Trail plan offers grand vision but few details

By CHRIS COUNTS

AFTER MORE than four years of talks, the most ardent local supporters of the California Coastal Trail can't say where even a stretch of the route will be built in Big Sur — much less when construction will begin.

But when they gather Saturday, March 16, at the Big Sur Lodge Conference Center for a public meeting about the trail, supporters plan to unveil an ambitious — and possibly lengthy — locally driven process to determine precisely where the path will go.

Trail backers seek local support

In 2001, state legislators called for the completion of a 1,300-mile recreational trail spanning the length of California's coastline from Mexico to Oregon — and costing what a coastal commission study said could be as much $668 million. But, despite all that expense, getting the trail through Big Sur could be as thorny a task as a hike through the

Cultural commission wants council to back Scout House restoration

By MARY SCHLEY

THE COMMUNITY activities & cultural commission voted Tuesday to recommend the Carmel City Council put the rehabilitation and reopening of the historic Scout House on the fast track, now that two philanthropic groups have voiced their desire to raise the funds and do the work, according to commissioner Kristy Downing. Other than being the occasional topic of discussion during budget talks and election campaigns, the historic building located at Mission and Eighth has been largely ignored since the city shut it down a decade ago due to handicap-access issues.

Prior to the commission's March 12 meeting, Downing met with Eagle Scout candidate Michael Doyle — who last

The collapsed section of Highway 1 just north of Rocky Creek will be open to two-way traffic by Labor Day, according to CalTrans, whose employees and contractors are bravely working on the side of a cliff to construct massive concrete footings that will hold up the new roadway. The $11 million project was necessitated because the road gave way in March 2011.

P.B. mansion sells for $22.5M

A magnificent home on 17 Mile Drive just north of the Lone Cypress was sold March 4 to an unidentified buyer for $22.5 million — the highest price for a home anywhere in the county since before the Great Recession. Mike Canning of Carmel Realty, who represented the buyer, said the local market has "clearly turned," with "inventory levels down, days on market shortening and well priced homes drawing multiple offers." County assessor Steve Vagnini said he expects an overall increase of 2 percent in county property values this year — a far cry from the sharp declines of five years ago.

City working to have Flanders lease signed by May

By MARY SCHLEY

SIX PEOPLE have contacted Carmel City Hall and two have submitted proposals since the city council decided in January to offer Flanders Mansion for lease, city administrator Jason Stilwell said this week. A couple of the interested parties have toured the mansion, which is closed to the public.

Meanwhile, an updated environmental impact report on the proposed sale of the historic house, which the city has been trying to unload for almost a decade, is set to be reviewed by the council again in April.

"We're in discussions with six people, and I think we've had two proposals, but I'm not sure if they're complete," Stilwell said. New public services director Sharon Friedrichsen and other city staffers are combing through the proposals "to make sure they include what needs to be included."

To help ensure people know what they're getting into before they apply, Friedrichsen drafted a request for proposals that was posted on the city website last week. While the information is extensive, including mitigation measures and dozens of repair and restoration tasks, Stilwell said that, most importantly, proposals should be framed around several criteria the council identified at its January meeting.

Specifically:

- Flanders must be used as a single-family residence during the term of the lease;
- the lessee must show sufficient liquid financial resources to restore and renovate the residence and grounds consistent with a preservation plan approved by the city according to historic preservation standards;
- the lessee must agree to conform to and implement all mitigation measures approved by the city council to offset the impacts of turning the publicly owned building into private property;
- the lessee must restore the property on "a timely basis," maintain it throughout the lease and return it to the city fully restored;
- the lessee must agree to pay market rent (estimated in 2009 to be $8,500 per month), including all expenses,

TUG-OF-WAR CONTINUES OVER PRESERVED FETUS

By KELLY NIX

A POLICE evidence room will continue to be the home for a human fetus specimen that had been kept in the cellar of the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History for several decades until two years ago, the museum board decided Wednesday.

Despite a request that the fetus be returned to the museum's basement, from which it was removed and relocated in 2010, the board voted unanimously to keep it at the police station — at least until the city decides what to do with it permanently.

"I say let's leave it where it is and move on" said museum board director Stephanie Atigh.

The 3-inch specimen has sparked speculation and debate about how the museum obtained the item and what should be done with it. After museum officials in 2010 said they were not interested displaying it, city manager Tom Frutchey decided it should be kept at the police department.

But former museum board member Esther Trosow has long argued the fetus should be taken back to the facility, even if it's not going to be exhibited.

"I say just put it back where it was," Trosow wrote in a letter to the museum board this week. "It will take up about three inches of shelf space. Why did it have to be moved in the first place?"

Though the board was unanimous in its decision,

Vern Yadon, who was the museum's director from 1957 to 1992, said it shouldn't be kept at the police department.

"Those people [police personnel] are not academic individuals," Yadon said. "And I can just see human remains being an object of frivolity and things of that nature behind closed doors, and I just don't think that should happen."

Yadon, who called the issue a "great to-do about very little," said he remembers the fetus from his early days at the small natural history museum.

"It was there when I arrived in 1957, and I did ask my predecessor about it," he said, "And he threw up his hands and said, 'I don't know anything about it.'"

The fetus has been rumored to have been donated or sold to the museum by notable marine biologist Ed Ricketts, an argument Trosow has made. She criticized the museum for not doing enough to establish its provenance.

"The museum foundation staff and city staff have not allowed independent experts to examine it in an attempt to determine whether it might be a specimen from Ed Ricketts' Pacific Biological Laboratories," she said. "Nor have they allowed any photographs of the specimen to be taken to help in the identification."

Frutchey said the handwriting on a label of the spec-

Mellow Mocha

HE'S PURE poodle, but he came from a "puppy mill," so he's a poodle without a pedigree. Born with back problems, he seemed unsuitable for selling, but the person who adopted him disagreed.

He was the only one she wanted. When they first met, she found a burr in his little paw and pulled it out. As she did, he looked up at her with an awakening of love, and she let it in.

At 6 months, he left the only home he had known – the front porch on a farm among what seemed like hundreds of other poodles. He had never set foot on the cool grass in the back lawn, the soft sand at the beach or the puddles left behind by the rain. Now, he would. But first, his person needed to do something about his name.

"Hershey Latte Poochie was not a name I could live with," she says. "I'm from Belgium, so I thought, 'Godiva,' but then I settled on Mocha – sometimes espresso, and often decaf."

Now 13 years old, Mocha is mostly blind and really arthritic, and even more clingy to his person. He often leans into her, either needing support or just wanting to be sure of her.

"Mocha is so mellow, like a Raggedy Ann doll," she says. "I hold him like I'm cradling a child. I used to take him to hospice and nursing homes to engage the older people there. One of my friends had cancer, and I brought Mocha over to the bed. He put his paw right where the cancer was. He's intuitive."

Mocha used to love the beach, where he would run the length of the shoreline to retrieve his ball. He still gets out every day, riding inside a little carrier pouch his person wears while she walks.

Cal Am seeking a few good workers to build the desal plant

By KELLY NIX

THOUGH INITIAL construction of a desalination plant for the Monterey Peninsula is at least several years away, California American Water this week outlined the list of qualifications it's looking for in a firm to design and build it.

In a presentation Wednesday afternoon at the inaugural meeting of the government committee tasked with overseeing the water project, Cal Am engineering director Richard Svindland said, first, the company is seeking a designer and builder with experience in desal plants, criteria he said will likely not be easy to meet.

"This one is pretty tough," Svindland said, "because how many desal plants in the state are there?"

The water company is expected to issue its list of qualifications to prospective contractors by April 1. The desal plant in North Marina and associated pipelines are estimated to cost about $400 million.

Cal Am and its customers are facing a state water board deadline of Jan. 31, 2016, to have a project online to replace water that is being diverted from the Carmel River.

Also at the meeting, held at the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Office in Ryan Ranch, Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett was elected chair of the "governance committee," which also includes Monterey County Supervisor Dave Potter, Cal Am president Rob MacLean and water district director Bob Brower (who will be replaced by a permanent water district representative next week).

Besides experience, the engineering and construction firm must have working knowledge of the more than two dozen local and state permits needed for the water project, and Svindland said Cal Am wants to know whether the company has been docked in the past for not completing a construction project on time.

"We want to know any projects where they have had paid performance penalties when they've been late," he said.

The firm, expectedly so, also must have expertise in water quality, Svindland said.

"One of the important parts of this project is the quality of water coming out of the plant," he said. "It has to match very

Yet another card skimmer found at 76 gas station

A CLERK at the Union 76 station on Forest Avenue that's been plagued with thefts of credit card information via electronic skimmers discovered one of the devices inside a pump at the Pacific Grove station March 8, according to P.G. Police Cmdr. John Miller. The worker was conducting a routine check as part of management's effort to cut down on the thefts and located the small device attached to the circuitry inside the pump.

The clerk removed the gadget and gave it to the police department, which received a report the same day of credit and debit card information being illegally obtained and used, according to Miller.

Last December, two skimmers were found at the station, and multiple reports of fraudulent use of credit card information allegedly stolen from the pumps at the station were taken by PGPD in February and March.

COUPLE WITH BABY ARRESTED FOR DOWNTOWN BURGLARY AND THEFT

By MARY SCHLEY

A COUPLE pushing a baby stroller while visiting Carmel shops is accused of pushing bad checks, too, making off with a Dr. Seuss drawing, a couple of pairs of boots and an expensive ring before police caught them in town last week following a sighting by a store clerk, according to Carmel Police detective Rachele Lightfoot.

Police arrested Monterey residents Harlyn Riina, 31, and 37-year-old Paul Munster March 7 after they were recognized by an employee at Lloyd's shoes who remembered that they wrote a bad check a few weeks earlier, Lightfoot told The Pine Cone Tuesday.

The pair had reportedly used a stolen credit-card check to purchase boots from Lloyd's Feb. 16 and a Cat in the Hat drawing from the Dr. Seuss gallery the following day, and later stole an expensive from ring from Sixth Avenue Fine Jewelers March 7. The businesses discovered the fraud after the checks were returned by their banks more than a week later, according to Lightfoot.

Harlyn Riina

"An art gallery called and said a couple had come in — a white couple in their mid 30s, with a baby in a stroller — and they bought a picture worth $2,600 and paid with a convenience check like you get off your credit card statement," she said. When the check bounced, the gallery attempted to locate the couple and discovered the credit information in fact belonged to someone else entirely.

Called in to investigate, Lightfoot learned the people whose names were attached to the convenience checks were victims of identity theft.

The duo also allegedly used a bad check to purchase a couple of pairs of boots for $700, and though the clerk asked for a driver's license number, the employee did not verify the ID, Lightfoot said. After that check bounced, staff at the shoe store had planned to notify the Monterey County District Attorney's bad check program but also opted to contact police.

On March 7, Lightfoot spoked to a Lloyd's employee, whose description of the suspects matched the con artists who had ripped off the Dr. Seuss gallery.

