McCloud's role in 'Argo' revealed

By PAUL MILLER

THE NO. 1 movie in the country last week was "Argo," directed by and starring Ben Affleck, which is a dramatic account of the 1980 rescue of six American diplomats from Iran by the CIA.

Sue McCloud, former Mayor of Carmel and a 30-year CIA veteran, hasn't seen it, but she knows the story very well.

"I was on the front lines on that one," she told The Pine Cone Monday.

Critics and audiences love "Argo," with Rotten Tomatoes giving it a 96 percent rating and calling it, "tense, exciting and often darkly comic" with "vivid attention to detail and finely wrought characters." According to USA Today, the movie is "an early leader in the Oscar race for best-picture nominations."

Even viewers who are too young to have any recollection of the Iranian hostage crisis, which riveted the nation from November 1979 until January 1981, seem to find the movie thrilling and highly relevant to current events in the Middle East.

But for McCloud, the story is just one of the tension-filled missions that marked her career with the espionage agency.

"I was CIA chief in Berne, Switzerland, when the Iranian 'students' took over the embassy in Tehran," McCloud recalled. Energized by the overthrow of the Shah a few months earlier — and outraged that he was allowed to come to New York for medical treatment — extremists overran the American Embassy in November 1979.

In the chaos, which is chillingly depicted in "Argo," the mob took 66 diplomats and embassy employees hostage. But six happened to be outside the embassy grounds and managed to take refuge at the Canadian ambassador's residence. Their escape, and their hiding place, were kept secret from the Iranians and the world. But at the White House and the State Department, they knew it wouldn't stay secret for long.

"An exfil plan was sketched out at CIA headquarters," McCloud said, using inside terminology for Defense seeks video to discredit victim in Bergstrom rape retrial

By MARY SCHLEY

THE WOMAN who accused Carmel doctor Carl Bergstrom of raping her in April 2009 has made false reports to officers and behaved bizarrely in police custody, according to Bergstrom's defense attorney, Richard Rosen.

A few days after Bergstrom was found guilty, she screamed "Rape!" as officers tried to take her into custody for a psychological evaluation, Rosen said Thursday.

He is representing Bergstrom in a retrial, now set for late January 2013, following an appellate court's overruling of the guilty verdict a year ago based on faulty jury instructions from Monterey County Superior Court Judge Russell Scott.

Bergstrom is accused of raping the woman at his Carmel home after an evening of drinking, and prosecutor Cristina Johnson, who won a conviction in the first trial in July 2009, is handling the retrial on behalf of the county.

Rosen has subpoenaed Carmel Police Department video footage he said will show Jane Doe falsely accusing police officers of trying to rape her, and the matter is set to be discussed in Monterey County Superior Court Judge Julie

Activist group donates another $37K to Del Piero

By KELLY NIX

THE NORTH County activist group that has been, by far, 5th District Monterey County supervisor candidate Marc Del Piero's biggest contributor has forked over another big sum to help him defeat incumbent Dave Potter, according to contribution statements released last week.

The North Salinas Valley Fund for Responsible Growth donated $37,500 to Del Piero on Oct. 2, bringing the total of its donations to his campaign to a colossal $132,500. The candidate has received a total of $295,680.49 in contributions, his most recent campaign statements show, including more than $42,000 from Del Piero and his wife.

CEQA lawsuit filed over P.B. radio tower

By KELLY NIX

A GROUP of Del Monte Forest residents has filed suit over a 100-foot emergency radio tower the county approved on Huckleberry Hill, claiming the county failed to address environmental impacts of the tower.

In a suit filed Wednesday, residents Jameson Halpern and Sal Cardinale contend the permit for the tower violates provisions of the California Environmental Quality Act. The county also did not prepare an EIR for the project, something the lawsuit contends should have been done.

While the county has said the tower would "not significantly affect the scenic character" of the area, Halpern and other neighbors, who formed the Huckleberry Hill Neighborhood Association, contend it will be eyesore and hurt property values.

Pepe recounts Hurricane Sandy from inside the Big Apple

DESPITE DIRE warnings filling the airwaves for days and evacuation orders being issued right and left, the wedding was important to him, and he figured the storm wouldn't be that big a deal, so restaurateur Rich Pepe kept his plans to fly to New York City Sunday.

When he and his wife, Sandra, landed at Newark airport, they realized the warnings were right.

"We got off the plane Sunday night thinking, 'How bad could it be?' and looked at the board, and everything else coming in was canceled," he said. "So we were one of the last planes to come in."

How are our elected reps doing?

Community leaders speak out about Farr, Monning and Blakeslee

By MARY SCHLEY, KELLY NIX and CHRIS COUNTS

ELECTION DAY is Tuesday, and while everybody's attention is focused on the race for President of the United States, the competition for 5th District Monterey County Supervisor, and a host of hot-button state ballot measures, there are two candidates on the ballot whose candidacies deserve a closer look. Congress Sam Farr has represented the Monterey Peninsula in Washington since 1993. He's a shoo-in for reelection, but does he deserve it?

Likewise, our State Assemblyman, Bill Monning, has represented us in Sacramento since 2008 and now seeks a promotion to the State Senate. Should he get it? And what about our outgoing State Senator, Sam Blakeslee? He's not running for re-election, but it's still worth asking: What's he been doing on our behalf?

We asked a host of community leaders for their assessments of Farr, Monning and Blakeslee, which will definitely be useful in making up your mind how to cast your votes.

■ Butch Kronlund

As president of the Coast Property Owners Association, Butch Kronlund has had an opportunity to work directly with Farr and Monning regarding several issues of great importance to Big Sur residents. And Kronlund likes what he's seen of both elected leaders.

Kronlund said Farr was instrumental in quickly reopening Highway 1 when the Alder Creek Slide closed it in May 2011. He also praised the congressman for backing Firescape Monterey, a group that formed to help bridge the gap between rural residents trying to protect their homes from wildfire and environmental groups seeking to preserve biological diversity.

"Sam is a very good politician who's really in tune with his district," he said.

Kronlund said Farr is deceptively effective. "Some people call him the 'Sleeping Bear,'" he noted. "But don't poke the bear."

Monning, meanwhile, received high marks from Kronlund — not for what he did — but for what he didn't do. The assemblyman introduced in 2010 a bill that would have created a 920-acre State Wilderness Area in the eastern por-

Oscar's winning performance

AFTER HEARING a scratching sound, they opened their front door to greet a part-Jack Russell, part-beagle puppy. But they already had a dog — an elderly chow — they figured would not welcome him, so they bathed the puppy, fed him and put him up for adoption.

Three days later, they again heard scratching at the door, and opened it to find the pup had, somehow, returned. Yet this was not the puppy they had placed, but his identical twin brother, who had escaped, not from his home, but from a dog fighting ring. The rip in his ear from where a tag had been torn, like his brother's, confirmed it.

"When a dog showed up at our door, essentially twice," says his person, "we saw it as a sign. He just walked in and licked us like he was coming home. We felt it was up to us to give him a good life."

The dog went right over to the chow's bowls, took a drink of water, sampled a little food, and then glanced up at the bigger dog as if to say, "What?" Then he walked over to the couch, climbed up, put his head on his paws, and took a nap.

They named him Oscar, and he came the first time he was called.

Oscar is an indoor dog, who continues to claim the couch, and expects to be petted or scratched while he rests. He's also a little obsessive-compulsive and pulls his blanket smoothly across his bed, working relentlessly as he fixes it with his paw and his mouth, scratching and biting, pulling and patting the fabric. If it isn't perfect, he will not lie down and go to sleep.

"We always say, 'Oscar, give it a rest.' He pauses, looks up at us, and then continues his project," says his person, "until it is perfect."

Nov. 6 council meeting: Water projects, awning appeal, wine tasting

THE MAYOR and every council member will be rapt with anticipation regarding whether voters will approve a 1 percent sales tax increase in Carmel on Election Day, but they'll have to tend to some other business, too.

According to the agenda released Thursday for the Nov. 6 meeting, council members will talk about water supply projects, consider an appeal of the planning commission's decision to deny an awning at B&G Jewelers on Dolores Street, vote on a special event permit for Rich Pepe's proposed Dec. 13 Carmel-by-the-Glass event at Devendorf Park, and hear a quarterly report on economic development and marketing.

Council members will also receive monthly fire and ambulance reports, get updated on how recently departed planning and building services manager Sean Conroy's position will be filled, set a special council meeting for Nov. 15 to discuss the pension obligation bonds they are planning to issue and receive financial reports.

The council meeting will begin at 4:30 p.m. in city hall on Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues. To see the full agenda, visit the city's website at ci.carmel.ca.us.

Coastal commission nominee list expands to include city council members

By KELLY NIX

THE LIST of nominees for a seat on the California Coastal Commission grew last week when the Monterey County Board of Supervisors nominated two city councilwomen and a mayor for a spot that will be left vacant by Santa Cruz County Supervisor Mark Stone, who is running for State Assembly.

At a special meeting Oct. 26, the supervisors, upon direction from Speaker of the Assembly John Perez, expanded its list of nominees and chose Seaside Mayor Felix Bachofner, Monterey City Councilwoman Libby Downey and Santa Cruz City Councilwoman Lynn Robinson.

The three joined Monterey County supervisors Jane Parker and Simon Salinas, whom the board nominated Oct. 23. Though the coastal commission appointment is technically nonpartisan, all the nominees are Democrats.

The nominees were selected after Perez sent an Oct. 24 letter to the supervisors stating that in addition to the supervisor nominations, the board was also required by law to nominate one or more city council members. He gave the supervisors an Oct. 28 deadline.

Stone's seat will be up for grabs in December if he's elected to the Assembly.

Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett was contacted by Stone about the position, but Burnett said he's too occupied to entertain the idea at this point. "I want to focus first on my family, and next on being mayor," he told The Pine Cone. "And between the two of these, plus my job, I didn't feel like it was the right time to take on another obligation."

Stone, whose term with the commission ends in May, is vying for the 29th Assembly District, a seat that will be left open by Assemblyman Bill Monning, who is running for State Senate.

The last Monterey County supervisor to serve on the coastal panel was board chair Dave Potter, who was appointed in March 1997 and was then reappointed in 2000 and 2002. His term included the position of vice chair from 1999 to 2002 before he left the commission in 2009.

Robinson, whose term on the Santa Cruz City Council ends in 2014, was first elected in 2006. She sits on the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments.

Bachofner was elected as Seaside Mayor in 2010 after narrowly defeating incumbent Ralph Rubio. The two will square off in a rematch during the Nov. 6 election. He's a member of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Water Authority, the group of Peninsula mayors tasked with analyzing the most viable water project for the area.

Downey, a retired nurse, was elected in 2004 and 2008 to the Monterey City Council.

On Friday, the Mayor Select Committee — composed of the Peninsula mayors — is going to decide which candidates to back. The committee and the supervisors will then forward their recommendations to Perez.

"They are all very competent people," Burnett said.

Teacher's lawsuit claims school didn't allow her to pump breast milk

By KELLY NIX

A FORMER teacher at a Carmel Valley school has filed a lawsuit alleging the school and the district refused to provide accommodations so she could pump breast milk for her newborn child.

In a lawsuit filed Oct. 30 in Monterey County Superior Court, former Carmelo Child Development Center teacher Sarah Boyle alleges her supervisors wouldn't provide her proper breaks and accommodations so she could pump milk for her son, Sawyer.

"After learning of [Boyle's] desire to breast pump milk for her infant," according to the 13-page claim, Carmel Unified School District "had an obligation to accommodate [Boyle's] condition, but instead, they refused to do so."

Boyle, who was hired by the CUSD in August 2010 but was told in February her contract would not be renewed, is alleging wrongful termination, retaliation, infliction of emotional distress and claims the school failed to provide lactation accommodations.

According to the suit — filed by Boyle's attorney Kenneth Kroopf — Boyle said she told her manager, Laura Schimmel-Dunn, a week before she was to return to work in October 2011 after being on maternity leave, that she would need to pump breast milk for her newborn boy between about 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. for about 15 to 20 minutes.

Boyle claims, however, that Schimmel-Dunn told her she should have to start "training my breasts not to make milk between the hours of 7 a.m. and 1 p.m." so Boyle wouldn't need to pump during that time frame.

When Boyle asked how she was supposed to accomplish the "training," Schimmel-Dunn allegedly told her she could "push the feedings further and further apart," so that her son would not want to be fed during that time, the suit says.

When Boyle consulted with a lactation specialist to determine if her manager's advice was a possible and safe alternative, the consultant did not recommend the practice and instead urged her to contact the school district's human resources department, Boyle alleges.

