

More than 100 dachshunds to convene at annual beach bash

By CHRIS COUNTS

BEACH BLANKET Bingo for dachshunds. That's what will happen Sunday as the Carmel Dachshund Club presents its 5th annual Wienie Roast Sunday at Carmel Beach, creating the head-turning spectacle of more than 100 "wiener dogs" simultaneously frolicking in the sand. "It's pretty hysterical," said Kim Edmundson, a studio musician and part-time Carmel resident who helped organize the event. "This is our big blow-out of the year."

Edmundson — the proud owner of dachshunds named "Spike" and "Butch" — said the club has grown rapidly since he and fellow dachshund owner Jean Hontalas came up with the idea six years ago.

"We put an ad in The Pine Cone about our first club meeting," Edmundson recalled. "I didn't think anyone would show up. Seventeen dachshunds came to the first meeting, and about 50 turned out for the next meeting. We meet twice a month, and between 20 and 40 dogs come each time."

Sunday's wienie roast offers local dachshunds a great opportunity to both socialize and blow off steam.

"Who needs entertainment when dachshunds are running around?" Edmundson asked. "This event is all about the dogs playing and going nuts on the beach. All the people do is eat."

Thanks to the generosity of Ferman and Kerry Sanchez — the owners of Bruno's Market and two dachshunds — owners of the pooches will feast on the finest hot dogs in town.

"Bruno's supplies all the hot dogs and buns," Edmundson noted.

For visitors to Carmel Beach, the event is certain to turn a few heads. For the local dog owners, the wienie roast serves as a showcase for the many charms of a cute, small and somewhat-elongated breed of canines.

"They're just very loving dogs," Edmundson explained. "They're a blast to be around. They're such characters."

The wienie roast starts at noon near the 13th Street staircase. Dachshund aficionados are expected to travel from as far away as San Francisco, Santa Barbara, Fresno and Los Angeles to participate.

Abalone - Café Ernest was one of the first seafood restaurants in Monterey, opening a century ago in an area where fish was so commonly given away that few people went to commercial eateries for anything but steaks and potatoes. "Pop" Ernest Doelter had an idea that he could turn the tide by developing a unique treat, abalone steaks. Until then, abalone was generally considered a junk fish, possibly poisonous, eaten only by the Chinese who chopped the rubbery muscles into chowder. The new chef experimented until he discovered how to slice abalone into strips, pound them until they were tender, dip them in batter and breadcrumbs, and quick fry them. His abalone steaks were such a hit that the modest café on Alvarado Street, near the spot where Rosine's Restaurant sits today, became a social center for the colorful artists and writers of early Carmel, along with the rich and famous staying at the Hotel Del Monte. In 1910, the abalone steak was 75 cents – or 90 with a salad. (Next week: Lucky Lindy visits the Peninsula)

County wants to reexamine $$ deal with proposed C.V. town

By CHRIS COUNTS

A REQUEST by Monterey County to reexamine the terms of a revenue-sharing agreement with a proposed Town of Carmel Valley could add another delay to a lengthy process that has worn out both supporters and opponents of incorporating the scenic valley.

Superior Court Judge Lydia Villareal breathed new life into the drive to create the town when she ruled May 2 that an environmental impact report cannot be required before incorporation is put before voters.

The Monterey County Local Agency Formation Commission decided not to appeal Villareal's decision and announced July 3 that it had reached a settlement with proponents that could pay their attorney Michael Stamp as much as $240,000 in legal fees.

But LAFCO also decided to postpone a critical hearing on incorporation from Oct. 27 to Dec. 1 to allow time to discuss — and possibly renegotiate — an agreement to make sure the county doesn't lose revenue when the new town is created.

"They're still playing games with us," insisted incorporation advocate Glenn Robinson. "It's time to just let people vote."

According to Nick Chiulos, the county's director of Intergovernmental & Legislative Affairs, the original revenue neutrality settlement — based on fiscal data from June 2006 — provides the county with an option to reexamine it. He said the poor economy and the amount of time that has elapsed since the agreement was signed were factors that led to the decision to take another look at the document.

Chiulos said he didn't anticipate the discussion over revenue neutrality would add any further delays. But Robinson isn't so sure, going so far as to call the agreement a "Pandora's Box."

"It took 18 months to negotiate the agreement the first time," he observed.

Meanwhile, Carmel Valley Forum president Max Chaplin said the marathon incorporation process has worn down both sup-

Pacific Grove: Violet Baldwin, 102, of Canterbury Woods, Pacific Grove, died on Monday, July 14 at her home.

Violet was born in Bowie, Texas on July 8, 1906 to Alvin R. and Wilhelmina Schaefer. The family later moved to San Antonio where Violet attended Main Avenue High School and graduated at the age of 16. She graduated from the University of Texas and went on to Cumberland University Law School in Lebanon, Tennessee. After graduation, she passed her law exams and became one of the first three women to be admitted to the State Bar of Texas.

Violet later moved to California where she met and married Carvel Baldwin, a banker with Pasadena Citizen's Trust & Savings. When he retired in 1964, they moved to Carmel and enjoyed being active in community affairs. She was a volunteer at CHOMP from 1978 to 2002 where she racked up a whopping 10,000 hours. She served at the reception desk, the blood center, and both the Short Stay Unit and Intensive Care. She also volunteered at the Monterey Bay Aquarium where she contributed more than 1,700 hours over a span of 15 years. Over the course of the years, Violet has also volunteered at the Red Cross Blood Bank, spent years in Washington as a government aide, read books to the blind, been a member of the Women's Auxiliary at St. John's Episcopal Church and knitted for Navy wives. Vi's excellence at caning chairs is legendary in the Monterey area.

Planning commissioners ask for help with conflicting state laws

By PAUL MILLER

ON THE one hand, the California Environmental Quality Act requires Carmel and other cities to protect their historic buildings and “visual resources.”

On the other hand, a different state law requires the city to approve affordable housing projects unless they pose a threat to “public health and safety.”

Those conflicting mandates left planning commissioners unsure how to proceed Wednesday as they considered the latest iteration of a plan to tear down a former bank building at Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue, designed in a modern style by Walter Burde, and replace it with apartments (including two affordable ones), condos and shops.

The project has been in the city’s permit process since 2004. In October 2006, the city council voted the old bank building, now the home of Homescapes Carmel, could be demolished. But the issue continues to arise in the context of what should replace it.

“We’ve heard the existing building is a great piece of architecture, but there hasn’t been any process by which we could say this is a great piece of architecture that should be protected in perpetuity,” commissioner Steven Hillyard said, after hearing from a local architect’s group that the city should forbid the owner, designer John Mandurrigo, to tear the Burde building down.

“I’ve always had the opinion the building should be demolished,” countered commissioner Alan Hewer. “I’ve always thought it was huge, unattractive and not belonging in this town.”

“But we have heard from people with far more credentials than you or I,” chairman Bill Strid said, referring to the architects who say the building is very significant, even though it was built only 36 years ago. “And those are the people I am going to listen to.”

After their discussion, Mandurrigo’s attorney, Anthony Lombardo, argued that even if the building is extremely important architecturally, that isn’t enough to override state housing law.

“Great architecture is in the eye of the beholder,” Lombardo said. “But rightly or wrongly the Legislature has decided we have

Pets Meals benefit Saturday

A LIVE auction of art by local cartoonists and painters, plus dogs whittled of wood by a Vermont woodcarver, will be held Saturday, July 19, during a "Day of the Dog & Family Fun" event preceded by a Friday evening art preview and reception.

The events are being held to benefit a new program of Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula's — Pet Meals. Homebound clients of Meals on Wheels who cannot afford food for their companion animals will now be able to have pet food delivered with their own meals.

Volunteers take food every weekday to 350 Peninsula housebound folks, many of whom rely on their pets for love.

An art preview will be held July 18 from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Sally Griffin Active Living Center, 700 Jewell Ave., Pacific Grove. And on Saturday from 1 to 3 p.m. the local SPCA will present guest speakers on pet first aid and disaster planing and Jennifer Church will take free portraits of pets with a family member.

