DISGRUNTLED NEIGHBOR SUES CITY TWICE, CLAIMS HOUSES VIOLATE HER RIGHTS

By MARY SCHLEY

CLAIMING THE city allowed Denny LeVett to build a two-story house on a lot at Lincoln and Fifth because it would benefit from the property taxes, and thereby ruined the value of her property next door, Jacqueline Simonelli filed suit against the city in federal court in March. And on Monday, she sought an injunction in Monterey County Superior Court to halt its construction.

At Tuesday's Carmel City Council meeting, city attorney Don Freeman said LeVett and his group had agreed to cover the costs of the legal fight over the home, which is being built by Chris Tescher.

A taking?

According to city documents, designer John Mandurrigo's plans include a garage 10 feet off the property line, a second story 22 feet from Simonelli's property line to the west of LeVett's 55-foot-wide lot, and a height 2.5 feet lower than the allowed maximum, at 21.5 feet. The 450-square-foot second story, with a balcony and French doors, constitutes 25 percent of the house's overall floor area. All the dimensions of the house abide by city rules.

But Simonelli argued the house was too large, looming over her home at Monte Verde and Fifth, cutting out the sun and intruding on her privacy. After the city council approved the project despite her objections in February, she filed suit in U.S. District Court March 20, arguing the council "gave property to a private party — a private real estate developer, a view of the ocean — it increased the value of the developer's property, while at the same time increasing the tax revenue to the city."

And that decision "substantially diminished the value of the Simonelli property because the two-story building (with a second-story balcony for the purpose to get a view of the ocean) looms over the Simonelli property and infringes on Simonelli's right to privacy, and rights to solar access, air and light," the lawsuit says.

The approval of LeVett's house violated the municipal code and design guidelines pertaining to privacy, light and air, as well as mass and bulk, she alleged.

One house is already under construction at Lincoln and Fifth, and a second one is also approved. A neighbor of the projects, Jacqueline Simonelli, claims in two lawsuits that they violate many of her constitutional rights.

When you find out your colleague was a spy

By PAUL MILLER
Tenth in a series

LIKE EVERY other American born since 1950, I was raised on some very basic and universally acknowledged notions of our country's history.

Near the top of the list of things written in stone was that the McCarthy era was a shameful period of paranoid witchhunting and blacklisting based on fabricated or imagined allegations, and that the man it was named for, former Wisconsin Sen. Joseph McCarthy, was one of our greatest villains — a man who saw communists everywhere he looked, and who publicly vilified hordes of perfectly innocent people and ruined their lives for no other reason than his own personal gratification.

What a surprise, then, to find out that one of the most prominent broadcasters of the McCarthy era, and a man I looked up to 25 years later when he was at the height of his career and I was just a kid hanging around the CBS newsroom, had actually been a spy

Dam removal gets final OK

By CHRIS COUNTS

A PLAN to route construction traffic from the San Clemente Dam removal project through Cachagua — which caused a furor last fall in the remote part of Carmel Valley — was officially laid to rest May 8 when the Monterey County Planning Commission unanimously approved the use of an alternate route.

The planning commission also gave the project the final approval it needed for work to begin in August on the largest dam removal project California has ever seen. The cost to taxpayers and Monterey Peninsula water customers will be about $83 million.

"This is a historic moment for the Carmel River, the community and the state," said Catherine Bowie, a spokeswoman for California American Water.

The decision was welcomed by Cachagua residents — who worried the project's construction traffic would seriously impact travel in their neighborhoods for three years — and environmental groups, whose members have argued for years that the presence of San Clemente Dam harms steelhead, red-legged frogs and the other flora and fauna. The dam, which belongs to Cal Am, is also seismically unsafe, and the state division of dam safety ordered it to Live music permits to expire, but licenses for chickens won't

By MARY SCHLEY

AFTER FLIRTING with the idea of rescinding the every-three-years renewal requirement for live music in the city's bars and restaurants, the Carmel City Council on Tuesday decided the permits should expire after 10 years. But the ordinance itself will be permanent.

The additional tweaking of the law added more time to an already protracted process that began early this year after planner Marc Wiener realized the law "allowing for the playing of music instruments and other live entertainment where alcoholic beverages are sold or served" had expired in November 2011. First adopted with a three-year sunset date in 2005, the ordinance was renewed in 2008, but its expiration in 2011 passed without anyone noticing.

The original law also required permits issued under it be renewed every three years, but the planning commission recommended the council adopt the law without an expiration date or a requirement that permits be renewed.

Trying to act quickly so that establishments with existing permits were not operating illegally, since the law technically wasn't in effect, the council approved the updated ordinance in March, only to have that action invalidated on a technicality. Last month, council members OK'd the first draft of the law again and were set to vote on its final adoption Tuesday, which would have made it effective in early June. (A stopgap emergency ordinance was also approved to cover the gap until the official law takes effect.)

But Carmel Residents Association President Barbara Livingston and CRA member Roberta Miller told the council Tuesday they are worried about restaurants and bars violating the existing ordinance by playing loud music late at night, and they urged the council to tighten it. Livingston also wondered what the "other live entertainment" the ordinance refers to could be.

"There could be strippers, belly dancers, whatever," she said. "This ordinance started out in a very sweet way: It was to provide soft, soothing music in restaurants and to provide a good dining

Claypole hangs self in jail

■ Dies after being taken off life support

By CHRIS COUNTS

NINE DAYS after allegedly stabbing a cab driver to death in a Monterey parking lot — and six days after hanging himself in his jail cell — Joshua Kannon Claypole of Big Sur, 20, was taken off life support. He was pronounced dead Thursday morning at a San Jose hospital.

Those who knew Claypole as a child and a young man seemingly full of promise struggled this week to understand how his life unravelled. One friend said his descent into drugs and alcohol came quickly, and attempts to help him were unsuccessful. Another tried to focus on the happy times they shared as children growing up down the coast. Some at the Esalen Institute — where Claypole spent much of his life — looked back and wondered what could have been done to offer him more support when it became clear his behavior was spinning out of control. Others simply expressed shock and numbness.

"I tried to reach him, but it was like he

To Lexie with Love

LEXIE'S NAME could have been Lovie. This little bundle of affection seems to know no bounds when it comes to lavishing her love on others, whether she knows them or not. Raised in Seattle by a couple utterly devoted to their dog, this charming Cavalier King Charles Spaniel likely has known only love.

Nine years ago, when her people embarked on their annual escape from the winter rainstorms of Seattle, to the more mild climate of Carmel, they felt certain Lexie would lead the way, forming their friendships for them.

"Give me a kiss and a cuddle, and I'm in heaven," is Lexie's mantra," her person says. "Used to mingling with other dogs, and sharing her love with perfect strangers, her beautiful looks and sweet personality took hold in this canine community."

Lexie is a graduate of "Pet Partners Therapy Animal

Program," a Bellevue-based organization founded in 1990, that trains volunteers and their pets for visits in hospitals, nursing homes, rehab centers and schools. She soothes, with her soft coat and silky ears, and inspires, with her beseeching brown eyes, during the pet therapy she practices in Pacific Grove, Carmel and Seattle.

Although Lexie loves people, she might be most partial to the 13-year-old cloth bone given to her as a puppy. She carts it from Carmel to Seattle and back like a beloved baby blanket.

Lexie also is particularly fond of the Cavalier crowd with whom she reunites at the annual Cavalier King Charles Spaniel Beach Party in Carmel. Hundreds of Cavaliers and their people attend every April to celebrate themselves and raise money for homeless animals. Lexie's person delights in distinguishing her from the others with ribbons and bows, and a few clown balloons at her collar. Lexie leaves them in place, just to please her person.

AUTHORS UNVEIL NEW BOOKS

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

TWO MONTEREY Peninsula authors sign copies of their new books Saturday, May 11.

A familiar voice in the local political arena, Lawrence Samuels will talk about his book, "In Defense of Chaos," at the Bay Park Hotel in Monterey.

Samuels examines the influence of chaos on politics, economics and human action. "Although chaos gets a bad rap, nothing could exist without the balancing act between chaos and order," he writes.

The event starts at 3 p.m. The hotel is located at 1425 Munras Ave.

A Monterey resident, Kathryn Streletzky will discuss her book, "River Run," at the Pilgrim's Way bookstore. Her book looks at the meaning of life and the mystery of death through eyes of a whitewater kayaker.

The event begins at 1 p.m. Pilgrims Way is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth.

Miniature pinchers no match for angry deer

By CHRIS COUNTS

GRACEFUL AND skittish, deer are commonly believed to be one of nature's more benevolent creatures. But after watching one attack her two small dogs in Pebble Beach April 29, Loni McCallum discovered they are also capable of inflicting serious injury.

McCallum was walking along 17 Mile Drive when the larger of her two dogs, a 14-pound miniature pinscher named King Tut, wandered a short distance up a service road that travels alongside the Monterey Peninsula Country Club golf course. The smaller dog, a 6-pound miniature pinscher named "Nefertiti," followed closely behind. Neither dog was on a leash.

Moments later, McCallum noticed a female deer and several fawns "at least a football field away." There was nothing unusual about the sight — until the deer turned and charged in her direction. In response, she desperately yelled to her dogs, "Run!"

King Tut heeded the call and quickly scurried away, she said. But Nefertiti froze, and the deer "jumped a creek," and began "trampling" the pint-sized pup. "It was the craziest thing I've ever seen," McCallum told The Pine Cone.

With little Nefertiti at the mercy of the deer's rampage, McCallum's motherly instincts kicked in, and she jumped into the fray.

"The deer kicked at me," recalled the woman, who sustained a separated shoulder. "She wanted to kill me."

With his owner in peril, King Tut sprang into action. Unfortunately, his determination was no match for the deer's powerful legs. "She kicked him clear across the golf course," McCallum said.

Four-pound Nefertiti, who barely escaped with her life after being attacked by a deer.

The Whip is inspired by the true story of a woman, Charlotte "Charley" Parkhurst (1812-1879) who lived most of her extraordinary life as a man in the old west. As a young woman in Rhode Island, she fell in love with a runaway slave and had his child. The destruction of her family drove her west to California, dressed as a man, to track the killer.

Charley became a renowned stagecoach driver for Wells Fargo. She killed a famous outlaw, had a secret love affair, and lived with a housekeeper who, unaware of her true sex, fell in love with her. Charley was the first known woman to vote in America in 1868 (as a man). Her grave lies in Watsonville, California.

New sentencing ordered in DUI crash that paralyzed teen

By PAUL MILLER

BECAUSE IT isn't clear whether the seven-year prison sentence handed to a former Pacific Grove High School senior was based upon a determination that he acted "willfully" when he drove drunk and crashed a car into a tree, paralyzing a classmate and injuring three other teenagers, an appeals court has ordered a new sentencing hearing for the driver, Aaron Corn.

In a decision that was remarkable for its very narrow legal basis, a three-judge panel of the California Sixth District Court of Appeal ordered the new sentencing hearing for Corn, who pleaded guilty in March 2011 to multiple charges after the February 2010 crash off Highway 68 that paralyzed 17-year-old Cheslie Hill.

The decision also doesn't suggest that Corn shouldn't get the same prison sentence again.

At his first sentencing hearing, Corn asked to be put on probation instead of being sent to prison. Hill also asked for leniency for the man who caused her injuries, telling Monterey County Superior Court Judge Russell Scott that putting Corn in prison wouldn't help.

"Prison would only change him for the worse," Hill said. "It's already been one year [in jail, awaiting trial], and prison would only do bad. He needs to make good."

'Prior record'

Corn, who was 18 at the time of the accident, also asked to be put on probation, arguing that he could do more good out of prison by helping educate young people about the dangers of driving drunk.

But prosecutors asked for a sentence of eight years in prison, not only because of the severity of the crash that paralyzed Hill, but because of Corn's prior record of alcohol abuse.

The county probation department also argued that his negligence on the night of the accident — drinking "five or six beers" between 1 a.m. and 3:30 a.m., taking a car without permission, driving without a license, and continuing to drive recklessly after the friends he was giving rides home begged him to slow down — was the same thing as willful behavior.

"In arguing for a prison sentence, the prosecutor made several references to the 'presumptions' that apply in a case involving great bodily injury to three victims," according to the appeals court, but did not specifically argue that he was ineligible for probation because he acted willfully.

Likewise, when he pronounced the sentence, Scott also did not say he believed Corn acted willfully or was ineligible for probation because he intentionally hurt his victims.

'A expectation of prison'

Instead, Scott cited Corn's history of alcohol abuse, saying he was "a young man who consciously disregarded the fact that he knows he blacks out when he drinks."