Though the school's human resources director offered to arrange for Boyle to take breaks to pump breast milk two to three days a week — of the five she worked — a regular "schedule was never arranged," Boyle alleges.

Instead, Boyle said she was forced to use a classroom bathroom with a "Dutch door half open" that didn't offer privacy and a "quiet and safe environment."

As a result, Boyle "was left with no alternative but to slowly wean her baby off breast milk," according to the suit.

Retaliation?

While Boyle contends her supervisor, Barbara Beck, gave her good marks in job evaluations from August 2010 to May 2011, she alleges that when Schimmel-Dunn became her supervisor in late 2011, she was given a poor evaluation.

In February 2012, Boyle, who was a probationary employee, said she was told she "was not a good fit" at Carmelo and that her contract would not be renewed.

That led Boyle to file a discrimination complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission alleging the school and CUSD violated the state's Labor Code section that requires employers to provide breaks and accommodations to mothers who need to pump breast milk.

Boyle alleges she suffered emotional distress, humiliation, embarrassment and financial loss as a result of not being given proper lactation accommodations. Besides seeking compensation for lost wages and employment benefits, Boyle alleges the school and the district "are guilty of oppression and malice" and contends she should be awarded punitive damages.

CUSD superintendent Marvin Biasotti said the district does not comment on matters in litigation.

PUC FORMALLY OVERRULES COUNTY ORDINANCE ON DESAL OWNERSHIP

By KELLY NIX

IN A blow to advocates for public ownership of a desal plant to help solve the Monterey Peninsula's water shortage, the California Public Utilities Commission voted last week that Monterey County isn't allowed to impose a public-ownership requirement.

In a unanimous decision Oct. 25, the five-member commission voted to side with PUC administrative law judge Gary Weatherford in declaring that the PUC's authority preempts a 1989 county ordinance calling for public ownership of all new desal facilities in the county.

The decision is significant, since privately held California American Water has a proposal before the PUC to build a $400 million desal plant in North Marina that could produce as much as 9 million gallons of water per day.

Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Bowie said the company supports the decision, which was cast by commissioners Michael Peevey, Mark Ferron, Michel Florio, Catherine Sandoval and Timothy Simon.

"We feel that it represents sound legal reasoning," Bowie said, "and hope that the fact [the PUC] provided us with clear direction will help move the project forward."

Monterey County counsel Charles McKee said the county has several options, including accepting the PUC decision or appealing it to the California Supreme Court in hopes it will reverse course — a costly and arduous route.

"As you might guess, that is a significant challenge, because the decisions of the PUC are not easily overturned," McKee told The Pine Cone Tuesday. He said public ownership would be only way for the county to "address the public health and safety concerns we have."

But the PUC said that's its job.

The county board of supervisors will ultimately decide whether to appeal the case or negotiate with Cal Am for some middle ground, though McKee said he wasn't sure when they would address the issue.

On Sept. 21, Weatherford issued his proposed ruling, saying the authority of local governments is "expressly limited" and cited the California Constitution, which states that cities and counties "may not regulate matters over which the Legislature grants regulatory power to the commission."

The PUC has "very broad authority over the operations and facilities of public utilities under its jurisdiction, including Cal Am," and doesn't have to let local governments interfere, Weatherford said.

CAUSE REMAINS UNKNOWN IN BLAZE THAT BADLY DAMAGED P.G. HOME

By MARY SCHLEY

A FIRE gutted a home on Gibson Avenue in Pacific Grove early Sunday morning, but the residents and their two dogs escaped unharmed, according to Monterey Fire Capt. Barry Perkins. The extent of the damage — roughly estimated at $250,000 to $350,000 for the interior of the home and its contents — is making it difficult to pinpoint a cause.

Shortly after 4:30 a.m., the occupants “dialed 911, reported their dining room was on fire, and they left the house,” Perkins said, adding that they first locked their two dogs safely in a garage.

“We’re really glad they got out beforehand,” Perkins said. Smoke alarms in the house were sounding, though the residents said they thought it was the fire that woke them up, he added.

The first engine arrived in less than three minutes to find heavy fire and smoke coming from the single-story, 1,800-square-foot, wood and stucco home. A total of 19 firefighters battled the blaze, using water from an engine and a hydrant to douse the flames.

“Initially, the fire was so heavy that our crews could not make entry until they had some cooling effect on the fire,” he explained. Eventually, though, they got inside and knocked down the flames, which took about 15 minutes. They spent several hours salvaging what they could, cleaning up debris and monitoring the building for hot spots.

The home’s interior was badly damaged, according to Perkins. “The living room, dining room and kitchen area were destroyed,” he said. “The bedrooms were left with smoke damage.”

It’s an older home with stout construction, Perkins noted, “so we’re hoping they can restore it.”

According to the Monterey County Assessor’s Office, Patrick and Victoria Dwyer own the residence, which was valued at just over $549,000. Perkins said the couple did not know what started the fire.

“They couldn’t think of any practice or housekeeping issue or anything,” he said.

Investigator Jim Gunter told The Pine Cone Wednesday he has narrowed origin of the fire to an area that includes the dining room, kitchen and sun porch, but he hasn’t been able to get more specific, yet.

“I spent several hours over there the morning of the fire and have been working on it since that time,” he said. “I’m not in a position to make any speculation. The extent of the damage in that area has made it very difficult.”

Perkins also noted representatives from the local Red Cross chapter arrived to care for the residents and make sure they had their immediate needs met.

A fire that started in the dining room of this Gibson Avenue house destroyed most of the interior, but the owners and their dogs were unharmed.

Local nurses, firefighters head east to help hurricane victims

By CHRIS COUNTS

AS PART of a massive relief effort that was launched this week to aid the victims of Hurricane Sandy, two members of the American Red Cross' Monterey Bay Area Chapter — nurses Pam Breslin of Pebble Beach and Cate Whitaker of Carmel — plan to travel to New York Nov. 2 to offer their help. They will join thousands of volunteers who are converging on disasters areas along the Atlantic seaboard.

"We're flying out on a red-eye," Breslin told The Pine Cone. "We anticipate we'll be nurses at one of a number of shelters in New York."

For the next few weeks, Breslin and Whitaker will likely be sleeping on cots. They are preparing for uncertainty, and are traveling light.

A local resident for more than three decades, Breslin works for the Monterey Peninsula Pediatric Medical Group. After serving as a volunteer at a call center during the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, she is looking forward to sharing her medical expertise with people in need of it. "This will be my first time with my boots on the ground," she explained.

Breslin said she is both excited and nervous about her upcoming journey.

"I'm not sure why, but I'm anxious," she said. "When I was told we were going, I got a knot in my stomach. I'm sure it will be an adventure."

According to Red Cross officials, more than 9,000 people spent Tuesday night in more than 171 Red Cross shelters across 13 states. Those sheltered were served more than 100,000 meals. More than 2,300 disaster workers and over 200 emergency vehicles have been mobilized for the relief effort.

"The response to Sandy is just getting started," said Charley Shimanski, a spokesperson for the Red Cross. "The hurricane has left devastation in its wake and we will be helping people for weeks to come. This will be very costly and the Red Cross needs help now. We ask everyone to support us."

Breslin encouraged people to support the Red Cross' relief efforts. "When people give, we want them to know it's not taken lightly," she added.

In addition to soliciting financial support, the Red Cross is urging people to donate blood in areas unaffected by this storm. The need for blood is particularly critical because an estimated 300 Red Cross blood drives have been cancelled because of the storm.

Also traveling back east to aid hurricane victims is a team of firefighters from Big Sur. Departing Oct. 31, the Los Padres Hotshot crew will be based at a National Guard training center in Annville, Penn.

The 20-man crew could be there for up to 30 days. In part because its members are so skilled at using chainsaws, the firefighters will be involved in debris removal in hazardous areas.

tion of Andrew Molera State Park. But residents were deeply concerned the designation would render an important fire break unusable.

“What I thought that Bill did that was really cool was that he listened to the community, he gathered the facts, and he stepped back and said, ‘Let’s rethink this proposal,’” Kronlund recalled. “He had the courage to step back and look at the issue with fresh eyes.”

According to Kronlund, neither Farr nor Monning is too rigid ideologically to seek a reasonable compromise and do what’s best for the community. “Sam and Bill are convincing as guys trying to steer the discourse back to the center.”

■ Lawrence Samuels

As chairman of the Monterey County

Libertarian Party and an active participant in the Peace Coalition of Monterey County, Lawrence Samuels said there are things he likes — and dislikes — about Farr’s job performance.

While he praised Farr for his anti-war positions, he was critical of the congressman’s — as well the Democratic Party’s — economic policies. “Like most Democrats, he’s pro-tax and pro-spending,” Samuels said. “They don’t seem to care about the national debt. It’s all numbers to them.”

Samuels’ assessment of Monning’s performance echoes his take on Farr. “He’s not bad on the war issue, but he’s too supportive of taxes and spending,” he explained. “We live in one of the highest-taxed states.”

Samuels, though, has some kind words for Blakeslee. “He helped my son,” he said. “He was involved in a marijuana raid and he lost his job. [Blakeslee staff] was really good to him. He was having trouble getting unemployment insurance, and Sam’s people corrected the problem.”

■ Frank Koucky

The owner of the Blair Financial Group in Monterey, Frank Koucky told The Pine Cone he’s not impressed with Farr’s record.

“He has totally misrepresented the huge costs and problems generated by Obamacare,” said Koucky, a sailor and diver who was instrumental in creating better safety signage at treacherous Monterey Beach. “And he has been nothing but a toadie to overspending and anti-business policies.”

Koucky has a higher opinion of Blakeslee’s performance.

“At the state level, he’s done his best to fight the absurd ‘kick-the-can-down-the-road’ deficits in California,” Koucky added. “H’s a good guy who has fought decently in a tough environment.”

■ Bill Kampe

Pacific Grove City Councilman Bill Kampe, who is running for mayor, had the most to say about Congressman Sam Farr.

“There are two things I really respected about Sam,” he said. “He is working very hard to make the best possible use of the former Fort Ord as an asset for this region. He has been a staunch supporter of the remaining military community. He has also really been an advocate for the tourism potential for the Central Coast.”

Kampe cited Assemblyman Bill Monning’s focus on health issues, such as Assembly Bill 1678, which was intended to prohibit mobile food vendors from selling or otherwise providing food or beverages within 500 feet of public elementary or secondary school campuses.

“I know he has been very concerned and involved with the issue of children’s health,” Kampe said. “I think it’s an issue for this nation and California.”

Kampe praised State Senator Sam Blakeslee for his “candor and integrity.”

“I think he was one of the Republicans that really tried to make things work on a bipartisan basis,” Kampe said. “I’m sorry to see him leave the scene.”

■ Ralph Porras

Pacific Grove Unified School District Superintendent Ralph Porras said he’s had discussions with all three men through the years and called them “excellent partners for education.”

Porras said he’s had the most contact with Monning, to whom he gave high marks.

“He and I have had many conversations and many meetings, and all of them have to do with educational programs, student safety and health,” Porras said. “Whenever any of those kinds of issues have come up, he has been great about calling and checking in and getting feedback.”

As for Blakeslee, Porras said he’s met him twice, and their conversations revolved around the topics of health and human services for students.

“Blakeslee is a good friend of schools, at least from my vantage point,” Porras said.

Porras said Farr has taken an interest in the district’s adult school, particularly in programs for English learners. Porras called Farr “very responsive.”

“Sometimes you wouldn’t think he works at the federal level because he is so in tune to local issues,” Porras said.

■ Mike Niccum

Mike Niccum, general manager of the Pebble Beach Community Services District, also weighed in on the politicians’ performances.

“Bill Monning has actually come to our meetings,” Niccum said. “He just came and gave us the status of what was going on with the budget.”

Niccum said Blakeslee is known to be conciliatory, but that he has hasn’t had to work with him on issues concerning the PBSCD.

“He is one of the Republicans willing to work with the Democrats,” he said. “He’s kind of in the middle.”

Niccum said it was difficult to rate Farr’s performance. Though he's had conversations with the congressman, he doesn't recall him ever having attended one of the district's meetings.

"With Sam Farr, it's harder to measure," he said. "I don't know what can be done at the federal level" for the PBSCD.

■ Dave Potter

Supervisor Dave Potter, who is vying for re-election this week, praised Farr for his work with the Fort Ord Reuse Authority and his backing to extend the agency, which oversees redevelopment of the former military base.