Exhibits include Greyhound Rescue, doggie jewelry and book displays. Also, a live auction of art is scheduled for 3 to 4 p.m., including works by cartoonists Bill Bates, Jay Piersanti, Stephen Huneck and famed Blue Dog painter George Rodrigue.

Donations also will be accepted in honor of or in memory of a favorite pet, according to volunteer Richard Radowicz, who has been a Meals on Wheels driver for ten years.

Renovation won't require theater to become one-fourth its size

By PAUL MILLER

THE GOLDEN Bough Theater is 16,000 square feet, but occupies four lots that, under current zoning, qualify for only 4,000 square feet of development.

However, demolishing the ramshackle former cinema to turn it into a modern showplace for live theater won't trigger a requirement that it conform to current size limits, the Carmel Planning Commission decided Wednesday.

"The footprint it has was legal [at the time the building was built] and it should be kept," commissioner Robin Wilson said.

Stephen Moorer, executive director of the building's owner, Pacific Repertory Theatre, asked the commission for guidance so his group could proceed with fundraising and plans for a new theater on the site of what everyone agrees is an inadequate facility now.

"It leaks sound like a sieve," Moorer began. "When the Buddy Holly story is rocking, you can hear it down the block and around the corner."

He also said the current building is very ugly, has inadequate storage, is technically backward, and lacks amenities for actors, technicians and the audience.

"There's a line into the lobby at the ladies room during every intermission," he said.

But he said the current building's size — and especially its height — should be maintained.

"If we go any lower, we won't have room for a two-story set," he said. "In that case, Juliet wouldn't be acting from a balcony, she'd be acting from a porch."

He presented preliminary drawings that showed a theater with the lobby where the stage is now and the stage where the lobby is. Excavation to 31 feet below ground would create space for technical shops below the stage. Double doors, insulating and landscape screening would reduce disruptions to the neighborhood, he said.

Only one neighbor objected to the remodel, asking instead that the theater be removed and replaced with single-family houses.

But the city council has already decided the site should remain a theater, and the rest of the neighbors seemed to welcome improvement to the Golden Bough.

"We're not against PacRep or drama," said Bill Souveroff, who said he represented a group of neighbors. "The theater is a wonderful thing. But we want the remodel done right."

He said parking, theater noise, smoking, drinking, neighborhood ambiance and privacy were all things of concern.

'Work with the neighbors'

Before agreeing that the Golden Bough could stay roughly the same size it is now, and in the same location, commissioners asked Moorer and his architect, Richard McCann, to cooperate with the neighbors.

"I move we express our support for the alliance between the theater and the neighborhood association to work toward agreement on as much of the details as possible," Wilson said.

Without taking a vote, the commission concurred.

"I hope we've provided the guidance you need to come up with a design," commission chair Bill Strid commented.

"BALANCE" IS KEY IN SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

ANNCR: In most parts of our life, we seek a healthy balance. But sometimes we let our investment portfolios get out of balance — and that can be a costly mistake.

How can your portfolio become unbalanced? Suppose, for example, that you initially established an investment mix of 50 percent stocks and 50 percent bonds, a ratio that reflected your risk tolerance and time horizon. But over time, perhaps an extended bull market drove up the value of your stocks so that they now make up nearly 80 percent of your portfolio — a percentage that may be too risky for you.

To prevent this from happening, you should consider periodically rebalancing your portfolio. This may involve scaling back on one type of asset and adding more of another.

A balanced portfolio can help you achieve your long-term financial goals — so don't forget to rebalance regularly.

City: Fire prevention more important than ever

By KELLY NIX

IN LIGHT of the wildfires that have burned in Big Sur and Carmel Valley, the city council in heavily forested Carmel-by-the-Sea is going to urge its residents and visitors to be more aware of fire safety.

And one way homeowners can prevent fires is by having their chimneys swept, according to city hall.

During a special meeting Tuesday, the council voted to educate the public about fire prevention instead of amending municipal code sections related to fire safety.

"We decided to educate the need for spark arrestors and an expert chimney sweep to clean out excessive debris in chimneys," said city administrator Rich Guillen.

In its campaign, the city will also remind people that beach fires can only be set in certain areas and of the need for brush to be cleared around homes and other fire prevention practices.

The council is only recommending residents have their chimneys swept and isn't requiring it. Spark arrestors prevent sparks and other flammable debris from escaping chimneys.

"One suggestion was to reimburse a portion for people who [install] spark arrestors," Guillen said.

Instead, he said the city will promote the importance of spark arrestors and other fire safety tips through the media, placing fire prevention tips on doorknob fliers, distributing information at city hall and the library and erecting signs at Carmel Beach promoting beach fire safety.

Beach signs would likely include information letting beachgoers know fires are prohibited between Ocean Avenue and 10th street and the proper way to put out beach fires.

Carmel's municipal code currently includes a litany of fire-prevention-related regulations, including the burning of garbage, beach fires and chimney maintenance. Tuesday's meeting was a followup to a July 1 meeting in which the council discussed fire prevention as an "urgency topic."

The city council could have voted to amend its city code related to fire safety but Guillen said there was no need.

"It became apparent there are already a lot of protections that can be enforced," he said.

Teaching Ukrainians 'modem' and 'mouse'

■ A Pacific Grove resident's Peace Corps service

By LOU RICHARDS

'I WONDER what I'm going to do now.' That thought went through my head in March 2004, when I found myself, after a couple of serious life changes, with unexpected free time on my hands. As I pondered my future, my thoughts turned to an idea I'd had for many years. In fact, I had always harbored a desire to join the Peace Corps, but life events had a habit of getting in the way. Suddenly the way was clear and it was time to act.

The Peace Corps has a very convenient way to apply. At their website, www.peacecorps.gov, all I needed to do was fill out an application. After that, I had to talk with one of their recruiters and be nominated. In late 2004, I was told my destination and that I would be leaving on March 1, 2005.

Group 28 bound for Ukraine met on a chilly, rainy day in a hotel in Chicago. There were 45 of us from all over the country. We spent the last weekend in February going through orientation and getting acquainted. Finally, the big day for the flight arrived and we headed to Europe and the beginning of our adventure.

When we arrived at the dormitory that was to be our home for the first week, there was still snow on the ground and the river that ran behind the dorm was frozen over. It wasn't until we got back inside that someone told us we shouldn't have been walking on the ice!

Our introduction to Ukraine was intense. We started learning Russian or Ukrainian almost from the moment we arrived — and the first word we learned was "piva," which means beer. There was the usual ream of paper that needed to be filled out and signed. We were divided into training groups and we started our transformation into full-fledged volunteers that evening.

After that first intense week, we headed off in our training groups to various cities outside of Kiev for immersion into (in my case) Russian language, Ukrainian culture, and a different way of life.

For the first three months in the country, while I became more familiar with my surroundings, I was placed with a wonderful host-family in the town of Vasilkov, about a two-hour bus ride from Kiev. All trainees in Ukraine are required to spend their training time with a local family. I was lucky. Galena was a wonderful cook and gracious hostess who had a comfortable house not too far from town.

Her teenage daughter, Natasha, and son, Sasha, were eager to help in getting me accustomed to my new life. Galena owned a store and I would go there on chilly afternoons (it was a long winter) to study and try to absorb the language. When training was over it was hard to leave. One day I was sitting outside the store and a young girl about 12 or so sat down and started to play her accordion. I'd never heard "Love Me Tender" played so well or sound so sweet.

Not long after that I stepped off the train in Stakhanov, a small city in the Donbas region on the eastern side of the country. It was a coal mining town until the mines were shut because of environmental and safety concerns in the early 1990's. Alexy Stakhanov was a coal miner who, in the days of Stalin, performed some prodigious feat in the mine. Stalin named him a working-class hero. Many years later this city was named for him.

My assignment was to teach English at the Ukraine Pedagogical and Engineering Academy, a small school that offers degrees in electrical engineering, mine engineering surrounds their houses without worrying about whether they're breaking the law, said Fifth District Supervisor Dave Potter.