He also said that if one of the victims had died, "it probably would have amounted to murder."

And, while Scott said it had been "powerfully and persuasively" argued that some sentence other than prison should be imposed, he concluded that there's an "expectation in this day and age that a person who drinks, drives and permanently paralyzes another person will go to prison."

At the March 2011 hearing, Scott then concluded that Corn was "not a suitable candidate for probation" and sent him to prison for seven years and four months.

Citing all that, the appeals court said it was possible Scott's sentencing decision was based on his belief that Corn had acted willfully. A clearer record on that issue is needed, the appeals court said.

"In view of the circumstances of the case, including defendant's offense, his age, and the court's comments during the sentencing hearing, we determine that a remand for a new sentencing hearing is appropriate," the appeals court said.

There was no indication when the new sentencing hearing would take place.

Dametra reopens after legal battle forces lockout

By MARY SCHLEY

THE DRUMMING and singing were in full force at Dametra Cafe again this week, as diners packed the small Mediterranean restaurant on Ocean Avenue that was shut down last Wednesday after being unwittingly caught in the middle of a complicated and long-running battle over ownership of the building at Lincoln and Ocean.

The cafe, as well as a wine bar and another storefront in the same building, were suddenly closed May 1 after a judge issued an order demanding Constance Dudley hand over control of the property to the trust that includes her ex-husband, Paul Laub.

As a Monterey County Sheriff's deputy stood by, the locks were changed, the tenants were barred from entering, and the keys were handed over to the trust, which also includes attorney Andy Swartz and Breck Tostevin. The trust hired a guard from Uretsky Security to keep an eye on the building and make sure no one broke in.

The conflict involves control of the complex, with the trustees arguing they are the rightful owners, and Dudley disagreeing. A judge demanded in 2007 that she relinquish control to the trust; however, she has been fighting that order for the past six years.

Not taking a position on the legal battles over the building, Mayor Jason Burnett said he was simply glad to see the restaurant back in business. Dametra reopened Friday evening after owners Bashar Sneeh and Faisal Nimri signed a month-to-month lease with the trust, according to the trust's attorney, Tom Griffin.

Burnett commented, "I'm certainly grateful to all the parties involved for getting them back in business, because it doesn't make sense to harm their business or adversely affect their customers, and therefore Carmel, in what appears to be a landlord dispute."

Sneeh had called the mayor last week to see how the city might help the situation so they could reopen, according to Burnett. "And I advised him there wasn't anything official the city could do." But the mayor did ask city attorney Don Freeman how the city might encourage the parties involved to resolve issues enough to get the restaurant open, and two days after being locked out, Dametra was up and running.

Griffin said Dametra has an interim lease until a longer-term deal can be inked.

Burnett concluded, "What matters from a community perspective is that our successful businesses remain open and continue to serve our residents and visitors. And what Bashar has done with Dametra is phenomenal, and we hope he continues."

Big Sur biological field station hosts annual open house

THE LANDELS-HILL Big Creek Reserve in Big Sur opens its gates Saturday, May 11, offering the public of rare peak at a 3,800-acre biological field station that hosts 42 percent of all native plants in California.

Used primarily by researchers and students, the reserve will be open to the public from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Scientists will offer talks about the reserve, and hiking tours will be available.

Guests are encouraged to bring hiking shoes, snacks and water. Parking is limited to the pullout just south of the reserve gates.

Former food pantry president files lawsuit over comments to newspaper

By KELLY NIX

THE FORMER president of a Seaside food bank has filed a $5 million libel lawsuit over comments officials made to a local newspaper regarding the charity's closure.

Former St. Vincent de Paul Society's Food Pantry volunteer president Janet McPherson contends that officials with the Monterey Peninsula District Council of SVDP Society of the Diocese of Monterey and the National Council of the U.S. Society of SVDP libeled her when they made "false" statements to the Monterey County Herald implying she was responsible for the food pantry's closure in January.

According to McPherson's claim, officials said she "failed to file the correct paperwork," failed to attend meetings and "operated the organization without the proper non-profit status as required by the Internal Revenue Service."

Because of the statements, McPherson said she was removed as the president of the charity, which has since been reopened under a new name and management.

'$5M from each defendant'

As a result of the "false statements to the newspaper," according to McPherson's complaint, she "has suffered the loss of her reputation, shame, mortification and injury to her feelings, all to her damage in the total of $5,000,000 from each defendant."

The comments "clearly expose [McPherson] to hatred, contempt, ridicule and obloquy," according to her complaint, which cited two articles the Herald published in January and February of this year. The Herald is not listed as a defendant.

She contends officials made the comments "with malice, hatred and ill will" in an effort to "injure" McPherson, and that they "expressed a desire to get" her. She is also seeking punitive damages.

McPherson, who is black, said officials made the "false statements" after she complained about being a victim of racial discrimination. On Dec. 20, 2012, the interim president of St. Angela's Conference of St. Vincent de Paul Society, referred to only as "John Doe" in the lawsuit, referred to her as "colored," McPherson alleges.

"Mr. Doe stated that 'coloreds don't attend St. Angela's Church and that is why the board doesn't have any people who look like you,'" according to the suit, which McPherson filed pro se.

Doe continued to use the word on other occasions, according to McPherson, who said she filed a complaint about the incident but never received a response.

The Monterey Peninsula District Council of SVDP Society of the Diocese of Monterey is a division of a larger national organization and is not a part of the Diocese of Monterey, according to the local diocese.

The case is scheduled for a Oct. 29 hearing in a Monterey courtroom.

World War II bomber rides to be offered at Monterey airport

By KELLY NIX

IF YOU'RE a World War II aircraft enthusiast, being a passenger in an iconic B-17 bomber or a P-51 fighter plane is an experience you'll never forget.

And from May 15-17, World War II history buffs will have a chance to do just that when the Collings Foundation's Wings of Freedom Tour returns to the Monterey Peninsula Airport.

"Flying in these aircraft is absolutely amazing," Hunter Chaney, director of marketing for the Collings Foundation, which is behind the event, told The Pine Cone. "The experience is so moving and exciting you will never forget it."

Enthusiasts can reserve a 30-minute ride over the Monterey Peninsula in legendary B-17 or B-24 bomber — both of which were the backbone of the American air effort in World War II — for $425.

Fans will also have a chance to take a ride in a two-seat P-51C fighter plane that includes some "stick time." The cost is $2,200 for 30 minutes or $3,200 for one hour.

Being a passenger in the planes truly could be a once-in-a-lifetime experience, since the B-17, named the "Nine O Nine" is one of only eight in flying condition in the United States.

The B24J and P-51C are the sole remaining examples of their aircraft types currently flying.

For a much less expensive venture, adults can also explore the aircraft inside and out for $12. Admission for children 12 and under is $6.

Though World War II veterans can tour through the aircraft at no cost, Chaney said the number of World War II veterans they see at the events is dwindling. Still, those who do attend often bring their children or grandchildren.

"We still do get World War II veterans flying with us ... not as many as there were couple years back," he said. "A shame to see so many passing away now."

The presence of the aircraft in Monterey offers more than a thrill. They are also a reminder of the horrors of WWII, which resulted in the deaths of tens of millions of people.

"To read about World War II history, you might remember," Chaney said. "To experience World War II history, you never forget. And that is just what this is — an experience."

The planes will arrive at the Monterey airport at 2 p.m. Wednesday, May 15, and be at the Monterey Jet Center until noon on May 17. Hours of ground tours and display are 2 to 5 p.m. May 15; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. May 16; and 9 a.m. to noon on Friday, May 17. The flights experiences are normally scheduled before and after the ground tour times above.

If you have $425, you can take a 30-minute ride in this WWII-era B17 bomber, one of only eight in flying condition in the United States. The plane, dubbed the "Nine O Nine," will be at Monterey Peninsula Airport beginning May 15.

Charles Robert Hoffman

Raconteur, historian, athlete, tree-planter, lawyer, Charles Robert ("Bob") Hoffman died on March 18, 2012 at the age of 96 in his home in Pacific Grove, California, shortly before his 72nd wedding anniversary to his bride, Betty Hannah Hoffman.

Bob grew up almost a century ago in Easton, Pennsylvania. His father Paul Hoffman was born in Ribeauville, France, educated at the Swiss Polytechnique in Zurich, and later became chief engineer at Ingersoll-Rand. Paul Hoffman instilled in his son Bob a love of family, and French history, cuisine and wine. His mother, Margaret Shimer Burns, was the daughter of the late Porter W. Shimer and Elizabeth Sandt Shimer, both descended from early settlers to Northampton County, Pennsylvania. Both sides of the family arrived in the 1700's to establish farm homesteads, and later fought in the American Revolution and Civil War. Margaret Shimer Burns was a beloved resident of Pacific Grove from 1954 to 1979.

Bob graduated from Duke University and the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He became a "Philadelphia" lawyer at the firm of Hepburn & Norris and later worked at Philco Corporation's Legal Department. Bob struggled with his eyesight for many years and left the practice of law eventually for other pursuits. He credits a student at the Berkeley School of Optometry for solving his eyesight problem with prism lenses. Bob and Hannah lived in Berkeley, California for 22 years before retiring to the Monterey Peninsula in 1989.

Bob was a competitive tennis player into his late 70's. He once rallied in his youth with the famed tennis star Bill Tilden, one of his idols. Bob loved to read all of his life. As his eyesight failed again in later years with glaucoma, he listened avidly to books on tape from the Library of Congress and audio tapes provided by volunteers at the Pacific Grove Public Library.

Bob is survived by his wife Hannah, a widely published author, biographer and journalist who wrote such series as "Can This Marriage Be Saved" and "How America Lives" with the Ladies Home Journal. Bob is also survived by his son Clement and wife Barbara, son Bruce and wife Michelle, and daughter Nell and husband Bob. He leaves seven adoring grandchildren: Brooke Hannah Hoffman, Gregory Porter Hoffman, Katherine Ann Hoffman, Robert L Bonaparte II, Ian Alexander Bonaparte, Margaret Renee Leslie Bonaparte and James Porter Bonaparte.

The family extends its appreciation to Monterey CHOMP Hospice program and particularly to staff members Matt, Steve and John and also to his loving caregivers Joanne, Gloria, Elmar, Kristina, Erika and Aileen, all of whom helped him in the last hard mile of his life after he was diagnosed with mesothelioma.

A celebration of Bob's life was held on April 7, 2013 at the Sally Griffin Active Learning Center, Pacific Grove, California. Family and dear friends all spoke of how deeply Bob had touched their lives and hearts. Mr. Gerard Bechler of Patisserie Bechler provided such Alsatian specialties as quiche Lorraine and tart a l'oignon which were so close to Bob's heart. A beautiful mousse cake carried one of Bob's favorite quotations by Voltaire: "Il faut cultiver son propre jardin" (one must cultivate one's own garden.) Bob wrote in his memoirs, "It is possible to create an honorable life if one works hard enough at it." (A Backward Glance at the Social History of My Times" CR Hoffman, 1999). This is certainly the lesson he gave us all. Bob Hoffman will be dearly missed.

Rodney Ransome Allison

Monterey ~ Rodney Ransome Allison died of heart failure outside his home in Monterey on Wednesday morning, May 1. He was 69. Rod's mother, Sue Ransome, moved with Rod to Carmel from Belmont, CA in 1949 when Rod was five. He attended Peninsula schools, graduating from Carmel High in 1961. Two interests dominated Rod's life: the stage and Twelve Step recovery.

Rod's mother had been an actress with the Ziegfeld Follies and a dancer with the Fanchon and Marco troupe in the twenties and thirties. Going through his mother's scrapbooks when he was eight, Rod decided that acting was for him. He made his acting debut at the age of twelve at the Old Wharf Theater here in Monterey playing the singing role of Anna's son in The King and I. In the sixties Rod attended the Pasadena Playhouse and became immersed in Los Angeles area theater. Ultimately he decided against a full-time acting career. He returned to Monterey and joined CHOMP's Pharmacy Department where he was employed from 1971 through 1979. Rod became involved in local theater, performing at the Studio Dinner Theater, The Grovemont — later Pacific Repertory Theater, and others. He estimated that he appeared in more than 3,000 performances over the years. Rod appeared in commercials, industrial and medical films, and historical films including playing Walter Colton in a film made for the Stanton Maritime Museum.

Rod celebrated his recovery from alcohol and pill addiction "every day," giving credit to Beacon House and devoted participation in twelve step programs. He became a substance abuse counselor for Lackey's in Carmel, which later became Brightside. In 1986 Rod returned to CHOMP as a chemical dependence counselor in the hospital's Recovery Center. Over the years Rod helped thousands of alcoholics and addicts achieve recovery through his words and his example. He is beloved by fellow recovering addicts and alcoholics and their families for his humor, his listening, his humility, and his straight-forward counsel. He retired from CHOMP in 2010, but he never retired from helping others.

