Big Sur chief says the next fire could be worse

Town hall meetings set with Potter, Farr

By CHRIS COUNTS

ALMOST 400 square miles were burned, but in the wake of the colossal Basin Complex and Indian fires — and with the lives of many Big Sur residents returning to normal — a group of local officials, firefighters and residents are already planning for the next fire.

Fifth District Supervisor Dave Potter and U.S. Rep. Sam Farr will co-chair the first of two special Big Sur Multi-Agency Advisory Council meetings Monday, Aug. 4, at the Pfeiffer Big Sur Lodge Conference Center. A second meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 12.

The first meeting will focus on what worked, what didn't work and "what we need to improve," according to organizers.

Frank Pinney is one of those thinking about the next fire. The chief of the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade, he met last week with a fire ecology consultant who is experienced in preparing community fire plans. He is also talking to the Big Sur Land Trust about a grant proposal that could help fund the development of such a plan.

After the recent fires scorched more than 250,000 acres, and with most vegetation gone over an estimated 90 percent of the Ventana Wilderness, there is little left in the Big Sur backcountry to burn. But the two most populated parts of the coast — the Palo Colorado area and residential neighborhoods located west of Highway 1 — were completely untouched by the blaze. For residents who live up dirt roads surrounded by dry brush, the threat of another devastating wildfire in the near future is still very real. And the next fire could burn many more homes.

WITH VAST stretches of mountainous terrain in the Carmel River watershed now devoid of vegetation, officials with California American Water Co. are worried that debris from the fire could reduce the storage capacity of an already shrinking Los Padres Dam reservoir, making it harder to keep the Carmel River running during the summer.

The situation puts the water company in the ironic position of hoping for no major downpours this winter.

Steelhead population sets record

By KELLY NIX

THE POPULATION of steelhead trout in the Carmel River this summer is the highest it's been in nearly two decades, leaving local wildlife experts baffled.

Using nets and quick arms, rescue workers in Carmel Valley have captured a record number of steelhead trout.

Since May 14, a record 56,000 steelhead have been rescued from the river, according to Kevan Urquhart, senior fisheries biologist for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

"We really don't know why it's happening," Urquhart said. "I'm scratching my head."

Young steelhead trout in the Carmel River — listed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service as a threatened even though they are one of the world's most plentiful fish species — are counted by MPWMD workers and volunteers from the Carmel River Steelhead Association as they rescue them from the receding river each summer. The rescues began in 1989.

By the end of August, rescuers expect to save as many as 80,000 steelhead, compared to a previous record of just under 40,000 in 2003, Urquhart said.

While 800 fish rescued per day is considered good in average years, Urquhart the number of fish rescued this season is beyond anybody's expectations. "We are rescuing 2,000 fish a day," he said.

The water level in the Carmel River — the Monterey Peninsula's main water source — becomes low particularly in the summer because there is no rain, while pumping for human use is at its peak.

And, although heavy winter rains can significantly benefit the steelhead population in the summer, the fish have miraculously thrived despite last

Parolee flees, is nabbed after cellphone stop

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PACIFIC GROVE police chased down and arrested a parolee wanted on a $1 million warrant last week after a sergeant stopped him on Jewell Avenue for talking on his cell phone while driving, according to Cmdr. John Nyunt.

Just after 5 p.m. July 24, Cpl. Roxane Viray reportedly spotted Pacific Grove resident Robert Odonnell, 42, holding a cell phone to his ear as he drove down the street — which became illegal July 1.

He provided Viray with a temporary driver's license, but when she walked back to her patrol car to see if he was wanted on any warrants, he got out of his car, saying something about having to pick up his kids, according to Nyunt.

"And he basically ran away," he said.

In the meantime, Viray learned from the records check that the suspect was a parolee at large wanted for larceny on a $1 million warrant out

Tomato fanatic bids adieu to the fest, but not the fruit

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MAN who transformed a backyard potluck into the nation's premier homage to the tomato is retiring.

Gary Ibsen, whose expansive enthusiasm and organizational skills helped popularize heirloom tomatoes and the festival he devoted to them, said the Sept. 14 Carmel TomatoFest will be his last.

"My health has had some challenges I have to pay attention to, and they demand I step back from the 10 months it takes me to plan the TomatoFest each year," Ibsen said last week.

He declined to provide details about his condition, but said he began contemplating retirement from the festival, which he has run for 17 years, after his most recent visit to the hospital in April.

"I made a promise to my family I would focus more on them," he said. Also, the TomatoFest, sponsored by NatureSweet, has achieved much of what he envisioned.

"It's provided what I wanted to provide ... bringing people from outside the community into the community." Last year's event drew participants from 36 states and six countries, accord-

Inn for Seniors building in escrow

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE FORMER Carmel Inn for Seniors on San Carlos Street, vacant since owner Ron Chaplan shut it down four years ago because it was losing money, is now in escrow.

After Chaplan evicted 19 elderly residents and closed the business because "the economics of the situation just made it an untenable situation," as he described it at the time, he sought permission to raze the building and replace it with condominiums.

The city ultimately approved complicated plans for demolishing the two-story, Mediterranean-style structure, located on two parcels a block-and-a-half from Ocean Avenue, and replacing it with nine condominiums and a parking garage. But work never commenced and the building has been for sale for a couple of years.

A sign outside the building says, "In Escrow," but real estate agent Darryl Kenyon with A.G. Davi said neither the potential purchaser, nor Chaplan, would discuss the plans for the property.

"The owner doesn't want to share any of the details with anyone," he said. "Both the buyer and seller are very private about their intentions and financial affairs. I can't provide any details."

According to Carmel Planning and Building Services Manager Sean Conroy, the property is in the residential-commercial district, so it could be used for living space and light commercial, such as offices, but no retail. It also could reopen as a senior residential home.

It used to be a Lexus

A SEDAN caught fire in the driveway of the Riverwood complex on Rio Road Tuesday afternoon, summoning three fire engines as it threatened — but ultimately did not harm — the buildings nearby.

According to a resident, Monterey County Sheriff's deputies were first on the scene and searched the grounds in vain for outdoor fire extinguishers after using their own but failing to put out the flames. The crew at the Rio Road fire station was away on another call, so fire crews from Carmel Highlands, the City of Carmel and the Carmel Hill station arrived several minutes later. Several firefighters worked together to douse the flames, force open the hood and ensure the fire was completely out.

Although the driveway asphalt probably suffered heat damage, and the car was a total loss, nothing else was damaged and no one was hurt.

According to a sheriff's deputy, the apparent cause was oil leaking onto the hot engine of the Lexus.

Monterey Folk - A little known Bob Dylan sang three of his songs at the Monterey Folk Festival 45 years ago, but the restive audience generally ignored him, talking and laughing louder than he was singing. His local host, Joan Baez, already a diva of folk music, walked unannounced onto the stage and told the audience to listen. Dylan had something important to say about a better world. She stayed on stage with Dylan to sing harmony on a song he had taught her that afternoon, "With God on Our Side," and the 20,000 people in the arena cheered wildly, according to David Hajdu's book, "Positively 4th Street." Dylan was invited to the festival because he wrote "Blowin' in the Wind," a song that headliners Peter, Paul and Mary had just turned into a hit. After the festival, he stayed with Baez in her rented house in Carmel Highlands, teaching her more of his songs. A few weeks later, she took him on a concert tour to introduce him to her large audiences. (Next week: Joan Baez in Carmel)

Bill Bates' health improves

By KELLY NIX

WELL WISHERS from across the world are posting notes of love and support for Pine Cone cartoonist Bill Bates, who is still in the hospital after a heart attack in July.

Bates, 78, has been in the hospital since July 1, when he had the attack while painting a sign for his first art gallery at San Carlos and Seventh in Carmel.

While a procedure to repair Bates' heart was successful, he came down with a staphylococcus infection in his lungs, a life-threatening condition, which has left him in intensive care.

News of Bates' condition has drawn support from his fans, not only those familiar with his work for The Pine Cone, but from his numerous cruises around the world when he served as shipboard artist.

A noted psychologist and Pacific Grove resident, Russ Volckmann, included an item about Bates in an email to the 2,300 worldwide subscribers of his Integral Leadership Review online newsletter, which publishes Bates' cartoons with captions written by Volckmann.

The story drew about 50 email responses from people who have seen Bates' cartoons in the publication but don't know the artist

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THREE WEEKS after two teenagers were shot during a crowded party at their Carmel home, Monterey County Sheriff’s deputies have not made an arrest in the case.

Joey Christensen, 17, and his younger brother, Daniel, were seriously injured July 13 after they asked some unwanted partygoers to leave their home on Handley Drive. One of the disgruntled partyers shot them, according to police reports.

Their parents were out of town at the time, and a crowd estimated at 100 to 150 teenagers gathered after word spread that the boys were having a party.