BRUSH

"There are too many other priorities with greater significance," Potter explained. "We're in a rebuilding mode now. We don't want to come in and create a regulatory presence. We need to create a facilitating presence."

Potter also serves a member of the California Coastal Commission, the agency seeking greater protection for the familiar mix of hardy plants it calls "maritime chaparral."

In a letter to The Pine Cone last week, Charles Lester, senior deputy director of the commission, insisted his agency does not require permits for brush clearance around existing buildings in Big Sur.

Yet he followed that statement by noting that his agency has "worked closely with Monterey County on an emergency approval for clearing dead oaks in Northern Big Sur to reduce the risk of catastrophic fire."

And the coastal commission declared maritime chaparral to be environmentally sensitive habitat in 2006 when it approved a permit for Stephen Foster to construct a new home on the former Rocky Creek ranch, which sits atop a ridge between Palo Colorado and Rocky creeks.

Under the Coastal Act, ESHA is off-limits to almost all development.

While the coastal commission is stepping up protection of maritime chaparral, there is no agreement on what constitutes it.

Coastal commission planner Katie Morange said that the definition "is still being refined." Apparently, the presence of local varieties of manzanita and ceanothus is enough to deem much of Big Sur's vegetation maritime chaparral.

But Lester's letter in The Pine Cone implied there is not much protected maritime chaparral in Big Sur. "Given its limited distribution, we estimate that less than one-tenth of one percent of more than 200,000 acres in the Big Sur coast area could potentially involve conflicts between the sensitive habitat and developable residential building sites," Lester wrote.

Big Sur resident Mike Caplin bristled at Lester's words, calling them "misleading."

According to the California Department of Fish and Game's maritime chaparral expert, Caplin noted, "almost all chaparral in California's coastal zone is maritime chaparral, with very few exceptions."

Caplin also takes issue with Lester's insistence that his agency is okay with fire clearance that involves removing maritime chaparral. "Lester's statements lead the reader to think it is not a problem to remove ESHA to provide defensible space for fire protection," Caplin said.

However, in the Foster case, the coastal commission staff "argued that maritime chaparral could not even be trimmed for fire protection purposes," Caplin noted.

According to Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade chief Frank Pinney, state law requires homeowners "living in a wildland interface" to maintain 100-feet of clearance between their homes and a fire threat.

Hillary Lipman, a local property owner, real estate agent and botanist, agrees with Caplin's assessment that maritime chaparral composes much of Big Sur's landscape.

"At least 75 percent of Pfeiffer Ridge is maritime chaparral," observed Lipman, referring to one of Big Sur's most populous neighborhoods.

Getting serious about storm drains

WITH SHINY emblems designed to attract attention and last a long time, the Pebble Beach Co. is trying to remind people not to dump anything down storm drains located in Del Monte Forest. The 3-inch diameter stainless steel plates were placed on more than 200 storm drains throughout the forest over the last several months. "They draw people's attention and remind them that only rainwater is supposed to go into storm drains," said Thomas Quattlebaum, environmental stewardship manager for the PBC. The emblems are part of the PBC's voluntary participation in the Monterey Regional Storm Water Management Program's efforts to reduce pollutants from entering storm drains. The PBC decided to install emblems instead of painting because they are more durable, Quattlebaum said.

lightning June 21 and has burned more than 120,000 acres within the Los Padres National Forest.

Malintha Larsen, who lives on Parrot Ranch Road, at the junction of Tassajara and Cachagua roads, chose to stay on her 11-acre property despite the mandatory evacuation order. "We had to sign a release form and put down our dentist's phone number," Larsen said, "as if they are going to find our burned corpses."

Larsen, who could see smoke from her property, estimated the fire is three to five miles away. "I'm an ex-firefighter and my house is completely defensible," she said. "There is no reason for me to leave. I don't think the fire is ever going to get here."

Although Larsen said the California Highway Patrol has been strict about not letting residents come and go, she said two days this week officers allowed her neighbor's gardener past the barricade.

"As far as the overall picture," Larsen said. "Everybody is frustrated with the police. I don't like being treated like a criminal."

Larsen said she arranged to have a friend meet her at the firefighters' barricade to give her 100 pounds of food for her chickens.

But when her friend got there, "she called and said 'don't come, they are going to take you [from the property]," Larsen said. "I had a firefighter friend of mine smuggle it in for me."

Larsen said the few neighbors that chose to stay are sharing food. "We are starting to get a little low on supplies," she said. "But I don't think anybody is in dire straits yet."

Unlike Larsen, Kim Berta, who also lives on Parrot Ranch Road, said she, her husband, Ray, and their son opted to evacuate their three-bedroom house.

While she and her husband are staying at a friend's home on Laureles Grade and their son is staying in Carmel, not knowing when they can return home is unsettling.

"We don't know for sure when we are going to go back," she said, "and that is the biggest question in my mind."

Berta said they spent weeks clearing the brush around their nearly 11-acre property and moved all of their firewood away from the house. "Our place is pretty good because it's an open meadow," she said. "We have a good chance of being defensible."

From Linda Jardine's home off Via Cielo in Cachagua, the sound of helicopters, which fly overhead en route to dropping water on the fire, can be heard around the clock.

Jardine, whose area is under voluntary evacuation, said she will stay there even if a mandatory evacuation is imposed.

"Everyone on our road is planning to stay if there is a mandatory evacuation," Jardine said. "But if we were in imminent danger — if the fire was across the road — we would leave."

Although Jardine evacuated her horses, her two emus, tortoises and cats and dogs remain on the property. She said she has a plan to get the animals out if it is necessary.

Jardine said she's attended about a half dozen community meetings in the Cachagua area, which she said has provided valuable information to residents about the fire.

And she praised the efforts by firefighters. "When the firefighters brought us cases of bottled water, I thought, 'golly, this is remarkable,'" she said.

Meanwhile, hundreds of firefighters who set up base at the Carmel Valley Airport, pulled up stakes and relocated to the fire Tassajara Road Wednesday.

Airport owner Mary Delfino, who lost a cabin in Big Sur to the fire, said there were rumors circulating that she charged fire organizations to set up camp at the airport. She said she didn't charge a dime for the space.

"We were happy for them to use it," Delfino said.

BATES

"By the time they got him to CHOMP's emergency room," Loye said, "he was already in such shape they had to put a shock machine on him to bring him around, which is an indicator of how serious it was."

Doctors found one of Bates' main heart arteries was blocked and inserted a stent to reopen it.

Mike Brown, owner of Perspectacles, who has known Bates since he moved to Carmel, said Bates was lucid after his surgery.

"I went to see him and we talked and laughed and had a great time," Brown said. "Unfortunately, complications set in."

Bates has remained unconscious since his second day at CHOMP. His wife and at least two of his children have been at the hospital daily, Loye said.

"He is going to have to draw on everything to fight this damn infection," he said.

Loye is working with Bates on the artist's memoirs, which span decades and his experiences from the 133 countries Loye said Bates has visited — most of them on trips as shipboard cartoonist for cruise lines.

"He has material for a whole series of incredible books," Loye said. "They stories he tells are tremendous. He is really writing each one out one by one."

Loye is encouraging friends and readers of Bates' cartoons to pray for his friend to get well. "If several times a day you will simply stop and think of him and say either to yourself or out loud, 'Please heal Bill,' it can make a big difference," Loye said.

Stage Kids return to Big Sur after fire

THE BIG Sur Grange Hall will host an original play by a group of youngsters Friday, July 18 at 7 p.m.

The performers are participating in 5th annual State Kids Performing Arts Camp, a three-week-long event presented by the non-profit Big Sur Arts Initiative. They range in age from six to 16. While most of the children live in Big Sur and on the Monterey Peninsula, some have traveled from as far away as San Francisco and Los Angeles to participate in the camp.

The Grange Hall is located just off Highway 1, about 25 miles south of Carmel, and less than a quarter mile south of the Glen Oaks Motel.