He commended Monning for his work on the proposed state-owned military cemetery at Fort Ord, particularly his legislation that authorizes the Fort Ord Reuse Authority to manage the 14,000-grave cemetery. "It allowed FORA to become the contractor, eliminating a massive amount of state oversight costs," Potter said.

Monning's bill was signed by Gov. Jerry Brown in September.

Blakeslee, Potter said, took a short-term interest in the San Clemente Dam issue. "He and I helicoptered back there one day with a bunch of other people," Potter said. "But that is the last I saw of him."

■ Dave Pendergrass

Sand City Mayor Dave Pendergrass said he was disappointed by one of Assemblyman Bill Monning's decisions.

"He did something that I thought was damaging to us," Pendergrass said. "He joined the governor [in 2011] in eliminating redevelopment agencies. That was damaging. I don't know why he did that."

Pendergrass commended Blakeslee for his backing of the local agencies, which use a part of property tax funds to encourage developers to build in blighted areas. But Pendergrass said he hasn't had contact with the senator on other issues.

"Since he's not running [for office], he has not made an effort, for obvious reasons,"

He didn't want to go into detail about Farr but said he thought the congressman could be doing more.

■ Sue McCloud

During her dozen years at the head of the dais in city hall, former Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud has worked with politicians on both sides of the table.

This week, McCloud said she has found U.S. Rep. Sam Farr receptive to local issues, particularly those pertaining to the environment and the scenic beauty of the Peninsula.

"He is very involved in the sanctity of the Monterey Bay and the Carmel Bay and the environment in general, and we certainly worked together on that," she said. He was also instrumental in the Fort Ord Reuse Authority, making the former Army base a National Monument and striving to keep the northern entrance to the Peninsula undeveloped.

"Sam is in Washington, but he has long had commitments to the community and has done a lot of work on the Monterey Bay sanctuary," she said.

McCloud has found Assemblyman Bill Monning "very accessible on issues," and said he lives in Carmel and is "obviously very involved" in the community. She has found State Sen. Sam Blakeslee available, too, though their contact has been less.

McCloud said she couldn't blame any of the men for "the lassitude of Washington or Sacramento," though she decried the state's penchant for handing down unfunded mandates and the seeming increasing animosity in trying to solve the Peninsula's water-supply problems.

"I'm very leery of contradicting and criticizing people who are doing public service. So many people will stick their foot out and trip you up if you don't trip yourself up," she said. "Collectively, I would say they're all accessible, and when I have needed to contact them, they have been responsive."

■ Rich Hutchinson

Cal Fire Chief Rich Hutchinson, president of the Monterey County Fire Chiefs Association, said he couldn't think of any local issues Farr, Monning or Blakeslee has affected specific to the fire service.

The most controversial move by the state has been levying a fee on property owners where the state is responsible for firefighting and fire prevention, "and it's too early to say if it's caused problems for any of the districts," Hutchinson said.

But he said all three men have been supportive of the fire service, and he's talked to Monning and Blakeslee, though has yet to sit down for a one-on-one conversation with Farr. "With Monning, there was a question dealing with the federal lands in the Toro Park area," he said. "He and his staff were able to get something broken loose for us."

Blakeslee, he said, "met with a bunch of us from public safety, and he recognizes the value of us in public safety and what we do."

■ Marvin Biasotti

Carmel Unified School District Superintendent Marvin Biasotti said Farr, Monning and Blakeslee are all "good friends to education," to varying degrees and in different ways.

While the federal business Farr handles often doesn't directly affect the school district, he has hosted students in Washington, D.C., and has spoken to classes when in town. "I've seen him do that any number of times and on an accessible level to the students, sitting there casually and fielding their questions," he said. "It's something a lot of our staff has appreciated — to put a face to government and to answer questions as candid as he can be."

Monning, he said, has supported public education in general, and basic aid districts in particular. (CUSD is a basic aid district, meaning it is mostly funded by local property taxes.) "As we've faced various challenges, either real or threatened, Monning has been a good friend to education in general and a good friend to basic aid districts, and that is of course important to CUSD and to me," he said. "There have been various issues that I've called him on over the years, and he was very receptive."

■ Jeff Davi

Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty broker Jeff Davi, who served as 22nd State Real Estate Commissioner for seven years after being appointed by then-Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger and stepping down last year, said the biggest issue, by far, is the budget.

"Sam Farr and Bill Monning and Sam Blakeslee — they do a lot of things that are good for the district and the Central Coast, they are constantly trying to help our communities."

But they are also cogs in the wheel of an out-of-control government that overspends and dedicates much-needed dollars to special interests.

"Unfortunately, I think people forget the state and country are facing bigger problems. Things are bad in the state and are not getting better," he said. "They are approving big budgets with deficits."

Farr and Monning supported those budgets, while Blakeslee was a holdout, he said.

"They are great public servants, but the problem is with every elected official to the state and federal office, you're going to have a lot of special interests getting things," he said. "If they're voting for these budgets, they are not addressing the problems head on. It's all kick-the-can-down-the-road stuff."

■ Rich Pepe

Restaurateur Rich Pepe said he's doing more homework on national and state politics, so he can pinpoint issues in the future, but he shared his general opinions on the local representatives.

Farr, he said, "has worked tirelessly for the benefit of this district, and I would support him wholeheartedly, and I would support him until he retires. I think he's the man for this district." Pepe attended a debate in which Farr spoke and said he is interested in learning more about how top-level federal politics operate.

He is also a contributor to Monning's campaign, though he couldn't specify Monning's accomplishments in the Assembly.

nearly $50,000, with more than half of the money he's raised (not including his own) coming from the North Salinas group.

The tax-exempt organization, made up of slow-growth activists highly critical of Potter, became a political powerhouse after receiving a $600,000 settlement in 2008 stemming from a legal fight it waged with Monterey County over permits for Butterfly Village, the proposed residential development north of Salinas.

Then called the San Juan Opposition Coalition, the group, chaired by Julie Engell, took the money in exchange for dropping its CEQA lawsuit against the project.

But Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett, who is backing Potter, criticized the North Salinas Valley organization — most of whose board members do not live on the Monterey Peninsula — for its big donations to Del Piero.

"I think they are trying to buy the election," Burnett said,

"But I doubt the voters in this area can be bought. I think if you look at who the residents of the 5th District are supporting, Potter is clearly doing better."

Del Piero responded to the Carmel mayor's comments.

"It is really too bad that he feels that way about citizens who have sacrificed to preserve the quality of life that we have on the Monterey Peninsula," Del Piero said. "I am sure that he has hurt some folks' feelings by saying that."

Big donations protested

Meanwhile, the North Salinas Valley group's contribution prompted Ron Chesshire, CEO at the Monterey/Santa Cruz Counties Building and Construction Trades Council, to plan a protest Thursday afternoon at the group's headquarters, which is Engell's Monterey house.

"Democracy cannot be for sale," Chesshire wrote in a news release.

Chesshire said he is going to petition the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to adopt an ordinance that would limit campaign contributions to candidates for office in Monterey County.

"Other groups around the county have made large contributions to campaigns, but such abuse of the process cannot continue," according to Chesshire.

In October, Del Piero also received a total of $14,000 from Curtis Spitler, the husband of Engell. Other contributors to Del Piero's campaign $1,000 from Monterey resident George Schroeder, who is working closely with developer Nader Agha on his proposed water project in Moss Landing, $1,000 from Yuma, Arizona-based agribusinessman Victor Smith, $1,000 from twin-brother Eric Del Piero and $1,000 from Reno, Nevada-based Recreational Health & Fitness. He has also received $5,000 from former LandWatch Monterey County Executive Director Chris Fitz and $200 from water activist George Riley. Last week, Del Piero told The Pine Cone he was returning about $2,000 from a Carmel Valley man convicted of threatening Potter.

Potter, who has been in office 16 years, is backed by longtime U.S. Rep. Sam Farr and Burnett, who in October donated another $5,000 to Potter's campaign, for a total of $10,000.

As of Oct. 20, Potter had received a total of $248,040.71 from contributors. Other donors include Monterey County Business PAC, which gave Potter $15,000, Clint Eastwood's Mission Ranch, which donated $1,000, and the Salinas Valley Leadership Group, which gave him $10,000 for a to-date total of $20,000.

Mailer criticized

Meanwhile, Burnett said he was troubled by a "misleading" Del Piero mailer claiming that, "Marc will work to bring our water rates down."

"It may sound good to claim that he will reduce water rates," Burnett said, "but everyone who has worked on the water supply challenge knows that we will see rates increase. If we do our job as elected officials, water rates will increase less and if we don't do our job, they will increase more. But either way, we need to tell the truth to our communities that water will be getting more expensive."

BERGSTROM

Culver's courtroom Nov. 27.

"The police were called to the home of Jane Doe, and this was a day or two after the verdict in 2009, when they were called for a disturbance," he said. "They found she was mumbling incoherently and walking on bare feet on broken glass, cutting herself."

They tried to convince her to seek mental help, he said, but she became belligerent. And when the three officers attempted to take her to the hospital for a psychiatric evaluation, she was combative, according to Rosen.

"Three of them had to wrestle her to the ground, and when they did, she started screaming, 'Rape! Rape! Rape!'" he said. The cops were familiar with her and the Bergstrom case, and "they knew they were not raping her," so they recorded the altercation and kept it as evidence, he said. He plans to obtain the video from CPD.

"This is very significant evidence bearing on her believability," he said. "It's a very obvious false report of rape."

Rosen said the victim had also falsely accused men of harassment or stalking in the past, and had repeatedly checked herself into the hospital for alcoholism and alcohol-related injuries. "It shows a pattern on her part," he said.

In court this week, Rosen also sought to subpoena Jane Doe's medical records, and Culver granted some and disallowed others. Rosen said he was not allowed to say what the records contain or which he would be permitted to see, though he suspects the details will emerge during the trial.

"There's a protective order, and I'm not supposed to discuss these publicly. What was announced in open court was that she gave us some," he said. "I have two expert doctors working on this case."

The retrial has been repeatedly scheduled and delayed since August, and with an Oct. 29 date for jury selection on the calendar, Johnson said she requested another continuance because she had just received information about one of the medical experts. The trial was subsequently scheduled for next month, but Rosen said Thursday it is now set to go in late January of next year, because one of his witnesses will be unavailable in December.

Because Bergstrom's conviction was overturned due to faulty jury instructions and not because of any problem with the case itself, Johnson said the prosecution plans to present mostly the same evidence and witnesses as it did during the first successful trial, when the jury found Bergstrom guilty and Scott sentenced him to six years in state prison.

In the ruling handed down Oct. 24, 2011, a three-justice panel said Scott incorrectly instructed jurors regarding the victim's ability to consent to having anal sex with Bergstrom. They overturned the conviction, but the justices did not agree with Bergstrom's arguments that Scott incorrectly admitted evidence of two prior sex offenses, unlawfully allowed use of a video of Bergstrom engaging in consensual anal sex, and should not have permitted evidence of his prior drug-related misconduct.

"The appeal wasn't overturned based on any evidentiary issues," Johnson told The Pine Cone Tuesday. "So I don't foresee a drastic difference."

Bergstrom, 56, remains in custody in Monterey County Jail.

Commission says dam removal needs more study

■ Delay of at least a year?

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE REMOVAL of the San Clemente Dam — which was scheduled to begin this fall — could be delayed for a year after Monterey County planning commissioners told project officials this week that the environmental impacts of the work haven't been adequately studied.

In particular, commissioners want to see an analysis of the financial and environmental impacts of the different possible routes construction traffic could take to reach the project site. Specifically, they want to see how construction traffic would affect the Cachagua community, whose residents have been outspoken in their opposition to the project's use of its roads.

Two weeks ago, officials announced they were studying an alternate route to the project site, which is located on Cal Am property a short distance west of Sleepy Hollow. Using the route could significantly reduce the project's impact on Cachagua and Tassajara roads.

That possibility was welcomed by Cachagua residents, who say the construction traffic will severely affect their quality of life.

Planning commissioner Martha Diehl told The Pine Cone that it's imperative that project officials develop a plan that has the support of the residents. "If we don't find an alternative that everyone gets up and cheers, the project will be delayed," Diehl said.

At its Oct. 31 meeting, the planning commission continued a public hearing on the dam removal project to March 13.

Cal Am officials are still hopeful they won't have to wait until next fall to break ground on the project. "Obviously, we will comply with any additional environmental work that is required," Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Bowie added.

While the California Department of Water Resources is the lead agency for the undertaking — and signed off on its EIR — the $83 million project can't get started until the planning commission issues a permit. For more details, visit www.sanclementedamremoval.org.

