San Jose man drowns, disappears in surf

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A 34-YEAR-OLD San Jose man died in the surf at Carmel Beach Saturday afternoon after going for a swim with his soon-to-be brother-in-law and getting caught in a rip tide.

Despite the efforts of police officers, firefighters, lifeguards, the U.S. Coast Guard and even the MetLife blimp, the body of Luis Sillas-Camacho was not found.

"He and his brother-in-law had entered the ocean just west of Del Mar, and after a few minutes of being in the water, the son-in-law swam back to shore," said Carmel Police Sgt. Mel Mukai. "However, Mr. Camacho was pulled away and never made it back to the shoreline."

The drowning occurred at around 1:15 p.m. Feb. 13 under sunny but hazy skies.

Police received an emergency call and alerted the fire department, which took control of the incident. Police services officer Jeff Olinger managed to contact and coordinate with the captain of the MetLife blimp, which was providing television coverage of the AT&T Pebble Beach

Contributions, endorsements alter city politics

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH THIS week's announcement that former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, a Republican, wrote a $100 check in support of Carmel mayoral candidate Adam Moniz, and U.S. Rep. Sam Farr, a Democrat, endorsed council challenger Jason Burnett — who has also contributed more than $200,000 to Democratic Party candidates and political causes during the past decade — some are decrying the intrusion of the political parties on a nonpartisan city race.

"Various mayors have expressed their concerns that our cities aren't big enough to have partisan politics, because it tears friendships apart," said Mayor Sue McCloud, who is seeking her sixth two-year term. "These are nonpartisan elections, and there's no place for parties in this."

Despite his strong support of Democratic candidates and causes — evidenced by 2008 campaign contributions that included $4,600 for Sen. Barbara Boxer, $10,000 for the Monterey County Democratic Central Committee, $8,500 for the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, $28,500 for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee and $32,100 for presidential candidate Barack Obama — Burnett agreed with McCloud.

"It's important we keep partisan politics out of elections and out of our small town," he said. "As the saying goes, 'A pothole doesn't care who fixes it.'"

And Burnett, who is a grandson of Hewlett-Packard founder David Packard, described his history of big-money political contributions as "irrelevant."

Rose seeks third full term, touts know-how, initiative

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ATTORNEY GERARD Rose, who joined the Carmel City Council when Sue McCloud became mayor a decade ago, said he's seeking another four-year term because experience is needed to help the city through tough economic times. Furthermore, he said the city's ambulance company requires the guidance he is best suited to provide as a member of the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance board.

"This is a really scary time for Carmel and for the Central Coast, and I think it's important that there be a sense of continuity when it comes to budgeting and long-range planning," he said last Tuesday. "The short-range planning, anybody can do when they put their mind to it, but the long-range planning requires experience."

Criticisms of the current administration for poor business downtown are unjustified, according to Rose, since the city is suffering the effects of a recession that's not just local, but

'Carmel was the best place in the world'

Glenn Leidig, town's biggest fan, dies at 98

By MARY BROWNFIELD

HE WAS as inseparable from the fabric of Carmel-by-the-Sea as anyone, right up until his death Feb. 13 at the age of 98.

A lifelong resident of Carmel, except when he was circumnavigating the globe with the Merchant Marine or serving in the U.S. Navy, Glenn Leidig was born in a Salinas hospital to Fred and Clara Leidig. His arrival prompted greetings from Frank Devendorf, manager of Carmel Development Co. and one of the founders of the city.

Addressed to "Master Leidig," Devendorf's Feb. 6, 1912, letter was touching: "My dear little fellow: Your father and mother have announced your arrival at their home, and I want to congratulate you on the selection of such dear and desirable parents. I trust you will grow up a great joy to them, and an honor. Wishing you a long and happy life, I am, Lovingly yours, JF Devendorf."

He lived up to Devendorf's mandate and loved being a kid in Carmel.

C.V. landmark collapses into pile of rock and mud

By CHRIS COUNTS

ROBINSON CANYON Road in Carmel Valley doesn't get a lot of traffic, but for residents who frequented the narrow and winding country route, Whale Rock was a beloved landmark.

Perched above the road at a sharp curve, the 20-by-50 foot rock formation looked so much like a whale that an anonymous local artist painted a large eye on it. But gravity and erosion took its toll on the rock, and last Saturday, it gave way.

"I came home Friday night after the Craig Ferguson show at Sunset Center and the road was open," said Bruce Dormody, a lifelong Carmel Valley resident who commutes along the road. "When I went out to go fishing Saturday morning, the county had some dump trucks there and a crew working on it. The rock just collapsed."

The demise of Whale Rock didn't surprise Dormody. "After the rains in January, I noticed a crack had opened up in it," he observed.

TECHNOLOGICAL GLITCH INFLATES BIG SUR RAINFALL TOTALS

By CHRIS COUNTS

AFTER A two-day storm pummeled the Big Sur coast in mid-October, one rain gauge used by government agencies measured more than 20 inches of precipitation.

Officials and residents shook their heads in disbelief at such a staggering volume of rain. Well, it turns out they had good reason to doubt the reading on the gauge, which is capable of producing inflated readings under windy conditions, two government hydrologists confirmed. And the gauge sits atop 3,254-foot Mining Ridge, which just happens to be a very windy place.

The gauge possesses a tipping mechanism designed to measure rainfall, explained hydrologist Jason Demers, who works for the Monterey County Water Resources Agency.

“The mechanism can tip back and forth due to wind instead of rain,” Demers said.

The MCWRA receives rainfall data from Mining Ridge through radio transmission. The information is used to help other agencies monitor the risk of flooding — a particular concern after extensive wildfires in 2008.

Demers said he has learned from experience that he can’t trust the Mining Ridge gauge to be reflective of Big Sur’s overall rainfall.

“We are aware of some flaws in the system,” he said. “It’s helpful to look at surrounding gauges.”

Meanwhile, the National Weather Service receives the rainfall data through the same radio transmission and posts it on its website. Jeff Kopps, a hydrologist who works for the NWS office in Monterey, said his agency is also aware of the inflated rainfall totals it receives from Mining Ridge. “We share the same concerns as others when we see those high totals,” Kopps noted. “We are definitely aware of the problem, and while we still use the data, we take it in context.”

Widespread media reports in October of Mining Ridge’s rainfall totals — which the National Weather Service published on its website — raised many eyebrows, including Demers’. “We were surprised to see that 20 inches was posted,” he said.

Also surprised was Kate Novoa, whose blog extensively covers Big Sur weather issues.

“That makes sense,” responded Novoa last week when she was informed the Mining Ridge rain gauge is capable of producing inflated readings.

Novoa said she was skeptical when she first saw the October readings. Like the gauge on Mining Ridge, Novoa’s home is located on the Coast Ridge, but her rain gauge recorded considerably less rain from the same storm.

And as Novoa was quick to point out, different parts of Big Sur can receive wildly varying rain totals — a fact that media reports often ignore. A friend of hers, who lives about 30 miles up the coast in Big Sur Valley, also measures rainfall at her home.

“Her totals are always lower than mine,” she added.

Flanders is parkland no more

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITHOUT ANY discussion or public comment, and with no changes to the law they preliminarily approved last month, Carmel City Council members unanimously voted Feb. 2 to finalize the abandonment of Flanders Mansion as parkland. The city purchased the mansion, which is located just inside Mission Trail park, in 1972 but has never managed to put it to public use, and on Nov. 3, 2009, a strong majority of residents voted to sell it.

In order to facilitate that, even as it fights a lawsuit filed by the nonprofit Flanders Foundation seeking to stop the sale, the city council had to “formally abandon and discontinue the Flanders Mansion parcel located at 25800 Hatton Road as parkland,” which will allow the city to offer the parcel for sale. With the Feb. 2 vote for final approval of the law declaring the abandonment, Flanders will officially cease to be part of the park in early March.

Provided no legal rulings interfere with the council’s goal of selling the mansion, before a private buyer can step in, the Surplus Land Act dictates the city must give notice to select nonprofit agencies that the historic Tudor-style mansion is for sale. Those groups will have 60 days to notify the city they are interested, and to negotiate the purchase or lease of the property.

City attorney Don Freeman said any deal will reflect the fair market value of the home, since the city is not required to sell it for anything less.

If no nonprofit agency buys the mansion, a private owner will have to comply with public easements, numerous requirements and a litany of contingencies to ensure the historic home remains intact and visible to people walking through the surrounding Mission Trail park.