Rod's mother preceded him in death on November 1, 1996. Rod believed he was the last member of his family, but he discovered to his delight that he had two first cousins, Robert and Jim Ransome, Robert of Lodi, CA and Jim of El Dorado, CA. He enjoyed their relationship for the remainder of his life. Rod was a long-time member of the Screen Actors Guild. He was a member of the Carmel Valley Gem and Mineral Society. He was a regular at the former Garden Health and Fitness Club, now Fit U Monterey.

Rod's license plate frame said, It's My Car and I'll Sing If I Want To. He died in his car in his driveway listening to and no doubt singing along with, possibly improving on, Frank Sinatra.

Rod's life will be celebrated on Saturday, June 1 at twelve noon at Saint Dunstan's Church, 28003 Robinson Canyon Road, Carmel Valley: traveling east on Carmel Valley Road from Highway 1, Robinson Canyon is the first right past Mid-Valley Shopping Center. Go immediately over the bridge and Saint Dunstan's is on the left. In the spirit of the man we celebrate, shorts are recommended.

After 40 days on the run, fugitive's luck runs out

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

AFTER LEADING police on a wild chase through Big Sur, Palo Colorado Canyon and the Carmel Highlands last month, fugitive Dimitri Storm was finally captured May 7 in Berkeley, ending a 40-day manhunt.

Using the alias of James Prouty Rollston, the 42-year-old Storm was arrested for burglary. He was booked into Santa Rita Jail in Alameda County.

Before his arrest, Storm was last seen April 22 in San Mateo County, where a hitchhiker he picked up recognized him from news reports.

Storm arrived in Big Sur April 16 and soon landed in trouble. The next morning, he threatened a clerk at the Big Sur River Inn's General Store police said. Later the same day, while driving a stolen Lexus sedan from Carmel, he led police on a dangerous chase that appeared to end when he abandoned the vehicle up Palo Colorado Canyon along Garrapatos Road.

Fleeing on foot, Storm stole a Jeep Grand Cherokee and slipped past officers looking for him along Palo Colorado Road police said. He was able to reach the Carmel Highlands, where he abandoned the Jeep and disappeared.

Before arriving in Big Sur, Storm managed to evade authorities Santa Cruz and Sonoma counties, where he was wanted in connection with a string of robberies and car thefts dating back to March 31.

Anne Holliday

The Monterey Bay Area says goodbye to one of its favorite daughters: a courageous, charismatic champion whose proudest accomplishment second only to her children was sparing the Monterey Bay from supertankers in 1979-1980.

When you look at Monterey Bay, notice what you don't see: you don't see oil spills, evidence of past spills, the presence of supertankers, or a tanker port. And you never will. Before there was a marine sanctuary, before there was an aquarium, Anne arrived in Pacific Grove, CA in the late 70s when PG&E's plans to build an expanded supertanker port in Moss Landing were virtually a done deal. Those who fought it had given up. Having been the second woman to graduate from the Alinsky Institute of Community Organizing in Chicago in the late 60s, and with the help of a devoted band of concerned friends, Anne (Anne Bartee at the time) created the citizen's taskforce FOG (Friends of Grove) and successfully led a heroic campaign to stop PG&E from installing their port. It was a full-time job for exactly one year. Even then local representative Leon Panetta who would later as Secretary of Defense take down Osama Bin Laden could not defeat Anne Holliday in her efforts to thwart PG&E. The community literally crowned her with laurels. Without Anne's vision, fearless tenacity, imagination, and courageous leadership, the port would have disqualified the area from the sanctuary status that was signed into law by Congress in 1992. This is her enduring legacy. May she long be remembered for her spirited fight, for this gift to future generations.

Born 2/28/39 in Jefferson City, MO, Anne Foote Hutchison was the youngest of three children. Her father Robert Hutchison, "Hutch" was a newspaperman, and the family lived in Joplin, MO, Baltimore, MD, Asheville, NC, and Memphis, TN where Anne attended high school with Elvis Presley, and loved the rock-n-roll music of Jerry Lee Lewis.

In the late 60s Anne studied art history and museum curating at the Art Institute of Chicago. She specialized in early American photography. With her legendary eye for treasure, in 1977 she discovered a forgotten American hero of dance, design, painting, and ethnography named Hubert Julian Stowitts. She would devote the rest of her life and career to the adventure of becoming the world's leading scholar on Stowitts, and with the help of her partner of 30 years, Robert W. Packard, co-founded the Stowitts Museum and Library. Together they traveled exhibitions, published beautiful exhibition catalogs, and hosted a variety of unique exhibitions, vibrant openings, salons, and community events. Aside from the museum, one of their fondest collaborations was self-publishing Hutch's memoirs, "Deadlines Doxies and Demagogues" in 1987, which was widely enjoyed by readers across the country.

Anne had a great mind, a ferocious love of American politics, and she was politically active nearly all of her life. She loved Russian ballet, early modern dance, the Jazz Age, and all the arts and humanities. There was often a spellbinding quality to her company: intriguing, articulate, quick-witted, with a capacity for long discussion and debate that is memorable to all. As a friend she was uniquely funny, mischievous, and warm. To know her was to witness an expansive nature, making room for a greater sense of what is possible. To know her was to know a great number of fascinating, colorful, brilliant, and talented friends and colleagues whom she loved so well, and of whom she was so proud.

Anne will be remembered for her generosity of spirit, smashing parties, beautiful gardens, fastidious attention to current events, her depth of compassion, wicked, tournament-level Scrabble games, the surprising turn of phrase, the contrary point of view, her Snoopy Dance, her rollicking humor, and at the end, a state of grace that serves as an example.

Anne is pre-deceased by her beloved Mother and Daddy, her brother Jimmy Hutchison, her sister Maggie Minton, and her ex-husband Michael R. Holliday. She is survived by her partner Robert W. Packard, her children Catherine Wilson (David Hopper), Elizabeth Holliday (David Stanley), Cole Holliday (Ana Thwaites), Tiffany Packard-Gamlin (Damion Gamlin), her nephew Ford Minton (Robin Andersen), her nephews Chris and Rob Hutchison, nieces Susan Hutchison Underwood and Denise Hutchison, and her sister-in-law Betty Hutchison. In her final years it brought her great joy to meet the new generation: granddaughter Clara Anne Holliday (Cole and Ana), and grandnephew Race Shackelford Minton (Ford and Robin).

Special thanks to the friends and neighbors who assisted in recent years, including Bret Reyer, Carol Simpson, Anne's intern Arwa Awan, and many others, as well as to the extraordinary staff at Mount View Care Center in Wausau, WI where Anne spent the last four months of her life.

A celebration of Anne's life will be held at a private residence in Pacific Grove on Sunday, June 9th at 2pm. For more information please email us at afh.celebration@gmail.com. In lieu of flowers memorial contributions can be made to The Stowitts Museum and Library: PO Box 1914 Carmel, CA 93921, or through PayPal at stowittsmuseum@sbcglobal.net. City ups pay, gives retention bonuses to ambulance workers

By MARY SCHLEY

THE TURNOVER of employees on the city's ambulance is so high that the Carmel City Council voted Tuesday to increase their base salaries by 15 percent and offer onetime $5,000 retention incentives to those already on the payroll if they promise not to leave before July 1, 2016. The pay raise is retroactive to March 16.

According to the report prepared by administrative services director Susan Paul, the pay increases will cost taxpayers $27,884 this year and $78,656 in the 2013/2014 fiscal year. Before the pay increase, the base salary for firefighter/paramedics ranged from $60,087.96 to $71,439.84.

According to Paul, money was the primary reason three of the city's six ambulance workers — two full-time and one part-time — left the city to work for another agency.

All three were hired by Monterey Fire Department, which was offering better pay and had the wherewithal to hire six new firefighters after receiving a $1.5 million taxpayer-funded grant from the Department of Homeland Security. (Monterey Fire Department is also paid to run Carmel's fire station.)

Cornelia McKenna Macdonald "Sudy"

December 14, 1931 ~ May 3, 2013

Carmel Valley — Cornelia McKenna Macdonald, known as "Sudy," passed away on May 3, 2013. Sudy was born in El Paso, Texas to Gen. John and Alice Macdonald. She attended high school in Fort Knox and later graduated from Marymount College in Los Angeles.

Sudy settled on the Monterey Peninsula where she worked for many years in public relations and advertising for the Pebble Beach Company and Coldwell Banker Real Estate. She retired in 2012. Sudy was a talented writer and had a passion for road trips, current events and books.

Sudy is survived by her sister-in-law, Martha Macdonald; nieces, Gina Brimmer and Tory Macdonald, and nephews, James Macdonald and Major General (retired) John Macdonald. She was predeceased by her twin brother, Sandy, and brothers, Scotty and Skippy.

A life celebration will be held for Sudy on Friday, May 17 from 4:00 to 6:00 PM at Jeffrey's Grill, 112 Mid Valley Center, Carmel. Memorial contributions are suggested to Dorothy's Kitchen, 30 Soledad St, Salinas, 93901 or YWCA Women's Shelter, 457 Webster, Monterey, 93940 or the donor's favorite charity. Please visit www.thepaulmortality.com to sign Sudy's guest book and leave messages for her family.

In sharp contrast to the often fiery sentiment expressed at community meetings just six months ago, no Cachagua resident spoke out this week against the final plan, which will send traffic along what is being called the "Tularcitos-High Road" route. The new route requires the construction of an entrance just west of San Clemente Drive and a bridge across Tularcitos Creek.

The residents along San Clemente Drive will be impacted by construction traffic only until the alternate route is completed. Residents along Cachagua and Tassajara roads will not be affected by the traffic.

Planning commissioner Keith Vandevere said opposition to the project in Cachagua helped shape a better plan.

"This is an incredible example of the public process," Vandevere said. "The project is greatly improved, and its impacts to the community have been minimized. I don't see how to make the project any better at this point."

The planning commission's other Carmel area representative, Martha Diehl, said the public process can be difficult, but as the dam removal project's evolution illustrates, it's worth the effort. "The public process gets a bad rap," Diehl said, because "it's messy, it's scary and people have to engage when they're in an emotional state."

Longtime project supporters are happy the dam's removal will soon become a reality.

Lorin Letendre of the Carmel River Watershed Conservancy called the project, "an amazing public and private partnership that we might not see again in a lifetime." Jack Ellwanger of the Pelican Network praised the project's planners. "You knocked it out of the park with this beautiful plan," he said.

'You won't even be able to tell'

The only disagreement that surfaced at the hearing concerned the wear and tear construction traffic would have on Carmel Valley Road. Resident Fidela Schneider said the pavement on Carmel Valley Road was "greatly degraded" by Cal Am's recent pipeline replacement project — and she suggested the cost of fixing the road should be shared by Cal Am and the county. Monterey County traffic engineer Saba Engineer (yes, that's her real name) insisted the project didn't damage the road. Planning commissioner Cosme Padilla reminded everyone that the county lacks funds to fix roads in many places.

Bowie told The Pine Cone Cal Am plans in August to start building the access route and a diversion dike to dewater the site. Next summer, work will include major earthmoving, stabilizing the sediment behind the dam and cutting a channel between the Carmel River and San Clemente Creek. The following summer, the dam will be removed, and the habitat will be restored. "By the summer of 2016, you shouldn't be able to tell that a dam was ever there," Bowie explained.

While the alternate route will cost $2 million, Bowie said the project's cost isn't expected to rise above its earlier estimate of $83 million because of other savings. She said the new route will save 624,000 vehicle miles.

Volunteers aid steelhead stranded in dwindling river, seek water bill funding

By CHRIS COUNTS

WITH STRETCHES of the Carmel River and its tributaries quickly disappearing after an usually dry late winter and spring, a group of volunteers is swinging into action to save stranded young steelhead.

Thanks to the efforts of more than 50 volunteers, the Carmel River Steelhead Association rescues an average of 10,000 fish every year. The task of saving steelhead typically starts in mid-May, but after three virtually rainless months, volunteers began their work in early April. "We're rescuing fish a full month earlier than we ever have before," said Brian LeNeve, president of the Carmel-based steelhead nonprofit.

A recent rescue attempt illustrates the challenges volunteers face to save juvenile steelhead, which find themselves trapped in isolated pockets of quickly evaporating water.

"We found about 20 juveniles in a deep pocket in Garzas Creek on a Wednesday," LeNeve told The Pine Cone. "We came back on a Friday, and it was bone dry."