Local authors turn to familiar scenes, grisly subject matter

By CHRIS COUNTS

MURDER IS the theme of two mystery novels showcased this weekend at separate events.

Carmel's Kathryn Gualtieri signs copies of "Murder Takes the Stage," Saturday, Nov. 3, at River House Books. And Carmel Valley's Lannie Wright will sign copies of "Castle Grey" the same day at the Carmel Valley Business Center. Both receptions start at 11 a.m.

The second in a series of mysteries set in Carmel during the 1920s, "Murder Takes the Stage" follows last year's "Murder in the Pines." Both books are centered around a young female reporter, Nora Finnegan, who works for The Carmel Pine Cone.

While Gualtieri's first book is marked by contentious city hall meetings and a debate over whether to modernize the town, "Murder Takes the Stage" looks at Carmel's thriving theater scene and, in particular, the historic Forest Theater.

"I really wanted to emphasize the role of the Forest Theater — and the local theater

A national treasure in Cuba, the 'Dean of Latin Jazz' plays Sunset

By CHRIS COUNTS

ONE OF the giants of Latin and Afro-Cuban jazz, five-time Grammy Award-winning pianist and composer Chucho Valdés, performs Thursday, Nov. 8, at Sunset Center. "He's truly a world class pianist," Sunset Center's Natalie Hall said. "He's always mentioned in the same breath as the most important pianists of the 20th and 21st centuries. He's huge in the jazz world. He's really worth seeing play live, and it's a real coup that we have him here."

Considered a national treasure in his native Cuba, Valdés has shared the stage with luminaries like Herbie Hancock, Dizzy Gillespie, Carlos Santana, Wynton Marsalis and Chick Corea. Along the way, he has introduced countless listeners to the wonders of Cuban music. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. The show begins at 8 p.m. Tickets range from $37 to $57. Call (831) 620-2040 or visit www.sunsetcenter.org.

POOCH PORTRAIT EXHIBIT OPENS

By CHRIS COUNTS

TWO OF things Carmel residents love most — dogs and art — come together Friday, Nov. 2, when painter LeAnna Tuff unveils an exhibit, "A Carmel Dog's Story," at Sunset Center's Marjorie Evans Gallery. A prize-winning portrait artist who has been honing her craft for three decades, the painter is the wife of Peter Tuff, the executive director of the Carmel Music Society. The portraits of more than 20 different Carmel dogs are featured in Tuff's exhibit. Included are renderings of restaurant owner Kurt Grasing's Chihuahua, Holen, art gallery owner Bill Hill's spunky French bulldog, Maggie Mae, and former Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud's Dandie Dinmont Terrier, Robbie.

Many of the dogs — along with their proud owners — plan to attend the opening reception. "LeAnna works in pastels, and it's amazing how she captures the spirit of each dog," said curator Barbara Davison, whose miniature Dachshund, Roxanne, is represented in the display. The reception starts at 5 p.m. The exhibit will be on display through the end of the month.

Personal favorites, BYOB and Nothing Bundt Cakes

By MARY SCHLEY

LAST WEEK'S Golden Pine Cones highlighted our astute readers' top choices for restaurants, shops and other businesses, and this week I'd like to offer a few personal favorites to add to the list.

■ For excellent brisket and pork shoulder, check out Central Texan Barbecue at 10500 Merritt St. in Castroville. Open daily from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m., the restaurant exudes deli— three of my favorites — were all on sale.

■ Lokal, Brendan Jones' new restaurant in Carmel Valley Village at 13750 Center St., has an incredible Kobe burger on the menu: succulent, flavorful and perfectly prepared. Order the pear salad on the side, and a glass of Downtown Brown (or a bottle of Chock Rock Pinot Noir), and you've got a great lunch.

■ Acme Coffee Roasting at 485 Palm Ave. (entrance on Contra Costa) in Seaside is the place to go for coffee by the pound and by the cup. The French roasts are well balanced and full-bodied without being excessively dark, and everyone behind the counter makes you feel at home. Owners Jaki and Larry ciously smoky aromas from its ever-smoldering pits. Grab a tray and have lunch or dinner with a couple of sides, or order the meat by the pound. Take-out is available, too.

■ For a great Bloody Mary — spicy, not too boozy but packing a punch, citrusy, peppery and not overly tomatoey sweet — head down to Crown & Anchor at 150 West Franklin St. in Monterey while Penelope Pfefferkuch is behind the bar. She's meticulous about her cocktails.

■ Shopping for cheese, or cheese and wine, or wine and cheese, is no more fun than at Kent Torrey's Cheese Shop in Carmel Plaza, where his well trained staff offers tastes of all sorts of delectable cheeses from all over the world and will espouse their knowledge about them, too. Occasional specials help prevent cheese-induced debt. This week, Red Dragon (a cheddar containing ale and mustard seed), Pierre Robert triple cream and Fromage D'Affinois with truffle Thurman care about what they do — a passion that shows in their products. The place just has a lot of character, too.

■ The battle for best mussels on the Peninsula is between Bistro Moulin, featuring the mollusks cooked in butter, shallots, leeks and white wine, served with a side of fries and garlic aioli (867 Wave St. in Monterey), and the big bowl full at the Sand Bar and Grill on Wharf No. 2 — especially during Happy Hour at the bar, when they are about $6 and pair perfectly with Acacia Chardonnay for $5 a glass. The broth of sherry, tomatoes and tarragon in which they are cooked and served is spectacular. Oh, and the French fries at the Sand Bar are well worth another couple of bucks.

■ Speaking of Happy Hour, a particular satisfying snack to accompany a beer

Nothing Bundt Cakes

Jeff and Cristina Joseph are opening a new business in the Crossroads shopping center and hope to have their specialty bundt cakes available by the end of November. Jeff Joseph told The Pine Cone this week the couple got hooked on the cakes — which come in multiple sizes and flavors — while visiting the Nothing Bundt Cakes store in Los Gatos.

"I loved the concept so much. Once you taste one of these cakes, you are a repeat customer, because they are really good," he said. The cakes come in all sizes, from tiny bite-size Bundtinis, and Bundtlets the size of a large cupcake, to 8-inch, 10-inch and two-tiered versions, and are baked onsite. Moist, flavorful and frosted, the cakes are available in Chocolate Chocolate Chip, White White Chocolate, Red Velvet, White Chocolate Raspberry, Carrot, Lemon, Marble, Cinnamon Swirl and Pecan Praline, as well as a featured flavor. (Right now, it's Pumpkin Spice.)

"We do bake on the premises, so the place always smells great," Joseph said. "I've always had a penchant for food, and my wife and I are both really strong people people, so this is right up our alley."

Nothing Bundt Cakes will also carry related retail items, like cookbooks and kitchen tools, platters and oven mitts, greeting cards and balloons.

"It's a boutique experience," he said.

Fandango offers holiday feasts and party menus showcasing many of its notable favorites.

What's up at Mundaka?

A lot of people have been talking about Mundaka chef Brandon Miller's recent trip to Spain, and the inspiration he and restaurant owner Gabe Georis found there during their culinary tour of Barcelona and San Sebastian. The chatter is not unwarranted.

Tuesday night offered a nearly perfect meal at Mundaka: A custom cocktail crafted by Frayne Padgham, followed by the balanced and fruity Alto Moncayo Veraton red wine he recommended, and courses of delicious house-made Butifarra pork sausage, lightly seasoned with nutmeg, clove, garlic, salt, pepper and white wine, served with butter beans and bread crumbs; curly spinach salad with figs, chorizo and almonds; and buttery cumin-roasted Swank Farms vegetables with corn and baby tomatoes.

Miller's dish of "ugly" tomatoes, which are lightly roasted to bring out their sweetness, are mashed (by the customer, not the chef) onto grilled toast covered with melted house-made mozzarella cheese accompanied by a saffron gastrique. The dish is his homage to one they enjoyed in a tapas bar in Barcelona. "In Catalan, the 'ugly tomato' is the last one on the vine that falls off onto the ground," he explained. "And it's the sweetest."

Finally, his tender grilled squid served with squid ink aioli and piquillo — the ultimate Halloween/San Francisco Giants dish, given its black and orange elements — is a deconstructed version of the traditional Spanish dish in which the squid is cooked in its ink.

Each item was delicious, interesting, delicately seasoned and lovely to look at, as well as to eat. Tapas are ideal for sharing, so grab a few fellow foodies to join you at a table at Mundaka, which is located on the east side of San Carlos Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues in downtown Carmel, and serves dinner nightly.

Rancho Cielo Joint Mixer

Rancho Cielo, the Salinas organization started by retired Monterey County Superior Court Judge John Phillips to help reduce crime rates among the county's youth by teaching them marketable skills, will host a joint mixer of the Monterey Peninsula and Salinas Valley chambers of commerce Thursday, Nov. 8, from 5 to 7 p.m.

■ BYOB at Whole Foods for MEarth

The habitat project at Carmel Middle School called MEarth will receive a nickel from every customer who brings her own bag to Whole Foods Market and agrees to donate the 5 cent credit to the nonprofit. The habitat project, which is open to students from all over the county and includes a garden, outdoor kitchen and green classroom building, was selected as the market's Nickels for Nonprofits beneficiary for the quarter.

Whole Foods is located in Del Monte Center in Monterey.

The Cheese Shop's Kent Torrey (top) enjoys showcasing his products, and Mundaka chef Brandon Miller (bottom) makes fabulous tapas.

■ Comforting cocktails

The lounges in the Hyatt Carmel Highlands will host the final Shake, Rattle and Roll cocktail class of the year Wednesday, Nov. 7, at 6 p.m., focusing on hot winter drinks.

Benefiting from the guidance of award-winning mixologist David Nepove, two dozen attendees will learn how to wow their party guests with three holiday-inspired cocktails while they enjoy small bites from chef Matt Bolton's tapas menu. Participants will leave with gift bags to help get their home bars ready for the holidays.

The cost is $45, and reservations are required by calling (831) 622-5445.

Meanwhile, visitors at the Highlands Inn can also enjoy festive drinks at the California Market restaurant, including a pumpkin spiced latte, white mocha latte, caramel white mocha latte, caramel apple cider, Fireside Hot Chocolate (hot cocoa with Frangelico and Crème de Cocoa topped with whipped cream), and the Holiday Mojito, with the inn's secret Calvados Apple Brandy mix, Bacardi rum, fresh mint and a brown sugar rim.

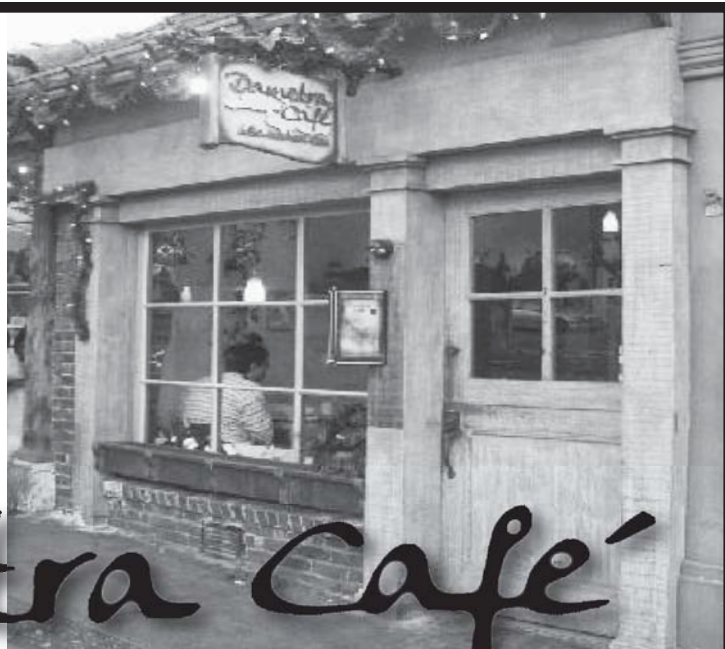

■ Montrio's final artisan class

Chef Tony Baker will demonstrate how to prepare a brilliant holiday dinner during his final Artisan Series class at Montrio Bistro in Monterey Saturday, Nov. 10, from noon to 2 p.m.

Baker plans on demonstrating side dishes, main courses and pie, all with farm-fresh produce. Mulled cider, cranberry fennel sauce, roasted garlic cauliflower mash, and fresh roasted Brussels sprouts with Baker's double smoked bacon are in the lineup. He plans to share his crucial turkey cooking tips, too.

Attendees will be treated to a three-course lunch of cranberry-candied walnut and orange on wild arugula and pecorino cheese, artisan honey-baked ham, and pie.