Planning commissioners split over painted metal roof

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A MONTE VERDE Street homeowner can have a metal roof painted in a weathered copper color, a divided Carmel Planning Commission decided last Wednesday. Representing the Jernstedt Trust, Rob Nicely of Carmel Building & Design brought samples of other uncoated metal roofing materials, as commissioners had asked for last month, but said his client only wanted a painted metal roof, which is much less expensive.

"I made a list of most kinds of metal roofs that could be used and brought samples of every commonly used roof," he said, including steel, zinc and cortend — steel that develops a protective coating of rust. "My client likes zinc but is not interested in installing it, since it's three times as expensive."

Instead, the owner asked for a painted metal roof — just as she had at an earlier hearing — but now in a weathered copper color rather than green.

Planning and building services manager Sean Conroy said the city's Design Guidelines state "roof materials should be consistent with the architectural style of the buildings and with the context of the neighborhood," and "metal, plastic and glass roofs are inappropriate in all neighborhoods." On rare occasion, the city has allowed metal roofs, and last month, the city council expressed support for their use under certain circumstances.

"The commission should review the proposed roof material and determine if it is consistent with the intent of the design guidelines, which is to maintain and enhance the character of the residential district," Conroy said in his Feb. 10 report.

Commissioner Victoria Beach objected to the painted metal, saying it belonged in a strip mall, not on a Carmel house.

"When you look through the forest at a roof and it looks like an automobile, that's one thing," she said. "Even if it's a beautiful automobile."

Commissioner Steve Hillyard agreed with Beach and said he hoped the homeowner would consider a natural metal roof, but chair Jan Reimers said she was inclined to agree with the request.

"I've had personal experience with a metal roof and haven't found it to be anything other than wonderful," she said. "This house is located in a way that it won't be significantly visible from the street. I don't think it will be a glaring use of this product."

Commissioner Robin Wilson mentioned the fire-safe aspects of metal roofs in a forested area like Pescadero Canyon, where the home is located, and new commissioner Keith Paterson, who had served on the design review board before it was disbanded, said it might be appropriate for the Jernstedt house.

"This roof is a little different than some others you would review, because the only other option is tar and gravel," Conroy added. He also pointed out the design standards are guidelines, not laws.

"It may be exception to the rules," Paterson said. "They have been approved in certain circumstances."

The Art of CARPETING & DECOR

with Dan Jones

BAMBOO FLOORING

Timber bamboo, which comes primarily from China, is a prized renewable resource. It emerges from the ground at up to six inches in diameter, can shoot up 24 inches in a single day, grows up to 40 feet, and achieves maturity in four years. Bamboo flooring is often as hard as oak and maple, and it is more dimensionally stable than other common types of hardwood floors. For flooring, narrow strips of bamboo are laminated together to form planks, which can be glued or nailed to the subfloor. The boards come in a variety of widths and lengths and have tongue-and-groove edges. Color ranges from creamy tan to a darker caramel. Bamboo can be stained, dyed, or otherwise finished onsite.

Rising to the challenge of your interior projects is our greatest ambition here at CARPETS & FLOORS, INC. When you have choices to make among the many flooring materials available today, we'll be happy to discuss them with you. Our ideas are only one part of our full range of services. We also provide quality products, friendly service, and experienced installation. Call us when your decorating agenda calls for professional attention.

HINT: Most manufacturers of bamboo flooring offer compatible trim pieces such as thresholds and baseboards that lend a uniform appearance and help it blend with other areas of the home

Police & Sheriff's Log

The bombs were just road flares

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 31

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a subject in the area of San Carlos Street yelling at passersby. Subject was evaluated, interviewed and counseled.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A person reported that a swimmer was in need of assistance and appeared to be tired. Another citizen, who was surfing, came to assist the swimmer ashore. Public safety personnel responded but could not locate the swimmer. Apparently, he had already left the scene.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: An anonymous citizen found a wallet near the street front and forwarded it to a staff member on-duty at a store on Lincoln Street. The wallet was forwarded to a mailing center for proper shipping and handling to the owner.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance dispatched to the Mission for a female juvenile who had suffered a syncopal episode. Parent signed a medical release with attending paramedic.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine dispatched to a business on San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh. A smoke detector activated due to a malfunction.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine dispatched to First between Dolores and Lincoln for a TV cable in the roadway. Cable was secured/flagged, and Comcast Cable notified.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ambulance dispatched for a male DOA on Guadalupe Street. Upon arrival, contacted caregiver. EKG confirmed patient deceased. Ambulance clear of call.

Carmel Valley: Suspect was contacted at Esquiline Road and Carmel Valley Road and found to be in possession of marijuana.

Carmel Valley: A fight occurred between golfers and Robinson Canyon Road residents near the 3rd hole of Carmel Valley Ranch Golf Course. Both parties requested no prosecution.

Big Sur: The Monterey County Sheriff's Search and Rescue

Team, in conjunction with San Luis Obispo County Search and Rescue, San Luis Obispo City P.D. and U.S. Forest Service conducted a further search of the area of Lion's Den near Fort Hunter Liggett in Big Sur for a missing 74-year-old San Luis Obispo man. He had been reported missing on Dec. 23, 2009. His vehicle was discovered on Fort Hunter Liggett property in the wilderness area of Los Padres National Forest on Jan. 23. Extensive searching of the area has been conducted over the past two weekends, with no results or indications as to the man's whereabouts. The ground search has been suspended, pending further investigative leads. The case continues with SLOPD.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 1

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person called in regards to a suspicious subject possibly casing the interior of the store on Dolores Street. Information was obtained and forwarded to patrol personnel.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Resident reported the possible theft of her cell phone from her place of work on Camino Real.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle stopped in the driveway of a Lincoln Street care home at 2242 hours, and the 47-year-old female driver was subsequently arrested for possession of crack, crack pipes, being under the influence of narcotics, providing false I.D. to an officer, false registration tabs and three outstanding warrants. She was lodged at county jail after a urine test. Vehicle towed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine and ambulance dispatched to Lincoln Street for a female in her 80s complaining of a headache and dizziness. Patient taken to CHOMP by ambulance.

Carmel area: Resident reported Internet fraud. FBI is investigating and needed a report filed in the jurisdiction where victim resides. Outside assist report filed.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Two juveniles, ages 16 and 17, were cited on Junipero Street for possession of marijuana and tobacco products.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person on Dolores Street reported that a subject was selling flowers in the commercial district directly to citizens. The subject was contacted and warned concerning the need for a business license.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle owner reported that someone driving a black sedan backed into her vehicle on San Carlos Street while she was having dinner and then left the scene without leaving a note.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Walk-in medical at the fire station on Sixth Avenue for removal and cleaning of a tick bite. With advice, understanding and risks of Lyme disease, patient signed medical release.

Pebble Beach: Resident reported a domestic dispute between her neighbors.

Big Sur: Resident reported his locked vehicle was broken

Burglars break into pro-am trailers

SOMEONE BROKE a window in each of two trailers parked in a dirt turnout on 17 Mile Drive near Ocean Road, climbed in and stole laptops and communications equipment worth thousands of dollars last Monday, according to Monterey County Sheriff's Cmdr. Tracy Brown. The trailers and their contents were put there for use during the week's AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

While Brown was still waiting to learn what was missing from one of the trailers, he said the thieves took three portable radios and extra batteries worth a total of $2,235 from the other. He did not know how the radios were going to be used during the tournament, but he said they were high-end equipment suitable for maintenance or security, for example.

"There's some evidence and some followup we can possibly do," he said. A suspect cut himself on the broken window while climbing through, leaving blood behind.

"DNA evidence is very useful, but the problem is, because the backlog is so big for the state lab, it's hard for them to do anything other than violent crimes," he said. "But it's a possibility, so we're trying to get that through."

Thief pilfers pricey wine

A MAN carrying a large tote bag may have absconded with four bottles of high-priced wine from The Cheese Shop Tuesday morning. The store's staff didn't notice the theft when it occurred but reported the loss to Carmel Police Department shortly before 2 p.m. Feb. 16.

"It was $1,300 worth of wine," said Sgt. Paul Tomasi. "These are very expensive bottles."

The stolen wines included a 1979 Dunn Vineyards Howell Mt. Cabernet Sauvignon priced at $500, a 2000 Cabernet Sauvignon from Thorevilos Vineyard worth $275, a 1994 Dalla Valle Vineyards Cabernet Sauvignon valued at $215, and a $350 Armand de Brignac Ace of Spades Champagne — which comes in a bottle covered in gold embossed with a spade emblem.

