By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE PRESIDENT Barack Obama, Congress and the health care industry haggle over how to provide medical coverage for every American without bankrupting the country, a war of words between Blue Shield of California and Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula has brought the contentious debate to our own backyard.

The debate started when Laura Zehm, chief financial officer at CHOMP, submitted a letter to the Monterey County Herald, which was published in its May 24 edition.

In the letter, Zehm offered an explanation for why CHOMP's physicians do not treat patients with Blue Shield at the prices Blue Shield is willing to pay — which often means patients end up being stuck with a hefty portion of their medical bills. According to Zehm, it's because Blue Shield offers "unacceptably low reimbursement rates."

The way Zehm sees it, Blue Shield's policies are costing its customers money.

"What this means for you, our community, is that when

Bach Fest launches search for new conductor

■ Bruno Weil's finale will be 2010

By PAUL MILLER

AFTER 19 years as the music director of the Carmel Bach Festival, Bruno Weil will call it quits next summer, the festival announced Thursday.

Longtime concertmaster Elizabeth Wallfisch will also be leaving the festival next year, she told The Pine Cone.

From his home in Augsburg, Germany, Weil said he wanted to retire from the Bach Festival while it was at its artistic peak.

"You should resign when you've just won the World Series, not when somebody wants to get rid of you," Weil said.

At home in London, Wallfisch expressed a similar sentiment. "Every year we've had truly great performances, and the bar always got higher," Wallfisch said. "But there comes a point when you just have to hand something along."

Missing out on holidays

Both artists will be traveling to Carmel next week for this year's festival, which begins July 17 with a performance of Haydn's "The Creation."

Wallfisch, who joined the Bach Festival in 1993, said the trials of being on the road five weeks every summer were a consideration for her, but so was the end of her longstanding partnership with Weil at the Carmel event. "The hardest thing for me was to be away from my family every summer," she said. "But Bruno's my best friend in the world as far as music goes. I cannot work without him."

In August 2003, during the opening season at the renovated Sunset Center, Weil and Wallfisch signed new contracts to continue their leadership roles in the Bach Fest. But with those contracts coming to an end, Weil said it was time for him to pass the baton.

"Of course, it is not easy, because I love the festival and Carmel so much," said Weil, who is 59 years old. "But a new generation must take on the challenge of

FEDERAL JUDGE MAY ORDER RATIONING

■ Sierra Club lawsuit seeks 35 percent cutback to protect fish

By KELLY NIX

THE CARMEL River's population of steelhead trout is in danger of disappearing and only drastic measures can save it, according to a lawyer for the Sierra Club in San Francisco.

And that's why the group says it filed a lawsuit June 25 in U.S. District Court against California American Water seeking an immediate 35 percent cutback in the company's pumping from the Carmel River. An initial hearing on the suit is scheduled for Aug. 14 in San Jose.

The case has been assigned to Judge Jeremy Fogel, who was appointed to the federal bench by President Bill Clinton and is a former appointee of Governor Jerry Brown to state court.

Beach commission won't recommend fire ban

By HANNAH MILLER

AFTER HEARING pleas from nearly two dozen residents who cherish the tradition of building bonfires on the town's main beach, and only a few who don't, the Carmel Beach and Forestry Commission decided Thursday afternoon to recommend the planning commission continue to allow beach fires, while increasing public education and awareness about the right way to build a fire and where it's permissible to do it.

"I really like going to the beach and having bonfires, and I think that if

Military academies welcome Peninsula grads

By KELLY NIX

BEGINNING NEXT week, the life of Pacific Grove High School graduate Grant Randall — just a few days after he turns 18 — will be distinctly different.

That's because Randall will be off to Kings Point, New York, to embark on a four-year stint as a midshipman at the elite United States Merchant Marine Academy, one of the nation's five service academies.

"I am thinking about being a cruise ship captain," Randall told The Pine Cone. "That is one of the main reasons I chose the Merchant Marine Academy."

Opened in 1943, the Merchant Marine Academy, located in Eastern Long Island, emphasizes in maritime and naval specialties. Midshipmen are trained in marine engineering, navigation, ship administration and other maritime-related subjects.

Graduates from the academy have the option of serving on U.S. flagged merchant vessels, working as civilians in the maritime industry or serving as active duty officers in

Dogs prohibited in Hatton Canyon — and this time it's not temporary

By CHRIS COUNTS

A DECISION last week by the Transportation Agency for Monterey County not to pave the northernmost 1.2 miles of the Carmel Hill and River Trail could spell doom for residents who want to walk their dogs in Hatton Canyon.

Residents once walked their dogs along an old dirt access road in the canyon, but in March, the California Department of Parks and Recreation posted signs prohibiting dogs

Crabbe appointed to fishery council

A CARMEL fisherman has been appointed to the Pacific Fishery Management Council.

David Crabbe, the husband of Jung Yi Crabbe, a Pine Cone account executive, was appointed to the council, one of eight regional bodies that manage offshore fisheries.

The Pacific Council is responsible for fisheries off the coasts of California, Oregon and Washington.

U.S. Rep. Sam Farr wrote a letter in support of Crabbe's appointment. "David is a perfect fit for this position, with the heart of a fisherman and the brain of a scientist," Farr wrote.

The councils, established by the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act, create comprehensive plans for marine fish populations in their regions.

Among their goals is to end overfishing of 41 species by 2010.

Councilmembers represent a variety of interests, from commercial and recreational fisheries to environmental concerns to academia. A total of 72 members are appointed by the secretary of commerce.

Crabbe was part of a group of 30 who were named or reappointed for the next term, which begins August 11.

Girls bat their way to the top

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE THREE all-star teams of the Carmel Community Girls Softball League took first, second and third place in their divisions last weekend, prevailing over fierce opposition at the Northern California Amateur Softball Association tournament in Sunnyvale. The girls' teams will next play in this weekend's Carmel Classic tournament and landed spots in the Junior Olympics qualifier to be played in San Diego later this month, according to CCGS board member and parent Krista Salvati.

The local league, which survives on donations and small fees charged to the players, has about 200 girls between the ages of 6 and 14 from Carmel and Carmel Valley. The players started practice in March and began competing against other local leagues in April, culminating with playoffs in early June. At the conclusion of the regular season, the coaches chose and invited the strongest players, based on statistics, enthusiasm and love for the game, to play on three all-star teams.

"We got girls from all over the league who were selected, and they practiced together for about two weeks," said Salvati, whose daughters, 11-year-old Lauren and 13-year-old Madison, are on two of the teams.

In Sunnyvale, the CCGS all-stars in the Minor Division (age 12 and under) took first place out of 25 teams, the Rookie Division team (10 and under) took second out of 20, and the 14-and-under Major Division team placed third out of 11 teams. And the fact the girls were competing against traveling teams that train together year-round was monumental, according to Salvati.

"They did great against those teams," she said.

Their victories also netted them an invitation to compete in the Junior Olympic qualifiers in San Diego July 17-19, though the coaches and the board have yet to decide whether they will go. The top nine teams from the Northern California ASA tournament were invited.

"That's a really high caliber of player down there, and that's a long way for us to travel, especially being a recreational league," Salvati said. If they go, it would be a first for Carmel amateur softball.

But the three all-star teams will play in the July 3-5 Carmel Classic, an annual tournament organized by former coach and league "founding father" Terry McGowan. Over the course of three days, more than 50 games will be held on the fields at Carmel Middle School.

"All our teams that played this weekend will be there competing against all-star teams from all over the area," Salvati said, adding that the others are in the higher B Division, while the Carmel girls are in the C Division.

"It will be a little more challenging for us," she admitted.

But such challenges are an integral part of team sports, and Salvati praised CCGS — now in its 10th year — for all it does.

