

House burns as coals escape from rusted chimney cleanout door

By MARY BROWNFIELD

HOT COALS leaked onto an umbrella that caught fire and set the wall of a house at Dolores and Fourth ablaze last Friday night, according to Carmel Fire Capt. Ian Watts. The flames climbed the outside of the old two-story home and then crept to an attic, causing an estimated $75,000 to $100,000 in damage, but had it started inside, as most house fires do, the outcome could have been much worse.

The fire started around 7:45 p.m. Nov. 13 in the home owned by Michael Bhajan, who lives on the second floor above an apartment. He had the television on and a fire going when he glanced out the window and saw flames, according to Watts.

"He went to get the extinguisher and then realized he should call 911," he said.

Thodos' style will live on in the town he touched

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AWARD-WINNING modern architect, consummate Greek and devoted Oregon Ducks fan John Thodos died Monday morning following a brief battle with cancer. He was 75.

Born in Chicago, Ill., on Aug. 28, 1934, to Greek immigrants, Thodos moved with his family to Portland, Ore., before he was 2.

He would go on to leave a lasting impression on that city and then in Carmel, the town he called home for the past quarter-century, according to his friends and family.

"John was one of those Renaissance people," commented Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud. In a note she wrote to Thodos while he was in hospice care just before he died the morning of Nov. 16, she told him the old adage he always quoted — "Beware of Greeks bearing gifts" — did not apply to him.

"He was so multifaceted and gave so much," she said. "He not only left an imprint on our landscape with the homes that were built here, but he also contributed to shaping the design of our history."

"I just can't believe he's gone. I had a lot of respect for him and loved him," said former building official Tim Meroney. "I'm blessed to have known him."

"I don't want to sound cliché about John, because he was the least cliché person in the world," said his wife, Judy. "I fell in love with him when I was 16, and it never went away. He just gave me an extraordinary life, and I'll always love him."

She also gave him life. When he was diagnosed with kidney disease, testing revealed she was a perfect match, and she gave him a kidney in 2006.

A memorial service will be held Friday, Nov. 20, for architect John Thodos, who turned a 1940s cottage into this modern masterpiece in which he lived with his wife, Judy.

Robbery suspect caught in Kings County

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MAN suspected of robbing a woman in her home on Carmel Valley Road last week — as well as breaking into houses throughout the Monterey Peninsula and stealing cars during the past several months — was captured in Kings County last weekend. Investigators from the Monterey County Sheriff's Office and the City of Carmel interviewed 24-year-old Hector Gonzales in jail Tuesday and are building their cases against the suspect they had been seeking since the Nov. 11 robbery.

According to Carmel Police officer Jesse Juarez, who accompanied MCSO detective Mark Stevens to meet with Gonzales Nov. 17, a Kings County deputy had noticed unusual registration tags on a white Toyota Avalon and pulled the driver over. During their conversation,

WHEN THE U.S. Open is held at the Pebble Beach Golf Links next June, it will be televised in more than 120 countries, draw tens of thousands of spectators from all over the globe and do more for the Monterey Peninsula than any half-billion-dollar advertising campaign could, Pebble Beach Co. Vice President of Golf and 2010 U.S. Open Chairman RJ Harper told Carmel Chamber of Commerce members Tuesday morning.

'THEY HAVE IT ALL' — INCLUDING SOME AMAZING LUCK

From South Africa to Mission Ranch, courtesy of 'Invictus'

By PAUL MILLER

WHEN CLINT Eastwood's new movie, "Invictus," opens Dec. 11, audiences will undoubtedly be inspired by the film's dramatic and timely tale of racial reconciliation.

And with Eastwood bringing his deft directorial touch to a superstar cast that includes Morgan Freeman and Matt Damon, they'll also be seeing a movie that's bound to be an Oscar contender.

But as the story of South African President Nelson Mandela and his country's all-white rugby team — filmed last spring by Eastwood in the country where it happened — unfolds, audiences will also be hearing the movie's uplifting score, featuring a heretofore unknown a capella singing group from Johannesburg. The group, Overtone, owes its role in the movie, and the possibility of pop stardom, to a bit of incredible luck, and the generosity of Clint Eastwood's wife, Dina.

"Back in March, we were in Capetown on a two-week engagement, performing our Queen cover show," said Emile Welman, one of Overtone's tenors. But the 75-seat-supper-club gig wasn't exactly the big time, and for all their ambi-

"Of course, we'd seen in the newspapers that Clint Eastwood, Morgan Freeman and Matt Damon were in town shooting a film, and on the way to Capetown, we were joking around that maybe we'd meet them," said Ruan Van Zyl, Overtone's baritone.

Monterey County comes up empty on bike-friendly list

By CHRIS COUNTS

CARMEL IS listed among the most bicycle-friendly places in America. Unfortunately, it's Carmel, Indiana, that's on the list, not Carmel, California.

To promote bicycle riding, the nonprofit League of American Bicyclists has recognized 120 cities, towns and communities across the country for promoting "bicycling for fun, fitness and transportation." Yet not a single place in Monterey County makes the list, despite the area's stunning scenery and former railroad right of way that has been converted to a splendid recreation trail stretching from Pacific Grove to Marina.

Twenty-six different places in California (representing 22 percent of all destinations on the list) have been deemed by LAB to be bicycle friendly, including Davis, a college town near Sacramento that is one of only three communities in the country to attain Platinum status. San Francisco, Palo Alto and Stanford University have been awarded Gold status; Folsom, San Luis Obispo, Santa Cruz and Santa Barbara received Silver status; and Arcata, Brentwood, Calistoga, Chico, Claremont, Irvine, Long Beach, Mountain View, Oceanside, Riverside, Roseville, Sacramento, Santa Clarita, Santa Monica, Sonoma, South Lake Tahoe, Sunnyvale and Thousand Oaks achieved Bronze status.

So why isn't a single place in Monterey County on the list? "The only way you can be a bicycle-friendly community is by applying to be one," explained Meghan Cahill, director of communications for LAB.

The Washington, D.C.-based group offers an 87-question application, which narrows its focus to five categories — engineering, education, encouragement, enforcement and evaluation (which includes planning). There is no cost to submit an application or be recognized as a bicycle-friendly community.

Cahill said applying to become a bicycle-friendly community makes a lot of sense, and not just because bicycles are

POLLACCI WON'T FACE JURY THIS YEAR ON RAPE CHARGES

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TOM POLLACCI, the Pebble Beach man accused of raping a woman while she was disabled and then leaving her at the hospital with a bloody head wound and other injuries, will not go on trial until at least February, according to Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Cristina Johnson. Lawyers and the judge had been set to meet in court next month to commence with the trial, but everyone decided to put it off until well after the holidays, considering the difficulty of scheduling a trial during that time.

"It's also hard to get a jury during the holidays," she said. "People are going out of town or their kids are out of school."

Meanwhile, attorneys will continue researching the complicated case and preparing for trial, Johnson said.

Pollacci has been out on bail since he turned himself in to Seaside police shortly after an arrest warrant was issued for him in late February. The warrant came nearly a year after the April 2008 incident in which a woman who had known Pollacci when she lived on the Monterey Peninsula returned on vacation to the area and stopped at the liquor store on Lighthouse Avenue where he worked. She lives out of state.

At one point, they were together in an upstairs loft he had built in the shop, according to court testimony during his July preliminary hearing. She later ended up in Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, having been driven there in her rental car by Pollacci, who left her at the emergency room before dawn the following morning. Surveillance cameras reportedly showed Pollacci at CHOMP.

Wilkes Bashford files Chapter 11

UPSCALE SAN Francisco clothing company Wilkes Bashford — founded more than 40 years ago and known for its impeccable designer suits and dresses — filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy last week, a company spokeswoman said.

The bankruptcy filing was part of a strategy to sell the company's assets to a Connecticut retail company, according to Melissa Krantz.

Wilkes Bashford's Carmel Plaza store closed in October, but two other stores, the flagship San Francisco store and another in Palo Alto will remain open for now, according to Krantz. She said the company's sale will have to be OK'd by U.S. Bankruptcy Court in San Francisco.

Krantz said the chairman and founder of the company, Wilkes Bashford himself, will consult for the new owners, and the company plans to continue to honor gift cards and store credits.

She did not say whether any of Wilkes Bashford's creditors would be paid.

Community Thanksgiving hosts seek turkeys, hams, cash, clothes

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE KIWANIS Club of Monterey, led by retired Monterey County Superior Court Judge Michael Fields, will host the 39th annual Community Thanksgiving Dinner from noon to 3 p.m. in the Monterey Room at the Monterey Fairgrounds. And to fill the 2,300 plates they plan on serving at the meal — which is open to everyone — the club needs lots of donations.

Organizers also collect cash to help defray the feast's costs and accept clothing to distribute to some of the needier guests, according to Fields.

"We need turkeys, hams and we always need desserts — pies and cakes — those are always dicy," he said, adding that organizers need at least 100 donated turkeys to pull off the Thanksgiving meal, and the more pies and cakes from bakeries, the better. (Homemade and home-cooked items present food-safety issues, according to Fields, so they can't be accepted.)

The club collects donations in the Monterey Room the day before Thanksgiving, beginning at 9 a.m.

"We will cook 600 lbs. of potatoes, 200 lbs. of carrots, I don't know how many pounds of onions and celery, and gallons of cream for the mashed potatoes," Fields said. "We get bags upon bags of bread that we'll turn into stuffing. We make all the basics of Thanksgiving dinner."

Everything is made from scratch, and produce growers from the Salinas Valley and beyond provide many of the raw vegetables and other ingredients.

All the preparation is done on site in the Monterey Room's kitchen and other permanent food booths at the fairgrounds.

"We start on Wednesday with cutting, chopping and peeling in the late afternoon," he said. "But it's really early Thursday at about 7 a.m. that we get serious, boiling the potatoes for the mashed potatoes, blanching vegetables, and packaging the meals."

The turkey roasting begins a few days earlier, considering the number of birds that must be prepared, and how long they take. The guards at Soledad prison are contributing 25 turkeys, according to Fields, but the group needs at least 75 more to meet the Thanksgiving demand.

About 500 meals are delivered by volunteers to shut-ins, and about 1,800 plates will be filled during the three-hour event. Fields said guests are encouraged to take food home with them as well, and many do.

The group that fills the kitchen, decorates the hall and serves the food is dedicated, and the work always seems to get done, according to Fields.

"I neither seek nor turn away volunteers, because I never know how many people are going to come to volunteer or how many people will be in attendance," he said. "It's a very loosely structured situation. We ask people to come when they like and stay as long as they like."

Fields, who has run the Community Thanksgiving Dinner for the last 15 years, called it "the event of the social season," and said everyone having a good time is the entire point.

"Personally, I've always felt Thanksgiving is more of a community event than a stay-at-home event," he said. "And we produce really good food, because we don't use anything that comes out of a box."

To donate turkeys, hams, pies, cakes, money and/or clothing, stop by the Monterey

Room at the Monterey Fairgrounds anytime after 9 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 25, or call Fields at (831) 659-2493.

To attend the Thanksgiving dinner, which is open to all, drop by the Monterey Room on Nov. 26 between noon and 3 p.m. Homebound residents who would like a meal delivered to them should call the Sand City Police Department at (831) 394-1451 by Monday, Nov. 23.

