Seaside teens with gang ties suspected in P.G. crime spree

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AFTER THREE suspected car burglars ditched their Chevy Blazer in the middle of a Pacific Grove street and ran from the officer who had been chasing them early Sunday morning, police found one of them hiding between two parked cars in Pacific Grove, the second walking on the recreation trail, and the third in his Seaside apartment, PGPD Cmdr. John Nyunt said Wednesday. The teenagers were arrested and taken to Monterey County Jail on numerous felony charges of possession of stolen property.

Officers are still searching for victims of the widespread burglaries and thefts, which involved dozens of cars that were ransacked for valuables that could be quickly fenced, according to Nyunt. Most occurred in the western area of the city, near the Methodist Church on Sunset, around Washington Park and near the ball-park at Pico and 17 Mile Drive.

"We elicited some kind of cooperation from one of the suspects that led us to believe we potentially had 30 victims, and Monterey also had victims," he said. "These individuals were checking for unlocked vehicles." Nyunt estimated they looked at about 200 cars.

The men's contact with police began when Pacific Grove officer Ryan Anderson noticed a white 1990s Chevy Blazer driving erratically on eastbound Lighthouse Avenue in the downtown area shortly before 4 a.m. Oct. 24. Intending to stop the SUV,

General plan nobody likes finally adopted

■ C.V. unit cap back to 266

By CHRIS COUNTS

AFTER HAGGLING over the details for more than a decade, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved the new Monterey County General Plan Tuesday.

Despite the long-awaited decision, there was no jubilation in the supervisors' chambers. While the plan was adopted, it could take years to implement its many details, which will guide growth in the county's unincorporated areas over the next 20 years. And there's also no guarantee the plan will survive legal challenges, which seem likely.

For Carmel Valley residents, the biggest news to come out of Tuesday's hearing was the unanimous reversal of a decision supervisors made just two weeks ago to reduce the number of new units that could be created in Carmel Valley over the next 20 years from 266 to 200. Developer Alan Williams had complained that the Oct. 12 decision was made without adequate public comment, which 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter addressed at this week's hearing.

"I didn't realize the reduction would cause that much anxiety," conceded Potter, who suggested the cap reduction at the

DISPUTE OVER OCEAN VIEW GETS UGLIER

■ Trees, 'spite fence' spur lawsuit

By KELLY NIX

A MAN involved in an ugly property dispute with his neighbors on San Antonio Avenue has filed a lawsuit against them alleging they're blocking his ocean view, made slanderous comments and installed a camera to watch him.

In a suit filed Oct. 22, Dwight G. Nelson alleged the neighbors, Kathleen Correia and Stephan Evans, blocked his ocean views by refusing to trim their trees. He also said the couple later erected a "spite fence."

Nelson, who hired prominent land use attorney Tony Lombardo to represent him, claims the couple also defamed him by making false statements to their friends, set up a video surveillance camera to peer into his property and installed power lines under his house without his permission.

He claims his neighbors' alleged actions were intentional and malicious, and that he's suffered humiliation, anxiety, "severe emotional distress" and other medical problems, which have required him to seek treatment.

SCUBA diver blames county, state for ear infection

By KELLY NIX

A SCUBA diver who said she got a severe ear infection after diving in the waters off Lovers Point is suing Monterey County and the State of California for not warning her of the risk of contaminants in the ocean, which she says state law required them to do.

In a lawsuit filed Oct. 21, Theresa Raglen, who claims she became seriously ill after diving off Lovers Point on Sept. 20, 2009, contends the county tested and found elevated levels of human and animal waste six days earlier, on Sept. 14, 2009, but failed to post signs to warn the public of the potential danger.

"No effort was made to warn members of the public of the potential risks of entering the water at Lovers Point Beach," the lawsuit said. "The lack of sufficient warnings was a substantial factor in causing" Raglen to become sick.

The county often posts signs warning the public of high levels of pollutants in the ocean off Lovers Point — warnings that are often ignored by swimmers, surfers and divers.

Five days in the hospital

Raglen said that while diving at Lovers Point, bacteria entered her ears, resulting in "bilateral otitis externa and mastoiditis," which then "spread into her jaw and skull," according to the lawsuit filed in Monterey County Superior Court. "As a result of this incident, [Raglen] was severely injured and was hospitalized for five days and treated with extremely high doses of antibiotics for weeks."

The lawsuit said Raglen's ear drums ruptured and that "she suffers constant pain."

Raglen says Monterey County officials discovered high levels of enterococcus — bacteria from human intestines — and coliform and fecal coliforms — which can come from humans and animals, including dogs and birds.

Named in her lawsuit are the Monterey County Pollution Control Agency, the Monterey County Health Department, the State Department of Health Services and the State Water Resources Control Board.

County counsel Charles McKee told The Pine Cone Thursday he couldn't comment on the lawsuit, because he hadn't yet seen it.

But he said, "The health department is out there frequently testing and posting [signs] and warning people. We want to make sure they are as safe as possible."

The agencies' fault

Raglen's lawsuit, filed by her San Jose attorney, Anne Kepner, claims the county and state agencies were "negligent

Waves claim one life, spare another

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ONE WOMAN drowned while her friend survived after they were swept into the ocean at Carmel River Beach Monday afternoon as they walked along the edge of the surf. High tides and strong currents swept the women, both reported to be in their 60s and visiting the area from England with their husbands, into the chilly, rough water.

Firefighters located the first victim in less than half an hour, and a California State Parks lifeguard swam about 100 feet out to her, according to Cal Fire Battalion Chief Jude Acosta. A crew from the Carmel Highlands fire station picked the woman up in the department's Zodiac inflatable boat and brought her to shore in Whalers Cove at Point Lobos.

She was in good condition and taken to Community Hospital of Monterey Peninsula for evaluation.

But another hour had passed before the second woman, later identified as 63-year-old Ann Hauffe of West Sussex, England, was found floating in the water far south of the river mouth near Monastery Beach,

HENRY JACOBS, 8, was born in a veterinarian's truck on his Mom Peggy's lap. Peggy and mama dog Sarah, were being driven speedily to a Cathedral City vet hospital when little Henry arrived a bit ahead of time. Because of this uncustomary start in life, Henry and Mom Peggy are unusually close, with Henry being a full-time participant in her life.

They spend five months a year in Carmel-by-the-Sea, and the rest of the year in Palm Desert.

"We love Carmel because dogs are treated with dignity here," Mom said. "The kindness of the people is wonderful."

During their time in Carmel, Henry loves to go to the beach and can be seen walking there frequently. But when he's in Palm Desert, his place of preference is the dog park where he has lots of friends who refer to Henry as "the king" because of his Cavalier King Charles spaniel origin.

His very best friend is a 180-pound Great White Pyrenees named Edelweiss, who is so compatible with Henry he is permitted to him stand between Henry's front legs so both can eat from the same bowl at the same time.

Henry eats everything, according to Mom. His usual diet, however, is composed of Hill's Prescription Canine Diet Food laced with pork tenderloin and chicken. He likes to top off breakfast with a bit of Mom's oatmeal.

His favorite plaything is Octi the stuffed, green Octopus, whom he incorporates in his fetch games and tug-of-war sessions.

Because of his daily activities, Henry is usually ready for bed at night, and looks forward to cuddling with Mom in her comfy bed.

Woman shares tales of helping oiled birds in Gulf of Mexico

By KELLY NIX

A LOCAL woman who spent months on the Gulf Coast helping to clean and rehabilitate oiled birds after the Gulf of Mexico spill said the process was challenging, rewarding and that there are lessons to be learned.

For nearly five months, Rebecca Dmytryk, co-owner of WildRescue, a Moss Landing nonprofit that rescues wild animals and offers other wildlife services, was in Louisiana to help birds — mostly pelicans — who were oiled in the spill after the explosion of the BP Deepwater Horizon rig.

“We absolutely helped many, many, many birds and that felt really good,” Dmytryk told The Pine Cone this week.

Dmytryk, who was in the Gulf on behalf of the International Bird Rescue Research Center, found herself first on front lines, searching for and rescuing birds from the beaches and other areas before she was transferred to a rehabilitation center.

With the help of many others, Dmytryk performed a variety of tasks related to helping the birds. There were more than 500 birds at the rehabilitation center where she was based. BP paid for the effort.

“Throughout the day, we would do multiple things; cleaning them of the oil, feeding them and changing their linens,” she said.

Depending on the type of bird, the amount of oil it’s covered with and other are factors weigh in on the odds a bird will survive after being saturated with oil then cleaned up.

The oil on the birds was found in different forms, from a thin, orange color to a thicker type that resembled brownie batter, according to Dmytryk.

After the birds were cleaned and rehabilitated, they were released in areas not affected by the spill including Texas, Florida and Georgia and southwest Louisiana.

Dmytryk’s husband Duane Titus, an electrician, also spent months helping with the effort.

“Duane was in Louisiana, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama from April 29,” Dmytryk said. “He was not

The pad is the carpet’s support system. It makes the carpet feel richer and prevents the carpet from getting worn and matted. Prime urethane pads are generally the least expensive, but they have a tendency to compress after installation, especially in high-traffic areas. Natural- and synthetic-fiber pads are the densest, most resilient, and the most expensive. In between these are bonded or rebonded pads, made of multicolored polyurethane foam chunks. They offer a good compromise and are the most common residential padding. All these types come in a variety of thicknesses and densities. Choose carefully. An extra-thick pad can promote flexing that leads to open seams and weakened backing, while an overly thin pad can cause wrinkling and premature wear.

Gallery burglars grab $44K sculpture

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SOMEONE SMASHED a side window in Dawson Cole Fine Art in downtown Carmel Saturday night or Sunday morning and managed to make off with one of Richard MacDonald's $44,000 bronze sculptures undetected. The break-in occurred sometime between 6 p.m. Oct. 23 and the morning of Oct. 24, when an employee discovered the broken glass and missing artwork, and called police.