"It's really a great organization in this community that's really helping girls from ages 6 to 14 put forth their athletic efforts

After marathon session, CHS softball coaches keep their jobs

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FOLLOWING HOURS of testimony by students, parents and witnesses, and impassioned statements by a couple defending their daughter and two men defending their jobs, the Carmel Unified School District board of education unanimously voted to allow head coach Peter Dew and assistant coach Bruce Crane to remain on the payroll. The decision came after a standing-room-only special meeting in the Carmel Middle School library Tuesday night.

The hearing, held in open session at the coaches' request, was the final step in a complaint that began after a May varsity softball game against Santa Catalina during which Crane allegedly swore at and intimidated a player, making her cry, and Dew didn't intervene in the confrontation.

The complaint brought by the girls' parents was investigated by Carmel High School's athletic director and principal. In their report, they noted the player who ended up in tears wasn't exactly a model citizen. The girl admitted "flipping the bird to another player" in the dugout, while another girl on the team "was argumentative in the dugout regarding her removal from the game."

According to the report, Crane admitted using profanity with one of his players, and both coaches said they had failed to handle discipline well throughout the season. In addition, team captains were not told what was expected of them, resulting in poor leadership.

The administrators recommended developing clear expectations for player behavior and said profanity should never be used. In addition, complaint procedures should be outlined, coaches should maintain their composure during games regardless of players' behavior, and the athletic director should review the directives with the coaches before determining their employment status for the following year.

But parents Perilyn and Ron Gertz found the recommendations unsatisfactory, instead calling for the coaches' dismissal, so they appealed to CUSD Superintendent Marvin Biasotti, who investigated the matter further and issued a decision backing his administrators. The parents then demanded a hearing before the board.

"Bruce assaulted my daughter in the dugout," Perilyn Gertz told the school board Tuesday night. "He wasn't going to stop until he'd emotionally broken her down, and she's a tough kid." According to her complaint, the teenager and her teammates were afraid he was going to hit her, and the profanity he used was sexually explicit.

"She was a wreck, and that's why we're here today. It isn't just to pick on Bruce," added Ron Gertz, who also said he had a heated exchange with Crane following the incident and reported the coach used the "f-word" multiple times.

The case against the men included statements from seven unnamed players who described the incident in varying lev-

Search dogs get chiefs' hand-me-down SUVs

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE DOGS that make their livings saving lives now get to travel in official style, thanks to the Cypress Fire Protection District.

When the agency, which is run by Cal Fire and has stations in Pebble Beach and Carmel, decided to replace two old Ford Expeditions used by battalion chiefs, canine search specialists from Carmel Valley and Seaside fire departments asked its board to consider giving them the vehicles.

The board agreed May 28, and the firefighters took the keys last week, according to Cal Fire Assistant Chief Dennis Carreiro. Eric Hanzelka at C.V. Fire and Johnny Subia of Seaside Fire have custody of the SUVs, but they are available to all five search-dog handlers in Monterey County. The other three work for Salinas Fire.

The K-9 training schedule is so demanding that canine team members were logging 15,000 miles per year driving all over the state, according to Subia. And they were doing it in their private vehicles.

"We train every week and it can be in L.A., Oakland Sacramento, or here," Subia explained. "We go wherever we can to continually advance our dogs' training," including out-of-state locations that offer different terrain and climates.

"You never know where a disaster is going to be, and since we are a FEMA

Local Doctors Restore Men's Sex Life Erectile Dysfunction Clinic Opens in Monterey

BY JEFF GOESTLER
Men's Health Consultant

If you've been watching television lately, there's no doubt you've seen the onslaught of ads promoting herbal remedies for sexual performance. The promoters promise that you'll be a "super-hero" in the bedroom by taking their pills. They make it sound just that easy, but do these magic pills really work? Could the solution to your ED problem really be that simple? The simple answer is, no.

Now, if you've paid attention to these ads at all, or ever considered ordering these products, you must have some interest in solving an erectile dysfunction problem. Perhaps you've had no success with prescription medications like Viagra, Levitra and Cialis, or maybe you can't take them due to existing health conditions or adverse side effects. Having an ED problem that's difficult to treat can make those late-night TV ads look pretty appealing, but remember the old adage: if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

Our recommendation if you're considering trying these new-fangled potions? Don't waste your money. In the first place, how can these one-size-fits-all herbal pill programs solve your ED problems without taking into account your age, your overall health, or your body type? Secondly, herbal remedies are not subject to regulation by the FDA, so it's difficult to know exactly what you're getting. ED is a medical problem, and any attempt at a solution should be undertaken with the utmost caution, and under the care of a licensed physician.

Male Performance Medical Clinics are licensed medical facilities in Monterey, San Jose, Sacramento and Salt Lake City that offer the MP<sup>2</sup> Protocol, a medically proven solution for erectile dysfunction and premature ejaculation even in difficult-to-treat cases, and it doesn't involve surgery. Diabetes, high blood pressure, coronary ailments, even prostate removal, none of these conditions is an insurmountable barrier to enjoying a fulfilling sex life. "Our group shares information on the latest and most effect treatments available today", said Dr. Paul Woodruff, the Medical Director of the Utah Male Performance Clinic. Dr. John Weaver, Director of the Men's Medical Institute says "Regardless of a man's health or medical condition, we have been able to help men as young as twenty-one and as old as eighty-nine."

The MP<sup>2</sup> Protocol is a blend of non-systemic, FDA-approved medications that can be customized to restore a man's ability to perform, regardless of his age or medical condition, and it's been proven to work almost 98% of the time. And the clinics offer one simple guarantee: If you don't respond to our medication on your first visit, there is no charge to you. Our Partnership Pricing Program is covered by many insurance carriers.

So before you throw your hard-earned money away on a suspect "herbal" remedy, see a doctor who specializes in erectile dysfunction. He can assess your ED from a medical perspective, and prescribe a treatment method that is safe and reliable. You can have your sex life back again, but you won't get there by ordering wonder pills on late-night TV.

Council to weigh in on low-cost housing

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CITY has to encourage the construction of seven homes for people with very low or extremely low incomes, according to state law, and the Carmel City Council is set to discuss the means of doing that at its meeting Tuesday.

The plan for low-income housing — along with renovation of Forest Theater, requirements for environmentally friendly construction and final adoption of the ordinances dissolving the design review board and setting a date for the vote on Flanders Mansion — is on the agenda for the July 7 council meeting at 4:30 p.m. in city hall.

The housing requirement was reviewed by the planning commission last month. According to law, the city's plan to provide it must be periodically updated, usually every five to seven years, with the goal of identifying housing sites, facilitating the development of “adequate and affordable housing,” addressing constraints, conserving and improving existing housing stock, and promoting “housing opportunities” for everyone, according to planning and building services manager Sean Conroy.

California law sets goals for each city in the state based on population. Carmel's affordable housing goal for 2007 to 2014 is 32 units, half of which are supposed to serve people with very low incomes. Since Jan. 1, 2007, permits have been approved and/or construction has been done on all but seven units for people with very low or extremely low incomes.

To accommodate the housing, Conroy said the city must rezone at least one-third of an acre in the multifamily district to a minimum density of seven units.

A consultant working on the city's plan suggested the Vista Lobos center at Torres and Third as a viable site, but planning commissioners objected to that proposal when it was raised June 10, and even questioned whether Carmel needed housing for people with very low incomes.

“I'm appalled at the thought of using that kind of open public space to solve a problem that does not, frankly, exist in this community,” commented commissioner Robin Wilson.

Nevertheless, commissioners forwarded the proposal to the council, which will discuss it Tuesday.

John Lombardo, an ever present and beloved member of the community, died on Monday, June 22, 2009.

He brought joy, and endeared himself to all, with his kind words and engaging smile.