"Someone came into the store, and without their noticing, took four bottles off a display rack and walked out," Tomasi said. The theft occurred sometime between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., and one employee remembered a man carrying a large canvas bag had come in earlier "and inquired about expensive wines but didn't make any purchases."

Gallery burglar leaves Champagne behind

PERHAPS THE culprit just wanted a nice place to sip some bubbly and check out art, or maybe he was hiding in the Robinson Canyon Road gallery. Either way, the person who broke into the business, messed with a sculpture and left a partially consumed bottle of Champagne behind didn't steal anything, according to Monterey County Sheriff's Cmdr. Tracy Brown. "Two windows were broken out," Brown said. "One was boarded back up — I don't know why — and in the other window, all the glass was removed."

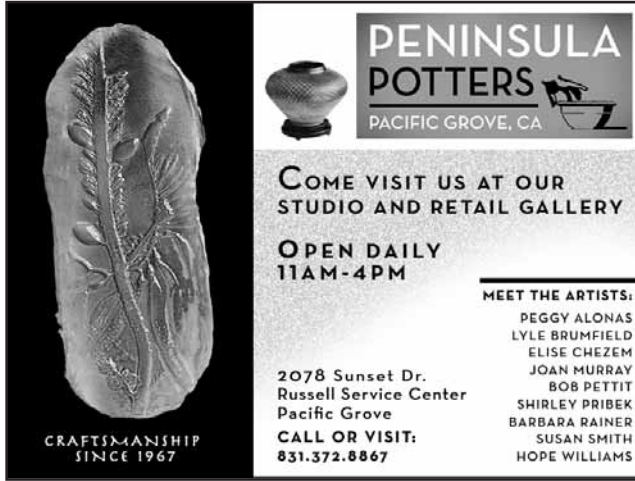

The break-in was reported Feb. 13. but it's unknown when the suspect broke in, and whether he had gone in and out of the glass-less window more than once.

"There was damage to a metal sculpture," he said. "It had some spiral designs in the middle and somebody unraveled a couple of them." The damage was estimated at $100.

Deputies investigating the break-in also discovered a nearly full "bottle of Champagne sitting there," he said. "So that was a little different. There was nothing taken. It looks like somebody went in and enjoyed the art."

The report did not indicate the brand of bubbly the suspect had left behind, and Brown said the sheriff's office might process the Champagne bottle for fingerprints.

Mary Jane Frost
1924 ~ 2010

Mary Jane Frost lost a ten month battle with Leukemia and passed away in her Carmel home on February 10. She was born June 12, 1924 in Oxnard, California. Mary grew up in Southern California, graduated from Hollywood High School and attended UCLA where she met her husband, Bill. They were married 68 years. Mary and Bill moved to Carmel by the Sea in 1975 and spent their happiest years in this community.

Mary worked as office manager for Dr. John Forbush for 13 years before retiring and pursuing her passion, photography. She was able to take photography classes at MPC and learn from some of the best photographers living in the Monterey Bay area.

Her black and white photographs reflected her love for the Carmel, Pacific Grove and Monterey area. San Francisco, Sedona, Arizona, Santa Fe, New Mexico, and the big island of Hawaii also played a role in her ever expanding black and white photography portfolio.

She was a founding member of the Imagemakers and considered her time with her Imagemaker friends most precious. She exhibited her black and white photographs and her "computer scans" throughout Monterey County. She was named Volunteer of the Year in 1998 at the Center for Photographic Art.

An active member of the Carmel Foundation, she taught "Photoshop" computer courses for many years. Mary is survived by her husband, Bill, her children, Bill Frost of Sparks, NV, Kathy and Jim Beard of Cardiff, CA. Peggy and Larry Holmes of Bonsall, CA, Amy Frost of Carmel, CA her grandchildren, Patrick and Nicole O'Rourke, Lisa and Glenn Pogue, Sarah Logan, Eamonn and Holly O'Rourke, and two great-grandchildren, Eamonn and Dagur O'Rourke.

At Mary's request, there will be no memorial service. She hopes her friends remember her each in their own way. Donations in Mary's name may be made to the Carmel Foundation.

nance on our roads or the need to reduce the number of unnecessary lawsuits," he said, adding that taking care of such matters is simply "good government."

And he didn't say whether the contributions were a sign he has his eye on higher political office.

"I'm absolutely committed to serving my town in the best way I know how, which is on the city council," said Burnett, 33.

He touted his supporters from both parties and said there's no room for taking political sides in Carmel, where efforts should be made to avoid divisiveness. He pointed out his ability to cross party lines, particularly in his work for the EPA under a Republican administration and for a Washington, D.C., think tank that brought together liberals and conservatives. And he said when he met Obama, he spoke to him with the same intent, encouraging him to reach out to Republicans in dealing with energy issues — Burnett's area of expertise.

This week, Farr backed Burnett, saying, "I'm more than happy to endorse Jason Burnett for Carmel City Council. I've known Jason for many years, and I'm impressed with his knowledge, integrity and deep commitment to public service. I look forward to the great work he'll do for my home town."

That support arose from a longtime friendship, according to Burnett, and the significance is that Farr represents Carmel and the Peninsula in the U.S. House of Representatives, not whether he's a Democrat or a Republican.

"He grew up here, I grew up here and we're friends, and I value that friendship," he said. "He's our hometown congressman who has served this area really well."

McCloud observed that Burnett is the first candidate for city office to ever secure an endorsement from Farr.

"This is the first time I can remember him entering Carmel politics, when he lives outside the city and is not a voter in the city," she said of Farr, whose house is just outside the city limits.

She also expressed doubts about Burnett's and Moniz's support from farther afield. "We've tried to keep our endorsements to Carmel and its sphere of influence — people in Carmel deciding for Carmel, not people from some other county," McCloud added.

Perhaps the farthest flung is Bush, whose $100 contribution Moniz announced in a press release Tuesday. Moniz said the former Florida governor's support "should, at minimum, eliminate the utterly false and baseless accusations by my opponent that I lack sufficient 'contacts.'"

He pledged to be fiscally conservative and end "the era of reckless spending" that he said has occurred under McCloud.

"I am honored and humbled that people from all across our great country, and from all walks of life, are so concerned with the current state of affairs in our beloved village that they have decided to become involved in my campaign for mayor to restore transparency, openness and accessibility in city hall," he said in response to inquiries about the role of partisan politics in Carmel's April 13 election. "We residents know our unique village is like no other in the world, and the involvement we are seeing from those on the outside demonstrates how vitally important this election is for the future of Carmel-by-the-Sea."

"In this election, we are going to restore our sense of community. Together, we are going to restore Carmel to being the brightest star in the constellation. We can't keep looking at Carmel's future from the rearview mirror. It's time for a new approach."

national and international.

"It's sort of perverse to act as though a city council or its boards or chamber or economic development committee are somehow letting us all down," Rose said.

He pointed to some signs of recovery, such as Khaki's moving into the former Wilkes Bashford space in Carmel Plaza, and other vacancies being filled.

"Capitalism is sloppy and it's ruthless — it takes awhile to catch up," he said. "The best we can do is to look for opportunities, develop them as best we can, and use our pulpit to preach the gospel of cooperation."

Rose also said the time has come to spend money for the betterment of the town. While he said it's a mistake to refer to the city's $9.7 million in reserves as a "surplus" since much of that money is dedicated to certain uses, he advocated spending some of it to take care of infrastructure.

"We need to do a better job of grading our priorities," he said.

According to Rose, those deserving funding include law-enforcement communications systems that are "disjointed" and sometimes ineffective, pot holes that need to be filled by an outside contractor if city crews are too busy with other work, and the purchase of a beach cleaner like the Barber Surf Rake, which is much more efficient at picking up charcoal and litter.

Renovation plans have been in the works for years, but the Forest Theater needs improvements sooner rather than later. "I've been singing this song for almost five years, now," he said. "I want the theater to be safe, and I want it to be accessible."

Rose advocated hiring more people to help plant and care for trees, since much of the city's forest is old and dying.

"We can't let it decay any more," he said. "We just can't."

While many of these projects have not been fully addressed due to lack of revenues — and it's unlikely more money than expected will pour in this year — Rose made a statement he's fond of repeating: "We've been careful and our money was set aside for a rainy day, and because it's raining, it's time to do more and spend more."

Rose also wants to serve another four years to help see CRFA, which was jointly created and funded by the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District and the City of Carmel, through its transition to city ownership.

Last year, when the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District revealed it was suffering major money problems, CRFA's administrative structure was revamped, with Carmel taking over many of the business aspects. Rose anticipates the organization will be amicably dissolved sometime in the next six months.