"Nothing else was taken," Carmel Police detective Rachelle Lightfoot said Tuesday.

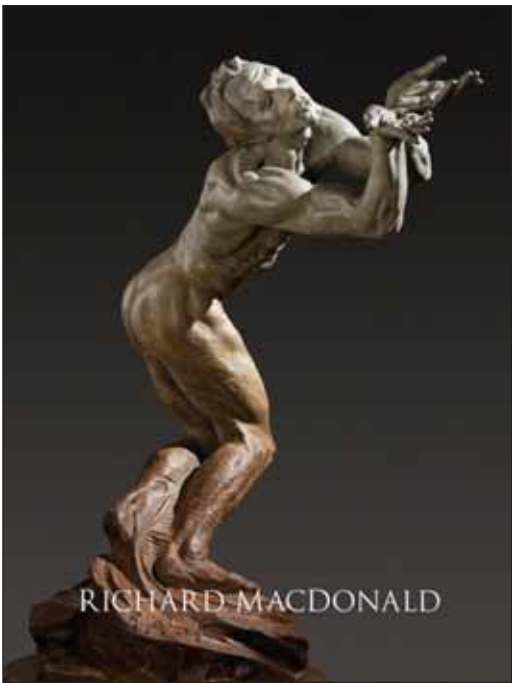

Police have been pursuing several leads, a few of which have turned up nothing. The closest Lightfoot has to a clue is employees' observations of two men in their early 20s who entered the gallery and seemed to be casing it earlier that day.

"They were in the business for about half an hour and really didn't seem to be interested in learning about the art or hearing about the artist," she said. "They were just walking in circles checking the place out."

She suspects the thieves had a buyer lined up or some other reliable way to quickly unload the distinctive piece, which is called "Butterfly" and measures 21.5 inches by 8 inches by 19 inches.

According to gallery assistant director CarrieAnn, the sculpture weighs almost 50 pounds.

"It's sad that people are so desperate that they resort to stealing from other people," she said. "But they have to live with themselves. Hopefully they feel some guilt."

Monterey's chief to retire after decades fighting fires

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE REGIONAL fire department he has worked so hard to bring to fruition might not exist yet, but Monterey Fire Chief Sam Mazza is confident it eventually will, and he's pledged to continue striving toward that goal right up until 5 p.m. Dec. 16, when he will walk out of his office for the last time. Mazza announced earlier this month that after three dozen years in the fire service — including almost five as chief of MFD — he will be retiring at the age of 59.

Mazza told The Pine Cone he feels it's simply the right time to put away his badge and hand leadership of the Peninsula's largest city fire department over to someone else.

"It's just a good time. Part of it has to do with what's going on in my personal life and our family situation, and professionally, it's an opportune time. You have to make decisions around the PERS calendar," he said, referring to the state's public employees retirement system that offers generous — and early — retirement to many government workers.

Mazza happened upon firefighting as a career after his father contacted a relative who was the chief Marin Fire Department.

"It was completely by accident," he said. "I was a junior in high school, and my dad was trying to help me find something constructive to do for the summer."

The fire chief told Mazza's dad to "send him up here, and I'll keep him busy."

Mazza later learned his grandfather had been chief there once, too, and his dad had worked at Marin F.D. for a short while. "I was pretty much hooked," he said.

After spending a couple of summers there, Mazza was hired as a seasonal firefighter for Cal Fire, a job he held through his college years, and then became a permanent employee based in Fresno, where he spent 15 years.

"Then I got the promotion to Monterey County," he said. "And I'm not leaving."

Mazza continued working for Cal Fire in Monterey County until he was hired as chief of Monterey Fire Department — which he called "a dream come true" — in February 2006. "I've had an exceptionally rewarding career," he said. "I've worked in a bunch of different areas, and every one was the best."

Mazza didn't recount any front-line stories of exciting victories, close calls or lessons learned the hard way. Instead, he focused on praising his coworkers.

"The biggest thing is the people I've had the pleasure of working with — that's been the joy and the memory," he said. "Life's about relationships, and I've been extremely blessed to work around and get to know some amazing people."

Work to do

Before he leaves in mid-December, Mazza said he hopes to have some sort of new agreement signed with the City of Carmel. For the past several years, Monterey Fire has been providing chief services for Carmel Fire as those two cities and Pacific Grove have worked toward creating a regional fire department.

Monterey took over P.G. Fire in late 2008, and its administrative contract with Carmel will soon expire.

"Our agreement expires in December, and we're working very hard to cement something more extensive," he said.

As for the broader goal of consolidating Peninsula city fire departments into a regional agency, Mazza said that effort has momentum and will progress despite his leaving.

"I believe very strongly that that initiative will continue," he said. "That initiative will not die. That's the future of public services, and I am optimistic fire will lead the way in that regard."

With no opposition, LAFCO OKs fire merger

■ Pension cuts part of the deal

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE 300-SQUARE-MILE Monterey County Regional Fire District will take over the 50-square-mile Carmel Valley Fire Protection District come July 1, the Monterey County Local Agency Formation Commission decided Monday afternoon, and work is already under way to blend the two into one district that is home to 39,000 people.

No one at the hearing opposed the merger, which will get rid of inefficiencies and save tax dollars, Monterey County Regional Fire Chief Mike Urquides told The Pine Cone. Urquides has been running Carmel Valley Fire since early 2009, after former chief Sidney Reade retired.

The consolidation will also reduce retirement costs, because Monterey County Regional firefighters can retire at the age of 55 with 3 percent of their salary for each year of service, while Carmel Valley firefighters could retire at 50. The promise of lifetime medical care will also be eliminated, as will the department's 12 percent Social Security contributions, according to Urquides.

"It's almost instant pension reform, and it's almost the only way PERS allows you to do that," he said. "I think that's why the community supported it."

While such losses would typically get unions up in arms, Urquides said Carmel Valley Fire employees realized the benefits of joining a financially stable agency. After Reade retired, CVFPD was in dire financial straits and had little in reserves, which led to 10 percent pay cuts, layoffs, and even selling equipment to make payroll.

"I think they'd rather have stability and work a little longer," Urquides said. "We live within our means; we don't give the farm away. We operate like a business," and employees are told to treat the agency's money as if it's their own. In other words, "If you don't need it, don't buy it," he said.

The consolidation does not include any layoffs, but Urquides said duplicative administrative positions will be eliminated after the people working in them retire or move on to other jobs. The money saved from eliminating inefficiencies and cutting other costs will help pay for capital improvements, long-term debt and more front-line forces to ensure the ambulance and fire stations are staffed all the time.

"We can get the fire stations fixed," he added. "They have termite issues and water leaks. We can invest in the infrastructure."

Urquides said the toughest work — getting Carmel Valley Fire back on firm financial ground — has already been done. A strong advocate of tapping various sources of tax dollars and grants, Urquides helped secure $1 million for the beleaguered agency, including $750,000 in federal stimulus money to pay for three more firefighters for two years, after which the district will assume responsibility for their salaries and benefits.

"I'm a big grant advocate," he said. "My philosophy is I'd like to be able to pay for my salary every year with grants," which he's managed to do for the past few years.

During the next several months, Urquides and his administrators will be working to get all the financial details and other business sorted out. They will update policies and procedures to cover the expanded district and will begin getting everyone familiar with the new territory, including its hazardous areas, roads and procedures for responding to fires and other emergencies. Chiefs in each district already respond to emergencies in each other's jurisdiction.

"Around the first of the year, we will migrate to becoming one, so come July 1, we're ready to go," Urquides said.

The new district will cover much of the Salinas Valley and Carmel Valley from Rancho San Carlos to Sleepy Hollow. It will operate on an annual budget of $12.1 million and have 55 paid personnel, 45 volunteers, six fire stations, an administrative office and 40 vehicles. It will be governed by a seven-member board appointed by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Victim presides over rescuer's wedding

A CARMEL man who nearly died on a tennis court a dozen years ago survived, thanks to a volunteer firefighter who happened to be there, and last month — "12 years after their first momentous meeting" — he presided over his rescuer's wedding.

The Rev. Francis Duda first met Hollister resident Brian Glass, who was then volunteering for Cypress Fire Protection District, during the annual Shoe Game between the Carmel and Pacific Grove high school football teams. As Glass was sitting in the stands watching, "he heard a cry for help coming from the tennis courts just below the stands," Duda recalled last week.

Responding to the cry, Glass found Duda lying in the middle of the court after suffering a heart attack.

Glass was the second person to get to the scene and helped in the effort to continue CPR on Duda for more than half an hour, until a defibrillator successfully revived his heartbeat, the Reverend recounted. The save allowed him to be transported to CHOMP for treatment, and eventually a full recovery.

The following February, Glass won national recognition for his response, according to Duda. He's now a captain in the Morgan Hill Fire Department, and on Oct. 9, Duda presided over the marriage of Glass and Carly Kirk at the Paicines Ranch.

With the World Series on the line, Giants fans fill up bars

By CHRIS COUNTS

WITH THE San Francisco Giants closing in on their first World Series title since moving west from New York in 1958, black-and-orange-clad fans are pouring into Carmel's watering holes to watch the games.

At Jack Jondon's Grill & Taproom and Brophy's Tavern Wednesday, local baseball fans cheered wildly as the Giants walloped the Texas Rangers 11-7 in the series opener at AT&T Park.

The crowd at Jack London's let out a collective groan after the Rangers roughed up Giants ace Tim Lincecum in the first two innings. But their faith in the hometown team was rewarded in the third inning when Giants rookie catcher Buster Posey knocked in two runs to tie the score. The clutch hit and the rousing response that followed it seemed to confirm what many local baseball fans believe — that the Giants are this year's team of destiny.

The Pine Cone asked owner Kevin Kosick about the Giants' chances in the series. "They're going to take Texas down," Kosick predicted.

While Kosick is looking forward to a competitive series, he's even more excited about watching his favorite player, Lincecum, perform on baseball's biggest stage.

