Hawk released after recovering from gunshot

By KELLY NIX

A HAWK that suffered a broken wing after being shot by a BB gun was released back into the wild Thursday morning.

SPCA for Monterey County officials rescued the red-tailed hawk in the Corral de Tierra area on July 10 after a resident called the animal welfare organization.

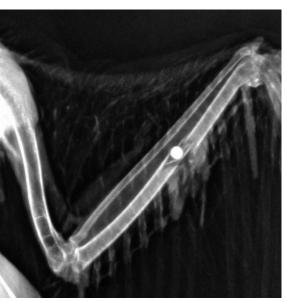

"The hawk was walking around somebody's backyard and unable to fly," SPCA spokeswoman Beth Brookhouser told The Pine Cone.

After undergoing surgery to repair the broken wing and subsequent physical therapy to regain proper mobility, the hawk was released at 11:15 a.m. When SPCA Wildlife Rescue Center supervisor Jessica Shipman let the bird go, he flew about five feet, landed, then sauntered to a nearby tree.

"He hopped up to the top branches and looked around for a while, surveying the area,"

An X-ray (above) shows a shattered bone in an injured hawk's wing and the BB that caused it. After the raptor was nursed back to health by the SPCA, it was as handsome as ever (left) and ready to be released back to the wild.

Tear-down of San Clemente Dam under way

By CHRIS COUNTS

ONLY A few months after the $83 million San Clemente Dam removal project received its final permit, workers have begun work on tearing down

"We're in the process of creating an access road" from Carmel Valley Road to the site, project manager Jeff Szytel told The Pine Cone. "Access is the first key step."

Because the project is subject to strict environmental oversight, workers are paying close attention to how the dam removal is impacting the surrounding flora and fauna. Not only are fences being erected to prevent wildlife from coming to the construction area, but workers are going to considerable lengths to move colonies of woodrats.

"Any active nest must be relocated," Szytel said. Szytel also said he is happy with the pace of construction. "Work is proceeding now that we have permits in hand," he said. "We're hoping to complete as much work as we can this year so we'll be well positioned to stay on schedule."

Work has begun to build an access road so construction traffic can travel from Carmel Valley Road to San Clemente Dam and tear it down.

For updates on traffic delays — as well as videos showing the project's progress — Szytel encouraged the public to visit www.sanclementedamremoval.org.

As a result of the construction, a section of Carmel Valley Road is restricted to one-lane traffic. But at least they waited until Concours Week was over.

WILL CELL TOWERS HURT MONARCHS?

By KELLY NIX

A PAIR of cell phone antennas disguised as hotel chimneys got the go-ahead from the Pacific Grove City Council Wednesday after a group of activists argued that radio signals from the devices could harm the city's monarch butterflies.

The council rejected a request by Nina Beety to continue a public hearing to consider an appeal of the city planning commission's July 18 approval of the antennas. Beety is among more than 10 people many of whom said they don't live in P.G. who spoke out Wednesday night against AT&T's plan to install the antennas.

"The butterflies will be long gone if we don't do something about this," according to a change.org petition organized by Augustina Ursino that had received about 400 signatures by Wednesday afternoon.

Numerous people at the council meeting also spoke in favor of the antennas, which some said are necessary for emergency phone calls.

AT&T wants to place the antennas inside faux chimney enclosures at The Wilkies Inn at 1038

Managing Concours Week success no easy feat

By MARY SCHLEY

AN UNFORTUNATE truck crash, a fallen Monterey pine and poorly timed tree work along Highway 1 only served to highlight a fact many Monterey Peninsula residents already know: Concours Week is so successful and draws such large crowds that even when the roads are open, they are clogged with cars. Any hiccup, and the snarls stop being a frustrating inconvenience and turn into a maddening mess.

As the 10-day period that culminates with the world-famous Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance adds more and more events, and the success of each increases, public officials and key decision makers are contemplating how to accommodate rising attendance without killing the goose that laid the golden egg.

Over the last two weeks, traffic was seriously backed up at various times on all the principal arteries and on city streets seemingly everywhere. The worst was probably leaving Carmel Valley.

Valley resident Carol Vetter found herself caught up in the jam induced by the Caltrans tree work on Highway 1 Aug. 9 when she tried to get to Pacific Grove. After an hour, she had moved hardly at all.

"I finally gave up and headed back toward the mouth of the valley, only to find out that the traffic was backed up even to Rio Road east to Via Nona Marie, where the cars had blocked my way to the post office. No problem, I went to Carmel Rancho, turned left and found that traffic was backed up on that road, too," she said, so she parked the car and walked, just like many others in the area were, including the workers at the Big Sur Marathon office who wondered if they would have to walk home that night. "Praise God it was a lovely day for walking, and when the Concours traffic hit [later in the week], it was a piece of cake in comparison.'

The three events held within the city limits of Carmel — the Concours on the Avenue Tuesday, the Tour d'Elegance Thursday and the Pacific Grove Auto Rally Friday — came off without a hitch, according to Mayor Jason Burnett.

"I didn't get a single complaint," he said. "I got tons of positive feedback from businesses and residents and visitors."

Nonetheless, he, city administrator Jason Stilwell, Carmel Police Chief Mike Calhoun and other department heads will meet to assess what logistical improvements might be made in the future, from slowing drivers as

Have you seen this Corvette?

By MARY SCHLEY

A RACE fan's beloved 1962 Corvette was quietly rolled out of its parking spot at a Pacific Grove B&B while its owners were steps away, a vintage Impala was stolen from an auction's parking area monitored by professional security guards, and two more historic Chevys were taken from a Monterey golf course used by another auction house over the weekend.

With thousands of people in town for the historic races at Mazda Raceway, the Pebble Beach Concours, several major auctions, shows, rallies and other events - many of them driving beautiful collector cars of their own — the Monterey Peninsula became a "target-rich environment for thieves," noted Pat Monahan, whose 1962 Corvette was stolen Saturday night, despite his making every effort to leave it in a secure, out-of-sight spot in the parking lot of the B&B where he and his wife stayed.

"I took every precaution, I thought," he said, adding that the red Corvette with a hardtop was stolen on Aug. 17, sometime between 8:30 p.m., when they returned from dinner, and 9:30 p.m., when another guest noticed the 'Vette wasn't in its usual

"They couldn't start the car — it's loud, and everyone knew the car — so obviously they pushed it out, and once they got it out of the driveway, it's all downhill to the ocean," he said. "My view is they never did start it."