According to The Monterey County Herald, Joey Christensen is quickly recovering from his wounds and was able to attend football practice at Monterey High this week. Using a cane and with a bullet still in his back, Christensen feels intense pain every time he stands, but he hopes to be able to rejoin the football team in a few months,

The Herald reported. A large photo on the front page of the paper’s July 30 sports section showed him next to a yellow goal post.

Daniel Christensen’s injuries also aren’t “life-threatening,” the paper reported.

And the newspaper said Joey Christensen took responsibility for the party that nearly cost him and his brother their lives, and put dozens of other teens in danger.

“That was my mistake,” Joey Christensen told The Herald about the party. “People showed up that I had no idea who they were.”

After asking the unwanted partyers to leave, as he stood at the end of his driveway, “The next thing I saw was the flash of a gun,” he said. “I remember being shot.”

As screams broke out in the house, and before sheriff’s deputies arrived, both Christensen boys were taken to the hospital by friends.

While he was hospitalized, Joey Christensen got a lot of visitors, his mother, Tammy Christensen, said.

“I was amazed at how many of his friends, teammates and coaches came by,”

Cause of activation was a heat detector in the kitchen of a restaurant which had activated the alarm due to a malfunction of the cook line hood system fan. As a repair technician was already on scene to repair the hood fan, the restaurant manager was advised to shut down the cook line until repairs could be made to the fan system, avoiding further alarm activation.

Two-time survivor rallies troops to Stand Up To Cancer

By MARY BROWNFIELD

‘WHEN THE doctor tells you, ‘You have cancer,’ it doesn’t make for a good day,’ said Carmelite Carl Iverson, and he should know. “I’ve had that happen to me twice.”

The first time was four decades ago. The second was in 2000, and he’s surviving that, too.

Iverson’s experiences, as well as the illness’ impact on the lives of his friends and loved ones, are driving his efforts to garner local support for Stand Up To Cancer, a national campaign by news anchors from CBS, NBC and ABC to raise money and assemble an expert team to find a cure.

“The three anchors — Brian Williams, Charles Gibson and Katie Couric — have all had some experience with cancer,” he explained. “We’ve all lost friends to cancer. I could make a big list myself.”

Iverson has long contemplated the best way to raise money for the cause, and last fall hosted a party that generated about $4,000. But he concluded joining the large Stand Up To Cancer campaign, which will culminate with a special broadcast on the three networks Sept. 5, was the way to go. ABC, CBS and NBC will donate one hour of simultaneous, commercial-free prime-time to rally support for “ending cancer’s reign as a leading cause of death.” The special will feature live performances by famous recording artists, and appearances by film and TV stars.

“I’m trying to get a local effort going,” said Iverson, who spoke at a recent Carmel City Council meeting and is involved in several local groups that might lend an ear as well.

He’s also sponsored his brother’s racecar, which has the Stand Up To Cancer logo on its side, and plans to organize a rally for a couple dozen auto enthusiasts who support the cause. (One of his close friends is John Kerby-Miller, a longtime vintage car racer who ran his 31st and final Monterey Historic Automobile Race last summer after deciding to retire due to his struggles with bone cancer. Iverson hopes Kerby-Miller will help lead the rally.)

“I would hope to have everyone in Carmel know about Stand Up To Cancer,” he said. “We will find out whether people really want to donate enough to take cancer off the street.”

According to the campaign’s organizers, the human genome project unlocked many of the keys to understanding how cancer works.

“For the first time, we can envision the possibility of stopping cancer in its tracks,” they wrote.

Cancer is “something solvable, that could be controlled, like hypertension. It’s not a death sentence,” Iverson added.

The American Association for Cancer Research will administer the funds raised, and its advisory committee of scientists and patient advocates will determine which projects show the most promise of bearing fruit.

Iverson encouraged everyone interested to visit www.standup2cancer.org. “Wouldn’t it be nice to put money into something where we could make that difference?”

NEW MAP REVEALS TOWN'S SECRET PASSAGES AND COURTYARDS

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

'IF ONE thing defines Carmel-by-the-Sea, it is its charming courtyards and secret passageways."

So commences the text of the first map exclusively devoted to Carmel's treasury of courtyards that are replete with unique shops, galleries and restaurants.

The map encompasses the heart of downtown Carmel, from Monte Verde to the west, to Junipero to the east — an area that includes a surprising 42 courtyards and passageways.

Creation of the courtyards map came about when tenants of side-street businesses noted that many visitors stay on Ocean Avenue, rarely venturing onto other streets, a subject discussed at recent Carmel Chamber of Commerce and city economic development meetings.

The map was conceived by a mother/daughter team, Margot Petit Nichols and Francesca Hawthorne, co-owners of Lily's Chance Discoveries Antiques and Gifts in Su Vecino Court, a block off Ocean between Lincoln and Dolores. "We brought up the need for such a map to our chamber of commerce and got their blessing to produce it," said Hawthorne, who did the map's artwork.

A short essay, written by Nichols and extolling the delights of exploring the courtyards with their small, atmospheric places of business, appears alongside the map.

The map is available at the chamber of commerce, city hall, First Murphy House, Harrison Memorial and Park Branch libraries, Carmel Art Association, hotels and inns, and at the courtyard businesses listed on the map. Revenue from the listings covered the cost of printing, Hawthorne said.

"We're also sending the map to all travel writers in California, hoping to gain some mention in newspapers and magazines," said Nichols.

Mother and daughter are also building a website, www.carmelcourtyards.com, with a detailed guide to each of the 42 courtyards and passageways.

"We think this visual aid will draw many visitors to Carmel and to our courtyards — visitors who research Carmel on the Internet before coming to town," Hawthorne said.

Nichols, a longtime Pine Cone columnist, is perhaps best known as writer and photographer for the paper's weekly feature, Sandy Claws.

The free map can be requested by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Lily's Chance Discoveries Antiques and Gifts, P.O. Box 5602, Carmel-by-the-Sea, CA 93921.

of Baldwin Park in Southern California, according to Nyunt. The computer also indicated he was an escape risk.

Odonnell fled through the nearby municipal golf course, and Viray described him to the dispatcher as she and other officers went after him. An off-duty sergeant, who was in a public works vehicle at the time, also helped, as did Nyunt and P.G. Police Chief Darius Engles.

They cornered Odonnell on the beach at Ocean View Boulevard and Siren Street, but couldn't see him because of the cliffs, crevasses and outcroppings of rock, so they requested Seaside P.D.'s K-9 unit.

"He had hidden himself between some boulders," Nyunt said.

Officers also discovered Odonnell called his wife to ask her to pick up the car he ditched on Jewell. The cops had the keys, and the sergeant driving the public works vehicle went to Odonnell's address and saw her leaving. He alerted Engles and Nyunt, who asked her where she was going. She admitted she planned to retrieve the car.

An officer at the beach had glimpsed a bit of Odonnell's white T-shirt and then saw it disappear among the rocks, giving police an idea where he was. When Seaside officer Jackie Meroney arrived with her dog, the K-9 quickly found Odonnell in his hiding spot.

"The dog barked, and they ordered him out," Nyunt said. Police arrested Odonnell and took him to Monterey County Jail on charges of resisting arrest, obstruction and the outstanding $1 million warrant.

His wife was not charged.

Insects invade Pacific Grove Natural History Museum

By KELLY NIX

BUGS. MANY of us don't want to get close to them. But a new exhibit at the P.G. Museum of Natural History makes it possible to do so without the creepy crawly factor. From menacing scorpions, to beautiful butterflies, "The Lives of Insects: The Close-Up Photography of E.S. Ross, Ph.D.," offers striking details of bugs from a man who has spent his life getting as close to them as possible.

"Ross is one of the pioneers in this type of close-up photography," said Bob Snyder, the museum's interim director. "The photographs are just exceptional."

The exhibit, which opened last week and runs until Oct. 25, displays 90 photos that show in extreme detail thorax, heads and legs of butterflies, bees, wasps, ants and other bugs. It also shows the sometimes dramatic activities of insects on plants, in nests and below the ground.

"He has photos of ant-eating aphids," said Snyder, offering an example of the exhibit. "It's just amazing detail."

Ross, 93, calls the exhibit, "random, unpredictable and, at times, startlingly beautiful."

But it's also a chance to get acquainted with some of the state's native insects.

Visitors to the exhibit will see the fascinating plight of a checkered beetle covered in pollen sitting on a mallow flower, and the eerie image of a California Forest scorpion carrying her translucent young on her back.

"It's like a walk along a Central Californian trail," Ross said.

A bugs life

Ross, who studied entomology in the 1930s at UC Berkeley, later served as a malaria expert in New Guinea and the Philippines.

After he was unable to find action photos of insects to accompany the numerous lectures he was giving, Ross began taking photos of the insects he taught about.

After World War II, and the introduction of the slow reflex camera with Ross' innovation of flash photography, the entomologist was able to capture detail of insects never seen before.

Ross believes no picture is complete without an appropriate insect in it.

"Who wants a garden without actors or drama?" he asked.