AS RESIDENTS WRANGLE OVER FUTURE, MUSEUM WILL PAY TRIBUTE TO PAST

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE CARMEL Valley residents may not agree whether a city hall should be part of the valley's future, a museum is under construction to showcase the community's fascinating past.
"It's important that the people of today and the future have a place where they can examine our history," observed Reggie Jones, who serves as chairman of the Carmel Valley Historical Society's building committee.
The museum is well underway, but to raise money to finish it, the historical society is selling engraved brick tiles that will be installed on the museum's floor.

ish it, the historical society is selling engraved brick tiles that will be installed on the museum's floor.

The historical society is offering 4-by-8-inch tiles and 8-by-8-inch tiles. The cost of a small tile for an individual donor is $100 and for a business the price is $250. Individual donors can purchase a large tile for $200, while businesses can buy one for $400.

Donors' names are engraved on the tiles with a laser, and Jones likes the way they look.

"We're really pleased with the results," he said. "I think people who paid money for the tiles will be happy with them."

So far, the historical society has sold 135 tiles, and Jones is hoping to sell a thousand.

"If we could sell a thousand tiles, we'd raise $100,000," he added. "That's not a huge number."

$150,000 needed

While the outside of the museum is complete, the interior needs extensive work, including electrical, plumbing and wall surfacing. So far, $300,000 has been raised for the project, and another $150,000 is required.

The museum, located on Carmel Valley Road between Ford and Pilot roads, occupies a portion of a property owned by the Carmel Valley Park and Recreation District. The museum will house a diverse collection of Native American relics, historical photographs, documents and other artifacts associated with Carmel Valley cultural and natural history.

For more information about the tile fundraiser, the museum or the historical society, you can call (831) 659-4338.

■ $60K from C.V. tournament

QUAIL LODGE Golf Club hosted its second Eagle Cup — “a gathering of philanthropic golfers who share a common passion for ‘the spirit of giving’ by raising and distributing funds to local charitable organizations” — Thursday, June 4. The event generated more than $60,000 for six local charities.

The Haber Cup Putting Competition, posthumously named after lodge founder Ed Haber and officiated by USGA Western Region director Ron Read, provided participants the opportunity to putt six holes for the charity of their choice. The final putt-off pitted the top player against Clint Eastwood. Clem Richardson won the putt-off, and the $5,000 purse went to the Hospice of Monterey, The First Tee of Monterey County and the ACTION council of Monterey County.

Indy 500 winner Danny Sullivan, musician Kenny G, actor Eric Close, San Jose Sharks CEO Greg Jamison, comedians Tom Dreesen and Jackie Flynn, and Clint and Dina Eastwood were on the tournament roster. Kenny G and Geoff Couch won first place gross, while Bob Holmes and Steve Johnson won first place net.

Players attended an awards reception afterward, and their winnings and donations benefited the ACTION Council, Hospice, The First Tee, SPCA for Monterey County, Boys & Girls Clubs of Monterey County, and Suicide Prevention Service of the Central Coast.

classical music in the United States."

"We've built up a fabulous orchestra, and it will continue," added Wallfisch, who is 57. "But I've done what I can do, and I must leave."

Neither musician is retiring from their international career. Wallfisch, 57, recently started an orchestra in Amsterdam, is Director of Baroque Music for the Israeli Chamber Orchestra, and does many other concerts each year throughout the world.

Weil, who is considered the preeminent specialist in conducting Haydn, just returned from a series of concerts in Toronto and recently made a new recording of "The Creation" in Holland. "I travel all over the place," Weil said.

But some of the best concerts of his career have been at Sunset Center, he said. In particular, he recalled conducting Brahms' Requiem last summer, and Bach's St. Matthew Passion in 2007.

"When everybody is working together and making music from the heart, it's something you never forget," Weil said. "And those concerts were the absolute limit of where I can take this festival."

Former managing director and 29-year member of the orchestra, Jesse Read, called the combination of Weil and Wallfisch "a great marriage" because of Weil's skill at musical interpretation and Wallfisch's expertise in 18th century music and the instruments it's played on.

"Bruno was able to concentrate on the insightful exploration of the interior of the music without having to think about what part of the bow a player needed to use to get a certain effect," Read said. "All he had to do was explain to Libby what he had in his heart, and she could then turn to the string players and say, 'Do it this way.'"

According to Bach festival managing director Camille Kolles, a committee of Bach Fest board members, musicians and longtime supporters of the festival is already searching for Weil's successor.

"We have a slate of candidates, and some of them will be visiting the festival this summer, so we can meet them and they can meet us," said Kolles.

Since she took over as managing director last summer, Kolles has emphasized the need for the Bach Fest to preserve its traditions while moving in new directions.

"We're looking for someone who can take a fresh approach," she said.

She also praised Weil for what she called his "rare combination of musicianship, heart and soul" which produced "some of the most compelling concerts I've ever heard."

Weil said he said notified the festival's board of his intention to leave "way in advance" so there would be time to find the right person to succeed him. But he said he would be staying out of the search process. Instead, he is focused on this summer's concerts, which include Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony and J.S. Bach's Christmas Oratorio.

"I especially recommend everybody go to the Tuesday night concert, 'Aha! Haydn,' because then you'll learn things about Haydn that nobody knows," Weil said.

any branch of the armed forces.

Randall was one of just 11 Central Coast students appointed by Congressman Sam Farr to be appointed to the nation's service academies.

Attending the Merchant Marine Academy will allow Randall to travel a lot, something he's always wanted to do.

"I go to 24 countries my sophomore year in the Merchant Marine Academy," he said. "I'm excited about that."

Getting accepted to the Merchant Marine Academy is difficult, to say the least. Of the thousands of applicants every year, fewer than 300 are selected. And like other federal service academies, the Merchant Marine Academy requires a nomination by a senator or Congressman.

To be eligible for the appointment, Randall had to have a good grade point average and demonstrate exceptional leadership skills.

"They make you fill out a portfolio," he said. "You have to show things that set you apart from other people."

In his resume, Randall mentioned the various leadership camps he's attended and that he was captain of P.G. High's lacrosse and football teams.

He was also nominated for West Point, but decided on the Merchant Marine Academy because his parents wanted him to, and because he hesitated to serve in Iraq or Afghanistan.

"My parents had an issue with me going into the Army," said Randall, who is an Eagle Scout with Troop 90 in Pacific Grove. "When I look back on it, West Point would have been fun, but I don't want to die."

Randall's parents, Dave and Leilani Randall, real estate agents with Alain Pinel Realtors, said their son has kept cool about the appointment.

"I think he is excited, but he is a reserved guy," said his father. "He isn't showing any nerves either."

"I'm a little nervous," said his mom. "It's a typical mother thing."

Taxpayers will provide Randall's tuition, room and board, books, food, clothing and medical services, estimated to cost $250,000 for four years of study.

When Randall arrives at the academy, five days after his 18th birthday, he'll have his hair cut, be issued military clothing and then go through "indoc," short for indoctrination, which is like boot camp. Mom's food won't be on the dinner table.

"The boot camp part is not so scary to me," he said. "I think I'll just have to get used to it. If I find a roommate or friend it will make the transition into boot camp a lot easier."

Randall said he's been running and doing a lot of situps and pushups in preparation.

"I think I'll be ready," he said.

Another Alain Pinel realtor, Greg Albertson, has a son appointed by Farr to a service academy next year. Alexander Albertson will be attending the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. Other high school graduates Farr appointed to service academies include Carmel High's Shannon Welch to West Point, Carmel High's Paul Dehue to the Air Force Academy, York School's Phillip Giammanco to the Naval Academy, Robert Louis Stevenson School's Anne Lee to West Point, York School's Tyler Hand to the Merchant Marine Academy, Monterey High's Kayla Harvey to the Air Force Academy and Monterey High's Benjamin Schmidt to the Naval Academy.

water project. But with those plans stalled in the permit and environmental review process, the Sierra Club says drastic measures, including rationing, are needed right now.