He's since blanketed Corvette owners groups, law enforcement agencies, dealers, auction houses, Internet groups, clubs, newsletters and the media with photos and details about the car and its disappearance,

'Rescue group' owner charged with criminal animal neglect

By KELLY NIX

CRIMINAL CHARGES have been filed against a woman who offered sick and neglected animals for sale without disclosing their conditions, the SPCA announced Wednesday, while many of the dogs SPCA workers seized from her are now up for

The Monterey County District Attorney's Office Wednesday filed five counts of animal neglect charges against Crystal Kisicki - who the SPCA said tried to sell 17 sick, thin and flea- and tick-infested pets outside PetSmart in Sand City for as much as $500.

Kisicki had 14 dogs and puppies, one kitten and two birds with her when welfare officers took the animals June 15. The animals were also hungry, thirsty and the birds were in a dirty cage and had feather loss, according to the SPCA for Monterey County.

"We are pleased that the [DA's office] filed charges in this case." SPCA spokeswoman Beth Brookhouser told The Pine Cone. "We hope this sad story makes people realize that not all rescues operate with animals' best interests at heart.'

The SPCA, which relies on donations, spent nearly $30,000 caring for the pets seized from Kisicki.

"This includes emergency and ongoing veterinary care, medicated dips to treat their skin infections, medications, food, board, and staff time spent caring for them," Brookhouser explained.

SPCA welfare officers contacted Kisicki at PetSmart after being given a tip by someone who paid $500 to adopt a puppy at PetCo at Del Monte Shopping Center the week before, the SPCA said.

That adopter took the puppy to a veterinarian after it began having coughing fits, severe itching and hair loss, Brookhouser said. While SPCA officers were speaking to Kisicki at PetSmart on June 15, another person who adopted a dog at Petco the previous week showed up and told officers about his ordeal.

Kisicki has no affiliation with Petco and PetSmart, and SPCA officials said PetSmart's managers were helpful in the investigation.

Kisicki's Fresno-based attorney, Eugene Action, declined to comment on the case until it has been resolved.

Adoptable dogs

Ten of the dogs seized have been restored to health and are now up for adoption, including a cocker spaniel/poodle mix, a Yorkshire terrier, Pomeranian, three Chihuahuas and a terrier mix.

Two young cockatiel birds are also adopt-

"Two additional dogs are in the adoption process and one is being treated for a kidney stone," Brookhouser said.

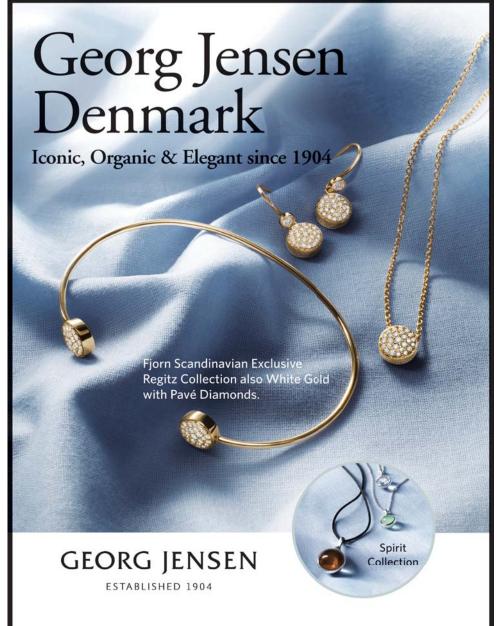

Several other dogs have behavioral issues and the SPCA is working with those animals in hopes they can eventually be made adoptable. Brookhouser said adopters will have to agree to return to the SPCA in the event the pets need to be reexamined during the criminal case.

Following the local SPCA's seizure, the Central California SPCA later rescued 61 additional animals from Kisicki's property in rural Fresno County.

Prosecutors also charged Kisicki, who operated the St. Francis All Creature Rescue and Sanctuary, with one count of driving on a suspended license.

She has been ordered to appear Sept. 25 in a Salinas courtroom to answer to the charges.

Those interested in adopting the dogs are asked to call the SPCA at (831) 373-2631. The SPCA is at 1002 Monterey-Salinas Highway across from Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca.

EIR FOR DOG CENTER? 'THERE'S NOT THAT MUCH TO STUDY,' SAYS DIEHL

By CHRIS COUNTS

m W HILE THEY have heard an earful of criticism and concerns in recent months about the dog training business they hope to open in Carmel Valley, Monterey County Planning Commissioner Martha Diehl and her two partners still believe they can convince residents and county officials the project should be approved.

And even if they're required to pay for an environmental impact report — which Diehl said she believes is unnecessary — they are still willing to move forward.

Diehl and two partners her husband, Ken Ecklund; and Ernie Mill — are seeking permission to open the Carmel Canine Sports Center on 45 acres at 8100 Valley Greens Drive. Located across the street from Quail Lodge, the center would offer training and agility facilities, a "safe and stressfree" place to let dogs walk or run off their leashes, and a social hub for their owners to meet. But project opponents say the center will generate excessive traffic, noise, lighting and special events — and they have concerns about its water usage as well.

Diehl told The Pine Cone the negative response to the project at first took her by surprise. But after paying close attention to the impacts a recent classic car event had on the neighborhood, she now knows why residents are wary of her new business. "I understand why our neighbors want more clarity," she said.

Plans were submitted to the county this week that Diehl said describe the project's impacts in greater detail. For instance, she said plans now show precisely where every parking spot and every light will be located. Noise and traffic concerns have been addressed in reports posted online at www.carmelcaninesports.com, she said. And despite irrigating 20 acres of grass hay fields and eight acres of grass training fields, the center will use far less water than the agricultural operation that preceded it on the property, she insisted.

Diehl urged the public to put the number of visitors her business will attract into per-

"There will never be more than 250 people on site at any time," she said. "That's less than the number of people who can fit into the Quail Lodge ballroom, and it's fewer than the number of meals Baja Cantina serves on a busy day."

But opponents

'classic situation

says it's a

for an EIR'

Addressing worries about the project diminishing the area's rural character, Diehl said it "falls within the spirit and guidelines of what Carmel Valley is supposed to be about."

While Diehl and her partners are confident they can sell their neighbors on the merits of the project, their efforts could be slowed down if an environmental impact report is required. At the June 3 Carmel Valley LUAC hearing on the project, chair Jan Brennan suggested "alternatives to this project need to be carefully considered, and that can only occur through an EIR."

While she and her partners are willing to pay for an EIR if it's required, Diehl said she doesn't believe such scrutiny is warranted.

"It's hard for me to understand what's hasn't already been covered," she said. "Aside from a 10-foot-by-4-foot shed, we're not building anything permanent. There's not that much to study.

Diehl is concerned some of those calling for an EIR are simply interested in slowing the project down, which would cost her and her partners money — and perhaps encourage them to give up the fight.

"When we met with homeowners, one individual stated, 'We're going to delay the project and make it financially infeasible," Diehl said.