While nobody knows precisely how many fish were lost because the volunteers arrived too late, LeNeve estimated 50 died. "There are usually two-to-three times as many fish in a pool than what you can see," he explained.

From the Carmel River Lagoon to tributaries located miles away, Carmel River Steelhead Association volunteers work to save juvenile steelhead in an effort to boost their population.

experience."

Instead, restaurants are taking advantage of a lack of code enforcement in town at night and during weekends to offer live music louder and later, she said.

Miller said wine-tasting rooms are pushing the boundaries, as well. "I think also the wine establishments are being confused as to what their license is for," she said. "I think we need to reevaluate it and get it under control."

City attorney Don Freeman advised the city could take the upper hand in the enforcement issue by giving the law an expiration date, since that would be easier than trying to revoke troublesome permits or changing the law.

Mayor Jason Burnett said having the ordinance expire would create unnecessary work for the council, but having use permits expire might make sense, as long as they can be renewed over the counter at the planning department if the business has been hosting live music without generating complaints.

Councilman Steve Hillyard favored adopting the ordinance as he and his colleagues did last month.

"Don't try to fix something that doesn't need fixing," he said, and councilwoman Carrie Theis said the enforcement element of the law has sufficient teeth to be effective.

"It's been good for the community in terms of the businesses, and they want to keep it going, so they're motivated to cooperate," she added.

Burnett proposed having the permits expire after 10 years, at which point they could be renewed over the counter. Doing so would make it easier to ensure the ordinance doesn't have unintended consequences that could continue indefinitely even if the council changed the law to correct them in the future.

"It avoids a situation that we've grandfathered in something we may not have intended," he said.

The rest of the council agreed, but Freeman said the change was substantial enough to require redrafting the ordinance and bringing it back for another first reading. At this rate, if the council OKs the now third first reading in June and the second reading in July, the law will take effect in early August.

Chickens get final OK

The other law up for second reading and final adoption at the May 7 meeting involved the keeping of chickens in the city's residential districts.

This ordinance, which was also up for renewal in light of an impending expiration date, was altered by the council at its first reading last month to say that only five permits, total, should be issued to allow residents to keep a maximum of two hens — and no roosters — in their yards, as long as their enclosures are not a public nuisance or eyesore.

Theis, who opposes allowing chickens at all, was the sole dissenting vote in the final approval, which came after virtually no discussion.

Councilwoman Victoria Beach warned Burnett that her daughter wants one of the few available chicken permits, so if Burnett wants one for his family, his 1-year-old son, Sebastian, "should get on it," before all the permits are taken.

The hen ordinance will take effect in early June.

Early 20th century painter offers fresh look at missions, sale aids charities

By CHRIS COUNTS

EMPLOYING INTENSE jewel-like colors, dramatic lighting effects and muted outlines, early 20th century painter Will Sparks offered a distinctive look at the historic missions of the Southwest.

The complete collection of Sparks' mission work — which features 37 paintings of mission churches and chapels in California, Arizona and Mexico — goes on display Friday, May 10, at the Museum of Monterey. Known during his lifetime as “the Mission painter,” Sparks completed the final piece in the series just two days before he died in 1932.

Coming west as a young man, Sparks saw his first mission in Tucson, Ariz., and became fascinated with Mission San Xavier del Bac. The mission is considered by many to be the finest example of Spanish Colonial architecture in the United States.

“He was trained as an anatomical artist, but he fell in love with historical buildings,” explained Julianne Burton-Carvajal, who is curating the show. “Mission San Xavier del Bac stopped the young man in his tracks.”

After working for the San Francisco Call newspaper as a reporter, illustrator and editor, he dedicated himself to art, filling more than 3,000 canvases with his work. He also became a frequent visitor to the Monterey Peninsula. The collection of 37 paintings has remained intact for 75 years. Its owner, Trotter Galleries, plans to sell the pieces individually if a buyer for the entire archive isn't found by the show's opening. Burton-Carvajal said the individual pieces have long been sought by collectors, and some are already reserved in case the complete collection isn't sold by this weekend. She said 15 percent of the proceeds from the sale of the paintings will benefit the Carmel Mission Foundation, the Campaign for the Preservation of Mission San Antonio de Padua and the Monterey History and Art Association.

The opening will also include a book signing and the screening three short films. The latest offering in the museum's “Year of the Missions” series, the show continues through July 28. Admission is free for museum members and $10 for non members. The museum, which will host a reception from 5 to 8 p.m., is located at 5 Custom House Plaza. Call (831) 372-2608 or visit www.montereyhistory.org.

This painting of Carmel Mission by early 20th century artist Will Sparks is part of an extensive collection of his work now on display at the Museum of Monterey.

Sunset Center ‘Mikado’ gala to raise money

By CHRIS COUNTS

BRINGING TOGETHER food, wine, opera and a worthy cause, Sunset Center presents its first fundraising gala dinner and show Saturday, May 11.

The highlight of the evening will be a performance of “The Mikado” by the New York Gilbert and Sullivan Players. One of the most popular of all Gilbert and Sullivan operas, the Japanese-themed “The Mikado” is filled with humor, political satire and memorable songs.

“It's going to be an absolutely fabulous show,” Sunset Center's Barbara Dawson told The Pine Cone. “It's full of great characters and wonderful music.”

Preceding the show, Chef Kurt Grasing serves a four-course gourmet dinner while Hahn Estates serves wine. The gala also features a Champagne arrival, valet parking, a live auction and prizes. Port and chocolate will be served during intermission.

“We've never done anything like this before,” Dawson explained. “We've really put a lot into it.”

Proceeds from the gala will benefit Sunset Center's Classroom

Art festival turns 20

The 20th annual Carmel Art Festival kicks off Thursday, May 16, with the start of its plein air contest.

Set up in scenic vistas around the Monterey Peninsula, 60 painters vie for prizes and bragging rights. Included in this year's competition are last year's overall winner Michael Situ, People's Choice winner Gretha Lindwood, Mayor's Choice winner Stacy Barter, Artists' Choice winner Lu Yu and many others.

The festival, which continues through Sunday, May 19, also features a sculpture exhibit in Devendorf Park, a silent auction, a live auction, activities for children and live music. Proceeds from the nonprofit festival benefit local youth art programs.

Volunteers are needed Thursday and Friday to help set up the festival, and are also needed throughout the weekend to work in the information tent located in Devendorf Park.

No night clubs, but lots of craft beers, chocolate, wine and food

DOWNTOWN RESTAURANT owners, take note: Planning commissioners are not big fans of late-night menus, cocktails and DJs.

Last week, its members shot down Cantinetta Luca's wish for later hours and entertainment.

Located on Dolores Street, David Fink's Cantinetta Luca sought permission to be open until 1 a.m. Fridays and Saturdays so the kitchen could offer a late-night menu, the bar could continue pouring cocktails, and a DJ could play music through the restaurant's sound system on occasion. The idea is to attract more customers to the restaurant and give them a reason to stay.

"There has been a growing popularity among local restaurants to offer later hours and provide a venue for local patrons to socialize over food and beverage," wrote Lisa Dias, chief operating officer of Fink's Mirabel Hotel & Restaurant Group, noting that a couple of other restaurants do so already. "We are not proposing to do anything different than what these other venues are offering. It would not be a 'night club,' only a limited late-night food menu coupled with our regular bar service."

But senior planner Marc Wiener worried that in the late night and early morning, the serving of alcohol would overtake the serving of food, and therefore "change the character of the restaurant." Local rules suggest the sale of alcohol should be subordinate to the sale of food in restaurants.

"It would operate more like a bar or night club during early the morning hours. That's just speculation, but it could become a code enforcement issue," he said. "The main concern is, we're trying to prevent that late-night club atmosphere in Carmel."

He also said having a DJ would require a change to the restaurant's use permit, though a DJ could technically just be a person with an iPod choosing what songs to play through the restaurant's sound system at an acceptable volume. A handful of other restaurants in town host DJs from time to time already.

"DJ activities are not permitted at the site," Wiener said.

"I really, really have deep concerns for the effect this will have on the character of our village," said Carmel Residents Association President Barbara Livingston. "This is going to become a social club, an after-hours club."

She called the idea of having DJs "appalling."

"We can not allow this village to become tawdry, tacky and noisy, and totally destroy shop, and there are too many other tasting rooms in the area of San Carlos Street where he wants to open. The applicant was hoping to open Wild Vine in the 3,500-square-foot space on San Carlos south of Ocean currently home to the Inago clothing store. His plans include three tasting areas — one for each of three local wineries — and the sale of their and other wines, including products from outside the county.

Although the commission lacked enough members to vote on that request, too, Wiener sought feedback because he was unsure whether it would meet city policies on wine tasting rooms, given the space allocated for tasting exceeds the 30 percent called for in the policy. The rest is dedicated to retail.

"The primary concern is that the establishment would operate as a bar as currently proposed," Wiener said.

Further, a few other places on the same block offer tasting, and the city's policies forbid having too many tasting rooms in any one block.

"I'm very leery about this application," Paterson said. "It isn't how I envisioned wine tasting in Carmel. Most are very small and operate on a very low-key basis."

"This looks more like a wine lounge the way they've got it set up," commissioner Michael LePage said. "It would be impossible for the city to enforce whether people are sitting and drinking wine or not."

"We obviously don't want a proliferation of wine tasting rooms throughout the city," Paterson added, and commissioner Don Goodhue wondered if the city should impose a moratorium on tasting rooms.

the character of our village," she said.

Property owner Jody LeTowt, who rents out apartments next to Luca, said his tenants complain about the noise and said he could support allowing the restaurant to stay open until 11 p.m., as Wiener also recommended, but no later.

"I'm totally against opening a restaurant until 1 o'clock in the morning in Carmel," agreed chairman Keith Paterson. "I think it's quite unnecessary."

And after Wiener noted that restaurants close their doors at the agreed-upon time but continue serving the patrons who are already inside, Paterson suggested the city require they follow the practice of British pubs, which give their customers five or 10 minutes after closing time to finish their drinks and get out.

"You'd have some very unhappy customers if you told them they had to leave at 11," LeTowt observed.

"But your tenants probably wouldn't be too happy to hear them at midnight or 1 a.m. because the restaurant isn't willing to throw the customers out," Paterson responded.

LeTowt replied that he didn't see rampant late-night activity downtown as much of a problem.

The commission lacked enough members to vote on a use permit, so no action was taken on Cantinetta Luca's request, but it's practically a moot point, considering the evident lack of support.

At the same May 1 meeting, commissioners also told a man who wants to open a wine shop and tasting room downtown that he's pretty much out of luck, because his floor plan looks more like a lounge than a wine

■ American Craft Beer Week

Peter B's Brewpub, the microbrewery and pub in the Portola Hotel in Monterey, is celebrating American Craft Beer Week beginning Monday, May 13, with a handful of events and activities aimed at highlighting small-batch brews.

Tours and tastings will take place between 4 and 5:30 p.m. daily throughout the week, and each day will showcase a Guest Craft Beer of the Day, with "$3 pints until the tap runs dry." On Monday, Peter B's will release its Alvarado Street Raspberry Wheat Ale at 4 p.m., and on Thursday at 6 p.m., the restaurant will hold a Brewer's Dinner featuring Bison Brewing and a special guest, the Beer Wench.

Several other events are planned that week, too. For more information, check out peterbsbrewpub.com.

Wild Vine would replace Inago clothing store on San Carlos, but commissioners dislike its size and considerable lounging area for wine tasting.

■ Chocolate and wine

Galante Vineyards will hold a Chocolate and Wine Pairing in its Dolores Street tasting room Friday, May 10, from 5 to 7 p.m., featuring its own vintages and chocolates made by Marich, which is based in Hollister.

Tickets are $10, or free for wine club members, and reservations are suggested. Call (800) GALANTE or email Lisa Winfield at lisa@galantevineyards.com to save a spot.

■ Cooking for Solutions

With the debut of Cindy's Waterfront, the new restaurant in the Monterey Bay Aquarium, home celebrity chef Cindy Pawlcy will be joined by other high-caliber chefs for the annual Cooking for Solutions May 17-19. This year's celebrity lineup includes Lorena Garcia, Carla Hall, Art Smith, Chris Cosentino, Richard Blais and Educator of the Year Hugh Fearnley-Whittingstall. Cooking for Solutions supports the aquarium's Seafood Watch program, described as "the nation's leading source of information to help transform the seafood market in ways that preserve healthy ecosystems and sustain ocean wildlife."