"And they said, 'By the way, one of our employees said she thought she saw the couple downtown,'" Lightfoot said. The woman had spotted the couple getting out of a black Toyota Corolla parked in the area of San Carlos and Sixth as she was walking to work.

While another officer kept an eye on the car, Lightfoot walked through the business district in hopes of spotting the

SECURITY COMPANIES CITED FOR FAILING TO PROTECT WORKERS

By MARY SCHLEY

THE SECURITY firm that handled events at the Barnyard shopping center and staged a fundraiser last year for the Monterey County Sheriff's K9 program is being cited for failing to provide workers' compensation insurance for its employees.

The ESA International, also known as the Executive Security Agency, operated by Anthony Perez (who also goes by the name, Tony Vincent) was cited after a sweep conducted by the by the Monterey County District Attorney's Office, with help from the California Department of Insurance, the Employment Development Department and the Bureau of Security & Investigative Services. BSIS licenses and regulates security companies, and the EDD was also involved in the Feb. 19-20 "compliance check" in order to look for tax evasion, according to deputy district attorney Carol Reed.

All employers in the state are required to provide workers' compensation insurance for their employees. The insurance provides medical coverage and other benefits for anyone who is injured on the job.

"Anybody who has even one employee must carry workers' comp insurance or be self insured," Reed told The Pine Cone. "They have to somehow maintain that."

Before embarking on the operation, investigators researched employers via the Workers' Compensation Insurance Rating Bureau of California.

"It's not completely foolproof, but it allows a way to check, and then we can go in and ask an employer who has employees to provide proof of workers' comp insurance," she said.

The database search revealed 13 businesses — including ESA and Central Coast Protection — that investigators subsequently checked. Among those, seven were cited for

"not securing workers' compensation insurance for their employees."

"Just over half of those that were checked did not have workers' comp," Reed said, but she declined to say which businesses received citations until after she reviews each file to determine if charges will be sought against the alleged offenders. "An officer can cite them, but it still has to be reviewed by the DA."

A spokeswoman from the California Department of Consumer Affairs, which includes BSIS, however, said the ESA International and Central Coast Protection, both located in Salinas, were among those cited. The sweep included auto repair shops, too.

Failure to carry workers' compensation insurance, a misdemeanor, can net a company owner up to a year in jail and $10,000 or double the premium amount, payable to the California State Treasury for the Uninsured Employers Fund, according to Reed, who works in the DA's unit also tasked with investigating and prosecuting perpetrators of applicant fraud, employer fraud, premium fraud and provider fraud. Reed said the cases her office opts to pursue will be in court April 5.

Fundraising questioned

Running afoul of the law is not new for Perez, whose operating license and driver's license were suspended last year due to failure to pay child support and who had civil cases filed against him by Creekside Apartments in Salinas, among others.

He also came under scrutiny regarding last fall's fundraiser for the sheriff's K9 program for suggesting the event was affiliated with the nonprofit Sheriff's Advisory Council and for being slow to provide an accounting of the money raised. The compa-

THE WOMAN who was killed by an African lion at a big cat sanctuary in Fresno County last week was planning to visit Carmel next month, her father told The Pine Cone this week.

Dianna Hanson, 24, was cleaning an enclosure March 6 at Project Survival's Cat Haven, a 100-acre zoo in Dunlap, when the 350-pound Barbary lion named Cous Cous attacked her. The male lion broke Hanson's neck, and she died almost instantly, according to a coroner's report. A sheriff's deputy shot the big cat after he couldn't be coaxed away from the young woman's body.

Hanson's father, Paul Hanson, an attorney in Lynnwood, Wash., said he and his brother from Austin, Texas, had planned to visit Carmel and Monterey with Dianna during the second week of April.

"This April visit with her uncle, Ralph, and me would have been her first" visit to the Peninsula, Hanson told The Pine Cone. "I wanted her to see an area that I enjoyed while growing up in Merced and later living in San Diego."

In a March 7 interview, Hanson told CNN's Erin Burnett the trip, that also included San Francisco, was planned in January.

"I just wished we could have done that before this happened," he told Burnett.

Hanson was cleaning an adjacent enclosure when 4-year-old Cous Cous used his paw to open the gate of a feeding cage, according to investigators. She had been talking on a cell phone when the attack occurred.

As a cub, 3-month-old Cous Cous, who was bred in captivity, appeared on the Ellen DeGeneres Show. DeGeneres used a baby bottle to feed him.

Hanson's family has established a fund in her memory.

Time running out to modify pension plan for P.G. police officers, firefighters

By KELLY NIX

THE TIME to strike a deal with Pacific Grove over an "illegal" pension plan the 2002 city council awarded to police and firefighters is running out, and the leader of a citizens' group said if a compromise isn't reached soon, it will take the next steps to void the costly arrangement with a citizen ballot measure.

Resident Dan Davis, organizer of a group critical of the generous retirement plan, said unless the city makes concessions, he will step up the process to give residents a chance to rescind the pension plan. The group has collected 1,280 signatures toward the effort.

While the P.G. City Council met Wednesday night to discuss the status of the group's proposed referendum and other CalPERS-related issues, Davis said the April 3 deadline to file the petition with the county elections office is getting perilously close.

"We have a moral obligation to file the petition," Davis told The Pine Cone Wednesday before the meeting. "And we will file unless the city can prove to us they can do things that are more beneficial than what the initiative will achieve."

At issue is a 2002 city council decision to boost the CalPERS pension plan for public safety workers to a generous "3 percent at 50," which allows employees at least 50 years old to retire with pay equal to 3 percent of their highest year's compensation for every year they worked, to a maximum of 90 percent of their highest pay level. The plan had been at 2 percent at 50.

Davis' group wants the city to restore the pension plan to

Police cmdr. on paid leave while jailed wife is investigated

By MARY SCHLEY

PACIFIC GROVE Police Cmdr. John Nyunt is on paid administrative leave from the already understaffed department while his wife, Kristin Nyunt, is prosecuted for multiple felonies. Nyunt was taken off duty shortly after Kristin Nyunt was arrested and taken to Monterey County Jail in January on charges of identity theft, burglary and fraud, according to police Chief Vicki Myers.

She would not comment further on the case or discuss why Nyunt was placed on leave, but Terry Spitz, chief assistant district attorney for Monterey County, said search warrants were served at the Capitola home where Kristin and John Nyunt were living, as well as at Nyunt's office at PGPD, in January. The details of those warrants, including what information and evidence DA investigators were seeking when they conducted their searches, were not available, as the district attorney's office has requested the court seal the documents.

Evidence to go through

"We have not charged him," Spitz said of Nyunt. "We have large amounts of information and evidence to go through, and whether that will implicate someone else remains to be seen."

The materials include email and other documents connected with Kristin Nyunt and her alleged felonious activities, and Spitz said the district attorney's office took over the investigation at the request of former PGPD Chief Darius Engles before he retired last summer.

"He was concerned about the wife of one of his officers being involved in criminal conduct," Spitz explained, adding that Kristin Nyunt was also living in Monterey County during the time span of the alleged crimes, which he would not describe in detail.

She remains in Monterey County Jail and is set to appear in court March 28 for a preliminary hearing. At that hearing, after the prosecution lays out its case, including testimony from law enforcement and other witnesses, the judge will determine whether sufficient cause exists for the case to proceed. The prelim in Nyunt's case has been postponed several times already.

Car accident victim volunteered at Hope Center, remembered for her giving spirit

By KELLY NIX

THE WOMAN who was killed in a head-on collision last week on Highway 68 is being remembered this week as a compassionate person with a strong faith in God who was quick to reach out to others.

On March 7 at about 9 a.m., Karyn Kiyomi Stevens, 55, was driving westbound on Highway 68 in a Subaru Forester near York School when she crossed into oncoming traffic. She struck a AT&T utility truck and a Chrysler 200, and was ejected from her car, according to Monterey police. She was pronounced dead at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

Executive director of the Hope Center in Monterey, Kim Lemaire, said Stevens was a dedicated volunteer at the food pantry, which provides supplemental groceries and pet food to needy families.

"Karyn was very warm and inviting immediately, and I liked her and felt comfortable," Lemaire told The Pine Cone.

Lemaire first met Stevens at their church, working alongside her several years ago, when members of their church, including Stevens' daughter, Melissa, served meals at Dorothy's Kitchen in Salinas. Lemaire said she was instantly taken with Stevens' initiative and overall work ethic.

"It was working over chopping potatoes and cleaning and preparing food that I truly was able to get to know Karyn," Lemaire explained. "I was so impressed with how she could see what needed to be done and she just did it. She didn't ask, 'what do you want me to do?' She just looked around and kept busy, never tiring."

When Lemaire and several other women in 2010 started the Hope Center in Monterey, it didn't surprise her that Stevens offered to help.

"I told her we were in the basement of an old building and there wasn't very much room, but we would love the help," Lemaire said.

Karyn and her husband, Dan, went to the Hope Center every two weeks to stock shelves, fill bags, fill out paperwork at the front desk and haul groceries to people's cars, Lemaire said. Many times, Stevens would come straight from work, walk into the Hope Center and start working.

"Karyn will be greatly missed, not only because she was our friend and a volunteer, but because the world needs more people with her giving spirit and the ability to see what needed to be done, and do it," Lemaire said. "We know heaven is more organized with Karyn there, but we all sure miss her."

In obituary information provided to The Pine Cone, Dan Stevens said his wife grew up in Maryland with four brothers and a sister. He and Karyn met in 1979 while she was working as a physical therapist at a local hospital and Dan was a patient recovering from a spinal cord injury. While there was "no hint of romance" at that time, the two met again in 1981 and married in 1984. Their daughter, Melissa, was born in 1991.

Karyn worked as a physical therapist for Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula for many years but most recently worked at Good Life Home Care.

"She believed that God used her hands and the power of prayer to help those she touched," according to her family. "She was always reaching out to others with genuine concern, practical help, words of wisdom, and laughter to lighten the load. Karyn found her strength in reading God's word, prayer, and morning dog walks on the beach talking with her Lord."

A memorial service will be held at Calvary Chapel in Monterey on Friday, March 15, at 2 p.m.

MST prepares for drastic service cuts

By MARY SCHLEY

AFTER SPENDING $5 million to install high-tech bus stops and decorate buses with fancy jazz-themed wrappings, Monterey-Salinas Transit is faced with the potential of chopping its routes and services by 30 percent to make up for losing $7 million in federal tax dollars due to fights with unions in Washington. A community meeting will be held in Carmel City Hall Wednesday, March 20, at 5:30 p.m., when bus riders and others can offer their opinions on what services should get the axe.

Assistant general manager Hunter Harvath, who flew to D.C. and returned midweek, told The Pine Cone the battle stems from union opposition to pension reform adopted by the State of California last year. Using a federal law enacted in the 1960s to protect against unfair labor practices, the Amalgamated Transit Union, which represents MST's drivers, mechanics and facilities workers, joined other labor groups in contesting MST's annual grant, which pays for a significant chunk of the agency's operating costs.