She said the practice of using an EIR to delay or stop a project that doesn't harm the environment undermines the purpose and integrity of such a study. "EIRs are important," she said. "We need them." But if they are required simply as a delay tactic, "people won't believe in them anymore. It does us all a disservice."

Attorney Michael Stamp, who represents a group of homeowners (friendsofquail.com) opposed to the project, said he believes an EIR is necessary — and ultimately will be required.

"I think this is a classic situation for an EIR," Stamp said. "There's plenty to talk about. There are water issues, zoning issues and incompatibilities with the general plan. Martha says she has a good traffic report and we say she doesn't. I don't think I've seen this many disputed issues for a long time."

Stevenson grad lands Fulbright Scholarship

STEVENSON SCHOOL graduate Sophia Albov unexpectedly learned she'd been awarded a prestigious Fulbright Scholarship during a geography conference in Los Angeles. The news brought her to the ground.

Sophia Albov

"I fell to my knees in the middle of the crowd," said Albov, who found out via an email message on her cell phone. "It was a mix of relief and disbelief. I was honored and in shock that this was really going to be able to happen."

Albov, 30, who also attended All Saints Episcopal Day School in Carmel Valley, had applied for the Fulbright and got it — a great honor and an outstanding academic achievement. The geography scholarship has led Albov to Finland to study organic farming.

"I will be working with University of Helsinki, University of Eastern Finland and MTT Agrifood Research studying the spread of organic agricultural methods," said Albov, a teaching assistant and geography graduate student at the University of Montana.

During her research, she will team up with Finnish farmers, researchers and policy makers.

The project "seeks to fill a knowledge gap in the sociogeographical development of the organic agriculture sector in Finland," she said. "Through these collaborations, I hope to gain an insider perspective on this understudied facet of Finnish organic agriculture.

She arrived in Helsinki Aug. 1 and will be in the capital for five months before moving to Joensuu, a smaller city in

"I wanted the opportunity to see more of the country and I am lucky to be affiliated with two stellar academic institutions," she said.

Tuition and expenses

Recipients of Fulbright grants are selected on the basis of academic and professional achievements and proven leadership potential. Albov is one of 1,700 U.S. citizens who will travel abroad for the 2013/2014 academic year through the Fulbright U.S. student program, which pays all expenses and tuition for nine months of study.

Albov is the daughter of Monterey attorney and Flaherty's Seafood Grill & Oyster Bar owner Michael Albov and his wife, Elizabeth.

When asked to give a few words about Sophia, an only child, Michael Albov said his daughter is "caring, bright, inquisitive, personally engaging," and she's excelled in nearly everything she's attempted.

"Liz and I realized to never underestimate Sophia's orga-

Albov's parents happened to be with her when she learned she received the Fulbright grant.

"Needless to say, there were tears all around," Michael Albov said.

After attending Stevenson, Albov attended California State University, Sacramento, where she graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in Government. Albov was on a successful path as a paralegal in that city when she realized she wanted

"My career was going very well, but I decided that I wanted to be doing something that I felt passionate about," she said, "so I decided to return to school and pursue a master's in geography from The University of Montana.

There, she met the University of Montana's professor and chair of geography, Dr. Sarah Halvorson, who would become an important mentor and one who would immediately recognized Albov's talents.

Halvorson "has really inspired and excited me about pursuing a Ph.D." Alboy said. "She also was the person who originally suggested that I apply for a Fulbright."

Even more impressive was that Halvorson urged Albov to apply after having only known her for a few weeks.

"It was pretty obvious," according to her father, "that even after a short time, her mentors saw that Sophia had special skills that qualified her to even try for the prestige of such an award."

Alboy, who was granted the Fulbright at the end of the first year of her master's program at Montana, intends to return to the university to complete her master's degree before pursuing her Ph.D. in the field.

Brookhouser said. "A few minutes later he took off and flew out of sight. It was wonderful to see him fly free again."

The SPCA, Brookhouser said, released the hawk in the general area where he were found, in part, so he can find his mate ... if he has one.

Veterinarians at the Avian and Exotic Clinic in Monterey and the SPCA wildlife center treated the hawk. X-rays showed the bird had a BB embedded in its left wing and a Once vets at the exotic clinic anesthetized the hawk and removed the BB from its wing, it was bandaged up and given pain medication and antibiotics. When the bird was strong enough and the bone had healed, SPCA workers began the delicate task of physical therapy.

"We moved his wings to get the muscles moving again," Brookhouser said.

The bird had been kept in the SPCA's largest aviary, an Lshaped enclosure that allows workers to determine if the recovering birds can fly left and right, which Brookhouser said the hawk was able to do with no problem.

Red-tailed hawks are protected under the Federal Migratory Bird Treaty Act, which makes it illegal to pursue, hunt, capture, kill or sell birds on the list without obtaining a special waiver.

The SPCA doesn't often see predatory birds with gunshot wounds. More often, they're hit by cars, Brookhouser said.

The SPCA is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who shot the hawk. The organization can be reached at (831) 373-2631.

Another murder mystery set in Carmel-by-the-Sea

By CHRIS COUNTS

IF AUTHOR Kathryn Gualtieri's mystery novels were true to life, Carmel would have been a scary place to live in the 1920s.

Gualtieri signs copies of "The Laundryman's Daughter," Saturday, Aug. 24, at Pilgrims Way bookstore. The book is the third in a series of murder mysteries set in Carmel in the years immediately following World War I.

Like her first two books — "Murder in the Pines" and "Murder Takes the Stage" — Gualtieri's latest work is centered around a young female reporter, Nora Finnegan, who works for The Carmel Pine Cone.

"The year is now 1923," Gualtieri told The Pine Cone. "The story concerns a Chinese laundryman who has an urgent need to find someone to watch his seven-year-old daughter while he goes out to deal with a business matter after work. He doesn't come back, and the next day he is found dead."

While the Carmel Gualtieri writes about has a surprisingly high murder rate, the author hopes readers don't take her subject matter too seriously. "I try and write a book that people will be entertained by and not horrified by," she said.

In addition to Saturday's book signing at 1 p.m. at Pilgrim's Way (Dolores between Fourth and Fifth), Gualtieri presents a talk at 3 p.m. Aug. 25 at River House Books in the Crossroads shopping center.

Danger to condors inspires drive to bury power lines

By CHRIS COUNTS

CAN CALIFORNIA condors, power lines and unobstructed views coexist? A resident believes they can — and she's circulating a petition to gather support for the idea of burying power lines along a 27-mile stretch of Highway 1 from Bixby Bridge to Esalen Institute.

After listening to her neighbors and PG&E officials discuss a proposal by the utility company to make power lines in the Partington Ridge area more visible to condors — a plan some residents have called "obtrusive" because of its impact on the scenic viewshed — Lyndall Demere took a drive up the coast. As Demere traveled through Big Sur Valley, she was struck by how many power lines she could see from Highway 1. "It astonished me to look up and see the webbing of power lines of all sizes blocking views of the redwoods," she told The Pine Cone.