The event kicks off with the highly popular gala in the Aquarium Friday night, when the star chefs, 80 restaurants, and 60 wineries and breweries share tastes of their best creations. Throughout the weekend, TV stars lead cooking demonstrations and discussions, Carla Hall presents an ocean-view breakfast, and guests partake in "food adventures" and "a bountiful new Street Food Extravaganza."

Saturday includes the Sustainable Foods Celebration from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Great Tide Pool deck, included with regular Aquarium admission.

Tickets are available online or by calling (866) 963-9645. The full program of events and chef bios can be found at www.cookingforsolutions.org.

■ HGK Summer Thursdays

Happy Girl Kitchen on Central Avenue in Pacific Grove, the outpost for all things jarred, canned and otherwise preserved, is holding popup dinners on most Thursdays from now through the fall from 6 to 9 p.m. Served family style, the five-course feasts are prepared by creative and endearing chef Matt Millea, formerly of Sierra Mar, using the products of a different local organic farm each time. The dinners are BYOB and cost $55 per person.

Upcoming Summer Series dinners are set for May 16 and 23; June 6, 13 and 20; Aug. 1 and 29; Sept. 12, 19 and 26; and Oct. 3 and 10. Happy Girl Kitchen is located at 173 Central Ave. in Pacific Grove. To reserve a spot or learn more, visit happygirlkitchen.com/collections/pop-up-dinners.

■ Casanova's 'popup'

Popup dinners have their origins in distinctly non-restaurant settings — basements, parks, farm fields, barns, empty storefronts and the like — so some debate whether a fully outfitted restaurant can technically host a popup dinner.

No matter, Casanova Restaurant in downtown Carmel will present its version of a popup dinner Monday, May 20, at 7 p.m. when former Casanova sous chef David Baron makes a special appearance to cook alongside aspiring chef Klaus Georis.

The six-course dinner, featuring local produce and meats, will be paired with Georis wines and costs $120 per person, plus tax and service.

The menu is set to include pea and coconut with rosé; local shellfish and cucumber with Pinot Grigio; carrot, Carmel Valley hay and ricotta with PV Chardonnay; Carmel Valley egg, dashi and seaweed with Sauvignon Blanc; local halibut, artichoke, Meyer lemon and chamomile with Chardonnay; and cypress, chocolate, pork and Scotch with late harvest Merlot.

Casanova is located at Mission and Fifth. For reservations, call Jessica Walsh at (831) 625-2727 or e-mail jessica@casanovarestaurant.com.

wasn't there," said a friend who asked to not be identified. "He was really suffering."
The cab driver Claypole is accused of killing, 44-year-old Daniel Garcia Huerta, was remembered by friends and family May 5 at a memorial service in Salinas. Leaving behind a wife and two daughters, he will be buried in Guanajuato, Mexico.

Like those close to Claypole, the people who knew Huerta tried to make sense of the tragic circumstances that unfolded May 1.

"The toughest part is that he left behind two young daughters," said John Cardinale, who owns Yellow Cab, the company Huerta was working for. "I feel sorry for them as much as anything."

Cardinale said Huerta will be missed by everyone who knew him.

"He was a gentle giant," Cardinale added. "He was always smiling, and he was always on time. He was one of the hardest working drivers we had. He was an honorable, standup guy."

To help raise money for the funeral and offer assistance to Huerta's widow and children, an account at Chase Bank has been set up in his brother, Jorge's, name. If you're interested in donating to the fund, the number is 210120772.

Claypole was arrested in Seaside May 1 about 30 minutes after Huerta was found stabbed to death in Monterey. Huerta had picked up Claypole at the Wells Fargo Bank in the Crossroads shopping center. A motive for the slaying has not been determined, and robbery appears unlikely.

The Monterey County District Attorney's Office is investigating the circumstances of the suicide. Claypole's attorney, John Klopfenstein, told The Pine Cone he wants to know how Claypole was able to hang himself when he was on suicide watch. "This is something of an ongoing problem at the jail," he said.

According to Klopfenstein, Claypole's mother brought anti-anxiety medication to the jail at 1:30 p.m. May 4, and an hour later, he used torn bedding to hang himself.

Joshua Claypole being taken into custody May 1 after being arrested in the stabbing death of a cab driver in Monterey. The brutality of the crime is indicated by the amount of blood on Claypole's pants.

June 12 = County Day

Relative to the celebration of Monterey County Day at the Panama Pacific Exposition, the Monterey Chamber of Commerce last night held an enthusiastic meeting concerning the affair. It was announced that quite likely the railroad company would make a rate of $3 for the round trip from peninsula points, with the ticket good for ten days. Efforts will be made to introduce all business concerns in the county to close on June 12, the date chosen for the county celebration.

Ocean Parking Question Before Merchants Tonight

Carmel's merchants, including those half-hundred whose places of business on Ocean Avenue are directly affected by the proposed ordinance to banish center parking from the chief thoroughfare, will meet this evening to discuss the action.

Proprietors of many of Carmel's novelty and exclusive apparel shops were more usually in favor of doing the utmost to maintain Carmel's rare charm and beauty, a wide garden with pine trees on Ocean avenue, a quiet thoroughfare. Most realty offices favored parking much as under the present arrangements, insisting that the need of automobiles ready at the door was an essential to their business. Market proprietors favored the status quo by which customers may drive to the door, obtain their groceries and depart. The restaurant and tap room people strongly favored the present order.

While the Carmel Business Association's meeting this evening is expected to obtain a plan for presentation to the city council next Wednesday evening, Carmel's large resident population, unorganized and unvoiced, remains to be heard from.

Sanitary Board to Condemn Island Site

Condemnation proceedings are contemplated by the Carmel Sanitary Board of the "island site" for the sewage disposal plant in the Carmel river following a meeting last Friday evening at which Attorney John M. Thompson, of Monterey, was named as special counsel. The attorney will be called upon to exercise the board's right of eminent domain in securing the seven-acre "island," four acres of which the board regards as usable for their purpose, and the rights of way for the new disposal plant for the Carmel sanitary district.

One of the claimants to the property is Willis Walker, who obtained the Mission Ranch acreage from the Martin estate which had come into possession of the ranch more than 70 years ago. Negotiations with Walker apparently came to an impasse before last week.

City Council Scans Sunset School As Site for Cultural-Civic Uses

The City Council last night received a report recommending, in effect, that Sunset School should become all things to all men. And to some of the kids, too.

Submitted by an ad hoc committee (Putnam and Whittlesey) it suggested that the two-block complex, once acquired from the School District, should be used as a "cultural facility" combined with city administration offices, a playground for children, and a parking lot. But, the report concluded, nothing should be earnestly contemplated until an engineering survey has been made, which might cost $1,000.

When Whittlesey persisted, saying that the committee had received "significant" encouragement on the idea, [Councilman James] Buffington insisted, "Are we ready to spend — for what, I don't know — if we need it or not?" It became impossible to answer, for the moment, when it developed that the $1,000 might not be sufficient for the purpose. The gentlemen of the Council concluded, somewhat guardedly, that the committee should inquire about the actual cost of such a survey, and in the meanwhile they would go to the school, on the 17th, at 4:00 p.m., and look over the situation.

MPC Fight Again Breaks Into Open

Charges of incompetency, arising out of the smoking and unsubdued feud between Dr. Fred Huber, president of Monterey Peninsula College, and practically everybody else, may be heard tonight before a special meeting of the College Board of Trustees, at 7:30 p.m., in the library meeting hall on the campus. These particular charges are made by Huber against Philip Chamberlin, head of the evening division of the college. Chamberlin, through his attorney, Charles Stewart of Carmel, has asked that they be presented publicly. But Stewart tonight will seek to convince the Board that the hearing should be postponed until such time as the Board and the California Teachers Association, in separate investigations, complete comprehensive inquiries into the seething dispute between the faculty and Huber.

"The charges are simply a smoke screen," Stewart has asserted on behalf of Chamberlin, "to distract attention from the friction and trouble at the college centered principally in the evening division." The faculty complaints against Huber of irresolution, arbitrariness and lethargy were made to the Board some time ago.

No water emergency yet, but board taking steps

There's to be no mandatory water rationing, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District confirmed Monday night. Instead it began development of ordinances and programs to help the Carmel River environment survive effects of the low rainfall.

One of the ordinances for irrigating the Carmel River embankment will include declaring a water emergency along a stretch of river that supports the four main California American Water Co. wells in the lower valley.

The board has also asked that staff develop an ordinance that would increase the already existing water user fee to create an irrigation program from Schulte Road to the Scarlett Narrows, upstream from the current area of irrigation. The irrigation program is estimated to cost about $200,000 and will add an estimated 14 cents to the average monthly ($18) water bill.

Conservation programs include asking that peninsula residents and businesses reduce their water consumption by 10 percent and a free conservation kit distribution program to district residents.

Controversial theater renovation is now complete

For nearly 50 years, Carmel's Forest Theater has provided residents and visitors with live theater in a natural setting. But instead of celebrating the theater's silver anniversary with a jubilee party, the city of Carmel decided what the facility really needed was an overhaul.

The renovation of the theater will cost the city about $200,000. Work started April 7 and finished this week, but the theater is scheduled to officially reopen with a production May 27.

The primary focus of the renovation — by Carmel firm Mallory/George Construction — concerns seating and the stage. The city will spend $60,000 replacing the seating and $120,000 rebuilding the stage. Ross Brown, stage manager of the Sunset Center Theater, said the greatest benefit of the project will be safety. "The internal structure was far out of code," Brown said. "It was not up to modern standards and deemed unsafe."

The seating and stage renovations are the first and second stages of a long-term renovation project. The next phase of the renovation will add storage space to the theater.

Connections program, which has provided arts education for 6,500 low-income students since its inception in 2008.

The gala starts at 5 p.m., while the opera begins at 8 p.m. Gala tickets — which include admission to the performance — are $225. Tickets to the performance only are $59 to $79. Black tie or “Mikado-themed” dress is encouraged. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2048 or visit www.sunsetcenter.org.

■ Season closes on bittersweet note

Staging a musical event at All Saints’ Church for the final time, the Carmel Music Society presents a concert Friday, May 10, by The Lydian String Quartet.

“We made the bittersweet decision to move all of our concerts to Sunset Center because of parking and lighting issues,” explained Peter Tuff, executive director of the Carmel Music Society. “It was a practical decision. We’ve really enjoyed being at All Saints’ Church — the acoustics and facilities have been great.”

The event also marks the end of the Carmel Music Society’s 2012-2013 season.

When the Lydian String Quartet performs at the church, the group — which includes violinists Daniel Stepner and Judith Eissenberg, violist Mary Ruth Ray and cellist Joshua Gordon — will be joined by founding cellist Rhonda Rider.

The quintet will perform Boccherini’s String Quintet in E Major, Op. 11, No. 5; Mozart’s String Quartet No. 15 in D Minor, K. 421; and Glazunov’s String Quintet in A Major, Op. 39.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $30 for general admission and $10 for students. A limited number of free tickets are available for children if accompanied by an adult. The church is located at Dolores and Ninth. Call (831) 625-9938 or visit www.carmelmusic.org.

■ Memorial for Barbara Murphy

The Pacific Grove Art Center hosts a memorial celebration and concert for the late Barbara Murphy Sunday, May 12, at 4 p.m.

The former owner of Portofino Cafe, a mentor to many musicians, and a warm and engaging personality, Murphy passed away March 17. A Carmel resident, she was 69.

The art center is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave.

■ Live music roundup

ART

■ Small art is big help

The Pacific Grove Art Center is seeking donations for its annual Tiny Treasures miniature show, which will be presented Friday, May 31. The exhibit is one of the nonprofit art center’s biggest fundraisers.

The deadline for submitting artwork is May 23. Pieces, which include sculpture, can be no larger than 7-by-9 inches. When the show opens, people will have an opportunity to buy $5 raffle tickets and place as many as they like into the corresponding boxes below each piece of art. The art center will host a drawing July 12. The winners do not need to be present.

The art center is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. Call (831) 375-2208 or visit www.pgartcenter.org.

■ Young artists present new work

The Monterey Museum of Art’s Pacific Street location hosts a reception Friday, May 10, from 4 to 6 p.m., for an exhibit showcasing young Monterey County artists.

The show — which will be on display through June 30 — is sponsored by the Youth Arts Collective, a non profit group that provides mentorship and art studio space for young artists.

The museum is located at 559 Pacific Street. Call (831) 372-5477.

With King Tut distracting the deer, McCallum gathered up Nefertiti and took her to safety. A few moments later, a limping King Tut joined her.

Carrying the former while the latter followed a few steps behind, McCallum walked a short distance to her house, where she enlisted her husband, Kevin's, help to drive them to the Monterey Peninsula Veterinary Emergency and Specialty Center.