The cost is $45, plus tax and gratuity, and reservations can be made by calling (831) 648-8880. Montrio is located on Calle Principal in Monterey.

■ Holman's holiday bazaar

Holman Ranch will host the inaugural Holiday Bazaar benefiting the Alzheimer's Association Sunday, Nov. 11, offering nibbles from Paradise Catering to customers as they peruse gift options provided by Casa del Soul and Ajne. The bazaar will be held on the beautiful ranch property at 60 Holman Road just east of Carmel Valley Village.

Three local women who lost their moms to Alzheimer's are collaborating on the event, which will run from 3 to 6 p.m. Hunter Lowder from Holman Ranch, Nancy Rohan from Paradise Catering and Linda Shepard from Casa del Soul are co-hosting the Holiday Bazaar, which costs $25 per person to attend. All of the admission and 15 percent of sales will go to the nonprofit, which seeks to eliminate the disease by advancing research and providing care.

An RSVP is required. Call (831) 659-2640 or visit www.holmanranch.com to reserve a spot.

■ The big cheese

Marinus Restaurant at Bernardus Lodge in Carmel Valley will present an American Farmstead Cheese Dinner Tuesday, Nov. 13, featuring special guest Darren Ryan of Cream and the Crop Cheeses. Ryan and chef Cal Stamenov "will share their knowledge and passion for the history, traditions and artistry" of the cheeses and the places that produce them.

Regional wines from Marinus' award-winning 35,000-bottle cellar will be paired with the featured cheeses during the five-course tasting menu, which costs $125 per person, including tax and tip. To reserve, visit www.bernardus.com or call (888) 648-9463. Bernardus is located at the corner of Las Laureles Grade and Carmel Valley Road.

■ Fandango = Party Central

Pierre and Marietta Bain's beautiful restaurant in Pacific Grove books up for holiday parties quickly, probably due to its upstairs banquet room and intimate dining rooms, eclectic menu options and tested quality and hospitality. In fact, Jenn Adams, who handles their logistics, reported already receiving reservations for next Valentine's Day.

While the restaurant offers fixed-price feasts on Thanksgiving, Christmas Eve and Day, and New Year's Eve, it also provides various lunch and dinner menu options for private parties. Lunch prices, for instance, range from $19.75 per person to $23.75 per person for three courses, depending on how many entree options the client wants. Brunch is $22.75 per person, and dinners run from $42.75 to $59.75 per person for four courses.

To find out more, contact Adams at banquets@fandango-restaurant.com or call (831) 372-3456. Fandango is located at 223 17th St. in P.G.

Our president, commander and chief, WATCHED four brave Americans murdered by terrorists. WATCHED and listened for 7 hours as our former seals begged for help and were refused by Obama and his administration.

Obama then IMMEDIATELY blamed a video, spending $108,000.00 on an apology ad.

So now that he can no longer get away with that lie he expects us to believe he needs more time, till at least after the election, to understand what happened. We know what happened and why. Obama, you didn't want a terrorist attack on your watch. That's the only platform you had to run on.

Fort Hood was a terrorist attack, NOT WORK PLACE VIOLENCE. And those victims are also suffering at your hands. No Purple Hearts and not the fair compensation due them.

ART

the Carmel Art Association.

Eleen Auvil and Pamela Takigawa present "Interpretations," a display of drawings, paintings, monotype prints and bronze sculpture. Both artists draw inspiration from birds.

Monterey artist Justin Ward unveils "Recent Etchings of the Monterey Peninsula," his first solo show at the CAA.

Susan Giacometti and Andrea Johnson present "Recent Etchings of the Monterey Peninsula." The show features Giacometti's limited-edition works on paper, and Johnson's highly-detailed acrylic paintings.

Also, a colorful "Day of the Dead" altar with paper flowers, cut-paper banners, sugar skulls, votive candles and other artifacts has also been set up in the gallery to mark the day after Halloween, which artists seem to find particularly fascinating.

The gallery hosts a reception at 6 p.m. All three shows will be on display through the end of the month. The CAA is located on the west side of Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. Call (831) 624-6176 or visit www.carmelart.org.

The reception begins at 5 p.m. The gallery is located at 309 Forest Ave. Call (831) 655-9775.

■ Another dead party

Friday, Nov. 2, Artisana Gallery will also celebrate Dia de los Muerto with a reception to mark the closing of an exhibit, "Honoring Seven Generations."

The show features work by Maria Prince, Adrienne Jonson, Heather Gallery, Sherri Nelson, Heidi Moss and others. A "Day of the Dead" community altar has also been set up in the gallery.

The reception begins at 5 p.m. The gallery is located at 309 Forest Ave. Call (831) 655-9775.

■ Portrait painter offers tips

One of the Monterey Peninsula's most talented homegrown artists, painter Warren Chang offers a free portrait demonstration Saturday, Nov. 3, at the Pacific Grove Art Center.

Like writer John Steinbeck, Chang draws creative inspiration from the fieldworkers who toil in the region's inland valleys.

The event starts at 1 p.m. The art center is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave.

Call (831) 375-2208 or visit www.pgart-center.org.

"Eliza and Brady" by painter LeAnna Tuff is featured in an exhibit opening Nov. 2 at Sunset Center's Marjorie Evans Gallery.

'This American Life' at Sunset

BEST KNOWN as the host and creator of the public radio program "This American Life," Ira Glass is featured Saturday, Nov. 3, at Sunset Center.

Focusing on stories about everyday people, "This American Life" debuted in 1995. Today, the show is broadcast on more than 500 public radio stations, reaching an estimated 1.8 million listeners each week.

The radio personality is a cousin of composer Philip Glass, who last year launched his Days and Nights Festival in Carmel Valley and Big Sur.

The show starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $59 to $79. A limited number of VIP tickets are available as well. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2040 or visit www.sunsetcenter.org.

'Our Town' opens at Stevenson

FEATURING A cast of students, Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" opens Friday, Nov. 2, at Stevenson School's Keck Auditorium in Pebble Beach.

Directed by Kim Schmittgens, Wilder's play examines life — from childhood through death — in a small, fictional New Hampshire town. The play won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama in 1938.

"Our Town" will also be staged Saturday Nov. 3-4 and Nov. 8-10. All shows start at 7:30 p.m. except the Sunday matinee, which begins at 2 p.m.

Tickets are $12 for general admission and $8 for students, seniors and active military. The school is located at 3152 Forest Lake Road. Call (831) 625-8389 or visit www.stevensonsschool.org/boxoffice.

MUSIC

restaurant in Carmel Valley.

Featuring Rob Waller on vocals and guitar, Paul Lacques on vocals and dobro, Paul Marshall — formerly of the Strawberry Alarm Clock — on vocals and bass, and Shawn Norse on drums, the Los Angeles quartet was named Best Country Act by the L.A. Weekly in 2002 and 2003.

“I first learned about this band from Larry Wines, a DJ at KCSN Radio,” local music promoter Kiki Wow explained. “I’m telling you, these boys are going to blow your minds.”

The next evening — Saturday, Nov. 3, — witty singer-songwriter James Hurley returns to Plaza Linda. “He’s so clever, so crafty, and his vocal range is a delight,” Wow said of Hurley. “He’s a guitar playing fool who lets his fingers do the talking while he sings until you laugh.”

Both shows start at 7 p.m. and there’s a $10 cover. Plaza Linda is located at 27 E. Carmel Valley Road. Call (831) 659-4229 or visit www.plazalinda.com.

■ All Saints chamber music

The Khudiyev Brothers and Nozomi Marusawa play chamber music Saturday, Nov. 3, at All Saints Church.

Hailing from Turkmenistan, the Khudiyev Brothers feature three talented siblings, Eldar and Farkhad on violin, and Emil on clarinet. Farkhad is Youth Music Monterey County’s new music director.

Marusawa, meanwhile, is a gifted young pianist from Japan who graduated earlier this year from the prestigious Julliard School.

Saturday’s program includes music by composers Dvorák, Tchaikovsky, Piazzolla, and Kreisler, as well as a piece by one of the Khudiyev Brothers, Farkhad.

Also performing Saturday will be the Youth Music Monterey County Chamber Players, who will play a piece by Telemann.

The concert begins at 7 p.m. Tickets range from $10 to $30. All Saints Church is located at Dolores and Ninth. Call (831) 375-1992 or visit www.youthmusicmonterey.org.

■ Celtic trio in P.G.

The traditional sounds of Scotland and Ireland will be showcased Saturday, November 3, when a new local Celtic music trio, Mason-Raney-Weed, performs at St. Mary’s-by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in Pacific Grove.

The trio features Stuart Mason on guitar, Colleen Raney on vocals, and John Weed on fiddle. Mason and Raney are members of another local Celtic ensemble, Molly’s Revenge. Weed is a classically trained violinist who is steeped in the traditional music of counties Donegal and Clare.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15. Children under 12 get in for free. The church is located at 146 12th St. Call (831) 233-3862.

■ Back to the Middle Ages

Performing music that dates back to the Middle Ages, The Sitka Trio performs Sunday, Oct. 4, at Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley.

A San Francisco Bay Area ensemble, the trio features Letitia Berlin on recorders and douçaine; Frances Blaker on recorders and hammered dulcimer; and Shira Kammen on vielle, harp and vocals. Together, they will play music from Renaissance England by Bevin, Dunstable and William Cornysh; Breton and American tunes; and Medieval dances.

The concert starts at 7:30 p.m. and tickets are $10. Hidden Valley is located at Carmel Valley and Ford roads. Call (831) 659-3115.

■ Big Sur 1970s dance party

Taking the name of its feather boa-clad frontman, Billy Martini serves up a 1970s Dance Party Saturday, Nov. 3, at Fernwood Resort in Big Sur.

Playing a mix of covers and originals, the San Francisco Bay Area group turns the clock back to a time when hard rock, funk and disco ruled the airwaves. The group’s set list includes head-banging and booty-shaking nuggets like “Bang-A-Gong” by T. Rex, “Get Down Tonight” by K.C. and the Sunshine Band, “Highway to Hell” by ACDC and “Play That Funky Music” by Wild Cherry.

The show starts at 9 p.m. and there’s no cover. Fernwood is located on Highway 1 about 25 miles south of Carmel. Call (831) 667-2422 or visit www.fernwoodbigsur.com.

■ Beck is back and more

Often accompanied by his band, The Bohemians, singer-songwriter Mike Beck plays a solo concert Friday, Nov. 2, at The Works in Pacific Grove. The show starts at 7:30 p.m. and there’s a $15 cover.

Also on Friday, Firefly plays dance rock hits from the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s at the Carmel Mission Inn’s Fuse Lounge. There’s no cover, and the music starts at 9 p.m.

And the following night — Saturday, Nov. 3 — the Dino Vera Band plays jazz and blues at the Fuse Lounge. Again, there’s no cover, and the music starts at 9 p.m.

Also, a limited number of tickets — ranging from $34.50 to $45 — are still available for singer-songwriter Judy Collins’ Nov. 13 concert at Sunset Center. Call (831) 620-2048 or visit www.sunsetcenter.org.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (telephone number for information regarding the trustee's sale) or visit this Internet Web site: www.prioritposting.com or calling: (714) 573-1965, using the file number assigned to this case (see File No.). Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. P993583 10/26, 11/2, 11/9/2012

Florence Tonkin

Florence Kate Karstadt Tonkin passed away peacefully from congestive heart failure at her residence in Carmel, California on September 25, 2012, with family and caregiver at her side.

Florence was born March 13, 1928 in New York, NY, to Clarence Karstadt, a famous industrial designer, and Florence Karstadt, née Masson. Florence attended Glenbard High School, Glen Ellyn, IL, where she played flute in the marching band, and graduated with top honors from Ivy-League ranked Carleton College in Northfield, Minnesota in 1949. Her love of art and fashion led to a career as a window-dresser and then interior designer at Chicago's famous Marshall Fields department store.

Florence first met future husband Thomas Tonkin while he was working in Chicago, and they continued a correspondence after Tom returned to Berkeley and Florence's family relocated to Santa Monica, California. Their relationship blossomed while she worked as an interior decorator at I. Magnin in San Francisco. Shortly after their wedding on December 29, 1954, Florence and Thomas moved to the Monterey Peninsula, where they would remain, happily married, for the remainders of their lives.