The first week of camp was canceled when the Basin Complex Fire swept through Big Sur.

For more information about Stage Kids, call (831) 667-1530 or visit www.big-surarts.org.

Plein aire beginners and pros brave the elements

By CHRIS COUNTS

FROM PROFESSIONAL artists to virtual beginners, the Monterey Bay Plein Air Painters Association features a varied and eclectic membership. A new exhibit, "The Painted Landscape," which opens Friday, July 18, at the Pacific Grove Art Center, aims to showcase that diversity.

"Not everyone is a professional artist, but all our members have a love and appreciation for plein aire painting," explained Rolf Lygren, a co-organizer of the exhibit. "This is the first showing of our entire membership."

Among the more recognizable names in the show are local artists Cyndra Bradford, Erin Gafill, Lindy Duncan, Jeff Daniel Smith, Julia Seelos, Jeff Crozier, Stan Robbins and Andy Williams.

In addition to the plein aire exhibit, the art center is opening shows this weekend by Somer R. Harrold, Yves Goyatton and Monterey Peninsula College's "lensless photography" class.

Harrold, a Carmel Valley resident, says "not one model sat before me" for the paintings in her exhibit, "Rites of Passage: Seven Years of Oil Portraits."

"All my portraits are invented characters inspired by my travels, by women on the street, in books, heavily influenced by history, language, politics and personal experience," she said.

Goyatton, a native of Lyon, France, offers new sculpture in a display he calls, "Juxtaposé."

"His current body of work represents his fascination with the mystery of abstract shapes and their juxtaposition with the human form," explained Joan McCleary, director of the art center. "His work has taken this concept most literally by combining the human form and the abstract shapes of modern landscapes."

And 16 members of MPC's Spring 2008 lensless photography class show their experiments with the many varieties of pin-hole photography and many manifestations of the photogram — a cameraless image made on light sensitive papers or fabrics.

"Other cameraless techniques involve drawing with flashlights, 'chemical' prints, and cliché verre techniques," McCleary said.

The art center will host a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. The exhibits will continue through Aug. 28. The gallery is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave.

This plein aire painting by Jeff Daniel Smith will be featured in a new exhibit at the Pacific Grove Art Center.

A great weekend for jazz, Southern rock and bikes

By STEVE VAGNINI

RUSHAD EGGLESTON, a graduate of Carmel High School, is taking the cello to new dimensions. The first string player to ever be awarded a full scholarship to the Berklee College of Music, Eggleston may only be 27, but his resume is already impressive. After releasing his first album, "Nico and Rushad," in 1999 (with fellow Carmelite Nico Georis), Eggleston made his major label recording debut with the Fiddlers 4, a record that was nominated for a 2002 Grammy. In addition to performing on a number of major recordings, Eggleston tours extensively with Darol Anger's Republic of Strings, Fiddler's 4, and the alternative folk/bluegrass group he helped found, Crooked Still. Eggleston performs Wednesday, July 23, at 8:30 p.m. at Monterey Live on Alvarado Street with his latest project, The Tornado Riders, a group that also features Scot Manke on drums and Graham Terry on bass. An original artist in the finest sense, Rushad is an innovator with chops to spare.

Also performing at Monterey Live, jazz vocalist Julie Capili sings selections from her debut CD Passing Fancies on Sunday July 21. A talented singer/songwriter who recently moved to the Monterey Peninsula from Honolulu, Capili will be backed by a top notch group of musicians including Bob Phillips on piano, Skyler Campbell on drums and bassist Heath Proskin. Historic home art sought

The Pacific Grove Art Center — in partnership with the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce and the Pacific Grove Heritage Society — is seeking poster art for the Oct. 5. Pacific Grove Historic Home Tour. Acceptable mediums include pencil, watercolor, crayon, poster paint, chalk, acrylics, or oil. Pieces should be no larger than 24 inches by 36 inches. Suggested subjects include historic homes, buildings and churches. Artwork must be submitted to the art center by July 30.

Here Comes the Sun

Between the smoke from nearby wildfires and its famous fog, the sun hasn't been seen much in Pacific Grove this summer. But that isn't stopping gallery owner Robert Lewis from paying tribute to the center of our solar system.

A new exhibit, "Summer Sun," opens at Le Beau Soleil Gallery Friday, July 18.

Featured in the show will be work by Judy Christen, Tom Davies, Susan Ewell, Annette Foisie, Carol Heaton, Elizabeth Meyer, Eva Nichols, Karlene Ryan, Sarah Madsen, Rose Sloan, Murray Wagnon, and Cindy Wilbur.

"The show is a mix of oils, acrylics, watercolors, pastels and pen and ink drawings," Lewis explained. "There's a little bit of everything."

The gallery, which is located at 210 1/2 Forest Ave., will host a reception from 6 to 9 p.m. The exhibit continues through Sept. 3. For more information, call (831) 402-8406 or visit www.lebeausoleilgallery.com.

P.G. Chamber hosts art walk

The Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce presents its monthly art walk Friday, July 18, from 6 to 9 p.m. In addition to receptions at the P.G. Art Center and Le Beau Soleil Gallery (see above), The Loft Gallery, Tessuti Zoo, Gallery Christine, Artisana Gallery and Trotter Galleries are participating. Other downtown businesses will also be open and displaying art.

Maps are available at participating galleries and the chamber office, which is located at 584 Central Avenue. For more information, call (831) 373-3304.

After smoke clears, music returns

By CHRIS COUNTS

AT FIRST glance, John Doe and Beachwood Sparks would appear to have little in common. Yet if you were to write a book about the history of pop music in Los Angeles over the past 30 years, Doe and the Sparks could serve as perfect bookends for the story.

The Sparks — whose sound pays homage to the Byrds and Beach Boys, circa 1968 — highlight local promoter Britt Govea's latest Big Sur Love-In Saturday, July 19. The concert will be at the Henry Miller Library, which barely escaped destruction during the Big Sur fire that began June 21.

Doe — the former lead singer of L.A. punk icons, X — performs at the same venue Sunday, July 20.

In many ways, Doe and the Sparks are like two sides of a coin. Each draws heavily from rock 'n' roll's storied past, preferring a sound that is more retro than hip. Doe and the Sparks are veterans of the bustling L.A. club scene. And yet where Doe's music — particularly his early work with X — paints a picture of L.A.'s dark underbelly, the Sparks embrace a sunny optimism that would seem right at home on a late-1960s Beach Boys record.

When the Sparks play at the library Saturday, they'll be joined by Royce Haven, The Shivas, Sean Smith, Assemble Head in Sunburst Sound, Whalebones, Skygreen Leopards and Howlin' Rain.

Saturday's concert starts at 2 p.m., while Sunday's show begins at 3 p.m. Tickets are $22 Saturday and $18 Sunday. Lysa Flores, a singer-songwriter who bills herself as the "Queen of Chicano Rock," opens for Doe.

Tickets also go on sale July 21 for an Aug. 22 benefit concert at the library by composer Philip Glass.

A three-time Academy Award nominee, Glass is a minimalist who is considered one of the most influential composers of the late 20th century. His music won a Golden Globe award for Best Original Score ("The Truman Show, 2002) and he's credited with having a profound impact on many pop performers and producers, including David Bowie and Brian Eno. "He's a cultural icon," explained Magnus Toren, library director. "For him to play on his grand piano in the redwoods, this is a once-in-a-lifetime event." Glass will be backed by cellist Wendy Sutter.

Coming back to life

The events are quite a revival for a library that nearly burned down three weeks ago.

"The fire, at one point, came within 20-feet of our propane tank," Toren reported. "There were also several flare-ups near our back porch."

Just 150 feet from that back porch is charred forest littered with toppled redwoods. "The library was saved thanks to a bold, aggressive and well executed fire suppression effort," Toren added. "Two helicopters dropped water from the air while a ground crew battled the flames."

In addition to destroying 27 homes — including several on a ridge directly above the library — the fire was particularly hard on local businesses dependent on summer tourism.