Carmel would then own and operate its own ambulance, which will also respond to emergencies at the west end of Carmel Valley to cover for the county ambulance provider, AMR.

"My passion is CRFA, and it's a critical time for CRFA," he said. "I'd hate to see it die for lack of experience."

Rose also sees the oft-cited contention from council and mayoral contenders Jason Burnett and Adam Moniz that city hall lacks transparency as a red herring. During the past decade, council meetings were moved to a later time to better accommodate working people, and they were televised and put on the web. Before then, "if people wanted to find out what was going on, they had to go to city hall and demand information — which they sometimes got and sometimes didn't." He also said past councils were prone to fighting, but the current lineup is respectful even when members disagree.

"Before I joined the council, I would go to the meetings, and there would be an incredible amount of bickering, and that's a very rare thing now," he said. "We don't have to be unfriendly, and I'd hate to see that happen again. Even if the faces change, we still need to be civil. It's the only way to get stuff done."

Other issues

■ Water — The problem created by the state's declaring the Monterey Peninsula's main water supply illegal is exacerbated by a lack of leadership locally and in Sacramento, according to Rose. He commended Mayor Sue McCloud for taking the initiative to represent Carmel as the State Water Resources Control Board seeks to impose tough pumping limits, but "she can't do it alone."

"The city needs to take positions on some of the alternatives, like desalination," he said, and be more forceful and active in seeing a project through to completion. "If we get adverse orders to cut back on our water, it's going to kill our tourism."

■ Beach fires — "They're one of our oldest traditions, and it would be a tragedy to ban fires on the beach," he said, but people need to clean up their debris and safely extinguish their fires. "If I get reelected, I'm going to insist on getting one of those beach cleaners."

■ Unleashed dogs — "If you have a dog that's out of control or going to get in fights, I don't want them on our beach," he said. Police volunteers could help keep order and perhaps be given the power to issue citations to people who don't comply, Rose suggested. "The answer is enforcement, not to change the rule. I love the fact that dogs can go down there and be free."

■ Historic preservation — "That's a battle that we won," he said, citing the lack of appeals of historic designation and projects as evidence. Poorly written and inaccurate reports landed many buildings on the city's inventory of historic properties, but after dozens of owners filed appeals, and many eventually won, "the historic resources board started taking a harder look, so we started seeing a lot fewer of them."

■ Home size limits — "I would not touch those limits with a 10-foot pole," Rose said. City building rules are strict but still allow for creativity, and he would like to further encourage unique designs by offering concessions when projects exhibit a certain level of individuality.

■ Redevelopment of older hotels — Permit requirements often inhibit innkeepers' abilities and desires to upgrade their old properties, according to Rose. "As a city, you have to give a little to get a little," he said. "Yes, I would work with the hotel, but it's not just a question of working, it's giving them incentives, even if it means overlooking some ordinances that would otherwise make the retrofit impractical."

Crosby, AT&T fan extraordinaire has attended 51 years in a row

By KELLY NIX

ACCORDING TO officials with the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, ticket sales this year were strong, with the crowd helped out by some very nice weather.

Among the thousands of spectators, few could boast Carmel resident Buck Breiholz's accomplishment.

Since 1959, Breiholz has attended the legendary golf tournament, known back then simply as the Crosby, for 51 consecutive years.

"It's been a tradition, and we certainly don't want to break the tradition now," Breiholz, 75, told The Pine Cone.

An avid golfer himself, Breiholz first began attending the tournament as a young man while living in the San Francisco Bay area.

"In the first year, I came with a couple of friends for the day," he said. "And then we started to come every year."

The small core of friends whom Breiholz attended the tournament with for the first few years grew quickly.

"The group picked up to six to eight guys," he said. "My brother moved out here in 1964 and he brought a couple of friends, and it went on and on. We kept up the annual same-time-next-year group."

By 1986, the Crosby picked up a major corporate sponsor and was renamed the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am. That was the year Breiholz's wife, Sylvia, began attending the event.

Though he doesn't regularly follow the careers of individual golfers, Breiholz said this year he was interested in seeing David Duval, the 38-year-old PGA player who tied for second at the Pro-Am after years away from the sport.

"I wanted to see how he would do, and he did very well," Breiholz said.

For Breiholz, some of the Crosby's stand-out years include two separate decades the greens were covered with snow.

"I think it was in 1961 or 1962, we first had snow," he said. "It was really cold. Then we had it again in about 1977 or 1978. It was amazing to look out on the 18th Green to see a winter scene."

The 1960s and 1970s featured a cornucopia of larger-than-life celebrity players, according to Breiholz. "In my mind those were the years of the big celebrities," he said. "The Rat Pack was here. Dean Martin played every year, and he was a pretty good golfer."

And the atmosphere of the tournament was more party-like, less corporate and more relaxed.

"Back in those early days, it was a really a fun deal," he said. "It wasn't very serious golf for a lot of them, certainly not the amateurs."

Players were more accessible and security wasn't as tight as it is now, either

"It was much more casual," he said. "You could walk the fairway with the golfers and they would socialize with you in The Tap Room."

Buck recalled one year at the Crosby when he and some friend were in The Tap Room and one of Breiholz's friends had been talking to actor Jack Lemmon about the benefits of yoga, before giving the actor a demonstration.

"They were both on the floor of the hallway doing yoga, after many drinks, of course," Breiholz said.

Even though he prefers watching the pros more than the celebrity golfers, he said Bill Murray is one celeb he's seen year after year who is still entertaining.

"Even with all of his clowning around, he plays pretty well," he said.

When The Pine Cone asked Breiholz how he felt about having attended more than 50 pro-am golf tournaments, Breiholz said it made him feel "old." Despite that, he said he'll continue to attend the tournament as long as he can.

Buck Breiholz of Carmel has attended every Crosby and AT&T Pro-Am for the past 51 years. Breiholz, shown here in his home, holds a Crosby event badge from 1979.

PGA golf pro gets help with laundry, gives out VIP passes

By KELLY NIX

WHEN PGA Tour golfer Craig Bowden walked into Sudz Laundry in Pacific Grove last Thursday, he was hoping to get a lot of laundry cleaned in a short period of time.

Bowden, who had played the first round in the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am earlier that day, brought three loads of clothes and his 2-year-old daughter's stuffed dog that was covered in chocolate ice cream.

"He said 'Is there any way we can get some laundry done tonight?'" said Loni McCallum, who owns Sudz with her husband, Kevin. "It was 6:30 p.m. and we were supposed to close at 8."

And Bowden wanted Sudz to do his laundry while his family went to dinner at the Sardine Factory.

"He said, 'We'll pay extra,'" McCallum told The Pine Cone.

Kevin agreed to rush the laundry without charging extra, and he called in Loni to help sort, clean and fold the clothes.

"When my husband found out Bowden's name, he was able to rattle off his golf stats," McCallum said.

Grateful Sudz could do his family's laundry on short notice, Bowden said he would set the McCallums up with a complimentary weekend pass for the pro-am.

When the laundry was done at about 8:30 p.m., they met the golfer at the Sardine Factory parking lot to deliver the clothes — and the freshly washed stuffed dog, which Bowden said his toddler needed in order to fall asleep. Bowden gave them a free weekend pass to the pro-am, which entitled them to VIP access.

"We were planning on going for a day, but we weren't planning on being comped for the whole weekend," she said.

The next day when the McCallums were

LEIDIG

old," he told The Pine Cone in a 2008 interview. "It was called 'The Cherub and the Cat,' and the cat got all the raves." Leidig figured he had performed in seven Forest Theater productions before he was 12.

After attending Sunset School from 1918 to 1925, he went to Monterey High for four years, since Carmel had no high school of its own in those days. There, he played baseball and football, and ran track, and was later offered a football scholarship at Oregon State, where he met his wife-to-be-of-75-years, Marian.

But first, he wanted to see the world, as well as get away from a young lady he'd met at junior college in Hollister who wanted to get married.

"A guy in Monterey had a cannery, and he said, 'If you want to go to sea, tell me,'" Leidig recalled during the interview. "I wanted to get out."

So he registered with the Dollar Line/Merchant Marines in San Francisco as a cadet. "I signed up, and my family didn't even know it. I sat down for dinner, and I said, 'I'm leaving for Shanghai at 8 a.m. next morning.' Mom went through the roof, but Dad said, 'Let him go.'"

He was gone three months, and after returning attended Heald Business College with his cousin, Martin. But boredom drove him out of school after three weeks, and he set to sea again on a route that included Italy, France, the Suez Canal, the Mediterranean, New York and the Panama Canal.