In addition to the responsibilities of raising five children, Florence assumed a number of public duties. During the 60s she volunteered for the local Junior League charity branch, memorably building sets for, performing in (with Thomas), and raising money for the annual Footlight Follies stage show. She was active with the Family Service Agency as well. Florence served as docent at both the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History (where her wildflower and mushroom watercolors were displayed) and the Point Piños Lighthouse. She served as a legal assistant at the law firm Hoge Fenton Jones and Appel. In later years, she volunteered as a grant-writer, fundraiser, graphic designer, newsletter editor, and office manager for the local AIDS outreach non-profit ministry John XXIII. Additionally, she was a member of the Casa Abrego club and a supporter of the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

Florence was probably best known for her passion for, and relentless curiosity about, the natural world, including such unglamorous subjects as bats, ravens, nudibranch sea slugs, cephalopods, deep sea creatures, and slime molds. Local mushroom varieties were a favorite subject. Informed by her library of dozens of well-thumbed and annotated field guides, she took pride in knowing the Latin names for all manner of flora and fauna, even conquering her fear of flying to visit Carl Linnaeus' gardens in Sweden. She was a passionate and talented gardener, creating homes for all manner of plants in her gardens. She also delighted in language, speaking at least three languages fluently and even studying Russian in later years. Florence would frequently dash from a family dinner she'd prepared to look up a difficult word in her well-worn unabridged dictionary.

Florence also displayed a great love for the arts and played the piano, banjo, flute, and piccolo adeptly. She was prolific in creating all manner of art forms, including poetry, fiction, calligraphy, needlepoint, and knitting. She was particularly gifted as a watercolor artist, making it her lifelong quest to capture as many forms as possible of Monterey Peninsula plant life, creating hundreds of lovingly rendered, lifelike studies.

Florence is survived by her daughter Jane (John) Creech, daughter Martha Tonkin, son Andrew (Lucy) Tonkin, and daughter Emily Tonkin (Michael VanLandingham). She is survived by four grandchildren, Ryan, Nai Nai, Samantha, and Max. She is predeceased by her daughter Sheila (d. 1984), grandson Duncan (d. 1996), husband Thomas (d. 2008), and sister Claire (d. 2011).

A mass will be said in Florence's name at the Mission San Carlos in Carmel, CA. A memorial service will be held at a later date. In lieu of flowers, contributions in Florence's name can be made to the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History or the Carmelite Monastery. Please visit www.thepaulmortuary.com to sign Florence's online guest book.

If there is any consolation to Florence's passing at age 84, it is that she never missed a day of living, filling every 24-hour period with learning, creativity, and love.

arts community — in this book,” Gualtieri explained. “It’s fertile ground for a writer’s imagination.”

While Gualtieri’s Carmel seems like an idyllic place, it’s plagued by the occasional murder, providing Finnegan with an opportunity to explore her talent as an investigative reporter. The real Carmel hasn’t had a murder in a few decades, but “You can’t have mystery without a murder in it, can you?” Gualtieri suggested.

“Murder Takes the Stage” is populated by many historical figures, including architect Julia Morgan, Forest Theater founder Herbert Heron and Perry Newberry, a onetime Carmel mayor and former editor of The Pine Cone.

River House Books is located in the Crossroads shopping center. For more information, call (831) 626-2665.

Like “Murder Takes the Stage,” “Castle Grey” deals with the untimely demise of several of its subjects. The book is set in Monterey at the Castle Grey, a fictional — and spooky — 19th century mansion that resembles San Jose’s famous Winchester Mystery House.

It turns out that the builder of “Castle Grey” was a serial killer who was never caught. Now — more than a century later — the killer’s great-grandson discovers his ancestor’s horrific misdeeds. But instead of being repulsed by them, “he decides to pick up where his great-grandfather left off,” Wright said. Before long, seven local women are dead.

In response, two detectives, one with a dark secret and the other with a Mexican drug cartel hot on his trail, try to find out who killed the seven women.

The lawsuit, filed by Santa Cruz lawyer William P. Parkin, contends there is “substantial evidence of significant impacts to aesthetic and visual resources as well as conflict with surrounding land uses and policies.”

The county, its emergency communications department and California American Water are named as defendants in the lawsuit, which seeks an injunction to prevent the tower from being installed. The tower is a county project, but Cal Am owns the land where it is to be located.

Officials say the Del Monte Forest site is crucial to achieving adequate emergency radio coverage in Carmel, Pebble Beach, Pacific Grove, Monterey and on stretches of Highway 1. No other area, the county said, would be able to accommodate the tower while allowing for the same communications coverage.

The county contends the “Next Generation” radio communications tower is necessary to allow public safety departments from different cities to talk to each other via one radio system.

The thin tower, which will be visible from 17 Mile Drive, will have 10 antennas providing two-way radio communications for government agencies, Cal Am and PG&E, along with two 4-foot microwave dishes to relay radio traffic to Salinas. A 276-square-foot shelter to house amplifiers and other gear will be built on the ground. Cal Am would remove an existing water tank on the property.

The monopole would protrude an additional approximately 20 feet from the height of the existing towers and pine trees, according to the lawsuit.

sneaking people out of a country without the knowledge of its government. "Tony Mendez was the agent who came up with the scenario of pretending the Canadian six were part of a film crew."

The plan involved creation of a phony movie company, Studio Six, with Mendez operating undercover as producer of a sci-fi film, "Argo," which would require location shooting in some of Iran's exotic locales. On a trip to Tehran to scout locations and get filming permits, he would link up with the hostages, give them cover stories as members of his crew, and take them out of the country. It was a story that would require a lot of courage — and a lot of preparation.

"In the exotic world that Tony lived in, they always had a stash of things they could fabricate, such as passports and visas, and even 'pocket litter,'" McCloud said. To make a cover story convincing, she explained, it had to be supported by ordinary items like theater tickets, matchbooks and receipts that would make it appear you were who you were pretending to be.

But while many preparations went smoothly, as the scenario to free the hostages was being developed it became obvious there would also be lots of complications.

"One of them was the requirement in Tehran that whenever a visa was issued for someone to come into the country, a hard copy of it had to be sent to the government in Iran before the person with the visa was due to arrive," she said. The idea was to allow authorities in Iran to verify an entry visa by matching the hard copy with the visa holder's passport.

Mendez planned to get a legit visa in Germany. But the visas for the hostages, and the passports bearing them, would be fake. How to keep the Iranian foreign ministry from noticing the missing hard copies of the entry visas for the hostages?

"We arranged to have the pouch that would have carried them to Tehran delayed," hoping that newly installed Iranian authorities wouldn't make a big deal out of the missing copies, McCloud said. Thanks to the chaos in the country, the plan worked.

Another problem that turned out to be even bigger was that the scenario Mendez created proved to be too complicated for some of the hostages to master.

"The plan was simplified after he got to Tehran and met with them," McCloud said. "He flew in on Friday, presented their cover stories and documents to them on Saturday, and everybody rehearsed the revised plan on Sunday."

Then, early Monday morning, the group headed to the airport to bluff their way out of Iran.

In the movie, their exit is a hair-raising series of narrow escapes and close calls with immigration officials and airport police. The Swissair 747 carrying the hostages is even chased down the runway by gun-toting madmen in police cars.

In reality, none of that happened. As Mendez said in one of his essays after the mission was declassified, "Nobody at the airport could have cared less."

There was a worrying delay, but not because of suspicion. "There was some mechanical problem with the plane," McCloud said. "We feared the worst, when we didn't get a 'wheels up,' when we expected it."

She also said the scene in the film showing Iranian authorities painstakingly reconstructing shredded documents from the U.S. Embassy, and the possibility those documents would lead to the discovery of the six Americans, was real.

"The reassembling of the classified documents in Tehran was what brought about the latest technology, which turns paper into tiny pieces instead of strips," McCloud said.

As the hostages cleared Iranian airspace, Champagne corks were popped on the flight. When they landed in Zurich, they were whisked to a safe house McCloud had set up in Berne.

"A team of 12 or 13 people had come from the states to debrief them," she said. "We needed a place where the whole group could be kept away from the media and the hostages' families until they could tell us everything they knew that might help get the other 50 hostages out."

At first, she was told by CIA headquarters to find someplace at a ski resort out of the reach of prying eyes.

"But this was February, and a house large enough for such a big group in Gstaad or St. Moritz would be very expensive, and renting it would attract a lot of attention," McCloud said. "I recommended we use U.S. Embassy housing instead."

And that's where the six newly freed hostages, still using their cover identities when they landed in Switzerland, were taken before returning home a few days later.

McCloud wasn't on hand to greet them, however. By that time, she was in Germany on another mission.

"I heard they were safely out by listening to the radio, just like anybody else," she said.

"Argo," which is rated R, is playing at Century Cinemas at Del Monte Center in Monterey and Lighthouse Cinemas in Pacific Grove.

The movie was fake, but the mission was real. And so was the role of former Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud in the rescue of six Americans from Iran.

Mary Frances Bister Adams

Carmel – Mary Frances Bister Adams, passed away October 22, 2012. Born September 21 in New York, New York. Mary was raised in Mamaroneck, New York. As a young woman she enjoyed sailing, swimming, reading and time with her family. She was always young-at-heart and loved to laugh.

Mary was among the first to join the Navy as a WAVE during WWII. She moved to Carmel in 1955. Mary met Floyd Dent Adams (son of a long time Carmel family) while he was performing on stage at the Forest Theater. Seven days later, he proposed. They were married for five happy years until Floyd passed away in 1960.

Mary lived her life with a sweet yet fierce independence. She loved her grandchildren, her two daughters, reading, chocolate ice cream, dancing, a nice dinner out, live music, and a good dry martini on special occasions. Mary was spunky, funny, considerate, gentle, intelligent, dignified, kind, and a joy to be around. She will be greatly missed by her family and friends.

She is survived by her two daughters: Mary Adams Vogt (Bill) and Lucy Adams Oberlin (Ben), and four grandchildren: Ben & Alysse Vogt, and Adam & Mariah Oberlin.

unprecedented havoc in New York City, New Jersey and elsewhere along the eastern seaboard, so the wedding set to be held in Hoboken, N.J., has of course been canceled.

"There's no way to do it now," he said. "Hoboken has been destroyed. We were supposed to stay in the W, and it's under five feet of water. The whole town is."

'Am I dizzy?'

Pepe recounted the storm's arrival as he, Sandra and others were in lower Manhattan, staying on the 22nd floor of the Mondrian Hotel. At first, he thought his head was swimming after a hard workout in the gym.

"I called out to Sandra that I thought I was getting dizzy, or this building is swaying," he said. "The building was swaying, and then the power went out, and we had to walk down 22 floors." The sound of the wind was amazing "howling through the building," he continued.

The deadly storm flooded subways, shut down the New York Stock Exchange for two days due to weather (which hadn't happened since 1888), killed more than 70 people, made thousands homeless and caused billions of dollars in damage. "There are so many people without power, if their homes are even still livable, so there are very few hotel rooms available," Pepe observed. "And with the bridges and the tunnels closed, you're really stuck. Wherever you are, that's where you were going to be for the next few days."

After the storm swept through, a downtown typically buzzing and bustling 24/7 was eerily dark and quiet. "To see no people and no lights — it was like the twilight zone," he said.

Pepe also noted how people were behaving after the storm, banding together to find a phone jack or "share a bag of chips, because not a store was open for two square miles."

The hotel had candles for light, but the Pepes were able to find another place to stay on 41st Street, outside the area south of 39th Street remaining without power. "There were a lot of transformers, the power centers, exploding, so that's why it's going to take a long time to get things up to speed," he said.

Back in Hoboken, Pepe said his cousin, Maria, was trapped in her high-rise apartment building because the first floor was under five feet of water.

"It's a little bit spooky — her whole car is under water," he said. "My aunt has said like 500, 'Hail Marys.'"

Speaking of his aunt, who is in her 90s, Pepe wondered how people like her are expected to follow evacuation orders.

"Where am I supposed to go if this storm is two miles wide and I'm 90 years old?" he asked. "A lot of people just have to hunker down where they are. And they had to evacuate the hospital in Hoboken. Where do they put all these people?"

The Pepes are set to return to the Monterey Peninsula Monday. In the meantime, they're getting together with relatives and friends, and pondering the damage.

But if had he listened to his wife, they wouldn't have flown into the storm zone.

"Sandra was trying to talk me out of making the trip, and I just thought, 'We're going to a good friend's wedding, and how bad could it be?'" he said. "I'm the eternal optimist, and Sandra says she's a realist. And she was right in this case."

Potter for supervisor

THIS NEWSPAPER doesn't usually endorse political candidates, but there's something at stake in the race for 5th District Supervisor that's so important, we urge you to vote for Dave Potter.

A group of activists with its roots in North County land use disputes has targeted Potter for elimination because, during his 16 years in office, he hasn't done everything they want.