"We rushed there as fast as we could," she said.

When they arrived at the emergency center, Nefertiti was in particularly rough shape, with deep gashes on her left hind flank and belly. "It was gruesome," McCallum explained. "The staff looked at her and said,

'Whoa.'"

Yet Nefertiti survived and is resting comfortably at home — aided by a cocktail of pain killers, anti-inflammatory drugs and antibiotics. "It's amazing she's alive," McCallum said.

King Tut — who sustained several hair-line fractures and muscle tears — is on the mend as well. McCallum said she'll never forget how the miniature pinscher fearlessly risked life and limb to battle the crazed deer.

"He's my hero," she declared. "That's a brave 14-pound dog. I gave him pork roast for dinner last night."

McCallum's odyssey came as no surprise to lifelong Carmel resident Brian LeNeve, who has studied deer much of his life.

"This is what happens when deer lose their fear of man," LeNeve said. "My wife has been chased a couple times in Pebble Beach. Don't take them lightly."

Water isn't the only precious resource in dwindling supply. LeNeve said the group's tight operating budget is dependent primarily on the generosity of donors — and is augmented by a few grants.

"We spend about $13,000 a year on various things," he said. "That's not putting any money aside for new shockers [to stun the fish], new trucks, new hip boots, new rubber gloves and new nets. And at some point, we're going need a storage unit."

LeNeve singled out California American Water for its donation of a truck. "Everybody likes to blame Cal Am for being the bad guy, but they do some good things," he noted.

Cal Am's customers are required to help pay for efforts by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to rescue stranded steelhead and operate a fish-rearing facility. LeNeve would like to see his group receive at least some of that money. "I think somebody should be funding us," he said.

LeNeve encouraged the public to help support his group's efforts to save as many steelhead as possible. He called the fish "an iconic species" and a critical indicator of the Carmel River's health.

The steelhead trout is one of the most common fish species on earth and is even considered invasive in many places, but the Carmel River's population is classified as "threatened" by the federal government.

"This turnover costs Carmel financially — we either pay overtime or we pay Monterey extra to fill the vacancies — and risks reducing service quality," Mayor Jason Burnett told The Pine Cone.

Not only does high turnover mean time, money and resources wasted on training new workers who then go elsewhere, but when Monterey firefighters are used to fill ambulance shifts, their overtime pay is higher than that received by Carmel city employees, so they cost taxpayers more, according to Paul.

She said the new pay rates were based on a study of salaries for the same jobs in neighboring jurisdictions that indicated Carmel's salaries were about 12 percent lower. The City of Monterey, in particular, pays 17 percent higher.

"In order to provide the most consistent services to the residents with the best qualified individuals, staff is recommending adjustments to the city's compensation for the position," she wrote.

While the increase would put the salary range "within the market," she continued in her report for the council, "Future adjustment to pay should be connected to a changed pay system that is tied to performance, goal achievement and other success factors designed to ensure the best possible service to the residents of Carmel."

She recommended the $5,000-per-worker onetime incentive as a means of keeping those who hold "critical jobs" in town "during times of economic recovery when organizations compete aggressively for talent." Employees who sign the retention incentive agreement promise to stay on until July 2016 or pay back the city on a pro-rata basis if they leave before then.

Without discussion, the council unanimously approved the pay increase and bonus pay May 7, as the item was listed on the meeting's consent calendar.

The Carmel Pine Cone

YOUR SOURCE FOR NEWS, THE ARTS AND OPINION SINCE 1915

*'They love us ...
they really,
really love us!'*

Here's what our readers are saying —

■ "I would like to express my appreciation for the consistently scrupulous and noteworthy editorial standards I have been privileged to enjoy while reading The Pine Cone for the past several years. Succinct, ethical, and straightforward journalism at the local level is a thing to be celebrated in an age wherein a responsible and effective editorial hand seems to have been dismissed as an encumbrance in countless newspapers (online and otherwise) across the multimedia spectrum. One often gets the sense that editors no longer care about the quality of their copy, and are almost cavalier about offering us articles rife with poor spelling, grammar, and outright unethical reportage. It is indeed a sad and condescending state of affairs. Therefore, how refreshing it is to see the reliable excellence of The Pine Cone stand as a superior, small-town counterpoint to such disturbing decline as evidenced by the blatant ineptitude of so many subpar contributors in our national news outlets. Again, I would like to thank you and the entire Pine Cone staff for such perennially diligent work and attention to detail. It is a pleasure to behold, a most valuable contribution to our community, and I am only too happy to actively seek-out and support your advertisers with my business whenever possible. Keep up the fine work!"

■ "I want to thank you for providing our community with a real local newspaper. While I may not always agree with all of the content, I do always enjoy reading The Pine Cone. Thanks again for keeping our 'news' small town."

■ "We immensely enjoy The Pine Cone and particularly the writings of Mary Schley. Keep up the hometown style."

■ "I have nothing to offer as far as advice except to tell you I can't wait until Friday to read The Pine Cone, and I can't wait to read your editorials! The Pine Cone is 'must read.' I especially enjoy the food/wine section, but virtually every thing you report is greatly valued by me, a life long Carmel/Carmel Valley resident! Great work! Please keep doing what you are doing."

■ "As a former editor of many years, with a few as a publisher/editor, I always like to let a colleague know how much I enjoy their publication, if it is worthy of such enjoyment. Yours is."

■ "I appreciate your paper and the online format you have that let's me browse Carmel from Sonoma where I live. I always enjoy reading The Pine Cone with my morning coffee when I'm in Carmel, and you've done such a great job with the online format that I can smell the ocean from the Sonoma town square on Friday mornings when I open my email from The Pine Cone."

■ "Just a note to tell you how much I enjoy The Pine Cone. Carmel is fortunate to have such a fine paper serving the community. We spend a couple of months in Carmel each year. Of course, we always pick up a copy of the paper. But we read it cover to cover throughout the year. It is so wonderful to be able to keep up with the community we love so much. Please keep up the good work."

■ "You have the best paper on the Monterey Peninsula. I read the 'real' news in The Pine Cone and your Real Estate Section is No. 1. You have a true local paper."

■ "I just wanted to say thank you for sending me The Pine Cone every week! I am returning to Carmel soon and can't wait to actually have the actual paper in my hands. The Pine Cone has been such a welcome gift every week while I have been away these past few years."

■ "I love your newspaper and await it eagerly weekly! It is the highlight of my week Thursdays at 9 p.m. when The Pine Cone 'ding' hits my iPad."

■ "Thank you for your devotion to your community. You will never know how much The Pine Cone has meant to me. Oh, how I look forward to it every week."

■ "I always look forward to Fridays when The Pine Cone comes out. The articles are so well written, you are not afraid of controversy, and the calendar items give enough time to make plans. But my new favorite item is the Police Log cartoon. I laugh out loud pretty much every time I see it and go back for one last laugh before I recycle. Words can't describe what the art can do — it's remarkable."

■ "When I turn on the computer on Friday mornings or the weekend and see The Pine Cone, I smile."

■ "I get The Pine Cone every week and enjoy it more than you can know. What a wonderful paper you have. I read every word!"

■ "I just wanted to let you know how truly outstanding The Pine Cone is. The writing equals, if not exceeds, top-notch national papers. You and your staff should be proud. I know I've told you before how great I think The Pine Cone is, but it really is a terrific paper."

ESPIONAGE

for Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin.

A real spy for the USSR? Was that even possible?

The newsman's name was Winston Burdett, and for many years he was a familiar, comforting presence on the radio and on the "CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite," reporting from Rome, where he especially gained distinction for his coverage of the Vatican.

To me, as a young assistant editor on the CBS News foreign desk from 1977 to 1981, he was a friendly, but intimidating, voice on the other end of numerous international telephone calls. My job was to coordinate news coverage among the CBS News bureaus around the world and serve as a liaison between what the correspondents in those bureaus were covering and what the producers of the various programs — especially the Cronkite show — wanted them to cover.

Burdett was just one of the broadcasting giants who had me in awe. There was Walter Cronkite, of course, whose program I nominally worked for, but who only spoke five or six words to me in the three-and-a-half years I toiled no more than 30 feet from his desk. The other old-timers were friendlier. Douglas Edwards, Charles Collingwood, Eric Sevareid, Dallas Townsend, etc., etc. — these men had actually worked with Edward R. Murrow, for God's sake. And there I was at their elbows, hearing stories about the old days, and learning the ins and outs of what made CBS News great, from its long tradition of ground-breaking and comprehensive broadcasting, to the minutiae of covering news in the field and delivering it to the public at home.

I don't remember the McCarthy era coming up much, but if it did, it could only have been with scorn. Nobody mentioned that one of the people we put on the air every day had worked, in his youth, to help overthrow the government of the United States in favor of "the dictatorship of the proletariat."

It wasn't that Burdett's role was a secret. He admitted it — first, in a letter to his bosses at CBS in March 1951, and later to the FBI and in testimony to a congressional committee. But 25 years later, with the McCarthy era neatly put in its "national embarrassment" cubbyhole — an era of hyperventilated accusations, not actual spying — nobody talked about it, and Burdett was allowed to continue his broadcasting career in peace. He died in 1993.

Secrets revealed

The 1990s, however, also happened to be the time when quite a few of the Soviet Union's secrets started to emerge. The USSR collapsed in 1990, and there was brief access to some of its Stalin-era espionage archives. In 1993, a former KGB officer, Alexander Vassiliev, was permitted to copy some of those documents, which he turned into a book, "Spies: The Rise and Fall of the KGB in America."

And in 1995, the United States declassified more than 2,500 cables which had been intercepted in the 1940s and early 1950s between Soviet agents in this country and their handlers in Moscow. Decoding those cables had been called the Venona Project, and several books examined their revelations in detail, including "Venona — Decoding Soviet Espionage in America," by John Haynes and Harvey Klehr.

Lo and behold, the secrets that were suddenly spilling out of Moscow and Washington revealed that Joseph McCarthy and his supporters, while they unfairly targeted some people who were innocent, actually grossly underestimated the extent of Soviet espionage in the U.S. government.

Alger Hiss, Julius Rosenberg, Klaus Fuchs, Harry Dexter White, Laughlin Currie and Laurence Duggan were just the most prominent names among hundreds of American citizens who not only gave Moscow the atom bomb, but a very long list of other diplomatic, military and industrial secrets, helping Stalin enslave his own people, send millions to their deaths by violence or starvation, conquer Eastern Europe, start the Korean War, and nearly bring the world to a nuclear Armageddon. And these American traitors did so not because they were paid, but because they believed Soviet communism was a better form of government than American capitalism and democracy, and they wanted it to succeed and spread.

Even during the notorious period from August 1939 to June 1941 — when Stalin had a peace pact with Hitler, helped himself to half of Poland, and made it possible for the Nazis to conquer Europe and launch the Holocaust — the Americans stayed loyal to the communist dictator.

It was in the book by Haynes and Klehr that the name Winston Burdett popped up. The book revealed that in 1937, as a young reporter for a left-wing newspaper called the Brooklyn Eagle, Burdett joined the Communist Party of the USA, which was controlled and funded by Moscow, and which was used to attract supporters among the American public, and especially from its universities and labor unions. The CPUSA was also used to recruit spies, and Burdett soon agreed to become one.

According to the declassified Venona documents, he was told by his handlers to volunteer for an assignment for the Brooklyn Eagle to Finland, where he would pretend to be a disinterested journalist, but where he would actually gather intelligence to help the USSR defeat Finland after the Soviets invaded it in November 1939. Later, with World War II raging across the European continent, Burdett also travelled to Romania, Turkey and other front-line countries on behalf of the Soviet government.

His journalism cover was so effective — he was a very good reporter, after all — that he drew the attention of Murrow, who recruited Burdett as a CBS radio correspondent in 1942. Burdett then broke contact with Moscow and embarked on an apparently legitimate journalism career. (He was certainly doing a good job, and was much admired, when I knew him in the 1970s.)

But Burdett's past haunted him. In 1951, CBS was under pressure to purge its ranks of known communists, and the network's owner, Bill Paley, asked every employee to sign a "loyalty oath," disclosing whether he had ever been a "member of a group which advocated the overthrow of our constitutional form of government, or which has adopted a policy approving of acts of violence to deny other persons their rights under the United States Constitution, or of seeking to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means."

'An idealistic guise'

For most employees, having to answer such a question was a silly annoyance. But Burdett's answer to the momentous question on the CBS loyalty oath was, "Yes."

He had joined the Communist Party and helped it unionize newspaper workers in 1937 when he was 24 years old, he said in an accompanying letter to his CBS bosses, because "to a young person, Communist notions present themselves in an idealistic guise."