Demere decided power lines need to be buried, not just in the Partington Ridge area, but along other parts of the coast as well. Such a project would, in her view, protect both condors and Big Sur's scenic viewshed.

Demere said she discussed the issue with Congressman Sam Farr, who encouraged to her launch the petition effort. The congressman, who lives part-time in Big Sur, supports the idea of burying the power lines down the coast.

"Big Sur is appreciated for its beautiful natural scenery, not for urban development," Farr said. "Burying the wires underground would restore the aesthetics of America's most scenic highway and help protect local wildlife, including the endangered California condor."

Since they were reintroduced to Big Sur by the Ventana Wildlife Society in 1997, four condors have been electrocuted by power lines. Three of those deaths occured along the slopes of Anderson Peak, where three miles of power lines were later buried at a cost of $4.3 million.

In addition to protecting condors and enhancing the scenic viewshed, there could be other benefits to burying power lines in Big Sur.

Lighthouse Ave. While the 27-foot antennas are expected to greatly improve cellular phone signal in that neighborhood, opponents believe they will emit radio signals that are harmful to adults, children and even the migrating monarch but-

"Microwave radiation from cell towers and wireless devices harms all life by damaging DNA, the immune system, reproduction and fertility, cells and cellular membranes, and causing cancer and tumors," according to an anonymous flyer distributed in P.G. this week.

The council, however, voted 5-1 in favor of AT&T's proposal. Councilman Dan Miller dissented and Ken Cuneo recused himself because he said he owns AT&T stock.

Beety and Ursino contend AT&T provided misinformation about the antennas and omitted information about potential harm to the city's monarchs, habitat and the insects' sanctuary off of Lighthouse Avenue.

We know that radiation from cell phone antennas disrupts the butterflies' immune system, behavior, development and senses," according to a "Save P.G. Butterflies" Facebook page created to spread the word about the antennas.

The activists contend an environmental impact report should have been prepared. However, the initial study for the project found that the amount of radio frequency electromagnetic fields produced by the antennas would comply with standards for limiting public exposure to RF energy "and would not cause a significant impact on humans and the environment."

The study also found that the only potentially significant impacts to humans would occur during construction and would involve "short-term increases in ambient noise levels."

The chimney antennas will replace a mobile cell antenna that AT&T set up at the city's cemetery.

Nighttime burglars chased and arrested

POLICE ARRESTED a trio of suspected car burglars after a Pacific Grove resident found them in his car just after 1 a.m. Wednesday and chased them to a waiting vehicle, which fled but was soon stopped by cops in Monterey.

The 19th Street resident saw two of the men in his unlocked car early the morning of Aug. 21 and chased them, but they ran and jumped into a car that was waiting nearby, according to PGPD Cmdr. John Miller. But he was able to describe the vehicle, and, moments later, Seaside police officers saw it on Del Monte Boulevard and stopped it. Miller said a search of the vehicle revealed property belonging to the 19th Street victim, as well items thought to belong to other victims who are still unknown.

The officers arrested the three occupants — 18-year-old Noziel Mendoza and 20-year-old Jesus Nieto, both of Castroville, and 27-year-old Salinas resident Joseph Olea booked them at the P.G. Police Department and then released them without requiring bail.

Water district to support contingency water plan

m T}$ HE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District will spend $800,000 over the next two years to help develop an alternative water supply project for the Peninsula, directors decided Monday.

Directors voted 5-1 to allow the district to enter into a cost-sharing agreement with DeepWater Desal LLC, a private company that's proposing a water project in Moss Landing to serve as a contingency plan if Cal Am's proposed desal plant in Marina doesn't come to fruition.

Over the next two years, the water district and DeepWater will split the costs — expected to be about $1.6 million — on environmental and permitting work.

While Cal Am's proposed project has the greatest likelihood of being given the green light by the state's Public Utilities Commission, the district wanted a backup plan in case the project is derailed by litigation or other circum-

Some farmers have spoken out against Cal Am's project, saying the wells for the desal facility could trample on their water rights since they might draw from the Salinas Valley groundwater basin, an agricultural source. The Monterey County Farm Bureau has also said it does "not support any water project that places a straw in the Salinas Valley aquifer."

"Hence, the risk of litigation over Salinas Valley groundwater rights is very high," according to the water district staff report.

And while water district directors in March decided that DeepWater's project was overall a better contingency plan than a competing Moss Landing desal proposal by developer Nader Agha, both projects "have great uncertainty," the district determined. "But the DeepWater Desal project can move more quickly and may offer advantages," water district staff wrote in a report given to directors this week.

Water district director Judi Lehman voted against the agreement, saying she didn't feel the district had given Agha's proposed desal project the consideration she thinks it deserves. Director Kristi Markey was not present.

Per the agreement the board approved, the district will reimburse DeepWater Desal for 50 percent of its costs from May of this year until April 30, 2015. The reimbursement costs are "not to exceed" $800,000.

Cal Am's proposed water project also includes water storage and water recycling components.

The six Peninsula mayors and more than a dozen agencies and groups endorsed the plan earlier this month by signing a host of water agreements.

The water project is necessary to comply with an order by the State Water Resources Control Board to reduce diversions from the Carmel River, the Peninsula's primary water source, by 70 percent.

However, Agha's attorney, David Balch, urged the board against approving an agreement with DeepWater Desal, warning it "simply invites needless litigation."

The agreement, he argued, violates the California Environmental Quality Act, in part, because the district will be financing environmental and permitting fees ahead of performing an environmental impact report for the project. Balch submitted a letter outlining Agha's concerns to the water district not long before Monday's board meeting.

Woman pleads guilty to elder abuse

By KELLY NIX

A MONTEREY woman who ran a money-managing business pleaded no contest to a felony count of financial elder abuse after she was found to have been stealing from her 95-year-old Pebble Beach client.

On Aug. 15, Sandee Palmer Larkin, 65, the owner of Larkin Financial and Assistance Services, entered the plea, which is the same as a guilty plea, in a Salinas courtroom.

Larkin, according to Monterey County Deputy District Attorney David Rabow, stole money from her elderly female client after being hired to pay bills and balance her checkbook.

"The family thought they had done everything right by hiring a 'professional' to make sure their loved one's bills were paid and nobody was stealing from her," Rabow said. "Unfortunately for them, Ms. Larkin did steal money from the elder victim."

For the work, Larkin paid herself with checks from her victim's account. However, she paid herself too much for several months, taking at least $5,000 she hadn't earned. The theft occurred between mid-2012 and September 2012, Rabow said.

"That is when the payments clearly got out of control," he told The Pine Cone. "There might have been some [theft] before, we are just not clear."