Carmel Sands developers host community meeting

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ARMED WITH high-tech computer video and composite images showing how their redesigned hotel project would look if it were built at San Carlos and Fifth, property owner David How and Pacific Grove architect Eric Miller will host a community meeting in the Carmel Chop House restaurant on the property Sunday, Nov. 22, at 3 p.m., and are inviting everyone who is interested to attend.

At the meeting, they plan to show how they have taken the input provided by residents, business people and city officials during the design process and incorporated it into their plans for the new boutique hotel that would replace the dated Carmel Sands. The revised application is set to be considered by the Carmel Planning Commission next month.

"We incorporated everything that we thought made the building better," Miller said this week.

Those changes include having the driveway for the parking garage on San Carlos Street, adding more wood and stone to the design, more effectively separating the buildings to break up their appearance to people passing on the street, and lowering the structure on the corner from two stories to one. They also added a shop and made the interior courtyard, which would be open to the public and contain a coffee shop, fireplace, fountain and outdoor furniture, more inviting to passersby.

"There's a strong connection to the streets through the courtyards," Miller said. "It's that sense of discovery."

The meeting will be held the day after the public-comment period closes on a re-circulated environmental study of the project, How said. That study reportedly concluded any potential impacts could be mitigated.

The Chop House, operated by chef Kurt

Grasing, is located at the corner of San Carlos and Fifth and will host the 3 p.m. meeting Nov. 22. How and Miller plan to show videos illustrating what it might be like to walk through their planned hotel, and offer a tour of the property to give people a sense of how and where it will be placed. They will also answer questions.

Victoria's Secret Angel contestant in final round

CARMEL HIGH School grad Jamielee Darley, who is competing for a spot on the runway during Victoria's Secret's nationally televised fashion show Dec. 1, is one of two remaining finalists selected from more than 10,000 girls who entered the contest. Women from all over the United States vied for the role, and Darley was one of 10 chosen to live in a New York City loft during Victoria's Secret's Angels Boot Camp.

She has undergone various photo shoots and videotaped segments for national TV shows, and was voted into the top five contestants by viewers and fans earlier this month. The second round of voting on Nov. 16-17 narrowed the field to two, and the final round will take place Nov. 23-24.

"Please give her the support of your vote, so that she may fulfill a lifelong dream of walking the runway for the Victoria's Secret televised (CBS) runway show on Dec. 1," urged an email sent by Sally Larsen, who works for Darley's dad. "This show offers many options for her future, not only with the company, but in the world of modeling."

Votes may be cast at www.vsallaccess.com and www.cbs.com.

Fire chiefs, political leaders want Peninsula-wide department

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CHIEFS of several city fire departments, top elected officials and administrators met in Monterey Monday to discuss the concept of a Monterey Peninsula-wide fire department. Cal Fire, which operates stations in the Carmel Highlands and Cypress fire protection districts, was not included, according to Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud, who attended the meeting alongside three other mayors.

About 30 representatives from Monterey, Seaside, Pacific Grove, Marina, Sand City, Del Rey Oaks and Carmel, as well as the Monterey Peninsula Airport District, Presidio of Monterey, and Salinas Rural and Carmel Valley fire districts, collectively agreed to further research the concept of a united fire agency, according to a press release issued by Monterey Mayor Chuck Della Sala.

Various iterations of the idea have been kicked around for decades, and several local fire departments have consolidated or considered merging. Monterey Fire responds to emergencies in Sand City, for instance, and Seaside Fire covers Del Rey Oaks. Seaside and Marina studied a merger, though the contract didn't garner enough council support to come to fruition, and Pacific Grove was taken over by Monterey. Carmel officials have been contemplating contracting with Monterey for fire services as well.

“Multiple formal consultant studies have concluded that potential fiscal and operational efficiencies could be realized by eliminating duplicate command and administrative support services as currently exist in the multiple small fire agencies within the greater Monterey Peninsula region,” Della Sala said. “This initial discussion emphasized that there is no interest or intent to reduce the current number of fire stations or firefighters. A primary focus of joint services options is to create opportunities to enhance fire service delivery where possible, and to be able to afford to provide

CARMEL LIBRARY
NEEDS YOUR SUPPORT

In these challenging economic times, Harrison Memorial Library usage is at an all-time high. At the same time, public funding for our library has been cut. Now more than ever, the award-winning Carmel Library needs your support.

Through generous donations, planned gifts, and bequests to the foundation, small and large, from people like you, we can keep our treasured heart of Carmel thriving, growing, and serving our community. While the City of Carmel-be-the-Sea funds library salaries and building maintenance, private contributions fund everything else.

To make your Annual Gift to the Carmel Public Library Foundation, call (831) 624-2811 or go to www.hm-lib.org and click on Support the Library.

laughed. "But it was just a cereal commercial."

Meanwhile, as Overtone was having modest success during its Capetown engagement and fantasizing about the possibility of a brief encounter with Hollywood royalty, Dina Eastwood happened to pick up a flyer in the lobby of the hotel where the cast and crew for "Invictus" were staying.

"Melissa [wife of the film's producer, Rob Lorenz] and I were looking for something to do on a girl's night out," Dina said. "I don't know what I was expecting from a Queen cover show ... not much, probably."

But in the theater that night, as the seven young men of Overtone began their lyrical harmonizing — which sounds like a cross between Ladysmith Black Mambazo and InSync — Dina Eastwood was enchanted.

"I had never seen anything like them," she recalled. "They had it all."

'Are you starving?'

After the show, Dina Eastwood introduced herself to the boys from Overtone in the theater's lobby, complimented them on their wonderful show, and offered to buy them dinner. "Are you guys starving artists?" she asked. "Are you hungry?"

"We were shocked, but we knew right away she was for real," said Eduard Van Rensburg, also a tenor.

And even if the meeting went no further, Dina's generosity impressed them. "She insisted we all eat," said Van Zyl.

Dina liked them so much, she also had the idea to book the singers and the entire theater for a special show for a group from Malpas Productions during a day off from filming.

"I took a chance, and I decided to go for it," Dina recalled.

Thus, on March 22, a Sunday afternoon, the small theater was packed with tired cast and crew — among them, several of the biggest movie stars in the world.

"We were so nervous, we kept peeking around the curtain while everybody was sitting down," said beat boxer Valentino Ponsonby. "Morgan Freeman is very tall!"

"Matt Damon had on a baseball cap, and Clint Eastwood was wearing a South African hat," added Van Zyl.

The boys had cut their show in half for the special performance, deciding to go with only their best Queen hits, and they practiced them like crazy. It all paid off.

"Everyone in the crowd loved our show," said Ernie Bates, a tenor and the group's production genius. "Especially Matt Damon. He was smiling all the time."

After the concert, Damon was the first to ask for a CD, and he wouldn't take a free one. "He paid 100 rand (about $13), just like anybody," Bates marveled.

A historic rugby match

The next day, the boys from Overtone went back home to Johannesburg, where they already had a fantastic story to tell their friends and families — many of whom were a bit skeptical. "My father said, 'Humph. Did you take pictures?'" Ponsonby said. "He didn't believe we'd met Clint Eastwood."

But there was even more to come. Welman was keeping in touch with Dina Eastwood by email, and a few weeks later she told him the filming had shifted to Johannesburg, where the final of the South African rugby team's great triumph in the 1995 World Cup was being recreated at one of the city's biggest stadiums.

When shooting was ready to start, the Overtone boys headed to the stadium, hoping to get work among 3,000 extras in the stands.

While they were waiting outside a chain-link fence, Dina Eastwood sent a message to a crew member, and the next thing the singers knew, they had prime spots among the crowd, right next to the field.

Dina also sent a message to her husband, while he was directing the stadium scenes: "The Overtone boys are there. Please say, 'Hi,' to them. Do you remember who they are?"

In fact, Clint Eastwood remembered a lot more than merely who the members of Overtone were. During the weeks between the special Queen performance and the stadium shoot, Dina had played an Overtone CD in their hotel room — especially an upbeat, inspirational number, "Shosholoza," which had been a theme during the 1995 Rugby World Cup.

"I played it for him probably 50 times," Dina said. Even though he kept mum, the song made a big impression on one of Hollywood's most successful directors.

"He never told me he was going to ask them to record it for the soundtrack," Dina said.

"We were sitting by the rugby pitch, and during a break, all of a sudden Mr. Eastwood came up to us, and he asked us if we could perform 'Shosholoza,' and he wanted us to record it five different ways," Ponsonby said.

Back in the studio, they also produced a slew of other songs, and on the day filming ended, with the clock at midnight and the Eastwoods' flight back to the United States leaving in just a few hours, Overtone had the chance to present their work.

"Mr. Eastwood was listening with headphones," Welman recalled. "He loved everything."

Incredibly, most of the songs produced by the group were picked by Clint Eastwood for the "Invictus" soundtrack and will be unveiled to the world next month when the film premieres, along with music by Kyle Eastwood and Michael Stevens.

The 'wheels start turning'

Back home in Pebble Beach in April, Dina Eastwood encouraged the members of Overtone to write more of their own music and improve their harmonies, dance routines and other elements of their show. She even wrote the lyrics to one of the songs on the soundtrack, "9,000 Days," which pays homage to the amount of time Mandela was imprisoned. (Her husband wrote the music.) And then she decided to help them launch what she thought would be a very promising career.

"The wheels started turning, and I made up my mind I'm going to get this band over here," she said.

At first, her contacts with industry insiders to try to open doors for Overtone went nowhere. "We don't do boy bands," one big-time pop manager said," Dina recalled.

Nevertheless, she flew the entire group (at her own expense) to California in July, where a few culture shocks awaited.

"We couldn't believe the portions of food you're served over here," Ponsonby said.

"And everything is so clean and well organized," said baritone Shane Smit.

"And the cars stop for pedestrians!" marveled Bates.

"It's the humbleness of America that impresses me," said Van Zyl. "South Africa is so small, and the people think they're so big. And this place is so big, and the people think they're small."

While the group was visiting the magic land of California last summer, Dina Eastwood happened to mention Overtone to veteran Hollywood and Broadway composer Mark Mancina. Among his projects is the Broadway version of "The Lion King."

"South African music has always been fascinating to me, so I really wanted to meet them," Mancina said.

He invited Overtone to his private studio near Lake Arrowhead and was immediately impressed. "When they walked in and started doing their repertoire, I couldn't wait to get them organized and start recording," Mancina said.

He's working with them on a new CD, and even produced one of the group's songs on the "Invictus" soundtrack, "Colorblind," which he thinks could become a pop hit.

Like Dina Eastwood, he's been donating his talents to help the group succeed.

"So far, we're all doing this out of love," Mancina said.

For Dina, that means paying the bills, taking the young men clothes shopping, and even having them stay at her home or at Mission Ranch, where the entire group gathered Monday for a meeting with The Pine Cone.

Last Saturday, she introduced their performance at a Make A Wish fundraiser at Tehama, where they were a smash hit as $175,000 was raised for the charity.

A few days later, she took them to Los Angeles for tapings of the "Late Late Show With Craig Ferguson" and the "Ellen Degeneres Show." Those appearances will be broadcast to coincide with the Dec. 11 premiere of "Invictus." (The movie takes its title from the poem Nelson Mandela recited to himself during his 24 years in prison under apartheid.)

And after the movie comes out?

