Dog on mend after beach rescue by police, fire, bystanders

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A COLLISION with a submerged rock at Carmel Beach Saturday morning severely injured the chest of a greyhound who was romping in the surf.

But thanks to the help of Carmel firefighters and a local veterinarian, the dog survived and is recovering after emergency surgery, her owners were happy to report this week.

"None of us thought she was going to make it," said Jan Avent, who adopted Petey four years ago from a rescue group that finds homes for former racing dogs. "She's looking great."

Avent and her husband, Dave Rossetti, live in the San Francisco Bay Area but also have a home in town and were walking their dog on the beach the morning of May 10. As greyhounds are wont to do, Petey was running ahead of them at the north end, and the tide was out.

"We were enjoying the beach like everyone else was Saturday morning, and Petey was just exploring the tide pools and having a great time around the rocks," Avent recalled. "She came around one of the outcroppings running and she misjudged. She went through water and collided with a rock that was below the surface, and it ripped open her chest."

Local real estate market picking up, realtors say

■ Bargains bring out buyers; upper end also strong

By KELLY NIX

AFTER NEARLY three years of declining values, sluggish sales and overall pessimism, the Monterey Peninsula real estate market has made a significant upturn in the past few months, according to realtors.

The president of the Monterey County Association of Realtors this week reported sales are stronger than they have been for past two years, while other realtors say they're breaking sales records.

"There is definitely the sense things have picked up," said Kim DiBenedetto, a realtor and president elect of MCAR. "I think people are really getting the message it's a good time to buy."

In the past four weeks, between 25 and 30 homes were sold on the Peninsula, according to county records. Since August 2006, most weeks have had only 15 to 20 home sales.

In a May letter to employees, Keller Williams Carmel area manager Janet Reilly said April marked the realty firm's best month ever. And Coldwell Banker Del Monte's Tim Allen said he's breaking personal records for sales in some segments of the market.

Out of the woodwork

A Wall Street Journal article last week predicted April 2008 will mark the bottom of the U.S. housing market, meaning home prices have tapered off and the trend won't get any worse than when the bust began in mid-2005.

The article said homes on average are back to being as affordable as during the 1990s. Potential buyers who had been priced out of the market are realizing they can afford to get back in, it said.

DiBenedetto said that same trend is occurring locally.

"I've got buyers calling me out of the woodwork who have been holding off the last couple of years," she said. "All of a sudden they are ready to go."

Whether the upturn will have longevity is anybody's guess.

River parents pitch in to refill Highland Elementary coffers

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AN IMPROMPTU pass-the-hat effort during a Carmel River School fundraiser helped repair some of the pain and loss suffered by students at Highland Elementary School in Seaside after their clerk forged checks to steal $10,000 that had taken the kids five years to raise.

"It's been a tough year in terms of not having those funds and not being able to provide the activities that we would," principal Donna Kiernan told The Pine Cone this week. "Our children raised those funds with penny drives and a walk-a-thon, and all that money was intended to support them."

River School parent Todd Hornik, a Monterey County deputy district attorney and candidate for Superior Court judge, heard the story firsthand. Two days prior to River School's annual Spring Fling fundraising dinner and auction at Mission Ranch, he watched the sentencing of 23-year-old Laura Javier Barroso, whom he prosecuted. She had pleaded

Ted Leidig's suicide leaves family, friends distraught

By MARY BROWNFIELD

RESTAURATEUR AND longtime Monterey Peninsula resident Ted Leidig, a member of one of Carmel's oldest families, committed suicide in his family's remote Carmel Valley cabin late Wednesday morning, according to the Monterey County Sheriff's Office. Leidig was alone in the cabin when he died of a gunshot wound to the head from a .38-caliber revolver. He was 63.

"He had called two friends of his, and they were both concerned," said Sgt. Mike Richards of the coroner's office. "One of them made the initial call to 911 that prompted the deputies to respond, and another showed up shortly after and actually heard the gunshot. The deputies probably arrived two minutes after that."

They summoned Carmel Valley Fire Department and an ambulance, first for help getting through the gate to the property and then to stand by in case medical care was needed.

"No evidence of criminal activity was found at the scene," he reported. An autopsy is planned for May 16.

Born June 28, 1944, and raised in Carmel, Leidig attended Sunset School and Carmel High.

Poet, publisher and modern-day troubadour

By CHRIS COUNTS

A REMARKABLE creative odyssey ended last week when Ric Masten died after a nine-year battle with prostate cancer.

"He went out tapping his fingers to the music," reported his daughter, Jerrie Hanson. "He died peacefully and gracefully."

Surrounded by his family, Masten passed away May 9 at his home in Palo Colorado Canyon. He was 78.

Masten was born and raised in Carmel, where his father, Richard T. Masten,

Rick Masten in 2000 after being named Carmel's "People's Poet."

Did you know...

Limousines, altars, and banquet halls may be common in today's weddings. While purposes were the same, the trappings were quite different 160 years ago, when California was in the process of becoming the 31st state. A dispatch from Monterey to a Philadelphia newspaper in 1846 explained that horses were as important in weddings here as they were in everyday life. The groom rode to the wedding on the best horse he could find, using a saddle with bright embroidery and a bridle covered by silver. The bride rode on a horse with a leather skirt draped over its rump, a skirt covered with bright embroidery, and pieces of metal that jingled as she rode to her wedding. After the ceremony, the couple rode away on the same horse to the home of the bride's parents for a three-day reception filled with music, dancing, and drinking. Next week: Counting Trees in Carmel.

City takes in more $$ but spends less

■ Sunset Center gets favorable report, too

By MARY BROWNFIELD

DESPITE ONGOING reports of a slumping national economy, revenues from property and hotel taxes were higher than expected for the first nine months of Carmel's fiscal year, administrative services director Joyce Giuffre told the city council May 6. And each of the "Big Three" — property, hotel and sales taxes — generated more money than during the same period last year.

Those taxes make up a large share of the city's $13,483,672 2007/2008 budget. Transient occupancy tax was estimated at $2,911,800 for the nine months ending March 31 but was actually $3,005,075, largely due to increased room rates and more frequent collecting by the city, according to Giuffre.

Property taxes, predicted to be $2,202,219 during the first three quarters, were actually $2,207,597, though sales taxes, anticipated at $1,674,722, came in $11,660 below target.

"Other revenue sources are ahead of budget," she said, including business license tax, which generated $36,653 more than the estimated $601,699, and traffic safety money, which was $62,772 above the anticipated $182,500. That money mostly comes from tickets.

"The contractor we work with that collects on the citation revenues — they are very aggressive; they are very consistent," she explained. "They have really been surpassing what we thought they would do for this year."

Regarding spending, Giuffre reported the actual amount at $9,721,682 for the first nine months — $185,871 less than the budgeted $9,907,553.

Most of it related to salaries and wages, which were $156,224 under budget at $4,750,677, due to job vacancies. The budget also showed $39,951 in savings in the employment insurance program, which had been estimated at $519,955, a $28,472 drop in property/liability insurance to $258,920, and $14,349 less than the budgeted $262,700 for destination marketing.

Those and other savings were partially offset by overspending of $68,091 for the city's share of the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance, which had been budgeted at $293,736 for the first nine months of the fiscal year but required more due to an auditing adjustment by CRFA. Other overages included $17,551 for workers' compensation insurance, which totaled $415,931, and a $1,946 increase in utilities over the budgeted $145,423.

Finally, she reported the money designated for capital projects was also in good shape, with actual expenses coming in $272,460 under the budgeted $1,124,485 for two dozen equipment purchases and construction jobs.

"During the final quarter, we do expect a large share of our revenues to come in," Giuffre concluded. "If we hit our targets and keep expenditures below budget, we should end the year in a strong financial position."

Sunset Center looking good

Sunset Center's new executive director, Peter Lesnik, provided a third-quarter budget update to the city council May 6 and also reported favorable numbers.

Between January and March, the center generated $369,233 in rent, performance revenues, fees and other revenues, compared with the estimated $309,098.

City taxpayers provided an additional $187,500 in the form of an enabling grant that will total $750,000 at year end.

Meanwhile, expenses for the same three-month period were $4,518 less than the budgeted $506,826. Though salaries and benefits were $3,089 over budget and performance expenses finished $9,374 in the red, ticketing services were $14,935 under budget, and utilities, maintenance and insurance were $2,045 in the black for the first three months.

Year-to-date numbers also finished well, with $909,526 in operating income, compared to the budgeted $851,011, and $1,389,040 in expenses, rather than the anticipated $1,426,736. The center's total estimated operating budget for the 2007/2008 fiscal year is $1,911,502.

Lesnik reported increased ticket sales and additional performances helped boost revenues, though "nothing is a perfect success until you sell all your tickets," he said. "And that's what we were shooting for for next year."

He also announced the nonprofit Sunset Cultural Center, Inc., will host its annual community meeting next month.

"We're going to make it more of a party this time," he said. "Instead of holding it in Carpenter Hall, it will be inside the theater. And we hope to do tours and have refreshments."

The meeting will be held in the late afternoon Wednesday, June 18, though the exact time is yet to be announced.

Lesnik said, "We're excited about next year and all the changes taking place at the center."

Schwarzenegger drops plan to close Big Sur's Limekiln park

A PLAN to close 48 state parks and beaches — including Big Sur's Limekiln State Park — was dropped this week from a new budget proposal released by Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger.

While Schwarzenegger's revised budget was good news for anyone who uses California's state parks and beaches, Traci Verardo-Torres, legislative and policy director for the California State Parks Foundation, said the parks are still in danger.