His work attracted the attention of the National Geographic Society, which gave him a grant in the late 1950s to travel to Africa to collect and photograph embiids, insects also called "web spinners," of which Ross is the world's leading expert.

Ross is credited with having published the first book on the mastery of insect photography, and his photos have appeared in numerous magazines and books.

Ross, who lives in Mill Valley, has collected more than 350,000 insect specimens, representing more than 1,000 species. Even at the age of 93, he still pursues entomology and photography, and is working on the definitive work on web spinners.

Ross plans to publish several more books before he's 100.

For more information about the exhibit, call (831) 648-5716 or visit www.pgmuseum.org. The museum is located at Forest and Central avenues, and is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

winter's below-average rainfall.

"We have been getting the highest number of juveniles since the program began," Urquhart said. "There is no clear explanation for the sudden boom."

And because the district doesn't have the funds to perform research, the reason for this year's glut may never be known.

"We do basic monitoring of the Carmel River," he said, "but we are not funded to do a lot of applied research."

The steelhead population this year is so great that the Sleepy Hollow Steelhead Rearing Facility, where the fish are taken after being rescued, is near capacity.

The MPWMD assigns five employees who work four to five days a week to rescue steelhead. Volunteers from the Carmel River Steelhead Association perform rescues a couple of times a week, said group spokesman Frank Emerson.

Of the tens of thousands of fish rescued this summer, Urquhart said MPWMD employees placed about 9,600 into the Carmel River Lagoon, which is where the fish would naturally end up if they didn't have to be rescued.

The CRSA, which separately counts the fish it rescues, has also placed about 9,000 fish into the lagoon.

Emerson said steelhead raised in the lagoon have a higher survival rate and generally are healthier fish.

"They are bigger, fatter and stronger," he said. "A fish that comes out of the upper watershed tends to be skinny, and its survival rate is much lower in the ocean."

EROSION

Catherine Bowie, community relations manager for Cal Am. "If there is a big storm, we could lose quite a bit of storage capacity."

According to Darby Fuerst, interim general manager for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, several factors will determine how much silt will flow into the reservoir as a result of the fire. "How severe was the burn?" Fuerst asked. "How much remedial action will be taken? And how intense will the rains be?"

A repeat of 1978?

The Marble Cone Fire of 1977 — which burned about 16,000 of the Carmel River watershed's 26,000 acres — could provide a measure of how much erosion Cal Am can expect to encounter this coming winter and spring, particularly if Monterey County receives above-average rainfall.

The reservoir lost about 180 million gallons, or 550 acre-feet, of capacity in 1978 as a result of erosion caused by the Marble Cone Fire. To put that number in perspective, the dam held 3,033 acre-feet when it was completed in 1949. Due to decades of silt accumulation, in 1998 the reservoir was down to just 1,569 acre-feet. Bowie said her company now estimates that the reservoir's storage capacity has dwindled to 1,478 acre-feet.

(The older San Clemente dam, about four miles downstream, is almost completely silted.)

While Fuerst conceded that this year's fire could add "hundreds" of acre-feet of silt to the reservoir, he said the Marble Cone Fire deposited an extraordinary amount of silt because the fire came late in the season, and rains came early in the fall, allowing officials little time to enact erosion-control measures.

But according to Bowie, "there isn't a lot we can do," to stop the erosion. "Seeding [the burned hillsides] doesn't appear to be effective or feasible."

Bowie said Cal-Am is planning a dredging study next year to determine if it's possible to increase the reservoir's capacity.

Fuerst said recovering lost storage would have little bearing on the Monterey Peninsula's water woes. He said the primary benefit of increasing the reservoir's storage would be for "instream habitats" by making more water available to release during the summer.

Feds to survey damage

From its source at Church Creek Divide — located deep in the Santa Lucia mountains — the Carmel River meanders north through Pine Valley before dropping into a steep, wooded canyon. About 10 miles from its source, it reaches the reservoir. Virtually all of that terrain was burned between June 21 and July 25.

Most of the land above the reservoir — and within the watershed — falls under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Forest Service. The agency is planning to send a burn area response team into the area Aug. 11, according to Monterey District Ranger John Bradford.

"A big part of their job will be mapping burn intensity," Bradford explained. "They'll also use computer models to assess how much sediment will be coming down into the watershed."

The burn area response team will make recommendations to Cal Am and the MPWMD regarding remedial measures that could help reduce the flow of debris into the watershed, Bradford said.

Replenishing the lagoon

In part, because of the large number of steelhead released into the lagoon this summer, the CRSA is trying to find a water source near the lagoon to pump in fresh water to improve its quality. "We are at a turning point in the lagoon," Emerson said. "How do we maintain the water quality for the fish who have been in there all summer?"

Using well water in the summer would help cool the lagoon and offset its salinity, both of which are bad for the steelhead's habitat, Emerson said.

Although Urquhart said the district supports the use of wells to improve the lagoon's water quality, there are challenges in that effort. For example, there are no wells near the lagoon that could provide the amount of water necessary to replenish it. "The request they are making is good," Urquhart said. "But the devil is in the details."

However, once the Carmel Area Wastewater District plant completes a reverse osmosis facility to purify water for golf courses in Pebble Beach, the facility will have excess capacity which can be diverted to the lagoon. Permits for that effort have to be obtained from the Regional Water Quality Control Board.

RILEY SLADE, 1 year old, is a border collie border terrier mix. He was chosen from the local SPCA by his brother, 15-year-old Dan, because Riley, at 2 months of age, was the dog exhibiting the most energy. He hasn't let up yet.

When we encountered Riley and Dan on the walking path above Carmel Beach, they were with Harrison Kootz, 13, Dan's friend and classmate. Both young men are entering Carmel High School as freshmen this year.

Dan said Riley is a "really nice dog and fun to play with." Soccer is Riley's preferred sport: He kicks the ball around with his feet, then grabs it in his mouth and taunts Dan with it until he joins in.

Sister Sarah, 18, who soon will be entering a school of photography in Santa Rosa, takes Riley for long, exciting discovery walks in Garland Park. Between his beach jaunts and park outings, Riley has the best of all possible worlds.

His diet is a bit unusual because he's allergic to wheat in dog food, so he fills up on greens and steak. The allergy was diagnosed when his ears began to itch and hurt. They turned red on the inside, and Riley frantically shook his head trying to rid himself of the discomfort.

Aside from nipping at people's heels in a pupperly attempt at herding, Riley has other delightful traits: a charming rough coat, and a tongue that turns up at the end like a birthday party tickler.

At home, Riley is fascinated with the two parakeets, Twister and Baby Blue. Twister earned his name by clutching his perch loosely, falling forward and spinning around it. Riley thinks watching Twister is better than staring at TV any day.

ing to Ibsen.

His leaving the TomatoFest — which he said could continue if someone else wants to take over — doesn't mean he's leaving tomatoes. This season, Ibsen is cultivating more than 600 varieties of certified organic heirlooms from seeds acquired from small farms all over the world. After the September event, he and Dagma Lacey will spend three months harvesting the seeds, some of which will be sold online (www.tomatofest.com) while the rest will be given to 250 school, community and urban gardens all over the world via the TomatoFest Seed Donations Program.

The charitable effort helps preserve varieties of heirloom tomatoes while helping children and adults learn the importance and benefits of organic gardening and sustainable agriculture, according to Ibsen. "It is especially important to us, particularly in this time of hardship for many, that we do all we can to support people's ability to provide for themselves healthy foods through healthy gardening," he said.

He also hopes to write more books to follow up "The Great Tomato Book" he co-authored with Joan Nielsen and published via Ten Speed Press in 1999.

From backyard to big bash

Ibsen wasn't always a nut for heirloom tomatoes. A long-time Carmel Valley resident, he was growing hybrid varieties in his well stocked garden when a retired Portuguese farmer turned him on to the vintage varieties.

"One of those days when I was coveting his garden, he decided he was going to send me home with heirloom tomato seedlings," he recalled. "There were six varieties. I went home and planted them, not knowing what would happen."

Months later, the abundant vines produced tomatoes unlike any Ibsen had ever grown — or tasted.

While many fall into the classic red category, heirlooms span the color wheel, from almost black, to brownish red, vibrant green and yellow. Stripes, streaks and bursts of color adorn many, and their shapes and sizes are almost as diverse. Tender-skinned and ripened on the vine, heirloom tomatoes' bright flavors range from slightly tart and acidic, to full, rich and sweet, unlike mild hybrids — and a world apart from most of the tomatoes sold at grocery stores.

"At harvest time, my whole world shifted upon tasting these tomatoes, because the flavors were so much more complex and different," he said. "I decided to share some of these wonderful flavors with a few chef friends in the community."

So he invited them and their families to a potluck party in his backyard. The year was 1991, and about 50 people showed up. The party grew and moved to a former egg ranch in mid-valley, though it remained a private, invitation-only gathering that maxed out at about 250 people.