"I think this group could be No. 1 in the United States," Dina Eastwood said, looking proudly at the members of Overtone, ages 21 to 26, while a stunning view of Carmel Bay filled the window behind them.

"Our parents keep warning us not to count our chickens before they're hatched," said Smit.

"But we want to be the best in the world," added Bates.

Is your loved one receiving the best care at the most affordable price?

Your elderly loved one deserves the best possible care. But what you may not realize is that many elderly people do not need the level of care provided by a skilled nursing facility, and most prefer the warm, home-like atmosphere of our assisted living residences. In addition, we provide a secure, social environment that may not be available to someone receiving in-home care.

We have over 30 years' experience providing the elderly with excellent care, without compromise. Please contact us to learn more about Victorian's assisted living residences in downtown Carmel and Hacienda Carmel in Carmel Valley.

Police arrived first, followed by Carmel Fire engines and an ambulance, and crews from other departments that automatically respond to Carmel fires. Bhajan was safely outside, and the downstairs apartment was empty.

The fire was initially difficult to see, because it had climbed the wall to the roof and then mostly burned out on the outside, though it crept into one of the small attic spaces in the mostly open-beamed house, according to Watts. Carmel firefighters attacked the exterior, and a Cal Fire crew from the neighboring Cypress district went inside and discovered it hadn't spread too far.

The flames were extinguished in about half an hour, which was followed by extensive cleanup work and periodic checks for hot spots at 1, 3 and 5 a.m.

The home was deemed uninhabitable, according to Watts. "It was one whole attic space and a small section of the roof, as well as the wall on the north side of the building, some windows and a couple of bathrooms," he said. The smoke damage wasn't too heavy, since much of the burning occurred on the outside.

Blaze sparked by escaped coals highlights need for chimney maintenance.

Watts attributed the hasty dousing of the fire to the speed with which everyone arrived and the knowledge of their roles in fighting the blaze.

"Everyone is there right away and knows what they're doing," he said in touting agreements with Monterey Fire and others that trigger such a response.

The cause of the fire appeared to be hot fireplace coals that spilled from the back of the chimney onto an umbrella outside, according to Watts. The old fireplace has a brick cleanout into which ashes can be pushed and stored until they are cold enough to dispose of, and the compartment can be emptied via a small door on the outside at ground level. But that door had rusted away, Watts said, allowing ashes and coal to escape.

"It was a breach through the fireplace, basically," he said.

The incident served as a good example of why people should have their fireplaces and chimneys inspected and cleaned annually when the temperatures drop.

Gonzales reportedly provided a false name.

But police later determined his true identity and discovered he was a parolee-at-large wanted on suspicion of committing multiple felonies in Monterey County. Officers also discovered a no-bail arrest warrant had been issued out of San Jose.

The Hanford Sentinel reported deputies searched the car, which had been stolen during a Pebble Beach break-in, and found methamphetamine and marijuana. A 17-year-old girl was a passenger in the car and told authorities she and Gonzales had a sexual relationship. Deputies arrested Gonzales and took him to Kings County Jail, where he is being held without bail on charges of having sex with a minor, identity theft, child endangerment, drug possession and DUI.

Meanwhile, local agencies are compiling their cases against him.

The Monterey County Sheriff's Office suspects Gonzales of the home-invasion robbery in which he presented himself as a workman at a Carmel Valley Road residence but was later discovered trying to steal a safe. During the resulting confrontation, he reportedly shoved the resident's caregiver to the ground and fled in the Avalon. It was later discovered he had stolen a large amount of jewelry from the victim.

Monterey County Sheriff's Cmdr. Tracy Brown said investigators suspect Gonzales committed five residential burglaries in the past six to eight weeks.

"We have a lot more work to do, so I don't know what the final number [of crimes] will be," he said. Stevens is heading the investigation for the sheriff's office.

Juarez said Gonzales might have also broken into several homes in Carmel.

"There is no ballpark figure — it's hard to say," he said. "We're looking at any and all residential burglaries that occurred over the past year."

"I thought Judy saved his life and, by God, he was going to live forever," Meroney said.

'Giving back'

Thodos received his architecture degree from the University of Oregon in 1960. He worked for several major Portland firms before setting out on his own, and also joined the Metropolitan Arts Commission and later the Portland Design Review Commission, contributing to city policies during his tenures.

Architect Erik Dyar, a Thodos protégé, was just 9 when they met. "He was the one who sparked my interest in architecture," he recalled.

Dyar, who also attended the University of Oregon, said Thodos fervently believed in giving back to his community. In Carmel, he served on the city's planning commission, then went on to have a role in committees tackling volume standards for residential projects and green building ordinances. He had long been an advocate of environmentally friendly architecture. Thodos most recently belonged to the Harrison Memorial Library board of trustees.

"He always put civic involvement really high," Dyar said. "He always felt it was really important to be part of the community you lived in."

His architectural style was strikingly distinctive but nonetheless blended with the small scale and low-profile homes of Carmel.

"He was always able to manipulate style and proportion and materials in such a beautiful way that worked for this town," said Dyar, who came from Portland to Carmel to work for Thodos in 1991 and later established his own firm.

"Not many contemporary homes have done so well here, but he was definitely able to do that using a modern style," he said. "He was always frustrated with the little storybook cottages in Carmel because you couldn't get any light inside."

Dyar, chairman of the city's historic resources board, listed three Thodos designs he believes should eventually qualify for historic designation and preservation: the Glass House on Scenic Road south of Ocean, a home at San Antonio and 11th that exemplifies his ability to meet his clients' desires while exerting his own creative style, and the house he most recently shared with his wife, Judy, on Torres Street.

That home, for which he received an award from the American Institute of Architects, was built around a 1940s Carmel cottage, according to Judy Thodos.

And through its windows, glimpses of Thodos' colorful abstract paintings can be seen, McCloud added.

In recognition of his work, which can be found all over the world, Thodos received 14 major AIA Design Awards and was given the prestigious Monterey Bay AIA Stanton Award, which recognizes outstanding contribution to the architecture of Central California, in 2008.

McCloud said she thought of Thodos as "the go-to guy, because there wasn't a problem or an issue that lacked a solution."

Meroney, who knew Thodos for 25 years and worked closely with him on many projects and issues, said the architect had a knack for bringing people with disparate views together.

"Generally, he was there trying to work out a good rapport between the two industries, so they could design buildings that would fit our community," Meroney said. "Any problem we ever had as far as trying to meet codes and so on, we always managed to work it out."

While Thodos may have appeared arrogant or egotistical to some, Dyar said, "in his personal life, he was so warm and generous and extremely loyal to his friends and family who were close to him, and maybe a lot of people didn't know that about him."

'Life force'

Dyar was in Los Angeles when Thodos was hospitalized last week and made it back in time to see his mentor and longtime friend.

"He was such a powerful life force — he would infect anyone he was around," he commented. "You would know if he walked into a room. He had a lot of charisma and a lot of love for life and really enjoyed it. I think he would have no regrets about how he lived it."

And he would have battled the cancer that had been detected not long ago if he had thought he could win, Dyar speculated.

"John was a fighter, so if there was a way to fight this, he would have done it, but he was also realistic," he said. "I think he faced it without that much fear. On Sunday morning, he was ready for the next adventure."

During his short stay in hospice, many friends and family stopped in to talk and share stories, according to Judy Thodos.

"I think he will live forever — I heard so many stories, and they all ended in laughter," she recalled. "All the support of family and friends has been so extraordinary, and when I hear all these stories about John, he's just right here again with me. It's a very nice thing."

Several people, including McCloud and Dyar, plan to share some of those memories at Thodos' Nov. 20 memorial service, which will be presided over by a Greek Orthodox priest at All Saints Church in Carmel at Dolores and Ninth at 11:30 a.m. A celebration of his life will follow at the Carmel Woman's Club at San Carlos and Ninth across from Sunset Center.

Because her husband so much enjoyed serving on the library board and appreciated the friendships he made there, Judy Thodos suggested memorial contributions in lieu of flowers be made to the Carmel Public Library Foundation, P.O. Box 2042, Carmel, CA 93921.

Mark Twain in new stage performance

ONE OF America's greatest literary figures comes alive again when dramatist Taelen Thomas takes on the role of Mark Twain.

The Works in Pacific Grove hosts a performance Saturday, Nov. 21, of "Mark Twain and the Riverboat Balladeer."

Thomas portrays the colorful Twain at the age of 50. He reminisces about his childhood alongside the Mississippi River and how he earned a license to pilot steamboats between St. Louis and New Orleans in the 1850s. Thomas will be joined on stage a longtime collaborator, Steve Mortensen, who will play the Riverboat Balladeer.

The performance starts at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $10. Works is located at 667 Lighthouse Ave. For more information, call (831) 372-2242.

game," he said. The tournament was last played in Pebble Beach in 2000, and Tiger Woods shattered multiple records with his decisive victory in what was the 100th U.S. Open.

The 2010 tournament, open to any male, female, professional or amateur good enough to qualify (which is why it is called an "Open") will be the fifth held at Pebble Beach, making it the host of more U.S. Opens than any other course.

"There is no better time to have a U.S. Open coming to our community than now," Harper said at the well attended breakfast at La Playa Nov. 16. "We're all in need of a big boost like this."

According to Harper, 37,500 tickets — 5,000 more than were available in 2000 — are up for grabs. The basic level sells for $425 for the entire week (June 14-20), the $775 package also includes access to the exclusive Trophy Room restaurant and hangout in the U.S. Open Village at Peter Hay Golf Course throughout the week, and the $1,150 package also allows access to the Lodge at Pebble Beach all week. Daily tickets are $80 for practice rounds and $110 for competition rounds.

"Because of the economy and consumers' desire to hold onto their money until the last minute, we're not seeing the sales we normally see," he said. "That doesn't mean it won't sell out. We fully expect it to sell out."

And Harper said the USGA, the nonprofit that owns and operates the U.S. Open, is offering commemorative gifts to those who order tickets to give as Christmas presents.

Diehard golf fans

About 80 percent of the tickets will be snapped up by people who live outside the Monterey Peninsula, and many of the full-service hotels report they are already 90 percent booked for tournament week.

"Ten thousand of those tickets are going to corporate customers who will be staying in hotels like this," he said, referring to La Playa. "They'll be using banquet facilities, and dining and wining, which we all like."

U.S. Open spectators are golf fans, not the celebrity watchers drawn by the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, he pointed out. The AT&T attracts a more regional crowd that day trips to the Peninsula, while the Open will have people filling hotel rooms all week.

Add to them the workforce of nearly 10,000 people, including 5,200 tournament volunteers who come from all over the world to work, 2,400 workers provided by local public school districts, and Pebble Beach Co.'s 1,600 employees, according to Harper.

He encouraged Carmel businesses to accommodate the crowds by opening early and staying open late.

"People are going to come very early in the morning and then stay late into the day," he said. "There are long days in the summer, and I think we're all going to have a good time."

Harper said 2,000 members of the media will be covering the tournament, and many are already visiting and writing about the course and the event.

"We're working with public relations to really promote the U.S. Open," he said. "Advance publicity is really helpful."

As is the camera footage inevitably showing stunning

Monterey Peninsula scenery during the 36 hours of live television coverage and many more hours of recorded footage.

"The blimp shot you get from Pebble Beach — you cannot buy that in advertising," he said. NBC also plans to run vignettes about Carmel, Pacific Grove, Monterey and other parts of the Peninsula highlighting local customs, culture and topics of interest.