"As I've said before, the state park system is seriously underfunded and its long-term health is precarious," Verardo-Torres said.

Also removed from Schwarzenegger's hit list was San Simeon State Park, which features 115 campsites and directly serves one of the state park system's most popular attractions, Hearst Castle. In addition to dropping the plan to close the parks, Schwarzenegger removed from his budget a proposal to reduce lifeguard staffing at 16 state beaches.

Schwarzenegger's revised $144 billion budget — which seeks to reduce the state's $15 billion deficit — aims to raise money by selling lottery bonds and cutting billions in state programs.

Cavalier party raises $3,100 for AFRP

THE SEVENTH Annual Cavalier King Charles Beach Party last month netted $3,100 in donations for the nonprofit Animal Friends Rescue Project, which finds homes for stray and abandoned pets. The affair — a themed celebration for the spaniels and their owners — drew dozens of the dogs and their fans to Carmel Beach April 19.

"Many throngs of Cavies in pirate garb and their people came out to support AFRP!"

reported Alexandra McCabe, executive director of AFRP. "Such a booty collected for our homeless cats and dogs!"

McCabe thanked organizer Janet McTurk and her Cavalier, Lilly, "who put great effort, resources and time into creating this wonderful event every year," and everyone who attended and supported the nonprofit, which has an adoption center on Lighthouse Avenue in Pacific Grove.

Foundation encourages 'Giving from the Heart'

THE CARMEL Foundation, which provides food, transportation, classes, housing and other services to more than 4,000 seniors, receives no tax dollars and heavily relies on donations. To solicit support for specific needs, the foundation's ongoing Giving from the Heart campaign is seeking donations for several projects.

Topping the wish list is an emergency generator to provide heat, power — and therefore food — when winter storms take out trees and power lines. January's big storm left some parts of the Peninsula in the dark for almost a week, interfered with the foundation's meal preparation and deliveries, and brought crowds as people sought safety, warmth, dryness and the company of others.

The incident highlighted the group's need for the emergency generator, which could also benefit residents who are not foundation members by providing warmth and shelter during emergencies, according to Juliette Calandra Ferguson, the foundation's development manager.

Of the $60,000 needed for the generator, the foundation has raised $23,000, Ferguson reported.

The Giving from the Heart campaign details other areas of need, including:

■ $160,000 annually to provide transportation to medical appointments and stores for those who can no longer drive themselves and have no nearby family members to help. Public transportation on the Peninsula is not comprehensive enough to deliver most people to their doctors' offices, and few can afford a cab ride to every appointment, according to the foundation. Reliable transportation also allows seniors to remain independent and in their own homes, and can help ease the pain and frustration of no longer being able to safely drive themselves.

■ $50,000 annually to cover the expenses of making and delivering full meals to the disabled and ill, as well as their full-time caregivers. For a very low cost, members receive an entrée, vegetable, soup and dessert.

■ $40,000 to install an elevator in the Norton Court apartment building. The existing elevator at the affordable-housing complex is 19 years old and outside, making it susceptible to rust and costly to repair.

In her letter to potential donors, Carmel Foundation President/CEO Jill Sheffield wrote, "Giving from the Heart is an act of generosity that connects your heart to the hearts of others. When you give from your heart to the mission and work of The Carmel Foundation, your commitment provides vital opportunities for local seniors."

Donations can be sent to The Carmel Foundation, P.O. Box 1050, Carmel, CA 93921. For more information, call (831) 624-1588 or visit www.carmelfoundation.org.

Big Sur benefit puts the fun into firefighting

WHILE THE words "firefighting" and "fun" are not usually mentioned in the same sentence, firefighters will be doing both when the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade presents its 2nd annual Benefit and Barbecue at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park, Saturday, May 17, from noon to 4 p.m.

Highlighting the event — which raises money for the non-profit brigade — will be a series of events that test the firefighting skills of participants. Teams of four or five firefighters will compete in the "Make and Break," "Bucket Brigade" and "Water Polo" contests.

The "Make and Break" requires each team to couple together three sections of 50-foot fire hose, attach the hose to a fire engine, and use its high pressure stream of water to knock a cone off a barrel. In the "Bucket Brigade," teams of firefighters will see who can fill a barrel in the quickest time. The "Water Polo" event presents an interesting take on the classic "Tug-of-War" game. Two teams of firefighters — each clutching a fire hose — will face each other. Between the two will be a marker attached to a cable above their heads. The teams will try to use their hoses to push the marker back toward the opposing team. A fun — and certainly soaking wet — time is guaranteed for all participants.

While no prizes will be awarded to the winners, bragging rights are considered the next best thing. "We just give a big, 'Yoo-hoo!'" assistant fire chief Karstens said.

The event will present Big Sur locals with their first glimpse of two new Ford 550 fire engines. The brigade recently purchased the two mid-sized engines, along with a larger International fire engine due to arrive this summer, with money raised by the community. The three engines cost about $750,000.

The two 550s will be stationed at Esalen Institute and Willow Springs. Each holds about 300 gallons of water. Karstens said their modest size is best suited for maneuvering the narrow roads of Big Sur's South Coast.

A California Highway Patrol helicopter and Smokey the Bear are scheduled to make appearances. The event will also include a tri-tip and chicken barbecue. Holly Fassett's chocolate cake — a familiar treat to patrons of the Nepenthe Restaurant — will be served for dessert. Tickets are $12 for adults and $6 for kids. For more about the fire brigade, visit www.bigsurfire.org.

CARPETING & DECOR

ARE YOU GETTING THE RIGHT FIBER?

More than 90 percent of wall-to-wall carpets are made of synthetic fibers. Nylon, the most popular choice, accounts for about two-thirds of the carpet fiber purchased in the U.S., with good reason. Nylon is the most durable of the synthetics, can withstand the weight of furniture without becoming permanently crushed, and has a pleasing feel. Polyester also has a luxurious hand and holds dye well, and it is more stain-, fade-, and water-resistant than nylon. It is also generally less expensive than nylon. Then, there is olefin (or polypropylene), which is the least expensive synthetic-fiber option. It is wear-resistant and not susceptible to staining or fading, although it crushes more easily than nylon.

When re-doing or decorating a room, many, if not most, people will begin with a new color paint for the wall, and then pick out furniture and other room accessories. Lastly, it seems, they want or need floor coverings to blend into the room. Here at CARPET & FLOORS, INC., we can bring selected rug samples right into your home so you can see how the color, fiber, and design will actually look in the room. No more guessing! And when it comes to installations, we work with some of the best contractors on the Peninsula to make sure the work is done right and on time.

HINT: The main alternative to synthetic carpet fibers is wool, which is durable, pleasing to the touch, stain-resistant, and available in rich colors.

Dan Jones is the President of Carpets & Floors, Inc., located at 471 Lighthouse Ave. (between Drake and McClellan) here in Monterey. Ph: 372-2300.

STAYING SHARP

If you are willing to commit to long term beta-carotene supplementation, there is reason to believe that you may keep your brain sharp as you get older. This recommendation is made on the basis of a recent study involving nearly 5,000 men. Researchers found that those who took 50-milligram supplements of beta-carotene every other day for an average of 18 years scored significantly better in cognitive testing (especially on verbal memory) than those getting a placebo. It is expected that women would enjoy a similar benefit from taking beta-carotene supplements. Researchers believe that beta-carotene may help delay the effects of aging on cognitive abilities by countering oxidative damage in the brain.

Decreases in cognitive ability -- thinking, learning and memory skills -- strongly predict dementia. If you or a loved one has memory loss that is getting worse and needs specialized care, please consider VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES. Our mission and promise to our clients is simple—to provide the best care possible, as many hours as we are needed. Out of respect for our clients and their families, we respond to the sometimes complex physical and emotional issues faced by those we serve with open hearts and open minds.

PS. Beta-carotene is a member of the carotenoids, which are the highly pigmented, fat-soluble compounds that give fruits and vegetables their vivid red, orange, and yellow coloring.

CHS senior to race in Laguna's Festival of Speed

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SINCE HE was 5, Ryan Phinny's favorite classroom has been the race track, and this Saturday will mark a major step forward in the Carmel High School senior's goal of racing cars for a living.

"It's a career starter for him if he can do well," said his mom, Carmel Valley resident Gina Phinny, who owns Baja Cantina along with her husband, Pat.

Phinny received a last-minute offer from Pennsylvania-based Matt Connolly Motorsports to drive a Pontiac GTO-R in the Rumbum.com 250 Grand American Rolex Sports Car Series race at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca May 17, as well as in the next event at Lime Rock Park in Lakeville, Conn.

The invitation came at the recommendation of his long-time driving coach, Joey Hand, a professional racer who will be piloting a Daytona Prototype for the Alex Job Racing team during Saturday's race.

"Joey made a phone call, and they were very happy to get someone with Ryan's abilities," Gina Phinny said.

An MCM press release referred to Phinny as "Hand's protégé" and stated, "Ryan comes from a very strong recommendation by Joey, and that is carrying a lot of weight with team owner Matt Connolly."

With a sponsorship from his parents' restaurant, Phinny secured the two-race deal and hopes to do well enough — and drum up enough sponsor cash — to race the Pontiac for the rest of the season, all of which will be televised. In support of his efforts, Pacific Tweed, where Phinny works part-time, agreed to provide his threads.

"We were going to wait for the school year to finish and then do some summer racing," Gina Phinny said. "Then this came up. We can't pass up this opportunity."