"The kid is sick," Kosick said. "It's just nuts the way he pitches. He's like Gumby. In all of sports, there are only about a half dozen players who are really interesting to watch, and he's one of them."

Over at Brophy's, a survey of the faces in the bar revealed a staggering array of shifting emotions. The packed crowd — decked from head to toe in Giants' caps, T-shirts, sweatshirts, jerseys and bandanas — hung on the outcome of every pitch.

The Brophy's faithful erupted into a frenzy when the Giants exploded for six runs in the fifth inning. Old friends and complete strangers traded hugs and high fives. Tech-savvy fans, meanwhile, declared their support by sending out Twitter and Facebook messages.

While it's easy to hop on the bandwagon of a team on a winning streak, the fans at Jack London's and Brophy's seem like a particularly devoted lot. It's clear that Carmel is Giants country. And this year's edition of the team — a colorful cast of characters with a knack for dramatic comebacks — has captured the imagination of local baseball fans.

Like Kosick, one time Carmel High baseball player and coach John Martine is a big fan of Lincecum, whose quirky delivery and dazzling array of pitches have earned him a huge following. "He throws gas," observed Martine as he watched the game at Brophy's.

As a student of the game, though, Martine knows what really makes the Giants tick.

'They're going to take Texas down,' predicted Giants fan and Jack London's owner Kevin Kosick

"It's teamwork," he explained.

While Kosick and Martine cheer for Lincecum, other fans at Brophy's, like Suzi Tullis of Big Sur and Carmel librarian Renee Culver, root for Posey, the team's cleanup hitter.

When questioned who her favorite player is, Culver quickly cited, "Buster." Tullis, meanwhile, wasn't shy about saying what makes Posey special. "He's hot," she responded with a big smile.

Not only is Posey hot (he was the team's leading hitter this season with a .305 mark), but the whole team is on fire at the moment. After dispatching the favored Philadelphia Phillies in six games and then stomping Texas in the first game of the World Series, the Giants were just three wins away from their first baseball crown since 1954, when a 23-year-old youngster named Willie Mays made the most famous catch in baseball history and led another team of underdogs to the title.

This year's series will continue until either the Giants or the Rangers win four games. The Giants travel to Texas for three games Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Saturday's game starts at 3:57 p.m., Sunday's starts at 5:20 p.m. and Monday's at 4:57 p.m. If the series lasts long enough, the two teams will return to San Francisco for the final two games Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 3-4. Both games are scheduled start at 4:57 p.m. All games are carried on Fox.

Jack London's is located on the west side of Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. Brophy's, meanwhile, is located on the northeast corner of San Carlos and Fourth.

CHS football — Padres out to prove last year was no fluke

By CHRIS COUNTS

WAS THE success of last year's Carmel High School football team — which won its first-ever Central Coast Section Division IV football crown — an aberration or the beginning of something very special? While it's too early to call the Padres' gridiron program a dynasty, it's clear that last season's team was also no Cinderella story either.

After trouncing Soledad High School 36-0 two weeks ago, the Padres' offense ran wild in last week's 63-20 win over Gonzalez High School. Perhaps more importantly, though, the victories confirm that Carmel High has sufficiently replaced the staggering offensive output of graduating running back and all-time leading rusher, Dylan Hopkins.

Hopkins, who ran for 1,539 yards and 26 touchdowns last season, is now playing baseball at San Jose State. In his place, coach Golden Anderson has turned to a trio of running backs, senior Jimmy Orsino and sophomores Jack Carmenita and Garrett McGuire.

"Statistically, there hasn't been much of a difference," said Anderson, comparing the trio's play to Hopkins' performance last year. "We've had two or three guys share the load and they've done a real good job."

Through seven games, the trio has rushed for 895 yards and reached the end zone 21 times. Surprisingly, though, none of the three leads the team in rushing. That honor goes to quarterback Devin Pearson, who has gained 476 yards on just 48 attempts, an average of nearly 10 yards each time he carries the ball.

Pearson — who was named to the Cal-Hi Sports All-State Sophomore Team last season — has also thrown for 1,694 yards and 16 touchdowns, with only three interceptions. Pearson's favorite long-distance target has been junior Garret Woodward, who has six scores among his 18 catches.

Carmel High's only loss came in early September when they were defeated 34-29 by Menlo High — the same team they topped 56-35 for last year's Central Coast Section Division IV championship. Anderson, though, is confident his team will fare better against its Silicon Valley rival the next time the two teams meet.

"The kids were thinking about winning and not about what it takes to win," he explained. "We can't rely on what we did last year. It was good for the kids to see that."

On Friday, the Padres bring a 6-1 overall record to Monterey Peninsula College, where they will face Marina High School, a winless team that's experiencing a few growing pains. The game starts at 7:30 p.m.

"They're a first-year varsity team with a lot of freshmen and sophomores," Anderson noted. "It's been a struggle for them, but it wasn't very long ago when our program was in a similar place. They'll turn it around soon. We just need to go out and execute."

As Anderson prepares for Carmel High's final three games of the regular season, he's encouraged not only by the team's obvious talent, but also by its depth. "We have 52 players on varsity and 40 on J.V.," he observed. "That's the most players we've ever had and that's pretty neat. Most teams in our league have about 30 players on varsity."

The Padres' depth and talent give the team an opportunity to duplicate last season's success. But win or lose, Anderson said he's proud of the commitment his players are making — and the effort they're putting in every week.

"Football is not an easy game," Anderson added. "But this year's team is a hardworking group. They enjoy the daily grind. The kids want to be part of something successful."

CHS college expo open to all

CARMEL HIGH School is the only campus on the Monterey Peninsula to host a college and career expo each fall, and organizers hope students and parents from all local high schools, public and private, will attend. This year's expo is set for 6 to 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 2, in the CHS gym.

"It is a wonderful opportunity to showcase Carmel High and to foster good relations with our neighbor schools and families," said Patricia Hunt of the CHS College and Career Center.

Representatives from more than 70 colleges and universities throughout the country, as well as trade schools, culinary programs, and art and fashion-design schools, will be there to provide information about their campuses and offerings.

"We invite as many as we can," said Hunt, who estimated about 500 students and adults will attend the expo this year.

Carmel High School is located at Ocean Avenue and Highway 1. For more information, call (831) 624-1821 ext. 3782.

earlier meeting.

Before the vote on the issue, Williams asked supervisors to reestablish the 266-unit cap.

"Over the last 25 to 30 years, there have been only 250 new units built in Carmel Valley," he observed. "Two hundred and sixty-six is a reasonable number for the next 20 years."

Quail Lodge President Lawson Little backed up Williams' comments.

"This issue has been vetted at great length," Little said. "Two hundred and sixty-six is a 4 percent increase for Carmel Valley over the next 20 years. That doesn't seem like a lot."

Activist Margaret Robbins, though, asked supervisors to hold the line at 200 new units.

"I wanted only 150 units," Robbins countered. "Fewer units means fewer environmental impacts. Don't be intimidated — let the 200-unit cap stand."

While the unit cap was raised to 266, supervisors agreed to review the number at five-year intervals "to examine any factors that might warrant a downward adjustment."

Going forward — or going to court

Because the plan represents more than a decade of political compromises, it comes as no surprise that few members from either the pro-growth or slow-growth lobbies were satisfied with its final version. At Tuesday's hearing, though, slow-growth activists were its greatest critics, although they offered few specifics.

"You want to adopt something today to end this process," land use attorney Molly Erickson said, accusing the board of rushing. "Unfortunately, this is not the right plan and not a good EIR. It serves no one to adopt this plan under these circumstances."

Activist Julie Engell also minced few words when commenting on the plan.

"I'm disappointed," Engell said, in particular citing alleged deficiencies in the plan's requirements for water supplies. "The current general plan has no more clarity than when we started."

Alan Williams, meanwhile, joked that the supervisors must be doing something right because both sides are critical of the plan. "I want to compliment the board, because no one is happy," he noted.

It became obvious that the plan would be adopted Tuesday, when Potter spoke following the public comment period.

"I feel it's important that we move on today," Potter declared. "All the years and money we've spent on this does not guarantee a good product, but we've done the best we can."

Second District Supervisor Lou Calcagno echoed Potter's comments.

"A lot of people worked hard to make this compromise happen," Calcagno said. "Did we get it perfect? Will we ever get it perfect? No. That's what makes America great — we all don't think alike."

Calcagno also reserved a few words for anyone who is contemplating filing a lawsuit over the supervisors' decision to adopt the much-maligned plan.

"[You are] just going to cost the county money that could go to more valuable projects," he warned.

Assistant county counsel Les Girard also sees a legal challenge on the horizon.

"Pick your poison," Girard added. "We face potential litigation from both sides."

If the plan survives what some see as inevitable legal challenges, the new plan will replace the 1982 plan. The county planning and legal departments also face the daunting task of implementing the plan. Supervisors were told at Tuesday's hearing that such an effort could cost the county nearly $10 million in salaries for new staff or consultants. An implementation plan is required to be completed within three months of the plan's adoption.

In November, supervisors plan to consider an interim ordinance to govern proposed development during the transition.

and reckless" because they didn't follow proper state protocol to warn the public when unacceptable levels of bacteria are discovered.

John Ramirez, the county's assistant director of environmental health, confirmed that water samples taken at Lovers Point on Sept. 14, 2009, — the results of which were available the next day — showed elevated levels of bacteria.

In response to the levels, the county posted warning signs at Lovers Point on Sept. 15, 2009. The next day, workers took another sample, which indicated the bacteria at Lovers Point were at a safe level, Ramirez told The Pine Cone.

At that point, the warning signs were removed, Ramirez said.

And because the county only checks the water once a month during that part of the year, it's likely there was no warning sign posted when Raglen went diving.

Ramirez said contaminant levels can change within a day — or even hours — due to a variety of conditions, including ocean currents and other factors.