"We sailed right by Carmel, and I almost jumped off," he recalled.

While at Oregon State from 1930 to 1934, Glenn met Marian at a dance, and she admitted being impressed by his travels, since she had never even been out of Oregon. They married Sept. 9, 1934. Their only son, Don, was born in 1936.

In 1938, they moved back to Carmel, and Leidig went to work for the family, which had a store and still owns and manages a lot of property in town. He then landed a job at the post office in Monterey.

Leidig was also known for his knack for rescuing damsels in distress — particularly, girls drowning at the beach, considering his strength as a swimmer (an activity he continued throughout most of his life). On one occasion, he and some friends were playing touch football on the beach near the bottom of Ocean Avenue when they were alerted to a problem at the 13th Avenue cove. Four Carmel girls, all under the age of 12, had gone swimming and gotten caught in the current, and Leidig and his friends ran down the beach and plunged into the water after them.

"Each one got a girl," Leidig said in 2008. "The tide was pretty tough, and we were swimming parallel. My girl said, 'You let me go, or we'll both drown,' and I said, 'Don't talk like that.'" The rescue was successful.

On another occasion, while Leidig was working in an Ocean Avenue store, his uncle, who was fire chief at the time, came in and told him a woman was drowning. Robert Leidig asked for his help in saving her.

"So I was changing my clothes while we were going down Ocean Avenue. I went in, and she was damn near dying," he said. "It was a lot of work — I almost passed out. She had had a breakdown in the middle of the night and decided to kill herself."

After the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor in 1941, Leidig enlisted in the U.S. Navy and ran the fleet post offices, serving in Pearl Harbor, Guam, Saipan, Iwo Jima, Yokosuka and Toyoko. He retired as a lieutenant commander in 1966 and returned to the postal service in Monterey at the Naval Postgraduate School, from which he retired as supervisor in 1971.

"That's where I met guys like Alan Shepard, and we became friends," he recalled in 2008. "When you handle their mail, they're very friendly."

He and his wife also owned and operated Carmel Preschool for 25 years.

In 1986, he and his son built the Plaza San Carlos, which is best known as the location of Thinker Toys, on the spot that was once his father's car dealership. The top floor was their home.

He called Carmel "the best place in the world."

Leidig played baseball in the Abalone League, served on the Carmel Unified School District board for six years and the planning commission for three years, and was a founding director of the Carmel Heritage Society and a director of the men's golf club at Rancho Cañada. He was a member of many civic organizations, including the now defunct Project St. Bernard, 20/40, Yes for Carmel and the Monterey Elks.

"I was in awe of him, because he was an extremely capable man, and much of his success was self made," his son said Tuesday. "He was always my father, but he was a real good friend."

Leidig is also survived by his wife, Marian; his granddaughter, Kristin Leidig-Sears; and his great-granddaughter, Regan Leidig-Sears. He was predeceased by his brother, Dale. Marian reported the family was with him shortly before he died at a Monterey care home.

A memorial is being planned.

DROWNED

Garden Road to pull the state parks truck out of the sand at the surf line," said Cal Fire Battalion Chief Robin Hamelin. The truck had been used to launch the lifeguards' watercraft and became stuck due to the surf.

Hamelin said the Monterey County Sheriff's Dive Team also arrived at the beach but did not enter the water, presumably because the victim, who reportedly went swimming in long pants and no shirt, could not be spotted. The Coast Guard sent a boat and at least one helicopter.

After an extensive search, "there was no sign of him, whatsoever," Mukai said, and the effort ended just after 4:30 p.m.

Carmel Beach is well known for its rip tides, which can trap swimmers and carry them out to sea, exhausting them as they fight to return to shore. Several have drowned there, but the way out of a rip tide is to swim parallel to the current.

The following day, Mukai said, another swimmer entered the ocean and was reportedly between 50 and 300 feet from the beach. He appeared to be struggling, which also prompted an emergency response, but he made it back to shore and declined a ride to the hospital.

"He was lucky," Mukai said. "Why he entered the water, I don't know."

Unexpected musical partnership blossoms at historic Big Sur inn

By CHRIS COUNTS

RICK CHELEW'S standup bass barely squeezes into the pint-sized dining room, but that's just about the only thing that's not a perfect fit when Nico and Rick perform at Deetjen's Big Sur Inn.

On Tuesday nights, Chelew and pianist Nico Georis offer up a colorful, eclectic and somewhat unpredictable collection of tunes for the inn's guests and a growing number of music-loving locals.

Chelew, 57, who plays bass for the Cachagua Playboys and Andrea's Fault, has been playing locally longer than Georis has been alive. Georis, meanwhile, is a gifted 28-year-old pianist who's musically wise beyond his years. Together, they form a musical partnership that has bloomed under the roof of Deetjen's dining room.

"I got our old piano tuned a couple years ago just to see what would happen," said Deetjen's general manager Torrey Waag, telling the story of how the inn became Big Sur's newest music venue. "Nico appeared, then Nico brought Rick, and now musical magic happens every Tuesday at Deetjen's."

When Nico and Rick first played together in Deetjen's dining room, neither realized the session would turn into an enduring creative partnership.

"Our music was really born out of that room," Chelew explained. "Nico got a job playing solo there on Tuesdays last winter. Sometime in April I came down to jam with him. We'd never played any of those tunes together. I have recordings where you can hear him calling out the chord changes to me."

The inn — built by Norwegian immigrant Helmuth Deetjen in the 1930s — helped to shape the partnership.

"Our music was strongly influenced by that old roadhouse building, the folks who work and dine there, and probably the ghosts and energies of 'Grandpa' Deetjen and the many folks who have inhabited and rejoiced under that hand-hewn roof," Chelew said. "It seems to be that music has always been in the room and just needed a conduit to express itself."

Tuesday night, the duo's many charms were showcased in Deetjen's intimate dining room. There, against a backdrop of toasting wine glasses, flickering candles and the inn's collection of antiques and Big Sur artifacts, Nico and Rick provided a soundtrack for the inn's guests and about a dozen locals. Opening with a jazzy instrumental version of the bluegrass standard, "Shady Grove," the duo served up a tasty selection of jazz, blues, folk and pop standards, as well as a few originals by Nico.

Derric Oliver — a member of Los Dos Bros and Holiday and the Adventure Pop Collective — dropped by with a trumpet and a tuba, and joined in. Neither Chelew or Georis seems to take himself too seriously, and when Oliver arrived, the fun really started. Before long, all three were trading instruments back and forth while Georis busted a few dance moves and Oliver tried playing the piano and the tuba — at

Lesser known Russian works showcased in symphony's new concert

By CHRIS COUNTS

RUSSIAN COMPOSERS have given us some of the most popular pieces of classical music ever created, but Sunday and Monday, Feb. 21-22, at Sunset Center, the Monterey Symphony will use its fourth concert of the season to feature several little-known Russian compositions. "We're presenting an all-Russian program with three familiar composers," explained Joe Truskot, executive director of the symphony. "But the works are lesser-known pieces. We did this intentionally to deepen the experience of our regular concertgoers. We're always looking to do something a little bit different."

Dmitry Yablonsky — who will serve as guest conductor — selected the music.

"He knows the music inside and out," Truskot said. "The members of our orchestra are really looking forward to working with him. They're familiar with the composers, but most of them have never heard the pieces before. I think we're going to get some stunning performances because the musicians are so eager to play this music."

The concert will open with Glinka's Waltz-Fantasia, which will be followed by Shostakovich's Jazz Suite No. 2 and Tahiti Trot. The performance will end with Scriabin's Symphony No. 2 in C minor, Op. 29.

While few will recognize most of the music, one of Shostakovich's pieces may sound familiar to movie lovers. "Shostakovich's Jazz Suite was used by filmmaker Stanley Kubrick in 'Eyes Wide Shut,'" Truskot noted.

Sunday's performance starts at 3 p.m., while Monday's concert begins at 8 p.m. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Tickets range from $57 to $71. For more information, call (831) 646-8511 or visit www.monterey-symphony.org.

More classical music at Sunset

One of the finest young chamber ensembles performing today, the ATOS Trio takes the stage at Sunset Center Friday, Feb. 19. The concert is presented by Chamber Music

Monterey Bay.

Formed in 2003 by violinist Annette von Hehn, cellist Stefan Heinemeyer and pianist Thomas Hoppe, the ensemble will play Beethoven's Piano Trio, Op.1, No. 2, Cassado's Piano Trio in C Major and Schubert's Piano Trio in E-flat Major.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. Tickets range from $29 to $52. Musicologist Kai Christiansen will present a free pre-concert lecture in Studio 105 at 7 p.m.