If she sounds like part of the team, that's because she is. In fact, the entire Phinny family has motorsports in the blood. She grew up a "track rat," spending weekends watching her uncle race. Her first date with her to-be husband, Pat Phinny, occurred at the Long Beach Grand Prix, where he was competing, in 1986.

"He finished in the top 10, I think," she said.

By the time their sons went to grade school, they were racing. Ryan got behind the wheel of a kart at age 5 and took on Hand as his coach at 8. Little brother Brendan started racing karts under Hand's instruction at the tender age of 4 and now, at 14, has already won a national championship.

"Either you feel good about being in a car and going fast, or you don't," commented their dad, a longtime competitor and collector who drives in historic races and enters his vehicles in vintage automobile shows and concours.

Though Phinny did fairly well in 2006, he was forced to focus on school instead of racing in 2007 after crashing an off-road motorcycle while practicing for the Baja 500.

"He decided to break the left side of his body," his mom said. When another rider wrecked in front of him during a warmup, he tried to avoid the fallen bike and was launched into the air, breaking his collarbone, wrist and two ribs when he crashed back to earth.

Now fully healed — and ready to graduate from high school next month — Phinny is eager to get back on the track and compete at a whole new level.

"He's all well and good now, and ready to go," Pat Phinny said. On his website, www.ryanphinnymotorsports.com, the young racer states, "My dream is to make it all of the way to Formula 1, and I know that my parents will support me in what-

Ryan Phinny started racing karts when he was 5 and hopes his first time out in a sports car at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca this weekend will be his entree to the world of high-level racing.

ever I do, and that's awesome."

Phinny will test his skills and the new car during the Rumbum.com 250 Grand American Rolex Sports Car Series race Saturday afternoon that will also feature Monterey native Thomas Merrill piloting a Pontiac GXP for PR1 Motorsports.

Other races and events scheduled for the jam-packed May 16-18 Festival of Speed at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca include the open-wheel Formula BMW Americas and historic IMSA sports cars (1974-1982). The Cooper Tires Atlantic Championships Powered by Mazda will run Sunday afternoon and feature another homegrown talent, Jonathan Bomarito of Monterey, racing for Mathiasen Motorsports.

Off the track, the Festival of Speed weekend will kick off with fan parties on Alvarado Street in Monterey at the Mucky Duck and the HippOdrome Friday night, followed by a Kruse collector car auction, free ice cream social — with drivers dishing up the desserts — live music, Land Rover off-road driving demonstrations, show and shine, and other attractions at the track throughout the weekend. For a complete schedule, visit www.laguna-seca.com or call (800) 327-SECA.

Tickets run $70 for three days, $60 for Saturday and Sunday, $30 for Friday only, $45 for Saturday only and $45 for Sunday only, and kids 12 and under will be admitted free with an adult. In honor of Armed Forces Day, Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca is offering complimentary admission to military personnel with valid identification, while Monterey County residents can take advantage of a two-for-one discount.

Tickets are available at the gates, as well as the Seaside Shell on Canyon Del Rey and Candles & Clay on Cannery Row in Monterey.

GAY P.G. OFFICER FILES FEDERAL DISCRIMINATION LAWSUIT

By KELLY NIX

A GAY Pacific Grove police officer — who claims he was subjected to jokes and ridicule and was turned down for promotions because of his lifestyle — has filed a lawsuit in federal court.

In the April 3 lawsuit filed against the police department, former police chief Scott Miller and current chief Darius Engles, Sgt. Darrin Smolinski claims for about 10 years he was the target of harassment and discrimination, and that little was done by supervisors to stop it.

“Smolinski was told that there is disapproval of his lifestyle within the department” and colleagues “have made remarks relating to Smolinski’s anatomy in relation to his sexual orientation,” according to his suit.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in San Jose, parallels a claim Smolinski filed with the city in August 2007, in which he said he endured a hostile work environment. The officer was hired by the department in 1997.

The 12-page suit accuses the department of retaliation, negligence, intentional infliction of emotional distress, discrimination and other charges.

Smolinski, who is seeking an unspecified amount of money, claims the police department’s email system was used to “circulate information which utilized derogatory terms and statements relating to homosexual and bisexual individuals.”

One joke, entitled, “Am I Gay? Time for your annual ‘Am I Gay’ self examination,” includes seven off-color, disparaging questions. The sender included a disclaimer that the message was intended as a joke.

“Now, before you accuse me of being homophobic,” the sender wrote, “I received this message from a very good friend of mine, that happens to be lesbian.”

The suit doesn’t indicate whether Smolinski actually received the email.

The officer contends there was a “prevailing anti-gay culture” that existed in the department and that defendants’ conduct was “willful, malicious, outrageous and beyond the bounds of decency such that no reasonable person could be expected to endure it.”

Smolinski portrays an overall atmosphere of harassment, but lists few specific examples in which he was targeted.

Smolinski alleges problems began when Miller, now a P.G. city councilman, was police chief and has continued with Engles, who took over the department in fall 2006.

The sergeant also alleges a pattern of denied promotions even though he received “multiple commendations” and top scores during promotional interviews.

Smolinski also claims he was retaliated against and suffered depression and anxiety because of his role in a federal court case involving the city and bisexual coworker R h o n d a Ramey, a former parking officer.

Smolinski contends Miller didn’t promote him as retaliation for Smolinski’s support of Ramey, who filed a complaint in 1999 against Miller for not disciplining a supervisor who had “harassed her for being bisexual and having an open marriage.”

In June 2001, six months after Miller fired Ramey, she filed a federal harassment and retaliation lawsuit against Miller. Smolinski helped Ramey prepare for trial and testified in court on her behalf against Miller. A jury later ruled in favor of Miller in the case.

Allegations of harassment, but few specific examples

WHAT CAN YOU EXPECT FROM A FINANCIAL ADVISOR

It’s not always easy to navigate the investment world. That’s why you may want to work with a financial advisor.

Ideally, you will want someone who asks questions such as these:

- What are your goals? You’ll need an advisor who shows considerable interest in your short- and long-term goals.
- Do you plan to send your children to college? If so, how much do you hope to contribute to their education? And will you have aging parents that may require some type of assistance from you? By eliciting this type of information, an advisor can help you create a “family-friendly” investment plan.
- What are your attitudes toward investment risk? A conscientious financial advisor will determine if you are a conservative, moderate or aggressive investor.

As you work toward your financial objectives, you’ll have many questions. Just make sure your financial professional does, too.

SPRING Into Action!

Conserve water with free water conservation devices!

Conserving water is important during any time of year, but taking special care to be efficient during springtime can make more water available for the dry months ahead. There are a host of free water-saving devices available and rebates for making an investment in reducing your water use.

“SPRING INTO ACTION” WITH FREE RESOURCES AND MONEY-SAVING REBATES:

Many free water-saving devices and helpful tools are available from California American Water and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, including:

- Free “Water Wise Gardening in Monterey County” interactive CD.
- Free low-flow shower heads, hose nozzles, and other water saving devices.
- Rebates when you install cistern systems, rain sensors, and smart irrigation controllers.
- Rebates for replacing old toilets, washing machines, and inefficient dishwashers with high-efficiency models.

Remember to wait before you water outdoors. Almost 50 percent of residential water use is outdoors, and keeping your sprinklers off in spring saves you money and helps protect our environment.

To learn more about conserving water and how you can make a difference, call (888) 237-1333 or (831) 658-5601, or visit one of the following resources: www.montereywaterfacts.com • www.waterawareness.org • www.mpwmd.dst.ca.us

Well rounded First Tee board adds cop, exec and legislator

A RETIRED executive, a former police commander and a California Assemblywoman joined the board of directors of The First Tee of Monterey County, the nonprofit announced May 2.

The First Tee seeks to help teach children life skills through the game of golf, and the Monterey County chapter offers programs to a total 1,500 kids at Laguna Seca Golf Ranch on Highway 68, Twin Creeks Golf Course in Salinas and a facility in Castroville.

Don Beall, former chairman and CEO of Rockwell, retired in 1998 after a 30-year career but continues to serve on the boards of Rockwell Collins and CT Realty.

Assemblywoman Anna M. Caballero, who was Salinas mayor prior to her election to the state Legislature, "is a strong advocate for public safety, affordable housing, quality health care and education," according to First Tee spokesperson Cathy Scherzer. And former Salinas P.D. Cmdr. Trevor Iida is the city's community safety director, "helping to develop and implement prevention and intervention programs."

Beall, Caballero and Iida joined a highly esteemed board that includes Clint Eastwood, Bob Kavner, Doug Mackenzie, JB McIntosh, Carmen Ponce, Geoff Couch (chairman), Steve John (vice chairman) and president/CEO Ollie Nutt.

The First Tee of Monterey County was founded four years ago by the Monterey Peninsula Foundation, which presents the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am each winter and the Wal-Mart First Tee Open at Pebble Beach every Labor Day weekend.

guilty and on April 30 was sentenced to 180 days in jail and three years' probation, and ordered to repay the $10,000.

"During sentencing, the principal and a fifth grade teacher spoke about what that money meant," Hornik said. "Sometimes they would buy jackets in the winter for kids who didn't have them. And they used it for science camp for kids."

To make matters worse, Bank of America charged the school more than $1,000 in fees, according to Hornik.

After the sentencing, another D.A., Chris Harter, encouraged Hornik to issue a press release with the thought people might be inclined to help. Though she was ordered to repay the school, Barroso may never be able to fulfill that obligation, according to Hornik. At the very least, it will take a long time.

Spring Fling fortune

Hornik arrived at the Spring Fling thinking about the case, and he asked PTA President Dina Eastwood if he could share the story with those assembled.