The group has a huge amount of cash from suing the county and is using it to try to propel Potter's opponent, Marc Del Piero, into office. Their total contributions to Del Piero to date: $132,000 — an astonishing amount, and more than half of everything Del Piero's campaign has raised.

This group must not be allowed to succeed. The people of the Monterey Peninsula must be allowed to pick their own supervisor without the coercion of carpetbaggers.

Your vote for Dave Potter is critical to maintaining your own voice in Salinas, not to mention the political integrity of Monterey County.

This is not to say that Potter has been a perfect supervisor, or that Del Piero would be a terrible replacement. Both men are competent and well intentioned.

Potter, however, is a highly known commodity, and he has done a very good job. On some key issues during his term in office, his accomplishments have been exemplary. For example, he led the way on getting the climbing lane built back when the Hatton Canyon Freeway was still being advocated by Caltrans. As soon as the lane was built, the horrible traffic jams on Carmel Valley Road every afternoon disappeared, and so did talk about building the freeway. When Rippling River was in danger of being closed, with dozens of elderly and disabled facing eviction from their homes, he cast a key vote to help save them. As a member of the state coastal commission, he stood in the way of numerous crazy schemes hatched by the commission's leadership that would have been ruinous to the people of Big Sur. And on issues ranging from the county's new general plan, to Carmel River Lagoon management, to getting Fort Ord designated as a National Monument by President Obama, he has been a calm voice of reason. We wish he had been a stronger force in getting the Monterey Peninsula a new water supply, but we wish that about almost every other politician in the region.

Del Piero, meanwhile, is an unknown to almost everybody in the 5th District. And, while we welcome his vow to work diligently toward a reliable and affordable water supply, Monterey Peninsula voters should know that while on the State Water Resources Control Board Del Piero voted for Order 95-10 which caused our community's water supply crisis — so, in effect, he is promising to fix the very problem he helped create. Also, his constant talk of "transparency" and "open government" is just repetition of cliches, and his implicit accusations that Potter has been involved in some kind of corruption are just irresponsible. Finally, he should never have taken all that money from the North Salinas Valley group.

The bottom line: Potter deserves to be re-elected, and the group backing his opponent needs to be sent packing. Please vote for Dave Potter for 5th District Supervisor.

'Community needs Potter'

Dear Editor,

Supervisor Dave Potter has my vote. Throughout his tenure, I have served on the boards of several environmental nonprofit organizations. Dave has consistently voted on the side of the environment, economic justice, and health and safety issues. He's a good listener and does his homework.

Dave Potter has always been especially responsive to the needs of Carmel/Carmel Valley, stepping in to resolve the Hatton Canyon Freeway with a climbing lane, saving Rippling River and attending nearly every local event. He shows up with kind words, a funny story and encourages us to let him know how he can help. He remembers details about people and works hard to stay connected.

Dave's strongest skill may be bringing different sides together, especially in the case of highly contentious community disagreement. Many times I have seen him chair a difficult meeting with diplomacy, firm control, and, as always with Dave, a bit of humor to calm things down.

Finally, Dave is woven into the fabric of our community and genuinely wants to serve us.

We need Dave Potter and his hard working staff at the board of supervisors to continue doing the work of the people who know him best.

Donors should be revealed

Dear Editor,

I read with interest an article in Friday's Monterey County Herald about the FPPC demanding that an out-of-state PAC reveal its donor. The PAC is a 501(c)(4) nonprofit. I found it interesting, since on the Monterey Peninsula, we have a similar situation with our 5th District Supervisor's race.

The Marc Del Piero campaign has received $132,500 from North Salinas Valley Fund for Responsible Growth, which is a California 501(c)(4).

But we don't know who is funding the group's effort to elect Del Piero since they aren't registered as a Major Donor. A Major Donor is any donor who has contributed more than $10,000 to campaigns in one year.

It is the Del Piero campaign's responsibility to inform the North Salinas Valley group that they are a Major Donor and should register as such. If the group was registered as a Major Donor, we would know who is funding the effort to elect Del Piero.

Del Piero has also sent out a mailer insin-

Sitting up and taking notice when local media has a local owner

I'M REMINDED, now and again, that radio is still considered a medium.

More to the point, I'm reminded that radio on the Central Coast was once considered another badge on our collective Sash of Good Fortune.

Like the view from Jacks Peak or a stroll along Weston Beach, local radio and its wacky personalities were yet another reason we considered ourselves lucky to live in Monterey County.

From KFAT and KRML, to Mae Brussell and Sleepy John, local radio has long reflected the area's eclectic mix of culture and tastes.

It slowly devolved, of course, as the times got more corporate, until our choices were limited to the sort of claptrap commercial stations that listeners could find anywhere, like a radio strip mall. Local voices and personalities were canned to make way for canned music.

There were a few exceptions. KPIG continued to throw a middle finger at the corporate crowd, even after it got absorbed by the corporate pigs. Also, I believe there is a local station — the one with a set list that sounds like a yawn — that still uses DJs.

Beyond that, the only real local radio personalities we've had lately are the temple-throbbing political rantmeisters, (i.e., the Limbaugh wannabes on KION), or the desperate and trembling voices of reason on KRXA.

Like talk radio, the music on commercial radio is for chumps and morons, with little room on the dial, apparently, for originality and independence. They've taken away our classical. They've taken away our jazz.

Radio has gone to pot, of course, very much like the newspaper business. Their money-grubbing masters got hold of the chicken salad, turned it into chicken excrement and told the public they are now serving chateaubriand.

Except that it really doesn't matter. Not anymore.

If you must have Bach, if you can't live without Coltrane, you can still find it in a million different places.

If you can't figure out how to tap the rich veins of every genre of music available on your smart phone or online, complaining about its unavailability on local radio only makes you sound like a whining crank.

Which brings us to KRML, the local radio station that Mr. Eastwood made famous. ("Play Misty For Me" also provided

beyond the realm

By JOE LIVERNOIS

my favorite Clint line: "Get off my back, Evelyn.")

Of course there will be a few poor souls complaining bitterly that the station "abandoned" its jazz format last week when it reestablished — finally! — decent rock 'n' roll on the Monterey County airwaves.

But the magic of the new KRML is that it hasn't really abandoned jazz. In the not-too-distant future, the new owner and the managers of KRML will open its vault of jazz recordings over the KRML banner — online.

It will also offer K-Bach classical music, country, classic rock, local music, talk and news — all online.

Turning local radio on its ear, the local owner, Carmel's Scot McKay, will also broadcast a lot of local talk and local music, and that programming will also be available online.

McKay bought the bankrupt old station several years ago and believes the new KRML will become the antidote to corporate commercial radio.

He says he wants to provide a station in which the music is not selected from a command center hundreds of miles away, but from DJs who won't mispronounce the names of local landmarks. McKay says he figures that big corporate radio owners are less interested in serving local communities than they are in selling commercials.

He and station manager Mike Hale promise a mix of rock and specialty programming that features local issues, local hosts and local guests. And they have established a partnership with Social Radio, a Portland startup, that will stream jazz, blues and classical music. Online.

A local owner of a local media outlet, right here in Monterey County. There's not that many of them any more. And they should be supported whenever possible.

uating that Potter is under investigation by the FPPC. I heard that rumor more than two years ago and believe that is exactly what it is, a rumor.

Since I would like to keep our local politics local, and for many other reasons, I am voting for Dave Potter for Supervisor. Please join me.

Helen Carlin,
Monterey

Editor's note: As we have reported several times, the money donated by the North Salinas Valley Fund for Responsible Growth to the Marc Del Piero campaign for supervisor came from a $600,000 settlement paid by Monterey County to the group in XXXX in exchange for dropping its lawsuit over Butterfly Village.

Out with Armenta and Potter

Dear Editor,
Fernando Armenta says he is doing a good job, and he says we should support him to continue working for us. But since what we need most is to connect people to jobs, and since there are job openings in Silicon Valley, let's find a way to set up effective commuter bus lines. He's on the MST board but does nothing to create the bus routes that would bring unemployed people to the jobs that are available. He just keeps making speeches about how hard he's working. What has he accomplished in so many years in office? Jobs? Buses? Safe neighborhoods?

Dave Potter says he is a leader. He must have some sort of talent, since he has been able to get voters to repeatedly vote for him, and since he has been able to get himself onto so many important boards. But what has he accomplished? Every time he joins a board or committee, progress ends. The common element across these boards is Dave Potter. What has he accomplished in so many years in office? Roads? Water? Scandals?

It's been said that we can't keep doing the same things and expect a different result. So let's do something different. Let's vote for change.

Richard Fetik,
Salinas

Del Piero's hidden interests?

Dear Editor,
I'm still voting to re-elect Supervisor Dave Potter because he's not "that other guy." For years, "that other guy" has hidden his development projects — including the latest one on pilings in Moss Landing — behind a twin and a trust.

Margaret Robbins,

'Please make donations'

Dear Editor,
The hurricane that has flooded and crushed coastal communities on our East Coast has left a trail of devastation to individuals, families and businesses. Although the storm is over, the real tragedy of those losses is only beginning. Those of us who lived through the crisis of the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake and the flooding in the Pajaro Valley in the 1990's understand.

Our friends in the east, who are now struggling without electricity, heat and food, need our help. I strongly recommend that the residents of Monterey County make donations of funds, in any amount that you can afford, to the Monterey/San Benito Counties Chapter of the American Red Cross. I recommend this because I previously served on their board of directors. The group will work diligently to deliver those much needed dollars directly to the people who are the most desperate in this time of need.

Marc Del Piero, Pebble Beach

Potter's staff speaks

Dear Editor,
As this time of year rolls around it is easy to get caught in the political machine, especially when you work for an elected official. As county staff, we do not conduct campaign business at work, but invariably we are impacted by it. Each supervisor hires his own staff, and a change would result in the loss of 18 years of working for the residents of Monterey County. We have spent these years getting to know people in each and every area of the 5th District, from Indian Springs to Pacific Grove, Gorda to Cachagua, and all areas in between.

We feel that it is necessary to inform voters that re-electing Supervisor Dave Potter will not only keep an excellent individual in office but will also keep in place a staff that take their jobs very seriously and works to resolve constituent issues regardless of political affiliation or whom they voted for. If you live in the 5th District, you are our highest priority, and we treat each individual with the same courtesy and respect that we all deserve. We work closely with county departments, local, state and federal government offices and outside agencies to find successful resolutions to our constituents needs. Whether you start with us or we are your last resort, we work diligently to serve you.

In addition to working full-time for our constituents of the 5th District, we volunteer many hours each week in the community. Kathleen Lee is a Monterey Regional Park District Board member, Pacific Grove High School Alumni Association Board member, Forest Grove School Site Council member, Save the Lovers Point Pool Committee member and is on the Measure A Campaign Committee. Jayne Mohammadi is a First Night Monterey Board member, volunteers for the Arts Council for Monterey County and assists at many local events each month. Bryan Flores is the 5th District Commissioner for the Monterey County Mental Health Commission, vice president of the Monterey County Film Commission, co-founder of Save the Train at Dennis the Menace Park and co-founder of Healing Seas Foundation. We never stop serving our community and we take great pride in that.

While we serve at the pleasure of the supervisor, it is truly our pleasure to serve you, and we would like to share a small portion of the issues that we have helped resolve for you in the past few months.

- Facilitated the removal of the public works staging area on San Remo Road and cleanup of numerous projects along Carmel Valley Road.

- Helped a homeless constituent get emergency medical service and permanent housing.

- Worked with social services and adult protective services to address the needs of a number of our elderly and disabled constituents.

- Requested and received additional CHP patrols to reduce speeding on Aguajito Road, by Carmel River School and in the Cachagua area.

- Provided assistance and follow through on many issues with the county planning, building and code enforcement departments.

- Assisted the Toro Sewer Coalition to obtain a feasibility study for alternative wastewater treatment for the Toro Park Community.

- Worked closely with the county veterans department to provide services for our constituents who served in the military.

- Provided research for legislative outreach to governmental agencies regarding tsunami debris on our coast, methyl iodide, fracking, and, most recently, the oceanic seismic testing along the borders of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary.

- Continually worked with Carmel Valley groups on general plan, lighting and signage issues.

Thank you again for allowing us to serve you. It is truly and honor and privilege to work with you, and we look forward to many more years of successful collaboration.