"We believe additional conservation can handle the cutback we are seeking from the court," Sierra Club attorney Larry Silver told The Pine Cone Wednesday. The Carmel River Steelhead Association is also a plaintiff in the case.

"Restoring flows to the Carmel River is important for maintaining steelhead in the Carmel River," according to fisheries biologist Peter B. Moyle, whose affidavit was submitted in support of the lawsuit. Because of overpumping, many adult steelhead can't reach their spawning grounds in upper Carmel Valley, the suit says. Also, it claims that despite rescue efforts numerous juvenile fish are killed every summer when the river dries up.

Moyle said if pumping isn't reduced, the Carmel River's steelhead trout population might become "extinct." He used that word even though the species of fish in the river, Oncorhynchus mykiss, is found in hundreds of rivers, lakes and streams around the world and is even considered an invasive species in some places. Nevertheless, the local steelhead population was listed as "threatened" by the National Marine Fisheries Service in 1997.

Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Bowie said a severe reduction in pumping from the Carmel River would only hurt residents and businesses on the Peninsula.

"A 35 percent cutback on our water supply would have devastating impacts to our local economy and is not the right answer for a community that has done more than any other to save water," Bowie said.

The only solution to the Peninsula's water problems is the development of new water supply, which is being sought by Cal Am with a proposed desalination plant in Moss Landing, or a regional project with a desal plant in Marina.

"We are doing everything we can to get a new water supply replace pumping from the river," Bowie said, "and the Sierra Club and Steelhead Association's efforts would be better spent urging the government to approve a new water project."

The PUC is reviewing Cal Am's proposal and another from Water for Monterey County, a coalition that's drawn up the alternative regional water plan.

Water for Monterey County's coordinator Steve Kasower told The Pine Cone that Sierra Club officials have never attended the group's meetings to discuss its proposed regional plan.

Cal Am diverts about 11,000 acre feet of water from the Carmel River per year. In 1995, the State Water Resources Control Board ruled Cal Am only had rights to 3,376 acre feet of water. The nearly 8,000 acre feet of water the company diverts every year is considered unlawful.

"When the Sierra Club calls for California American Water to reduce its pumping, it sounds like something that will only hurt our company," Bowie said. "But the truth is that the amount of water we produce is dictated by how much residents and businesses turn on their taps."

The lawsuit is "not to punish Cal Am" or Peninsula residents, Silver said, "but to keep the steelhead in the river."

The suit also names as defendants the United States Department of Commerce, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Southwest Region, National Marine Fisheries Service, because it alleges those agencies have not done enough to protect the trout.

Sandy Claws

By Margot Petit Nichols

GUS BARTROM, 7, is a West Highland white terrier who lives in Carmel with Dad Bart and Mom Mitsy, and is taken on walks twice daily to Carmel Beach. Gus always stays on the Scenic Road walking path above the beach and seldom, if ever, ventures down onto the beach proper.

Right now, he's sporting his summer haircut under the misconception that hot weather is in the offing sometime before September.

Gus used to live in the San Francisco Bay Area with a nice lady who also had a home in Carmel. She saw how much Gus liked it here, and so Gus came to live in the Bartrom household. He was five years old at the time, and that worked out perfectly because neither Dad nor Mom felt like training a puppy again after Bing, Gus' predecessor, passed on. Bing was also an enchanting Westie and was featured in this column ten years ago.

Dad said Gus is a sweet dog and never, never picks arguments with others, so be sure to say hello when you see him on the walking path.

When brother Reed and his wife Chris come for a visit, they bring their two border collies (Gus' cousins), Bonnie and Jeanie, so the three can have a day of play together.

At home, Gus' favorite pastime is chewing on a rawhide bone which keeps him happily occupied for a good half-hour at a time. At night, he retires to his crate in Dad's home office where he sleeps peacefully until Dad comes to work in the morning.

on its property.

"According to state park regulations, dogs are not allowed in undeveloped areas and trails," said Dana Jones at the time. Jones serves as Monterey sector superintendent for California State Parks. "Hatton Canyon is considered to be an undeveloped area. In state parks, dogs are only allowed in parking lots and paved areas."

Jones said the dog ban would be lifted once the path was paved. But she confirmed after last week's decision by TAMC that state parks currently has no plan to allow dogs back into the canyon.

When the temporary ban was announced in March, residents complained they should be allowed to walk their dogs in the canyon because of its longtime unofficial status as a "dog-on-leash" park. They warned that people would be forced to walk their dogs along Highway 1, which they claim is unsafe for pedestrians and their pets.

State parks makes an exception to the "no pavement, no dogs" rule along a stretch of coastline from Carmel River Beach to the north boundary of Point Lobos State Reserve, although pet owners are required to use leashes.

The decision to not pave the northernmost 1.2 miles of the trails will not affect the plan to pave the rest of the trail, a half-mile route parallel to Highway 1 from Carmel Valley Road to Rio Road, with construction scheduled to begin next year. The project also includes a Carmel Valley Road underpass, and the trail could one day connect to a bicycle and pedestrian bridge that spans the Carmel River.

"For me, it was the only place to be."

May Waldroup, former owner, The Barnyard and Thunderbird bookstore

This was not a difficult choice. I'm delighted with my life at Carmel Valley Manor. The location is superb; I've loved the Valley since the first time I saw it. My apartment and patio are just right. It felt wonderful to let go of excess furnishings and decorative objects. Community life offers many enjoyable options. I frequently visit friends in the Manor's wonderful care centers and it's good to know those are available should I ever need them.

Locals are singing the blues — and that's a good thing

By CHRIS COUNTS

CARMEL AND its surrounding neighborhoods aren't exactly known for their boisterous nightlife. But the dance floor at the Fuse Lounge at the Carmel Mission Inn will be hopping Friday, July 3, when the Diesel Point Blues Band takes the stage.

And what's even more remarkable, the group is based in Carmel. In fact, Friday's lineup will feature no less than four musicians whose homes are in Mission Fields.

"Four of us live about three blocks from the Fuse Lounge," said lead vocalist Johnny Mirani, whom many locals will remember as the frontman for the popular Monterey-based rock band, the Young Presidents.

While some of the band's members have known each other for as long as 30 years, the group came together seven years ago after an impromptu jam session at a fishing tournament in Chico.

"These guys got me back into playing," Mirani said. "At first, we were heavily into the blues, and we were playing just for fun. But in order to play gigs, we added some more danceable songs. Our strongest point, though, is our vocal harmonies."

Friday's lineup will include Mirani, Kevin Huston, Fay Hays, Curt Hays, Gary Root and Bill Swift. They'll be joined by a pair of special guests, Johnny Aldrick and Doug Lang.

When they perform at the Fuse Lounge, the Diesel Point Blues Band plans to offer a mix of blues and classic rock. A sample of their set list includes Stevie Ray Vaughan's "Pride and Joy," the Rolling Stones' "Wild Horses," Fleetwood Mac's "Chain," B.B. King's "The Thrill is Gone" and the Animals' "We Gotta Get out of This Place."

The music starts at 8 p.m. The Fuse Lounge is located at the Carmel Mission Inn at 3665 Rio Road. For more information, call (831) 624-1841.

Library hosts hip picnic

In the spirit of the Hog Farm's annual "Pignic," the Henry Miller Library hosts its first-ever "Hipnic," Friday and Saturday, July 3-4.

The name of the festival pays tribute its headliner, Mother Hips, a popular regional country rock band that emerged from Chico State University in the early 1990s.

"They fit right in with my musical tastes," said library director Magnus Toren. "They have a beautiful, vocal-based pop sound that reminds me of the Eagles."

Also performing at the Hipnic are (on Friday) the

Builder bridges gap between form and function

By CHRIS COUNTS

MORE THAN 2,000 years ago, Greeks and Romans viewed bridges as works of art, and after helping manage the retrofitting of the Bixby Bridge in Big Sur, Michael Miller realized he felt the same way.