Of course, the ocean is dangerous because of many factors and contains numerous chemicals and animals potentially harmful to humans. One local doctor, Jim Vawter of the Tierney/Vawter Medical Group in Monterey, said ear infections are "very common" in water sports and that "most divers and surfers I know have had them."

Raglen's lawsuit was filed about five months after a claim she filed with Monterey County was rejected.

Raglen, who said the ear infection caused her "great physical and mental pain," has incurred and will continue to incur medical expenses related to her alleged injury.

Raglen believes "that her inability to work and/or reduction in her earning capacity will continue in the future, thereby causing a further loss of earnings and/or earning capacity," the lawsuit said.

She is seeking general and special damages, compensation for loss of earnings and other costs.

contractor, alleges breach of contract, erection of spite fence, nuisance, defamation, invasion of privacy, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress.

Trees too tall

According to the suit, Nelson claims the dispute began months after he and his wife first met Correia in June 2009 and told her they were considering buying the house to the rear, or east, of hers.

During the amicable meeting, Nelson said he and his wife discussed with Correia three trees on Correia's property that were partially blocking an ocean view from the home the Nelsons wanted to purchase.

The couple struck a deal with Correia to solve the problem, Nelson contends.

"Correia orally promised that she would not allow those three trees to grow any larger or block Nelson's view any more than they already were," according to Nelson's suit. Correia also said she would have the trees pruned once a year so they wouldn't impede the view, he said.

In July 2009, Nelson bought the property for $2.5 million, according to county records. However, Nelson alleges Correia didn't fulfill her end of the bargain and hasn't trimmed the trees in the past 16 months.

That's not all, Nelson alleges.

"Moreover, defendants have taken action to further block plaintiff's ocean view by planting approximately 20 fast-growing trees" in what is commonly referred to as a spite fence, according to his lawsuit.

"They were planted very close together, directly in line with Nelson's view of the ocean," according to Nelson.

Under California law, a fence or other structure that exceeds 10 feet high that is installed with the intent to annoy an owner of an adjoining property is considered a nuisance, and the owner is entitled to legal remedies.

Relationship crumbled

The neighbors' initial benevolence toward each other apparently turned sour following an incident on Dec. 10, 2009, when, according to Nelson, Correia called him and "screamed" at him because Nelson's gardener mistakenly cut down a holly tree on another neighbor's property.

After that, Nelson claims Correia told him "she was going to plant a row of trees that would prevent Nelson from being able to see any ocean view."

Within a few months, Nelson said the trees grew four to five feet above Nelson's fence line and began blocking his ocean view. The trees will completely obscure the view within a "short period of time," according to Nelson.

"That seriously detracts from Nelson's enjoyment of his property and its value," according to his suit.

Nelson is seeking damages for emotional distress and mental suffering, punitive damages, lost wages, temporary restraining orders compelling his neighbors from making slanderous statements and pointing surveillance gear toward his house, and a judge's order directing Correia to prune the trees that are blocking his view.

Correia told The Pine Cone Tuesday she couldn't comment because she hadn't yet been served the lawsuit. Evans couldn't be reached for comment.

Slanderous statements

Nelson alleges Correia and Evans defamed him when they told several people that Nelson had either cut down or trimmed more than 20 trees on their property and other land, including property owned by the Pebble Beach Company.

"The words uttered were false," according to Nelson.

In another instance, Nelson says that on April 4 of this year, Correia and Evans "made a false police report" when they told Carmel police that Nelson had turned on the water on their property, flooding their garden.

"The words were heard by police officers," according to Nelson. The incident was later reported in the The Pine Cone's police log.

I'm watching you

Nelson's lawsuit also charges Correia and Evans with invasion of privacy. He contends the couple installed a video surveillance camera on an overhang of their guest house.

The pair "pointed the video surveillance camera toward Nelson's house, including his side patio, yard and house steps where Nelson previously enjoyed his privacy," the lawsuit indicates.

Furthermore, Correia and Evans installed live power lines underground on Nelson's property without his permission, which he said has amounted to nuisance and trespass.

Nelson said Correia and Evans have refused to remove the power lines.

And Nelson claims he's experienced medical problems — including "shock, anxiety and injury to his nervous system" — as a result of his neighbors' alleged behavior.

He has had "discomfort and annoyance and endured mental suffering caused by the fear of his own safety and that of his family," Nelson alleges.

Break-in suspects return to steal car, outrun cops

By MARY BROWNFIELD

BRAZEN BURGLARS who were apparently scared away from a Guadalupe house before they could take very many valuables returned a couple of hours later and stole the victim's car, according to Carmel Police detective Rachelle Lightfoot. Moments later, despite being chased by Del Rey Oaks police and crashing the older model Volvo into a pole, the suspects managed to escape and are still at large.

The thieves probably got into the home through an unlocked door, as there were no signs of forced entry, and stole a cell phone and a spare car key, according to Lightfoot.

"Nothing else appeared to be taken, but they were probably interrupted," she said.

The culprits returned a couple of hours later and took the 1998 Volvo that had been parked on the street in front of the house. Hearing the engine start, the resident ran outside after them but failed to get to the car in time.

"They honked at him as they sped away," Lightfoot said. Carmel police alerted neighboring law-enforcement agencies to keep an eye out for the stolen car, and shortly after, a Del Rey Oaks officer saw it heading eastbound on Highway 68 near Pasadera.

"Del Rey Oaks gave chase, and there was a brief pursuit until they crashed at 68 and Laureles Grade," Lightfoot said. After wrecking the stolen Volvo, the occupants fled, and Del Rey Oaks officers failed to find them.

"We don't know who they are or how many there were," she said of the suspects.

But police have the car and are working with a forensics technician from the Monterey County crime lab to collect any useful evidence it contains.

"The airbags went off, so we're hoping we can collect some DNA," she said.

Anderson activated his lights and siren, but the driver decided to flee and turned up First Street.

"The guy tried to floor it, and it's a $500 car, OK? It's not really going to move that quickly," Nyunt said. "So they decided to bail."

But when the three men jumped out of the Chevy, it began to roll backward. Rather than chase after the suspects, Anderson had to block the SUV with his patrol car to keep it from hitting nearby parked vehicles.

When police looked inside the Blazer, they found a dozen GPS devices like Garmins and Magellans, about a dozen vehicle cell-phone chargers, several cameras and cell phones, and numerous other stolen items. At least one object found in the Blazer had been reported stolen from a car in P.G. earlier, according to police.

While searching the area at around 4:45 a.m., Anderson and P.G. Sgt. Jose Figueroa spotted and arrested the first of the three — 18-year-old Manuel Rodriguez-Hernandez of Seaside — who was hiding between two parked cars near Laurel Avenue and First Street.

Less than two hours later, Monterey P.D. officer Sean Calvert detained a man walking on the recreation trail near Hutton Street who matched the description of one of the suspects. P.G. officers went to the scene and positively identified 18-year-old Seaside resident Francis Geovanni Ruiz-Perez as the registered owner and driver of the Chevy.

Using items found in the Blazer — including the suspect's identification — officers discovered the third culprit was 19-year-old Julio Cesar Rodriguez, according to Nyunt, and they arrested him in his Hilby Street apartment late in the afternoon.

All three men were arrested without further resistance and were taken to Monterey County Jail on felony charges of possession of stolen property. The driver was also arrested for flight from a police officer with disregard for the safety of people and property, due to his recklessly abandoning the Chevy in the middle of the street.

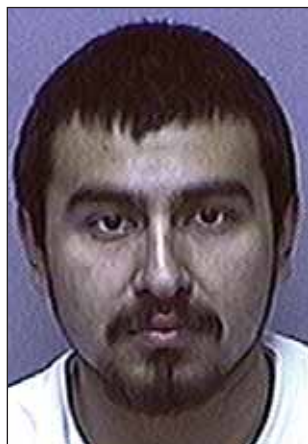

Nyunt said the suspects appear to be affiliated with the Norteño gang, due to a T-shirt one was wearing and a five-point star tattooed on another. The shirt, which Rodriguez was wearing inside out, bore the word, "Norteño," and listed all the area codes in which the gang has a presence. (Nyunt said gang members intentionally wear their shirts inside-out and then lift them to show their affiliation to others.)

"They can be pretty bold," Nyunt observed.

Police are focusing on identifying victims and completing the lengthy investigation of the men's alleged crimes. Nyunt said anyone who has been a victim should call the department at (831) 648-3143 and arrange to identify what was stolen.

"Most of what we have is from the recent burglaries over the weekend," he said. "They have admitted to other thefts in other jurisdictions, but we were unable to confirm all that, because there are so many different groups stealing things."

That observation led Nyunt to remind residents to lock their cars and take valuables with them.

Acosta said. The crew in a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter dispatched from San Francisco was the first to spot her.

The firefighters in the Zodiac pulled the unconscious, pulseless woman into the boat and immediately initiated CPR, which they continued until the boat reached Whalers Cove, where an ambulance crew took over. Hauffe was also taken to CHOMP, but the lifesaving efforts failed to revive her, and she was later pronounced dead.

Acosta said the rescue efforts went smoothly and were well coordinated, despite the large number of agencies and personnel involved. Responding agencies included Cal Fire, the Monterey County Sheriff's Office, state parks lifeguards, the Coast Guard, Carmel Fire Department and Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance.

"It was a good effort, and the added bonus was the air support, especially considering how far out the second victim was," Acosta said, adding that he had been surprised by far Hauffe had drifted from where she was swept in. "There was good participation and communication."

City celebrates turning 94

THE CITY of Carmel-by-the-Sea will celebrate its 94th birthday with its traditional Halloween parade and party Saturday, Oct. 30. The parade will begin at 11 a.m. on San Carlos Street in front of Sunset Center, where the celebratory gathering — complete with ice cream for parade participants — will be held afterward.

Kids, grownups and dogs on leashes, all preferably in costume, are invited to take part in the parade, which heads down Ocean Avenue before returning to the center. Accompanying them will be city dignitaries and elected and appointed officials riding in eye-catching cars, saluting the town's residents.