"So, for 40 years, we've never had a problem with the process, and then in the fall of last year, the state adopted pension reform that affected all public employees," he said, including MST workers. "At the end of last year, we submitted our grant application like we always do, and the unions that represent our drivers and mechanics objected to the federal funds coming to MST. They didn't like the pension reform, so they were using this provision of a 40-year-old law to block MST's funding."

While MST was the first state transit agency to face such opposition, others have been hit since, including BART and transit systems in San Jose and throughout Southern California, according to Harvath.

"So, the Department of Labor has said we all have to talk and negotiate," he said. "We're in the middle of a negotiation period where we've had conference calls with the lawyers that represent the unions in D.C. If those talks are resolved successfully, then we're not going to have to do major service cuts."

But if they aren't settled by the time negotiations end March 25, the bus system will lose $7 million of its $30 million budget. Due to such taxpayer subsidies, passengers pay only a portion of what their rides cost.

"We've never had to face any kind of drastic funding cuts like that," he said. "Sometimes you have a $1 million gap you have to bridge, but this is unheard of."

The timing is particularly unfortunate, considering MST is just now completing a $5 million project — which included $2 million from last year's federal grant — to upgrade bus stops and make buses prettier. Most of the rest of the money came from state bond funds.

Carmel cuts

To contend with the potential loss, MST hired a consultant to suggest how to reduce service in the least damaging way. For Carmel, the expert recommended deleting three routes (3 — between Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and Monterey, 4 — between Carmel and Carmel Rancho and 5 — between Carmel and Monterey), limiting Route 11 between Carmel and Sand City to three southbound morning trips and two northbound evening trips, and limiting Route 24, which goes out to Carmel Valley, to stops between Monterey and Carmel Rancho for four hours midday. Routes 91, 92 and 93, which run from Sand City, CHOMP and Monterey to Pacific Meadows via Carmel, meanwhile, could be increased by using other grant money, according to the consultant.

"So, it would be very helpful to get feedback at the city hall meeting from those traveling around Carmel as to whether these austere suggestions represent the optimal direction for MST to take in their emergency planning, or whether improvements can be made before this may have to be implemented," said Carmel City Councilwoman Victoria Beach, who represents the city on the MST board.

After spending millions of taxpayer dollars to make its buses look jazzy, MST is facing severe cut-backs because the next pot of taxpayer dollars may be curtailed.

Police force future up for discussion

By MARY SCHLEY

PACIFIC GROVE residents will have police protection, but the questions remains: Who will be providing it? While reports have circulated that Chief Vicki Myers, who runs the P.G. and Seaside police departments, held a department-wide meeting to announce that PGPD would be disbanded this summer and replaced with another agency, she told The Pine Cone this week that talks regarding PGPD's future are in their early stages, with no firm decisions made.

"Nothing has been determined," she said. "My direction is to move forward with it as the police department."

But there have been "informal discussions whether it would be beneficial for the City of Pacific Grove to contract for law-enforcement services," she said, and the City of Seaside, Monterey County Sheriff's Office and City of Monterey have expressed interest in taking over some or all of those functions.

"It's just very preliminary," she said, adding that P.G. officials asked if Seaside and the sheriff's office had any interest in exploring options for law enforcement in Pacific Grove, and that Monterey officials showed interest, too.

"I wouldn't call it a solicitation — more, informal discussions," she said.

None of the other city councils or the county have been presented with proposals, she said, and at this point, she and others are merely trying to answer the questions, "Is it something that's feasible, and is it something that warrants additional discussion?" she said. "A lot of work would have to be done before those questions could be answered with any certainty."

That work would "have to involve the community, the council and the unions," she said. "There are a lot of people involved."

From an employee standpoint, if another agency is contracted to take over police services in town, just as Monterey Fire was hired to take over Carmel Fire Department more than a year ago, the risk of losing seniority exists, since technically they would undergo hiring by the agency receiving the contract.

When Monterey took over Carmel, the city's firefighters were able to maintain their ranks, and such terms would presumably be negotiated by the unions.

"A lot of this would have to go before the council before any of this could move forward," Myers said.

Pacific Grove already shares services with other agencies.

In addition to Myers' work as chief, Seaside provides some sergeants that help in P.G., and the city has an agreement with Carmel to share occasional traffic enforcement duties.

Diana Dollar Hickingbotham Knowles 1917-2013

Noted San Francisco philanthropist and patron of the arts Diana Dollar Knowles died at her Pacific Heights home on March 4, 2013. The granddaughter of legendary shipping line owner Captain Robert Dollar and the daughter of San Francisco businessman and philanthropist Robert Stanley Dollar and his wife, Esther Johnson Dollar, Mrs. Knowles was born in San Francisco on September 18, 1917. She and Joseph Cameron Hickingbotham, Jr. were married in 1937; they had two children, Joseph ("Jody") Cameron Hickingbotham III and Heidi Dollar Hickingbotham. Mr. Hickingbotham, Jr. died in 1967. In 1968, Mrs. Knowles married Gorham B. Knowles, whom she had known since her childhood. Mr. Knowles died in 1998.

The Dollar family's far-flung shipping and business empire was founded by Captain Robert Dollar, who was often called "The Grand Old Man of the Pacific." He was born in Scotland and, as a boy, emigrated first to Canada and then to the United States, where his early employment was in logging camps. As a relatively young man, he saved enough money to buy timberlands in the Pacific Northwest and California. In 1895, he acquired his first ship to move lumber up and down the Pacific Coast. From the early years of the 20th Century until his death in 1932, he acquired many other ships and shipping lines (including Pacific Mail Steamship) and at one point The Dollar Steamship Line had the largest fleet of passenger and cargo ships (all bearing the "$" symbol on their smokestacks) operating under the US flag. One of the ships was the Diana Dollar. The ships included the "President" ocean liners, which provided round-the-world passenger service. Captain Dollar established offices in many foreign ports and was instrumental in opening trade with China and Japan. In the late 1930s, the ships of the Dollar Line were sold to the US Government and eventually formed the basis for American President Lines. After Captain Dollar's death, the various businesses were run first by his son, Robert Stanley Dollar, and then by his grandson, R. Stanley Dollar, Jr. Over the years, The Robert Dollar Company held and managed the remaining Dollar family business interests, including real estate in San Francisco's Financial District and timberlands in Oregon. The building at 311 California Street, the former home of The Dollar Steamship Line, is still known as The Robert Dollar Building. Following the death of her brother, R. Stanley Dollar, Jr., Mrs. Knowles became the president of The Robert Dollar Company, a position that she held until the company was sold in 1990.

Mrs. Knowles was a generous supporter of the arts in San Francisco, especially the San Francisco Opera, the San Francisco Ballet and the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco. At the time of her death, she was a member of the Board of Directors of the Opera and a Trustee Emeritus of the Ballet. She was also an active supporter of San Francisco's Grace Cathedral, having served on its Board of Trustees. The Gorham and Diana Knowles Fountain is located in the plaza adjacent to the Cathedral. In 2004, she was given Grace Cathedral's "Spirit of the City" award. At a dinner in her honor, Bishop William Swing said "Over a lifetime of effort, you've given joy to the citizens of this city by giving them beauty for the eye and the ear which lifts the human heart."

From the time she was a child, Mrs. Knowles spent summers at Lake Tahoe, where her family had a large estate in the area now known as Dollar Point. She was a supporter of The League to Save Lake Tahoe and a sponsor of the group's annual fund-raising summer fashion show. In recognition of her family's participation in Tahoe's maritime history, she and her children contributed the Trophy Display Area to the newly built Tahoe Maritime Museum.

Mrs. Knowles was a member of the Burlingame Country Club, the Cypress Point Club and Villa Taverna.

Mrs. Knowles son, Joseph ("Jody") C. Hickingbotham III, died in 2008. She is survived by her daughter, Dr. Heidi Dollar Hickingbotham, and her grandchildren Kimberley Cary Hersov, Joseph C. Hickingbotham IV (and wife, Jessica Hickingbotham), Darayn Hickingbotham, Wendy Cary Prince (and husband, Mark Prince), Carolyn Cary Alt, Leslie Cary Buerger (and husband, Toby Buerger) and Cameron Todd Carey.

Arrangements are being handled by Halsted N. Gray – Carew & English, 1123 Sutter Street, San Francisco. A memorial service was held at Grace Cathedral on Thursday, March 14 at 2:00 p.m. Burial services will be private. The family requests that any memorial contributions be made to Grace Cathedral (1100 California Street, San Francisco, CA 94108), San Francisco Opera (301 Van Ness Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94102) or San Francisco Ballet (455 Franklin Street, San Francisco, CA 94102).

Madeline Smith Littlefield

September 23, 1934 - March 5, 2013

It is with great sorrow that we announce the passing of our beloved mother, grandmother, sister and friend. She is finally at peace and with her earlier departed husband, Henry, for which we are grateful.

Madeline was born in New York, NY on Sept. 23, 1934, to James and Mary Smith. She was the loving wife and partner to Henry Littlefield of the Monterey Peninsula, for 43 years. Madeline died in Los Gatos, California on March 5, after a long battle with Alzheimer's disease. She is survived by her daughters Kate Brill and Mary Littlefield, her grandson, Eli Brill and her brother, Jim Smith.

Madeline grew up in Baldwin, Long Island. She attended the Grier School for girls in Tyrone, Pennsylvania, then earned her BA at Wheaton College in Norton, Massachusetts, majoring in music. She studied organ and sacred music at Union Theological Seminary in New York City, and then earned her MA in Education at Smith College in Northampton, Massachusetts.

She married Henry Littlefield in 1956 and the two began their long life together, with a shared passion for teaching. She loved teaching little ones and he loved teaching high school and college age students. While she was a Master Teacher at Smith College Campus School, Henry was a Dean of students and Wrestling coach at Amherst College in Amherst, Massachusetts. While she was the founding Director and teacher of the Early Childhood Unit at All Saints Day School in Carmel Valley, California, he was the Headmaster of The York School in Monterey, California. While she was the Director and Teacher at the Wayfarer School in Carmel, California, he taught History at the Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach, California. She was a beloved Kindergarten teacher for many generations of children on the Monterey Peninsula. She enjoyed seeing her students grow up, and marry, and have children of their own, whom Madeline then taught in her classes.

Madeline also enjoyed a long life devoted to music. Wherever she lived she always belonged to at least one choir. She was a co-founding chorus member of I Cantori Di Carmel, a local choral group. She was also a member of the Carmel Bach Festival Chorus for 30 years. She was an Alto and she loved to sing!

Madeline devoted time as a Hospice volunteer for many years on the Peninsula, comforting the dying and their families.

Madeline also enjoyed her many beloved pets. She owned a horse as a girl, and had many wonderfully memorable dogs – Teddy (the crazy Corgi), Meluka and Purlie, and treasured cats: Vincent, Jesse, and Talin, to name just a few (as well as Guinea pigs, mice, turtles – mascots for all her Kindergarten classes). She was never without a pet.