"There's no question about that," Harper commented. "You can't just show 36 hours of golf. Viewers will tune you out."

He also shared some of the logistics. The main gate will be at the top of Peter Hay, the pitch-and-putt golf course near the Lodge, and that's where shuttles from general admission parking at California State University Monterey Bay and chamber of commerce buses from Carmel, Pacific Grove and Monterey will drop off and pick up spectators all day long. In addition, an auxiliary gate located near the Carmel gate into Pebble Beach will enable people to walk in to the tournament.

Toughening up the course

Regarding what the competitors can expect, changes have been under way for the past four years under the guidance of Pebble Beach Co. co-owner and "King of Golf" Arnold Palmer, including moving trees and bunkers.

The ocean will be more of a threat than it was in 2000, when the USGA opted to shift the fairways off the coastline, which "took the greatest water hazard in North America out of play," Harper pointed out.

This time, the Pacific will be very much in play, with the routes of the fairways and placement of bunkers encouraging shots that could land in the drink. The course will grow to 7,040 yards in length, up from the 6,828 yards it was in 2000

U.S. Open tickets might be the perfect gifts for golfers on your Christmas list but still short by U.S. Open standards.

That's so "everyone can compete — not just those who can hit it a country mile," Harper said, adding that pros who have recently played the course commend the changes.

In the coming months, the fairways will be narrowed "to look like airport landing strips," and the rough will grow taller.

Two months before the tournament, play on the course will be cut to 80 percent, then reduced to 50 percent one month out, and 30 percent two weeks prior, to reduce traffic and the resulting number of divots and other wear and tear. Those reductions significantly cut into the company's revenues, but Harper hopes the U.S. Open will be profitable enough for P.B. to make it worthwhile.

Harper, who has worked for Pebble Beach close to 25 years and attended every U.S. Open since 1977, recalled a few highlights from 2000, including watching 5,000 fans doing the wave in the swaying grandstands he'd helped build but didn't have the utmost confidence in, and Tiger Woods making President Bill Clinton wait.

After sinking the winning put, the White House made a prearranged call to Harper's cell phone to congratulate the champ.

"I said, 'Tiger, the President of the United States is calling, and he wants to talk to you. He said, 'Wait a minute,'" Harper recalled.

"After a minute he took the phone and talked a couple of minutes, and hung up, and I said, 'Tiger, you put the President on hold!' And he said, 'I didn't vote for him — did you?'" the California Public Utilities Commission in 2007 to put the regional plan together, said the project would include a desal plant in Marina that would draw water from beach wells, an electricity-generating facility powered with methane gas collected at the nearby landfill, and underground storage of surplus water in Seaside.

Officials from California American Water and the various government agencies involved in the water project "are working on an agreement how this water will be paid for and developed," and as long as they "keep moving forward without interruption," construction can begin soon.

"This project is phase one and will just provide replacement water for the over-pumping from the Carmel River," Kasower said. But subsequent phases will "allow water for lots-of-record, commercial projects that need water, the hospital and other things," he added.

"The only thing that will derail it are the people who don't like growth, so they fight anything that suggests growth," Kasower warned. "Make sure your water officials don't rest on their laurels, because I may not be here to bully them into the next phase."

Nobody at the DMFPO meeting, which drew a large crowd to a ballroom in the Inn at Spanish Bay, expressed any doubts about Kasower's optimism.

And land use attorney Michael Stamp told The Pine Cone this week even he doesn't represent anybody planning to oppose the regional water project proposed by Kasower's committee, Water for Monterey County.

But Stamp cautioned against branding the regional project as the only solution to the area's water problems.

"I think it's premature to announce success and victory, and that we've finally gotten where we want to be with a water solution," he said.

"I think I'm like a lot of people. I have some cautious optimism we will soon be on the right track."

■ Cal Am can't impose moratorium, PUC says

California American Water company's request that a moratorium be imposed on all new water connections has been rejected by a state regulator.

In a Nov. 10 letter, The PUC Water and Sewer Advisory Branch of the Division of Water and Audits denied the request. Cal Am supplies water to about 40,000 Monterey Peninsula customers.

Cal Am had sought the moratorium in response to a cease and desist order imposed on Oct. 20 by the State Water Resources Control Board, which includes severely limiting the amount of water Cal Am can divert from the Carmel River.

Cal Am said if it doesn't stop new water connections now, it would make it harder to meet provisions of the the order when it's imposed.

In its decision to reject the moratorium, the PUC in its letter referenced a Nov. 3 stay of the SWRCB order by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Kay Kingsley. Kingsley granted the stay after Cal Am and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District filed suit over the order.

"The superior court's order has rendered Cal Am's rationale" for the requested moratorium "moot at this time," according to the letter, signed by James Boothe, program and project supervisor for the water and sewer advisory branch.

On Nov. 13, however, the attorney general's office dissolved Kingsley's stay.

The PUC told Cal Am if in the future it wants to request a moratorium, it must first notify its customers of the request that hadn't been done by Cal Am.

■ Attorney general seeks to lift stay of water cutback order

The California Attorney General has asked a judge to void an earlier decision she made temporarily stopping a state board from enforcing an order limiting the amount of water Cal Am can pump from the Carmel River.

On Nov. 13, the Office of the Attorney General filed notice to dissolve Kingsley's Nov. 3 stay of the cease and desist order imposed on Cal Am.

The cease and desist order, issued Oct. 20, calls for Cal Am to sharply reduce its pumping from the Carmel River, which could mean rationing for Cal Am's Peninsula water customers.

Kingsley's stay — granted after lawsuits were filed against the SWRCB by Cal Am and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District — prevents the SWRCB from enforcing the cease and desist order until a trial was held on the matter.

The attorney general's office wants Kingsley to dissolve her decision because it claims the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District didn't properly serve the SWRCB with notice it was requesting a stay of the water agency's order.

the SWRCB, the notice wasn't received until after Kingsley signed her order, according to Deputy Attorney General Allison Goldsmith.

"Because proper service was never made this court should have never held a hearing on the issue," Goldsmith wrote.

"We think the judge acted in the best interest of the people of the Monterey Peninsula by issuing the stay and do not think it should be lifted," said Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Bowie.

The cease and desist order requires Cal Am in the next year to reduce its unlawful diversions of the Carmel River by 5 percent, or 549 acre-feet, and within seven years to fully reduce diversions to a legal amount.

Though Cal Am's lawsuit contends the cutback order could jeopardize the safety of its water customers, Goldsmith said it would not be harmful in the short term.

"The reductions will not endanger the public health or safety within the next year, and the court will have ample opportunity to review the propriety of the order by then," Goldsmith wrote.

Goldsmith also noted that if the stay isn't voided, the MPWMD would "not only continue to use water beyond its permits" but would in fact "increase its water usage."

A stay of the cease and desist order would not only "preserve the status quo, but would exacerbate illegal diversions," she wrote.

The SWRCB in Sacramento voted 3-1 to impose the cease and desist order. The order also requires tens of millions of dollars in Cal Am system upgrades, restricts potable water for irrigation and could require rationing by customers.

From 2011 to 2015, the order calls for a reduction of 121 acre-feet per year until 2015, when the reduction increases to 242 acre-feet. Cal Am must end its illegal diversions from the Carmel River by 2017.

Cal Am has said the cease and desist order could mean customers would be limited to about 50 gallons per person per day, 20 gallons less than the average amount customers use on the Peninsula.

The SWRCB made an exemption for about 365 acre-feet of water in Pebble Beach for new water connections. The entitlement was granted as part of a deal between the MPWMD and the PBC for its funding of a reclamation project that irrigates Pebble Beach's seven golf courses with non-potable water.

■ Property owners warned of sharply higher water bills

The price of water for the Monterey Peninsula's biggest users will quadruple in the next few months, Cal Am general manager Craig Anthony warned a group of Pebble Beach property owners Sunday.

He said 270 of the company's customers use more than 22,000 gallons per month — and "a lot of them live in Pebble Beach" where lots are large and landscaping can be lavish.

"But if you're a large water user, you're going to start paying an arm and a leg," Anthony warned. The price for those users will go from 1.6 cents per gallon to about 6.5 cents.

The increases will be imposed to comply with state rules for water conservation, he said.

"If you continue to use too much water, you're going to be designated a 'water waster,' and we'll have to come to your house and put a washer on your meter," to restrict the amount of water that can flow.

If that happens, "your landscaping will definitely die," he said.

Even worse, warned Anthony, a former fire chief in Pebble Beach, a water restricter "will keep your fire sprinklers from operating ... and your house could burn down."

He said his company is available to help property owners who use a lot of water to develop a budget and landscaping plan so they will not be guilty of wasting water.

Because of environmental restrictions on pumping from the Carmel River and pressure from state regulators, "we are looking at very difficult times for the next two or three years, until a new water project comes on line," Anthony said.

■ Cal Am reverses course on San Clemente Dam teardown

After saying San Clemente Dam should be reinforced and left in place, California American Water has decided to side with environmental activists who want it torn down. The project will cost $84 million — most of it coming from Cal Am's customers.

In a press release Nov. 13, Cal Am said it would remove the dam and reroute the Carmel River to bypass the silt accumulated behind it.

"We're pleased to announce that we have renewed efforts to remove San Clemente Dam and the barrier it presents to threatened steelhead trout that traverse the Carmel River throughout their life cycle," said Cal Am president Robert MacLean, who was named to the job in April. The strength of the dam, which was built in 1921, is also believed to be insufficient to withstand a major earthquake.

The dam removal project requires approval from the California Public Utilities Commission.

For several years, Cal Am worked with NOAA Fisheries and the California Coastal Conservancy to remove the dam while minimizing cost and risk to water customers.

While Cal Am committed $50 million to strengthening the project and the dedication of 928 acres of the dam's area as parkland, the coastal conservancy and NOAA said they would pay $35 million needed for removal of the dam with tax dollars and private donations.

But in February, plans fell apart when Cal Am said it had been unable to find an entity willing to accept future ownership of the dam site and liability for the removal project.

In 1991, the state deemed the dam inadequate for seismic stability and flood safety.

After years of study, the Department of Water Resources and Army Corps of Engineers evaluated five options for the dam, including strengthening it and removing it. Environmental groups concerned with the Carmel River's ecosystem favored removing the dam.

Removal of the dam "will resolve earthquake and flood safety issues associated with the dam while benefiting the wildlife that depend on the river," MacLean said.

Liability issues are still a concern for Cal Am, according to MacLean.

"But with the help of environmental groups and elected representatives on the local, state and national level, whose support for the removal project is nearly unanimous," he said, "we are hopeful the liability issues can be resolved."

Irene Theresa Moore

September 2, 1928 – October 3, 2009

Irene Theresa Moore, beloved Mother, Grandmother, Great Grandmother, Sister, and Friend, succumbed to cancer at the age of 81, October 3rd, 2009 in Kailua, Kona Hawaii. She had her cherished family at her side. She was preceded in death by her beloved husband of 46 years William Lee Moore I (Bill). Born Irene Gomes, one of a twin with Dorothy in Holualoa, HI, she was raised in a strict Roman Catholic home. Her grandparent's had emigrated from Portugal, and they brought all their tradition with them, exercising their authority in family matters, which continued on for generations.