Opening the tomato extravaganza to the public was KGO radio personality Gene Burns' idea. When Ibsen said he couldn't afford to invite anyone else, Burns suggested asking them to pay, and Ibsen decided it should also benefit charities. The Carmel TomatoFest had become official.

"When Sunset Magazine started writing about us in the early years, they were wild about this 'new' thing of heirloom tomatoes," Ibsen said. The New York Times, Travel + Leisure and other major publications picked up the story.

Later, Quail Lodge head Ed Haber invited Ibsen to hold his fest at the expansive grassy Quail Meadows, and it continued there for four or five years until relocating to its current venue, the driving range outside Quail's golf clubhouse.

"We limited it to about 3,000 people, and that's where it stayed," he said. The fest sells about 2,400 tickets, with the remaining slots filled by volunteers, chefs, wineries and others.

"It's grown into one of California's best food events," Ibsen said. "And it's intended to always be a celebration of the harvest, a celebration of our community, a celebration of friends getting together and enjoying camaraderie."

Many of the 60 chefs slated create tomato-based masterpieces Sept. 14 have taken part for years, while others have heard about the fest and asked if they could join in. Two-thirds of the chefs are local.

Some 50 wineries will pour about 200 vintages to complement their culinary offerings, and guests will also have the opportunity to taste and explore a display of 350 varieties of heirloom tomatoes, check out the international olive oil tasting and Salsa Showcase of 90 tomato salsas from all over the United States, and enjoy an old-fashioned country barbecue.

Tickets to the 17th Annual NatureSweet Carmel TomatoFest — which will begin at 12:30 p.m. and will also serve as Ibsen's "grand retirement party" — run $95 per person and will probably sell out. Children under 12 accompanying a parent will be admitted free. To purchase, visit www.tomatofest.com or call (800) 965-4827.

Council denies Sand & Sea appeal

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE LONG-RUNNING conflict between neighbors over the planned remodel of a home in the Sand & Sea complex on San Antonio Avenue continued in front of the Carmel City Council last month, but neither side saw any resolution. In May, the planning commission denied Robb and Dale Johnson's proposal to expand their home, and their attorney, Miriam Schakat, filed an appeal.

The Johnsons began work on their house four years ago on a downsized remodel that met standards for historic buildings. But following an appeal by the complex owners in 2006, Sand & Sea was removed from the city's list of historic resources, and the Johnsons submitted new plans for a two-story house. The planning commission denied that application in August 2007, so the pair submitted new drawings for a one-story house, which was denied in May.

According to a report by planning and building services manager Sean Conroy, the Johnsons want to add 348 square feet by expanding the master bedroom on the north side and two other bedrooms near the southeast corner. The south side would feature a new entry and fireplace, and Conroy said parts of the existing home would be demolished to make way for the new construction. In addition, the existing flat roof would be replaced with pitched gable roofs.

In addition to acknowledging the neighbors' objections regarding the home's potential impacts on their views, the planning commission decided the plans exceeded the allowed floor area for the lot.

In calculating how large the house could be, the Johnsons used lot measurements that include a driveway shared by several residents. After a neighbor pointed that out, the planning commission ruled in May that the Johnsons would have to cut their proposed addition by 262 square feet, and they appealed that decision to the city council July 1.

"If you agree with the planning commission, the appeal should be denied," Conroy said.

Moving target

Schakat said the city deprived the Johnsons of due process in its consideration of their plans.

"Every time we came to the planning commission, our target moved and things changed, and every time we tried to address an issue, something else came up," she said.

She argued her clients have attempted to assuage the neighbors' concerns by reducing roof pitch and making other changes. "The neighbor impacts must be balanced with the Johnsons' desire to add a mere 348 square feet," she said.

Had they known at the outset they would only be allowed to build 80 square feet because the shared driveway does not count as "buildable area" for the purposes of calculating maximum square footage, "they would have never gone to the trouble of hiring an architect and attorneys," she said.

Stephen Wilmoth, their architect, said city planners told him there would be no problem with a second story and confirmed how large the new house could be.

"We've completely complied with all the rules the city's planning staff gave us," he said, speculating that the project denials to date are based entirely on neighbors' objections.

Many of those neighbors attended the July 1 meeting, among them Margaret Kim, who lives next door and lost some of her views as a result of the earlier remodel.

"I think what's fair and reasonable for them has already been done," she said. Kim also pointed out her views and property have been disrupted by years of construction.

"They bought an 1,100-square-foot house with terrific views and chose to make it something it can never be," commented Sand & Sea resident Mary Liskin.

Greg Erickson, who lives nearby and would reportedly have his views diminished as well, said, "The house that's being proposed is just too big for the lot, period."

Erickson's attorney, Jim Heisinger, said planners objected to the designs because they didn't fit with the low-profile buildings in the complex, and he argued the driveway should not be counted as part of the Johnsons' lot.

Regarding due process and following the rules, city attorney Don Freeman said decision makers are free to impose restrictions greater than those stated in the zoning code rehearsal," Pinney said. "Now we can write the play."

FIRE

A small local force

One of the problems residents face is that the local volunteer fire brigade — the first line of defense against a wildfire — is small and can't be expected to fight a major blaze.

Pinney admitted Big Sur volunteers were faced with an enormous challenge when the June 21 fire broke out near Grimes Point after a lightning strike.

"The important thing to remember is that we're a local agency with a limited capability," Pinney explained.

As the fire began to move into the backcountry, it fell under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Forest Service, which sent in a team of professional firefighters and took command of the effort. But that meant local firefighters didn't have much say in how the fire was fought.

"When a fire of this magnitude occurs, we become a small cog," he said. "My job was to have as big a voice as we could get. I was asked for my input, but it was up to the incident commander to make the call."

Despite his limited role in the command structure, Pinney had a bird's-eye view of what transpired — including the troubling fact that far fewer fire engines were on scene compared to previous big fires.

When a wildfire threatened Big Sur Valley in 1996, "we had 200 structure trucks on scene," Pinney observed. "We were lucky if we had 50 this time." There's also more emphasis on firefighter safety now — which can limit how aggressively fires are fought.

And some fire departments were more cautious than others.

"There were many places where firefighters arrived and said, 'We can do this,'" Pinney noted. "And then another group came in and said, 'We're not going to stay here.'"

Evacuations = hard feelings

Many Big Sur residents were upset when they were told by Monterey County Sheriff's deputies they would have to evacuate their homes. Some resisted the orders and were told they simply couldn't leave their properties. Pinney said residents were getting mixed messages about what constitutes an evacuation.

"I have five definitions of what an evacuation is," he conceded.

That confusion can not only lead to arrests, it can put residents in danger when they are not sure what to do.

But perhaps the greatest challenge Pinney will ultimately face is sorting out the precise role of local volunteer firefighters, especially those whose homes are threatened. Throughout the recent fire, those roles clearly blurred as volunteer firefighters worked to save their homes and those of their neighbors.

"We definitely learned that it's important to have strict guidelines in place for members in terms of what they can or can not do," he said.

Ultimately, Pinney believes the roles of residents and law enforcement officials need to be better defined.

"The rights and responsibilities of private citizens are not clear, and the rights and responsibilities of evacuating agents are not clear," he said.

Despite what went wrong, Pinney believes a lot went right as well.

"The community did an outstanding job," he said. "I was overwhelmed by the spirit of cooperation and positive energy. When necessary, individual action was effective, and for the most part, supportive of the overall goal of protecting life and property."

Monday's meeting starts at 6 p.m. The conference center is located inside Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park.

Robbers snatch woman's purse after parade

A WOMAN was robbed by two men in Pacific Grove Friday afternoon, moments after the Feast of Lanterns pet parade concluded, according to Cmdr. John Nyunt.

"When all of our officers were tied up on this parade, we had an individual walking at Lighthouse and 13th toward town," he said. At about 3 p.m. July 25, two men wearing dark clothing with hoodies grabbed her purse from her.

"She was walking by herself," Nyunt said. "She thought it was unusual these two individuals were walking behind her, but she didn't do anything about it."

After they fled with the purse — containing her cell phone, credit cards and $360 cash — the Pacific Grove resident ran into a shop and asked someone to call 911. Police have no leads.

By getting enough vitamin D in their diets, older women with a history of falling may be able to avoid tumbles. It is already widely known that the "sunshine vitamin" combines with calcium to build stronger bones, which reduces the risk of bone fractures due to falls. Now, more recent research shows that vitamin D may also improve muscle strength, which may further reduce the risk of fall-related fractures. In fact, it has been found that older adults can reduce their risk of falling by more than 20% if they simply get enough vitamin D. This preventive strategy is quite important because about one-third of women over age 65 fall each year. Six percent of this number suffer a fracture.

In addition to preventing falls, Vitamin D has been shown to be the single most powerful chemical compound known to medical science for preventing hormone-related cancers such as breast cancer and prostate cancer. For more information, please call VICTORIAN HOME CARE/RESIDENTIAL CARE HOMES. Our mission and promise to our clients is simple—to provide the best care possible, as many hours as we are needed. Our in-home care program assists older adults in maintaining their independence at home, or can ease the transition to a new setting if needed. We handpick and hire only the most dedicated and qualified caregivers.