Eastwood summarized her reactions to the tale: "How can someone be so low as to rob children and parents who had to sacrifice to make that much money through the years? And, of course, 'We can help fix it,' meaning River School, because the parent/student body is amazing!"

She was unsure of an impromptu solicitation lacking the benefits of planning ahead but agreed and introduced Hornik, who briefly described the sad tale.

Before he could even find a can to pass for collections, a friend upended a basket of nachos and sent it around the room.

"Within five or 10 minutes, he came with a basket so full of cash he had to hold it down with his hand," Hornik recounted.

As music blared and people mingled, the two men sat on the floor in the corner and counted it.

"There were several $100 bills," he said, and the total came to $1,253 he kept stuffed in a coffee cup for the remainder of the evening.

"The story moved everyone, and the outcome was far beyond my expectations," Eastwood recalled. "I thought we would get a couple hundred bucks, max. When Todd counted more than $1,200, people were in tears. It made our efforts that night to raise money for our kids seem even more fulfilling."

The bounty was the result of fortuitous timing, Hornik said. If the case had been adjudicated a week later, he wouldn't have had the opportunity to share the story. And had it happened a few weeks earlier, it might not have been on his mind.

Grateful kids

On May 5, he took the cup of cash to Highland Elementary and explained the donations were from sympathetic parents, from one PTA to another, and were not the result of any organized effort by the school or Carmel Unified School District.

"The teachers and I were in tears," Kiernan said. "Even though we live close to each other, you never think people are going to go so far out of their way to support a school."

In contrast to River School, which is part of a district funded mostly through property taxes and enjoys the benefits of a hardworking PTA that raises about $60,000 per year for its students, Highland Elementary serves a far more financially challenged population.

"Our children come from poverty," Kiernan said, and many of their parents hold two or three jobs to make ends meet, leaving little extra to donate to the school.

"This was just huge for them," she said. In response, the students wrote to River School.

"When they wrote the letters, it showed their heart as well," Kiernan said.

"It was overwhelming for us, and sincerely appreciated," she said, adding that the money will pay for science camp in June and the end-of-year day of fun, games and small prizes that has become a tradition at the school.

Eastwood was touched by the notes from the students and Kiernan.

"Sometimes you never hear back when a donation is made," she said. "Theirs was a quick and heartfelt response ... dozens and dozens of the most kind, thankful, thoughtful thank-you notes."

Anyone else who wants to contribute to Highland Elementary can call (831) 583-2024 or mail a check to 1650 Sonoma Ave., Seaside, CA 93955. Kiernan also said anyone with questions should call and ask to speak with her directly.

owned a newspaper called the Carmel Cymbal. His father died unexpectedly when he was just 12, and the duty of raising Masten fell upon his mother, Hildreth, who seemed to have little appreciation for her son's budding artistic talent.

"My mother wanted me to be an optometrist," recalled Masten in an interview with The Pine Cone two years ago.

Masten, though, was clearly not suited for a formal education. In fact, he flunked out of five colleges. "I got D's and F's in everything except art," he recounted. Undiagnosed dyslexia was a major factor in his bad grades.

"It's a good thing they didn't have spell check back then, because I would have been locked up in life as an optometrist," he said.

But what would have been an obstacle to success for most people ended up freeing Masten for his true calling.

Back home in Carmel after a two-year stint attending art school in Paris, he began writing and producing musical comedies for the Forest Theater. Encouraged by the results, he turned his pen to a new phenomenon, rock 'n' roll. While none of his 92 original compositions lit up the Billboard Charts ("Rockabilly Blues," "Teen-Age Creature," and "Baby, Baby, Baby, You're a Thinkin' Man's Girl," are just a few of the titles), they proved to be a stepping stone to what would eventually become his vocation, poetry.

Meanwhile, Masten met an aspiring actress, Billie Barbara Bolton. The couple married in 1952, and by 1960 — when Masten received an inheritance and purchased a property in Palo Colorado Canyon — they had four young children.

In 1963, Masten moved his family down the coast, and soon he was writing poetry in earnest. In 1968, he started traveling the country to promote the first of 18 books of poetry he would eventually publish.

In 1973, Masten was ordained as a Unitarian minister, reportedly the first ever without a degree from a college or seminary. The Unitarians sponsored several of Masten's tours and produced 13 LP records of his poetry and songs.

'Poet Laureate of Prostate Cancer'

Like more than 30,000 men in the United States each year, Masten lost his lengthy battle with prostate cancer. But what made his struggle unique is the way he used poetry — and even humor — to confront his approaching death and educate the public about cancer.

"This is a culture where everyone knows they're going to die, but too few believe it, because if they did, they wouldn't treat each other the way they do," he explained.

Masten said he experienced a rebirth in 1999 when he was informed that he was dying of cancer. "That's when I started living," Masten recently observed. "I began to understand my own poems. I look back on my life and I realize that I spent most of it getting ready for my life now."

Masten's declining health only increased his urgency to reach a broader audience. He continued to tour the country, offering an inspiring mix of poetry and storytelling. Poking fun at cancer and death, he encouraged audiences to love, laugh and dance. The National Prostrate Coalition took notice and named him "Poet Laureate of Prostate Cancer."

"I could read you hundreds of emails dad received from people who said he helped them," his daughter Jerrie Hanson said.

It wasn't just audiences that benefited from Masten's bout with cancer. "Cancer changed his life for the better," she suggested.

The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, meanwhile, gave him the title, "Troubadour and People's Poet of Carmel." Perhaps Masten's greatest honor, though, came in May 2007, when California State University Monterey Bay awarded him an Honorary Doctoral Degree of Letters and featured him as a keynote speaker at its commencement ceremony. Receiving a college degree was just about the last thing Masten expected at this stage in his life, and he broke into a big grin when he contemplated his mother's reaction to such an honor.

"She's dancing in heaven right now," he said at the time.

It's a safe bet that Masten — who frequently encouraged audiences to "Let life be a dance" — is doing the same.

Masten is survived by his wife, Billie Barbara Masten; his daughters, Jerrie Hanson, April Masten and Ellen Masten; his son, Stuart Masten; his brother Warren Masten; his sister, Olga Masten; his half brothers, Lee and Don Hare; and his step-brother, James Hare.

Symphony closes season with a bang; cellist offers C.V. recital

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE MONTEREY Symphony will end its final concert of the 2007-2008 season on a high note, performing Gustav Mahler's dramatic Symphony No. 1 in D Major.

"It's one of the great pieces in all of music," offered Joe Truskot, executive director of the symphony.

Sunset Center hosts performances by the symphony Sunday and Monday, May 18-19.

The symphony will open the concert with Robert Wayne Padgett's "Fanfare for the Eagles." Padgett, a Pacific Grove resident and a graduate of Stevenson School, was the winner of the 2008 Max Bragado-Darman Fanfare Competition, and this weekend marks the world premiere of the piece.

Next comes Claude Debussy's three-movement impressionistic essay, "Nocturnes," which features the female voices of the Monterey Symphony Chorus. Following an intermission, Mahler's monumental symphony wraps up the performance.

Pre-concert lectures by musicologist Dr. Jean Widaman, which are free of charge to all ticket holders, will begin one hour prior to the start of each performance in Room 105 at Sunset Center.

And the golf club at Quail Lodge will host a luncheon for Padgett Friday, May 16, at 11:30 a.m. The cost of attending the event is $45.

Sunday's matinee starts at 3 p.m., while Monday's concert begins at 8 p.m. Tickets range from $35 to $60. For more information, call (831) 624-8511 or visit www.monterey-symphony.org.

Hidden Valley hosts cellist

One of America's most gifted cellists, Stephen Geber, will be at Hidden Valley Music Seminars Monday, May 19, at 8 p.m.

"Stephen has distinguished himself as one of the great teachers and performers of the cello," explained Peter Meckel, director of Hidden Valley.

The principal cellist of the Cleveland Orchestra for 35 years, Geber has appeared with many American and European orchestras and as a chamber player with the Cleveland Orchestra String Quartet, the Emerson String Quartet, the American String Quartet and the Cavani String Quartet. Geber will be joined by pianist Anita Pontremoli, who heads the department of collaborative piano studies at the Cleveland Institute of Music. She has performed with artists such as Lynn Harrell, Arnold Steinhardt, Aaron Rosand and Dale Clevenger.

Cellist Stephen Geber

The duo will perform works by Ravel, Debussy, Dvorak, Schumann, Mendelssohn, and Weber.

Tickets are $20. Hidden Valley is located at Carmel Valley and Ford roads. For more information, call (831) 659-3115 or visit www.hiddenvalleymusic.org.

The Monterey Symphony will premiere a new work by Robert Wayne Padgett.

Cafe unveils seascapes and landscapes

THE WILD Goose Bakery Cafe in Carmel Valley hosts a reception Friday, May 16 for painter Böbe Kirsch.

Born and raised in Hungary, Kirsch presents an exhibit of seascapes and landscapes that capture the scenic vistas of Monterey County.

Kirsch started painting seascapes after visiting the beaches of Tel-Aviv in Israel. After moving to Munich, Germany, she attended an art school, the Kunst Academy, where she experimented with a variety of techniques. Focusing on using oils, she began to develop her own style. In 1995, she presented her first art show in Munich.

In 1999, Kirsch moved to the United States. She now lives in Carmel Valley with her husband and two daughters.

The reception, which will feature live music, begins at 7 p.m. The Wild Goose is located at 18 E. Carmel Valley Rd.