So enamored was Miller of the grace and style of the iconic bridge, he decided to build his own miniature version out of old-growth redwood.

Bringing together his construction skills, creative impulses and dogged determination, Miller created a 1/32-scale model of Bixby Bridge, which is now on display at the Monterey Maritime Museum. The model is more than five feet tall and 24 feet long.

Before building his Bixby Bridge model, Miller created 1/32-scale copy of Rocky Creek Bridge, which he also helped to retrofit.

"At first, I thought I'd do something small, like a belt buckle," he recalled.

But one thing led to another, and Miller ended up building a very large model of Rocky Creek Bridge out of wood. Later, regretting his use of inferior wood, he spent $30,000 applying a bronze finish to the sculpture, which was later displayed in Devendorf Park during the Carmel Art Festival.

After completing the Rocky Creek Bridge model, Miller turned his attention to Bixby Bridge, one of the California Coast's most recognizable landmarks. Choosing to work with only the highest quality redwood, Miller realized he was taking on a much more complex project than his previous bridge model.

"Rocky Creek Bridge is straight, but Bixby Bridge has curves that are far more challenging to build," he observed.

Thankfully for Miller, he discovered an unusual source for high-quality redwood.

ART

"Someone called me from Santa Cruz about a trestle that had been dismantled back in the 1970s," explained Miller, a general contractor who works as a caretaker for the Smith Ranch in Big Sur.

The owner of the bridge timbers had died, and his son was offering 90 of them — each 22-foot-long — for $500 each.

"I bought them all," Miller said. "It was some of the nicest redwood I've ever seen. Some of the grains are so tight you need a magnifying glass to see them."

After conducting a week-long photo study of the real bridge, Miller set about building his model — without the aid of metal, nails or screws to hold it together.

"Thomas Edison once said genius is one percent inspiration and 99 percent perspiration," said Miller, using the famous inventor's words to illustrate his own relentless persistence. "If you give a project 100 percent, you'll eventually figure it out."

It took Miller a year to complete his model of Bixby Bridge, and now that it's finished, he's not sure what is going to become of it. It's for sale — with a $64,000 price tag — but he's hoping somehow it ends up in the maritime museum's permanent collection. "I'd love to keep it in the museum, and that's what the museum wants, too," insisted Miller.

Miller calls Bixby Bridge model "the biggest challenge I've ever put on myself," which is no small boast considering Miller has built million-dollar homes and helped manage the retrofitting of two famous bridges. And while he's satisfied with his ambitious technical achievement, he's particularly proud of the bridge's symbolic message.

"For me, Bixby Bridge connects people from one side to another," added Miller. "I'm hoping that we are all ready to go over to the other side."

The maritime museum is located at 5 Custom House Plaza in Monterey. For more info, call (831) 375-2553.

■ Abundant watercolors in P.G.

Local and exotic wildflowers are the subject of "Summer's Artistic Abundance," an exhibit of watercolors by Sally Giddings Smith opening Friday, July 3, at Le Beau Soleil in Pacific Grove.

"Colorful, simple and straightforward in their presentation, Sally Giddings Smith's work is collectible and affordable," said gallery owner Robert Lewis. "The volume of her work is prodigious and the response to it has been great."

Also on display are works by Carol Bestor, June Levin, Elizabeth Meyer, Kathy Sharpe, and Murray Wagnon.

The gallery, which is located at 210 1/2 Forest Ave., will host a reception from 5 to 8 p.m. The exhibit will be on display through Aug. 19. For more information, call (831) 333-9046 or visit www.lebeausoleilgallery.com.

■ Art fair presents talented trio

Local artists Pamela Takigawa, Beth Harris and Erin Gafill will present demonstrations and talk about their work at the Carmel Bay Company's Summer Art Fair Saturday, July 4.

The Carmel Bay Company is located at Ocean and Lincoln, in the Seven Arts Building. The art fair starts at 11 p.m. For more information, call (831) 624-3868 or visit www.carmelbaycompany.com.

■ Colorful bikes in Carmel

Combining her two passions — painting and motorcycles — artist Guenevere Schwien unveils an exhibit of colorful oil paintings, "At Play," Friday, July 3, at the Carmel Art Association.

Schwien is just one of six artists whose new work will be on display this month at the art association. Others include Jan Wagstaff, Blaine Black, Susan Giacometti, Dick Crispo and Peter Plamondon.

The art association, which is located on the west side of Dolores between Fourth and Fifth, will host a reception at 6 p.m. For more information, call (831) 624-6176 or visit www.carmelart.org.

Eating in a field, finding a date, and learning to cook

By MARY BROWNFIELD

IT'S LOCAL to everywhere, and local to nowhere. The nomadic business, Outstanding in the Field, which organizes captivating dinners in farms all over the country and beyond, stopped in Paso Robles before heading east and will reappear in California later this year.

The whole idea behind the alfresco culinary adventures is to help people connect with the people who grow and cook their food, according to founder Jim Denevan, who launched OITF in Santa Cruz a decade ago and has been on the road ever since. Each feast usually takes place outside — “between the soil and the sky,” he likes to say — and involves a small farm, a highly regarded local chef and a winery from the area. Other artisans whose food is featured on the menu also attend and share their stories with the guests, who sit at one long table and eat each course family style.

“We celebrate farmers,” he said during the June 18 dinner at Windrose Farm, a small organic operation in Paso Robles. The evening marked the group’s 127th gathering, and Denevan and his small crew, including manager Katy Oursler, had already visited 30 states since January, traveling in a vintage Flxible bus.

“Our mission is to get people out in the farm,” he told the group gathered at the 51-acre Windrose on a hot afternoon. “There are some people who have done as many as 13 dinners, which seems a little excessive.”

The afternoon began with passed hors d’oeuvres (asparagus with aioli, deviled eggs topped with Charter Oak bacon, pulled pork sliders ...) prepared by guest chef Chris Kobayashi of Artisan Restaurant and glasses of crisp and refreshing Halter Ranch Rosé. Farm owners Bill and Barbara Spencer mingled with the 100 folks milling about their front yard, and then Bill led a tour of the property, just over half of which is in cultivation, with fruit and vegetable plants, orchards and sheep.

The walk led to a linen-draped table beside a huge oak tree, with Kobayashi and his helpers preparing dinner in a makeshift outdoor kitchen just feet away. Each course — the stone fruit and farm green salad with pecans and Happy Acres goat cheese, the Morro Bay line-caught snapper with smoked tomato paella and Charter Oak linguica, and the Windrose barbecued leg of lamb with braised vegetables and potatoes au gratin, was paired with a Halter Ranch wine. Dessert was a peach and plum galette with crème fraîche ice cream. Throughout the convivial affair, Denevan introduced the cheesemaker, the fisherman and the livestock rancher whose products also starred on the menu. The superlative evening offered a rare opportunity to directly connect with the growers and producers of the fine ingredients that ended up on the plate in Kobayashi's delectable, creative and inspired cuisine.

Montrio Bistro's last Flight & Bite Night was so successful, drawing 70 people, that the restaurant will host another from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday, July 16. For $45, all inclusive, each guest will graze on a wide range of chef Tony Baker's addictive appetizers while enjoying Talbott Vineyards' great Chardonnays and Pinot Noirs.

Baker said he plans to prepare "familiar favorites," such as rosemary-garlic marinated lamb tenderloin, and wild mushroom and arugula crostini, and new items like duck lettuce wraps with plum sauce, and artichoke risotto fritters with tomato pesto. More than a half-dozen bites will be served, and four Talbott wines will be poured.

For more information or tickets, call (831) 648-8880. Montrio is located on Calle Principal in downtown Monterey.