Irene met Bill on Oahu and they had a whirlwind romance and were quickly married. They moved to many places as they were in the Navy, and got to see a bit of the world. They settled in Carmel for 30 years where they raised their family, before returning to Hawaii, 18 years ago.

Irene's love for life encompassed many things, she loved; to sew and could do it beautifully, cooking, camping, people, and her family. Irene imparted her wisdom and guidance to many. Inspiring many she was nurturing, selfless, spiritual, would do anything for anybody, was courageous and strong willed. She was a guardian angel to many and guided them in her wise and capable way.

She is survived by her children, William Moore II, of Waikoloa, HI, Theresa Hvassman, and Mary Luster (Robert), both of Carmel, grandchildren Wesley, Michelle, and Samantha Moore of Hawaii, William Moore III of Monterey, Jason Moore of Reno NV, Lauren and Hannah Hvassman of Carmel, Robert (Trey) Luster III of San Francisco, Sean Luster of Carmel, four great grandchildren, brothers Roy (Marsha) Gomes, George (Isabella) Gomes, Harry (Rosaline) Gomes all of Hawaii, Tom (Jane) Gomes, sisters Beatrice (Leonard) Neves both of Portland, Eleanor (Rudy) Bodine of New Jersey, and countless nieces, nephews, cousins, and friends. She will be deeply missed and forever in our hearts.

A memorial service will be held in the small chapel at the Carmel Mission Basilica on Saturday November 21st at 10:00 am. The family requests in lieu of flowers or contributions that donations are made to The American Cancer Society.

As seen on Good Morning America, The Dr. Oz Show and in The New York Times.

Three-time Grammy winner builds bridge between blues and pop

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE GAP on the musical spectrum between traditional Delta blues and contemporary pop is as wide as the Mississippi River. But that hasn't stopped blues singer, songwriter and guitarist Keb 'Mo from building a bridge between the two distantly related genres.

Keb 'Mo performs Sunday, Nov. 22, at Sunset Center.

"He's one of those artists who is so connected to the emotional impact of his music," said Peter Lesnik, executive director for Sunset Center. "He's an icon."

A three-time Grammy winner, Kevin Morris got his start in the early 1970s playing and recording with one time Jefferson Airplane violinist Papa John Creach. He was working as a staff writer for A&M Records in 1980 when he released his first recording. Over the next decade, he played in a variety of bands, backing up legends like Bobby "Blue" Bland, Albert Collins and Big Joe Turner.

In 1994, Morris released his "official" debut recording under the name, Keb 'Mo. His next album, "Just like You," earned him his first Grammy Award for Best Contemporary Blues Album.

Blues icon Keb 'Mo takes the stage at Sunset Center Sunday.

Monologues showcased at Cherry Center

By CHRIS COUNTS

A THREE-DAY series dedicated to monologues, "Talk To Me," opens Friday, Nov. 20 at Cherry Hall

Directed by Nina Capriola, "Talk To Me" is a showcase of the talents of more than 40 different performers and writers.

The monologues are rarely longer than 10 minutes each, so if you're not compelled by a particular performance, the next one is just minutes away. For the audience, there's never a dull moment. "A monologue is a concentrated dose of drama," said Robert Reese, executive director of the Cherry Center. "Everything comes to a head very quickly."

Friday's schedule features monologues by Patrice Parks ("14 Passive Aggressive Appetizers"), Aaron Lichtanski ("A Visit to the Archive"), Dredre McCauley ("Antigone") and four others.

Elisabeth Gray performs a monologue in Cherry Hall's "Talk To Me."

John H. Thodos

John H. Thodos, an icon of American Modernist architecture, passed from us on November 16, 2009 in Carmel by the Sea.

His loving wife, Judy Thodos, whom he "pinned" with his college fraternity pin when she was 16, was by his side, as she was for many years, in all things.

John was born in Chicago, Illinois on August 28, 1934 to hardworking Greek immigrants where his Father owned restaurants. The family moved to Portland, Oregon when John was 18 months old. His Father opened a grocery store, where John worked from the age of 9. He believed that from that experience he learned graciousness, ease with people and hospitality. John loved and greatly respected his Father all his life.

John graduated from the Architecture School at the University of Oregon in 1960 worked for several major Portland firms including the internationally renowned architecture firm of Skidmore Owings and Merrill prior to opening his own firm. He had a deep commitment to improving the community through its buildings both public and private.

John left a significant legacy to his home city including major revisions of architecture policy for the city first as a member of the Metropolitan Arts Commission and later during his term as Chair of the Design Review Commission. He was a member of the Board of Directors of the Oregon School of Design and served as an Associate Professor in 1985 and 1986. John often spoke of the Pericles of Athens admonition that a citizen has the responsibility of giving back to the community.

He brought his vision to Carmel in the late 1980s, emerging as a leading voice for reasoned regulations and progressive policies in this small but architecturally significant city.

John had the Thanks of the City and its Mayor Sue McCloud, as well as her Friendship.

Over the course of his more than 40 year career, John Thodos created a body of work which reflects his love of Modernism and which was markedly enriched by inspirations from his Greek heritage.

John was an expert in fitting buildings onto challenging sites connecting indoor spaces to the outdoors, and everywhere bringing light. "Doctor Fos", doctor of light was the title of an article about John and his work. He brought light to his architecture as well as to the lives, minds and hearts of all who knew him.

He was indeed a modernist, but also a Humanist; John cared about people and solving their problems and needs.

He loved Carmel by the Sea, his adopted home of 25 years, and many of his award-winning homes are here including the celebrated "Light House" on Scenic Road and "Gallery House" in the Carmel Highlands.

John was a most often honored architect; in addition to 14 major AIA Design Awards, in 2008 John was given the very prestigious Monterey Bay AIA Stanton Award, which recognizes outstanding contribution to the architecture of Central California.

John had a love of History and of Travel, especially to Greece, and was always a brilliant raconteur.

The monuments to this fine architect are not only the buildings he created, but also the respect of his colleagues and the love and thanks he garnered from his clients, who are fortunate to live in a Thodos home.

He had a love of History and of Travel especially to Greece, or to anywhere his precious Oregon "Ducks" were playing football or basketball.

John and Judy Thodos wrote their own beautiful love story — over many decades — which in 2006 included Judy donating one of her kidneys to John.

John is survived by Judy, his many nephews and nieces and by Erik Dyar, architect, to whom John was a longtime Mentor, Friend and inspiration. He is also survived by Judy's 4 children; Julie Nitoglia, Jackie Ferere, Randy Macdonald, and Jock Macdonald, whom John mentored and who also worked with John. He was "Papou" (Grandfather) to 6 adoring grandchildren.

He was a wonderful Husband to Judy, a great and giving Friend, a gifted Mentor to young people and an inspired problem solver.

If Heaven has any problems John will be there with elegant solutions.

Funeral service will be held Friday, November 20, at 11:30 a.m. at All Saints Church, 9th & Dolores, Carmel. Reception at the Women's Club to follow.

In lieu of flowers a donation is suggested in John's name to the Carmel Public Library Foundation at P.O. Box 2042, Carmel, CA 93921 – 624-2811.

All-woman ensemble brings together the past and future of chamber music

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE ALL-WOMAN chamber ensemble, La Pietà, which performs at Sunset Center Saturday, Nov. 21, defies convention in more ways than one.

"This is a very unusual concert," explained John Newkirk, managing director for the concert's presenter, Chamber Music Monterey Bay. "They're a nine-woman ensemble from Canada, which is very different from the expectation people have of a chamber orchestra."

La Pietà was formed in 1997 when acclaimed violinist Angèle Dubeau decided to put together an orchestra of Canadian musicians. After observing that her first five choices were all women, she decided to create an all female ensemble.

In part because it's members were working on an all-Vivaldi recording at the time, the orchestra was named after the Ospedale della Pietà, an orphanage in Venice, Italy, for prostitutes and abandoned girls. Vivaldi taught music at the facility, and much of his music was dedicated to its residents.

Not afraid to take chances or stray from the popular conception of chamber music, La Pietà will play some very contemporary pieces when the ensemble performs at Sunset Center. Saturday's program features two selections by innovative modern composer Philip Glass, "Beauty and the Beast" and "Hours Suite." Also on the program are selections by Schnittke, Bartók, Piazzolla, Falla, Pärt, Desmarai, Hatzis and Dunayevsky.

"We try very hard to provide our audience with traditional chamber music," Newkirk said. "But we also like to push the envelope."

San Francisco musicologist Kai Christiansen will offer a free pre-concert lecture in Studio 105 at Sunset Center at 7 p.m.

The concert starts at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $29 to $52. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. For more information, call (831) 625-2212 or visit www.chambermusicmontereybay.org.

Homecrafters at Sunset Saturday

CARMEL'S HOMECRAFTERS' Marketplace will be held at Sunset Center Saturday, Nov. 21, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., rain or shine.

In its 39th year, the sale is returning to the parking lots on San Carlos Street between Ninth and 10th avenues following several years on Ocean Avenue. The show features artists and crafts people from Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties who subjected their work to scrutiny by a panel of judges and received invitations to sell on Saturday.

The judging ensures Homecrafters customers will enjoy a diverse collection of high-quality arts and crafts, according to organizers.

Shorter days, cooler nights can't stop the local music scene

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE NIGHTS in Carmel Valley have gotten too chilly for outside concerts, but that isn't stopping Plaza Linda Restaurant from keeping the music playing.

Singer-songwriters Janni Littlepage and Steve Noonan take the stage inside Plaza Linda Saturday, Nov. 21.

Littlepage, who lives in Carmel Valley, is an accomplished songwriter who plays keyboards and dulcimer.

"She used to sing background vocals for Loggins and Messina," local promoter Kiki Whitman said. "She can really bring a song home. Sometimes my eyes well up with tears when I hear her amazing vocal range."

Noonan, a resident of Southern California, was a part of the same Orange County folk scene in the late 1960s that produced singer-songwriters Tim Buckley and Jackson Browne. Among his musical accomplishments, Noonan co-wrote "Buy For Me The Rain," a Top-40 hit for the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band in 1967.

The concert starts at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10. For more information, call (831) 659-4229.

Also performing this week:

■ singer-songwriter Bryan Diamond (soft rock, Friday at 6 p.m., Forge in the Forest, no cover);

■ Paige Too! (jazz and blues, Friday at 8 p.m., Big Sur River Inn, no cover);

■ pianist Dick Whittington (jazz, Friday and Saturday at 6:30 p.m., Cypress Inn, no cover)

■ The Next Blues Band (blues, Friday at 9:30 p.m., the Fuse Lounge at Carmel Mission Inn, no cover);

■ flutist Kenny Stahl (jazz, Saturday at 6 p.m., Forge in the Forest, no cover);

■ Sparrows Gate (rock, Saturday at 9 p.m., Fernwood Resort in Big Sur, no cover);

■ Richard Devinck (classical guitar, Sunday at 5 p.m., Cypress Inn, no cover);

■ The Long Distance Flyers (live karaoke, Wednesday at 7 p.m., Plaza Linda, no cover); and

■ The Money Duet (rock, Thursday at 6 p.m., Baja Cantina in Carmel Valley, no cover).

Flutist Kenny Stahl, who once toured with Motown legend Stevie Wonder, plays jazz at Forge in the Forest Saturday.