"The library took a serious hit," Toren conceded. "It would be wonderful if people took the opportunity to come to Big Sur and offer us their support."

The Henry Miller Library is located on Highway 1, a quarter-mile south of Nepenthe restaurant and 28 miles south of Carmel. For more information, call (831) 667-2574 or visit www.henrymiller.org.

YOUR AUTO COLUMN

Presented by Kevin & Sue Anne Donohoe

PLUGGING AWAY

There was once a time when spark plugs were replaced with frequent regularity. More recently, the introduction of long-life spark plugs has led many automobile owners to overlook them. However, a spark plug that fouls can compromise the performance of the vehicle. Factors that can lead to this occurrence include an improperly performing fuel-injection system or worn piston rings/valve seals that allow too much oil to leak into the combustion chamber. Aside from oil, spark plugs may also be fouled by fuel or carbon. Once a plug is fouled, there will not be sufficient voltage at the firing tip for the cylinder to fire properly. Replacement of the plug(s) and addressing the cause(s) of the problem are recommended.

Regular maintenance includes periodic inspection of spark plugs and replacement if necessary. We can effectively extend the life of your vehicle with preventative maintenance. Please don't wait until it needs to be towed to us. Let us perform preventative maintenance on a regular basis before that happens. We are located at the corner of Figueroa and Franklin, just west of Jack's Park in Downtown Monterey. We are the oldest independent repair facility in Monterey going...and growing!

HINT: An overly dirty air cleaner can also lead to a too-rich condition that can lead to plug fouling.

Today's Real Estate

Why an Open House?

The most recent studies suggest that 7% of all homeowners first see the home they buy at an Open House held by a real estate agent. This may seem a small number at first, especially when you consider the trouble your agent goes to in order to hold an attractive event and the bother to the homeowner who has to find something to do that takes him or her out of the home for much of the day.

But it is worthwhile in many ways. For one thing, about 50% of all people who buy a home include visiting Open Houses in their search. This means that the real estate professionals working locally who are holding Open Houses are, in effect, making themselves available to potential buyers. They will often bring people from the houses they're holding open to see your home, increasing your home's exposure.

Indeed, the more homes that are being held open near your home, the more likely it is that your home will be visited by potential buyers, too. Some have grouched that holding open houses is only a technique for real estate agents to pick up clients. Consider a bit more deeply and you realize that you stand a good chance of benefiting if a local real estate professional begins working with a good client.

Admittedly, Open Houses are rather old-fashioned, given our ability to click among photographs of homes for sale on the Internet. But there is nothing like actually being in a home with the guidance of a caring real estate professional. Open Houses, therefore, are a selling tool that may be somewhat less important than in the past, but are very unlikely to disappear for lack of value. Versatile Oaxacan chef keeps diners happy at Ody's Tavern

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

MAURICIO AQUINO, head chef at Carmel-by-the-Sea's Ody's Tavern (formerly The Village Pub), prepares a pub menu that includes starters, salads, gourmet hot dogs, sandwiches and "serious stuff."

It's the serious stuff that chef Aquino likes to prepare best.

Heading the top of his personal best list are enchiladas — both cheese and chicken — which are, according to the staff at Ody's, "the best authentic enchiladas in town." The enchiladas are served with long grained rice cooked in house-made chicken stock with tomatoes, onion and garlic. Cheese is melted over the top of the enchiladas.

Among the serious stuff tavern-goers are especially attracted to, according to Aquino, are grilled baby back ribs with Asian sauce, Monterey Bay sand dabs and chicken Alfredo fettuccine.

Aquino came to the Monterey Peninsula in 1996 from his native Oaxaca, Mexico. He worked in a market there where he learned ingredients and produce. When he arrived here, he was successful in obtaining restaurant work and learned on the job.

One step at a time

Aquino started as a carver at Sand City's Boston Market restaurant, staying three years, learning English as he went along.

Then he moved higher up the kitchen ladder at Nico restaurant, across San Carlos Avenue from Ody's Tavern. There he worked as a prep cook for a year before moving on to Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey, first as a cook at Abalonetti Seafood Trattoria for five years, then as a cook at Paradiso restaurant where he worked for another four years.

He moved to Porto Mexico restaurant on the wharf for a year as a cook before coming to work for Ody's Tavern six months ago as head chef.

The tavern is owned by Raul Arzadon, who was well known in Carmel as the former bartender at Quail Lodge for several decades, where he had quite a following. Before Quail he worked at the renowned Sadie's restaurant on Ocean Avenue in Carmel (now PortoBello).

Originally from the Philippines, Arzadon always wanted to own a restaurant, and now that he has one, family members help in running it.

Chef Aquino drew our attention to the oil portrait of Arzadon displayed to the right of the bar, and to an item on the menu, Adam's Burger, named after Arzadon's son, a freshman in college. It features grilled hamburger topped with bacon and a choice of cheeses.

There are three burgers on the menu, all of them with 8 ounces of "the best hamburger available . . . big, fat, juicy patties," Aquino said.

As a tribute to his heritage, Arzadon has Aquino prepare "Kapitan's Lumpia," a Philippine version of egg roll served with an Asian sauce, and a sweet and sour sauce. Sometime soon, "adobo" will be added to the menu: A Philippine national dish of braised chicken and pork with coconut milk.

But for the most part, Aquino prepares a standard bar menu of chicken wings, fried calamari, quesadillas, and hot dogs. The hot dogs are "gourmet hot dogs made by Sabrett, "New York's #1 hot dog, renowned for its famous snap." The Sabretts are served with mustard, red onion sauce and sauerkraut, "just like in New York," Aquino said.

A variety of salads, sandwiches, fish and chips and the aforementioned "serious stuff" round out the menu.

The restaurant, divided between dining area and bar, boasts two large televisions, a music center, and a Wii interactive game, which children particularly enjoy before and after dinner.

Aquino's favorite pastimes in his off hours are music — he serves as DJ at parties with friends — and watching soccer games. But mostly he likes being at home in Seaside with his wife, Margarita, and their three-year-old son, Alexander.

Ody's Tavern is located on San Carlos Avenue between Ocean and Seventh, next to the Gem Restaurant, and is open seven days a week for lunch (except Monday) from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. and dinner nightly from 5 to 9 p.m. The bar remains open until 1:30 a.m. For reservations or information, call (831) 626-6821.

The Christensen boys, both Monterey High School students, played on the football team, according to the school's 2007 year-book, which also lists them as sophomores that year although The Pine Cone was informed they are in different grades.

Suspect still on the loose
Warren said Monday detectives were working to identify a suspect, who used a .25 caliber handgun in the assault.

"We are pursuing our leads on this," Warren said.

Since no suspect had been identified, it was impossible to determine if the shooter was affiliated with a gang.

Violent incidents involving firearms are almost unheard of in Carmel, so a double shooting obviously alarmed nearby residents.

"We're now into eight years of this," Chaplin noted. "Everybody's tired. It's hard to maintain a level of enthusiasm."

Still, Chaplin is convinced proponents will eventually see the incorporation issue on the ballot.

"Hope springs eternal," he said.
Opponent Bob Sinotte admits the seemingly endless process has taken a toll on him as well.

"We are all weary," Sinotte said.
He also expressed confidence the valley's voters would decline the opportunity to secede from Monterey County.

"Cities are going bankrupt," Sinotte said.
"The vast majority of people in Carmel Valley are wondering what the heck these people are doing."

UKRAINE

and information technology. I worked in the IT department assisting students with their language as it pertained to computers. I also taught at a college that prepares Ukrainian students to teach English in grammar school.

For the first three months in Stakhanov, I lived with a host family as I had in Vasilkov. Then I was supposed to move into a flat of my own. Well, I'm the guest who came for three months and ended up staying almost three years. I lived with a wonderful family, a mom and her daughter, in a small house just outside of town. Slava, my host-mother, was a widow whose son, a sergeant in the Soviet army, was killed 24 years ago in Afghanistan. Lena, my host-sister, was a charming and attractive woman who works as a manager in a supermarket.