Ranch with style

The beautifully renovated Holman Ranch, where summer is in full swing with nonstop weddings, parties and other events, has another, though somewhat obscure, feather to add to its cap: The U.S. Commerce Association chose Holman, run by Hunter Lowder, for the 2009 Best of Carmel Valley Award in the Ranches category.

The USCA "was established to recognize the best of local businesses in their community" and seeks "to be an advocate for small and medium-sized businesses and business entrepreneurs across America." It issues best-of awards annually.

Fun in the kitchen

Eddison & Melrose, the personal chef and catering firm owned by Karen Anne Murray, has launched a lineup of cooking classes aimed at getting kids into the kitchen and helping adults save money by eating in instead of dining out. The first series includes:

- Baking Fun for Kids, covering breads, cookies and muffins, July 10, 2 to 4 p.m., $20 per child age 6 to 13;

- CSA Cooking Class, highlighting ideas for using the fresh produce folks receive weekly from local organic farms, July 10, 6 to 8 p.m., $35 per person; and

- California Cooking and Local Wines, pairing wine and various dishes, Saturday, July 11, noon to 3 p.m., $35 per adult, (age 21 and over).

Jazz in the Salad Bowl

Capitalizing on its location in one of the nation's most agriculturally productive areas, the Monterey Jazz Festival has decided to showcase fruits and veggies alongside its top bands and musicians. MJF organizers are looking for local growers to sponsor its festival farmers market.

Expected to draw 43,000 fans, the Sept. 18-20 festival, hailed as the world's best, will host a farm stand from 4 to 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. All of the $10-per-person admission — which will include a shopping tote full of produce, recipe cards and coupons — will benefit MJF jazz education programs.

Vendors interested in taking part can sign up for sponsorships of $1,000 to $2,500 by contacting Paul Fingerote at (831) 373-3366 or paul@montereyjazzfestival.org.

What's in the library?

Local wine fans know all about Taste Morgan in the Crossroads and its Library Sundays, but they might not know what's being poured when. To provide a preview so fans can plan ahead, the winery released its list of wines to be showcased this summer, beginning with the 2004 Rosella's Vineyard Pinot Noir July 5. Subsequent Sundays will feature the 1994 Monterey Chardonnay July 12, the 2002 Monterey Sauvignon Blanc and 1993 Monterey Sauvignon Blanc July 19, the 2003 Rosella's Vineyard Chardonnay July 26, the 1995 Reserve Monterey Pinot Noir Aug. 2 and the 2002 Hat Trick Chardonnay Aug. 9.

COACHES

els of detail, including hearing profanity used several times, though there was confusion over whether the coach was repeating the player's offending statement or swearing at her, according to testimony.

Represented by criminal defense attorney Geoffrey Buckles and former school board member Howard Given, Dew and Crane sat quietly as several witnesses spoke on their behalf.

Buckles summoned the Santa Catalina coach and the chief umpire, both of whom were mentioned as witnesses by the Gertzes, but the men denied hearing anything. Longtime softball coach Terry McGowan, who has worked with Crane and Dew, said he had never heard Crane swear at a student.

Lacey Armstrong, a former CHS player who assists with coaching and said she heard the entire exchange between Crane and the student, was adamant he had done nothing wrong.

"I think it's all a lie, what Mr. and Mrs. Gertz are saying," she said. "Mr. Crane did not cuss; did not get out of hand. Those girls were disrespectful to the other player and coaches. They are not team players." She did say she heard Crane repeat the player's words to her.

Ron Gertz defended his daughter, saying he had never heard a single complaint about her attitude in all her years of athletic competition.

Given asked the board to consider how much of the complaint had been contradicted by witnesses' testimony.

"It calls into question the credibility of the allegations they made," he said.

'Kind and loving'

Finally, Dew and Crane spoke in their own defense. As head coach, Dew said he heard nothing that day to warrant his intervening in the conversation between Crane and the player. The men have coached together at various levels for more than 15 years, and Dew defended Crane as a "kind and loving and passionate man who tells it like it is," and who does not deserve to lose his job.

"Why are we here in the first place? This started with the disrespectful behavior of a student with her teammates," he pointed out. "There were 16 girls in that dugout when the incident took place, many of whom didn't even know the incident took place until we discussed it as a team after the game was over."

He also said he's never seen Crane "behave inappropriately with a child in any way."

"I'm deeply hurt by the blemish this has put on our school and the softball program our school has worked so hard to build," he said.

Both men said they always follow the ethical codes, rules and standards established for coaches.

"I apologize if it was inappropriate to recount what this young lady had said," Crane said. "If I am at fault for anything, it is thinking I could handle disciplinary issues at the team level," rather than sending the matter to the school administration.

"I'm terribly sorry to the players and the parents," he concluded. "This didn't need to go this far, and if I have slipped in any way, I apologize."

After the formal hearing ended, the board opened the floor for public comment. While many people spoke in support of Dew and Crane, one former CHS student and her mother, who had complained about the coaches last spring, said they created a climate of intimidation and retribution that drove some of the girls away from the sport. The mother asked the district to hire new coaches and fix the program.

Other coaches, parents, relatives and a number of students pleaded with the board to keep Crane and Dew on staff. They praised Crane's willingness to help girls with their games at any time, and the valuable lessons he teaches not just about softball, but about life and responsibility.

Crane's daughter tearfully described the claims being made against him as "horrible and sad."

"My dad is a really strong man, and he's going to hate me for saying this, but to see him come home with tears in his eyes is horrible," she said.

One parent told the board she would not send her daughter, a softball player, to CHS if the trustees fired the coaches, and at one point, more than a dozen girls ranging from very young to teenagers stood to show their support for the two men. Some of the players, several crying, told the board they wanted their coaches to stay.

"As a softball player, if the coach is not getting on my back, he's not a good coach," pointed out a recent graduate. "If you don't want to be yelled at, don't play softball. Because this is an intense sport."

At the end of the hearing, the board entered discussions behind closed doors to debate the fate of Dew and Crane. About half an hour later, president Dan Hightower announced the trustees had unanimously voted to support the recommendations of the CHS administration and Biasotti, allowing the coaches to keep their jobs.

and keep them engaged in a team sport," she said. "It has been a really wonderful thing for our community."

Its survival also relies on the dedication and devotion of its many coaches, the work of its all-volunteer board and the support of Peninsula residents and businesses.

"It's grown and really developed into a successful organization, but not without the hard work of a lot of people in this community," she said.

resource, we can be called anywhere in the United States,” he explained.

The five dogs and their firefighters are the only urban SAR team between Menlo Park and Santa Barbara, according to Subia, and they began working together a few years ago via the National Disaster Search Dog Foundation, which “rescues dogs and then turns them into rescuers,” Subia said. The nonprofit trains the dogs and selects their handlers, and donates the canines to the agencies. In contrast, a purchased rescue dog costs about $10,000, according to Subia.

He met his dog, a black Lab called Lola, three years ago at Sundowner Kennels in Gilroy, the local NDSDF training site.

“She was 24 hours away from being put down when she was donated to the foundation,” he said. She’s now just over 5 years old and certified as a FEMA search dog after passing a tough test in Orlando, Fla., in February 2008.

The examination, which many dogs, including Lola, don’t pass the first time, involves searching rubble piles for six victims. The scene is full of decoys and distractions, and the dog has 20 minutes to search each pile. Subia knows Lola so well that he can tell by the position of her ears, the way she’s holding her tail and the sound of her bark whether she has found a victim or is barking at a distraction.

Maintaining those skills and keenness is a lot of work, and Subia said he and the other canine search specialists are grateful to Cypress Fire for the donated Fords. He and Hanzelka use them for commuting and keep them at their homes, but all team members will have use of them to trek to training when coordinating is possible. They will also use the SUVs, which are equipped with lights, sirens and radios, when responding to a disaster.

“It will allow us to get to the scene more quickly, since we’ll have the ability to immediately respond from wherever we are,” he said, instead of having to drive to the station, move equipment and dogs from personal vehicles to department trucks, and then leave for a disaster in the county or elsewhere in the state.