Also, a limited number of free tickets are available for local youngsters. For more information, call (831) 625-2212 or visit www.chambermusicmontereybay.org.

"Making Overtures"

Youth Music Monterey presents a concert, "Making Overtures," Saturday, Feb. 20 at Sunset Center.

The winner of Youth Music Monterey's 2009-2010 Concerto Competition, Perry Choi — who plays the clarinet — will perform the first movement of Mozart's Clarinet Concerto in A Major.

The music starts at 2 p.m. Tickets are $15 and $30 for adults, $10 for seniors and $5 for students. For more information, call (831) 375-1992.

Chop House's last nights, PBF&W preview, and pizza and wine

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CARMEL'S ONLY steakhouse will shut its doors March 7, according to co-owners chef Kurt Grasing, Larry Chazen and media personality Narsai David. Kurt's Carmel Chop House, located in the Carmel Sands Lodge at San Carlos and Fifth, is going out of business — partly due to the bad economy's effects on the industry, and partly due to the impending demolition of the lodge. But its prime steaks, take-home holiday meals and full-service catering will not disappear. Instead, they'll move a few blocks away to the other restaurant the trio owns: Grasing's Coastal Cuisine at Sixth and Mission.

"Obviously, it's sad. We've been there a long time, and we've met a lot of great people and have a lot of great employees and a lot of great customers," Grasing said

Wednesday. "And hopefully we can move many of both down to Grasing's."

The Chop House has "the best steaks in the area," he said, and many other menu items have become customer favorites.

Come March, "if someone is looking for the best steak, they can come to Grasing's, and if they're looking for the best fish, they can still come to Grasing's," he said.

He will accommodate as many employees as possible at the restaurant, which has kitchens upstairs and downstairs that will be reconfigured somewhat to handle the catering operation and expanded menu.

"We've had 20-plus employees at the Chop House, and unfortunately Grasing's just physically isn't big enough to support that, but we have a lot of great people, and they're the ones who are the face of the operation," he said.

But before the move is completed, Grasing and Chazen said they hope many people will stop in and dine at the Chop House.

"We're going to be featuring a lot of our favorite wines at 25 percent off," Grasing said. "If people can help us move our inventory, we don't have to move things, so we're going to expand our sommelier's list to have 75 wines or so at reduced prices."

And because they'll be busy preparing for the move, the Chop House will only be open Thursdays through Sundays, from 5 p.m. to closing.

The three business partners plan to watch for other opportunities in town.

"We expect to keep focusing on doing a great job and keeping our eyes open to what's happening," he said.

■ Casino Night for ag

The D'Arrigo Cooler at 21777 Harris Road in Salinas will host Casino Night, presented by Entry Nous Society Inc., to benefit the nonprofit Ag Against Hunger Friday, Feb. 26, at 6 p.m. Playing rousing rounds of roulette, blackjack, craps and Texas Hold 'em, guests will redeem chips for prizes. Ag Against Hunger collects surplus produce from area growers for use in food banks in Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties, and in other West Coast communities.

Attendees should don casual "cooler" attire for the strolling dinner, no-host bar and silent auction. POLLY LEE, 8, is a wire-haired fox terrier and cute as a button.

She caught our eye as we approached Carmel Beach Tuesday afternoon. Her tri-color curly coat and pink harness, as well as her general demeanor, were just too charming to pass by.

Polly lives in Hollister with her Dad and Mom, Luis and Lisa Garrida. Luis lived on the Monterey Peninsula for many years before moving to Hollister with Lisa about a year ago; he misses the ocean, the beach and just about everything the Peninsula has to offer, and so comes to Carmel as often as possible with Polly.

Polly was rescued from the Monterey SPCA by Luis' mother, Candice Lee, who took Polly home to her six cats — which Polly immediately attacked. Candice tried to bring harmony into her home, but Polly couldn't get over her animosity toward her feline brothers and sisters. So off Polly went to brother Luis' home, which changed him into her Dad.

Polly is a natural hunter and frequently brings home trophy gophers to Dad and Mom. On Tuesday when we met her, she had just had an ecstatic roll on a quite dead seal on Carmel Beach, which made breathing through the mouth a necessity as we interviewed her. Dad Luis planned to give her white, gray and reddish blonde coat a cleansing bath after they returned home, knowing that Polly would mope during the process. She doesn't like baths.

She is loved dearly by her parents, who cite intelligence, fearlessness, mischievousness and a loving nature among her many attributes.

At home, she has two beds: one upstairs and one downstairs. But in the morning she sneaks into bed with Dad.

in Rhone-style wines, will host its Second Annual Barrel Tasting and Gourmet Pizza Party Saturday, March 6, from noon to 4 p.m. Chef Don Ferch, who was executive chef for the Highlands Inn in Carmel and worked the first two Masters of Food & Wine events there more than 20 years ago before leaving to start his own catering company, will serve up the pies, along with a few salads.

"He and his wife Cheryl are great friends of ours, and it's always fun to work with him," said winery owners Joel Burnstein and Marilyn Remark. "In case you were wondering, these are not your typical pepperoni and sausage pizzas. Don is extremely inventive and will be cooking some unique and delicious creations in his wood-burning pizza oven."

Last year's favorites included lamb, feta and arugula, and smoked chicken, brie and dried cranberries, according to Burnstein.

Go not just for the pizza and salads, but for their wonderful wines — as well as because they're some of the nicest people in the business. Attendance is $25 for nonmembers and $15 for members, and the fun will begin at noon. To RSVP, call (831) 455-9310 or email joel@remarkwines.com. The winery is located at 645 River Road. New MCVGA board

The Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association has announced its 2010 board roster, with each member elected to a three-year term by the MCVGA membership.

The 14-member board consists of 12 general members, one winegrape-grower committee delegate, and one member-at-large, and now includes James Pickworth of Jackson Family Vineyards & Wines as president, Sabine Rodems from Wrath Wines as vice president, Paul Johnson, Lockwood Vineyard, as secretary; member-at-large Michael Marcus as treasurer; past president Cheryl Indelicato of Delicato/San Bernabe; grower delegate Jason Smith; Scott Scheid, Scheid Vineyards; Cindy Paup, J. Lohr Vineyards & Wines; Scott Kelley, Estancia; Erik Martella, Constellation U.S.; Anthony Pessagno, Pessagno Winery; Andy Mitchell, Hahn Estates; Ken Shyvers, Diageo; and Matthew Shea, vineyard manager for Bernardus Winery.

According to MCVGA executive director Rhonda Motil, "one of the association and board's primary objectives is to carefully evaluate and refine Monterey County's unique branding platform in comparison to that of other leading wine regions."

Monterey County's winegrape values have exceeded $238 million, a 49 percent increase during the past five years, according to Motil, and its most sought-after varieties are Chardonnay and Pinot Noir. To learn more about the MCVGA or local wines, visit www.montereywines.org or call (831) 375-9400.

Comics for kids

Jay Leno will headline the 17th Annual Comics for Kids gala benefiting Boys & Girls Clubs of Monterey County. The party will be held March 27 from 5:30 to 10 p.m. in the Pebble Beach Food & Wine's Grand Tasting tent at the Equestrian Center in Del Monte Forest.

Some 800 guests will bid on more than 250 silent-auction items and 20 items in a live auction, and new this year will be a dessert reception, live music and dancing. Tickets are $300. For more information, visit www.bgcmc.org or call (831) 394-5171.

PBF&W preview

Want to know what the Coastal Luxury Management team of David Bernahl and Rob Weakley has in store for this year's extravagant Pebble Beach Food & Wine, set for April 8-11? All the latest details have been posted on the event's website, and it looks like the men have been working their usual networking magic.

Dozens of tantalizing and intriguing cooking demonstrations, tastings, lunches, dinners and parties are in the offing, including Thursday's charity golf tournament, with top chefs and winemakers competing alongside guests at the Pebble Beach links, and the opening night bash at Spanish Bay.