A hot dog lunch and entertainment will follow in the terraces, patios and parking lot of Sunset Center, starting at noon. Tickets to the party can be purchased at Carmel-by-the-Sea City Hall in advance and at the celebration on the big day.

The cost is $5, which includes not just a hot dog, but chili, chips, a drink, ice cream, cake and coffee, too.

Fundraiser offers art bargains

AN EXHIBIT opening Friday, Oct. 29, at the Pacific Grove Art Center brings together two of America's favorite pastimes — philanthropy and bargain-hunting.

The art center hosts a reception from 7 to 9 p.m. for the opening of its annual Patrons' Show fundraiser.

Some of the Monterey Peninsula's finest artists have donated pieces including Christine Crozier, Jane Flury, Rollin Pickford, Joseph Nordmann, Al Brevard and many more.

For the modest sum of a $50 raffle ticket (or $75 for anyone who isn't a member of the art association), you can walk away from the fundraiser with an original piece of art.

"Tickets are sold equal to the number of pieces donated, and the person whose ticket is drawn first will be able to choose a piece from all of the art in the gallery," explained Joan McCleary, executive director of the art center.

In addition to the Patrons' Show, the art center unveils exhibits by Julie

Berries and Branches tour comes to town

By MARY BROWNFIELD

EACH YEAR, the Berries and Branches holiday tour features private homes in a different part of the county decorated to the hilt for the holidays by local designers. On Nov. 11 and 12, the tour will be held for the first time in Carmel-by-the-Sea, where six homes will be open for viewing from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The event will raise money for the Nancy Ausonio Mammography Center of Salinas Valley Memorial Healthcare System.

"We've never done anything in the same place twice," explained organizer Karen Watkins, who said Berries and Branches tours have been held at Pasadera, River Road and elsewhere in the past. "This is our first time in Carmel. We don't want people to get bored with what we're doing."

Guests will be invited to explore the cottages — including the well preserved 1913 home of Carmel's first mayor, A.P. Fraser — and houses located downtown and on Scenic Road, by Carmel River Beach and above Carmel Mission, according to Watkins.

She described Fraser's former cottage as "enchanting" and said a couple of the larger homes boast expansive views. Several of the cottages are within walking distance of each other.

The Mission itself plays a key role in the tour as well, as it will be the site of registra-

Decked out in Christmas splendor, homes specially decorated for the Berries and Branches tour will be open to the public for two days. This year's host city is Carmel.

Readying Big Sur for foodies, dueling ducks, and homesteading

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AN OPENING night reminiscent of the long-gone Masters of Food & Wine, the release of the definitive tome on wine, panelists with more than their share of experience and accolades, lavish dinners and unique "hikes" — all orchestrated and presented with distinctive Big Sur Coast flair — are in store for attendees of the second annual Big Sur Food & Wine Nov. 4-7.

The offerings are too numerous to list, but president Toby Rowland-Jones and V.P. Angus Wagner offered some recommendations and highlights.

The festival will begin with what Wagner described as a nod to MF&W: The Gateway to Big Sur opening night celebration at the gorgeous Highlands Inn in Carmel Thursday, Nov. 4, from 6 to 9 p.m., when 10 chefs and more than 20 wineries will share their best efforts with guests.

On Friday morning, a panel of winemakers will talk about Chardonnay and the wines that inspired them to make it in the first place. In the Santa Lucia Room at the Big Sur Lodge, Pax Mahle of Wind Gap, Jim Clendenen of Au Bon Climat, Paul Draper of Ridge, Jeff Pisoni of Lucia Vineyards, David Ramey of Ramey Winery and James Hall of Patz & Hall will "bring the wines that illustrate their journey of oenological discovery and descent into the madness of creating a wine that is so finicky."

The afternoon panel will focus on high- and low-alcohol wines, using Syrah as an example. Mahle, Morgan Clendenen of Cold Heaven, Bob Lundquist of Qupe, Bradley Brown of Big Basin, Justin Smith of Saxum and David Ramey of Ramey Wines will be moderated by wine whiz Mark Buzan, who recently left the Highlands Inn to go work for the Pebble Beach Co. "He's such a cool, calm cat — good natured and smart," Wagner said.

Also on Friday afternoon, Ventana Inn will host the Pinot Walkabout, where fans will sample the products of almost two dozen wineries. "Anyone who likes Pinot Noir will be overwhelmed by the talent," Wagner said.

Numerous winemaker dinners will be held throughout Big Sur that night, including Beer and Barbecue at the River Inn, Galante at the Roadhouse, Hitching Post and tales from "Sideways" at the Big Sur Bakery, Roar at Ventana Inn, winemaker and master sommelier Emmanuel Kimiji at Deetjen's, and Heller way down the coast among the yurts at TreeBones. Some of those venues also host dinners Saturday, and Sierra Mar at the Post Ranch Inn will be the scene of several events throughout the weekend.

Among the festival's highest achievements is the commitment of Tim Mondavi, son of Robert Mondavi, who is hosting special Saturday tasting entitled, "Past, Present and Something Italian!" Mondavi will present the wines he made with his father, as well as those he crafted for Continuum Estate and Ornellaia vineyards.

Saturday's main event is the grand tasting from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Henry Miller Library that will not only present all sorts of food and wine, but editor-in-chief Jim Gordon signing his new comprehensive book on all things wine, "Opus Vino," which will be released Nov. 1. The book details "more than 4,000 of the world's greatest wineries and their wines" in regions all over the world.

"This is the largest wine reference book ever published, and the first event he's going to do to promote that is at our festival," Rowland-Jones said. "This is like having one of the original signers of the Declaration of Independence here, as far as I am concerned!"

Saturday night's most significant draw may be Dinner with Friends at the Ventana Inn, a benefit to raise money for Big Sur charities. The auction and reception from 5:30 to 7 p.m. on the deck will include tempting items like "Survivor: Paso Robles," a package donated by Justin Winery that includes two-night midweek accommodations for three couples at the JUST Inn, a case of personally labeled wine the winners will help make, a six-year vertical of Justin Isosceles from 2002 to 2007, three signed magnums of 2007 Isosceles, a Harvest Lunch for six, a private tour and tasting at the barrel caves and winery, dinner with the owners at their hillside chateau and a wine-paired dinner for six.

Dinner with Friends will pair the wines of Alban, Chappellet, Roar, Justin and Hitching Post with the creations of Ventana chef Truman Jones, Frank Ostini of the Hitching Post, Ted Walters of PassionFish, chef Arturo Moscoso of Peppoli and pastry maestro Yann Lusseau of Parker-Lusseau.

"I'm just so delighted by the outpouring of generosity of the winemakers and chefs — it's so heartwarming," Rowland-Jones said. "It's all based on friendship. There is nobody coming to our event who we don't know."

"We've learned a lot, grown a lot and are really excited," Wagner said. "Now, we just have to get people there."

For information on all the events, including Hiking with Stemware and the Sunday brunch at Ventana, times and locations, ticket prices and other tidbits (such as the shuttles offered by Monterey-Salinas Transit between the Peninsula and Big Sur Saturday), visit www.pebblebeachfoodandwine.org.

Schedule of Events

Friday, November 5th

10:00 am – Chardonnays and their Muse Panel
 Santa Lucia Room, Big Sur Lodge

Ever wonder where exactly a wine maker gets his or her idea. Then come and listen to these amazing producers of Chardonnay (Pax Mahle of Wind Gap, Jim Clendenen of Au Bon Climat, Paul Draper of Ridge, Jeff Pisoni of Lucia Vineyards, David Ramey of Ramey Winery, and James Hall of Patz and Hall). These winemakers will not just talk about their divine inspiration, but also bring the wines that illustrate their journey of oenological discovery and descent into the madness of creating a wine that is so finicky.
Price per guest is $65 (inclusive)

2:30 pm – High/Low, Hot/Cold, Five Men & a Syren
 Santa Lucia Room, Big Sur Lodge

Step up ladies and gentlemen! Never seen a real Syren? 7:30 pm – Winemaker Dinner with Heller Estates Winery

Tunnell said the widely published photo depicts “a visibly distraught Sinatra being hugged by longtime friend Danny Thomas as his daughter,

Big Sur Food & Wine President Toby Rowland-Jones promises, “epic sunsets and great wines” during the Nov. 4-7 festival.

Nancy, along with other friends and family, fill the frame.”

The restaurant at Dolores and Seventh in downtown Carmel will host a small reception Tuesday, Nov. 2, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. RSVP to Randy Tunnell at foto600@comcast.net or (831) 649-3101.

Lula’s is located at 2 Harris Court, Suite B6, in Monterey.

■ Blending with Galante

Also, the Monterey Bay Metal Arts Guild presents "Sanctuary," a display of sculpture and jewelry created by local artists working in metal.

Marc Rush will play Irish music on the flute at the reception. And in tandem with the reception at the art center, the visit the many shops and galleries in downtown P.G. offering extended hours and local art.

ART ROUNDUP

Waves, flowers inspire new exhibit

Also opening this week will be an exhibit of watercolors, "Waters to Lillies," by Pacific Grove painter Leela Marcum. The display will be unveiled Monday, Nov. 1, at the Works in Pacific Grove. "I'm trying to depict the energy of waves and the serenity of flowers," explained Marcum, co-owner of the Pacific Grove bookshop, coffee house and art gallery.

The Works, which will host a reception for Marcum Saturday, Nov. 13, at 5 p.m., is located at 667 Lighthouse Ave. For more information, call (831) 372-2242 or visit www.theworkspg.com.

Arts Council honors champions

While "champions" are typically revered for their athletic success, in Monterey County they are also honored for their creative contributions.

Currently on display in the Arts Council Gallery, "California Visions" pays tribute to two local artists, Dave Allan and Richard Puckett. Each has been honored with a Champion of the Arts award by the Arts Council of Monterey County. The show will be on display until Dec. 5.