Carreiro said each Expedition is worth about $5,000 and that the Cypress Fire board was happy to give them to the rescue-dog teams, rather than selling them or shipping them off to the junkyard.

“We’re always happy to support the other programs and agencies in our area,” he said.

With July 4 celebrating come the cops

TAX DOLLARS are funding another joint effort by local law enforcement to track down and arrest drunken drivers, so police will be out in force during the Independence Day holiday weekend. When the clock strikes midnight on the first minute of Friday, July 3, extra patrols by several local agencies and two California Highway Patrol stations will hit the streets throughout Monterey County.

The anti-DUI campaign — similar to those being implemented in 40 other California counties — will end at midnight Monday, July 5.

In addition, the CHP announced it will step up enforcement during the July 3-5 Red Bull U.S. Grand Prix motorcycle races at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca, which draws more than 100,000 people to the area over the course of three days. During last year’s MotoGP weekend, officers wrote 1,033 tickets, impounded 45 vehicles and arrested five people.

There were six motorcycle crashes, five involving injuries, according to the CHP. Groups of motorcycle cops and officers in squad cars frequently stage on Highway 1 overpasses in search of two-wheeled speeders and other scofflaws, which are easy to spot and catch on radar.

Monterey reiterates fireworks ban

THE CITY of Monterey this week reiterated its July 4 ban on fireworks, which is being enforced with a $1,000 fine.

The Monterey City Council this year increased the fine for the possession of fireworks, which has been in place for over two decades.

Officers on all shifts will focus on high visibility and zero tolerance for fireworks-related crimes through July 4.

The Monterey Police Department said all of its officers will be working July 4 to enforce the law.

The power of one

IF NOT for Melanie Billig, Flanders Mansion would have been sold a long time ago — an achievement of which she is surely proud. And if you're on her side, the auteur nature of her campaign is nothing to be regretted. In fact, it's something to be admired.

But if you're among the majority of Carmel residents who see absolutely no purpose in continuing to invest $4 million or so of taxpayer funds in an old home which has never been put to any worthy public use — and which is clearly unsuitable for any such use, due to its location in a quiet, residential neighborhood — the veto power vested in a single citizen is nothing but frustrating.

As we have pointed out before, under California or even federal law, a single individual can easily stop something the majority clearly wants, and Ms. Billig has availed herself of every opportunity to do just that, while racking up big legal bills which also usually end up being handed to Carmel's taxpayers.

The exact same situation is now going on with modest improvements proposed for Carmel River School, where a single neighbor brought the plans to a screeching halt, costing the school district a ton of money and delaying the improvements by many months (so far).

Billig has repeatedly lost at every level of municipal government. But her campaign is far from finished.

Likewise, the River School neighbor's objections were turned aside last week by the Monterey County Planning Commission. But does that mean he's through? Hardly.

After his defeat at the planning commission, he can now take the matter to the board of supervisors. And if he loses there, he can file a suit against the county and the school board in Monterey County Superior Court.

And if that doesn't stop the school district from doing what it thinks the students at River School require, the neighbor can take the matter to the California Court of Appeal.

And after that (why not?) he can go to the Supreme Court. In fact, as long as he has the money to pay a lawyer, he can hold things up at River School for a very long time. And if he wins even a single point when he gets to court, he can have also his legal bills paid, not to mention have the entire matter sent back to county government for revision, after which the entire court battle can begin again.

Needless to say, this lopsided method of government is not what the Founding Fathers had in mind when they enshrined the principles of democracy in the U.S. Constitution in 1787, or what the original citizens of California envisioned when they drew up the state constitution in the mid-19th century.

But later generations of politicians have had a different set of political priorities. Empowering activists has been their goal. And they have done it beautifully. As we have seen time and time again, the California legislature created the mess than besets local government whenever it tries to do anything. And only the legislature can fix it.

Letters to the Editor

The Pine Cone encourages submission of letters which address issues of public importance. Letters cannot exceed 350 words, and must include the author's name, telephone number and street address. Please do not send us letters which have been submitted to other newspapers. We reserve the right to determine which letters are suitable for publication and to edit for length and clarity.

The Pine Cone does not accept letters to the editor by fax. Please submit your letters by U.S. mail, e-mail, or in person (addresses are provided below).

'Attend the hearings'

Dear Editor,

Don't you wonder at the tenacity of the group Citizens for Public Water and its attempts to create another forum for further discussion on this subject of public ownership of the water delivery system?

The Carmel River Watershed Council and the Carmel River Steelhead Association squared off against Proposition W, and CPW lost at the polls.

We acknowledge that the group's leader, George Riley, has been one of the most active supporters of the organization now called Water for Monterey County. Why is he so intent on raising issues at this stage? He writes that the dominant issue for them is local control of water! He further states the PUC is familiar with California American Water, but is very unfamiliar with local agencies, and the issue is how to convince the PUC that the local agencies know what they are doing.

These may be his issues, but they are certainly not those of the majority.

The Carmel River Watershed Council supports Regional Project Phase One. We believe it is a way of both ensuring a sufficient water supply to the county and restoring the aquifer and flows of the Carmel River so crucial to our dwindling and threatened steelhead population.

We have been actively involved in the meetings of Water for Monterey County. The meetings are open to anyone and the views expressed there have been quite divergent and representative. What is remarkable about these meetings, however, is the optimism and cooperation of its participants, and the degree of agreement on the primary goals of the regional project. This is a first for the Peninsula and we are intent on ensuring that it stays that way!

We have observed guest commentaries that are skeptical of the Regional Water Project. CRWC believes that the intense scrutiny and public reviews that the PUC is giving all of the proposed projects are sufficiently exhaustive and will result in a strong recommendation in favor of the Regional Project.

We urge all readers who have concerns to attend the upcoming PUC public meetings on July 13 or 14, to express your views.

Restaurant's new owners, three galleries and a grasshopper

THE OCEAN Avenue median and Devendorf Park are all decked out in red, white and blue. The city has put out the summer welcome mat for the throngs of visitors descending on the streets of downtown. It's summer and the Fourth of July weekend, a three-day holiday for many of us. So, let us celebrate both Independence Day and the new businesses and new businesses owners that have recently joined the community.

After Carmel Belle opened in the Doud Arcade in early February, it received numerous accolades and quickly gained a loyal following. Sadly, family needs compelled owners Kristin and Stephen Viguerie to move back East, after an all-too-short run. But fear not: If the waiting-line Saturday lunch crowds are any indication, they left their restaurant in the more-than-capable hands of new owners, Jay and Chloe Dolata, who took over in early June. Jay is a "home boy" of sorts, having attended high school at Robert Louis Stevenson, and he said he is "really happy to be back in Carmel." The couple shares the Vigueries' culinary vision of providing diners with delicious food, made from all-natural ingredients, garden fresh local produce, and friendly service. The breakfast and lunch menu that has been such a success will remain virtually the same under the Dolatas.

BUSINESS UPDATE

Another husband-wife duo, Jonathan and Lucinda Mountainsong, also recently moved to town, just up the street from Carmel Belle, near the southeast corner of Ocean and San Carlos. Mountainsong Galleries is in the spacious location vacated by Oliver, Elliott, and Sebastian Fine Art. Lucinda Mountainsong describes their collection as "quintessential California" — oil paintings, photography and sculpture, representing a variety of California scenes. The Mountainsongs and their four-month-old son, Sequoia, moved to Carmel from the small Sierra foothill community of Garden Valley.

Canapo Art Gallery, which specializes in Latin American art, moved from Dolores Avenue between Seventh and Ocean over to the more spacious Dolores location vacated by Galerie Amsterdam, on the east side between Fifth and Sixth.