Most importantly, Madeline loved her many friends. They filled her life with joy! They loved her fun loving nature, hilarious sense of humor, and unique world views.

Madeline will be terribly missed by her family, friends and students.

region's dense chaparral. With Senator Bill Monning's backing, the aim of Saturday's meeting is to gain support for the process among Big Sur residents and property owners.

The alternative to the process, supporters say, would be to allow a private contractor with far less local knowledge to plan the trail, an idea supported by some state officials — and a strategy locals say could lead to a poorly planned trail and create conflicts with property owners.

If the planning process gains widespread support among residents and property owners, an executive committee, a steering committee and six local groups will be formed to plan the trail's alignment along six corresponding segments of the coast.

At Saturday's meeting, supporters will present the draft of a document guiding the process. In addition to determining how locals will determine the trail's alignment, the document describes how state law limits the trail's impact on property owners. It also makes recommendations about how the trail will be managed, and what should happen if the state agencies responsible for it run out of money.

Eminent domain off the table

The state law creating the trail requires those who build it to respect private property rights. Sen. Monning told The Pine Cone this week the trail's passage through Big Sur is a "fait accompli," but he insisted no private property will be acquired through eminent domain.

And apparently, such acquisitions won't be necessary. "There is sufficient land in the public ownership and within existing easements," the document reads.

According to state law, public views along the trail won't restrict development rights. And private property owners will not be responsible for the cost of surveys if the trail passes near their land.

The document also makes recommendations for the trail's management, including ensuring sufficient funds exist to maintain the trail; sufficient parking is provided; security patrols are established to prevent illegal camping, campfires and vandalism; and amenities like portable toilets and water fountains are installed at strategic locations.

If the state agencies charged with those tasks run out of money, the document recommends guidelines for closing the trail — or at least portions of it — until funding is restored.

Acknowledging the state's budgetary constraints, the document suggests agencies

Nobody's sure exactly what route the California Coastal Trail will take when it passes through Big Sur, but one thing's for sure — the path will offer hikers jaw-dropping views of some of the most spectacular scenery on earth. While much of the trail from Mexico to Oregon is already complete, the Big Sur section presents a variety of challenges for the local residents who will plan its alignment. The Big Sur Lodge Conference Center hosts a meeting on the subject March 16.

may delegate management duties "to a non-profit, community-based organization."

It's too early for details

The Big Sur section of the trail is being designed specifically to accommodate hikers — and if the local planners determine it's feasible, they will try to accommodate equestrians and bicyclists — perhaps with parallel trails. Bicyclists now share the highway with motorists, often at their peril.

Trail supporters are hesitant to discuss details about the trail's alignment because they say they want more public input before making decisions.

Since it's too early to say precisely where the trail will go, it's unclear how much of it will follow the coastline and how much will travel through Big Sur's backcountry. It's also unknown how much of it — if any at all — will utilize publicly accessible inland routes like the Old Coast Road, Coast Ridge Road, Cone Peak Road and South Coast Ridge, and how much of it will travel along the coastline and parallel Highway 1. An inland route would seemingly require less construction, but would take hikers away from the coast and its visitor-serving business community. But the coastal route would likely create greater impacts on private property and be subject to more environmental review. It's possible a combination of the two routes could be utilized, although such a strategy could lengthen the trail substantially.

Campers present challenges

Because of its rugged topography, vast tracts of private land along the coast, and strict environmental protections, the Big Sur coast offers an unusual variety of challenges for the trail's planners — and ultimately, its users. One issue likely to surface is where backpackers will sleep.

If someone decides to walk the entire trail — or simply the length of the Big Sur coast — where will they spend the first night of their trek south of Carmel? The nearest option — Andrew Molera State Park — is located 20 miles away, too far for most backpackers to travel in one day, especially if they're carrying a heavy pack.

No doubt the subject of adding campsites will be raised, perhaps at Brazil Ranch or the Point Lobos Ranch, which one day will be opened as a state park.

The 2,200-mile Appalachian Trail — which has more than 250 shelters and campsites — could be used as a model for planning how to accommodate backpackers.

Who's going to pay for the trail?

Overseeing the planning and construction of the trail is a state agency, the California Coastal Conservancy, and a nonprofit group, Coastwalk. According to the former's regional manager Trish Chapman, there could be "multiple state, federal, and local sources of funding" for the trail, but she offered no specifics.

She did concede her agency "expects to run out of bond funding within the next few years, at which point there will be very little conservancy funding available for these types of projects."

As a result of shrinking federal, state and county budgets, it wouldn't be surprising if the construction of the Big Sur section of the trail is partly funded by an assortment of nonprofits, foundations and private individuals, which have supported the construction and maintenance of local trails in recent years.

The meeting starts at 10 a.m. March 16. The conference center is located inside Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park. A website has more information: www.californiacoastal-trail.info.

closely with Carmel River water." Potter said the company should obtain the resumes from the companies' key personnel as to eliminate potential conflicts of interest. while Burnett said Cal Am should make sure the firm is up to speed on environmental concerns.

Cal Am will look into prospective contractors' project histories and job records, and will also find out if they have the financial backbone to support the project.

"How many times have they been sued?" Svindland said, for example. "That is very important."

It's also seeking a company with "diversity" — those that employ enough minority workers to meet Cal Am's "diverse goals" of 21.6 percent, which Svindland said aren't mandatory, but could lower costs.

"We want to see how those firms can help us meet that number," he said.

"If they can only do five percent, that is a huge burden."

Attorney Don Freeman, who provides legal counsel to the Monterey Peninsula Regional Water Authority — which comprises the six Peninsula mayors — said the firms should also be checked as to their responsiveness to any problems after completing a project.

Svindland said on June 15 Cal Am will issue requests for proposals from four finalists.

The water company is currently in talks with eight contractors.

Mayors group executive director Bill Reichmuth encouraged Cal Am — which has the final say on who will be chosen to design and build the project — to hire local workers for construction when possible.

Though there are likely no local firms with the expertise to build the desal plant itself, Reichmuth said local workers could help build the project's associated pipeline.

"The idea would be to keep the money local," he said.

Softball star pitches no-hitter to even Padres' record

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

PITCHING ACE Brittany File ended the Carmel High School softball team's three-game losing streak March 12 with an exclamation mark, tossing a no-hitter against Alvarez High School and striking out 13 batters.

Playing on the road, the Padres cruised to a 12-0 win against the Eagles. File and Brooke Vierra each had three hits, while Alexandra Franklin and Monica deGroot each added two hits.

The visiting Padres fell to Salinas High March 6, 8-1. Amber Clark's first inning triple put Carmel High on the scoreboard first, but defensive miscues by the visitors put the game out of reach.

Despite File's heroic's, the Padres lost to Soquel High March 2 at home. The team's top pitcher was outstanding, going the distance, yielding four hits and striking out 15 — including 10 in a row. While Carmel High had little luck against Soquel starter Anna Gurr, Nicole Caoili smacked a pair of hits.

File pitched a one-hitter and struck out 11 at home Feb. 28 to lead the Padres to a 5-1 win over Aptos High. On offense, Carmel High was paced by Jessica Duffy's two-run double.

Carmel High is now 3-3. Next up are road games against Sobrato High of Morgan Hill (March 15) and North Salinas (March 19), and the Padres' league opener, which they play at home against Monte Vista Christian School (March 20).

Monterey County Sheriff's Posse fundraiser

THE SHERIFF'S Posse will hold a fundraiser Saturday, March 16, to raise money for the Posse Grounds and the Junior Rodeo. An Evening with Juni Fisher will begin at 7 p.m. at the Monterey County Sheriff's Posse Grounds located at 395 Old Natividad Road in Salinas.

An award-winning Western and folk singer-songwriter, Fisher was voted the Western Music Association's Entertainer of the Year in 2011 and was the first woman to receive the National Cowboy Museum's Western Heritage "Wrangler Award" for Most Outstanding Western Album. She began singing in a trio with her sisters while in elementary school, took up guitar at age 7 and wrote her first song a year later. Fisher cites Marty Robbins, Joan Baez and Burl Ives among her early influences.

The Monterey County Sheriff's Posse Grounds, a non-profit, is under new management by retired police officers Chuck and Lynn Lincoln, longtime Monterey County residents.

The cost to attend An Evening with Juni Fisher is $25 per person. Call (831) 970-8880 for tickets. Doors open at 6 p.m.

although the city will consider allowances to offset improvements; and

■ the lessee must provide adequate insurance to protect the city from liability and agree to indemnify the city in any legal battles that arise from the tenants' use of the property.

Stilwell said proposals are first reviewed to ensure they meet those criteria, as well as the mitigation measures designed to offset the mansion's transformation back to private property. If they are, then the applicants are subjected to financial analysis to verify they have the wherewithal to follow through.

While Friedrichsen developed the RFP and has been communicating with a state agency in Maryland that specializes in leasing historic properties, a couple of real estate professionals are helping with the marketing and answering inquiries, and a financial analyst is examining applicants' budgets, according to Stilwell. Attorney Jon Giffen is providing legal guidance, and former principal planner Brian Roseth is consulting on land use and other related matters.

The RFP details what the city expects applicants to provide, as well as an extensive list of required repairs and improvements covering everything, from fencing, security lighting and drainage, to landscaping, copper gutters, doors, stairs, landscaping, roof tiles and interior upgrades in every room on every floor. It estimates the mansion is worth $1.8 million in its current state and requires $1.2 million in restoration work.

All applicants have to provide details about themselves, their qualifications, their plans for the mansion, their financial position and other information.

"The timeframe is to have a signed lease by May, so we're cranking," Stilwell said.

what it was before the pre-2002 vote and declare that the plan was adopted "illegally," a determination made last year by a subcommittee composed of council members who investigated the pension deal.

It also wants the city to provide a plan on how it will reduce costs and restore city services that had been cut, in part, as a result of the retirement plan.

The group, which also includes Sally Aberg and Frances Grate, contends the arrangement was adopted unlawfully because a public hearing was never held, and crucial financial information on how much the increase would actually cost the city was not disclosed to the council and the public.

While Davis said the city is trying to discourage the group from filing the petition, city manager Tom Frutchey said that's not the case and that Pacific Grove merely wants to "develop a solution that accomplishes the same goals as the petition but with greater certainty, less costs, less delay — as a result of litigation — or all of the above."

"The city strongly believes that there is such a solution," Frutchey said. "If the citizens group does not agree, then it is certainly within their power to file."

Frutchey said Wednesday's meeting was the first chance the group and the city council had a chance to address the "potential joint efforts" during a public meeting.

But Davis said the city has had months to resolve the problem but has failed to do so.

The group was only required to collect 950 signatures for the initiative, but Davis said they got about 300 more to account for those who may not be registered Pacific Grove voters or whose signatures might be disqualified for other reasons.

The elections office requires at least 10 percent of the voters who cast ballots in the last election to sign the petition.