Since then, he said, communism had become "as abhorrent to me as anyone I know," but that he had only realized after his period of youthful foolishness what the Communist Party was "in fact, all about, and how dishonest it was, both morally and intellectually."

He apologized for embarrassing CBS, but he also called his story "rather banal," and said his role as communist union organizer had been harmless.

In fact, he was covering his tracks: Only later did he admit to the FBI and to a Congressional committee that he had been much more than a simple member of the Communist Party; he had been a hostile spy in the middle of a war.

In his 1955 congressional testimony, Burdett made a full confession and identified numerous other members of the Communist Party of the USA in the 1930s, including some in prominent positions in the media, academia and politics. Because he "came clean," CBS decided not to fire him, and it may have been the furor over naming names that led to his exile to the Rome bureau for the rest of his career. FBI documents from the time show J. Edgar Hoover himself probably made the decision not to prosecute him.

As the decades passed, what had been a notorious story in the 1950s was forgotten. On a recent trip to New York, I asked several of my CBS colleagues in the 1970s who also knew Burdett whether they'd ever heard anything about his espionage career.

They all said, "No."

The McCarthy era has its place firmly set in the history books. But those books, it turns out, are wrong. And so was what we thought we knew about our colleague, Winston Burdett.

EIRs for EIRs?

THE HISTORY of California's Environmental Quality Act is one of a well intentioned law that, since being enacted in the 1970s, has grown into a monstrous hydra that is constantly used by tiny groups of activists and disgruntled individuals for purposes which have nothing to do with protecting the environment.

One of the most grotesque aspects of the law is that environmental review and the legal disputes that grow out of it can go on for decades. This is true not only for controversial projects with significant effects on the environment, but for minimal projects that have no effect on anybody or anything, and highly meritorious projects which have the solid backing of majorities of citizens and their elected representatives. We won't bore you by citing again the infamous local examples of these obstructionist and destructive phenomena. If you read this newspaper regularly, you know that we believe CEQA is one of the worst laws in California.

But even as Gov. Jerry Brown and a few Democrats in the Legislature are finally calling for CEQA abuses to be reined in, our local activists are dreaming up ways to make them worse. The threat by CEQA mastermind Michael Stamp, acting on behalf of a group of Salinas Valley land conservationists and farmers, to sue Marina for letting Cal Am drill a test well for the Monterey Peninsula's desal plant within its jurisdiction is an outstanding example.

Keep in mind that the test well will be used to evaluate, among other things, the impacts of the desal plant's future full-scale wells on the aquifers the Salinas Valley conservationists claim to be protecting.

In other words, the data gathered by the operation of the test well will be an essential part of the CEQA-mandated environmental review of the desal plant. The test well is a necessary part of the desal plant's EIR process.

Nevertheless, Stamp and his clients are demanding a "full environmental review" of the test well.

Give that a minute: They want an EIR to assess the environmental impacts of preparing an EIR.

Think of the implications! EIRs have grown so complicated and so expensive that their preparation, especially for significant projects, can involve dozens of detailed studies of environmental impacts on all sorts of creatures, resources and things, from air and water quality, to archaeological and historical sites, to endangered, threatened and rare species, to global warming, to old buildings, to your grandmother's arthritis. The checklist of possible environmental impacts that must be studied is very long and getting longer all the time, and explicating all these impacts to the satisfaction of even the most nitpicky activist requires a lot of work.

If these studies, before they can be launched, are to be themselves studied for environmental impacts, the process will become never-ending. Which, of course, is what a lot of nutjob activists would like.

However, we don't believe that all the sensible people have left California — yet. We even hope that there are enough remaining to put a stop to this latest regulatory outrage before it even has a chance to get started.

Letters to the Editor

Lame horse

Dear Editor,

Elected officials, both city and county, the FORA board, voters and those politically and financially tied to the proposed Monterey Downs Racetrack should read the article, "Twilight at the track," in the May 13 issue of Time magazine. This article is an indictment of racing tracks as an economic engine for communities. The truth is, according to investigative reporter David Von Drehle, "racecourses are closing, purses are dwindling and breeders are finding other work."

The investigative report is lengthy and provides substantial statistics reflecting the rapid decline of this industry — witness the closing of many of the famous race-tracks from coast to coast, including Hialeah, Bay Meadows and Garden State Parks over the last dozen years. He goes on to say that L.A.'s Hollywood Park may be running its last races this year.

Drehle says that "to survive, many tracks have added slot machines, video lottery terminals and even casino table games to create what are known in the industry as 'Racinos.'"

You know what ... maybe the county supervisors should hire Drehle to do an in-depth economic viability study before they take any action on such a grandiose project that will leave a permanent scar on our beloved Monterey Peninsula.

If your readers care, they should take the time to read the entire article in the May 13 issue of Time magazine and then contact their county supervisor and let him/her know how obscene this proposed project is on its face, not to mention the massive adverse environmental impacts it will have on our beloved Monterey Peninsula.

Demolition by neglect

Dear Editor,

I watched with great dismay and frustration the lone bulldozer operator and a workmate complete the process of clearing all evidence of the Monterey pines and Cypress trees that stood in and around the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center's remaining two front riding rings — just one more nasty surprise for lovers of the equestrian center. Why couldn't they leave those 20 or so perfectly good, perfectly lovely trees? It seems to symbolize the many short-sighted decisions that the Pebble Beach Company is making with regard to the historic equestrian center.

Pebble Beach Resorts' website boasts that the equestrian center "is considered to be one of the finest facilities of its kind on the West Coast." Clearly the webmaster for P.B. Co. hasn't bothered to keep up with the company's pattern of neglect of the historic property, and failure to support the business opera-was established in 1915 and is a legal newspaper for Carmel-by-the-Sea, Monterey County and the State of California, established by Superior Court Decree No. 35759, July 3, 1952

A place where the American health care system is deeply appreciated

WELCOME TO Los Algodones. Need dental caps? Cheap? How about inexpensive laser eye surgery? Paying too much for Cialis? You've come to the right place. Hey, pretty lady! Are you a movie star? We have the best prices for teeth whitening procedures. No waiting.

Los Algodones is a humble village, conveniently located less than 10 minutes southwest of Yuma, Ariz. It is on the southern side of the international border, and its citizens are eager to serve the melancholy victims of America's criminal healthcare system.

For many years, Los Algodones was an even humbler village, a dusty and forgotten hellhole with no real reason to exist. But then a funny thing happened. Not funny ha-ha, maybe, but the humble citizens of Los Algodones are certainly happy about it.

What happened was that the saps across the border have been held hostage by the United States' barbaric medical-industrial complex, which is enriching itself with outrageous abandon while bankrupting the rest of the nation.

The great thing about it, at least for the humble citizens of Los Algodones, is that the saps have had their brains deadened by skills for the medical-industrial complex who yip like rabid Chihuahuas every time the U.S. government attempts to reform American health care.

They yip about socialism, yap about taxes. So the saps would much prefer to exhaust their savings and mortgage their homes than spend a few more dollars on a government plan to fix their medical system.

They might be idiots, but at least their intransigence has transformed the humble little village known as Los Algodones.

Because now Los Algodones has been able to cash in on the medical-tourism phenomenon sweeping Mexico. And American saps swarm into the humble border village like a plague of locusts, or at least a plague of locusts in need of cheap Retin-A. Need a dental implant? They can do it. No appointment needed. Cheap. In many cases, the doctors in Los Algodones can take care of your clinical-medical needs at costs that are less than your insurance deduction. And most of the village's doctors gained their medical training in the very same U.S. institutions that trained your high-priced American doctor.

Every day, thousands of Americans park their vehicles in a massive parking lot across the border ($5 for the day, collected by Quechan tribal members) to take the easy stroll into Mexico.

In a four-block radius, you'll find more doctors, nurses and pharmacists than you're likely to see at the Mayo Clinic. Though it claims a population of fewer than 6,000 humble citizens, Los Algodones supports more than 40 dental clinics. The humble village calls itself "Molar City."

Molar City specializes in dental clinics, but it also claims

beyond the realm

By JOE LIVERNOIS

The border crossing from Arizona to Los Algodones, Mexico.

a healthy community of opticians, audiologists and pharmacists. Better yet, for one-stop shoppers, Los Algodones also offers a full range of cut-rate bottles of alcohol. In fact, for your shopping convenience, many of its best pharmacies also carry your favorite distilled beverages.

Cheap. And as long as you're in Mexico, why not make a full day of it?

Because Los Algodones has become a favored destination point for health-impaired Americanos, the humble villagers now offer a great number of terrific restaurants and taquerias for those who linger. The business district also includes dozens of souvenir shops.

Virtually everyone in Los Algodones speaks English and, while the street hawkers may seem aggressive, they are at least polite. Haggling is expected.

To cap your medical adventure in Mexico, a Quechan-owned casino is conveniently located three minutes north of the border.

Because after you've saved all that money on Cialis and implants — and because you're not spending all that tax money to fix your own healthcare system — you might as well lose it all on a slot machine.

When an astronaut thanks you, you know you've done well

WHEN PAUL Ventura contacted me to say that he has had an interesting life, he wasn't kidding. Born and raised in Brooklyn, he has lived his nearly-ninety years with both purpose and what he views as divine intervention. From his youth, he didn't take "no" for an answer, and then there were those critical times when things just seemed to happen to him.

Twice when he was in school he suffered medical situations that kept him home for two months. He was going to be held back a grade, but each time, "My grandmother, bless her heart, told my mother, 'Don't you take that. Demand that they let him take quickly out-distanced the Soviets and led to America putting the first man on the Moon.

It was not an easy trip for him. "When my math teacher asked the class what they wanted to be after graduation, my quick response was, 'An engineer.' Her quicker response was, 'Not with your grades.'" As Paul notes in his book, "Twenty-five years later, at one of Alan Shepard's book signings, he wrote, 'Thank you Paul for your contributions to the development of the USA Rocket Programs.'"

Alan Shepard, if you didn't know, was the first American in space on Freedom 7 in the Mercury program, and he later piloted the Apollo 14 flight to the Moon. He had good reason to thank Paul Ventura, because Paul was a driving force in creating the Minuteman, Polaris and Titan military rockets that led to manned space flight. He also worked on the Nerva nuclear-powered rocket program. Paul had gotten his start in what was then the Army Air Corps towards the end of World War II. He wasn't able to be sent overseas for health reasons, but he trained in the deployment of radar and equipment to provide important weather briefings.

The experience positioned him for work as the Army's Manager of the Research and Development Agency Mechanical Engineering Department. They were different times in the late 1940s and early 1950s. Instead of a lengthy interview process, in two situations, Paul was interviewed directly by the top brass and hired in less than an hour.

Backstep a moment to when Paul was in school. One night he was at an ice cream parlor with some friends when he spotted a beautiful young woman a few booths away. "Who is she?" He wanted to know. "Forget it," said his friends. "She's not interested in boys. She's going for a grant to study dress designing at Pratt College."

Happily recalling that moment, Paul said, "All you have to do is tell me is that 'You can't do this or you can't do that' and that drives me nuts. I never took no for an answer." Instead he found out where she lived, and when she headed home, he would "just run into her." It didn't take long before Cecelia caught onto his game, but by that time she was interested in Paul, too, and it was not long before they were married. They would be together for 65 years.

Both Cecelia and Paul were strong-willed, and when he told her he was looking for new work that would take her away from the home and friends she had in Scarsdale, she resisted. But the job market for engineers with Paul's experience was drying up on the East Coast, and he got four major offers. He ultimately persuaded Cecelia to move to Sacramento where Paul took a job with Aerojet.

To give you an idea how fast the industry was growing in 1958: When Paul started at Aerojet, the company had six hundred people working in a single building. In two years there were 21,000 workers in a dozen structures. He was there for thirty years.

Two years ago, Paul lost Cecelia after a six-year battle with dementia. The last words she said to him before she passed were, "I love you."

Paul lives in Pebble Beach.

summer courses.' And my mother did. I made up the missed work and didn't lose a year."

Later, in college, Paul was majoring in chemical engineering but struggled because much of the study information was in German, a language that he had trouble grasping. Luckily, so to speak, he found himself with a rash over his body which his doctor attributed to his lab work, so Paul shifted to mechanical engineering. "That changed my life, thank God." No more learning German, or rashes.