MONOLOGUES

Saturday's lineup includes performances by Peter Reynolds ("New York" and "Pillow Man"), Carol Daly (excerpt from "Talking With"), Jeremy Patterson ("The Three-Minute Whale"), Jill Jackson ("The Kathy and Mo Show") and others.

Sunday's schedule — which includes winners from the Cherry Center's "One-On-One" monologue competition — includes performances by Lynn Perry ("An Actor's Agent"), Elisabeth Gray ("Crooked"), Lojkovic ("On a Bad Crazy Moon in Earla"), Patrice Parks ("Ordinary Miracles") and Bruce Stutz ("The Vanishing").

Tickets are $20 for each day's performances or $50 for the three-day event. Friday and Saturday performances begin at 7:30 p.m., while Sunday's event starts at 2 p.m. Cherry Hall is located at the Cherry Center for the Arts, which is located at Fourth and Guadalupe. For more information, call (831) 624-7491 or visit www.carlcherrycenter.org.

KEB 'MO

Keb 'Mo won his second Grammy in 1996, again winning the prize for Best Contemporary Blues Album, this time for the recording, "Slow Down," which featured a tribute to blues great Muddy Waters and a cover of his idol Robert Johnson's landmark song, "Love In Vain." He took home a third Grammy in 2004 for his album, "Keep It Simple."

If you've never heard Keb 'Mo's music, think of him as a bluesier version of Norah Jones. Just as Jones has made jazz more accessible by blending it with pop, blues, folk, rock and even country, Keb 'Mo has done the same for the blues, expanding its exposure to listeners who have never heard of artists like Waters and Johnson.

The concert starts at 7 p.m. Tickets are $47 to $67. For more information, call (831) 620-2048.

Everybody Needs a Break Now and Then

Even the most dedicated family caregivers periodically need "time off" to replenish their energy. That's what our Respite Care service is for.

Our Home Care Coordinator will visit you first to discuss your needs and wishes.

When you need a break, we will carefully select a Personal Attendant to be at home with your loved one while you are away, and to follow the routine that you have established.

You can't take good care of anyone else unless you take care of yourself!

"Central Coast Senior Services arranged for care for my parents several times and I couldn't have been more pleased. Literally within a couple hours of my phone call, they had someone in my father's home so he could return from the hospital. They provided 24-hour care for my father, who is blind, including fixing his meals and helping him bathe. I found their services to be exceptional."

Exec Sous Chef Catanzaro is sous only to boss Bert Cutino

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

HE'S BEEN cooking at the Sardine Factory for almost 25 years, but Executive Sous Chef Gaspar Catanzaro says his enthusiasm at the celebrated Monterey restaurant is undiminished — thanks to his family.

"I'm in my element in the kitchen," he said. "All the aromas bring back my grandmother's kitchen."

Catanzaro's father was born in the United States, but was sent to Italy while in the Army. There, he met his wife-to-be, and two years later, they were married. They came to New York City, where Catanzaro was born and raised. His mother and father ran a New York deli-restaurant on Bleeker Street, and his grandfather presided over a nearby bar. In those establishments, Catanzaro discovered his love for cooking.

"When I was little, I used to hang out in our kitchen, rolling meatballs, while my friends played baseball," he said. "I used to play with my sister's Betty Crocker oven while she played with my G.I. Joe."

Selling their New York properties, the family moved to San Diego in 1970 at the urging of an uncle. Catanzaro's first restaurant job was at Geno's, owned by Geno Rocco.

"He was the Bert Cutino of San Diego. I worked there from the time I was 13 to 16, making pizza dough and pizzas from scratch," Catanzaro recalled.

At 17, he went to work at Casa del Baffi, where the chef was Italian. "I started out as a dishwasher. But by the end of the first month, I was a pantry cook, and in less than a year I was entrusted with the broiler," he said.

When he graduated from high school, he worked on a tuna boat. He cooked on board and also worked the nets with Italian and Portuguese fishermen. After a month's time, found he had earned $7,000.

He stayed with the well paying job for two years, sailing all over the world. But when they were fishing off the coast of Puerto Rico, they were rammed by a Norwegian ship. He had learned all there was to know about fish, so that accident was it for Catanzaro.

He came to the Monterey Peninsula, met his beautiful wife, Joette, and together produced a son, Vito. That was 26 years ago. He also went to work for Bert Cutino, co-owner of The Sardine Factory, with Ted Balestreri.

There since 1985, beginning as "just a cook," Catanzaro has the envious title of executive sous chef. There are few in the trade. Bert Cutino, who is the one and only executive chef, relies on Catanzaro for a myriad of things.

He comes to work about 8:15 a.m., walks through the whole restaurant, unlocks all the boxes in the kitchen, does the ordering, delegates tasks to his staff, receives products delivered to the kitchen, and checks the e-mails and phone messages. At 11, he puts on his chef's whites. Tony Contreros, his day sous chef, arrives.

"Then I start doing the sauces and stocks. Arturo Hernandez is my evening sous chef and Matt Raines is the banquet sous chef. Jessica Moser is my daytime prep chef.

"When Bert and I work together, we speak Italian. Most of our conversations are about food and our childhoods."

Catanzaro takes an hour break at about 2:30 p.m., then pitches in again when he begins preparing dinner. The employees come in, and he goes over the specials with them. "Sometimes I work the line with them," he said.

"In the evening, I go into the dining rooms to greet patrons celebrating a special event. I've met a lot of celebrities who come to The Sardine Factory," he said. These include Dean Martin, Joe Namath, Robert Mitchum, Alice Cooper, Joe Pesci, Dan Quayle and a lot of other politicians.

"Even when we're not busy, we're busy," he said. "You have to have a certain personality to work in a restaurant kitchen. You have to be easy going, and you have to remember that you're only as good as the last meal you turned out. I wouldn't give it up for anything. When I wear that white coat and they call me Chef or Chef Sir, I feel like I'm accomplishing something."

Victory and tragedy, wine wisdom, local spending and Turkey Day drinks

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FOODIES HAVE long dismissed the white-with-fish-red-with-steak rule of pairing, and the art of bringing out the best attributes of food and wine remains elusive and much debated. Last Friday, the Great Wine Escape, presented by the Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association, presented a seminar designed to enlighten people on the subject.

Hosted by witty and talented chefs Jerry Register of The C Restaurant in the InterContinental hotel and Jeffery Jake from the Carneros Inn in Napa, the Secrets Seminar featured five local wines: Wrath 2008 Destruction Level Sauvignon Blanc, J. Lohr 2006 October Night Chardonnay, Ventana Vineyards 2008 Gewürztraminer, Chalone 2007 Pinot Noir and Marilyn Remark 2006 GSP (Grenache, Syrah and Petit Syrah).

After representatives from each winery talked about their wines, the chefs embarked on good pairings and “tragic pairings,” as they dubbed them while tasting wine and foraging in the kitchen late the previous night in preparation for the seminar.

They didn’t discuss rules much, but the demonstration was enlightening. Behind the row of five glasses were small plastic cups containing various ingredients. Although they encouraged guests to experiment with putting different foods with different wines, they led them through good and tragic combinations for each.

The crisp acidity of the Sauvignon Blanc, for instance, was pleasantly muted by blanched asparagus with lemon oil, but the wine became dull and flat when sipped after tasting a purée of bleu cheese and caramelized onions.

“Thanks a lot, guys,” quipped Wrath co-owner Mike Thomas.

The richer, buttery elements of the Chardonnay, which was a bit floral, were heightened by mild and creamy Castelvetrano olives from Sicily, while Marcona almonds brought out its toastiness.

“A good pairing makes you want to have more wine and more food,” Regester pointed out.

But sipping the Chardonnay with a salty, briny Cornichon had the opposite effect. It made the wine sweet, but not in a good way.

Ventana’s Gewürztraminer, which is just a touch sweet, went well with smoked ham but couldn’t possibly stand up to candied pineapple. But then, what non-dessert wine could?

The somewhat tannic Chalone Pinot Noir softened when sipped after munching on prosciutto and Parmesan but paled next to straight anchovy, and the GSP, with its notes of blackberry and earth, was lovely with smoked pork loin and Regester’s homemade ketchup. The tragedy was drinking it after eating bleu cheese and grilled artichoke — something very few wines could complement.

“Food can really take a wine and make it an unenjoyable experience,” one of the chefs summarized, and figuring out what works clearly requires a lot of experimentation and analysis.

Buy local

The City of Monterey is launching its Buy Local campaign Friday, Nov. 20, in hopes everyone, especially residents, will eat, drink, shop and have fun in Monterey, which will benefit from their tax dollars. According to Mayor Chuck Della Sala, local spending helps preserve jobs, city programs and services, and the environment.

The campaign will feature a series of videos highlighting Monterey's business districts and what each has to offer, as well as information on hotels, restaurants and nightlife, that will air on local cable TV, facebook and YouTube. The effort is the result of a partnership between the city and the Cannery Row Company, Del Monte Center, Old Monterey Business Association, Fisherman's Wharf Business Association, New Monterey Business Association and North Fremont Business Association.

Eleven Pebble Beach Resorts employees successfully completed their second step in the process of becoming Master Sommeliers — the highest level of certified wine education — according to Wendy Heilmann, P.B.'s wine and spirits manager.

The candidates passed a written test, accurately identified two wines in a blind tasting and demonstrated mock Champagne service for guests during exams at the American Chapter of the Court of Master Sommeliers in Napa last month.

Their success brings to 20 the number of Lodge and Spanish Bay employees with such laudable qualifications in wine.

Winey Sundays

Scheid Wine Lounge on Cannery Row "loves locals" and will celebrate them and their business Sunday, Nov. 29, during Wine'd Down Sunday from 3 to 6 p.m.

On the last Sunday of every month, the tasting room offers live music, gourmet snacks, sips of Scheid wines and a 15 percent discount on all wine and merchandise for customers showing identification listing Monterey County addresses. The $10 tasting fee is waived with purchase.

Reggie's Turkey Day picks

Reggie Hammond, winemaker at Ventana Vineyards for 13 years and one of the nicest guys around, is sharing his suggestions for Thanksgiving wines and offering discounts to customers who accept them.

"The real challenge with this tasty meal is that it is normally served family style," he wrote in a letter to Ventana fans. "Essentially, you need one or two wines that will pair nicely with all of the foods."

Hammond prefers to start the festivities with light hors d'oeuvres and a well chilled glass of Dry Rosado, a beautiful, completely dry rosé of 90 percent Grenache and 10 percent Syrah with bright strawberry and watermelon notes.

For the main event, he recommends spicy and perfumy off-dry Gewürztraminer for white, and elegant and delicate Pinot Noir for red.

To take Hammond up on his suggestions, visit the tasting room above Tarpy's Roadhouse on the Monterey-Salinas Highway near Canyon del Rey. For 15 percent off, go to www.ventanawines.com for details.

CHEF

He tries to leave about 8:30 or 9 p.m., and goes home to Joette and their two 7-month-old mini-Yorkie dogs. "They're sort of my hobby now," he said.

But to further emphasize his devotion to his work, Catanzaro said, "I want to be buried in my chef's jacket with The Sardine Factory logo on it."

The Sardine Factory is located at 701 Wave St., Monterey, and is open for dinner only from 5 to 9:30 p.m. Sunday through Thursday, and until 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The lounge is open nightly from 5 p.m. A special menu is planned for Thanksgiving. Call (831) 373-3775 for information or reservations.