P.S. Regular physical activity, which strengthens muscles and increases flexibility and endurance, is a first line of defense against falls and fractures.

LAMINATE FLOORING

If you want the look of wood floors with increased durability and easier installation, you might want to consider laminate flooring. What appears to be a natural wood grain pattern on this flooring material is actually a thin layer of decor paper (a photographic image) under an extremely durable protective film that is glued and pressed to a high-density backing board. Durability is laminate flooring's biggest asset. Because of the high-density backing board, laminates are resistant to gouges and punctures, and stains and scuffs have a difficult time penetrating the high-pressure laminate coating. Laminate flooring can be installed over many existing floors and is "free floating," which means it is not fastened to the sub-floor with glue or nails.

There are so many choices available today in floor covering. Before making a final decision, one that will probably remain with you for several years to come, be sure to discuss the options with someone with a reputation for knowledge, creativity, and extensive resources. Here at CARPETS & FLOORS, INC., we hope you'll give us the opportunity to do what we do best — help you find the ideas and products that will transform your home from boring to beautiful, from dull to delightful. Open 9am-5pm Monday through Saturday, we accept Visa, MasterCard, and Amex.

HINT: Prime candidates for laminate floors are high-traffic areas such as foyers, hallways, family spaces, bathrooms, and kitchens.

SAY "HI" TO HYBRIDS

Now that all-electric vehicles (EVs) have fallen into disfavor, owing to limited range and long recharge times, automakers have turned their focus to gas-electric hybrid vehicles. Hybrids are able to cut emissions and improve efficiency by marrying a conventional gasoline engine with an electric motor that runs off a battery pack and gets recharged by the gas engine during normal driving. Additional charging also comes from "regenerative braking," in which the momentum of the braking vehicle converts the electric motor into a generator. While the initial cost of a hybrid vehicle is typically more than that of a conventional one, tax breaks are offered by both federal and state governments, including a one-time IRS deduction.

We know that you rely on your vehicle to safely transport you and your family. You can trust our expertise, we are experienced and knowledgeable in all aspects of automotive technology and can perform all the necessary repairs and maintenance on your vehicle. If you would like more information, or have questions please visit us today. All of our work is done by ASE Certified technicians, and we are also AAA Approved.

SMART WAYS TO RESPOND TO A DOWN MARKET

If you're an investor, you may have been disappointed with how the markets have been reacting this summer to the news of high oil prices and other short-term events. Nonetheless, your long-term financial goals don't have to be jeopardized by these losses — if you know how to respond to them.

For starters, stick to your investment strategy. It's almost always a bad idea to make long-term investment decisions in response to short-term market fluctuations. Next, don't try to "cut your losses" by jumping out of the market.

Also, assess your portfolio's risk level. If your holdings fell much farther than the market as a whole, you may be taking on more risk than you should. Consequently, you might need to rebalance your investments.

Nobody likes to see a major market decline — but by making the right moves, you can keep moving toward your financial objectives.

Photography center grooms the next generation with workshops, exhibit

By CHRIS COUNTS

BEST KNOWN for hosting exhibits by some of the world's finest photographers, the Center for Photographic Art is turning its attention to the next generation of fine art photographers.

The CPA presents "PhotoFocus: Young Artist Vision," a new exhibit opening Friday, Aug. 1, at the Marjorie Evans Gallery at Sunset Center. The show presents images created by 20 local high-school students who participated in a five-week photography workshop series sponsored by the CPA.

"We'd like to inspire youth in this area to develop their own voices for future artistic endeavors," explained Michelle Renfro, director of PhotoFocus and assistant director of the CPA.

At the start of the program, each student was given a Holga, an inexpensive point and shoot camera. According to Renfro, Holgas naturally leak light, a feature that is popular with fine art photographers.

Ted Orland — who has helped to popularize the use of Holgas naturally — led the first workshop. Subsequent workshops presented students with opportunities to learn from some of the area's finest photography instructors, including portrait artist R.R. Jones, graphic designer Jerry Takigawa, CPA Executive Director Dennis High and photojournalist Kira Carillo Corser.

With more applicants than workshops spaces available, the students were chosen by a lottery.

Included in the exhibit are photographs by Claire Natirbov of York School; Chelsea Lloyd, Peter Nichols, Stefan Rock, Alyssa Synstebly and Emily Taylor of Pacific

Valley residents have something to celebrate

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE IMMEDIATE threat of wildfires has passed, and the sky is blue again, giving Carmel Valley residents much to be thankful for. They'll get a chance to celebrate this weekend, when the Carmel Valley Fiesta returns for its 19th year.

The event, which is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Carmel Valley — kicked off its festivities Monday with a golf tournament at Carmel Valley Ranch. Starting Friday, Aug. 1, Carmel Valley Village will be the site of a variety of family-friendly events, including a parade, a dog show, a car show and a two-day "fiesta" at Community Park.

"It's a fullblown, local fun time," declared Chuck McKay, secretary of the local Kiwanis chapter and a longtime event organizer.

The weekend events commence Friday, when the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club — located at the end of East Garzas Road — hosts its annual Hoopla! BBQ and Dance from 6 to 9 p.m. The menu includes BBQ chicken, tri-tip steak, chili and corn on the cob. The Cachagua Playboys, who have treated locals to an eclectic blend of rock, country, blues, folk, zydeco and reggae for more than a decade, perform at the event.

The community park will be a hub of activity through the weekend.

Carmel Valley Firefighters will offer a pancake breakfast Saturday at 8 a.m. Later, the traditional parade — which starts at the former Carmel Valley Airport at 10 a.m. — will pass through the park. The parade always features an eclectic mix of fire engines, cars, people, horses and pets. This year's grand marshals will be Thom Crowe and Debbie Brisco, co-winners of the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce's Good Egg award.

"The best place for viewing the parade will be along Carmel Valley Road, between Kasey's and the Running Iron," suggested John Russo, who is organizing it.

The photo on the left, which depicts Kevin Cappuccio and was taken by Megan Kohl, will be featured in a new exhibit at Sunset Center's Marjorie Evans Gallery. The show presents the work of 20 local high school students who participated in a five week workshop series sponsored by the Center for Photographic Art. The gallery will host an opening reception Friday, Aug. 1 from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Gold utilizing the Jazz and Blues Company's B3 Hammond organ and Leslie speaker.

Performing at the Jazz and Blues Company Saturday, Aug. 2, jazz vocalist Chris McNulty has been active on the international jazz scene since 1985. She combines a rich, expressive voice with a deep sense of swing and a natural feel for the blues. Born in Australia, McNulty first visited New York in 1985 and settled there in 1988 after being awarded an International Study Grant from the Australia Council. Her 1990 debut recording in the United States, "Waltz For Debby," received critical praise, and in 1994, she was selected as one of the six exceptional new jazz singers on the New York scene to be featured on the Venus recording, "Big Apple Voices." She will be accompanied this week by New York City jazz guitarist Paul Bollenback and his group. For reservations, call (831) 624-6432.

Music is back in full swing at the Big Sur River Inn in Big Sur, and I can't think of a better way to support our neighbors down south than by sitting under the redwoods and listening to some fine jazz. Sunday, Aug. 3, from 1 to 4 p.m., Santa Cruz jazz group Catwalk makes its performance debut in Big Sur.

Guitarist/writer Joe Menichetti, drummer Sid Thompson, bassist Scott McKenna, saxophonist Doug Rowan and pianist Jay Jackson incorporate elements of jazz, blues, funk, fusion, rock and more into their original compositions. Catwalk was voted Best Local Jazz Act by the readers of Metro Santa Cruz and performed last year at the Monterey Jazz Festival. Its new, independently produced album, "Weather or Knot," features 11 original tunes. Call (831) 667-2700 for details.

Seaside's Sunday "Blues in the Park" Concert Series continues Aug. 3 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. with Pacific Northwest blues musician Curtis Salgado. The featured vocalist on Robert Cray's breakthrough album, "Who's Been Talking," Salgado honed his chops with the likes of Muddy Waters, Bobby "Blue" Bland, Albert Collins and Bonnie Raitt. Aside from being a tremendous vocalist, Curtis is one of the finest blues harmonica players in the country. In 1979, when John Belushi was in Eugene filming "Animal House," he caught Curtis' act and liked what he heard and saw. Salgado took the actor under his wing and schooled him on blues and R&B history, which Belushi soaked up like a sponge the used a good portion of Curtis' show as the basis for the Blues Brothers act he and Dan Akroyd put together. The first Blues Brothers album was dedicated to Salgado.