In addition to teaching, one of the joys I had was helping around the garden. We had very generous grapevines, apple trees and tomato plants. I had to help bring in the harvest. We also had a garden full of vegetables. In late summer, there was a flurry of activity while everything that could be was canned. We also prepared some delicious homemade wine and spirits.

I traveled to many places in the country. One of the good things about Ukraine is the railway system. It may not be the most comfortable or the smoothest ride, but it is inexpensive and you can get to practically every city in the country by rail. A trip from Stakhanov to Kiev, a distance of about 400 miles, cost just $20 for a berth in a four-person compartment.

The academy where I taught had been around a long time. The equipment and training materials were a old and outdated, but the students were bright and motivated and they made do. And they appreciated having a native English speaker around, which was pretty novel in a city that gets few tourists.

The time I spent in this country was by far more educational for me than it was for my students. Ukraine is a challenge in a lot of ways. It's developing and it needs a lot of work. The people I met were marvelous. The food was great. I was sad to leave.

OLD AND VERY HAPPY

The oldest Americans may well be the happiest. So says a study in which face-to-face interviews were conducted with 28,000 individuals between the ages of 18 and 88 assessing each person's state of happiness. While a certain amount of age-related stress is bound to occur, including aches and pains and the deaths of dear friends and family, older people seem to be more content with their lot than younger people are. Part of the reason for seniors' general feeling of contentment has to do with lowering expectations and accepting achievements. Overall, about one-third of Americans reported being happy at age 88, compared with about one-quarter of those age 18 to their early 20s.

Perhaps the greatest paradox in life is that people spend half of their lives wishing they were older, and the other half wishing they were younger! The advantages of getting older are numerous, and one is having more time for yourself and your family. For more information, please call VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES. We provide the best in home care and geriatric care management for seniors or adults with physical and/or mental challenges in and around Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties.

P.S. Generally speaking, the study mentioned above suggests that the odds of being happy increase five percent with every ten years of age.

Meg Parker Conners is an RN and owner of Victorian Home Care and Victorian Residential Care Homes. For assistance, call 655-1935.

WHAT WOOD YOU DO?
If you are considering a wood floor for your home, there is an alternative to hardwood flooring that offers several advantages. Laminate flooring is composed of several layers that are fused together. On top, there is a scratch-resistant wear layer that does not dent or wear away under heavy foot traffic as solid wood can. Beneath that is a design layer that mimics the look of the finest woods without defects or imperfections. Unlike hardwood flooring, laminate flooring will neither shrink nor expand due to temperature and humidity fluctuations. It is also easy to install (requiring no sanding or sealant application) and easy to clean. For these reasons and others, laminate flooring is fast becoming the popular choice for homes.

There are so many beautiful choices available today in flooring design. Before making a final decision, one that will remain with you for many years to come, be sure to discuss the options with someone with a reputation for knowledge, creativity, and quality resources. We hope you'll give us the opportunity to do what we do best - help you find the ideas and products that will transform your home into the one you've been dreaming of for years. It's easier than you think and begins with a simple visit to call to CARPETS & FLOOR, INC. We're open Monday through Saturday, 9-5.

HINT: All laminate flooring is installed as a "floating" floor, which means it is laid on top of the existing surface, making it most suitable for cement basement floors.

Dan Jones is the President of Carpets & Floors, Inc., located at 471 Lighthouse Ave. (between Drake and McClellan) here in Monterey. Ph: 372-2300.

Sandy Claws By Margot Petit Nichols

RILEY GOUGH, 8, a handsome and charming miniature poodle, loves all dogs with one unusual exception: He abhors French bulldogs. Not English bulls, or Boston bulls. Just French bulldogs.

His Mom Gay is at a loss to explain this peculiar antipathy to such a winsome breed. She thinks something traumatic must have happened between Riley and a French bulldog during the three years before she adopted him.

He was 5-1/2 years old when he packed his bags and checked out of the SPCA shelter. Mom adopted Riley as a companion for her mother, Bette Wadsworth, who lived in Pasadena. Mrs. Wadsworth has since passed away and Riley is living with Mom Gay here in Carmel.

Riley and Mom are great companions because "he thinks he's a person." He's aware of everything, very seldom barks, but frequently murmurs to himself and others in a beguiling monotone.

Riley has two neighborhood playmates, a beautiful cocker spaniel named Honey, and a soulful-eyed dachshund named Roxanne. They all went to the Fourth of July celebration in Devendorf Park last weekend where they watched sack races and met many other patriotically-attired dogs on the periphery of the green.

Recently, after cavorting across the sands of Carmel Beach (Riley is shown here on a beach bench with sea breezes blowing his fluffy ears about), Riley went to the Cypress Inn for tea. Mom was chatting with others at the inn when she noticed Riley was not in sight. An alert bellboy said he had seen a little gray poodle going upstairs to the guest suites. Mom dashed after him, but met him on his way back down after he found they weren't serving treats on the second floor.

‘I’m here, now stop’

IF SOMEONE moves next door to an airport, should they be taken seriously if they start complaining about airplane noise?

The answer is obviously No. When someone buys a home not far from a runway, he gets a discount equal to the reduced value of the home with a noise problem compared to one that’s quiet. So when he closes escrow, he benefits from the noise of airplanes near the home. As soon as he moves in, he may start paying the price for the discount he received, but this is a classic quid pro quo in which government (meaning taxpayers) should play no role or have any obligation.

Similarly, anyone living in the neighborhood around the Golden Bough Theater in Carmel must be assumed to have known when they moved in there was a movie and/or live theater nearby, with its concomitant traffic, parking and noise problems. Accordingly, they cannot expect city hall to be on their side if they start asking for the theater to be closed down just because they have arrived.