Allan, who uses watercolors to capture scenes along the Big Sur Coast, has taught at the Pacific Valley School for more than two decades. Puckett, meanwhile, was instrumental in establishing arts programs at Ft. Ord and the Presidio.

"They are both community treasures," said Paulette Lynch, executive director for the ACMC.

The Arts Council Gallery is located in Sunset Center's Room 5. The gallery is open Monday through Saturday from noon to 3 p.m.

AT&T ticket buyers can win free golf

■ New matching funds for charity program also announced

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TICKETS FOR next February's AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am are on sale now, and people who purchase them sooner rather than later have a chance to win free golf for two at the Pebble Beach Golf Links, Spyglass Hill and Monterey Peninsula Country Club, as well as tickets to the exclusive Fairway Club on the 3rd Fairway and inside-the-ropes access during the 3M Celebrity Challenge, among other prizes.

Organizers held their first drawing Oct. 1, and more are planned for Nov. 1, Dec. 1 and Jan. 3, 2011. Ticket orders placed by noon the previous business day will be eligible to win.

The tournament — which is played at all three courses Thursday through Saturday and culminates on the Pebble Beach Golf Links Sunday — is set for Feb. 7-13, 2011. Daily tickets are $50 until Jan. 15, 2011, when they increase to $60. Practice round tickets good for all three days, season badges, any-day ticket books of 10 coupons, Fairway Club and Champions Club tickets, and the Partners Package are also available. To purchase, visit www.attpbgolf.com or call (800) 541-9091.

Birdies for Charity

Tournament organizers also recently announced the impending Nov. 1 launch of the 2011 Birdies for Charity program, including a new matching amount of 15 percent, up from the 10 percent offered during the three previous years.

Charitable organizations are invited to participate in the fundraiser, which is tied to the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am and hinges on the number of birdies pros shoot during the tournament. Last year, 86 nonprofits raised more than $170,000 from donors who made flat donations or per-birdie pledges.

The program also features a Guess the Birdies contest for a chance to win two round-trip Continental Airlines tickets and a vacation package at the World Golf Hall of Fame in St.

Augustine, Fla.

The Monterey Peninsula Foundation bears all administrative costs for the program, which is open to local nonprofits. For information, call Nettie Porter at the tournament office at (831) 649-1533 or email nporter@attpbgolf.com.

Hotel holds beach cleanup

TO HELP make the Monterey Peninsula a cleaner, prettier place, the Portola Hotel & Spa has adopted Del Monte Beach and is inviting community members to participate in its first cleanup effort Saturday, Oct. 30, from 10 a.m. to noon. Through Save Our Shores' Adopt-a-Beach program, the hotel has committed to ensuring the sandy stretch is "free of pollution through regular beach cleanups, keeping Del Monte Beach pristine for the Monterey community and tourists."

People who help pick up cigarette butts, candy wrappers, beer bottles and whatever else has been discarded on the beach or washed up onto the sand will be rewarded for their work with a free appetizer in the hotel's Peter B's BrewPub afterward.

To take part, meet at Del Monte Beach at Wharf No. 2 off of Tide Avenue in Monterey at 10 a.m. Oct. 30.

P.G. city council delays monarch tagging, but counting OK

By KELLY NIX

THE PACIFIC Grove City Council decided Oct. 20 to hold off on an eight-year program of tagging monarch butterflies for fear handling the insects could disrupt the population of the butterflies, which was drastically lower in the city last year than in previous years.

Though the tagging program has been lauded since it began eight years ago — when monarch population numbers were mostly high — the council opted to wait find out more information about how tagging may affect the butterflies.

Tagging “requires physically touching the butterflies,” Jim Becklenberg, the city’s budget director told the council. “This year, given we have the low numbers ... I think we need more information before making that decision for tagging.”

Tagging monarchs requires holding the butterflies and placing a small round sticker on a wing. There are numbers on the tag identifying the butterfly as having been tagged in Pacific Grove, which helps researchers track their migration patterns.

Some fear that handling the insects could cause a portion of the butterflies to leave the city’s Monarch Grove Sanctuary — where they typically begin congregating each fall.

Monarch enthusiast Bob Pacelli, in an email last week to a UC Davis biologist in charge of tagging the butterflies, warned the practice could disrupt the insects’ habitat.

“Anyone pulling a monarch out of tree for whatever reason seems not the right move at this time,” Pacelli wrote.

The city council voted to bring back the tagging issue at a future city council meeting. The council, however authorized experts and volunteers to continue the tradition of counting monarchs, which doesn’t require touching the insects.

Becklenberg said tagging monarchs is very useful in tracking their movements, but that counting the insects “is more important to those studying the overwintering system along the coast.”

Some local experts and scientists blamed the sharp decline in the number of monarchs in Pacific Grove sanctuary last fall on a bad pruning job by a tree crew that left 19 eucalyptus trees virtually naked and undesirable to the monarchs.

Several weeks ago, Pacelli spearheaded an effort to bring about 20 boxed trees to the sanctuary in hopes it would draw more monarchs to the sanctuary off Lighthouse Avenue.

Pacelli said the trees, mostly eucalyptus, seem to be working so far.

“We don’t have thousands, but we have hundreds,” he said.

60th Concours exceeds $1M in donations

THE PEBBLE Beach Concours d’Elegance held in August raised more than $1 million for charity for the fifth consecutive year, organizers announced last week. The 2010 event, staged on the 18th Fairway of the P.B. Golf Links Aug. 15, also prompted a mad rush of donations following a generous invitation by car buff Jay Leno and an impromptu marriage proposal by a raffle winner.

During the six decades since the highly esteemed auto event was founded, the Concours has generated more than $14 million for local charities. Entrants, judges, volunteers and spectators all contributed to the total raised for charity, and auction house Gooding & Company donated part of the proceeds from the sales of a slot model of the Pebble Beach Road Race course and the 2010 Pebble Beach RetroAuto poster painting.

A handful of P.B. Concours benefactors raise money by holding drawings for deluxe prizes, and one contest “ended in spectacular fashion,” after “Tonight Show” host Jay Leno announced that anyone in the audience who donated $1,000 to the Boys & Girls Clubs would be invited to attend his show and tour his garage. In response, spectators flooded the stage to pony up more than $50,000.

And after a couple won another drawing for a diamond ring, Ken Nixon — also encouraged by Leno — proposed to his girlfriend of nine years, Amanda McLean, in front of the crowd. She accepted.

SAVE THE PACIFIC GROVE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Measure Q Will

- Increase library hours, which have been slashed from 52 per week, in early 2008, to current total of 24 per week.
- Provide more library services and materials.
- Allow residents of PG to maintain control of their century-old Library.
- Keep intact, in PG, the entire Library collection, valued at $7 million.
- Maintain our staff of professional librarians.
- Guarantee funding designated solely, by law, for the Library for 10 years.

Don't Be Misled

- PG taxpayers do not contribute to the county library system.
- Joining the county library system isn't free — it would cost $920,000 the first year alone.
- The cost of Measure Q would be $45 per year — not per month — for an apartment or condominium unit — and only if the landlord decided to pass it on. That's $3.75 per month. It would be $90 per year on individual parcels — $7.50 per month.

If Measure Q fails, the Library's future is in jeopardy

County Supervisor Dave Potter: “If Measure Q is defeated, there is no other solution pending. It would be back to square one to try to find funding for the P.G. Library, which would likely suffer further cuts in hours and services because there is no guaranteed funding for it when the current fiscal year ends.”

Mike Niccum, president of the PGUSD Board: “Some opponents say that Pacific Grove should join the Monterey County Free Libraries system instead. That would cost P.G. more than $900,000 in the first year alone and a minimum of $6.6 million in the first 10 years. It would also mean the end of local control of our library, and there would be no requirement that money raised in P.G. be spent in P.G.”

How to reform government

WE HAVE to agree with the Obama administration that local laws can't be allowed to trump federal ones, and that if immigration, for example, is within the federal purview, neither state nor local government should interfere by cracking down on illegal immigrants or giving them sanctuary.

In fact, we think the principal of "preemption" should be expanded. Over the decades we've seen government regulation and control expand to virtually every area of life, with multiple government agencies frequently claiming jurisdiction over the same types of activities, resulting in tremendous waste and confusion for the citizenry. Streamlining things would save a lot of the taxpayers' money and result in much more efficient government and better decision making.

Some outstanding, current examples:

■ The desal plant for the Monterey Peninsula, which is desperately needed for public health and safety, not to mention the local economy, cannot be built without permits from more than 25 different government bodies. Not only has that Gordian knot of requirements slowed down progress tremendously and driven costs through the roof, it has also invariably meant that the desal plant, when it gets final approval, will probably not be the plant this community requires. Right now, we're headed toward spending $250 million or more to build a plant that won't provide any new water.

■ When the Pebble Beach Company wanted to build a new golf course, along with a few hotel rooms and homesites, while putting hundreds of acres of Monterey pine into protected open space, the plan was approved by voters and the county board of supervisors but rejected by the coastal commission. A lot of time and money could have been saved if a single agency had been in charge.

■ Last week we reported an all-too-common occurrence: That a Big Sur property owner was promised by one state agency he could develop an ocean-front parcel, only to be told by a different state agency that he couldn't.

If all this overlap were eliminated, so would be the waste. And it would also clarify who should be held responsible if some important function of government isn't being fulfilled. Thus, if the federal government has power over immigration, and no other government agency is allowed to stick its nose into immigration enforcement, it should also be a simple matter to force the federal government to carry out its duties.

Prop. 13's effect

WHEN CALIFORNIA voters decided to stop the runaway property tax money train of the 1970s, dire warnings were heard throughout the state — especially from leading Democratic party officials such as then-governor Jerry Brown — that the impact of Prop. 13 on government budgets would be disastrous.

Let's see, if state and local government haven't had adequate tax revenues in the last 34 years, how is it that so many government employees over that same period of time have become so grossly overpaid?