Salgado left the Cray band before it broke through nationally and, from 1984 to 1986, he fronted Boston's Grammy-winning Roomful of Blues before returning to Portland, where he formed The Stiletos, which toured nationally with such acts as Steve Miller and The Doobie Brothers. He even did a stint as lead vocalist with Santana in the 1990s. He returns with his latest album, "Clean Getaway," a reference to his two-year bout with cancer. The concerts are held in Laguna Grande Park on Canyon Del Rey in Seaside.

Caymus and cuisine, cool summer crunch, and composting?

By MARY BROWNFIELD

LA PLAYA Hotel's aptly named executive chef, Bunyan Fortune, will have the fun of creating four special courses to complement the wines of the family that started Caymus Vineyards, a Napa Valley institution, more than 35 years ago. The Caymus Vineyards Wine Dinner will be held Friday, Aug. 1, at 7 p.m.

Rob McLaughlin, food and beverage director for La Playa, provided a preview.

"Caymus has several labels," he explained, and all are owned by the Wagner family. "They have a very strong portfolio."

The Belle Glos Pinot Blanc will be poured alongside hors d'oeuvres, such as seared ahi with lemongrass, at the start of the evening.

Next, almond-encrusted quail with peach poblano sauce will accompany Conundrum — a blend of Napa Valley Sauvignon Blanc, Tulare County Muscat Canelli, and Chardonnay and Viognier from Monterey County.

"The wine really has a lot of elements to it," McLaughlin said.

Diners will sip Mer Soleil's unoaked, Chablis-style Silver Chardonnay while enjoying their next course of seared diver scallop over tropical salsa with micro greens, while the newly released 2006 vintage of Caymus' own famed Cabernet Sauvignon will be poured alongside the main course, Kansas City-cut veal steak with green peppercorn sauce.

"Dessert is spectacular," McLaughlin said: a ginger cream sorbet served with a glass of Mer Soleil's late harvest Viognier.

The cost of the dinner is $125, including tax and tip, and reservations may be made by calling (831) 624-6476. La Playa is located at Camino Real and Eighth in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

■ Baby, it's hot outside

The California Market at the Highlands Inn, with similarly stellar views but more casual than the upscale Pacific's Edge, continues to offer its Hot Summer Nights menu highlighting the produce of a particular farm each week. The prix fixe dinner includes three courses and a signature cocktails for $45 (excluding tax and tip) and is offered in addition to the restaurant's regular menu.

The series began last month and will continue through September, according to sous chef Shean Suter, who won't share the coming week's secrets until the day the menu launches.

But the past could serve as some indicator. This week, accompanying a Sunset Martini of Grey Goose L'Orange Vodka, sparkling wine and juices, thin slices of Riverdog Farm's organic cucumbers were the highlight of a crunchy roll of crab with daikon sprouts, jicama and gypsy peppers. Although the crab's flavor and texture were lackluster, especially for palates spoiled by super fresh, sweet and succulent Dungeness from Monterey Bay, the rolls were crisp and refreshing. A generous cut of grilled New York steak was served with grilled corn salsa and an unexpectedly delightful, lightly seasoned, savory peach bread pudding that adeptly balanced the fruit and the herbs. A pretty cheesecake tart topped with lemon curd, summer berries and mango sorbet marked the dinner's conclusion.

In other weeks, Suter focused on the fabulous heirloom tomatoes of Hollister's Swank Farms and highlighted highly regarded stone-fruit grower Frog Hollow, to name just two.

The California Market serves dinner 5 to 10 p.m. nightly. For reservations, call (831) 622-5450 or visit www.highlandsinn.hyatt.com.

■ What to do with the scraps

Why should vegetable peelings and apple cores end up in landfills when they can feed the garden instead? McShane's Nursery & Landscape Supply will hold an organic composting workshop for children ages 3-12, as well as gardeners who hope to learn a few tricks.

Gardener Judy Greenwald and McShane's staff will discuss the fundamentals of turning garbage into fertilizer, and while the event will cater to kids, it should interest adults as well, according to Steve McShane. A $5 "material fee" will be charged, and everyone should bring their vegetable- and grain-based kitchen scraps to the workshop Saturday, Aug. 2, at 1 p.m. McShane's is located at 115 Monterey-Salinas Highway in Salinas and can be reached by calling (831) 455-1876.

■ Café on the row

The Monterey Plaza Hotel on Cannery Row announced it will open Café La Strada (la strada means "the row," in Italian) Aug. 4. Located adjacent to the hotel's terraced plaza and dolphin fountain, the new café will feature pastries and desserts handmade daily by the hotel's pastry chef, Tony Martin, as well as specialty food and snack items, and Peet's coffees and teas. Service will be available daily from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. The Monterey Plaza Hotel & Spa is located at 400 Cannery Row, Monterey.

■ Still jazzing it up

Drummer David Morwood and his full-spectrum jazz band will entertain the cocktail crowds at Carmel Plaza's Jazz in the Plaza Friday, Aug. 8, from 5 to 7 p.m. Each week of the 12-week series, hosted by the Plaza and the Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association, features a different musical artist and winery, and Chalone Vineyard — the oldest producing vineyard in Monterey County — will be pouring. The tunes are free, but tasting wine and nibbling cheese costs $15 per person. The Plaza is located on Ocean Avenue between Mission and San Carlos streets.

■ Winemakers celebrate

And don't forget the annual Winemakers' Celebration Saturday, Aug. 9, at Custom House Plaza in Monterey. Presented by the Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association, the event will run noon to 4 p.m. Tickets are $35 in advance or $40 the day of the event. Chef Hernandez turns out rarebit and afternoon tea at the Tuck

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

IF IT'S Welsh rarebit you crave for lunch, or scones with whipped cream, fresh preserves, housemade marmalade and Ceylon black tea, Chef Alvaro Hernandez will prepare it for you at Carmel-by-the-Sea's Tuck Box English Tea Room.

The tiny Comstock fairy-tale building holds a mere 22 patrons inside and 14 in the patio. Only breakfast, luncheon and afternoon tea are served here.

Preparing breakfast is his favorite part of his work day at The Tuck Box because there are so many dishes on the menu, and he loves making them all. Hernandez even makes the marmalade patrons spread on his freshly baked scones.

Hand-squeezed orange juice, bowls of fresh fruit, stewed prunes and hot oats take time to prepare, so Hernandez is there at 6 a.m. for a 7:30 opening.

The menu offers three Benedicts: traditional, smoked salmon, and Tuck Box Benedict — a specialty of two poached eggs, Canadian bacon and seasoned cheddar Welsh rarebit over a toasted English muffin.

Two-egg omelets (prepared five different ways) are favorites with breakfast customers, especially his Spanish omelet made spicy with chili sauce and powder.

Many customers order a side of breakfast potatoes, and he attributes this popularity to his method of baking the potatoes before sautéing them with butter, onions, and green and red peppers.

Hernandez has been with The Tuck Box eight years. He came to the Monterey Peninsula from Oaxaca, Mexico, intending to work a little while, earn some money and return home.

That was 20 years ago, but Hernandez is happy about his decision to stay. He and his wife, Oralia — Guanajuato-born, but whom he met in Salinas — have three children: Ramon, 13, a Seaside High student; Alexis, 11, and Maira, 10, both at King Middle School.

He hasn't been back to Mexico for 13 years but hopes to visit there this December. He has three brothers living in Seaside, and his father came for a visit two years ago, but his mother and five sisters are still in Oaxaca and have no inclination to travel.

When he first arrived on the Peninsula, he worked in the kitchen of Sizzler, watching the chef and line chefs until he knew what to do. He was given a chance as a prep cook, then advanced to grilling meats.

With three years' experience under his belt, Hernandez was employed as a cook by Craig Ling, owner of the Sandbar and Grill on Fisherman's Wharf No. 2. He has been steadily employed at the Sandbar for 17 years, including three evenings a week. Because The Tuck Box is not open for dinner, Hernandez augments his income at the Sandbar.

On his days off, he likes to play soccer with his children at Laguna Grande Park and go dancing with Oralia. Aside from these pleasant pastimes, Hernandez fulfills his duties as head of household by taking his family to medical appointments and paying bills.

Yet cooking remains a major part of Chef Hernandez' life. He watches diners at The Tuck Box from his kitchen passthrough counter, and is pleased when he sees them enjoying the dishes he has prepared for them.

Afternoon tea and late luncheon are served until 2:30 p.m. daily. Sandwiches, salads and desserts are on the menu, but hot entrées are offered, too.

Heading the list is Welsh rarebit, a traditional English dish of seasoned cheddar cheese melted over an English muffin and served with a small green salad. Monday through Sunday, a daily special is offered, with Monday's fare being the the choice of Chef Hernandez.

The following three days' specials are English shepherds pie, beefsteak pie and chicken pie, with Friday featuring meat loaf and mashed potatoes, and Saturday and Sunday offering fresh salmon and rice.

Beverages, including Tuck Box tea, wine and beer, are available. Desserts include homemade pies, and even a cheese and fruit plate.