Monterey County Superior Court Judge Larry E. Hayes will decide Larkin's sentence on Sept. 24. Larkin faces a sentence ranging from felony probation to four years in jail.

People who believe they've been the victim of elder abuse should contact their local law enforcement agency or the county's adult protective services at (831) 883-7565.

Time lost = Brain lost

Tick, tick. If you or a loved one is having a stroke, call 911 or get to the hospital fast. The sooner you seek medical treatment, the sooner it can be determined if tPA (a clot-busting drug) can be administered. It's also extremely important to note the time you first noticed stroke symptoms. The longer you wait, the more brain cells die. they descend Ocean Avenue, to discouraging them from parking in ways that clog the city's already narrow streets.

"If you look at it in size, the Tuesday event was probably the largest event we've had, and our main goal is to keep things fluid, to keep things moving, because we are blocking the downtown area," Calhoun said. "Our main goal is managing events in our town to make sure they are manageable."

That means using more city staff, including the public works and forestry workers who assisted this year, and trying to recruit more volunteer workers from within, rather than coordinating efforts with other volunteer organizations outside the city.

"This year we really got public works more involved they were very appreciative, too," he said. "Maybe we'll stretch that further, like get more library staff involved.'

All told, Carmel police worked 79 hours of overtime, 24 of which were paid for by COTA founder Doug Freedman. Cpl. Steve Rana, who handles all of the logistics of Concours Week events, put in 21 hours of that overtime. OT pay for police officers averages about $44 per hour, plus benefits. Their efforts were augmented by volunteers Andy Hill and Lee Whitney, while public works and forestry staff worked 17 hours of overtime, at a cost of $970 to taxpayers.

"We're trying to develop our volunteer contingent and build our reserve staff," Calhoun said.

Caltrans debacle

In light of the Caltrans tree work along Highway 1 in the Carmel area that caused hours-long traffic jams back into Carmel Valley and south of Carmel the Friday before Concours Week, Burnett said he contacted officials with the state highway agency, seeking an explanation and assurance it wouldn't happen again.

Although apologetic about the traffic jams that made the short trip from the mouth of Carmel Valley to downtown Carmel take more than an hour, Caltrans District 5 director Tim Gubbins told him the tree work was necessary to address hazardous conditions and couldn't be delayed.

"We were made aware of a hazard with some large trees on Route 1, and our action was to remove the part of the trees so that they would not fall and block roadways, impede traffic or cause damage," he said in an email to Burnett, adding that while Caltrans inspects trees annually, this particular incident stemmed from a passerby's report. "Once we became aware of the hazard, we had to move quickly."

The job required a crane, and work crews ended up on the job longer after discovering the problem was more extensive than expected.

"Once we started on the work, we found out that we could not merely prune parts of the trees — they were in such a state that an entire removal had to be done," Gubbins continued. Delays would have been expensive and risky, so the crew "ended up continuing work and causing the disruption that you saw." "They've apologized and sincerely regret the inconvenience, the disruption to the visitors and to the community as a whole," Burnett said. "Just like we do, they are learning from this, and that's all that I can ask."

While the state agency acknowledges August is just about the worst time to close down lanes of Highway 1 to undertake any sort of work, he said, "They can't guarantee the same thing won't happen in the future. They have to keep our roads safe."

County crammed

Fifth District Supervisor Dave Potter, in whose district almost all of the Concours Week events occur, said he hopes to work with organizers to better coordinate the miscellaneous happenings so they don't unnecessarily bottleneck Monterey Peninsula roads.

An inescapable fact is that the automotive week draws more visitors to the area than any other event of the year even more than the U.S. Open golf tournament staged at Pebble Beach every decade — and the crowds are car people,

These people are all about their cars; they want to drive their cars and be seen in their cars," Potter observed. "The fact you have events going on simultaneously does create congestion," particularly on Friday, with the Quail Motorsports Gathering, Legends of the Autobahn, Concorso Italiano and the Pacific Grove Auto Rally.

"We're trying to eliminate the overlapping duplication of events so they don't all happen on the same road at the same time. And even on an average weekend, there's a queue heading into and out of town."

One potentially positive change is the planned relocation next year of Concorso Italiano from Laguna Seca golf course back to Bayonet Black Horse in Seaside, which will alleviate some of the Friday traffic on Highway 68, an artery already heavily used by commuters between Salinas and the Potter is planning on meeting with the California Highway Patrol to discuss traffic control issues, and to better utilize the county committee that addresses organizers' requests for event permits.

"We're doing a forensic analysis of what happened that week," he said.

Pebble's popularity

Within Del Monte Forest, which hosts the famed Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance and related events, including the record-setting Gooding & Co. auctions, the Tour d'Elegance, and numerous exhibits and parties, Pebble Beach Co. Executive Vice President Mark Stilwell said the company is examining ways to address traffic, especially on Saturday, when the Forest is not closed to general tourist traffic.

"We have a template for the traffic and parking plan, and every year after the event, we'll review it and make notes on how to tweak it for next year," he said Tuesday. "But we haven't had a post-event recap. I don't even know what our attendance numbers were, but the Sunday event in Pebble Beach went off spectacularly."

The company collaborates with Concours organizers, the CHP and other agencies to coordinate traffic flow and parking which is located along the coastline with attendees tled to the Lodge and 18th Fairway. Seventeen Mile Drive and the Forest are closed to tourist traffic on Concours

Saturday, though, saw crowds cruising through after paying the regular gate fee and then parking and exploring the P.B. resort and surrounding grounds, which already had many of the trappings of Concours, including the RetroAuto retail area and manufacturers' displays of new and concept cars along Peter Hay Golf Course and the equestrian center.

"It was really more the day traffic — people coming just to walk around Pebble Beach on a beautiful day and see the cars," Stilwell said. "Sunday is all ticketed spectators. Saturday is a little harder to predict, because on Saturday, nobody has a ticket."

Stilwell said organizers will discuss how to better accommodate cars, perhaps through additional signs or designated routes, on that day.

"That would be the first order of business, to see where there were traffic issues," he said. "Saturday, we definitely had some hiccups with traffic from the crowds that showed up, and we will definitely be looking at some improvements to traffic flow and parking."

hoping someone might see the vehicle he's owned for more than 20 years and return it to him.

"I would take the car back stripped," he said. "It has sentimental value — it's irreplaceable."

The car was insured for about $80,000, but Monahan said he couldn't build a replacement for that amount, "and it doesn't matter, because I could never build the same car. It was pristine — it had never been hit anywhere — it was spotless."

Meanwhile, three other vintage Chevys were stolen from parking areas used by auction houses.