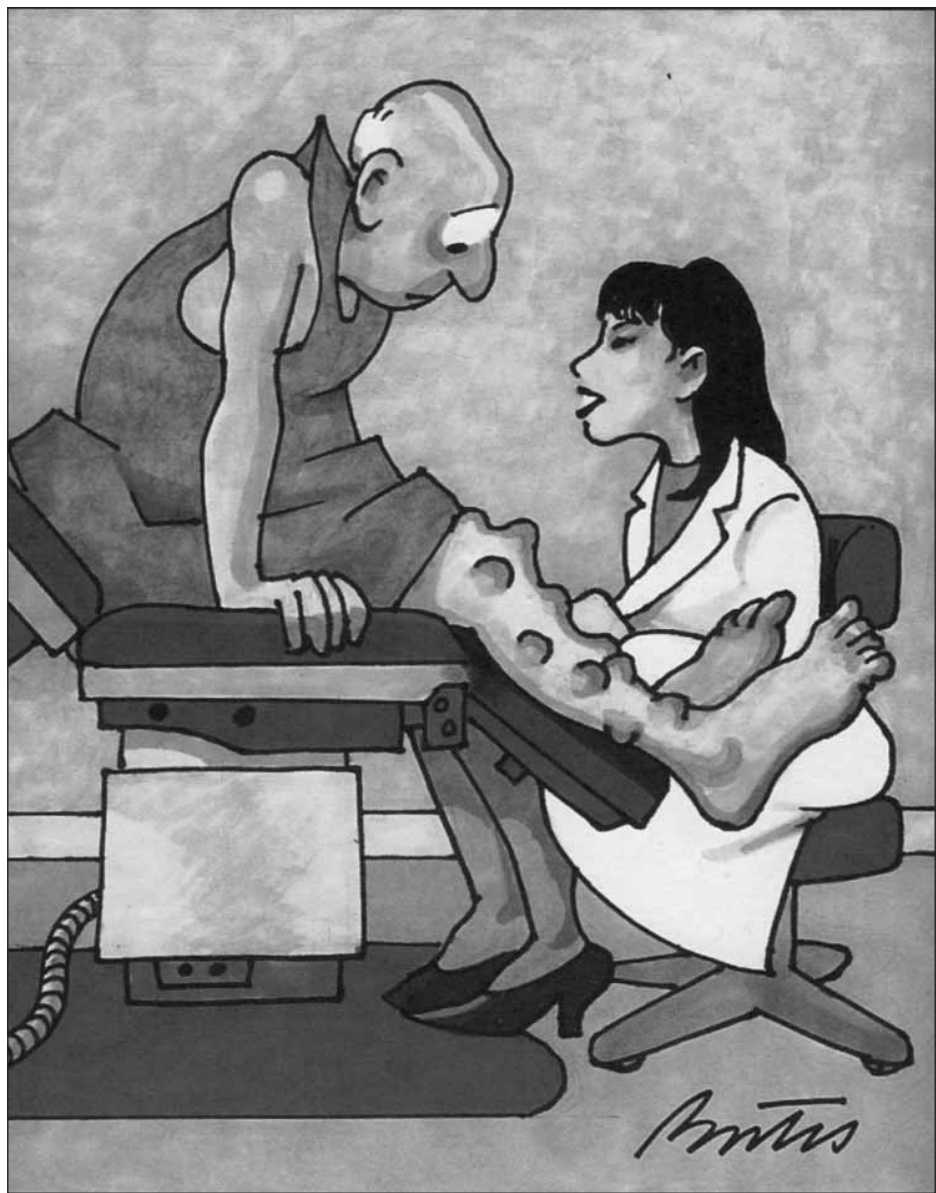

Nothing stops newcomers from trying to buy the theater — or anything else they don’t like operating near their home — and close it themselves. And they always have the option of getting involved in the theater company and trying to bring about modifications that would lessen its impact on their neighborhood.

Or they could just hope and pray that the theater company’s leadership would decide to do this on their own.

Fortunately for the people who live and own property near the Golden Bough today, this is exactly what has already happened. The board of directors and management of Pacific Repertory Theatre have launched an ambitious program to turn the Golden Bough from something of an embarrassment — replete with all sorts of in-your-face impacts on surrounding homes — into a modern show-place which promises to be much quieter, more attractive and generally friendlier to nearby residents.

Of course, PacRep should invite the neighbors to be part of the process of fine-tuning the design to make sure it’s as beneficial as possible, not only to the theater company and its audiences, but to the people who live on Casanova, Monte Verde and other nearby streets. And when those neighborhood meetings are convened, one of the first things out of the mouths of the residents should be, “Thank you so much for doing this!”

‘Better steward’

Dear Editor,

The letter by Charles Lester, Senior Deputy Director, California Coastal Commission, entitled, “Editorial ‘misses the mark,’” (July 4) definitely missed the mark! It’s bureaucratic arrogance to believe the coastal commission can be a better steward of and care more for other peoples property than the owners themselves!

‘Fire up the chain saws’

Dear Editor:

Thank you for publishing the letter of Charles Lester, Senior Deputy Director of the California Coastal Commission. Rarely have I had the opportunity to read a letter that contained so much arrogance, patronizing, mischaracterization, obfuscation, and blaming-the-victims mentality. His letter was a perfect example of why his (mis)leadership of the coastal commission has brought about so many legal challenges (all necessitating taxpayer’s money to defend).

Lester asserts, in so many words, that ratty-looking scrub brush is more important than peoples’ homes and lives. This precious “maritime chaparral” is so rare that it must be protected at all costs. If that means people get burned out of their homes because they aren’t allowed to properly clear their property, then so be it. He claims that the Coastal Commission hasn’t prevented anyone from clearing brush away from their homes, but he fails to mention that the designation as “environmentally sensitive habitat” (ESHA) is recent and not yet well defined. This simply means that the rules which will prohibit fire protection in these areas just haven’t been imposed yet.

Lester dismissively states that the fundamental issue is “... our desire to live and build our homes in known hazardous areas.” In fact, he uses the phrases “known hazardous areas” and “high fire risk areas” no fewer than seven times in his letter, making a comparison between living in Big Sur and the coastal zone of California with “New Orleans and the flood plains of the Mississippi.”

Lester also uses the terms “specialized native plant community,” “rare plant com-

Then, presumably after his thesaurus has had a chance to cool off, he strikes a rather hollow-sounding note of sympathy for the losses of homeowners in Big Sur. Give me a break.

My advice: Fire up the chain saws before it's illegal. Any "environmentally sensitive habitat" I find on my property is toast.

a housing shortage in California, and state law does not allow this city or any city to deny housing based on subjective environmental impacts."

At that point, another commissioner, Robin Wilson, said he was confused.

"If we are told by professional it's visually significant, I think we have to accept that," Wilson said. "But here we have a state law that says, if a project is housing, it overrides everything except health and safety."

Mandurrigo said he had tried to incorporate the existing building into the project, which he calls Plaza del Mar, but that just isn't feasible, especially with all the parking he wants to place underground.

And he said he had already revised the plans numerous times in response to requests from the city and neighbors.

"Mandurrigo has tried to get away from his bad architecture of the past," Hewer commented.

The latest elevations show modern elements, in a concession to Burde's work.

"There are vast improvements in the design from where we started a few years ago," agreed Strid. But he did not think the commission could find a legal justification for allowing the Burde building to be torn down.

Lombardo brought the discussion to a close by advising the commission to get more input on how to interpret state law.

"Don't take my word for it," Lombardo said. "It's something the city attorney has to advise you on."

At that, the commission quickly voted to continue the item until its August meeting.

New novel previews a world without lies

By CHRIS COUNTS

COULD LYING ever become obsolete? In author Michael Hemp's new novel, "The Nadjik Pheromone," advances in lie-detecting technology make it impossible to avoid telling the truth.

To celebrate the release of the book, The Works in Pacific Grove will host a reception Saturday, July 19, from 2 to 4 p.m.

According to Hemp, the technology isn't as far away as you might think.

"Sometime in our lifetime, we will be able to read a person's breath to see if they're telling the truth," Hemp said. "This isn't just fiction. The message here is that most of the technology described in the book already exists. We're talking about the ultimate lie detector test."

Hemp said he believes a time will come when a defendant will no longer be able to avoid answering a tough question.

"Even if someone refuses to talk, their body has already processed the question," he added. "There will be no place to hide from the truth."

"The Nadjik Pheromone" tells the story of a war correspondent named Michael Wolfson, whose passion to end torture, genocide and crimes against humanity leads to a scientific revolution in truth technology. Not surprisingly, government agencies, corporations and underworld organizations recognize the new technology as their doom.

The story begins in Bosnia and travels to New York, California (yes, the characters visit Carmel!), Hawaii and Pakistan. "The Nadjik Pheromone" ends with a special joint session in Congress.

An author, historian, publisher, marketing consultant and KRML radio broadcaster, Hemp lives in Carmel Valley.

The 360-page, self-published hard cover book sells for $26.95 and is available at Borders in Sand City.

Katy's serves up queen's portion for regal quest

BEST KNOWN for her movie star good looks, Queen Rania al-Abdullah of Jordan was spotted eating breakfast Monday at Katy's Place. Appropriately, she was served up a queen's portion of food.

"She ordered blueberry pancakes and a veggie Benedict," reported owner Randy Bennett.

Queen Rania came to Katy's on the recommendation of her husband, King Abdullah II. "He was here almost a year ago to the date," Bennett recalled.

Unlike her husband, the queen arrived with little fanfare. The king, meanwhile, showed up wearing a leather jacket and riding a Harley.

According to Bennett, the queen stayed at Bernardus Lodge during her recent visit to the area. "She's lovely person," he added. "She definitely has a regal bearing, but she and her husband also have a certain humility as well. I'm really delighted that she came."

Katy's Place is located on Mission Street between 5th and 6th.