Friday morning's numerous wine tastings include Naked

Chardonnay — To Oak or Not to Oak, Icons of Washington — Cabernet Sauvignon blends, California Cult Cabernet with the Bryant family, and others, as well as demos by Thomas Keller and Ming Tsai. For lunch, consider the Farm-to-Table event with wines from Paso Robles, or, if beer sounds better, the Stella Artois celebration of Belgian beer and cuisine. This year's Lexus Chef's Table luncheon, a fun feast that has guests dining in the vast kitchen and watching every course being prepared while hearing from the chefs and winery representatives, will star Iron Chefs Masaharu Morimoto and Michael Symon, along with the wines of Washington State. The afternoon session offers yet more, such as the promising reserve Domaine Serene tasting of Oregon Pinot Noir, a spirits tasting, and cooking demonstrations by Jacques Pepin (focusing on caviar) and Charlie Trotter. Then there's dinner at Club XIX with Thomas Keller, Spanish Bay with Food & Wine Magazine's Best New Chefs, or the Beach Club, which will star Sir Peter Michael and his vaunted wines, along with chefs Hubert Keller, Richard Reddington, Trotter and Sherry Yard.

Another full day commences with morning tastings and demos — such as Jorge Ordonez and the Wines of Spain, a retrospective of the wines of Domaine de la Romanée-Conti, and Wolfgang Puck "making it easy" — on Saturday. For lunch, head to the Grand Tasting at the Equestrian Center, and then return to Spanish Bay for tastes of 1990 First Growth Bordeaux, an entertaining Pinot Noir panel with Gary Squared (Gary Pisoni and Gary Francioni) or California Zinfandels, or maybe The Magic Seduction of Cheese & Wine demonstration presented by Laura Werlin. That night's dinners include Top Master Chefs at Spanish Bay and a tribute to Pepin at The Beach Club.

Sunday slows down a bit, with a pair of Champagne tastings (Veuve Clicquot and Krug), a cooking demo by the charming Tyler Florence and another Grand Tasting.

Tickets start at $100 and reach into four digits for the really decadent and rare experiences. Packages are also available. To learn more, see www.pebblebeachfoodandwine.com.

Sunset rental fees to increase

By MARY BROWNFIELD

COME AUGUST, some Sunset Center tickets will get a little more expensive. The Carmel City Council on Feb. 2 approved an increased facility use fee — which helps pay for maintaining the city-owned theater — on tickets that cost more than $40.

In 2004, when the center reopened after a $21.65 million renovation and the nonprofit Sunset Cultural Center Inc. signed on to run it, the city approved a $1 facility use fee for tickets up to $20 and a $2 fee for tickets $21 and higher. This month, the council considered SCC's request to add a third tier, with a $3 FUF levied against tickets selling for $41 and higher. The nonprofit estimated the additional charge would generate another $31,586 annually that could be put toward operating costs.

"A facility use fee is a necessary and appropriate way to help offset a major portion of the costs associated with operating the Sunset Theater," city administrator Rich Guillen said in his Feb. 2 report. "Because of the business cycles of the performing arts business, it is important that council make a decision immediately to provide direction for the Sunset Theater users during the 2010/2011 season and beyond."

Jim Price, chairman of the SCC board, said the center will sell about 41,000 tickets this fiscal year, and roughly 75 percent of those cost more than $40 each.

"Our maintenance budget for this year is about $127,000, not counting two employees in maintenance, and the total yield from the facility use fee, with this new $3 level, is about $111,000," he said. "So it goes a long way toward paying for the maintenance of Sunset Center."

Without much discussion, the council unanimously approved the fee increase, which will take effect Aug. 1.

And the variety of activities! Tai Chi to Wine Tasting Classes —bridge to books. 'Round-the-world Adventure talks—an afternoon of Chamber Music? Gardening. Tennis. Walks along the Monterey Bay. So many choices for the fun times in life. But most importantly, with Continuing Care, you'll have future health care available when and if you need it in the area's newest, state-of-the-art Health Center. It's all part of the beautiful quality of life you can expect at Forest Hill Manor.

Visit Forest Hill Manor today! It's the right way to see what the future holds. Call for an appointment (831) 657-5200 or toll free 866-657-4900.

'Don't be a zebra'

THE GUIDES on the Jungle Cruise at Disneyland have been telling the same jokes for 55 years. One of them has a such a timeless punchline, it's even relevant to the local controversy over the annual "emergency" bulldozing of the sandbar that holds back the Carmel River Lagoon.

Imagine for a moment that a private home along the banks of the Carmel River was threatened with flooding every year as the river rose from winter rains. Now imagine that the owner of this home took it upon himself to eliminate the danger each year by bulldozing the riverbank, directing the rising river away from his home, and that he did this work without a permit, much less an environmental impact report.

It goes without saying that as soon as they heard about what he was up to, federal, state and local government officials would be on the flood-threatened homeowner like paparazzi on Paris Hilton. Just for starters, they'd order him to stop work until he obtained a permit, and they'd do so without caring one whit about how much the permit (and its supporting environmental studies) would cost. And if the homeowner refused to stop the bulldozing, he'd be hit with heavy fines and a long jail sentence.

Which brings us to the Carmel River Lagoon. Almost every winter, the lagoon fills with rainwater that flows out of Carmel Valley. Because the lagoon is cut off from the sea by a sandbar, the waters start to rise, threatening nearby homes. But when the sandbar is bulldozed open, the lagoon suddenly empties, harming the lagoon's flora and fauna, which depend on the flooding for their life cycles. Because the sandbar is in the unincorporated part of Monterey County, it's the county public works department that does the deed. And while public works has tried various techniques to slow the drainage of the lagoon, it still does the job in the same, basic way: The lagoon rises, and the bulldozer is sent to work.

More than 10 years ago, state wildlife officials and the California Coastal Commission told the county it would have to develop a long-term plan for lowering the water in the lagoon — a plan that balanced the needs of the homeowners with the needs of wildlife.

But, a decade later, no plan has been prepared and no permits have been obtained. Instead, every year the sandbar is bulldozed on an "emergency" basis. Some years (such as this year), because intervals of dry weather give the ocean time to rebuild the sandbar, the "emergency" happens over and over again.

Yet, state officials do nothing to enforce their permit order. Why? Last week, as reported by Chris Counts, it's because they understand that completing the studies and getting the permits would be costly and burdensome for Monterey County and its taxpaying citizens. So they don't press the issue.

The county is not at fault here. Instead, the failing is with the state's environmental protection laws, which are so onerous and complex that few people can even contemplate trying to figure them out, much less comply with them. These zealous agencies that enforce these laws also hold private citizens to standards that are much stricter than those the government applies to itself. In other words, if you need to do something a little bit damaging to the environment to protect yourself or your family, don't be a private citizen.

On the jungle boat ride, one dramatic scene shows a pride of lions devouring the blood-soaked carcass of a freshly killed zebra. The gruesome scenario illustrates the First Law of the Jungle, the guide says.

And what is that law?
"Don't be a zebra."

Too many trees?

Dear Editor,

While we are not a full-time residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea we strongly support Niels Reimers's recommendation for a "friendly dialog" on the subject of tree-planting. For about the last 50 years we have regularly spent time in the house my wife's grandmother built in 1923. Back then, photos show a pretty naked landscape. But in our earlier experiences (ca. 1960-1980), the expansive views of the Pacific Ocean and the sand dunes, with an attractive garnishment of sufficient greenery, were soul-satisfying. Now the profusion of Monterey pines, for example, have blotted out most views. We have found that the city forester is not in a position to remove trees even when their size and condition may pose threats to life and limb and property. Now redwoods?

There are many varieties of attractive trees that do not fit in small spaces or in view-fields. Let's have that dialog!

Joe and Kathy Cusick, Los Gatos

'Impressed'

Dear Editor,

Although now living in Santa Fe, New Mexico, we were Carmel residents for several years and are very interested in what is happening in your beautiful community.

We have been keeping up with Carmel's election news from your online Pine Cone and the candidates' websites and are very impressed with the two young men, Adam Moniz and Jason Burnett, running for city council and mayor.

They seem well educated, intelligent and personable. How wonderful that two younger people are willing to step forward and take on the responsibility of helping their community. We hope they do well in April.

Although we're not related to Jason Burnett, he looks so good we might claim him!

Barbara and Don Burnett

Posters annoy

Dear Editor,

After many years of having my view spoiled by the large posters at River School, I was delighted to see that a beautiful glass-enclosed bulletin board had been erected, thinking that would take care of my complaint. Wrong! During a school break, when no one was present, more posters have been displayed.

Salyer indicted on seven more counts

TWO WEEKS after former SK Foods CEO Scott Salyer was arrested in New York on 20 charges of mail and wire fraud, a grand jury has indicted the former head of the tomato processing business on seven counts of racketeering.

The Department of Justice Thursday announced Salyer, 54, of Pebble Beach, was hit with the additional indictments for violating the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, in connection with his direction of various schemes to defraud SK Foods' corporate customers through bribery and food adulteration.