Monterey Police Lt. Leslie Sonne said a red 1961 Impala SS 409 valued at $220,000 was taken from the waterfront lot at Fisherman's Wharf and Del Monte Avenue sometime between 10:30 p.m. Aug. 16 and 10:30 a.m. Aug. 17. Bearing Idaho plate SS409, the four-speed convertible "was the only 1961 SS known with all original parts," she said, and the car had crossed the block at the Russo & Steele Auction Friday night but didn't sell, so company officials had parked it in one of the lots guarded by a private security firm they hired to keep an eye on the inventory.

Handling the disappearance of two cars from the Del Monte Golf Course at the Hyatt Regency Monterey, California Highway Patrol public information officer Bob Lehman said a white convertible 1961 Impala was reported stolen Aug. 17, and a 1957 Bel Air, cream with a white top, was reported missing Aug. 18.

"It's unknown if they went missing at the same time and were just reported on different days," Lehman said. "There's no evidence if someone loaded them on a trailer or drove them away. Officers haven't determined how they were removed from the course." The cars were associated with dealers in Iowa and Indiana, and were in the custody and care of the Mecum Auction.

"It's pretty rare to have vehicles of this nature stolen," Lehman continued, since they are conspicuous and can't necessarily be parted out easily.

While police have no leads, that doesn't mean one of these stories couldn't have a happy ending, just as it did for a friend of Pine Cone advertising executive Meena Lewellen.

"Years ago, a friend of mine had his classic Impala stolen from him in Marina," she recalled. A few years later while at Cherry's Jubilee — a show-and-shine vintage car event at the racetrack — he saw a car of the same make and model as his and became a bit misty eyed.

"Reminiscing with a friend and saying how much he missed his car, he was checking it out and noticed how it was so close to his car," she said. "He had kept the key on his key ring and tried it in the door, and it worked! He contacted the authorities and got his car back."

Monahan hopes his efforts might help his Corvette return

Jewish music is tasty, too

By CHRIS COUNTS

IN ADDITION to celebrating the wonders of a diverse and delectable cuisine, Sunday's 26th annual Jewish Food Festival at Congregation Beth Israel showcases a rich and enduring musical tradition.

Playing Jewish music for this year's event are a folk music duo from Aromas, Alisa Fineman and Kimball Hurd; a Santa Cruzbased ensemble, Hoo-Tza-Tza; and a trio from Carmel, Klezmer-by-the-Sea.

Regular performers at the yearly festival, Fineman and Hurd present a mix of contemporary, traditional and original music "including poems, prayers and love songs."

"Jewish music is incredibly varied," Fineman told The Pine Cone. "It's bittersweet and it's joyous. It's so beautiful — it comes from the heart."

With Laurie Tanenbaum on violin, Ken Mowrey on percussion, bouzouki and guitar, and Susan Wagner on accordion, Hoo-Tza-Tza specializes in Klezmer and Gypsy music. "They're really cool musicians," Fineman said. "We adore playing with them."

Klezmer-by-the-Sea features Ari Freedman on cello and bass, Peter Mellinger on violin and Rich Denier on accordion. They bring together Gypsy music, Eastern European music, Middle Eastern music and jazz. "It's world music," Fineman added. "They're local gems."

As its name implies, the main course of the festival is its generous feast of latkes, blintzes and other kosher treats. The event also features a fundraising silent auction, Israeli folk dancing, storytelling, congregation tours, an arts and crafts fair, and an enactment of a traditional Jewish wedding.

The festival starts at 10:30 p.m. Congregation Beth Israel is located at 5716 Carmel Valley Road. Guests are encouraged to park at Carmel Middle School and use the shuttle. Call (831) 624-2015 or visit www.carmelbethisrael.com.

Homegrown tomatoes, Pinot and pizza, and edible art

By MARY SCHLEY

JON KASKY and Nancy Rohan have several hundred children.

Considering the TLC they bestow upon the garden filled with more than 500 vines of 40 different varieties of heirloom tomatoes, along with other fruits, vegetables and herbs, on their one-acre homestead in Carmel Valley, you could say that.

Cultivated in the valley sunshine, their heirlooms boast names like Indira Gandhi, Black From Tula, Hippy Zebra, Cherokee Purple, Black Bear, Chocolate Vintage, Kellogg's Breakfast, Big Rainbow, Tye Dye and Yellow Ruffles, and they figure prominently in the summertime and fall fare prepared by Kasky and Rohan for their catering clients, whether at a wedding at Holman Ranch just up the road, or for hungry spectators at races over the hill at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca.

The pair that make up Paradise Catering often incorporate the unusual and heirloom vegetables they grow — including squash, peppers, beans, lettuce, herbs, greens, garnishes, wine grapes, citrus and mushrooms — into their cooking.

Roughly half the produce they use in is cultivated in their garden, which is enriched by compost from the scraps from their commercial kitchen and rainwater they capture themselves.

They travel extensively and buy rare seeds — such as the orchid-colored radicchio Kasky found during a trip to Umbria, Italy, in 2009 — and cultivate them at home to use in dishes that set them apart from other local caterers.

Kasky, in particular, enjoys using colorful ingredients in his cuisine, from the edible flower petals tucked underneath clear rice paper in his spring rolls, to the "tye-die" compound butter served alongside fresh ciabatta bread. His goal is to offer "a dining experience as vibrant to the eyes as it is to the palate."

Considering how much of their menu is based on what's growing right outside their door, it's not surprising that Kasky and Rohan's dishes are highly seasonal.

A recent lunch, for instance, included Chardonnay grapes on endive with melted Brie; heirloom lettuce with candied pecans, chevre, edible flowers and their signature Honey-of-a-Thyme Vinaigrette; Purple Haze carrots with ginger and summer squash; and lemon pound cake with grilled white peaches with Grand Marnier crème Anglaise.

Despite being in business together for a quarter-century, the couple remain excited and effusive about what they do, and while weddings make up a large portion of their business — Rohan says she loves helping couples discover just how delicious the food at their celebrations can be — they also cook for all sorts of events, large and small, fancy and casual.

■ Claws for a cause

Watching her son "as he could have so easily closed his eyes and slipped into a diabetic coma" was plenty of motivation for Stephanie Morgan to fight even harder to find a cure for the Type 1 diabetes with which her little boy, Landon, is afflicted.

"I want to bring awareness. I want people to understand what type 1 is and does," she said. "Yes, it's manageable. But it is scary and can claim my son overnight or within minutes if we aren't on top of it."

Last year, Morgan and her friends and family launched their own fundraiser for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation: a Louisiana-style lobster boil called Claws for a Cause that raised $10,000 for JDRF in its inaugural effort.

"We had about 160 guests, and it was an incredible night," she said.