The staff report given to the 2002 council members indicated the cost of amending the pension contract for police officers and firefighters would be $51,500. What the staff report failed to disclose, Davis said, is that figure was merely the cost of amending the contract, not the cost of the pension plan itself.

Davis said the pension plan cost the city at least $800,000 the first year after it was adopted.

"The failure to publicly reveal the future annual costs ... was a clear violation of state law," according to the initiative.

To help reach an agreement between the city and the group, the city hired public pension expert Karol Denniston to be the mediator for the city and the citizens. Denniston, an attorney, has been praised on both sides of the issue for her expertise.

Davis was on the 2002 council and voted in favor of the ordinance to amend the pension plan during the first reading. He was absent at the meeting when the council cast its final vote for the plan. The pension option was on the council's consent agenda, a spot usually reserved for "non-controversial" items.

Meanwhile, the Pacific Grove Police Officers Association is set to go to court for an April 15 trial over a lawsuit it filed against the city for capping officers' pension contributions at 10 percent of a worker's salary. The city had contributed 19 percent for police officers into the CalPERS retirement plan.

SPCA expands 'animal camp' for kids

By KELLY NIX

LEARNING HOW to care for horses, dogs, cats and other animals is all part of a popular summer camp that's offered for children this spring at the SPCA for Monterey County.

"Animal camp is a blast," SPCA community outreach manager Dawn Fenton told The Pine Cone. "We've been doing camps for more than 20 years now."

While the SPCA has been holding summer sessions for a long time, it saw a need to expand the program this year to include spring, fall and winter sessions.

"Parents were saying 'Do you have anything for winter break or spring break,'" Fenton said. "We thought this is a great opportunity to see what the response is."

Children learn all aspects of taking care of animals, such as horses, cats, dogs and rabbits.

"The kids spend a ton of time in the barn," Fenton said. "They get to know all the horses down there. At some time during the week, the kids get to make mash for the horses ... we called a smoothie for horses."

At the end of the camp, children write letters to their favorite animal at the SPCA.

"It's a great and interesting way to have some closure at the end of the week when it's time to say goodbye to the animals," she said. "It's neat to see the relationships they form."

For kids in grades 3 to 6, the camp runs five days and costs $250, which includes all activities and snacks. The spring animal camp sessions run March 25-28, April 1-5 and April 8-12. Children must bring their own lunches.

A four-day summer camp in June and July for children in grades 1 and 2 is $125.

For information on the summer sessions or to register, call (831) 264-5404. The SPCA is at 1002 Monterey-Salinas Highway across from Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca.

week told the council he wants to restore the building in order to obtain Scouting's highest rank — and his dad. Dance Kids founder Carol Richmond and her husband, Alan, who in February advised the council of plans to launch a capital campaign to fix up the Scout House and spruce up its grounds, attended as well.

"It was to talk about their vision and the groundwork they had done to date," Downing explained. "It was a very collaborative meeting."

Architect Adam Jeselnick, who has done some preliminary assessment, was there, too, and Downing said everyone expressed desire to have the kids from Dance Kids and Boy Scout Troop 127 do some of the work, "if that's possible."

Afterward, cultural commission chair

Dixie Dixon and commissioners Downing and Donna Jett unanimously voted Tuesday to recommend the council "incorporate the reinstatement of Scout House into their goals for the next budget and allocate $5,000 toward trying to do the project on a volunteer basis with donated materials," Downing told The Pine Cone. Failing that, commissioners want the council to include the renovation in its capital improvement plan.

Richmond characterized the meeting as fruitful and said he intends to proceed with his efforts.

"We plan to move forward and try to press on with this project," he said. "We're looking at trying to come up with some permit costs and some rough ideas." Restoring the building constructed by Boy Scouts with donated funds in 1931 would meet the city's goals of "community character, longtime vitality" and historic preservation of the Scout House, he said.

He also said the fact his nonprofit and the Boy Scouts are youth oriented suggests their members should have a hands-on role in transforming the building, which the city closed in 2003, "from an eyesore to a resource."

Doing so would "improve the neighborhood," he added, and new landscaping and walkways would make Eighth Avenue safer for pedestrians, too.

He reported people have already expressed their support, including nearby Knapp Hardware which might donate materials.

"People on the street are saying, 'It's a great idea — thanks for taking the lead and trying to get something done — it's long needed,'" Richmond said. "I think we want to try as much as we can to keep the cost to the city low and rely on community support and so forth."

A member of Boy Scout Troop 127 in Carmel Valley, Michael Doyle told the council last week that he wants to work to reopen the Scout House in order to obtain his Eagle Scout rank. His father, Mike Doyle, told The Pine Cone he believes he can rally support from contractors and suppliers to donate goods and services for the project, provided the condition of the Scout House isn't far worse than he thinks. He has yet to examine the inside.

Doyle also pointed out the diverse use of the Scout House, not just by Boy Scouts and Dance Kids, but by groups like the Friends of Harrison Memorial Library, shows how important it is to people in town, and he's proud his son is taking on such a challenge.

"It's not about profit," he said. "This is an important community asset."

FETUS

imen jar was compared to Ricketts' writing, but that "there were no similarities that could be found."

"It's very clear it's not [Ed] Ricketts' handwriting," Frutchey said. "That doesn't mean it's not the handwriting of somebody in his lab."

But, Frutchey added, there is "zero evidence" that the specimen belonged to Ricketts.

Museum director Lori Mannel said they found no documentation on the fetus including any reference to it in decades-old museum board meeting minutes.

"We found absolutely no evidence that this item was inventoried, catalogued or accessioned," she said.

Though some have suggested a DNA analysis should be performed on the specimen, Mannel said DNA testing would likely yield no matches since the solution it may be preserved in, formaldehyde, can damage DNA to the point it can't be tested.

"It's highly unlikely that DNA analysis could be successfully performed on this item," she said.

Officials have also said the fluid in the specimen jar is alcohol.

Yadon said it's possible former Stanford professor of embryology Harold Heath, who worked at the Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove — and was appointed the scientific director of the museum — may have donated some of his own instructional items, including a fetus. Heath died in 1951.

"I think it ought to be buried as an inconsequential object like the other things we don't know in the museum catalogue," Yadon said.

However, Mannel said that apart from not fitting in with the museum's collection, from a personal standpoint, she believes the fetus should be given respect and handed over to the county coroner's office.

"I don't see it as an inconsequential item," she said. "I do see it as human remains which should be treated with dignity."

Trosow asked "what harm can a fetus specimen do to the foundation or the city?"

"It's a natural history museum," Trosow said, "and to remove this specimen from the collection raises more ethical questions than it answers."

Trio, pub band present St. Paddy's Day bash

By CHRIS COUNTS

A PAIR of musical acts — Story Road and Reel Deal — offer a St. Patrick's Day tribute to the songs of the Emerald Isle Sunday, March 17, at St. Mary's by the Sea Episcopal Church in Pacific Grove.

The Celtic music trio Story Road celebrates St. Patrick's Day with a performance March 17 in Pacific Grove. From the left are: John Weed, Stuart Mason and Colleen Raney.

Members of Molly's Revenge — one of California's premier Celtic music ensembles — guitarist Stuart Mason and Carmel Valley fiddler John Weed recently teamed up with singer Colleen Raney to form a new band, Story Road. Joining the trio for the afternoon is Dublin-born button accordion player Johnny B. Connolly. The group presents a lively mix of "rip-roaring reels," "jaunty jigs" and "heart-tugging ballads."

"They have a wonderful way of the exploring the roots of Irish and Scottish music, while at the same time adding a fresh vibrancy," explained Carmel Valley fiddler Jackie Pierce, a member of Reel Deal. "Their synergy is magic."

Composed of seven local musicians, Reel Deal opens for Story Road.

"We're a pub band like you'd hear in Scotland or Ireland," Pierce told The Pine Cone. "We play traditional tunes from the Celtic countries."

The Rosemary Turco Irish Dancers also perform at the event. All proceeds from the sale of traditional Irish food and beer, as well as a portion of the proceeds from the concert, will benefit St. Mary's food bank.

The music starts at 3 p.m. Tickets are $20 for adults and $5 for children under 12. The church is located at 146 12th St. Call (831) 224-3819.

Also, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., Reel Deal plays at Flanagan's Irish-American Pub in The Barnyard shopping center. Call (831) 625-5500.

Jigs, reels and corned beef

A youthful acoustic duo — Dave Holodiloff and Peter Mellinger — celebrates St. Paddy's Day Sunday, March 17, at Chamisal's Courtside Bistro.

Holodiloff and Mellinger will play a variety of traditional Irish folk songs, jigs, reels and Celtic music. Complementing the duo will be chef Robin Sachs, who will celebrate the fes-

Artists rally to aid youngster with cancer

By CHRIS COUNTS

TO HELP raise money for a 3-year-girl who is battling cancer, the Central Coast Art Association is staging a fundraising exhibit that opens Sunday, March 17, at The Works bookstore and coffeehouse in Pacific Grove.

Proceeds from the show will benefit the family of Melody Jane Holloway, who is undergoing chemotherapy and radiation for liver cancer, and is scheduled for surgery next month. A resident of Jamestown, a small community in the Sierra foothills, the girl will join her family at Sunday's reception.

A fundraising art exhibit opening March 17 will raise money for the medical expenses of 3-year-old Melody Jane Holloway, right.

The event was organized by Monterey painter Debbie Griest, a friend of the family and a member Central Coast Art Association. When she approached the local painting's members about creating a fundraiser, the response was

A member of The Tree Top Trio, which specializes in gypsy jazz, and Microtonic Harmonic, a local bluegrass outfit, Holodiloff is a player whose talent surpasses his years. "He comes from a family of great musicians, and you could put just about any instrument in his hands," said singer-songwriter Kiki Wow, who books music at the bistro.

Mellinger was the winner of Youth Music Monterey's 2012-13 Honors Orchestra Concerto Competition. "He's a young prodigy," Wow added.

Opening for The Entrance Band is The Range of Light Wilderness, a low-fi trio with an affection for 1960s-inspired pop harmonies. Tickets are $8.

The following night — Saturday, March 16 — a funky Santa Cruz jam band, Matt Misih and the Messengers, performs at the same venue. There's no cover.

enthusiastic. The group's president, painter Leela Marcum, offered the use of The Works, which she and her husband own. About 20 painters donated works, including several who painted portraits of Melody.

"I've been amazed at how generous everybody's been," Griest told The Pine Cone. "The response has been real positive. This has been a real hardship for Melody and her family. But they're fighting real hard."

Included in the exhibit will be a mix of oils, watercolors, acrylics, pastels — and even a piece of sculpture.

A reception starts at 3 p.m. The show, titled "Giving for Melody," continues through April 30. The Works is located at 667 Lighthouse Ave. Call (831) 372-2242 or visit www.theworkspg.com.