SUNSHINE AND Marshall Broecker, 15 and 12, have shared their home with mom Carrie, Dad Scott, feline brothers and sister Tufty, Kona and Betty Boop, and about 100 foster dogs over the years.

Mom and Dad have devoted much of their lives to providing a better life for animals by volunteering with rescue groups; fostering dogs until a good, permanent home is found for each of them; running a pet sitting business; and for the past year, publishing Coastal Canines, a truly wonderful dog magazine.

Sunshine, a senior German shepherd and greyhound mix, used to fly kites on Carmel Beach by holding the line in her mouth and running with it up and down the beach, attracting admiring spectators. Now that she's almost 16, she's slowed down a lot, but she loves to swim in a heated therapy pool in Carmel Valley to calm her arthritis and to retrieve balls thrown in the pool for her.

Sunshine and Marshall go on an outing twice daily at Asilomar or Carmel Beach or Mission Trail. If it's a little after 9 a.m. or 4 p.m. – their walking times – Sunshine lets Mom and Dad know about it.

Marshall, 12, a Chihuahua and perhaps pug mix, is all boy; when he's on the beach, he owns it. He loves little dogs and will go right up to them and ask them to play. He more or less ignores large dogs, probably because he remembers, when he was 2, the indignity thrust upon him by a disrespectful husky who picked him up by his sweater, whirled him around and flung him quite a distance.

To make up for this traumatic past, Marshall has a stylish wardrobe and a miniature couch he reclines on by the window with a view – keeping an eye on things.

How not to lose an election

AFTER A hard-fought campaign, feelings on the losing side can understandably be hard. Nevertheless, one of the important rituals of American politics is for unsuccessful candidates to graciously concede defeat, congratulate their opponents, thank their supporters, and look to the future for themselves and the people they hoped to serve. While you don't have to come right out and say, "I lost because the majority of voters liked the other guy better," you certainly do not try to claim you lost because your opponents lied or because the voters were stupid.

Unfortunately, the losers on two key ballot measures in the recent local election evidently believe they're above such silly traditions and common courtesies. They are also delusional about why they lost.

Backers of incorporation in Carmel Valley had to know their cherished Measure G was headed for defeat. And when the results were announced on election night, it indeed lost by a solid margin. Yet its backers refused to concede, holding out hope that provisional ballots remaining to be counted would somehow reverse the result. Last Friday, the final ballot count was revealed, and Measure G still lost. Nevertheless, its supporters pointedly refused to concede in the traditional way.

Instead, incorporation proponent Glenn Robinson sent out a combative email to his allies, attributing the loss to misinformation supposedly spread by their opponents:

"One wonders how many voters voted 'No' because they were told their address would change, they would have to sewer, they would have to pay a business license tax or their flood insurance rates would automatically go up — all false claims made repeatedly by the opposition campaign leaders," Robinson wrote.

He left out the fact that incorporation proponents also spread plenty of B.S. around. For example, they repeatedly claimed defeat of Measure G would result in homes and apartments carpeting Carmel Valley's hilltops. Yet, ridgeline development is already banned by the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The truth is that Measure G failed because most residents of Carmel Valley don't think incorporation is a good idea. They were not misinformed, and they are not stupid. Get used to it, Glenn.

Even more shocking was a letter to the editor received by The Pine Cone this week (and which appears elsewhere on this page) from Skip Lloyd, an opponent of the sale of Flanders Mansion. Lloyd does not live in the City of Carmel; nevertheless, he takes it upon himself to explain to the people who do — and who must pay the bills for Flanders Mansion and the legal battle over it — why the lawsuit to stop the sale should proceed despite the overwhelming vote in favor of the selling the mansion.

First, he claims the vote should never have been held, because the EIR on the sale of the mansion has not been finalized, and, therefore, the people voting to sell it could not have known the environmental impacts that might result from the sale.

And then he claims voters should be glad the lawsuit was filed in the first place because, without it, the vote would not have taken place.

He thereby contradicts himself. And he is wrong on both counts.

■ Nobody reads EIRs. Especially not the public. The function of these documents is not to fully inform decision makers and the public about the environmental impacts of a project, but to cause permit applicants to go to a lot of extra expense, and to provide a pretext for them to be sued. When an EIR is required, it is usually something to be regretted by anybody who cares about fair play and doesn't like to see lots of money spent for nothing. In the case of Flanders Mansion, the EIR requirement is nothing more than a ridiculous waste of everybody's time and the taxpayers' money.

Furthermore, the fate of Flanders Mansion has been debated so much and for so long, not only is everybody fully informed about it, they are sick of hearing about it.

■ The results of Measure I do not in any way show that the election was a good idea; rather, the overwhelming vote in favor of selling Flanders Mansion demonstrates that the election was never needed in the first place.

We have pointed out on this page over and over again that public sentiment was obviously and overwhelmingly in favor of selling Flanders Mansion. Otherwise, the last four city council elections would not have turned out the way they did.

Here at The Pine Cone, we believe in majority rule. Therefore, we also believe the idea of incorporating Carmel Valley should be dropped for the next 20 years. We also firmly believe Flanders Mansion should be sold without any further ado. And that people who have something else in mind should find another subject to obsess over.

Flanders election a mistake

Dear Editor,
Confusion needs to be cleared up regarding the question of how it can be that the pending lawsuit over the EIR regarding the Flanders sale, if lost by the city, could void the public vote on the issue as presented to the voters.

First of all, recognition should be given to the fact that the California Environmental Quality Act was enacted to insure that the facts regarding environmental impacts of projects got out before they were voted upon. CEQA has served California well, resulting in reining in ill conceived projects, once CEQA caused revelation of unacceptable environmental impacts. Example: The once proposed Hatton Canyon freeway.

Second, regarding lawsuits, it should be recalled that the citizens would not even have had their required vote in the Flanders matter if the city council had not been sued and forced to hold the election regarding Flanders which the law required. Third, at the city council hearing at which the date for the Flanders election was set, the Carmel Residents Association presented a thoughtful statement to the council urging it to delay setting the public vote until after the lawsuit, which had been filed before that time, was resolved.

The reasoning behind the CRA's statement was that, if the city lost the lawsuit, the council would have wasted the cost of the election and have put the community through an election wherein, in the end, one's vote was meaningless. The city council turned an abrupt, deaf ear, disregarded the CRA's position, and pushed ahead with setting the election on a date which it knew was before the lawsuit could be completed.

Therefore, if one's vote turns out to be wasted, it is the city council's fault, not that of those who brought the lawsuit in order to make the city council comply with CEQA's purpose to adequately explore the environmental impacts of a sale of Flanders, so that the city and the public were fully informed before voting on the issue.

Francis ("Skip") Lloyd,
Carmel

'Sad, selfish and shortsighted'

Dear Editor,
On Nov. 4 the residents of Carmel were presented with Measure I, and 63 percent chose to sell the Flanders "mansion," which has served no purpose the last 10 years other than to create a maintenance nightmare and cost the City of Carmel well over $800,000 because a small group is constantly bringing the matter into the courts. How sad, selfish and short-sighted is this group that they are willing to waste our precious resources to fulfill their own needs? During this lengthy legal battle, no one has used this property, no improvements have been made, and the city has been maintaining it, and the Lester Rowntree memorial garden is unkempt and an embarrassment. The money that the city has been forced to pay in frivolous lawsuits should be going to our schools and our emergency services.

The majority has spoken, the parkland will remain, and the "mansion" will be restored to its original use as a single-family dwelling. It is a win-win for all. It saddens me deeply, especially in these precarious economic times, that a small minority can attempt to override the majority in a democracy.

Two percent Tuesdays, green cameras and a new surf shop

NOVEMBER USHERS in the start of the holiday season, and with it comes the time when most of us gather around the table with family and friends, to enjoy and give thanks for all that we have.

Not everyone in our community is fortunate, however, and Pilgrim's Way is reaching out in a special way. The venerable independent bookseller on Dolores Street instituted a program called "2 percent Tuesdays" because store owner Paul Fridlund gives this percentage of sales to a selected local nonprofit organization. The program was set to start in October, but the stormy weather on October 13 (a Tuesday!) delayed this until November. The first recipient organization will be Community of Caring Monterey Peninsula, which provides character development programs for young people.

Fridlund said of Pilgrim's Way, which just celebrated its 40th year in business: "You might think at this age, it would mean we're going gray, but actually we're going green." The store is actively taking steps to reduce its carbon footprint by its choices in packaging, procedures and choices of vendors. They plan to build an area to capture rainwater at its next-door Secret Garden and are holding a tile fundraiser to pave the pathway that will lead to the water catchment tanks.

Another store that is getting on the eco-friendly bandwagon is, appropriately enough, Green's Carmel Camera Center, which opened at the southwest corner of Fifth and San Carlos, up the hill from the Post Office, in the spot that housed Wolf Camera. Store manager Marty Sloop said that the shop has instituted new processes that have eliminated many of the chemicals used for photo development and processing.

Em Le's, a long-time Carmel institution on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, has eliminated its dinner service. Hungry diners, however, can still enjoy the same hearty, delicious breakfasts and lunches that have made this a popular spot for locals and tourists alike.

The window for the world-famous Maverick's surf competition in Half Moon Bay opened on November 1 — just in time for the opening of Liquid Surf Shop. The store is moving from its downtown Pacific Grove location to the east side of Lincoln Street, just north of the Cypress Inn, and should be open in a few weeks. Owner Sean Weiman said his store will carry all the apparel, gear and accessories needed for local surfers, surf wannabes and probably even those surfers who, in fact, "ride mountains".

Finally, as we head into the holiday season, please remember to look first to Carmel businesses and nonprofit organizations which are the foundation of our community. Give them all a big "thanks," especially during this time of Thanksgiving, by patronizing these merchants, hoteliers, and restaurateurs and recommending them to your friends near and far.

Final tally ends incorporation drive — at least for now

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE MONTEREY County Elections department last Friday released the final ballot count for the Measure G vote, an event that marks the official defeat of an eight-year effort to incorporate Carmel Valley.

The final tally for the Nov. 3 election included 2,592 votes (47.48 percent) supporting incorporation and 2,867 votes (52.52 percent) opposing it.

Early election results showed a similar margin, but the initial count didn't include hundreds of provisional ballots, mail-in ballots, damaged ballots and ballots dropped off at polling places. In response, town supporters held out hope for 10 days that the late count would swing the vote in favor of creating a town.

Town Council candidate Glenn Robinson conceded defeat this week, but he took one last shot at his political opponents, accusing them of running an unethical campaign.

"One wonders how many voters voted 'no' because they were told their address would change, they would have to sewer, they would have to pay a business license tax or their flood insurance rates would automatically go up — all false claims made repeatedly by the opposition campaign leaders," Robinson charged.

Responding to Robinson's comments, incorporation opponent Bob Sinotte commended town supporters for the efforts, but urged them to be civil.

"You and your group ran a smart, well-oiled campaign and I congratulate you," Sinotte said. "Our 53 percent was comparable to President Obama's margin of victory, which he has referred to as a mandate.

Demeaning our success merely adds to the rancidness of the process. If there's anything to learn, it's that voters are tired of the meanness and belittling."

While incorporation supporters have insisted they have no immediate plans to revive the incorporation effort, Sinotte doesn't believe it. "They're going to bring incorporation back every two years," he predicted.

existing services into the future."