Salyer is accused of orchestrating a number of schemes, including the payoff of bribes by SK Foods to purchasing managers of many of its customers, such as Kraft Foods Inc., Frito-Lay Inc. and Safeway Inc., to ensure those customers bought processed tomato products from SK Foods rather than from its competitors, and that they purchased the products at elevated, above-market prices. Some of the tomatoes SK Foods sold were also tainted, the indictments allege. Scientific reports were forged, the charges say, to mislead food buyers about what they were getting.

Salyer, was arrested at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York Feb. 4 on federal charges of mail and wire fraud. He was denied bail after prosecutors convinced a judge he was a serious flight risk.

Salyer faces a maximum of 20 years in prison on the racketeering charges, while the fraud charges he faces are also punishable by 20 years in prison. He is being transported from New York to Sacramento, the U.S. Attorney's office said, where he will face trial.

Library chat, movie set

AUTHOR AND illustrator Jim LaMarche will discuss his latest project and show artwork from his new book, "Lost and Found," during a lecture for kids and adults Thursday, Feb. 25, at 1 p.m. in the Park Branch of Harrison Memorial Library. He is set to discuss "The Sea of Sleep" and will also share other original artwork and stories during the free gathering, which is being hosted by the Carmel Public Library Foundation.

In addition, LaMarche will be happy to sign books, which will be provided for sale by Pilgrim's Way. For more information about LaMarche's talk, visit www.hm-lib.org or call (831) 624-4664. The Park Branch is located at Mission and Sixth in Carmel.

'Gigante'

And on March 1, the Park Branch and CPLF will show "Gigante" for the third of its free movie nights being offered the first Tuesday of each month this winter. Movie nights feature award-winning independent and foreign productions from the Film Movement Series.

"Gigante," in Spanish with English subtitles, tells the story of Jara, a shy and lonely supermarket security guard who works the night shift. When he spies Julia, a cleaning woman, on one of the cameras, he is immediately smitten. As he continues to watch her, night after night, his infatuation grows, prompting him to follow her after she leaves work. Eventually, he must decide whether to give up his obsession — or confront it.

The film will begin at 5:30 p.m., with seating available on a first come, first served basis. The Park Branch is located at Mission and Sixth in Carmel. To learn more, contact the reference desk at (831) 624-7323.

Memorial for Dogman

A MEMORIAL service for Dogman McBill, who died last month at the age of 63, will be held Friday, Feb. 26, at 1 p.m. at the Carl Cherry Foundation, located at Guadalupe and Fourth in Carmel. Feb. 26 was his birthday.

"Everybody's welcome," said his widow, Gail Winfield. Greg Ward from the Unitarian Church will offer a benediction, and Deborah Smith is going to preside over the gathering.

"And people who want to can get up and say anything," she said.

Winfield said her husband often spoke of God, though he eschewed organized religion. "He loved mankind, and he loved people," she added.

Winfield wished to thank the police department, the fire department and the paramedics who, over the years, "saved Bill so many times," and she described his appreciation of the mayor and staff at city hall, who "gave him something to live for."

All are welcome to McBill's memorial service, and anyone desiring to make contributions in his name should donate to the Carmel Youth Center, according to Winfield.

ROOF

Several commissioners mentioned the expense of the uncoated metal roofs, though city law doesn't allow the planning commission to take cost into account when making decisions on building materials.

Beach made a motion to approve the roof with a natural metal, not the painted metal, and Hillyard seconded the motion, but it failed 2-3. Hillyard then offered a motion to approve a cortend roof, and Beach seconded it, but Conroy pointed out the applicant was seeking permission to use a specific material, and the commission had to vote yes or no on that particular request.

Beach then made a motion to deny the roof, which was also seconded by Hillyard, but it failed again by the same margin.

Finally, Paterson made a motion to permit the painted metal roof as requested, and Wilson seconded it. The motion passed 3-2.

ROCK

Still, Dormody was sad to see the whale go.

"Everybody realized it was a special thing," he explained. "It was a great reference point. People would call and say, 'I'm at the whale rock.'"

Dormody was also glad that nobody was driving past the rock when it collapsed. "Thank God it happened in the middle of the night," he said.

According to Dormody, the anonymous artist first painted the eye on the rock about 25 years ago. The eye has been repainted since, and someone also painted over unwelcome graffiti.

"It was definitely spruced up a couple of times by somebody," Dormody added.

After county workers removed the remnants of the whale rock, Robinson Canyon Road — which travels south from mid-Carmel Valley — was reopened the same day.

The Whale Rock on Robinson Canyon Road was a beloved local landmark (see top photo). But the rock formation collapsed last weekend. Nothing remained of the whale after public works cleared the road of rocks and debris.

C.V. pays tribute to its 'Good Eggs'

By CHRIS COUNTS

THERE'S A lot of talk in Carmel Valley this week about eggs, and it has nothing to do with chickens or breakfast.

The Carmel Valley Chamber presents its 56th annual Stars of the Valley dinner and awards reception Friday, Feb. 19, at Bernardus Lodge. At the reception, the chamber will hand out "Good Egg" awards to two local residents Dave Lyons and Bud Carlson. Meanwhile, a third Carmel Valley resident — Peter Coakley — will be honored with the even more prestigious "Double Yolk" award.

"The Good Egg is a rural community's way of honoring its citizens of the year," chamber director Elizabeth Vitarisi Suro explained.

Lyons is a Carmel native who has been instrumental in the operations of Carmel Youth Center and the Carmel Valley Recreation and Park District over the past two decades. "Dave has given a lot of time and energy to making Carmel Valley a beautiful and safe place to live," Suro noted.

Carlson, meanwhile, is a retired Navy pilot with an impressive resume of local community service. "Bud is most known for his kindness and helpfulness to others," Suro said. "He puts in many, many hours at the Carmel Valley Community Chapel Thrift shop, going above and beyond the everyday operations. He picks up items and delivers them all around the community including to those in need. His motto is 'U call I Haul!'"

And Suro is impressed with Carlson's endless energy. "Bud recently celebrated his 80th birthday and is still moving sofas, dressers and other large items by himself, with nothing other than a hand truck," she observed. "It seems there's nothing he can't do."

The Double Yolk award is given to a former Good Egg winner who is deserving of further recognition. Coakley, who owns and operates the Valley Lodge, has played a role in the success of the Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee. "Peter is a man who is generous, kind and has the ability to make things happen in the community of Carmel Valley," Suro said. "He has always had the best interests of the village in his line of vision and has done much to be high profile about the needs of the business people."

Also honored at the reception will be the following

Carmel Valley businesses: Los Laureles Lodge, Cafe Rustica and Downunder Deli (Best Hospitality); UPS Store Mid Valley, Carmel Valley Market and Storage Pro (Best Service to Residents); Masoaka Glass Design, Carmel Valley Art Association at Valley Girls Gallery and Out of My Hands

Gallery (Best Artist/Gallery); and Casa Del Soul, Earthbound Farm and Avant Garden and Home (Best Retail).

The event, which includes a dance, starts at 6 p.m. Tickets are $45. Bernardus Lodge is located at Carmel Valley Road and Los Laureles Grade. For more info, call (831) 659-4000.

stolen property and the boots that were taken. One female, age 46, was arrested and later booked into county jail.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine dispatched to a business on San Carlos between Ocean and Seventh where an exhaust hood fire extinguishing system had been accidentally activated. The restaurant was advised to contact county health department and to have the hood system serviced.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine dispatched to a hotel on San Carlos Street for a female in her 70s who had suffered a fall and complained of pain to the lower back. Crew assisted with full c-spine and loading. Patient taken to CHOMP by ambulance.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fire engine dispatched to Ocean and Casanova for an electrical wiring/equipment problem. Received a direct report of wires hanging over the roadway. On scene, found telephone wire insulation cover hanging over eastbound traffic. CPD notified AT&T for repairs.

Carmel Valley: Resident stated his 24-year-old sister is missing; the last time she was seen was on Feb. 4 at 2200 hours. Case continues.

Carmel area: Traffic stop conducted at Highway 1 and Rio Road for vehicle code violation. Suspect No. 2 admitted to being in possession of methamphetamine and a methamphetamine smoking pipe. Suspect No. 1 admitted to being in possession of a concealed fixed blade knife. Suspect No. 1 was also found to be in possession of marijuana and methamphetamine. They were arrested.

Big Sur: Unknown subject(s) vandalized victim's work truck at an inn.

Carmel Valley: Ford Road resident reported that her neighbor was in his backyard acting weird and yelling. Deputies were unable to contact the neighbor.
