you have to think back to the serious drought that hit the Monterey Peninsula in the early 1990s.

It's a drought that happened so long ago, probably half the people reading this editorial were living somewhere else. But the rest of you can surely still recall the three-plus years when it barely rained. The rivers and creeks all dried up, mature trees died as the ground became parched, and dire warnings were intoned every evening on TV news broadcasts that the Monterey Peninsula's water supply was nearly exhausted. A daily chart in the Monterey Herald tracked the level in the Carmel River aquifer as it headed toward zero. And at every meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management district, new ideas were raised to try to extend the fading water supply until the rains would finally return.

One of those ideas was to require hotels to limit their water use by shutting some of their rooms. This was met with alarm because of the consequences for the local economy and jobs. Another idea was to cut off water to the golf courses. This also was greeted with shock, because if world-famous courses such as Pebble Beach and Spyglass turned brown, the impact on the local economy would also be severe.

Naturally, this prospect was most dreaded in the front offices of the Pebble Beach Company, where the loss of revenue from an extended dry spell on the golf courses would severely impact not only its owners, but its creditors, employees and suppliers, and everybody else who worked for or did business with any of them.

Thus, the Pebble Beach Company, in conjunction with the Pebble Beach Community Services District and the Carmel Area Wastewater District, and other privately owned golf courses, including Poppy Hills, Cypress Point and the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, developed a plan to irrigate the golf courses with recycled water from the sewage treatment plant on the south bank of the Carmel River.

The first phase of this project involved treating the sewage to a high degree of purity — but, it turned out, not quite high enough. Beginning in the mid-1990s, the use of drinking water on the golf courses and athletic fields of Del Monte Forest was cut by almost 75 percent. But a large quantity of potable water was still occasionally needed to flush out excess minerals left on the fairways and greens by the treated sewage.

Thus, a decision was made to build a second phase of the water treatment facility. This phase uses reverse-osmosis technology — identical to the type of processing that can desalinate seawater and make it suitable for drinking — to remove virtually everything from the treated sewage except the H2O. When that water starts being used to irrigate the golf courses, the amount of drinking water from Cal Am sprinkled on golf courses in Pebble Beach will be reduced to zero — down from more than a quarter-billion gallons per year just a little more than a decade ago.

Some of this saved water has gone to new development in Del Monte Forest. But most of it is just being left in the Carmel River, which has been a tremendous benefit for the river environment.

And even more importantly, when the next drought comes, which it surely will, the people of the Monterey Peninsula at least won't have to worry about one of the main drivers of the local economy drying up along with the river.

Neighbors not consulted

Dear Editor,
Regarding the article on the Golden Bough remodel (April 4), I wanted to let you know the many references to their satisfying the neighbors had me puzzled. We live across the street, and have never been contacted.

We were not all to happy when the movie theater closed, but once we lost that convenience, we were glad to see the land was for sale as four residential parcels, as is appropriate for this neighborhood.

When the use was then changed to live theater, again we were never consulted. The noise and traffic from this are marginally bearable. Now the ownership wants to have buses from around the area dropping patrons there? This will cause more traffic issues, noise and pollution.

Ideally, this building would be torn down and the land used as residential. If not that, at least allow us peace in our neighborhood.

Larry and Chloe Rubenstein, Carmel

Monning for Assembly

Dear Editor,
At a time when many government leaders seem to have forgotten what real leadership is, voters on the Central Coast have the opportunity to elect a representative for the 27th California Assembly District with a record of proven leadership.

Bill Monning, Democratic contender for Assemblyman John Laird's seat, has worked as an attorney for the United Farm Workers, executive director for International Physicians for Prevention of Nuclear War, and co-founder of Global Majority, Inc., a nonprofit advocating and teaching non-violent conflict resolution. He understands the political process as it should be practiced and thrives on the opportunity to form coalitions for the establishment of economic justice, healthcare and election reform, equality in education, and a sustainable environment.

Sacramento needs Monning's expertise and spirit. He's a political realist who nonetheless manages to keep his optimism and enthusiasm for the political process. I believe he has the ability to make a real difference.

Big Sur Grange hosts town hall meeting

FIRE SAFETY and a new recycling center will be among the topics of conversation when the Big Sur Grange Hall hosts a town hall meeting Thursday, April 17.

Presented by Big Sur Powerdown, the event will feature presentations by Frank Zabrowski of the U.S. Forest Service on fire safety and Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade board member Bob Sayer on applying for grants.