Hernandez said take-home items include fresh Tuck Box preserves and orange marmalade, Tuck Box scone mix in a canister, Tuck Box whole grain breakfast cereal, and Tuck Box black tea.

In 1927, The Tuck Box was constructed by designer-builder Hugh Comstock, who was inspired by the fairy-tale drawings of British illustrator Arthur Rackham. The Tuck Box was first inaugurated as Sally's restaurant in the early 1930s.

Ten years later, two sisters from England, Mrs. Bumbridge and Mrs. Watson, created a small English tea room, christening it with the name it carries to this day.

Eight years later, the sisters sold to a British couple, John and Elsie Grandfield. It was Elsie's recipes that made a name for The Tuck Box, and many of them are still used by Chef Hernandez.

In 1960, Lucille Pinkston bought the restaurant. Four years later, she married Glenn Berry, and they both ran the tea room until 1976, when they sold it to Aleen and Harvey Hillbun. Eleven years later, Aleen's sister, Phyllis Yelusich, took over management of the restaurant.

The Tuck Box has been owned since 1996 by the LeTowt family. — Zigmont Jody LeTowt and Dianne LeTowt. Mrs. LeTowt passed away in 2002, and in late 2003 their older son, Jeffrey, assumed operation of the Carmel landmark.

The Tuck Box English Tea Room, on Dolores between Seventh and Ocean avenues in Carmel-by-the-Sea, is open daily from 7:30 a.m. until 3 p.m. For information, call (831) 624-6365.

Today's Real Estate
 by MAUREEN MASON
 Certified Residential Specialist

Selling Your Home Well

Consumer Reports offers five suggestions to help sellers get the best price and have the best experience in the sale of their home.

First, find a truly good real estate professional to work with—someone who is helping people buy and sell homes, who is well aware of the trends in the marketplace, who is fully up to date on real estate law and finance, and who is likable and trustworthy. Someone you can relate to, but someone who always remains thoughtful and professional.

Second, study the market very carefully. (Your real estate professional can help greatly with this.) See what similar houses are really selling for, how long it's taking, what today's buyers are most attracted to.

Third, consider cash-based incentives if the market is slow—like seller financing or paying the points on your buyers' loan origination. Four, be ready to be flexible regarding the deposit a buyer brings with his or her offer.

And fifth, be proactive in the marketing of your home. Review advertising, make sure any photos are attractive, make your real estate professional feel that you are willing to work hand in hand in getting the home seen and sold. And most likely, it soon will be. To find out more call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

Maureen Mason is a Realtor® with Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty.

PLAY GOLF, RAISE CASH FOR MILITARY AND OTHER WORTHY CAUSES

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE SALINAS Valley Junior Golf Association — which hosts tournaments and offers discounted range balls, clubs, instruction and green fees to youth in need — will hold its annual fundraising tournament at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 12, at the Salinas Golf & Country Club on San Juan Grade Road.

The event will include 18 holes of competitive golf, as well as contests for closest to the pin on each par 3, most accurate drive, “beat the junior,” and awards for top finishers.

The cost of attending is $150 per person and includes golf, cart, range balls, tee prizes, dinner and awards. Sponsorship opportunities also exist, and an auction will be held. For information, to donate or to sign up, call Rusty Stockton at (831) 444-0306.

Support military and their families

Two days later, the Monterey Bay Retired E-9 Association will host its annual golf tournament at Bayonet and Black Horse golf courses in Seaside to raise money for the Army Emergency Relief Program, which provides assistance for active members of all branches of the U.S. Armed Forces and their families, as well as veterans and retirees.

Check-in will open at 7 a.m., with a shotgun start at 8 a.m., Thursday, Aug. 14. A barbecue and awards presentation will follow at 1 p.m. Participants — who will receive tee prizes no matter how they score — will be able to play Bayonet’s newly redesigned front 9 and the back 9 of Black Horse. The $100 entry fee ($75 for military) will cover greens fees, cart rental, lunch, awards and prizes.

For more information, call Dick Darvey at (831) 422-8084, or to enter, mail a check and your name, handicap and phone number to Monterey Bay Retired E-9 Association, P.O. Box 921, Marina, CA 93933.

Donations of money and prizes are also accepted.

SHOOTINGS

she told the Herald. “The support was amazing.”

Attacking The Pine Cone

Just a few days before Joey and Tammy Christensen gave their interviews to The Herald and he posed for the paper’s photo, members of the Christensen family and some of their friends reacted very angrily to a news story in The Carmel Pine Cone about the shootings.

“We were warned not to continue to report what happened at the Christensens’ house, not to name them anymore, and not to print the boys’ pictures,” publisher Paul Miller said. “The reporter on the story, Kelly Nix, and I were both threatened.”

Also, about 2,500 copies of the July 18 Pine Cone were stolen from distribution racks in Carmel, Carmel Valley and Pacific

Grove, according to Central Coast Delivery, which handles distribution for The Pine Cone. (18,000 copies are printed each week, with about 5,000 more distributed online.)

Monday morning, someone left a photograph at the newspaper’s Carmel office showing several large trash bags stuffed with Pine Cones, along with a taunting note.

“We got some extremely vitriolic emails, and I responded to them by explaining that the community — and especially the parents of the other teenagers at the party — had every right to know what happened, where it happened and whose party it was,” Miller said. “But some people think the rules of journalism should be changed when news happens to them.”

Anyone who wanted to read the July 18 Pine Cone but couldn’t find a copy can download the paper in pdf at www.carmelpinecone.com, Miller said.

And he asked anyone who sees Pine Cones being stolen from distribution sites to contact him or the local police department.

Everybody Needs a Break Now and Then

Even the most dedicated family caregivers periodically need “time off” to replenish their energy. That’s what our Respite Care service is for.

Our Home Care Coordinator will visit you first to discuss your needs and wishes.

When you need a break, we will carefully select a Personal Attendant to be at home with your loved one while you are away, and to follow the routine that you have established.

You can't take good care of anyone else unless you take care of yourself!

“Central Coast Senior Services arranged for care for my parents several times and I couldn't have been more pleased. Literally within a couple hours of my phone call, they had someone in my father's home so he could return from the hospital. They provided 24-hour care for my father, who is blind, including fixing his meals and helping him bathe. I found their services to be exceptional.”

and ordinances.

The only question for the council, he said, was whether the driveway should be considered buildable area.

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said it should not, since building on it would prevent some residents from accessing their homes.

“There are nine lots that use this road,” Mayor Sue McCloud pointed out.

Councilman Gerard Rose said he was “troubled by fact the applicant wasn’t told right at the outset” that the driveway could not be included in the calculation.

“I think the record is disappointing in this case, and I would ask that the planning commission work with these people,” he said.

Hazdovac moved denial of the appeal and said the council should direct the planning commission and staff to meet with the Johnsons to form plans that take into account “the adjusted lot size that does not include the shared driveway.”

The mayor and the rest of the council agreed.

P.G. mayor announces candidacy

PACIFIC GROVE Mayor Dan Cort announced this week he’s running for another term.

Cort told The Pine Cone he’s committed to working with city council members to continue to improve the city.

“While some cities are looking at what to do next,” Cort said, “we have a path and we just have to make sure we can follow it.”

Cort said he’s proud of the work he and the council have done during the past year. The election will be held Nov. 4.

“We have managed to balance the budget,” he said. “We got a farmers’ market and we have managed to organize the entire city.”

Cort was appointed mayor in 2005 when Mayor Jim Costello stepped down, and was elected to the seat in 2006.

Efforts to minimize oil spills in Monterey Bay Sanctuary

By KELLY NIX

A SANTA Cruz-based environmental group is trying to take the "slick" out of Monterey Bay.

After a three-year absence, Save Our Shores resumed its DockWalker program to reduce oil contamination of the Monterey Bay marine environment.

"The program is mainly based on oil spill prevention based on boater education and community outreach," said Lauren Gilligan, clean boating program coordinator for SOS.

Beginning July 26, volunteer "dockwalkers" trained in clean-boating issues walked docks in Moss Landing Harbor and Monterey Bay handing out clean-boating kits and telling boaters the importance of being environmentally conscientious.

"Oil can hurt fish, cover their gills, introduce lead and other toxins in their bodies, and move up the food chain to us," Gilligan said.

Besides letting boaters know about the importance of using oil-absorbent pads that can soak up small spills, volunteers will also tell them about using products, such as cleaning supplies, that don't harm the ocean.

Gilligan said the free kits volunteers will hand out include an oil-absorbent pad, information about green boating methods and bilge pumps, a map with information about waste disposal locations, emergency information in case of an oil spill, and coupons for green products at West Marine.

Boat pollution can result from accidental oil spills, oily bilge water pumped overboard and improper disposal of

"For me, it was the only place to be."

This was not a difficult choice. I'm delighted with my life at Carmel Valley Manor. The location is superb; I've loved the Valley since the first time I saw it. My apartment and patio are just right. It felt wonderful to let go of excess furnishings and decorative objects. Community life offers many enjoyable options. I frequently visit friends in the Manor's wonderful care centers and it's good to know those are available should I ever need them.