Today, Paul is most of the way through writing a book about his life, one that he hopes will prompt young people to get excited about science and follow a path similar to his. Tentatively titled "In the Shadow of Genius," the book describes his work during the tense Cold War years in the design of the rockets and missiles that provided the United States both with protection from the Soviet Union and other potential aggressors, and with a leap forward in the space program that ations there. Removing the charm and patina of the equestrian center seems to be one of the central themes in the P.B. Co.'s downsizing and "reconstruction" plans for the equestrian center. The other is the company's ignorance of what constitutes any sort of equestrian center, much less one that has regional acclaim. I wish I had a dollar for every time I've heard someone say "What are they (the P.B. Co.) thinking?"

The equine environment that is projected is to horsemanship what putt putt golf is to a course designed by a Robert Trent Jones and simply does not reflect the image of Pebble Beach Resorts. That being said, I don't think it's too late for the P.B. Co. to do its homework and put some resources into creating something that embraces the rich equine sports history of the Del Monte Forest as well as making it a functional, competitive, and sustainable space.

Then and Now

Dear Editor,

1972-1973: There is the break-in at the Watergate. There are denials of complicity from the Nixon campaign. Nixon is re-elected to his second term. He assures the country "I am not a crook." Then leaks, and in May 1973, congressional hearings. The press is relentless in their pursuit of the story and their coverage of it. Hours and hours of the first televised congressional hearings are aired by all three networks and a fledgling PBS. 85 percent of the country tunes in, shocked and outraged by the revelations of deception, cloak and dagger shenanigans and outright lying at the highest levels of government.

2012-2013: Our embassy is attacked in Benghazi and our ambassador killed. Decisions not to intervene are followed by fabricated stories of the events and deception at the highest levels. We are told it was not a terrorist attack but rather a spontaneous demonstration to an outrageous youtube video. President Obama is re-elected to his second term. Then leaks, whistleblowers and in May 2013, congressional hearings. All three major networks, PBS and cable ignore the story except to ridicule FNC for pursuing it. There is no shock or outrage. The country thinks nothing out of the ordinary has happened; it's just another lie.

'The Beatles had it right'

Dear Editor,

I concur with your piece on taxes and the government taking its due. I believe this split between wealthy and poor has been a convenient smokescreen. Taxes are going up at the check-out line a penny here and a penny there; city by city. Parcel taxes pop-up to fund schools, parks, infrastructure, homeless shelters etc. Fees (portrayed as not taxation) rise for business licenses, building permits, planning applications, record keeping, data storage and administration. Gas tax revenue is falling since cars are getting better gas mileage so now we'll be taxed on miles driven, time of day we drive, if we drive at rush hour, if we cross into San Francisco and more as our roads deteriorate and mass transit is barely occupied. Taxes are planned for bags, fat, fast food and sugar in addition to raising sin taxes in to shape our behavior and doling out cash, pandering for votes and padding union pensions. Government will make you feel sequester pain if it must cut hand-out heroin. Both rich and poor are becoming slaves to the taxman; the Beatles had it right.

A Cornerstone in Luxury Real Estate for 100 Years

There's no place like home, because Mama was there

WHERE IS home for you? Some people live in the same place for many years or for most of their lives. Others have had a nomadic existence. Regardless of how many places we've lived, there is usually one place we think of us home.

I have such a house. It is like the one Dorothy was so glad to return to from her trip to Oz. I think of it often, especially on Mother's Day, because when I remember Mama I see her in that house. I lived there between the ages of 8 and 18. Many of the firsts in my life happened there. I got my first bike; had my first date that included my first kiss that didn't need confessing. It is where I learned to drive a car with a stick shift, graduated from high school, got my first job at an A&P. And Mama made it a home. But she didn't always make it easy.

She was Mom, Gramma, Big Aunt Ro, Rose, or Mrs. G. But she was Mama to me. She could be infuriating and irrepressible; irritating and irresistible. She could be as sharp as a tack, or as tactless as an Eyewitness News Reporter sticking a microphone in your face.

She was the Queen of Hugs, squeezing the breath from her grandchildren, yet she could leave me breathless with a psychological body punch that could have put Mike Tyson down for the count.

She instilled her love of literature in me at an early age. I knew Shakespeare before I knew nursery rhymes. From Portia's soliloquy from "The Merchant of Venice," I knew that the quality of mercy was not strained, except for Mama's mercy, which was often strained through guilt.

She loved old songs and sang them to anyone who would listen. "A good old fashioned girl with heart so true ..." described her perfectly. But so did, "You've got to please mama every night or you won't please mama at all." Pleasing Mama could be difficult. Ask a son. Or a daughter-in-law. Her standards were high. Even shopping for a Mother's Day card put pressure on me, since it had better be the best one I could find.

She began painting in her 60s. No lessons, yet with a minimum of brush strokes, she could stop a wave in mid-break or make a ballerina pirouette out of the frame. She was the best cook in the world. On meatless Fridays, she served Fettuccine Alfredo, before there was an Alfredo. Cookies? Compared to Mama, Mrs. Field is a bricklayer. If Giada De Laurentiis tasted Mama's meat sauce, she would quit her television show and seek anonymity in the witness protection program.

Bartlett's Quotations never printed anything she said. Yet some of the things she laid on her children could stand with the greats of literature and philosophy.

Mama on hygiene: "Since when isn't your face part of your body?" Followed by a scrubbing with a cloth that had the texture of a Saguaro cactus.

Mama on interpersonal relationships: "How can you and that girl be doing nothing until 1:30 in the morning?"

Mama on the propagation of the human race: "I can't wait until you have children of your own!" This was followed by a series of facial expressions and gestures that would confound a third-base coach.

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

Mama's personal motivational speech: "If you want any dinner tonight, you better get up and go to work, you lazy galoot."

Mama on cloning: "You're just like your father."

No, she didn't always make things easy, but life with Mama was never dull. We become realists as we grow older, preparing ourselves for the day we will attend a parent's funeral. However, we never prepare ourselves for attending a stroke. At her bedside our role reversal was complete: me, the concerned parent; she, the helpless child, afraid and seeking the future in my eyes. We needed understanding more than ever, but she couldn't speak and I didn't know what to say.

She slipped away as silently as the tide in one of her seascapes, leaving me an orphan on the shore. The world blinked at her passing and said I am too old to be an orphan. Oh? See Webster: parentless child. Age notwithstanding, alone is alone. If she were around today, I'd buy a card just to hear her say: "Is this the best you can do?"

If your mama is still alive, don't wait. Call her now.

First Quarter Report: Market Barometer extremely strong

WE ALL know real estate is bouncing back nicely in many parts of the country. In Silicon Valley, where many of our buyers come from, the markets are red hot. Even in places like Sacramento, hot-market craziness has hit. In the so-called "Fabulous Forties," a recent listing generated 24 over-asking-price, all-cash offers. That is sizzling.

As we reported at the end of last year, 2012 was significantly better than anything we had seen since the real estate bubble burst. The first quarter of 2013 continued the upward movement, but not in the frenzied way it is happening in some markets. The hottest indicator is the Market Barometer, a measurement of the percentage of listings in escrow. Those numbers were truly astounding on our April 1 reading. Two markets were over 80 percent, three over 50 percent and all the rest well above 20 percent, except for Pebble Beach, which was at 19 percent.

Our traditional measure of a reasonably good market has been any number over 20 percent. What these high numbers mean is the second quarter will be strong and the inventory is going down. These are great signs for sellers and a warning to buyers to get the lead out.

■ Dollar Volume and Prices

The dollar volume numbers were good but not great in relation to last year, up only 7 percent. Eight of the 10 markets had increases.

On the price front, the trend is up. Carmel had a significant 33 percent jump over the first quarter of last year. The quarter's median sales price was also higher than the median for all of 2012. Seven of the 10 markets posted median sales price gains. The Days on Market were down in eight markets, another positive sign.

The number of sales was barely up from last year, 333 closed transactions as opposed to 326 last year.

When you add all this all up — dollar volume, median sales prices, unit sales and days on the market — you arrive at plus figures across the board. Add to this the excellent barometer readings, and you have a good reason to be optimistic. Looks like 2013 is going to be a strong, if not frenzied, year for our local real estate market.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF MICHAEL L. McDERMED

Case Number MP 21087. To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of MICHAEL L. McDERMED.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by ELAINE McDERMED in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

The Petition for Probate requests that ELAINE McDERMED, JR. be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held on in this court as follows:

Date: June 12, 2013
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept: 16, Probate
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Attorney for petitioner:

You will be bidding on a lien, not the property itself. Placing the highest bid at trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (714) 573-1965 or visit this Internet Web site www. Priorityposting.com , using the file number assigned to this case 10CA01531. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. In addition, the borrower on the loan shall be sent a written notice if the sale has been postponed for at least ten (10) business days. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. The property heretofore described is being sold "as

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF ROSIE ALLIENE WOODS

Case Number MP 21041. To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of ROSIE ALLIENE WOODS.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by KEVEN ANTONIO MCKINNEY in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

The Petition for Probate requests that KEVEN ANTONIO MCKINNEY be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held on in this court as follows:

Date: June 26, 2013
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept: 16
ROOM: 16
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF CAESAR HELMUT STEEN

Case Number MP 21095
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be WHERE interested in the will or estate, or both, of CAESAR HELMUT STEEN.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE

has been filed by THOMAS HART HAWLEY in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

The Petition for Probate requests that THOMAS HART HAWLEY be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held on in this court as follows:

Date: June 19, 2013
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept: Probate
ROOM: 16

Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Agujito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. If you are the highest bidder at a trustee auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (619)590-1221 or visit the internet website www.rpps.com, using the file number assigned to this case 1379005-31. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web Site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. For sales information: (619)590-1221. Cal-Western Reconveyance Corporation, 525 East Main Street, P.O. 93923. The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. The total amount of the unpaid balance with interest thereon of the obligation secured by the property to be sold plus reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale is $1,902,299.28. It is possible that at the time of sale the opening bid may be less than the total indebtedness due. In addition to cash, the Trustee will accept cashier's checks drawn on a state or national bank, a check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, savings association, or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state. Said sale will be made, in an "AS IS" condition, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession or encumbrances, to satisfy the indebtedness secured by said Deed of Trust, advances thereunder, with interest as provided, and the unpaid principal of the Note secured by said Deed of Trust with interest thereon as provided in said Note, plus fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on a property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. CALLS

SUNDAY, APRIL 28

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Family members on San Carlos Street involved in a verbal/physical dispute over father having an extramarital affair. Some parties involved were reluctant to cooperate. No criminal prosecution and informational report only.

Pacific Grove: Subject came to the police department to turn in a found vial containing possible cremated remains (ashes). Item placed into evidence for safekeeping.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject reported the loss of a wallet while patronizing shops in the commercial district.

Pacific Grove: Non-injury DUI collision on Forest Avenue.

Pacific Grove: Unattended death on Funston. Coroner contacted; released body to morgue service. Appeared natural.

Carmel area: On South Carmel Hills Drive, a victim called to report an unidentified suspect stole part of a hedge from the victim's front yard/property.

Pacific Grove: Subject brought in a frame of a mini revolver. The reporting party stated she located the gun frame on the rocks in the 1000 block of Ocean View Boulevard. The serial number was checked, and there were no wants on it. The pistol grips, trigger and cylinder are missing. The gun frame is to be destroyed. Placed into evidence.

Pacific Grove: Subject on Short Street reported her garbage taken.

Pacific Grove: Non-injury DUI collision on Forest Avenue. A 56-year-old female suspect was arrested.

MONDAY, APRIL 29

Pacific Grove: Non-injury hit-and-run involving a parked vehicle on Forest Avenue.

Pacific Grove: Woman reported receiving a note on her car while visiting her daughter on Buena Vista. The note indicated she couldn't park there and that she would be towed. She stated she was in the street.

Pacific Grove: Report of a juvenile problem on Bayview. Referred to counseling.

Pacific Grove: Subject stopped for vehicle code infraction on Congress Avenue, and the 72-year-old driver was determined to have a suspended license. Subject arrested, cited and released.

Pacific Grove: Dispatched to family physical quarrel on Bayview. Parties separated when arrived on scene. Parents stated their teenage son has been unruly and aggressive toward them. Parents attempted to forcibly get their son to comply, within the law on corporal punishments, but son retaliated. Spoke with parents, son and three other siblings in the house. All siblings agreed the teenage son does get unruly. Parents want to send him to live with biological sister. Teenage son is a middle-school and high-school dropout, and there are many prior contacts regarding this family. No charges desired to be brought against teenage son for minor injuries to parents. Teenage son's claims of child abuse were unsubstantiated. Both the parents and the other three children vouched for no child abuse. Nothing further.

Carmel Valley: Woman reported her 17-year-old son ran away.

Carmel Valley: Anonymous person found a cell phone and turned it in.

Carmel Valley: Subject was arrested by CHP for driving under the influence.