Tim Allen
presents
Al Smith's
"Carmel Legends"

Chances are you don't know where FRASER WAY is. So pay attention and amaze your friends with your knowledge of Carmel trivia. It's a short, one-block street that runs from Casanova to Camino Real below 13th and just north of Santa Lucia. It's the only deviation from the otherwise geometrically perfect gridwork of streets laid out in 1902 by square-rigged developers Devendorf and Powers. And it's a monument to the great Fraser Feud of 1906-14. The Fraser brothers, Hector and Wilbur, owned the whole block, a gift from their late father, Hector, Sr. Wilbur had an ambition to create a public inn which he would call Fraser Ranch. "You're nuts," said Hector. "This is a quiet, residential community." The argument raged for 8 years and was settled only when Hector cut off the lower tip of the block and deed it to Wilbur "in fee simple." Today there are 4 houses on Fraser Way the dividing line, none of them an inn. And, if you believe this story, we have some stock in the new bridge that will cross Carmel Bay that we'd like to discuss with you.

"We want to show the transition from one composer to the next and one composition to the next," Weil offered.

Because of its peculiar assortment of texts, the German Requiem, one of Johannes Brahms’ most inspired works, begs to know what precedent it can claim. Find out why this work, above all others, is beloved of timpani players. The German Requiem shares its program with Bach’s cantata “Ich hatte viel bekümmernis,” similarly grieving and consoling, but with a rousing final affirmation, “Worthy is the Lamb that was slain!”

Even during Vivaldi's lifetime, the German composers — especially Bach — went about usurping the Italian concerto, sending it on its way to into the aching emotions of Mozart and the grandeur of Beethoven and Brahms. The concerto had its origins in the polychoral works of Gabrieli and Schütz, and found its classic architecture in Corelli. Discover how the concerto found its way to the keyboard and in turn revealed some of the most expressive and unforgettable music ever written. This program marks the long-awaited return to the festival of the piano.

The greatest and most original German composer of the 17th century, Heinrich Schütz, was the first to compose a "German Requiem." It contains some of the most moving and expressive music of the early Baroque, and stands shoulder to shoulder with other Schütz masterpieces on this program, "Songs of Solace," at the historic Mission. Motets by Bach and 20th century master Hugo Distler directly echo the influence of Schütz, born, near Leipzig, exactly 100 years before the Festival's namesake.

Brandenburg Concertos No. 1-6

Andrew Arthur, director; Members of the Festival Orchestra

The six Brandenburg Concertos stand at the pinnacle of the form first perfected by Corelli. But unlike Corelli's and Handel's concerti exclusively for strings, these works deploy an entire rainbow of instruments, from horns (in the first) to the outrageous harpsichord solo (in the fifth.) Each concerto is also distinctive in its character of expression, sometimes witty (the second) and at others darkly "antique" (the sixth.) No other collection of concerti grossi in the Baroque shows such range of ideas and effects.

Bruno Weil crosses "Symphonic Bridges" from the galant style of Christian Bach to the explosive fury of Beethoven's Egmont Overture. The flowering of the Classical style is fully explored by way of Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 14 in E-flat and the third of Haydn's London symphonies, No. 95 in C Minor. If this Mozart and this Haydn are overshadowed by their more famous brethren symphonies and concertos, discover again the treasures each actually contains. They were, after all, among the most popular works by both composers when new.

Bach Festival

Johann Sebastian Bach and why we honor him

By DAVID MILLER

THE MAN whose musical genius is celebrated at the Carmel Bach Festival, and who inspired generations of other great composers, has a reputation for having been a dour, serious person who worked hard all the time and didn't laugh much.

While we will never know how much laughter there was in the Bach household for the simple reason that laughter leaves no record of itself, we do know that certain well documented events of his childhood would have made any one of us into a humorless person, if not outright depressed.

Think of it: In 1695, young Johann Sebastian lost his mother, then his father remarried within a few months, only to die soon after. Bach was, at the age of 10, left in the care of a stepmother whom he had only just met.

Even for the 17th century — when serious illness routinely carried people off while their families watched helplessly, waiting for antibiotics to be invented and invoking the Will of God — this was serious stuff.

Perhaps inevitably, the situation with the stepmother didn't work out and the 10-year-old was soon bundled off to live with his brother, Johann Christoph, then 24 and just married.

Johann Christoph, like virtually the whole family, was in the music business, making a living playing, singing and composing in the service of a church, duke, or town.

This big brother became Bach's harpsichord and composition teacher and, surely in an effort to keep his pupil from outgrowing his instruction too quickly, did not allow the youngster to study a manuscript containing pieces by several then-famous composers. Johann Sebastian tried to get around this rule by copying the forbidden pieces by moonlight over several months. Of course his disobedience was punished and the copy destroyed, which must have been heartbreaking, yet another assault on a normal childhood.

Childhood ended

By the time J. S. Bach was 15, whatever childhood he had was over. He moved to Lüneburg in the north of Germany to sing in the Matins Choir, first as a boy soprano, then as a tenor. It must have been clear to him even then that his whole life would be music, whatever form it might take: singing, fiddling, playing keyboards, teaching, arranging and composing.

He was, at 15, a hardworking, professional, underpaid musician, and would remain so for the rest of his life, moving from one North German town to another, following the work.

Bach made his music in the service of orthodox Lutheranism, which was rather high-church with elaborate music, as opposed to the then-fashionable Pietism, in which music played a much smaller role.

Pietism, a bit like present-day Charismatic Christianity, with its emphasis on a personal relationship to God, may not have gone as far as altar calls and speaking in tongues, but it was of that general tendency.

Lutheran Orthodoxy — a direct descendant of Martin Luther's break with the Catholic Church in 1521 — was Bach's faith, and it went for solemnity and glory in the service of God, and, above all, more music. Did he adhere to the faith because that's where the work was?

On the contrary, Bach evidently was completely sincere, and, lucky man, never seems to have had doubts.

It is well documented that Bach didn't suffer fools gladly. He hated having to teach Latin and music to unruly teenagers, and he regularly refused to do so, to the repeated distress of his employers. He also couldn't bear inferior musicians and, in a story on which all biographers agree, once took off his wig and threw it at an incompetent harpsichordist!

He sometimes showed an indifference to the rules, as when he asked for, and got, a month off from Arnstadt to go to Lübeck and hear the Danish composer and organist Buxtehude, and showed up back at work four months later, not even having written to let his boss know.

We know how important Bach's music is, but in his day, he was unfavorably compared to Telemann and Kuhnau, and many others who are now completely forgotten.

Despite all of this, Bach was not a revolutionary. He accepted his calling and his station. He set himself the task of making his faith audible, and succeeded to an extent that is still not completely known.

His music speaks strongly to our secular age, meaning even more than it meant to the devout Lutherans of 1750 Leipzig. Who knows what comfort and inspiration people will draw from him in the future. •

This painting by Balthasar Denner is believed to show J.S. Bach with three of his 11 sons.

PROGRAMS

enjoy the exposition of the music of Bach and his followers.

Gordon said one outstanding example is the chance to hear Bach's masterpiece, the B Minor Mass, in the Saturday evening program, followed by Brahms's German Requiem on Sunday afternoon (July 19-20 and 26-27 and August 2-3). "Hearing them both in one weekend is something you could only do at a festival," he said.

Another wonderful example is the Tuesday night program, "Aha! Concerto."

"The program has several aspects, including the development of the concerto and the transition from the harpsichord to the fortepiano to the modern piano," Weil said.

Not only does the Aha! Concerto program feature outstanding musical performances, the audience also has the chance to put the pieces in context.

"We'll be reading from letters and explaining why the composers wrote what they did," Gordon said. "It's not a lecture concert, it's an entertainment. It's the third year we've been doing this format and I love it."

Weil also said the Thursday night program, at which all six Brandenburg Concertos will be performed, is unusual.

And Gordon said Friday night's program promises to be memorable.

"We have these fabulous symphonies, by Bach's son and Haydn, along with Beethoven's Egmont Overture and a Mozart piano concerto," Gordon said. "It's the first time we'll be using the Carmel Music Society's Hamburg Steinway in 15 years."

Opening night, July 19, includes a pre-concert reception — which offers a perfect opportunity for patrons to meet the Bach Fest's new Executive Director, Camille Kolles.

"We are certainly lucky to have her," Weil commented.