This year's lobster feast will be held Friday, Sept. 6, from 6 to 10:30 p.m. in the Amaral Barn at 23616 Parker Road in Salinas. Presented by Cajun Coastal Catering, the dinner will be complemented by silent and live auctions, a 50/50 raffle and dancing to the tunes of Louis DiPrestoro. Tickets cost $85 per person. Email stephmorgan48@gmail.com or call (831) 601-5721.

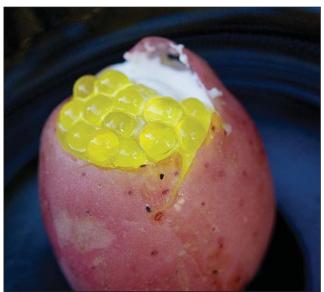

■ Pizza & Pinot for everyone!

Freshly made wood-fired pizzas paired with Morgan's finest Pinots is a killer combination, and the newly remodeled tasting room in the Crossroads shopping center will offer plenty of both during Pizza & Pinot Friday, Sept. 6, from 5 to 8 p.m.

Guests (age 21 and over) who pay $20 to attend ($15 for wine club members), will get their fill of artisan romaine Caesar salad and

■ Intercontinental affairs and edible art

Sierra Mar at the Post Ranch Inn in Big Sur is presenting an Intercontinental Affair Dinner, a six-course feast featuring dishes from Big Sur, to Bali, to Singapore. Guest chefs Will Goldfarb and Janice Wong will show off their skills at the dinner Saturday, Sept. 7.

Goldfarb was executive pastry chef at El Bulli in Spain and now works in Bali, while Wong presides over a famous pastry bar in Singapore. Working alongside Sierra Mar pastry chef Yulanda Santos, they will collaborate at a private home in Big Sur to create a culinary excursion with wine pairings from Sierra Mar's award-winning cellar. The International Affair will begin at 5:30 p.m. with Champagne and canapés, followed by dinner at 6:30, and the cost is $250 per person, including tip. Shuttles will be provided from the inn to the home.

The following day, a dessert tasting and gallery, Eat the Art, will be held at the MEarth habitat project at Carmel Middle School, featuring Goldfarb, Wong and Santos, as well as Marinus pastry chef Ben Spungin and Ron Mendoza, pastry chef at Aubergine. The dessert tasting will begin at 5 p.m., with the gallery displaying "dessert art that guests are encouraged to devour with their eyes and taste buds" opening at 7.

The cost is $85 per person, or $30 just to explore the gallery, and proceeds will bene-

Amateur chefs will do their best to impress, too, and professional bartenders will mix up their top margaritas for a competition as well.

The most famous sculptor in the family, Agnes is the oldest child of Zimbabwean sculptor Claude Nyanhongo, who helped pioneer the Shona Art Movement in the 1960s. Claude and his contemporaries discovered that Zimbabwe's abundant deposits of serpentine provided the raw material necessary to create beautifully distinct carvings. The resulting art movement attracted many admirers, including Queen Elizabeth II and one of the greatest of all contemporary artists, Pablo Picasso.

Like her father did, Agnes creates figurative work noted for its elegant simplicity and dignified portrayal of its subjects. "She is the most prominent and successful sculptor in Zimbabwe and one of most acknowledged female artists in all of Africa," Potigian said.

The gallery owner also called Moses "a rising star" in the field of Shona sculpture. He will present a demonstration of his sculpting technique Sunday, Aug. 25, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., in Piccadilly Park on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh.

Ten percent of the proceeds from the sale of the sculpture will be used to build classrooms at the Maulana School for Orphans in Zimbabwe. Located just outside the country's capital city, Harare, the school provides an education — as well as food and clothing for about 1,700 youngsters orphaned as a result of the country's devastating AIDS epi-

■ More than a great shot

In an exhibit, "Between Shadows," opening Saturday, Aug. 24, at the Center of Photographic Art, Susan Burnstine and Traer Scott use inventive approaches to create otherworldly images.

At first glance, Burnstine's distinctive photographs appear to be the result of digital manipulation. But in reality, they're captured by a camera unlike any other.

"She builds her own cameras using parts from vintage cameras, as well as parts from household objects," explained Nicole Garzino, executive director of the center. "By cobbling together her cameras, she's an inventor as well as a photographer."

Garzino calls Burnstine's photographs "out of focus like a dream" and "visually

While the two women create very different images, they share a common trait: "They're going beyond simply taking a great shot," Garzino added.

Burnstine and Scott present a talk at 3 p.m. in Carpenter Hall, and a reception follows at 4 in the Center for Photographic Art. The exhibit will be on display through Oct. 12. The gallery is located in Sunset Center at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 625-5181 or visit www.sunsetcenter.org.

Why the law is an ass

LAST WEEK'S front page had a horrible piece of news on it. The story wasn't our lead, because it didn't happen in Carmel, but it definitely should not be missed.

We're talking about the decision by the Monterey Airport District's board of directors to settle a lawsuit from Highway 68 activists who oppose safety improvements at the airport.

The activists won in Superior Court twice, thanks to utterly incomprehensible decisions from Judge Lydia Villarreal, so it's certainly understandable that the airport board decided to settle rather than appeal. Since the airport board is facing a December 2015 deadline to meet federal safety requirements, there was no time to waste. And if a trial court judge could side with the activists, an appeals court might as well. Dumber things have happened in California.

So with the flying public's safety at stake, and with the outcome of any appeal uncertain, we probably would have voted to settle, too, which the airport board did by agreeing not to build an emergency access road to the east end of the main runway. The road is needed for safety, but giving it up isn't the part of the settlement that was horrible.

The thing that made us choke on our breakfast when the reporter handed in the story was the airport board's decision to pay up to $1 million of the flying public's money to the activists' attorneys to compensate them for their work on the stupid lawsuit. The lawyers won, so state law entitles them to ask for full compensation, and at sky-high rates.

Why does the law do this? Ostensibly, so private citizens can afford to sue corrupt government agencies and big nasty companies to prevent them from harming the environment. In other words, awarding attorneys' fees to people who bring lawsuits with an "environmental" purpose is enshrined in the law supposedly to make sure David (the activist) goes after Goliath (government and corporations) with more than a slingshot.

However, what has really happened is that a few activists have used laws such as CEQA to become very powerful because of the numerous lawsuits they invariably file, and how much it costs to fight them. There is nothing helpless or weak about environmental Davids anymore — they run the show.

Furthermore, the lawsuits they bring aren't meant to kill big, bad Goliaths; they are meant to thwart majority rule. The airport board is made up of elected officials, duly put in office by votes of the people. Therefore, their decisions are entitled to a strong presumption that they represent majority opinion. But state environmental laws make the opposite presumption and empower tiny minorities to have their way, no matter what the majority needs or would prefer.