Big Sur residents will also have an opportunity to weigh in on the absence of a recycling center.

"We used to have a recycling center, but it was on state parks property and they shut it down," explained Linda Parker of Big Sur Powerdown. "Now, people are driving all the way to town to do their recycling ... or they're not recycling at all."

Parker said the event will be Big Sur's "first-ever town hall meeting."

"It's an experiment," she added. "We're inviting residents, business owners and the various government agencies and nonprofit organizations. Our ultimate goal is to bring people together and find out who is doing what, and to try and find ways to support them."

A potluck starts at 6 p.m. and will be followed by the meeting at 7 p.m. The Grange Hall is located just off Highway 1, about 25 miles south of Carmel and a quarter-mile south of the Ripplewood Resort. For more information, call (831) 667-2710.

MAN SOUGHT FOR PREYING ON TEEN GIRL

MONTEREY COUNTY Sheriff's deputies are searching for a 28-year-old man suspected of sexually assaulting a 14-year-old girl at her home somewhere on the Monterey Peninsula. To protect the girl's privacy, law enforcement officials would not disclose where she lives.

"We believe the suspect is now in Mexico," Sgt. Joe Moses said last week.

According to Moses, Jesus Valenzuela knew the teenager, who "has diminished mental capacity," and sexually assaulted her more than once.

"There are two incidents we know of with this particular victim," he said. "We don't know if there are other victims."

Deputies learned of the allegations after the girl was reported absent from school.

"When she returned, they were questioning her why she was truant, and that's when this all came out," he said.

A warrant has been issued for Valenzuela's arrest. Anyone with information is asked to call the sheriff's office at (831) 647-7702.

the Sunset Center in Carmel, folk singer Arlo Guthrie is the eldest son of legendary folksinger Woody Guthrie and Marjorie Mazia Guthrie, a professional dancer with the Martha Graham Company. The younger Guthrie grew up surrounded by dancers and musicians including Pete Seeger, Leadbelly, Ramblin' Jack Elliott and Brownie McGhee, all of whom were significant influences on his musical career. His career exploded in 1967 with the release of "Alice's Restaurant," whose title song premiered at the Newport Folk Festival and helped usher in a new commitment among the '60s generation to social consciousness and activism. During the last four decades, Guthrie has toured relentlessly throughout North America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia, winning a wide following. In addition to his accomplishments as a musician, playing the piano, six and 12-string guitar, harmonica and a dozen other instruments, he is a natural-born storyteller, with tales and anecdotes figuring prominently in his performances. The concert starts at 8 p.m. Call (831) 620-2048 for tickets.

Fast on the heels of last week's Next Generation Festival, the Monterey Jazz Festival has announced its lineup for this year's 51st edition, scheduled to take place the weekend of Sept. 19-21. Headlining this year's festival, pianist Herbie Hancock is the winner of the 2008 Album of the Year Grammy for "River: The Joni Letters." Other acts scheduled to perform at the prestigious festival include Artist-In-Residence Christine McBride; vocalists Nancy Wilson, Cassandra Wilson, Kurt Elling and 2008 Grammy-nominee for Best New Artist, Ledisi; saxophonists Maceo Parker, Wayne Shorter, Joshua Redman, Tom Scott and up-and-coming Israeli Anat Cohen; plus some new treats, including young guitar phenom Derek Trucks and the return of Tuck and Patti. Tim Allen presents

Al Smith's
"Carmel Legends"

MAX is a certifiable nut. With his cockatoo mane of white hair, his shorts and chest bared in any weather, and his energetic face, he belies his 80 years. He came 40-some years ago from Munich, taught our mountain troops how to ski; yodels at the slightest provocation. At first he was a gardener, still is, clipping flowers from various private gardens and presenting them with cavalier flourishes to wealthy widows on Carmel Point. Once he married one of them and still carries on a daily caretaker relationship with her, despite the fact they've been divorced 20 year. MAX conducts impromptu tours for walking visitors, draping an arm affectionately around the ladies' shoulders, bantering the while with their somewhat startled companions. He owns partial shares of several downtown restaurants, carries his stock certificates in paper bags in the back of his Volkswagen. He sweeps the streets, distributes garbage equally from can to can in his neighborhood, believes that everyone is entitled to share in assets like tools, firewood and flowers. His base is Carmel Point, where he is loved by some and hated by others. Look for him anywhere in Carmel.