Imagine how good their pensions and health care would be if Prop. 13 didn't exist.

Letters to the Editor

Pension costs

Dear Editor,

I was confused by John Moore's Oct. 22 letter to the editor.

The blame for Pacific Grove's excess pension costs rests squarely on the shoulders of city council, which approved the labor contract with the police department and the former P.G. fire department.

The council could have said, "No." When changing the options of a PERS contract, an actuarial is required so that all parties involved will know what the long term cost are going to be.

What you are proposing is called a breach of contract.

Miller for airport board

Dear Editor,

Carl Miller is the best qualified candidate for the Monterey Peninsula Airport District. For the last four years Miller has made Monterey a quieter, greener and safer airport. In 2010 we completed a $20 million program soundproofing over 900 homes surrounding the airport. The Airport now has approximately 32 flights a day to five cities serving over 400,000 passengers each year! But there is still more to be accomplished.

■ Create quieter aircraft landings and takeoffs with new ILS technology

■ $40 million FAA funded Runway Safety Project

■ Build a greener more sustainable airport with technology (solar).

■ Construct new access roads to lessen neighborhood traffic

■ Improve air service with a $500,000 FAA grant which should lower prices through competition

These are still very difficult economic times. It is in all of our best interests for our local airport to remain financially self-sustaining and free from local tax support. I believe Carl Miller's experience and qualifications make him uniquely qualified to continue as your airport director.

Please join me and cast your vote for Carl Miller for the Board of Directors for the Monterey Peninsula Airport.

Robert DeVoe, Monterey

Airport's expensive attorney

Dear Editor,

At an airport board meeting last month Carl Miller, the incumbent candidate for the board proposed and voted for Ordinance 908. In that ordinance, Miller proposed the airport's attorney be paid a retainer of $20,000 a month for four years. And that's just for starters with your public money.

The attorney's compensation was to tied to San Francisco's CPI. Plus the fee escalated if he were to attend more than two airport board meetings per month. It also pays if outside legal services are needed due to a case being beyond the scope of practice of the airport attorney.

Miller was sly in the way he presented the ordinance for consideration. Nowhere in the ordinance is there a mention of the funds involved. The agreement itself is the only

CHOMP, Aetna at loggerheads over prices

■ Are local hospital costs way too high?

By KELLY NIX

BECAUSE OF a dispute between Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and Aetna health insurance company, starting next year patients covered by the provider will have to find another hospital to seek treatment or be forced to pay CHOMP much more for medical services.

Negotiations between the insurance provider and CHOMP's management broke down recently, which means the contract between the two companies will end Jan. 1.

The implications of the dispute means thousands of Monterey County residents — 12,000 according to Aetna — will have to pay more for medical services if they seek treatment at CHOMP.

"It means that if you have Aetna and you go to CHOMP," said hospital spokeswoman Mary Barker. "It will be considered out of network and you will have to pay more. Or you will have to go to another hospital that is in network."

While Aetna contends CHOMP refused to discount its reimbursement rates to a "sustainable level," the hospital believes the 34 percent reduction Aetna is seeking is "irresponsible."

According to an Oct. 18 letter by CHOMP CEO/President Steven Packer to administrators who handle employee benefits at various local companies, Aetna refused to discuss "a partnership that could help manage our costs for the long term."

"We were trying to negotiate with them and essentially all they wanted us to do was give them a discount on [reimbursement] rates," Barker told The Pine Cone.

She said that Aetna sent CHOMP a letter terminating the contract.

According to Aetna, it's CHOMP that halted talks.

"Unfortunately, negotiations have stalled," Coplin said. "But if CHOMP decides they would like to resume negotiations, we will be ready to do so."

'Twice as expensive'

However, Aetna claims the discounts are warranted because CHOMP charges too much for its services. Aetna said CHOMP charges nearly double for a per-day, inpatient stay than other hospitals in Northern California, according to Aetna spokeswoman Anjanette Coplin.

Aetna's "job is to help control health care costs for our customers and members," Coplin said. "When charges are unreasonably high, we must take action to protect our customers and members from unnecessary costs."

CHOMP disputed Aetna's claims and said the hospital charges less than Salinas Valley Memorial Healthcare System and Natividad Medical Center — hospitals Aetna still lists in its network.

"Aetna wants to drastically cut hospital payment rates with little regard for the impact that has on quality care," Packer wrote.

According to the company's data, Aetna insures 12,504 members in Monterey County while CHOMP said it shows there are only about 7,000 in the county covered by the insurance provider.

Barker said the hospital's figures are based on government statistics, while Aetna said it used its own claims data to compile its numbers.

Patients aren't the only ones who will be affected. Certain physicians who practice exclusively at CHOMP — such as radiologists, pathologists, and radiation oncologists — will likely be considered out-of-network providers.

And other local physicians and surgery centers may also be considered out of Aetna's network.

Patient-physician relationships will also likely be jeopardized since many patients will be forced to go to new doctors that Aetna recognizes.

In his letter, Packer encouraged those with questions about the issue to call hospital.

"We know you have to make difficult decisions about insurance for your employees," Packer wrote, "and these tough economic times make those decisions more important than ever."

place where the amount of money is mentioned. It's difficult to find the agreement.

Our small airport cannot afford to shell out a retainer worth more than the salary of the U.S. Attorney General.

In the public comment portion of the meeting I voiced the opinion that for the amount of money they could get a full time lawyer to move into the airport and be there 24/7.

After I spoke, the retainer fee was narrowly defeated by a vote of 3 to 2.

Staff was directed to come up with other options. The Monterey Peninsula Airport Board can't afford Carl Miller. He has the wrong priorities and he doesn't seem to want the public to know about it.

Measure Q

Local Editor:

As a member of the committee in Pacific Grove against Measure Q, and against new taxes, I find myself in various locations in this city passing out information about the facts involved in this unfair parcel tax. Often I am asked about the alternatives or options to this long-term, regressive $6,000,000 property tax.

When the subject comes up, people sometimes lower their voices, look over their shoulder before asking the question, "Why can't city employees take an across-the-board 20 percent reduction in salary which opponents say would provide funds to keep the library open 40 hours a week or more, and provide the services that all the proponents of measure Q are whining about?"

After all, during the hardships of these recessionary times all across this nation, in order to keep their civil service jobs, employees have given way to a compromise of lowering their salaries. This would be more fair and equitable than in the private sector where employees have no choice, but layoffs when times get tough and profits are down.

So, I am asked, why hasn't this alternative been considered in Pacific Grove with the city manager, city council and proponents of Measure Q? Because this is a political issue about fairness between people who can afford the new tax and people who cannot. So, in the voting booth with the curtains pulled, please vote No on Measure Q.

HISTORIC HOME GETS HAUNTED FOR A GOOD CAUSE

By CHRIS COUNTS

ONE OF Carmel's oldest homes is about to become one of its spookiest. To help raise money for PacRep Theater, Carmel resident Carol Hall is transforming her 1906 home into a haunted house Saturday, Oct. 30, and offering a fundraising — and hair-raising — good time.

"It's not just a party," Hall explained. "It's an event."

While some folks specialize in hosting memorable Christmas or Thanksgiving get-togethers, Hall saves her creative inspiration for Halloween celebrations. This Saturday's bash marks the seventh time in the past two decades she has staged the extravaganza.

"My first memory is of Halloween," she said. "I was three and dressed up as a little ghost. We were living in Monterey. I was miffed because I had to finish my dinner before I could go out and 'trick or treat.'"

At Saturday's event, a cast of 30 will offer a bounty of surprises for guests, who will be measured for their caskets when they arrive.

"We're going to have a dance troupe do 'Thriller,'" she said. "There will be a scene from 'The Phantom of the Opera' performed in one room and a scene from the movie, 'Misery,' performed in another room."

In addition to turning her residence into a house of horrors, Hall has converted a guest house into "The Nightmare Before Christmas Cottage." Also, a "Haunted Woods Tour" and a graveyard — complete with a mourning widow who sings — promise to tingle a few spines.

Also, "finger food" (yikes!) and refreshments will be offered at "The Road Kill Cafe."

Tickets are $75. The event is limited to adults only. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes. The fun starts at 7:30 p.m. For more information, call (831) 622-0100 or visit www.pacrep.org.

Party to benefit kids program

A second fundraising Halloween event, "A Wicked Halloween Costume Party," will be presented Saturday at Sunset Center. According to organizer Nola Rocco, the party will be more celebratory than scary.

"The whole summer has been nothing but a long 'June Gloom,'" Rocco explained. "I thought what we really needed was a party to get local people out of that gloom. We need to forget

Marian Ryter

Marian Ryter, loving mother and grandmother, dedicated wife, and devoted friend, died Monday, October 25th at age 95 in Monterey, CA. She was born in 1915 to Sophie Levenson and Mark Rosen. She had a younger sister, Lauriette, who died in 1923 at the age of five. Marian wed in 1935 to Myron Ryter who preceded her in death. She leaves two sons, Stephen(Wendie) and Mark(Rosetta), and three grandchildren, Loren(Deirdre), Tzaporah, and Eden(Aaron). Her congenial good humor, compassion, and keen intelligence will be missed by all who were part of her diverse circle.

She spent all but the last decade of her life in the Boston area where she enjoyed wonderful friends and family. Here she pursued with passionate conviction the great interests of her life, predominantly classical music, arts, culture, and current events. In 1999, at the age of 84, she moved across the country to Monterey, CA, where she was rejuvenated with wonderful new friends and experiences.

Marian was a soft spoken and forthright conversationalist. Her knowledge of historic twentieth century events, politics, and personalities was extensive. Accepted to the Juilliard School of Music in 1931, she will be remembered as a gifted pianist who stirred audiences for decades by her emotional range at the keyboard. Intellectual curiosity was a driving force in her long and satisfying life. Marian was an avid reader and a proud lifelong supporter of the arts.