The Kingston Trio and the Great American Songbook

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

The Golden State Theatre in Monterey has put together an impressive slate of shows for the month of May, including performances by the Kingston Trio Friday, May 6, plus a triple header of vintage rhythm and blues artists on Saturday. The Kingston Trio emerged from the San Francisco North Beach club scene in 1957 and helped revolutionize American folk music. With the release of their first single, "Tom Dooley," (a catchy rendition of the traditional folk song), the Kingston Trio launched a career that has persevered for more than five decades. At one point in the early 1960s, The Kingston Trio had four albums among the Top 10 selling albums, a record unmatched for nearly 40 years. The original trio, Dave Guard, Bob Shane and Nick Reynolds, has long since passed into history, and the group is today composed of George Grove, Bill Zorn and Rick Dougherty. Zorn and Dougherty are former members of the Limelights. George Grove has performed with the Kingston Trio since 1976. The concert starts at 8 p.m.

On Saturday night at the downtown Monterey venue, local promoter Conte Productions presents a tripleheader featuring The Coasters, The Drifters and Sonny Turner, former lead singer of The Platters. In 1959, Turner replaced Tony Williams as lead singer of the Platters, one of the most successful vocal groups of all time.

Other shows scheduled at the Golden State Theatre include Emmy Lou Harris on Friday, May 23; Los Lobos, May 29; Los Lonely Boys, June 14; the Oak Ridge Boys, June 29; and a Classic Christmas with Wynonna Judd on Thursday, Dec. 11. For tickets and more information call (831) 372-3800.

Authentic German food and very large steins at Santa Lucia Cafe

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

IF FARM-RAISED wild boar sounds like an anomaly and farm-raised venison seems incongruous, don't tell Chef Uwe (pronounced Uva) Grobecker of Monterey's Santa Lucia Café. He specializes in both.

The boar he gets from East Texas, and the venison from Colorado and New Zealand.

"There are no strong flavors with these wild animals because, for the most part, they're grain fed," Grobecker said. "The meat has a very lean texture and the flavor is not gamey."

He serves entrées of venison during the dinner hour at his restaurant. Slow-braised venison osso bucco is an unusual offering; and roasted venison chops are a customer favorite. "I'm not a chef, but I like to cook and I enjoy doing venison," he said. As for the wild boar, it appears on the menu as "brats" — grilled wild boar sausages served with red cabbage, sauerkraut and roasted or mashed potatoes.

Grobecker enjoyed these game meats growing up in Germany, and when he came here and opened his restaurant, he thought,

"Why can't I do it here?" He found what he was looking for in a Bay Area supplier and has been serving venison and wild boar ever since.

The Santa Lucia Café is known for its German and Italian kitchen. Grobecker's mother is Italian-born and married his German father. He was born and raised in Northern Germany in the seaport town of Bremen. His German heritage wins out on the menu: "It's 80 percent German and 20 percent Italian," he said. And one can readily see that by glancing over the menu. Italian specialties are predominately pastas and thin-crust pizzas baked in a brick oven, and one meat specialty — Veal Parmesan.

The German side of the menu is composed of five pork schnitzels (jaeger, Wiener, blue cheese, zigeuner and Holsteiner) and Hungarian goulash, Berlin-style liver, Bavarian and Nuernberger brats and sauerbraten. And, of course, the venison and wild boar dishes.

"The weather here in Monterey is perfect for German fare," he said.

For 25 years Grobecker was in the agricultural products trade, constantly traveling all over the world from a home base in Germany, staying in luxury hotels with five-star restaurants. While enjoying the exquisite cuisine in these plush eating establishments, one thought kept coming back to him: "I could do this better and cheaper."

The thought stayed with him, until 11 years ago he bought the Santa Lucia, which was then a Mediterranean-style deli, and began turning it in the direction of a German-Italian restaurant.

That same year he enrolled in the Culinary Academy in Salinas — the then-satellite of the San Francisco Culinary Academy — where he took a six-month course in California cuisine to learn the basics of cooking, which he added to the home cooking he learned from his family in Germany.

"I enjoy making a nice presentation, but the most important thing to me is the taste and the right portions. We don't serve just a little food on fancy plates. Our portions are grand portions," he said.

He does a great deal of the cooking himself but has trained his staff in authentic German food preparation. He has two crews, one for breakfast and one for lunch. When he's not cooking, he oversees his cooks, "to assure the authenticity remains intact."

His manager, Brian Boguta, works the morning shift, and has done so for six years. Grobecker takes care of the evening crowd.

Blooms, bubbles, bon bons, full moon feasts and lots of wine

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH SPRING in full swing, Peninsula restaurants are pitching an array of offerings designed to delight all the senses. A Carmel Valley institution presents its winemaker's dinner and other seasonal temptations, while a Cannery Row eatery capitalizes on full moons and a downtown hotel benefits Monterey's Historic Garden League by pouring bubbly alongside sweets and flowers.

■ Graffs meet Bolton

The Covey at Quail Lodge has introduced the Sample, Savor, Celebrate cocktail hour from 5 to 6 p.m., and a three-course Sunset Menu from 6 to 7 p.m., both available Tuesday through Saturday. Sample, Savor, Celebrate features a handful of small plates — advertised as “tapas style” — a range of creative specialty cocktails ($7 to $12) and wines by the glass priced from $5 (for the house red and white, which change frequently) to $12, all to be consumed on the sun-drenched, idyllic pond-side deck or in the lounge. The 2006 Benziger Sauvignon Blanc ($9) was a perfect choice in the soft evening Carmel Valley warmth this week.

Among the small plates are large Tempura “Bama” Shrimp, coated in batter and golden fried, served with a spicy habaero aioli and shaved fennel in a creamy dressing that nicely curbs the heat ($7); delicate Grilled Asparagus Salad with spring ramp vinaigrette, barrel-aged feta, beautiful thinly sliced beets and vibrant frisee ($5);

Beer, anyone?

To go with the German cuisine, the bar (which was put in a year ago) serves nine German beers on tap. “And I like every one of them,” Grobecker said with his signature humor. “We serve them in 1-pint to 2-liter glasses.” German steins decorate the back bar. “Every year when I go back to Germany to visit my mother, I pack a few new steins to bring back with me. Customers are generous with their stein contributions, too.” As all restaurateurs will attest, attention must be paid constantly to many details. Grobecker is no exception. “What keeps me going after 12 years is my humor,” he said. “I love to joke with my clients.”

Grobecker came to the United States 20 years ago while traveling on business. He met his wife in Phoenix, Ariz., originally from Chicago, “she still doesn’t approve of my thin-crust, Northern Italian pizzas,” he laughed. They moved to the Monterey Peninsula from Dallas 12 years ago, and have three children: Stefan, 17; Kristian, 15; and daughter Reeve, 12. One can dine at the Santa Lucia either indoors or out. Inside, the restaurant seats 40, plus nine at the bar, and outside 20 people can be accommodated under sun umbrellas or heat lamps. Shrubbery, in terra cotta pots, separates the outdoor cafe from passersby in typical European fashion. Grobecker said his ample breakfast menu offers American and German fare: German apple or Black Forest buttermilk pancakes, “Stammer Max”— an old world favorite of German rye bread topped with diced Italian smoked ham and two fried eggs, roasted potatoes and a pickle on the side — or the well liked Italian-style Santa Lucia breakfast, and silver dollar and Mickey Mouse pancakes for children age 8 and under. “As for lunch, every weekday we offer a different special,” he said. Although there are German artifacts and flags decorating his restaurant, Grobecker loves his adopted country and will soon become a U.S. citizen so that he can vote. “I want to make sure we go in the right direction after the election,” he said. Santa Lucia Café is located at 484 Washington St., Monterey, and is open seven days a week. Breakfast and lunch are served from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., and dinner from 5 to 9 p.m. For information or reservations, call (831) 333-1111.

and Steak Frites — marinated flank steak, delicate herbed matchstick fries, an unusual “romanesco” sauce and tossed greens, all a bit over salted ($12). The short menu is rounded out with Mussels & Saffron ($10) and Charcuterie ($7).

Taking advantage of the Carmel Valley sunshine and the lush, luxurious setting, early evening Covey dinners can remain on the deck for of the $42-per-person Sunset Menu conceived by Chef de Cuisine Matt Bolton. It changes weekly to take advantage of the freshest local ingredients and includes a first course, one of three entrees and dessert.

The restaurant’s extensive, award-winning wine list features a decent selection of wines by the glass and myriad options for by-the-bottle ordering — many reasonably priced.

Speaking of wine, the Covey will host Graff Family Vineyards for a Winemaker’s Celebration Dinner Thursday, May 29. The evening will be the second in a series “designed to be a veritable education on food and wine,” and restaurant manager Michael Marcy said more are in the works, including a visit by Pessagno in June.

Bolton will create a four-course feast to pair perfectly with vintages from Graff Family Vineyards, located in the Chalone AVA at the foot of the Pinnacles and cultivated by Chalone Wine Group cofounders Phil Woodward and Richard Graff. The Chalone label is now owned by a conglomerate, and Woodward and Graff run a foundation that awards scholarships to deserving students in food, wine and hospitality. They also produce wines from two vineyards, and Woodward will talk about them while Chef Bolton shares his knowledge of organic produce and sustainable foods.

A 6 p.m. reception will feature Graff’s Viognier and appetizers. Dinner, set to begin at 7 p.m., will include Pinot Blanc, Mourvedre and Grenache, and 2004 A Frame Cabernet Sauvignon, with July Muscat for dessert.