Although McCloud agreed the meeting resulted in consensus that a jointly run fire department has merit, she disagreed with Della Sala's statement that "the executive managers agreed to seek policy-level guidance from their respective policy boards and direction to move forward with further analysis as necessary by the end of December 2009."

No deadlines were mentioned at the meeting, she insisted, though she said the topic will probably be raised at Carmel's December city council meeting.

"It's very early days, and the question is, 'Is there enough shoulder to the wheel that people want to go forward and see what develops?' And I think the consensus was, 'Yes, we need to do that,'" McCloud said. "We certainly are interested in looking at the concept, and we would probably be derelict if we didn't."

good for the environment and provide healthy recreation.

"Bicycles are good for the economy," Cahill explained. "With more bicycles and pedestrians in the downtown areas, local businesses tend to do better. When people are traveling at a slower rate, they're more likely to stop and enjoy downtown areas. Plus, if people are saving money on automobiles and gasoline, they can spend more money on other things."

Kaki Chen, a planner with the Transportation Agency for Monterey County, said her agency is working to make Monterey County a better place for bicyclists, and she singled out three projects — all with secure funding sources, she said — to illustrate that commitment.

■ The Carmel Hill and River Class 1 Bicycle Trail Project — Originally, the Carmel Hill project aimed to construct a 1.7-mile paved trail from Rio Road to Canyon Drive. Along the way, the route would parallel Highway 1, pass beneath a lighted underpass that would be built at Carmel Valley Road, and continue up Hatton Canyon until reaching Canyon Drive. After receiving complaints from residents about paving the trail, the section that travels through Hatton Canyon will remain unpaved. As a result, the cost of the project has been scaled back from $3.8 million to $1.7 million, TAMC project manager Todd Muck explained. He said construction is scheduled to begin in the spring.

■ Castroville Railroad Crossing Bicycle/Pedestrian Path Project — A railroad undercrossing and path would connect an existing bicycle and pedestrian path with North County High School and the future Castroville train station. The cost to complete the project is estimated at $6 million.

■ The Moss Landing Sanctuary Scenic Trail — A new segment that will be added to the existing Monterey Bay Sanctuary Scenic Trail, the Moss Landing trail will travel 1.17 miles between Moss Landing and Jetty roads. The cost is estimated at $4.9 million.

The completion of the three projects would no doubt help improve Monterey County's reputation as a bicycle-friendly place. But Chen reminded residents that TAMC — like most government agencies — is unable to fund any new projects because its coffers are empty. So addressing other possible routes — such as paths that would make it easier or safer to travel from Carmel to either Monterey or Pacific Grove — will have to wait.

In addition to the three paths Chen identifies, two particularly ambitious routes — each part of a much larger project — are still in their planning stages. One, a pedestrian and bicycle trail paralleling the Carmel River, would be part of the Big Sur Land Trust's proposed Carmel River Parkway plan, which aims to create a trail hub at the mouth of Carmel Valley for a vast trail system.

The second route would be a pedestrian and bicycle trail paralleling Highway 1 along the Big Sur Coast, which eventually would tie into the future California Coastal Trail that would span the coast for 1,100 miles between Mexico and Oregon.

According to LAB, there are 57 million bicyclists in the United States. The League boasts 25,000 members, and is affiliated with 700 bicycle groups with a combined membership of more than 300,000 bicyclists. For more information about LAB, visit www.bikeleague.org. For more information about local projects that will aid bicyclists, visit www.tamcmonterey.org/programs/bikeped/index.html.

Suffering from a head wound, a blown ear drum, bruises and scrapes, Jane Doe 1 spent several days in the hospital, during which detectives interviewed her about what occurred.

She did not remember how she became injured and insisted she and Pollacci had not had sex, though an examination and DNA testing by a sexual assault response team nurse indicated otherwise.

Defense attorney Andrew Liu has accused the district attorney's office of unjustifiably accusing Pollacci without significant proof, considering the victim can not remember how she was hurt and does not recall having intercourse, which could have been consensual.

Pollacci is charged with three felonies for the forcible rape of a woman who was unconscious and unable to give consent. Those charges have not been amended to include additional crimes or other victims, Johnson said this week, though during the July preliminary hearing, she introduced the testimony of alleged past victims of Pollacci, who is a registered sex offender.

Pollacci, whose family owns several liquor stores, remains free on $400,000 bail. Terms of his freedom include not being alone with any woman who is not related to him, not giving a false identity, and not working in any job where he could access a person's identification.

Tim Allen
presents
Al Smith's
"Carmel Legends"

One of the enduring games played by residents of Carmel is "Why, I could have bought that place for 'X' dollars back in 19xx! Hardly anyone who's been here for more than 15 years has failed to play this game. But the all-time loser was a Frenchman named Honore Escolle who did, in fact, sell the square block on which CARMEL PLAZA now sits for $10 in 1893. Honore had come from France in 1852 at the age of 15. He started a bakery and general store in Monterey, but his real passion was ranching cattle. He bought the wooded hills at what is now the north end of Carmel, but his cows were outflanked by the deer, so he sold it. We don't know that his sale of the site of CARMEL PLAZA, then 27 lots and now 50 thriving shops, was a distress sale, but by then Honore was in his late fifties, had 14 children and may have felt some pressure. Let's see, the real estate commission would have been 60c then, maybe $600,000 now... "Why! We could have bought..."

brother and sister would visit often. Homeowner had cause to believe they knew who was responsible and furnished police with the information. Police contacted the brother of the homeowner who admitted to taking the plants, as they were his mother's property. The homeowner did not wish to press charges but did want police to contact the brother and inform him that he was no longer allowed on the premises. The mother had recently moved out, and the brother relayed he would not come back. Brother was warned and informed of the trespassing laws.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: After a motorcycle rider ran the red light at Highway 1 at Ocean Avenue and headed northbound, rider was stopped and determined to be DUI and false false tabs of motorcycle to avoid DMV registration fees. The 51-year-old male subject was arrested.

Carmel Valley: Traffic stop at Rancho Fiesta and Miramonte. Suspect was driving under the influence of an alcoholic beverage and was arrested by CHP.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ambulance dispatched to a medical emergency at a San Luis Avenue residence. Ambulance arrived at scene to find the resident in bed. She adamantly denied that she called 911. Resident insisted that she was without injury and only wanted help retrieving a nutritional drink from her fridge.

Carmel area: During an investigation of a fight at an inn on Rio Road, it was determined that a female was in violation of a restraining order by being near her former boyfriend, the protected party. She was arrested.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2

Carmel-by-the-Sea: An employee of a business in the commercial area wished to report an unruly subject harassing her verbally. She said the subject was upset that she was friends with a local doctor who has since been incarcerated. This subject would yell unwanted comments toward her and would enter her business and cause a scene. She wished to have the incident documented in case it escalated any further.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Woman requested a report for insurance purposes and in the event a lady's 18-carat white gold diamond tennis bracelet containing 45 round full-cut diamonds is found. She said the last time the bracelet was seen was Oct. 29 during dinner at a restaurant on Dolores Street. She contacted the restaurant, but nothing has been turned over to them.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man wanted to make a report in the event a Polo jacket and prescription glasses are turned over to the police department for safekeeping.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: While attempting to park in a lot at Junipero and Sixth, a driver's foot got stuck to the gas pedal, and the vehicle collided with another parked car. The vehicle then drove over a planter box onto a sidewalk and collided with a parked car on the street. The vehicle continued and collided with a street light, stop sign and fire hydrant. Vehicle towed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: San Carlos Street sports bar employee reported that approximately two weeks ago, a brother of another employee he was engaged in an argument with grabbed a knife off a cutting board and walked toward him. The brother with the knife continued to argue with the person and challenged the person to fight outside without the knife. Person stated the brother who had the knife never threatened him physically or verbally while holding it. Person stated he didn't want to prosecute the brother and only requested a report after his employer asked him to do so, because the brother that held the knife had been fired and was threatening to file a lawsuit.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance dispatched to Torres and Fourth for a teenage female who suffered a twisting injury to her left knee. Patient went to CHOMP with the ambulance.

man grabbed her by the arm, leaving a bruise, and pulled her hair. In addition, he also kicked her in the leg, leaving a bruise. Case continues.

Carmel Valley: During the course of a vehicle check, a passenger exited the vehicle from the back seat and approached deputies in unprovoked aggressive manner. The male appeared to be intoxicated and was ordered to remain in the vehicle. The male attempted to exit the vehicle three times and did not follow verbal commands. When deputies attempted to remove the male from the vehicle, he actively resisted. He was arrested.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A vehicle traveling eastbound on Eighth Avenue failed to stop for a stop sign and collided with another vehicle entering the intersection at Casanova Street. One passenger was injured, and the driver of the other vehicle was cited for a stop-sign violation.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Non-injury accident on 10th Avenue.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: CPD units responded to an interrupted grand theft to a vehicle located at Mission and 13th. Suspects were gone on arrival, and nothing was taken from the vehicle. Suspects were male juveniles approximately 13 to 16 years old. Suspects were last seen running southbound on Mission Street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A Lasuen resident called in regards to a possible building code violation. An exterior light on a neighbor's was shining into his home, and had bulb wattage that exceeded code specifications. Information referred to the planning department for followup.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance dispatched to a medical emergency in a residence on Guadalupe Street for a male in his 50s who had suffered a seizure. Patient taken to CHOMP by ambulance.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance dispatched to a senior residence on Lincoln Street for an uninjured male in his 90s needing assistance back to bed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine dispatched to a business office on Lincoln south of Fifth for an alarm activation due to removal of sheet rock and dust. Alarm silenced and alarm company notified.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Police officers, fire engine and ambulance dispatched to Monte Verde and Eighth for a motor-vehicle accident with injuries to two patients. Ambulance treated and transported a 35-year-old female with lower left back pain to CHOMP, and the driver of the second vehicle, an 86-year-old male, refused medical treatment or transportation to CHOMP and signed a medical release with the Pebble Beach: Resident reported the theft of jewelry.

Carmel area: Male resident of Palo Colorado Canyon reported being in an argument with his mother over how loud he was talking on the phone.

Carmel Valley: Woman was found to be a danger to herself.

Carmel Valley: Carmel Valley resident reported that her sister had taken excess medication and was sick and possibly suicidal. Deputies checked the welfare of the subject at a Carmel Valley Road residence and found no evidence the subject wanted to harm herself. At the subject's request, she was transported to the hospital for medical treatment.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic collision on Seventh Avenue. Property damage only.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject lost her wedding ring when on the beach.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A car was observed peeling out in front of the police station on Junipero. Units contacted the 30-year-old subject, and he was found to be unlicensed. Driver was cited for exhibition of speed and being unlicensed. Vehicle was impounded.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of possible child abuse on Junipero Street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine dispatched to a residence on Carpenter south of First for a biological hazard. Arrived on scene to find a sewage spill in the driveway which had entered the side of the street but not spread to the storm drains or created other threats. Made sure the occupant did not run any water until the sewer line was cleaned out.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine dispatched to a business on Lincoln between Fifth and Sixth. Arrived on scene and found the alarm system sounding, possibly due to dust from construction work. Shut down system. Alarm put in test mode by alarm company during working hours. Made sure there were no other fire-related problems.