A graveside service will be held Friday, October 29th at 1:00 p.m. at Gan Hazikaron at Mission Memorial Park, 1915 Ord Grove Ave, Seaside. In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made in her memory to The Monterey Public Library Bookmobile, 625 Pacific St., Monterey, CA 93940 or to the Public Broadcasting Service at www.pbs.org.

Talbott Foundation announces grants

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE FOUNDATION started in the names of Robert and Audrey Talbott — founders of the clothing company — announced it is distributing $287,000 in grants this year from assets of about $5 million.

A fundraising dinner held at Robert Talbott Vineyards, which was started by their son, Robb, nearly 30 years ago helped. Robb Talbott is now responsible for both the clothing and wine businesses. “This was the largest distribution in the foundation’s history,” said executive director Ron Parravano.

He did not announce individual gifts but said recipients included Chartwell, Palma, St. Dunstan’s, All Saints’, Santa Catalina and York schools, the Foundation for Monterey County Free Libraries, CASA, the Monterey Jazz Festival, Rancho Cielo youth program, the Salvation Army and quite a few others.

According to the nonprofit’s tax forms, the foundation distributed $221,200 in grants last year to many of the same recipients, with $20,000 each for ASDS, Santa Catalina, York and Chartwell School, as well as the Community Partnership for Youth. It also gave $15,000 to Beacon House; $12,000 to St. Dunstan’s; and $10,000 each to the Red Cross, Palma High School, the Forest Theater Guild and MY Museum.

Smaller gifts went to Monterey High School ($7,000 for its field and track renovation), the Monterey County Board of Education ($5,000 for its media center), First Night Monterey ($4,700), the Hilton Bialek Habitat ($5,000) and the Carmel Youth Center ($2,500).

The foundation operates on a very slim budget, with only Parravano on the payroll, according to the tax form, ensuring it can hand out as much money as possible.

Feds acquire two more Big Sur properties

U.S. FOREST Service lands in Big Sur grew by 60 acres after the federal agency purchased two properties in late September.

The two properties — a 40-acre parcel and a 20-acre parcel — are located just east of forest service’s Pacific Valley Station, spokesman Andrew Madsen explained. The forest service paid the nonprofit Save the Redwoods League $300,000 for the larger property and $120,000 for the smaller one. “It’s an awesome deal all around,” Madsen said.

Prior to the transaction, the Save the Redwoods League removed several structures from the property, he noted.

Although camping will not be permitted on either of the properties, hiking will be soon, Madsen suggested. “There’s a pre-existing trail that needs work,” he added. “It would be an ideal day hike.”

Rooster fight riles up county planning commission

SPECIAL TO THE PINE CONE

WHILE CARMEL's city council recently decided it was OK for residents to have two hens, folks in other parts of Monterey County are suffering from the noise made by roosters.

Based on the location of noise complaints, this is especially true in North Monterey County, which is why in 2007 the supervisor of that area, Lou Calcagno, asked the county planning department to come up with a solution, and last week the planning commission considered an ordinance that would limit rural properties of less than 2.5 acres to five roosters. Larger properties could keep more roosters if they obtained a special permit that addressed manure, drainage, setbacks for coops, and roaming areas. The permit would carry a fee of approximately $4,300.

Currently the county allows "small livestock farming" and "animal husbandry" without permits if a property owner has 499 or fewer chickens, pigeons, hogs, rabbits, ducks, geese, fowl, goats, sheep or similar animals, but it does not differentiate between roosters and chickens.

But planning commissioner Keith Vandevere was concerned the limit on roosters might hamper groups such as 4-H and Future Farmers of America.

"The county has an existing noise ordinance that perfectly suits the problem. Why do we need a new ordinance?" he asked.

Commissioner Martha Diehl also wanted to know why the noise ordinance couldn't be enforced in cases pertaining to roosters. And she wanted to know who would enforce the land-use rooster rule.

County planner Taven Kinison-Brown explained that the additional work load created by the ordinance would fall to the county Xxx code enforcement officers. He went on to explain that complaints regarding the noise created by roosters are addressed by the animal control department. But animal control requires three independent complaints before it will enforce.

There were only four members of the public who commented on the proposed ordinance. Anne Marie-Tresch from North County played an audio tape of her neighbor's roosters as they sound from her back porch. She also described how fighting roosters are raised in awful conditions and begged the commissioners to recommend approval of the ordinance to the board of supervisors.

But activist Jan Mitchell, also from North County, blamed the problem on "residential and commercial development having been foolishly allowed to creep into our rural landscape." And she said she doesn't feel a land use ordinance is appropriate to address illegal cock fighting.

From public comment, it became clear that the heart of the issue was not noise, but illegal cock fighting. Kinison-Brown said the sheriff's department was having a hard time breaking up cock-fighting rings and this ordinance might help. Commissioner Vandevere said, "I thought the goal from reading the staff report is to reduce noise. Now we're talking about helping the sheriff's office control cock fighting? So in order to help the sheriff control cock fighting, we're going to throw the 4-H and FFA kids under the bus?"

Diehl also observed that the rooster rule "would not add resources [to the Code Enforcement division], just expectations." She said adopting it would not solve the problem, but would "cost the county a lot of money."

Nevertheless, the Commission voted 7-2 to recommend approval of the rooster rule to the board of supervisors.

No trick-or-treating in jail

PEOPLE OUT on the Monterey Peninsula, and particularly in Carmel, for one of the busiest party weekends of the year should make sure to call a cab or designate a driver.

Police officers will be out in force Saturday night and into Sunday patrolling for drunken drivers, according to Carmel Police Cmdr. Mike Calhoun.

And Jan Ford, public information officer for the Avoid the 18 countywide anti-DUI campaign, said Marina police also intend to saturate the streets, while Salinas P.D. will set up a sobriety checkpoint Friday, Oct. 29.

Lindé B. Martin

Lindé B. Martin [80], well known artist and citizen of the Monterey Bay area and Santa Cruz, quietly passed away on Friday, October 1, 2010. She was born into the Kuchenreuther family in Erlangen, Germany on January 2, 1930. Lindé immigrated to America on Thanksgiving Day, 1953. Her legacy as a painter and glass artist unfolded in Santa Cruz in the 1960's and has grown to where her work can be found in art collections around the the world. Currently she has paintings showing at City Hall in her hometown of Erlangen. Lindé participated in Open Studios in Santa Cruz for many years, and has donated work locally and privately. She owned Linde Fine Art gallery in Carmel, California from 2000-2008. Lindé created beauty in everything she touched—from her gastronomical sense and taste, to her garden, and her home. As much as she was as an artist—she was a teacher of art and life. Those who have known her, who have experienced her and come to love her, know that she was the real thing —honest to the bone, opinionated, blunt, colorful, vulnerable, with the roar of a lion, and a heart of gold. She is survived by her daughter, Cornelia, of Eau Claire, Wisconsin; sister, Ingeborg Keuchenreuther, of Munich, Germany; dear friend, Leroy Rockelman of Aptos, California, and more friends than most of us can imagine. We will miss her. If you'd like to share stories or experiences about Linde, please visit only helping to look for birds in the field but also helping to set up the rehabilitation facilities with his construction and electrician background."

Many obstacles

Besides the heartbreak of seeing injured and suffering birds day after day, Dmytryk said the hot and muggy weather made it tough to work.

"It was hard dealing with that kind of heat where we could only work in our plastic suits for 10 or 20 minutes before we had to take a break," she said. "That was frustrating and physically difficult."

Dmytryk, who this week testified over the phone for the presidential commission investigating the oil spill, said the biggest challenge was the crippling bureaucracy during the animal rescue and rehabilitation effort.

"We didn't feel we were being utilized as much as we could have been," she said.

Because it's only time until there's another oil spill in the Gulf, Dmytryk said she and Titus have proposed a wildlife center in Louisiana that specifically treats birds that have been oiled.

"I have been to Louisiana three times for oil spills," she said. "It needs its own wildlife facilities. Hopefully it will get some attention soon."

On Dec. 4, Dmytryk, Titus and IBRRC director Jay Holcomb will speak at a fundraiser at Monterey Peninsula College in which they will recount their bird rescue efforts in the Gulf and show photos and video clips.

CHAIR MESSAGE

Vicki Lynch, 2010 Board Chair

Taste of Carmel

Every year around the 2nd Thursday of October, the Carmel Chamber hosts the Taste of Carmel, to highlight our amazing wining and dining establishments. We could not have been blessed with more perfect weather this year, and a record number of attendees. We owe it all to the 30 restaurants, 20 wineries, 2 coffee houses and 1 brewery that did a spectacular job delighting our senses. You are the ones that are responsible for bringing the crowds back year after year.

Again, Glastonbury Audiovisual did an incredible job lighting up the courtyard at the Carmel Mission, and transporting you to another place and time – the 1970s. These events could not happen without the volunteers. Co-Chairs Baird Pittman and Janine Potter started the planning very early this year and their efforts in drafting a dedicated steering committee paid off. Super volunteer John Elford knows this event so well he could practically pull it off by himself. The volunteers sought, set up and staffed the silent auction and raffle items were a major contribution to this fundraising event. I would also like to thank the City of Carmel who contributed to our advertising budget. One of our goals was to attract people from the Bay area, ultimately benefiting our community at large so a special thanks to Heidi Burch and Rich Guillen for making that happen and to Jeff Burghardt who put together a terrific campaign. Speaking of budgets, our major sponsors were Hayashi & Wayland, Ausonio, The Crossroads Shopping Village and Lombardo & Gilles, LLC – thank you.

And of course, all of you who bought tickets and chose to support the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, a special thank you for making this an incredible event and success. Please go to www.tasteofcarmel.org for a complete listing of sponsors and participants as well as highlights. Hope to see you again next year!

Vicki Lynch, chair of the Carmel Chamber of Commerce board of directors for 2010, is the owner of Writing on the Wall. In addition, she is Co-Chair of Carmel's Forest and Beach Commission.