Another Dolores Avenue gallery opening of note is well-known local artist Johnny Apodaca's Gallery Apodaca, which held its grand opening last Saturday night. Apodaca, who has a gallery in Sand City, took up space in the former location of Galerie Plein Aire, next to the Carmel Art Association. Galerie Plein Aire, meanwhile, moved to the more visible front location previously occupied by Highlands Sculpture Gallery.

Finally, for all who wondered what business would move into the prime corner location vacated by Sharper Image at Ocean and San Carlos, the answer is: the clothing and accessory store Inago. ("Inago" is Japanese for grasshopper). While it "unofficially" opened for business last week, the true grand opening is this holiday weekend. Inago, with a sister store in West Hollywood, is managed by Esme Lazarre, a student at the Monterey Institute of International Studies. According to store associate Natalie Pitschke, the store will cater to a broad spectrum of consumers, body types, and price ranges: the line of clothing and accessories ranges from $20 T-shirts to $2,000 dresses.

Welcome and best of success to all the new businesses.

FIRES

you took away bonfires, there would be nothing to do in Carmel," said Juliana Pazzolia, a teenager who wore a T-shirt with "Save the bonfires" written in Sharpie.

She spoke after testimony from a tearful man named Todd, who said, "I've been an active bonfire person since my son graduated from 1st grade. That summer he attended a bonfire every night without fail."

He said he had posted an Internet petition to save the bonfires, which had collected 1,200 signatures in three days.

And in response to concerns that bonfires are accompanied by a lot of carousing and rowdy partying, Patria Eckhart said, "some of our happiest moments have been on the beach and I've never witnessed anything untoward on the beach in all my years here."

But a woman who supported a ban on bonfires, and even equated building fires with "environmental terrorism," said she frequently cleans up after them.

"I take a shovel and I dig the pits," said the woman, who identified herself as Mrs. McDaniel. "Along with the fires is the glass, the skewers, the plastic and the nails."

And former city council member Barbara Livingston said, "All the fires that are built on the beach cannot be managed. You can't find a sifter fine enough to take all that ash off of our beach." She recommended strict limits on beach fires.

City forester Mike Branson told commissioners this was not the first time a ban on beach fires had been discussed in the city. But he said, "fires have always been allowed on the beach," and he outlined restrictions already in place to try to manage fires on the highly scenic stretch of sand, including a maximum fire size of 3-by-3-by-3 feet, a prohibition on fires within 25 feet of the embankment, limiting beach fires to south of 10th Street and restrictions on what can be burned.

He outlined the commission's options, including recommending the city leave regulations the way they are, banning fires entirely, creating designated fire rings, increasing cleanup efforts, requiring permits for fires, and further restricting the areas on the beach allowed for fire building.

Commissioner Victoria Lynch called the amount of money the city spends on beach cleanup ($4,000 out of a $12 million budget) a "spit in the wind," and recommended the city increase cleanup efforts.

Another commissioner, Joe Ford, said, "banning fires is just not an option," because the public wants them. "We need to figure out ways to get more information out [about the rules for fires] on a more continuous basis," he said.

There was a consensus among the commissioners to recommend the beach cleanup budget be doubled, with money put toward improved signage and increased public awareness of the rules for fires, while otherwise maintaining current regulations.

They asked Branson to forward their recommendations to the planning commission.

COSTS

you are a patient and you are covered by Blue Shield, the hospital expenses are covered, but your hospital-based physician services are not."

In response to Zehm's letter, Juan Davila, a senior vice president for Blue Shield, took aim at what he considers exorbitant charges by CHOMP's physicians.

"Their charges are already 250 percent higher than the rates we pay other physicians in the Monterey area," Davila said in a commentary the Herald printed June 20. "This is unfair to the people of the Peninsula, who are then asked to subsidize the physicians' exorbitant fees."

And according to Davila, it's not just CHOMP's physician charges that are bloated, but also its hospital costs. "[CHOMP] is more than twice as expensive as the average cost of hospital care for Blue Shield of California hospitals."

The Pine Cone this week asked Zehm about Davila's contention that CHOMP overcharges its customers. She insisted the hospital offers "competitively priced healthcare."

According to CHOMP spokesperson Brenda Moore, the hospital sets its prices by looking at what 16 comparable Central Coast and Northern California hospitals charge.

"We want our prices to be at or below three-quarters of those hospitals," Moore said.

Zehm also claimed Blue Shield is not forthcoming with its financial data.

"As a hospital, we are required to report our prices. Unfortunately, there is no similar requirement for insurance companies, so we don't know what Blue Shield pays to another hospital for similar services. That means there is no way to verify Blue Shield's claims."

The Pine Cone this week asked Blue Shield spokesperson Erica Perng if she could tell us what her insurance company will pay for a basic appendix operation or a childbirth without any complications. In response, Perng insisted she was unable to provide such figures. "We absolutely can't give specific numbers because it violates confidentiality provisions of our fee schedules," she responded.

While Perng was unable to provide what Blue Shield considers to be a fair price for a specific procedure, she reported her insurance company last year was billed $1,486,088 by CHOMP's hospital-based physicians. Perng said if these same services were billed according to Blue Shield's fee schedule — rates she insisted are accepted by many area physicians — the insurance company would have received a bill for $571,493.

Perng also insisted CHOMP's hospital charges are excessive. According to Blue Shield, the average cost of hospital charges at CHOMP for an outpatient surgery from October 2007 to September 2008 was $9,547. Perng said the average amount California hospitals within its network charge Blue Shield for the same procedure is $4,519.

CHOMP vice president Cynthia Peck brushed aside the idea that CHOMP overcharges its customers. To the contrary, she claimed Blue Shield's policy of negotiating lower reimbursements rates from hospitals is indirectly responsible for the rising health care costs of many Americans.

"About half of the hospitals in California are in rough shape," Peck observed. "All nonprofit hospitals shoot for a 4.5 percent profit margin. Hospitals that accept aggressive discounts from insurance companies — in addition to forced discounts from government payers — are forced to shift their remaining costs on to a shrinking group of patients. Unfortunately, those patients include people who can least afford health care. Our charges are 40 percent higher than they should be because of the discounts hospitals are required to make."

According to Peck, government insurers like Medicare pay far less than their fair share of medical costs, leaving hospitals with huge unpaid bills.

"In 2008, it cost $248 million to take care of patients covered by government insurance," she said. "We were paid $135 million. That means we lost $113 million on government patients."

While CHOMP and Blue Shield offer dueling perspectives on who is more responsible for rising healthcare costs, Peck offered a third possibility — the demand and cost for services that didn't even exist a generation or two ago, especially for America's rapidly growing population of seniors.

"If I need a new heart at 80, I expect to get one," Peck added. "If I need a new hip at 90, I expect to get one, and Medicare pays for all of it. My grandparents had neither of those expectations, but now everyone does."

Tim Allen

 Al Smith's
"Carmel Legends"

One of the problems afflicting the Carmel Post Office at this time of year is the presence in our community of one MR. S. CLAUS. Actually his name is SIMON, but many people (including some children) insist on misreading that. And therefore Mr. Claus gets scads of mail at this time of year, further clogging up the holiday laden traffic. The truth is, he occupies a substantial igloo at the Far North of Carmel, near the Father Serra statue. He employs a number of elves who work diligently throughout the season, mostly answering the mail and creating sugar plums. (They are licensed by Harry & David as exclusive manufacturers of these delicacies). Mr. Claus explains that he was drawn to Carmel some years ago by the temperature of the ocean water which, he says, is roughly equivalent to the off-shore tides at Point Barrow, his former home. "I decided to retire," he says, "after a few lifetimes of making and delivering toys to good little girls and boys around the world. And I chose Carmel." Well, that makes sense to us. We have always believed in SANTA CLAUS, and his decision confirms our faith. "I intend to stay here," he adds, "though I would appreciate it if you don't noise this about."