The cost will run $125 per person, including tax and gratuity, and guests can also book a room at Quail Lodge for a special rate of $199 per night plus fees. Quail Lodge is locat-

■ Moon over Monterey

When it comes to watching the moon rise, Schooners Bistro on the Bay, located inside the Monterey Plaza Hotel & Spa on Cannery Row, may be one of the best venues. Capitalizing on its sweeping bay views, the restaurant will offer al fresco dinners to coincide with the eve, night of, and night following each full moon through the end of the year.

Dubbed "Luna Sul Mare" — "Moon on the Sea" in Italian — the evenings will feature award-winning Valley of the Moon wines from Glen Ellen and a special menu of "full-moon-inspired cocktails," to accompany Schooners' regular menu of fresh seafood, pastas, salads, soups and sandwiches.

Not even fog will stifle the monthly gatherings, which will be held even if la luna is not visible through the marine layer. Cold won't interfere, either, as Schooners will provide blankets for guests, and heat lamps will ensure a cozy patio.

Luna Sul Mare will be offered May 19-21, June 17-19, July 19-21, Aug. 15-17, Sept. 14-16, Oct. 13-15, Nov. 12-14 and Dec. 11-13.

■ Blooms, Bubbles and Bon Bons

"Flower fanatics" — and anyone else who appreciates lovely floral arrangements, tasty sweets and fine sparkling wine — are invited to attend Hotel Pacific's Blooms, Bubbles and Bon Bons set for 3 to 6 p.m. Sunday, June 8.

The afternoon event, a fundraiser for the Monterey Historic Garden League, will begin with sweets and bubbly in the hotel's landscaped courtyard.

Then celebrated San Francisco floral designer Jun Pinon will present a demonstration that promises to be as funny as it is informative. Each arrangement Pinon creates will be auctioned off to benefit the historic garden league.

Hotel Pacific is located at 300 Pacific St. in Monterey, and the cost to attend is $60 per person. For reservations or more information, call (831) 658-2361 or email mearlyle@innsofmonterey.com.

'Bus wrap' inventor is now master of the giclee print

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

WHEN LUBO Michaylov was growing up in Bulgaria, he had no idea he'd end up a successful Silicon Valley businessman whose training as a chemist, combined with a marketing sense he inherited from his father, would enable him to turn buses around the world into moving billboards.

"My expertise was in polymers and applying inks and toners to different kinds of materials," Michaylov said.

With a Ph.D. in Chemistry from the University of Freiberg in Germany, Michaylov could have spent his life teaching or doing obscure research. Instead, he took a position as manager of product development at Crown Zellerbach in San Leandro. And several years later, he started his own company, SuperGraphics, which specialized in large-scale graphics. A stroke of genius led him to invent the bus wrap — large panels that cover the entire exterior of a bus with an advertisement. It's something no one had seen until 1992. Now the buses are everywhere.

"One of our first clients was Monterey-Salinas Transit," Michaylov said from his elegant home in the Sleepy Hollow neighborhood of Carmel Valley. "We produced the 'Wave' image which everybody has seen."

One of his innovations was a special perforated panel which looks like a picture from the outside of the bus, but which still allows the passengers to see outside.

"When you perforate the plastic, depending on the size and density, the eye sees it as transparent," he said.

In 1996 he sold the company and thought he would retire. But he couldn't keep away from the printing business, so he invested in a large-format printer and now specializes in custom art reproductions — which he creates in a studio at his home.

"Most of my clients are individual artists," Michaylov said. "They can come to me and ask for just one print, and later they can ask me for more. There's no minimum order."

And he can print on a wide variety of materials — "art paper, any type of canvas, 15 types of fabric, and plastic or vinyl," he said.

The method, known as giclee printing, relies on very accurate color reproduction to satisfy the demands of artists.

"I was always in charge of quality control, so that is not a problem for me," Michaylov said.

One of his local clients is artist Lisa Bryan, who uses Michaylov's studio to reproduce images from her "Sketches of Carmel" series of books and prints.

"Lubo is great because he can give me just what I want, and the colors are very accurate," she said.

Michaylov and his wife, Gerda, chose Sleepy Hollow because of its sunny climate. But they also appreciate being close to nature ... even when mountain lions come to call. Last winter, Gerda's photo of a lion in their yard was featured on the front page of The Pine Cone.

"We were amazed to see him so close," she said.

For more details about Michaylov's giclee printing business, Worldwide Images, go to www.wimages.com. Lisa Bryan's website is www.sketchesofcarmel.com.

P.B. home's asking price: $35M

By KELLY NIX

ALTHOUGH THE hefty price tag would disqualify most buyers, one Pebble Beach homeowner is hoping someone will fork over $35 million to purchase his stunning oceanfront home.

The nearly 11,000-square-foot house, being sold by San Diego Padres owner John Moores, is on the 18th Fairway of the Pebble Beach Golf Links and is one of the priciest homes ever listed in Monterey County.

"This is the nicest house ever offered in Pebble Beach," according to Coldwell Banker realtor Rick Kennifer.

While the home won't likely be a quick sale, Moores may have the market on his side.

That's because local realtors are reporting that high-end homes in Pebble Beach — particularly those listed for more than $5 million — are selling well.

No expense spared

One of only five homes that grace the 18th Fairway, the house, designed by Texas architect Robert E. Griffin, took six years to build when it was completed in 2000.

It is framed with steel construction and includes a series of curved bays with repeating arches and walls of massive windows facing east and west.

The four-bedroom home features six different types of wood that are particularly evident in the library and the living room.

"The mill work is extraordinary," said Shirley Crist, Kennifer's realty partner. "Not only for the detailing of the craftsmanship, but the choice of woods. What it adds to this contemporary design is an extraordinary complement."

The home, which features plenty of natural light because of the vast amount of glass, has living spaces "that are grand enough to entertain hundreds yet intimate enough for a family gathering," according to Crist.

"The architect was very clever in designing it in that each room is an intimate, enjoyable space," she said. "And the rooms are connected by these these circulation galleries that have beautiful views throughout."

The home, on one level except for the movie theater, allows its occupants to feel the intimacy of a smaller home.

"Some houses you walk from room to room, and you don't have any sense where people are," she said. "That doesn't happen here."

A long gallery connects the living room, dining room, kitchen and family room. Just outside the gallery is an 1,100-square-foot patio with fireplace, radiant heating and gas barbecue.

The exterior of the home has fossil limestone, extruded bronze clad windows and doors, shade-producing arbors of teakwood trimmed in copper, and a standing copper roof.

An ocean-facing gallery opens to a 1,500-square-foot patio designed with a limestone bench that overlooks the 18th Fairway.

A large kitchen that would make most chefs envious has two large islands of granite with top-notch appliances, including three Sub-Zero refrigerators and three dishwashers.

When it's cold, the new owners will have the choice of no fewer than six fireplaces in the house.

According to Crist, the Moores and his wife are selling the house because their primary residence is in San Diego and they don't visit the home enough to enjoy it.

Is the price right?

"When we spoke with the owner about the value of the home," Crist said, "it was very important to us to feel that the property value was justified."

The house, they say, is worth $35 million because of its unmatched quality, attention to detail and supreme location. "It's that kind of quality that I believe people on a world-class level will understand," Crist said.

The home is being advertised on the international real estate market, hoping overseas buyers will show interest. In appraising the home, the realtors said they researched home prices in California and nationwide.

"We are in a market that isn't the best," Kennifer said "But we think that the quality of construction and location is unlike anything available in Pebble Beach."

Step Out, Step Up, stuff bags

MORE THAN 100 women gathered at Carmel Plaza last Thursday night for Step Out, Step Up — “an evening of networking, philanthropy, makeovers and more” — during which they filled “wellness bags” with donated products for delivery to local women with cancer, according to Plaza marketing manager Ryan Williams.

The effort was part of a nationwide campaign organized by Macerich, which owns the Plaza, and attendees of the two-hour events at 65 shopping centers across the country stuffed a collective 30,000 bags.

The women who visited Carmel Plaza sipped Tommy Bahama Mojitos, received makeovers from Cos Bar and L’Occitane, and participated in other activities sponsored by participating Plaza retailers while doing their part to help cancer patients.

“The premise was to bring women together for a networking event while giving back,” according to Williams, and the 300 wellness bags they stuffed will be distributed through Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula’s Comprehensive Cancer Center.

The gathering also served to introduce the Plaza’s new partnership with the Step Up Women’s Network, “a national nonprofit membership organization dedicated to strengthening community resources for women and girls.”

REAL ESTATE

Realtor John Saar said he is seeing a little upsurge in activity, but that could be due to the time of year.

"I always see April and May as a stronger time," said Saar, a realtor since 1988.

But even though property values haven't increased, Saar said there is more buyer interest. "There is activity and that is a wonderful thing," Saar said. "There are people with money and people interested in this market."

Mortgage lenders seeing spike

Paul Lecce, mortgage broker with Blue Adobe Mortgage in Carmel, said more potential buyers are approaching him for loans. "It was a rough winter," Lecce said. "Then all of a sudden in the last couple of months, things really started to pick up."

Lecce said many of his customers are first-time home buyers who want to purchase a home because they believe home prices will not fall much farther. Many are using buyer incentives offered by the Federal Housing Administration, he said.

"They actually have an opportunity to get into the market," Lecce said. "The prices here haven't been this low since the early '90s."

However, many of the loans offered to buyers are much more conservative and strict than the sub-prime loans of the past. Banks are requiring buyers to have higher credit scores and more cash in the bank.

"It's harder to qualify, but what's good about that is it will prevent more fallout," Lecce said. "That's a good thing for the whole real estate market in general."