Big Sur pioneers subject of lecture

THE HISTORIAN at Post Ranch Inn, Soaring Starkey, gives a free talk about one of Big Sur's founding families Tuesday, March 19, at Sunset Center's Carpenter Hall.

Titled, "The Post Ranch family: One of Central California's First Homesteaders," the talk begins with the story of William Brainard Post, an explorer and entrepreneur who arrived in America in 1848 when he was just 18, married a woman of Costanoan descent and two years later took out a claim on 160 acres in Big Sur. Within a generation, the Post family had expanded its holdings to 1,500 acres and built a handsome red cabin which still stands today across Highway 1 from the entrance of the Post Ranch Inn and Spa.

Starkey, a longtime Big Sur resident and one time Cone Peak fire lookout who has worked at the Post Ranch Inn since it opened in 1992, will share stories she learned firsthand from the resort's founder, the late Billy Post. The great-grandson of the family patriarch, he passed away in 2009.

The talk starts at 7 p.m. Carpenter Hall is located at Ninth and Mission. Call (831) 624-2811 or visit carmelpubliclibraryfoundation.org.

Van Gogh's birthday, Silvestri's move, Cogley's contest, and Rio's new grub

CASANOVA RESTAURANT will celebrate Vincent Van Gogh's 160th birthday Saturday, March 30, at 7 p.m. with a special dinner in the venue that's also home to the famous painter's dinner table, which Walter Georis found during a trip to Paris years ago and brought back to the Carmel institution he and his siblings own.

Inspired by Van Gogh's life and work, executive chef Johnny de Vivo developed a special five-course birthday dinner that reflects not only Van Gogh's artistic contributions, but the restaurant's "dedication to fresh and local ingredients and culinary creativity."

Van Gogh's birthday dinner will begin with Tartelette au Tournesol, sunflower tart with rhubarb, absinthe mascarpone and dandelion crisp, followed by Le Crabe Renversé, upside-down crab with artichoke and green garlic remoulade. Retour de la Chasse of venison sausage, red cabbage, Vidalia onions and walnut cream will come next, then a palate cleanser of absinthe and lemon sorbet, and finally, Les Mangeurs de Pommes de Terre — three variations of potato with braised lamb shank and carrots.

Beverage director Jeff Birkemeier selected a special wine to pair with each course, of course, and the price per person is $75, with an additional $40 per person for the wine pairings.

The birthday feast will be served in the Harvest Room, where the table will be on display. (The rest of the time, the table, at which Van Gogh took his meals at the Auberge Ravoux during the summer before his death in 1890, sits in an intimate, private alcove toward the center of the restaurant and can be reserved for special dinners.)

To make reservations for the birthday dinner, call (831) 625-2727. To learn more, visit www.vangoghstable.com. Casanova is located at Mission and Fifth in Carmel, and de Vivo runs the kitchen there and at sister restaurant La Bicyclette at Dolores and Seventh.

■ Silvestri heads downtown

A small two-level spot on Seventh Avenue west of San Carlos Street that was approved for a wine-tasting room which never opened was recently purchased by Willow Creek Ranch, LLC, which also owns Silvestri Vineyards in Carmel Valley.

On Wednesday, the Carmel Planning Commission approved Silvestri's application to remodel the interior and open a tasting room there. (Once it's up and running, Silvestri — which is owned and operated by film composer Alan Silvestri — will close its room in Carmel Valley Village. According to state law, wineries are only permitted to have one offsite tasting room.)

The new tasting room will join a cluster of other nearby wine-oriented venues, many of which participate in the Carmel Chamber of Commerce's Wine Walk-by-the-Sea.

■ Vote for Cogley

Justin Cogley, executive chef of Aubergine restaurant at Monte Verde and Eighth, is in the running for Food & Wine magazine's The People's Best New Chef 2013 award, and his bosses are encouraging everyone to vote for him.

"We need your vote, your readers' votes, your friends and families' votes, and votes of strangers you meet on the street!" announced Melissa Welles, who handles public relations and marketing for owner David Fink.

Voting ends Monday, March 18, and multiple votes from a single computer won't count, she said. Go to www.foodandwine.com/peoples-best-new-chef/california to weigh in.

■ New Figge

Figge Cellars, which has a tasting room inside the Winfield Gallery on Dolores Street in downtown Carmel, announced several new releases that owner Peter Figge has described as "one of our strongest lineups in years."

More information on the latest offerings — 2011 River Road Chardonnay, 2011 Pelio Pinot Noir, 2010 Paraiso Pinot Noir, 2010 Pelio Pinot Noir and 2007 Sycamore Flat Syrah — can be found in the tasting room, as well as online at www.figgecellars.com.

■ And new from the Pisoni family

Gary Pisoni and the other members of his winemaking family are celebrating releases from their Soberanes

Vineyard — named for a member of the 1769 Portolá expedition — producing Pinot Noir, Chardonnay and Syrah. Fruit from the vineyard was used in the Santa Lucia Highlands Cuvées and 2012 Lucy Rosé of Pinot Noir, as well as wines produced under their Lucia label.

New Lucia wines from the Soberanes Vineyard, all from the 2011 vintage, include Chardonnay, described as having a "laser-like focus of mineral and citrus-driven notes;" Pinot Noir, which "is broad with supple tannins but still light on its feet with some hints of Bing cherry, almond skin and mineral notes;" and Syrah, which is "very expressive and complex with subsequent aromatics of baking spice, Earl Grey tea, boysenberry and then more and soup to nuts

more violets."

The new Santa Lucia Highlands Cuvées, also 2011 vintages, include Chardonnay, which they describe as full-bodied, vibrant and crisp, with notes of white peach and pineapple, and Pinot Noir, which is "loaded with red fruits, cherry, ripe pomegranate, raspberry and slight baking spice."

The 2012 Lucy Rosé of Pinot Noir, light strawberry in color and juicy, "starts off with an inviting summer feeling of near-ripe watermelon, wild strawberry, peach and floral notes."

The Pisonis also decided to change how they release their wines, focusing on the vineyards from which they are produced. From now on, Soberanes Vineyard wines and Santa Lucia Highlands Cuvées will be released in the spring, Garys' Vineyard wines in the summer, and Pisoni Vineyards wines in the fall.

To learn more, including where to buy the latest vintages, visit www.lucivineyards.com.

■ Bain among distinguished alumni

Marietta Bain, who owns Fandango Restaurant in Pacific Grove with her husband, Pierre, was named a distinguished alumna of Monterey Peninsula College at an awards dinner Friday, March 8, at the Marriott.

Rio reveals new menu

Rio Grill executive chef Cy Yontz, known for his distinctive culinary style that capitalizes on the flavors and ingredients of the Southwest, has added new dishes to menus at the Crossroads restaurant.

At lunch, diners will now find double-smoked Baker's Bacon with pear tomatoes, corn, jalapeno and pigweed salad for $8.95; grilled flatbread with roasted garlic, Point Reyes bleu cheese, chipotle-onion marmalade and arugula for $9; the RG Chop-Chop Salad with corn, crispy black-eyed peas, Cotija Cheese and smoked avocado-buttermilk dressing for $11.25; and lamb meatball sliders with house-pulled mozzarella, pesto and blistered chilies for $12.25.

New small bites to feed visitors at the bar include fried truffled black-eyed peas, oxtail sopes with tomatillo-arbol salsa, carnitas-stuffed cheddar biscuits, and candied swine Jolly Rancheros.

At dinner, new from the grill is New York Steak with house-made steak sauce, hominy gratin and smoked cauliflower for $37; from the oven is Sea Bass Veracruzana with capers, olives, tomatoes and cilantro rice for $26; and for fans of slow cooking: beer-braised red chile short rib with green chile-cheddar mashed potatoes and Mexican street corn for $25.95.

The restaurant is also launching Wine'd up Mondays, with wines available for half price on Monday nights.

For more information or reservations, call (831) 625-5436 or visit www.riogrill.com. Rio Grill is open daily from 11:30 a.m.

Paella in the backyard

The Holman Ranch Tasting Room hosts another class in its In Your Backyard Series at 6 p.m. Wednesday, March 27, which also happens to be National Paella Day. Appropriately, chef Brandon Miller of Mundaka Restaurant will show guests how to make the dish.

Miller will offer tips and secrets for making traditional Spanish paella as participants sip Holman Ranch wine in the tasting room at 19 E. Carmel Valley Road in C.V. Village. Reservations are required and cost $25 per person, which includes the class, wine tasting and small bites. A portion benefits the Alzheimer's Association, too. To reserve, call (831) 659-2640.

Rocky Point reopens

Purchased by Pebble Beach residents Peter and Grace Wang last December for $4.75 million, Rocky Point restaurant reopened this week, with former Casanova sous chef Christophe Bony running the kitchen.

The new owners and Bony hope to resurrect the restaurant, which for decades has been a destination for its scenic beauty but was often condemned as uninspired when it came to the food. It underwent an interior remodel while closed, and the menu was revamped.

According to a report on KSBW, more than 200 customers showed up for lunch Monday, overwhelming the kitchen and floor staff, and the Wangs decided to shut down for another couple of days to ensure everyone was adequately trained.

Fifi's wine tasting

Due to a scheduling conflict that required the cancellation of a tasting set for March 7, guests at Fifi's March 16 wine tasting will have the benefit of sampling even more offerings. Twenty-two will be showcased, spanning varietals and the globe, though many are Chardonnays and Pinots Noir from Burgundy and California.

Add to them a few sparkling wines and Champagnes, as well as the occasional Rhone and Cabernet, and the lineup contains a nice variety.

Held from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., the tasting costs $35 per person, $20 of which is refunded for those who purchase at least a case.

Reservations are recommended by calling (831) 372-5325. Fifi's Bistro Cafe is located at 1188 Forest Ave. in Pacific Grove. www.fifiscafe.com

Hofsas House helps food bank

Chefs, a confectioner and a winery will team up for the third annual fundraiser for the Food Bank for Monterey County hosted by the Hofsas House Thursday, March 28, from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Carmel City Councilwoman Carrie Thies and her family own the hotel on San Carlos Street north of Fourth Avenue, and they hold the event there each year.

Chefs slated to participate include Brandon Miller of Mundaka and Dory Ford of Aqua Terra Culinary, with additional treats provided by Sweet Elena's Bakery and Cafe, Wild Thyme Deli and Lula's Chocolates.

Ventana Vineyards wines will be poured, and Terrence Ferrell will perform.

Tickets are $50 per person and can be reserved by calling Thies at the Hofsas House at (831) 624-2745 or emailing carrie@hofsashouse.com.

pair and their baby, and sure enough, the man returned to the car, dropped off an item and then walked away, with Lightfoot following him back to a jewelry store, she recounted. There, she detained and questioned them.

After establishing these were the suspects she had been seeking, she prepared to arrest them and take them to Monterey County Jail, but she also had to figure out what to do with the 2-year-old baby boy they had been pushing in a stroller.