Kathleen Lee, Jayne Mohammadi and Bryan Flores, Monterey

Prop 37 isn't about lawsuits

Dear Editor,
Your Oct. 26 editorial contended that Prop 37 will result in frivolous lawsuits. This couldn't be farther from the truth. This initiative was co-written by manufacturers, food safety lawyers, consumer groups, farmers and concerned citizens. Prop 37 does not provide bounty hunter fees for trial lawyers, so there is no incentive for lawyers to sue. Furthermore, the new labeling law is easy to comply with; food companies already accurately label their food for calories and fat content, there is no reason to believe they wouldn't disclose information about genetically engineered ingredients as well.

The opposition to Prop 37 claims that it will raise food costs for the consumers. Again, this is not the truth. The initiative simply requires a little bit of ink to be added to existing labels. Companies and manufacturers have 18 months to comply with the new labeling law, and they typically change their labels within this time frame anyway. Prop 37 is not about banning genetically engineered ingredients. It's just about disclosing their presence. It's our right to know what is in our food. It's our right to be informed so that we can make choices for ourselves. Vote Yes on Prop. 37.

A lifetime's work in finance leads to the Yellow Brick Road

THE YELLOW Brick Road Benefit Shop was established more than 20 years ago by the Carmel Presbyterian Church with an interesting proviso: None of the revenues were to go to the church. Instead, it has donated more than $4 million to Monterey County nonprofits for food, shelter, health care and education, and the arts. Sometimes the benefit shop will send checks even when they haven't been requested, knowing the organizations will leverage the money into sizeable contributions to the community they serve.

The enterprise is run today by Dick Nystrom, who was roped in by his wife of 51 years, Marjorie. It didn't take much persuasion. She knew he was right for the job, professionally and in his heart, and she told him it would just be temporary. That was several years ago.

"Most people are not lovely, but Dick Nystrom is lovely," says a longtime friend. "Dick is the embodiment of a gentleman." It is a description echoed by all of those who know him. Indeed, you know it when you meet him for the first time. He takes your hand and looks you in the eyes as though he is truly happy to meet you, which he is.

Dick might even be said to embody the spirit of the principled men who founded our nation. He is a deeply religious man, but he doesn't wear his religion on his sleeve. He lives his beliefs, and very effectively. Through his grace, he impels people to do their best; to be good, to be kind.

A highly successful banker who spent much of his career with Wells Fargo, Dick started life as the eighth child born into an Iowa farm family. In his early years, there was no running water in their house. Think "American Gothic" and "The Music Man." He recently returned to Iowa for his 60th high school reunion, where he joined his twin brother and their oldest living sibling, 92, who lost a leg fighting in World War II. The older brother is waiting for a replacement so that he can continue touring the state with his band, playing and singing the music of the '30s and '40s.

After he graduated from high school, Dick and his five-minutes-older brother "put their thumbs out on Highway 30" and made their way to Hayward, where they joined two of their brothers who had returned from the war. They worked for the summer and then signed up at Cal Poly in San Luis Obispo. One of their teachers asked them why they hadn't gone to Iowa State University, only 20 miles from their hometown, which he described as a much better school, so the brothers returned to The Hawkeye State and completed their college education there.

Out of college and facing the draft, Dick signed up for the Navy's Officer Candidate School and found himself on Treasure Island in San Francisco Bay. He spent three-plus years on a radar "picket ship" a hundred miles out, keeping an eye on sea lanes heading into the bay. Through his Navy connections, he met Marjorie. They set up house in north Oakland.

Dick was making his way up the ladder in the probate department at Wells Fargo, moving to private trusts and from Oakland to San Jose. Then the Carmel office opened. "Before that, Marjorie had said to me, 'If they ever ask you about an office in Santa Barbara or Carmel, you don't even have to ask me," he recalled. They moved here on July 1, 1970, and, as Dick describes it, "It's been a dream." Twice he was offered promotions that would have meant moving to San Francisco, but Carmel was their home.

Dick Nystrom

Great Lives

By TONY SETON

Instead Dick shifted over to a smaller enterprise, where he stayed for five years, and then he spent a year "in the desert" in commercial lending. Next he shifted over to Crocker Bank in Pebble Beach, where he enjoyed three years of an exciting position handling all of his customers' needs, not just trust work. But Crocker was taken over by Wells Fargo, so Dick went into business on his own.

"As an individual, I was executor, trustee, and did court conservatorships, too."

He loves the work, continuing to manage a couple of large accounts plus some family trusts. With the banks he was pushed to handle more accounts, which meant spending less time with his customers. Now, as his own boss, he can spend as much time as he wants with his clients, something that paints a broad smile on his face as he says it.

Asked what he thought of the world today, he expressed sorrow at the polarization of our society. "I'm afraid that the positions of each side are so entrenched that it's hard for them to look beyond that," he said. "But maybe the generation coming up has seen enough of what's going on to say, 'We don't like that. We're going to change that.' But it'll take another generation to get to that stage."

He has hope.

"An unusual medical call"

Dear Editor,

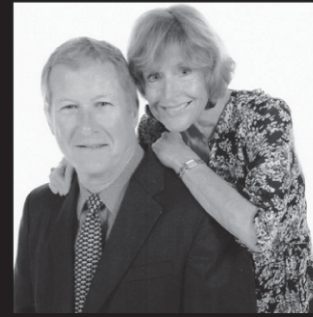

Thank you for the nice medical emergency story on Dave Jedinak, one of our local paramedics in the fire department. It takes many years to develop special instincts as a "first responder," and this was a great example of Dave's instincts being right on the money. His life-saving call to action was not only appreciated by the patient whose life was saved but also by the community Dave and others serve so valiantly on a day-to-day basis. Dave and many others deserve a special thanks for their continued commitment to our community.

James Freeman Gill

James Freeman Gill passed away at his home in Carmel California on October 26, 2012. He was 74 years old.

Jim was born January 6, 1938 in San Jose, California and spent his high school years at Bellerme College Preparatory. He took his career studies at Santa Clara University on a full baseball scholarship.

His greatest joy was his family. He was devoted to his wife, Jana of 40 years. They lived in Saratoga for many years – moving to Carmel-by-the-sea in 1985. Jim always felt that these were the happiest times of his life spent in the most beautiful place.

Jim was a respected and successful businessman who owned and operated Muller Printing Company for over 35 years. He excelled at being both a leader and mentor and will always be remembered as someone who treated all his employees like they were family. So that Jim could spend more time with his wife, family, and friends, he allowed himself a well-deserved retirement in 2003.

An avid and accomplished woodworker, Jim built everything from furniture and cabinetry, to a playhouse for his granddaughters, to amazingly detailed wooden ship models.

If Jim was not deeply immersed in one of his many building projects, he almost certainly could be found enjoying the summers at his vacation house in Lake Tahoe, watching 49ers football, or quietly spending time watching the sunsets with Jana on Carmel beach.

Jim was a man of faith, and he will be remembered for his generosity, his respect for others and his dry sense of humor. Jim is survived by his wife Jana Gill, son Christopher Gill, daughters Christy Pappas, Demi Pappas, and Katie Pappas, son Jim Gill Jr., granddaughters Samantha and Delaney Gill, and sister Jenny Braz.

Family and friends are invited to a celebration of Jim's life to be held on Saturday, November 10th, 2012 - 2:00pm at All Saints Episcopal Church, located on Dolores Street, Carmel, CA. Donations in Jim's memory can be made to the VNA & Hospice, P.O. Box 2480, Monterey, CA 93942.

"CARMEL LEGENDS"

What is a "legend"? Mr. Webster says, "It's a story or group of stories, handed down for generations...believed to have a historical basis, but not verifiable." That's good enough, and gives us a lot of latitude. Carmel is a fountain of legends. Legends of people, of places, of events that mayor may not have happened exactly as we relate them. Over the next few weeks, and hopefully years, we will be documenting legends of Carmel. You will hear about special people who lived here and placed their stamp on this unique village. You'll hear about the houses they lived in, the special atmosphere they created, the inventive ways in which they made their nests. You'll hear about the unorthodox things they did, the brave ventures they undertook, the stupid losses and the exciting victories. In its relatively short history, less than 100 years, Carmel has contributed more than its share to the lore of our country. We think you'll enjoy this space each week. But we warn you: don't believe everything you read.

POLICE LOG

to report a suspicious female who has been seen two to three times standing in front of her 13th Street residence smoking a cigarette. When the resident gets out of her vehicle, the subject gets into hers and drives off. Officer ran the vehicle license plate, and it came back to a local resident. Report is for info only.

Pacific Grove: Egan Avenue resident stated the back door to his residence was open, and drawers in his bedroom had been ransacked. Nothing taken. No suspect information.

Carmel Valley: Cañada Way resident reported her checking account number was used on fraudulent checks. No suspect information.

Pebble Beach: Mestres Drive resident reported that her checking account information may have been compromised. No fraud occurred; she just wanted the incident documented.

Carmel Valley: A Carmel resident was stopped for vehicle code violations at Pacific Meadows and Carmel Valley Road. The driver was detained for investigation of driving under the influence of alcohol. The driver was transported to the hospital, and the case sent to the Monterey County DA's office for prosecution.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 19

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Units responded to the report of a female subject who had fallen on city property on Dolores Street. Upon arrival, emergency personnel learned the female fall victim had been dragged down by her dog attached to a leash, and she did not fall because of any roadway or property issues.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: During a vehicle check on Santa Fe, the vehicle was found to have false registration tabs displayed. The driver was found nearby and questioned. He subsequently admitted the tab was from another vehicle and was cited and released.

Pacific Grove: Senior warden of St. Mary's Church requested that anyone contacted after hours loitering on church property be given a warning. After second offense, he requested that the subject be arrested.

Pacific Grove: Dispatched to the victim of a squirrel bite on Ocean View Boulevard. Victim stated she was feeding squirrels peanuts when one of them bit her finger. She was feeling faint from the bite, so fire department and ambulance were on scene. Victim was advised to go to Doctors on Duty or Urgent Care for treatment.

Pacific Grove: Officer was dispatched to a open window at a residence on Granite. The neighbor advised she left to run some errands, and when she returned, she saw her neighbor's window open. She said her neighbors are on vacation, and no one should be in the house. Officer attempted to make contact with the homeowners, but there were no proper numbers available. Officers attempted to check the residence and found out the house was in disarray. Resident said her neighbors just moved back to their home; that is why the house was a mess. At this time, since it was difficult to tell if there was any forced entry and if there was anything tampered with, the officer took this report for informational purposes.

Pacific Grove: Officer was dispatched to suspicious circumstances in a parking lot. Man stated he was sitting in the parking lot minding his own businesses when a young female pulled up and stared at him. She made a phone call; then her parents showed up in a black Mercedes. He said the father came up to him and asked if he was stalking his daughter, and the man said, "No." Father left, and so did the young girl. Officer asked the man if the father threatened him, and he said, "No." This report was taken for informational purposes.

Carmel Valley: Deputies responded to a bar on Carmel Valley Road at the request of the bartender, who advised there were patrons in the parking lot pushing and shoving one another. All involved subjects had departed the bar and parking lot prior to deputies' arrival.

Carmel area: A man at a shopping center called 911 to report he had a verbal argument with another male.

Carmel area: Oliver Road resident called 911 to report her jewelry bag was stolen from her residence.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Personal item found on Carpenter Street.

Pacific Grove: Ammunition turned in for destruction. Fees paid. Case closed.

Pacific Grove: Vehicle 1 was parked on Forest Avenue, and Driver 1 opened the vehicle door facing the street. Vehicle 2 collided with Vehicle 1's door while driving by on the roadway. No injuries; minor damage; information exchanged.

Pacific Grove: Vehicle 1 (unknown) side-swiped Vehicle 2 (parked) on Forest Avenue and fled the scene. No suspect information.

Big Sur: Man called the sheriff's office to report that his 32-year-old son has failed to check in with his family after three days of hiking in Big Sur.

Carmel Valley: Woman reported an unknown woman may have given her dogs poisonous chickens.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 21

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Two subjects were contacted near the Carmel Police Department after it was reported they may be involved in a domestic dispute. Upon being contacted, it was determined the domestic dispute was verbal only. Both subjects were interviewed and counseled at the scene and released.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A female subject entered an Ocean Avenue business and tried on an item of clothing. It was later determined that the subject left the business with the item without paying.

Pacific Grove: Anonymous person reported an intoxicated male at a shopping center. Subject, a 42-year-old male, was contacted and arrested.

Pacific Grove: Man reported that 10 "Yes on Measure F" signs had been stolen from the locations where he had posted them. These locations were all on private property, and he had obtained permission from property owners to post the signs. Thief likely opposes Measure F. No other suspect info.

Carmel area: Subject was contacted on Del Fino Place and found to be a danger to herself and others. Subject had slapped another person across the face. Subject was transported to CHOMP on a 5150 W&I hold.