First-time home buyers Karen and Eric Sonne looked at about 10 homes in Seaside ranging from $300,000 to $350,000. "I think the prices have dropped as far as they will go," Karen Sonne said.

The reasonable prices for bank-owned homes on the Peninsula in many cases are creating stiff competition. "There were five offers on each home we called on," she said. "A lot of people are hoping to get these homes as investment properties and rent them out because they know the real estate market is turning."

The Sonnes were able to get 0 percent financing through an online lender for a small two-bedroom, one-and-a-half bathroom house in Seaside.

Different markets, different trends

Although sales are picking up, there are segments of the market that are still cool. While multimillion-dollar homes and those at the low end are selling well, sales of mid-priced homes are still soft.

"You have the [lower-priced home] market that is active and the high-end market that is active," DiBenedetto said. "It's the stuff in between that is stuck."

Mike Canning, who specializes in the sales of high-end properties in Carmel and Pebble Beach, said this year's first quarter marked the best year he's had since 1999 and 2000. Included in his sales was the Butterfly House in Carmel, which closed escrow April 22 for $9.3 million.

But even in a high-end market such as Pebble Beach, there are multiple submarkets. For instance, oceanfront homes are selling extremely well, while the more average homes in that area are not. "It's dangerous to generalize, because the Monterey Peninsula is not one market," Canning said.

Like Canning, Saar said he's having little problem selling unique, properties listed at $5 million or more.

"I see the high end being the most durable part of the market," Saar said. "If you have the right property, then you are in the game."

At the other end of the spectrum, realtor Michael Kirch, who specializes in selling foreclosures in the Seaside area, said he has 10 houses in escrow, a healthy number.

While he's seen an upswing in the sale of homes in the $200,000 to $400,000 range, homes in the $500,000 to $700,000 range are not selling as quickly.

While many experts agree the market is improving, some believe it will be a while before sales take off.

Canning said he sees little change happening for the remainder of 2008.

"I think the bottom of each of the markets will suffer all the way into late 09," he said. "I also think the top of the markets will continue to enjoy demand."

Carmel resident Pat Sippel was a lifelong friend. Her mother and Leidig's mother, Ruth, were best friends and the families owned cabins near each other off Robinson Canyon Road at the White Rock Gun Club.

"I have wonderful memories of it," she said. "It's sad to think that's where he took his life, but it was a favorite place of his, too."

Seven years his senior, Sippel remembered teaching Leidig bookkeeping at CHS.

"I always told him, 'Your success in all you've done was because I did a good job,'" she said.

A prolific businessman, Leidig was involved in several Carmel restaurants and a partner in Leidig/Draper Properties, which owns many prominent commercial properties in town, including the building occupied by the Sharper Image and Hanson Gallery.

"What a great loss to all of us who have known him," commented Jennifer Walker, executive director of the Hanson Gallery. "He was so kind and generous."

Although Leidig gained notoriety during the 2005 criminal trial in which his former wife, Ilona Leidig, was acquitted after shooting him in the chest in their Carmel Valley home, and testimony revealed many troubling aspects of his life, including his suffering from bipolar disorder, Sippel said Leidig was generally an upbeat, caring and giving person.

"What happened with Ilona — that wasn't who Ted was," she said. "It was a terrible time for him to go through."

Sippel and Leidig remained close over the years, and they had even planned to have lunch next week.

He was a dedicated supporter of her annual Alzheimer's

Association fundraiser.

"His six restaurants donated all the food for the last 10 years, and he came every year," she said.

Leidig was also involved in the Carmel Heritage Society and the Carmel Chamber of Commerce.

"Ted was one of our most generous and supportive members," chamber CEO Monta Potter said. "He always supported all of our chamber events and activities, and I know he did this for other organizations."

Sippel said she fielded many calls Wednesday from friends and acquaintances who had heard about his death.

"This is such a loss, because he meant a lot to a lot of people, and he was a very genuine person," Sippel said.

He is survived by his adult daughter, Dana; Ilona Leidig's son, Lee; 3-year-old daughter, Abbie; toddler twin sons, Tristan and Teddy; his wife, Laurie; older brother, Bob; and stepbrother, Kim Roberts.

"This is something we're all going to think about for a long time, but I really will miss him," Sippel said. "He was a bright spot in my life."

Judge stops scheduled aerial spraying of moth

REFUTING THE state's argument that getting rid of the invasive light brown apple moth qualifies as an emergency, a Monterey County judge this week temporarily stopped the state's plans in June to conduct aerial spraying on the Monterey Peninsula to control the insect.

Superior Court Judge Robert O'Farrell in his ruling May 12 said the evidence provided by the state didn't constitute an emergency and that an environmental analysis needed to be complete before spraying resumes.

The California Department of Food & Agriculture declared an emergency, allowing the agency to spray the Peninsula in September and October with a moth-confusing pheromone to disrupt mating habits.

The emergency status allowed the state to be exempt from a requirement by the California Environmental Quality Act that an environmental impact report be complete before spraying could begin.

After last fall's aerial spraying, hundreds of people complained of illnesses they attributed to the spraying.

Helping Our Peninsula's Environment was the local group that challenged the state.

The state contends the moth could do hundreds of millions of dollars in damage to crops if not controlled.

O'Farrell's decision mirrors an April 24 ruling in which a Santa Cruz judge halted spraying in that county, citing insufficient evidence by the state to prove there is an emergency that justifies spraying.

After that, Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger suspended spraying until August, when specific toxicology tests are expected to be finished.

YOUR AUTO COLUMN

Presented by Kevin & Sue Anne Donohoe
IS YOUR VEHICLE OUT OF LINE?

After dodging last season's potholes, you may notice that your vehicle drifts or pulls to one side on straight stretches of road. Other telltale signs that your vehicle needs wheel alignment include looseness in the steering wheel, a steering wheel that is off-center (when the front wheels are straight), the sensation that the car is wandering over the road, and hard steering. Abnormal tire wear may be another clue that your wheels are out of line. If so, there will be more wear on one side of the tire than the other, or there may be cupping over the face of the tire. To ensure that you get better tire wear and a better ride overall, get a four-wheel alignment, good handling, performance, and fuel efficiency rely on proper maintenance of your wheel alignment settings. We understand the importance of your steering, and how much it matters to your safety. You can trust us with any repairs for your car. Please don't wait until it needs to be towed to us. Let us perform preventative maintenance on a regular basis before that happens.

P.S. Vibration felt in the steering wheel, floor, or seat of the car may be due to unbalanced wheel/tire assemblies.

Kevin and Sue Anne are the owners of Pacific Motor Service located at 550 E. Franklin St. here in Monterey. Phone: 375-9571

Editorial

Why Prop 98 exists

ONE OF the propositions on the June ballot, Prop 98, is getting a lot of attention. Billed by its proponents as the only way to end government misuse of eminent domain and usurpation of private property, and attacked by opponents as pro-landlord and unfair to renters, Prop 98 is most accurately viewed as an inevitable result of decades of neglect of one of the most important protections of individual liberty in our Constitution: The right not to have your property taken away by the government without just compensation.

At first, this right was understood only to protect property owners from having their land or possessions seized outright. But as governmental regulations have increased (indeed, federal, state and local laws are now so vast nobody could read them all, much less understand them), the courts have begun to understand that over-regulation of private property could amount to the same thing as seizure.

Thus, when the California Coastal Commission started requiring land owners to grant the public access to their property in exchange for building permits, the U.S. Supreme Court put a stop to it. Similarly, the coastal council in South Carolina told a property owner he couldn't build at all because his home would supposedly contribute to beach erosion. Before the Supreme Court intervened, he was told all he could do with his land would be to have an occasional picnic.

Thanks to the High Court, the law is now clear: The government has to let you use your property for a purpose that is economically beneficial to you.

But after that minimum threshold has been cleared, bureaucrats at city hall, in Sacramento or in Washington retain the authority to do pretty much anything their little hearts desire with the private property in their sphere of influence.

Prop 98 takes special aim at land taken by eminent domain and then turned over to a different private owner. But rent control and inclusionary housing are also good examples of government abuse. Everybody agrees low-income people should have access to affordable housing. But how to achieve it? The only fair way would be for the burden of creating affordable housing to be shared among the citizenry. But it is much easier to just stick it to landlords and property owners. So when government officials in San Francisco or Santa Monica see a need for more affordable apartments, instead of subsidizing rents or loosening zoning to allow more apartments to be built, they simply require landlords to keep rents below market levels. And when the Monterey County Board of Supervisors decides the county would benefit from the construction of less-expensive housing, instead of making it possible for developers to build that housing and still make a profit (by increasing density, for example), it simply requires them to sell a certain number of units at below-market prices.

Local governments around the state are afraid Prop 98 will pass. They are helping pay for an advertising campaign to urge a No vote on Prop 98. They may win — this time. But in the long run, the way to keep similar propositions from being put before voters is to quit treating property owners like second-class citizens.

Gallery limit counterproductive

Dear Editor,

Imagine if the once-banned ice cream shops of Carmel were instead only allowed to serve 70 percent vanilla ice cream. And yet there is an ordinance to prevent galleries from opening that showcase more than one artist. What if the world's museums were governed in this way? It would take a lifetime to see just a century's worth of art.