"That was the day of the police funeral, so we were short-handed," Lightfoot recalled, referring to the massive memorial for slain Santa Cruz Police officers Elizabeth Butler and Butch Baker. "So we called the sheriff's office, and a deputy came and pushed the stroller from Dolores and Sixth up the hill to the Carmel police station," where the child's grandmother picked him up.

Police had the couple's car towed and then searched it, finding the $9,450 ring that Sixth Avenue Jewelers said they shoplifted, according to Lightfoot. A consensual search of their Monterey home yielded the two pairs of boots and the Dr. Seuss picture.

"We also found other evidence and property belonging to others — checks and ID information," Lightfoot said. "Basically, we got everything that we needed, and they were arrested for burglary, conspiracy and cashing other people's checks."

Wets and Drys May Soon Lock Horns Again

Citizens of several of the supervisorial districts of Monterey county will file a petition with the Board of Supervisors at its April meeting to call an election to ascertain if saloons may be allowed to open to a limited extent.

The men who are promoting this movement desire to open about one-third of the saloons which were closed two years ago. They are willing that the supervisors increase the present license and make whatever restrictions they may deem necessary.

This move on the part of the "wets" will certainly arouse the "drys," who will not only oppose the opening of places already closed, but will try to close those now open.

Flanders, Murphy Fed Up

For a long time, longer than they care to think about, Paul Flanders and Frank Murphy have been president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the Manzanita Club. As officers they have been the ones on whose shoulders the jobs of feeds and parties have fallen.

As time wore on they got more and more fed up with the job of feeding, so they cooked up a plan whereby they would lose their jobs. They decided to bankrupt the club, then surely they would be impeached (or otherwise relieved of their duties.) At the dinner Tuesday night, the matter of electing officers came up, and Paul Flanders and Frank Murphy happily announced that not only was the club's sock empty, but that they owed money.

Consternation reigned among the members. What to do with these miscreants who plunged Carmel's oldest and swankiest club into the abyss of debt? The members thought and pondered, suggesting and discarding various punitive schemes until they lit upon exactly the right measure. Unanimously and in a body they reelected Paul Flanders and Frank Murphy to the offices of president and secretary-treasurer — permanently.

The Planning Commission Goes Shopping

The Planning Commission last night grabbed its market basket and went shopping, given a blank — but unsigned — check by the City Council, which had earlier asked that the Commission evolve a capital outlay plan for the city based upon the General Plan.

The Council's interest is not mere academic inquisitiveness. The 3% hostelry tax has commenced to pour money into the city's coffers, money which can be spent only on the accomplishment of elements of the General Plan, and by the budget sessions in August, the Council is going to have to own a program providing for the allocation of perhaps $75,000 in the first year, and increments of about $50,000 for every year thereafter.

All Alone By Telephone with 50,000,000 Others

Dave Muir, Pacific Telephone manager, has advised us that, commencing Saturday, 31 March, we can all start dialing our own long distance calls to more than 50 million telephones throughout the continental United States and Canada.

If you have the time, the money, and that many friends, you will commence by dialing "1," which connects you to the Direct Distance Dialing equipment, then phone the area code, then the number itself, which will require another 10 numbers. For instance, to call San Francisco, dial "1," then the area code, "415," then the number itself, which might be "457-5364." Without a pause, that goes 14154575364.

Citizen changes to Hatton freeway to be aired

The latest developments in negotiations between Caltrans and Assemblyman Sam Farr's coalition regarding the proposed $25 million Hatton Canyon Freeway will be revealed next week.

About 14 months ago, Farr, who was not pleased with much of the freeway design, developed a four-point plan which targeted the mouth of Carmel Valley, lowering the profile of the freeway, redesign of Rio Road and landscaping, as primary concerns of the design. Now, after several monthly meetings between Farr, residents, businesspeople, local politicians and Caltrans, substantial headway has been made in the freeway's design, according to Fred Keeley, Farr's chief of staff.

Water district urges voluntary water saving

"Voluntary water conservation" are the watchwords for the peninsula, according to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board as dry weather continues and its $660,000 conservation kit distribution program receives unanimous approval. The kits contain low-flow showerheads, toilet dams to reduce water use per flush and faucet restrictors. The entire program is estimated to cost the district about $16 per kit.

Officials said the district hopes to save about 10 percent in water use, which could help with reducing the impact of the dry conditions.

Editorial

Those who can't remember the past

IN 1787, George Washington uttered a sentence that, because it wasn't heeded, foretold the terrible catastrophes of the 20th century.

"To be prepared for war," our first president said, "is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."

Washington wasn't speaking of countries ruled by dictators and tyrants, of course. When they make war preparations, wars invariably follow — because they start them. But democracies abhor war and avoid it whenever possible, and their yearning for peace can be so powerful it leads them to grief.

That was definitely true in France and England in the days before World War I, as Germany prepared to launch the offensives that would lead to the slaughter of millions in Belgium and Northern France.

Believing his country's military superiority would bring quick victories that would humble his adversaries and give him hegemony over Europe, and with leaders in London and Paris slow to challenge him, in 1914 Kaiser Wilhelm II set Europe on a course that would bring death and ruin on a scale the world had never seen.

The same dreadful scenario was repeated 25 years later, when France and England again allowed Germany, this time led by Adolf Hitler, to achieve a military advantage that unleashed his sense of personal destiny and invincibility. Both countries were too soft and weak to stand up to him, Hitler believed, and he came very close to being right. Once he got rolling, more than 50 million people had to die before Hitler could be stopped.

Thanks largely to American military strength and largesse, the world is a more peaceful place today. Germany and Japan, in particular, are no longer the profane, genocidal nations they were just 70 years ago. But has human nature changed? Are wars no longer something to fear? Hardly. In fact, you'd think that the lessons of World War I and World War II were so obvious, everyone would be fully aware by now that military weakness among democracies and free nations leads to disaster when other countries decide to attack them.

Yet there was the California Coastal Commission, whose members apparently skipped history class in college because they were too busy studying social justice and community activism, deciding last week that the U.S. Navy must not be allowed to train its forces in the Pacific Ocean because the technology used by the Navy to detect hostile submarines involves sonar, which (so the members of the coastal commission believe) can injure whales.

Forget for a moment the human cost of war. What about the cost to the environment?

In World War I, vast stretches of Northern Europe were turned from verdant forests and fields into grotesquely barren landscapes as millions of high-explosive artillery shells, mortars and hand grenades were detonated in an effort to dislodge entrenched forces. Poison gas was deployed over wide areas, machine guns were fired until their barrels threatened to melt, and flamethrowers were blasted into thousands of trenches and redoubts from Verdun to Ypres. Meanwhile, from the North Sea to the North Atlantic, at least 10,000 ships and submarines were sent to the bottom by bombs and torpedoes.

While all that was going on, where do you think the plants and animals went to hide?

In World War II, the scale was even more vast. As humans slaughtered each other with advanced weaponry in the air, on land and at sea, does anybody think they carefully avoided disturbing the habitats of shrubs, snails and seals?

Yet, coastal commissioners who favor marine mammals over military training for U.S. forces demonstrated a silly adherence to the exact sort of milquetoast pacifism that led directly to the ruin of many nations in the 1910s and 1940s, could have brought the destruction of the entire civilized world during the Cold War, and might very well do so again in the near future, thanks to the proliferation of nuclear weapons and the lunatics of various stripes who would like to use them.

What would the whales and dolphins have said if they'd had a chance to participate in the coastal commission hearing about U.S. Naval exercises in the Pacific Ocean?

Well, according to many of the humans who took part in those hearings, whales and dolphins are highly intelligent creatures with advanced communication skills and social organizations. Perhaps they are even smarter than we are.

If they are, they would have pleaded with the commissioners to let the U.S. Navy be the best it can be.

"When humans go to war, we suffer terribly, and so do all the creatures of the earth," the spokeswhale would have said. "If you want to protect the environment, you must remember that keeping the peace is the most important step of all. And we believe that, of all the nations, a strong America is the best force for peace."

Amen, brother whales.

Instead of criticizing the Navy and its leaders and trying to stand in their way, the coastal commissioners should have thanked them and urged them to double their efforts. Do we have to go through another world war before they embrace what is already a painfully obvious lesson?

'Probably would have been against the Interstates'

Dear Editor,
The trains we have now are "the best trains this state is ever going to have" (Editorial, March 8), as long as there are shortsighted naysayers like you around to keep anything better from being built.

You probably would have been against Eisenhower's Interstate Freeway System back in the 1950s; can you imagine the costs, and they used federal funds to build it, oh my, the sky is falling.

Two former presidents

Dear Editor,
Your story about the visit by former Presidents George W. Bush and Bill Clinton to the Cannery Row nut shop (Feb. 15) got me thinking that it would be nice if you would not partake in the adoration of an impeached person who was subsequently convicted of perjury, and another who answered "30,000 more or less" when asked about the number of civilian deaths in Iraq after our invasion.

It is no wonder there is so much unrest around the earth, given the lack of respect for the rule of constitutional law at the very top of our government.

The question on everyone's lips: #whatsjoelivernoisupportingnow?

BECAUSE I'M on Facebook and Twitter, it's important that I declare my supreme patriotism.

That's why I'm proud to publicly state my support for the Second Amendment. In fact, I support all of the terrific American amendments, especially the 21st. The government can take my wormwood absinthe when they pry it from my cold, dead fingers.

My support for the amendments is so great that I believe all true Americans have a constitutional obligation to spell out the numbers whenever they refer to a specific amendment. I support the Declaration of Independence, the Emancipation Proclamation and all of the appropriate manifestos and treaties. On special days in February I will heartily support the "I Have a Dream" speech.

I also support the Titles of Nobility, Robert's Rules of Order and the Laws of Nature. I also strongly support the flag, the pledge and most of the Ten Commandments.

I support the California Constitution, and I would support the Carmel City Charter, if it had one.

In fact, I'll support the Carmel charter anyway, even though it is a general-law city, because that's the type of supportive gentleman I am.

Declaring support for important tenets on social media platforms has become a crucial element to modern civilization. Without social media, nobody would know what every-

How to measure success, Carmel style

"Would you tell me, please, which way I ought to go from here?"

"That depends a good deal on where you want to get to," said the Cat.

"I don't much care where—" said Alice.

"Then it doesn't matter which way you go," said the Cat.

"—so long as I get SOMEWHERE," Alice added as an explanation.

"Oh, you're sure to do that," said the Cat, "if you only walk long enough."

— Alice in Wonderland, Lewis Carroll

By JASON BURNETT,
Mayor, Carmel-by-the-Sea

AS THE Cat in "Alice in Wonderland" points out, the path you take doesn't matter as long as you don't care where you end up or how long it takes. Organizations generally, and governments in particular, often don't spend enough time defining success — where they want to get to — and spend too much time carefully counting how many steps they've taken, even if those steps don't lead to a desired result.