My advice? Plan ahead; don't wait too long to get on the waiting list.

China rising

IN 1976, when ruthless Communist dictator Mao Tse Tung died, China was in the Dark Ages. Its people dressed alike, lived in grossly substandard housing, were discouraged from going to school or seeking to better themselves, and had been cowed into political submission by decades of Mao's iron-fisted rule. The arts were nonexistent, travel outside the country was next to impossible, modern medicines were scarce, and average life expectancy was far lower than in the West. Tens of millions starved during the Great Leap Forward and tens of thousands were executed during various phases of Mao's megalomaniacal rule, while hundreds of thousands of soldiers were heartlessly sacrificed in his recklessly expansionist adventures in Korea and Southeast Asia.

Today, China is a vastly different place. While democracy is still nonexistent and some minority groups are oppressed, it is worth noting that most of China's people have more freedom and are far better off today than they were just 32 years ago. They live longer, make more money, live in better housing, can own private property, are permitted to travel abroad (and many can afford to), and have numerous rights guaranteed by laws passed during the last two decades. According to a study released by UCLA, the disabled, the elderly, migrants and those accused of crimes in China now have formal legal protection. Surprisingly, more than 3,000 centers providing free criminal legal aid to the poor have been established throughout the country since 1996. Even environmental protection is a burgeoning national concern.

But while China has become a major manufacturing center and quite a few of its citizens have become wealthy, average incomes are far behind the United States.

With a population of 1.3 billion, China's gross domestic product is $3.25 trillion. In this country, the population is 303 million, while our GDP is a colossal $13.84 trillion. In this country, 70 percent have cellphones and almost as many use the Internet. In China just one-sixth of citizens have cell phones, and less than 10 percent have access to the Internet.

Yet, a study released last week by the Pew Research Center showed that 86 percent of Chinese are content with their country's direction, and 82 percent are satisfied with their economy.

In the United States — a place with far greater wealth, superior health care, more leisure time, and the Bill of Rights — only 23 percent of citizens are content, according to the Pew center.

One reason for this is our media's obsession with the negative. If every time you turn on the TV or read a newspaper you're told how bad things are, you're bound to start believing it.

Also a factor: When you get used to things being great, it's easy to become upset when they become a little less great.

Another component of our national malaise is the absence of a unifying national purpose. In China, they have one: To make their country better. In the United States, a more common national pastime is complaining.

With the Olympics bringing the world's attention to China during the next several weeks, it's important to remember that the Chinese people should be judged for what they are in the context of what they were. And the world can also take some inspiration from what they are trying to become.

'My answer was incomplete'

Dear Editor,

It wasn't until I read the 25 July Pine Cone editorial that I realized how obscure my reply was to Alan Hewer's question regarding the Homescapes building. Alan's question was, "But would you vote to approve it if it were proposed today?" My answer was, "Probably not."

Many in the community have not had the benefit of attending all of the planning commission's proceedings on this project and may not be aware that the Homescapes building would not comply with some of the current zoning, general plan policies and design guidelines. My answer, which needed elaboration, was based on my knowledge that the Homescapes building would not meet current requirements. The answer was not meant to detract from or negate the information and reasoning I used in forming my position with regard to the importance of the building. Hindsight being 20/20, I recognize that my answer was incomplete and required the explanation I have provided here.

Bill Strid, Planning Commissioner

Despise the building

Dear Editor,

Thank you for June 25 editorial. I have despised the Homescapes building from the day it went up. Usually I'm not in favor of more condos, but it would be wonderful to have more people be able to live downtown and at the same time have that eyesore destroyed. To me it's a win-win.

Jeanne Blaha, Carmel

'Unique, cathedral, airy'

Dear Editor,

When visitors come to town, we stroll through Carmel, with its quaint buildings and fun little nooks and crannies. But we never miss the treat of the awesome Homescapes building. "How unique, cathedral, airy and stately," are often the exuberant comments. To meander through the store's aisles, soaking up the ambiance, satisfies one's visual appetite as well.

It so saddens me to see the attractive Homescapes building imprisoned now by ugly boards and mesh. Just awful! Yet a glimmer of its aesthetics shines through.

Don't think condos, apartments and retail stores in its place. Before we blink, it will be a half-century old and an historic masterpiece to behold. Let it be!

hazardous waste. According to the California Coastal Commission, 28,000 boats cruise Monterey Bay every year.

Gilligan said the program seeks to better mark and identify oil recycling disposal points in the Monterey Bay area and let boaters know where they are.

The DockWalkers program has been absent from Monterey Bay for the past several years but was able to continue its program with $106,000 in combined grant money from the Community Foundation for Monterey County, the County of Monterey and the California Integrated Waste Management Board.

"We are really excited to be back in Monterey Bay," Gilligan said.

The program will continue until the end of September.

personally.

"Bill is a creative genius. God will heal Bill and give him strength again," wrote Oliver from Nigeria.

"Please heal, Bill," said another note, from Rajiv in Bangalore, India.

"Bill, my wife and I will continue to pray for your fast recovery and getting back to the good work you do for the Carmel community," wrote Michael and Soncha in Atlanta, Ga.

"I'll celebrate masses for Bill for fast recovery and good health, starting this afternoon at 5 p.m.," said Father Paco in the Philippines.

Some improvement

Meanwhile, Bates, who is in intensive care at Community Hospital of Monterey Peninsula, has shown some improvement, said David Loye, his close friend and publisher of his book, "Bates on Bush."

"It was looking very grim three days ago," Loye said Wednesday. "I thought he was not going to make it. They were at a standstill what to do with the staph infection, and he was getting weaker."

After doctors took Bates off of medication that has kept him unconscious for weeks, Bates has been responsive, Loye said.

Future," as the July 28-Aug. 1 program is called, the children have sung, attended rehearsals and toured the backstage of Sunset Center, learned about the composer's life and times, chatted with festival musicians and vocalists, danced, drawn, acted, played the handbells, and even worked with chef Andre Lengacher of Lugano Swiss Bistro to learn how to cook some of Bach's favorite foods.

Carteena Robohm created Bach to the Future for kids in 2005, and "in collaboration with the Carmel Bach Festival, the program continues to flourish," according to the church.

"It is satisfying to see this community supporting the arts for children at such a young age," said the Rev. Norm Mowery, who will also get in the spirit by delivering a Bach-related sermon on an upcoming Sunday. (John Carley, the Carmel Woods resident who donned the powder wig and period getup to speak to the kids as Bach this week, said

"His wife, Lei Lei, said she would talk to him and he was able to indicate what she was saying with a slight smile or a frown," Loye said. "But he isn't talking yet."

Before Bates' heart attack, Loye was working with Bates on the artist's memoirs, which span decades and his experiences from dozens of countries Bates has visited.

Bates, the town's unofficial artist-in-residence, has been illustrating cartoons depicting Carmel life for The Pine Cone since 1972.

In an email message to friends, Bates' friend and Sacramento Bee cartoonist, Dennis Renault, said he also noticed improvement when he visited the artist at CHOMP Wednesday.

"While I was there," Renault wrote, "he responded to questions and remarks with facial expressions like smiles and head movements — as well as hand pressure — that clearly indicated quick comprehension."

When Renault suggested to Bates a book of cartoons about his traumatic experience and that ICU stood for "intensive cartoon unit," Bates "smiled and obviously agreed," Renault said.

Renault said Bates' hospital room is stacked with numerous get well-cards and letters of support, including a giant card from the Carmel Post Office, every inch filled with signatures.

Mowery will be using the garb during the Sunday service.)

Free family concert

The Bach Festival continues through Aug. 9, with the final concert being the very popular Best of the Fest, conducted by Bruno Weil. Program and ticket information can be found at www.bachfestival.org.

The festival is also offering a free family concert at Sunset Center Aug. 2 at 4 p.m., hosted by David Gordon and featuring middle- and high-school audition winners performing an informal hour of Baroque classics.

Al Smith's
"Carmel Legends"

Della Walker was a childhood friend of FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT, and when she asked him to design a seaside HOUSE for her, he was 84 years old. He didn't know that, so he accepted the challenge (his only ocean house), and personally supervised its construction in 1954. "Make it low," said Della, "so my neighbors views will not be interrupted." He did that, and now the prow of the house, on Scenic drive near Martin Way, drives ceaselessly into the waves that buffet Carmel Bay. It is designed like an ocean liner, facing the tireless sea. The living room, slightly sunken, looks across the deck through stepped-down windows like a captain's bridge. The corridors, right and left, are narrow. Doors are slender and locked tight with catches. The kitchen is a galley, saving space in every corner, yet totally efficient. Staterooms along the halls lead back to a master bedroom with views to port and starboard, and a fireplace to defy the fiercest weather. The roof is copper, now oxidized to a timeless green. Della doesn't live there anymore, but the house will last forever.