Along with Hanson Gallery, there are several jewelry stores in town that wish to move, but they are capped, too — some want to expand, I want to downsize — and yet we are prisoners of the bans. What the locals wanted to see are stores that serve residents — a movie theater, a shoe repair shop — but it is the rents that prohibit that. No shoe repair shop can afford to open on a main street in an international resort or even in a small town. The rents are what dictate the mix of stores that can survive. This is why vertically integrated businesses — such as manufacturers or perhaps stores buying in China and Eastern Europe, then marking their prices up 10 times — are the ones that can now afford the high rent. The first quarter of the 2008 was tough for many. With Sharper Image, Lillian Vernon, Bombay Company, Fortunoff, Lord and Taylor, Levitz, even the Disney stores filing for bankruptcy, now is not the time to limit moves that may assist a business in cutting costs or one wanting to expand. I believe in the free market economy and I am frustrated by the city's choice to govern the market.

Jennifer Walker, Hanson Gallery

'Massive mansion'

Dear Editor,

On March 12 the Monterey County Planning Commission granted approval for a massive mansion on the most prominent site of Carmel Point along Scenic Drive, proposed by Lon and Morley Mollentine.

In so doing, they ignored the Local Coastal Plan and other significant issues. Brian Roseth, the Carmel city planner, spoke strongly that this project, within the city's sphere of influence, “would dominate the setting and not be subordinate to the scenic coast. It should go back to the drawing

Robinson Jeffers, the renowned poet whose home is on Carmel Point, expressed his appreciation for the Point in a poem. Here are a few lines:

*This beautiful place defaced with a crop of suburban houses –
How beautiful when we first beheld it,
Unbroken field of poppy and lupin walled with clean cliffs;
No intrusion but two or three horses pas-* turing.

Or a few milch cows rubbing their flanks on the outcrop rock-heads

This decision is being appealed to the board of supervisors and will be heard May 20 at 1:30 p.m. in the supervisors' chambers in Salinas. Its decision will affect local residents as well as visitors from around the state and afar. If your readers have concerns regarding the character of development along our spectacular coastline, they should write to the board of supervisors and/or attend the meeting May 20.

Forest Theater plans on agenda

PLANS FOR renovating the Forest Theater will be presented to the Carmel City Council and the public at a special meeting Tuesday, according to Walt deFaria of the Forest Theater Foundation, which is spearheading the project and undertaking fundraising efforts on its behalf. Architect Richard McCann will present the plans, which include improving restrooms, sound buffering, seating and other aspects of the outdoor theater.

"The real trick is the place will be celebrating its 100th anniversary in 2010 and in many cases is falling apart," he said. "The city has put work into it, but there's so much more that needs to be done. This plan encompasses all that."

But "it will still look like the same old Forest Theater," and since the city owns it, the council would have to approve whatever changes are to be made.

"Obviously since these are city-owned facilities and we are a foundation trying to help it, it's up to the city to decide which elements work and which don't, which can be improved upon and which are fine," he said.

The Carmel City Council, which will also be receiving the draft 2008/2009 budget, is set to meet at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 20, in city hall on Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

A More Holistic View

We have had a tendency to assume that we were creating a savings program when we bought our own home, a source of needed funds in the future, an assist for our children's college education, and the basis for our future retirement plans. And while that was true—and still is—we've begun to see that the matter is more complex than we may have thought.

Specifically, instead of making simple assumptions about how the economy will perform in the future, we will be better served by bringing to the purchase of our home as clear an idea of how we want our future—ours and our households—to look. We should bring to bear on our purchase the full range of financial needs we will have in the coming years.

That way, our purchase fits into the gradually woven tapestry of our lives. It remains concerned with all the ways we want our home to serve us—the hobbies, part-time jobs, and social life we want it to support, along with the greatest likelihood of growing in value. To that end, it is even wiser today to work with a seasoned, compassionate real estate professional and a deeply experienced finance professional, and often to bring in the assistance of a personal finance advisor and tax counselor.

We say it all the time: Our home is, if not our biggest, certainly one of our biggest investments. It should be treated that way, and we will reap great rewards if we take it upon ourselves to become as fully informed as possible. Sandy Claws

By Margot Petit Nichols

DEXTER & SAGE Ellis, both 7, were having a wonderful afternoon at Carmel Beach on Tuesday with their Mom Sandi when we ran into them near the Santa Lucia steps.

Sage was still wet from her swim in the cold ocean water she loves so much. She is a Leonberger, a cross between a Newfoundland, St. Bernard and Great Pyrenees – the first encountered in the more than 550 dogs we've interviewed at Carmel Beach during these past 10 years.

Mom said Dexter and Sage are very good dogs, as is their brother Opie, a 17-year-old Jack Russell/Corgi mix, who was at home resting.

Mom Sandi and Dad Rick live on a two-acre farm in Carmel Valley occupied by their three dogs, horses, chickens, rabbits, ducks and geese – and, oh yes, two cats. Mom is lobbying to name it Horsefeathers Farm but so far hasn't convinced Dad.

Dexter, a handsome boxer, recently was set upon at the beach by three visiting hounds who apparently had no beach manners. Since then, he's been on the alert, and Sage, protective of her brother, will come between an aggressive dog and Dexter until the other dog goes away.

Sage watches out for the whole family: When Dad Rick is out of town, she sleeps by the door, instead of in her own comfy bed, as a surrogate family protector.

Sage and Dexter keep Mom on schedule twice a day when it's time to feed the horses. They either come and get her or wait expectantly by the door, breathing heavily as a sign of urgency. After the horses have been fed, it's their own feeding time – which may have something to do with their helping Mom with the horses' schedule.

The couple was walking behind the dog and did not immediately know what had happened, though a passerby thought the pup had broken a leg.

"When we got to her, she was already in a pool of blood," Avent said, and they feared she had severed an artery.

Others rushed to help. "We suddenly had a group of people with us," she said. Someone helped carry the dog, another dialed 911, and others asked what they could do.

"My husband placed his hand over the wound to stop the flow of the blood, and I ran ahead to see who was there to help," Avent said.

The 911 call had summoned police, fire and ambulance, though Monterey County Emergency Communications dispatchers canceled the rescuers as soon as they determined a dog, not a person, had been injured. However, with no other emergencies pending, Carmel Fire Capt. Mitch Kastros elected to continue on to the scene to determine what had happened and how to help. He also called dispatchers to locate the closest emergency veterinary hospital.

As Avent met the city's animal control officer, Cindi Mitchell, Carmel police officer Joe Boucher took the department's ATV down onto the beach to retrieve Petey. A vet at the Animal Hospital at the Crossroads shopping center was ready to receive her, so Kastros decided to use a CFD pickup to take her there, followed by a Carmel Fire engine. "Red lights and siren were used on Rio Road to coax a slow driver to pull over and to slowly proceed through a red light at Rio Road and Highway 1," Kastros reported.

Dr. George Bishop and his staff quickly went to work on Petey, who had not torn an artery as originally feared, but her chest muscle. And after surgery, Petey was allowed to go home. Avent credited all her beach helpers with saving Petey's life. "Without them, I don't think we could have gotten to our home, where our car was, and to the vet in time. Clearly Carmel needs to be proud of its police and fire people. I can't say enough good things about them."

❖ Plein Aire contest

More than 60 artists will brave the elements Thursday and Friday, May 15-16, to compete in the Carmel Art Festival's celebrated Plein Aire Painting Competition.

From Big Sur to Moss Landing, artists will set up their easels and canvases along Monterey County's stunning coastline, as well as other scenic inland points, making both days perfect for an outing to enjoy the beautiful Monterey Peninsula as it is captured by talented painters.

"What makes the competition special is that you're really under pressure to perform," local artist Robert Lewis explained. "Plein aire painting involves so much physical effort. You're working with your mind, your body, the weather, the bugs and the environment. You're constantly being distracted. It's really a challenge, even without the competition."

Participating in the contest will be Annie Allemann, Michael Allison, Michael Bagdonas, Tomiko Bailey, Brian Blood, Maria Boisvert, Jason Bowen, Cathy Bower, Delia Bradford, John Burton, Larry Cannon, Elaine Carpenter, Ray Carpenter, Judy Christen, Robin Rogers Cloud, Bethanne Cople, display. A live auction of some of the paintings will follow at 6 p.m.

❖ Sculpture display and demonstration

Devendorf Park will also be the setting for "Sculpture in the Park," a juried exhibit that continues through May 18.

Along with the exhibit, Carmel sculptor Steven Whyte will create a larger-than-life-sized statue of a noted figure in American history in the park during the weekend. The owner of a studio and gallery in Su Vecino Courtyard on Dolores, the English-born Whyte thrives on working with a crowd looking on.

The 2006 sculpture competition in Devendorf Park included this playful piece depicting a large basket of flowers carried by children, who had an easier time than the installers!

"Art is a public medium," he explained. "My work is particularly linked to the public because it celebrates the human form and experience."

Last year, Whyte sculpted a nine-foot statue of Martin Luther King, much to the delight of many onlookers.

"Visitors see firsthand the work that goes into the art and hopefully they leave inspired and educated, and they have a greater appreciation for the pieces they see in the other Carmel galleries," he added.

❖ The fine art of furniture

If you don’t consider furniture to be art, you probably aren’t familiar with Judy Kensley McKie, whose work is currently on display at Winfield Gallery. Considered one of America’s premiere furniture artists, McKie uses wood, bronze, stone, marble and resin to create work that combines contemporary and indigenous themes. The display at Winfield Gallery will focus on her bronze creations.

The show will continue through June 20. The gallery is located on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh. For more information, call (831) 624-3369 or visit www.winfieldgallery.com.

All artwork is for sale, and 10 percent of the proceeds benefits the nonprofit Monterey County Youth Museum (www.mymuseum.org).