Governments can very easily tell their communities various measures of inputs into a process — how many steps we've taken. We can tell you how many meetings we've held, how much money we've spent. If you tell me you want city streets to be in better shape, I could answer by telling you how much we've spent on road repair or what type of asphalt we use. I could tell you how many people are on staff and how we use outside contractors for larger street repairs.

A somewhat more sophisticated answer is to tell you about outputs — how far we've gone. I could tell you how many blocks have been repaved in the past year. We could count the number of potholes that have been filled. None of these answers would be very helpful, because they all identify the inputs into street repair, or the outputs of street repair rather than focusing on the outcome that matters — the quality of the streets in this example.

It is usually easier to measure inputs into a process, somewhat harder to measure outputs from a process, but it is almost always better to measure outcomes that actually matter to the community.

The Carmel-by-the-Sea City Council, city hall, and the entire city organization are undergoing a transformation in how we define, measure and manage towards success. We are moving from a focus on inputs and outputs to a focus on outcomes. On Tuesday, the city council will review and refine the performance measures for each department that reflect the outcomes of key interest and importance to the council and the community.

We need your help. Measuring performance is managing for results — from the outcome, or customer, perspective. They are primary measures of quality from a customer's point of view and may include reliability, accuracy, courtesy, competence, responsiveness and completeness associated with the product or service provided. What are the outcomes body thinks about everything. Where would we be as a nation if I didn't know what you support?

Just this morning I encountered a Facebook friend who declared her support for small businesses, another who professed his support for Samsung products, and yet another who bravely posted support for a local car dealer. I was proud to count them all as friends.

As for myself, I support our troops in far-flung nations, our peace officers in far-flung neighborhoods and the Girl Scouts wherever they're selling cookies.

I support the United Way, the mission of Rotary Clubs and the latest Sierra Club campaign.

Many of my friends support religious principles in supportive sanctimonious terms. I'm right there with them, which is why I also support the Vatican, the Ecclesiology, the Temple Center and the Majavastu, just as I support funny cat videos and colorful wildlife photographs.

A writer of my stature must always be on the alert for the next thing I can support, which is why I support many of the things my friends support. Whenever possible, I always "like" their posted support of innovative Kickstarter campaigns or their vigorous support for cheese-making techniques and craft beers.

Supporting and liking stuff on social media is a big job, but I'm happy to do it. It must be satisfying for people who are actually doing something with their lives to know they have my support.

That's why I support the Arab Nation, the Syrian rebels and whatever righteous thing is going on these days in Mogadishu.

I support education and I support teachers. I support reading programs so that future generations will be able to read what I support.

I've thought long and hard about the things I am willing to support. It turns out I am quite the supportive guy. My support is so extensive that I happily support support groups.

But I don't support Congress. I might be easy with my support, but I'm not an idiot.

He told off his teacher in kindergarten and has never regretted it

IT MIGHT sound like hyperbole, but Hugo Gerstl saved my life. I went to see this noted Monterey attorney when two business partners stabbed me in the back and I was at my wit's end. After 15 minutes of talking with Hugo, I had a sense that everything would be fixed, and it was. An arbitrator induced the miscreants to pay for their sins.

Great Lives

By TONY SETON

Hugo in no way fits the traditional image of an attorney. He is boisterous and funny, and he wears his heart on his sleeve. That's probably a result of his upbringing. His father escaped from Austria after the Anschluss and came to the United States.

"My dad opened a delicatessen in the worst district of Baltimore, but went broke there. So on the heels of bankruptcy or whatever, he decided to take his last few bucks, buy a '46 Ford, take the family in it, and off we went to Los Angeles." Hugo was 5 years old at the time.

His contentiousness surfaced in kindergarten. "I was reading, and the teacher wanted me to be in the regular little group of kids talking. I wanted to read. And she said, 'Well, why is that? You think you're smarter than everybody else?' And I said, 'Yes.' And then she went on and on and on. And I told her, 'Why don't you just shut your big mouth?' That did not go down well." His parents were called to the school, to get their son, and Hugo was sent to his room. "I spent the entire afternoon listening to 'Portia Faces Life,' 'Jack Armstrong,' the 'All-American Boy,' and similar soap operas.

I had a ball. At the end of the day, I heard my parents actually laughing in the bedroom that I had the gumption to tell the teacher that. But they made me write a letter of apology to the teacher. So I wrote, 'Dear Miss Piper: I'm sorry I told you to shut your mouth. You can open it any time you want.'"

At 12, Hugo knew that he didn't want to work in a delicatessen on his feet 14 hours a day, and was weighing whether he should be a rabbi, a foreign correspondent or a lawyer. "I had my first foray into the publishing business. I was typing up a five-page neighborhood newspaper, which I was typing on many carbons, and I would sell the single sheet thing for a nickel apiece. I made money."

Music was important in the Gerstl household. "I went into piano, and I took about eight or nine years of classical piano. And then when I was 16, I was working in a pickle factory. At that time, you put pickles in a jar, you smashed the jar down. The first day on the job, the pickle jar broke and sliced my finger off. Not fun. At that time, I remember I was playing the Rachmaninov C Minor concerto."

At 16, Hugo also formed his first band, and a year or so later, "we recorded our first record, which was the first of 75 commercially released records we had. Three of them ultimately went gold. It was a nice way to make a living. We had 'Express Yourself,' 'Do Your Thing' and 'Love Land,' the Watts 103rd Street Rhythm Band." He was partners with Charles Wright — "we were color blind and we were religion blind" — and they are still close friends today.

Why didn't he stay in music? Why did he go into law? "My parents had already drummed that into me to be a doctor, be a lawyer. Well, you know what a lawyer is? A nice Jewish boy who can't stand the sight of blood."

So he became a lawyer and served four years in the Air Force, during which time he was stationed in Turkey along with a good friend who would later be his law partner for a couple of decades. Back in the United States and out of the service, Hugo thought Monterey would be a great place to practice, and he was right.

"In '96, I decided to retire from law, make my fortune opening up a publishing company, which subsequently morphed into a food and publishing company. By the end of five years, I not only found that I had lost everything, but I was $873,000 in debt, which was more money than I ever heard of in my life. So at the ripe young age of 60, I came back to the full-time practice of law, and it saved my bacon."

Hugo is still writing and publishing, and loving his life. In large part because he married Lorraine. He made her a vow. He said, "Everything I do — everything I do will be designed with one thing in mind, to make you happy. I will make every day a honeymoon, a birthday, the beginning of the world and the last day of our life."

And that's how Hugo has lived his life, nearly 30 years later.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. that matter most to you as a customer of city services? If you are a business owner, it is time to receive or modify your business license or other permits? If you are a resident, is it public safety response time? Quality of streets? Cleanliness of parks and the beach? Health of our urban forest?

We've made good progress in moving away from a reactionary management style where our highest priority is simply reacting to the latest phone call or email complaint, to a proactive management style using these performance measures and a policy planning system. It is already producing results. Standard and Poor's recently rated the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea's pension obligation bond AA+, in part due to the city's use of performance measures and a clearly defined policy planning and management system.

The city council, in setting its annual goals, developed key initiatives. Many of the key initiatives call for updating key policy plan documents used to articulate the vision for the city and to set a standard for future expectations. This year, we will review the Forest Management Plan and Shoreline Management Plan which are important documents for preserving those assets for generations to come. We also will develop a Technology Plan to create the framework for moving the city forward with e-government solutions and additional automated ways for folks to more easily interact with and get information from the city. The city is updating its contract with the nonprofit operator of the Sunset Center, and both sides are discussing increased use of performance measures to focus on achieving results.

We encourage and look forward to community input and involvement in these important planning efforts. Please come to city hall this Tuesday to share your thoughts on performance measures — and what outcomes — matter most from your point of view as a customer of the city.

ny used a retired "attack dog" named Wolfie, owned by a Pacific Grove man, on duty and for the fundraising efforts, which included public appearances and selling $20 stuffed "Wolfie dolls" that reportedly benefited the K9 program.

"I know they're not as organized as they should be for purposes of this fundraiser," Monterey County Sheriff Scott Miller said after the event, which was held at the Perry House in Monterey last October. "Our involvement is limited — we are accepting donations. We disavow any relationship other than accepting donations, and we did not cosponsor any event."

Miller told Perez then that he wouldn't accept money from the fundraiser until adequate bookkeeping was provided. Perez eventually cut a check to SAC for $1,241 in January.

The website for ESA, which also provided security at the National Steinbeck Center, Old Town Salinas and Rabobank, has been taken offline, and Perez' BSIS license as a private patrol operator is set to expire at the end of May. He did not return a call from The Pine Cone.

TRADEWINDS PICKED BY FORBES AS ONE OF COUNTRY'S BEST SMALL HOTELS

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

IT'S TUCKED away on one of downtown Carmel's quietest streets, but the Tradewinds inn on Mission near Third is one of the United States' best small hotels, according to the 2013 Forbes Travel Guide.

The inn's owner, Susan Stilwell, whose father built it in 1959, was honored along with other luminaries of the hospitality industry at a Forbes banquet in Beverly Hills Feb. 26.

"For a small hotel, it's quite a distinction," Stilwell said. The hotel drew the attention of the Forbes travel guide because one of its editors, Mica Hill, has a home in Carmel, she explained. "They also did an anonymous visit we didn't know anything about," she said.

The design style of Tradewinds Carmel is not what you might expect in this pretty tree-lined village with upscale shops, art galleries and cozy cafes flanked by English cottage gardens, Mediterranean-style villas and a ruggedly stunning coastline," Forbes Travel writer Debra Shigley offered. But its "curb appeal has an understated Frank Lloyd Wright quality to it," while the interior "evokes a Polynesian escape, with its bamboo detailing, palms and rustic stone exterior," she added.

"Our guests love the firepit and the meditation garden in the courtyard," Stilwell said. "At night we light the torches and the fire and it's just beautiful."

She described the hotel's theme as "Asian zen" and said it was developed by her father, Richard Catlin, who built the Tradewinds after living in Japan for seven years.

Shigley raved about the Tradewinds' 28 guest rooms, which were redone by famed hotel designer Charles Gruell in 2004. And she loved the hotel's "lavish" continental breakfasts.

She also recommended the Tradewinds for its location near Carmel's "boutiques, art galleries and delicious food shops," not to mention its proximity to the beach and 17 Mile Drive. She also said, "the location is ideal if you want to spend the day at the Carmel Valley's numerous tasting rooms and then head back to Carmel-by-the-Sea for dinner."

Shigley also observed that "there's never a bad time to visit Carmel" with its "mild climate, bounty of local festivals, world-class events and excellent wineries. Early spring and late fall offer mild temperatures and shoulder-season perks. With the exception of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am in early February, winter guests can count on enjoying solitary beach walks under crisp blue skies between Pacific rainstorms."

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE of CARL JEFFREY FEHLANDT Case Number MP 21000

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of CARL JEFFREY FEHLANDT.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by VERENA BOYLAN in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

The Petition for Probate requests that VERENA BOYLAN be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held on in this court as follows:

Date: April 17, 2013
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept.: 16

Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