But there's another factor at play. In recent decades, both state and federal governments have enacted law after law which require local governments or the public to do this or that, and provide for enforcement solely by encouraging people to file private lawsuits over alleged violations. There are hundreds of examples, including CEQA, of course. Another prime example is the ADA, which requires property owners to do all sorts of things to accommodate the disabled, but gives them no way to find out if they have done everything the law requires, except by being sued and winning.

Why have our legislators and representatives done this? Partly to avoid the necessity of creating new enforcement bureaucracies — a worthy goal. But they've also done so because the people passing the bills and signing them into law like expensive lawsuits very much. Why? Because they are lawyers.

Most state and federal legislators are lawyers. So are the judges, the prosecutors and the top people in the executive branch. Which means that, when it comes to curtailing lawsuits and legal fees, they all have a conflict of interest. Scratch an elected official, a judge, or a high-level government administrator, and there's a good chance you'll find somebody who hopes to retire young and make a mint in private practice.

What can be done about this? Nothing, except kicking all the bastards out of office and replacing them with people who never went to law school. Unfortunately, the system we have now is so entrenched it's probably impossible to change, which means your pocket will continue to be picked by environmentalists and their $400-an-hour lawyers.

Charles Dickens was right: "The law is an ass — an idiot."

Letters to the Editor

Didn't like Prius joke Dear Editor,

We're all flawed human beings, and I imagine we've all laughed at another's misfortune at some time or another. Still, to take that several steps farther by publishing one's amusement in a newspaper and inviting the readership to laugh along strikes me as unnecessarily unkind.

It also occurred to me that to call this a case of being "in the wrong place at the wrong time" was quite the cliché. An inch or two one way or another, and the outcome would have been much less cute; this driver and any other occupants must be living about right. Graceful timing, certainly. In contrast, were I a Pine Cone reader who got a big kick out of this piece, I believe I'd find myself putting up the top on the convertible for a while, and not lingering next to

It would be good to read a quick apology in The Carmel Pine Cone.

Really didn't like Prius joke

I read with interest your article in the Aug. 16-22 issue about the tree-fall on Highway 68. I would like to write to the author, but notice that there is no byline; therefore, I'm sending this to you.

This article has to be the most insensitive, and nose-thumbingly pretentious piece I've ever read! Was this supposed to be humorous, or perhaps appeal to the entitled visitors we are tolerating this week? In either case, it wasn't, hopefully didn't, and truthfully was offensive at best. Do you realize that you didn't even acknowledge that there was a driver in that car or the effects this traumatic event had on her? (Yes, I have learned who it was, no thanks to your detailed article.) I supposed what would have made a difference would have been if the driver had been someone you knew, or maybe a Bentley driver, even if you did not know him/her.

Journalism of this caliber appeals to the small-minded, hard-hearted, class-conscious members of this society. Unfortunately, there appear to be plenty, at least on your staff. If you do not write an apology to article this next week, and report this incident factually and with compassion, I will disparage your newspaper to all who will listen.

Deborah Halfpenny, Carmel

Thought Prius joke 'shameful' Dear Editor,

I cannot believe how insensitive your newspaper and reporters are to make fun about my friend almost getting killed! A Bentley is more important than someone's life???!!!!! Come on! That was bad reporting that was not funny at all. Just because all of you in Carmel have tons of money and care more about expensive cars than life itself is no reason to make fun of a hard working, wonderful person who came inches from losing her life. Shame on The Carmel Pine Cone and shame on you for publishing this stuff. Hope all of you got a big laugh while my friend is still trying to cope emotionally over this accident. Our community is very distraught over all this.

Ghost of Hendrix drawing new crowds to fairgrounds

IT WAS almost embarrassing that Monterey had achieved iconic rock-and-roll status, yet the region had remained virtually stagnant since the Monterey Pop Festival in 1967.

It's like the ghost of Minnie Coyle still haunted the place. Coyle was the Monterey mayor in the 1960s who, as described by the Monterey County Herald, stood "like Horatio at the Bridge" to protect Monterey beyond the realm

By JOE LIVERNOIS

against the incursion of music-loving youth.

So the recent resurgence of live popular music on the Monterey Peninsula is one of the more agreeable cultural developments of the past several years.

Suddenly and seemingly out of nowhere, Monterey has again become a destination for high-profile acts capable of drawing thousands of third-generation rock fans.

The misfortune of the Golden State Theater notwithstanding, a new wave of amplified happiness is popping up across the Peninsula lately, sometimes in the most unlikely of venues.

This week's free KRML-sponsored performance by The Wild Feathers - on the rocks of Lovers Point, framed by Monterey Bay — was yet another sublime musical

Happily absorbing the fruits of the musical resurgence is the Monterey County Fair and Event Center, which this weekend will host the two-day First City Music Festival. The festival will draw a crowd of about 10,000 each day for a card that includes Modest Mouse, Passion Pit and Neko Case.

After decades as the forgotten venue of Jimi Hendrix's flaming Fender, the fairgrounds has hosted at least four weekend music festivals that drew huge crowds this year, including the ever-popular Jazz Festival, and at least a dozen smaller events that feature music, food or beverage.

That's not including oneshot concerts in recent years that dazzled large crowds, like Bob Dylan and Mumford and Sons' Gentlemen of the Road events.

Kelly Violini, the fair manager, said the emerging re-popularity of the fairgrounds as a credible venue for new and interesting musicians was not something that fair officials saw coming.

She said that David Drew, a Salinas promoter, launched a concert at the fairgrounds about five years ago that drew a huge crowd. "That opened the eyes of a lot of promoters in the Bay Area," she said. "We've got this Central Coast venue and people really seem to like the historical value of the stage. They all mention Jimi Hendrix."

The resurgence has been a shot in the arm for the fair district, a quasi-government state agency operated by a governor-appointed board. The state recently pulled funding to fair districts statewide, resulting in a loss of about $140,000 from the Monterey budget.

But the sudden popularity of the fairgrounds as a music venue has generated significantly more revenue for the district, which operates with an annual $1.9 million budget. The district now generates almost $800,000 in "interim" revenue, money earned during events at the fairgrounds during the 346 days the grounds aren't being used for the Monterey County Fair.

The "interim" revenue is so important to the upkeep and maintenance of the 22-acre fairgrounds that the fair board last year hired a coordinator who works fulltime to attract more events to the site.

The six-day fair draws about 75,000 people, but another 400,000 folks show up at the fairgrounds for a variety of other events during the rest of the year.

And, yes, the Monterey County Fair kicks off this year's run on Wednesday, with gates opening less than 72 hours after the First City Music Festival shuts down.

Which means this is a busy time for Kelly Violini, the fair manager.

"Other fair managers think I'm absolutely crazy to hold a two-day festival three days before the fair," Violini said. "I like to think that First City is extending the length of the fair. The fair was a nine-day event, back in the day, and it's been cut back to six days, but I tell everyone that First City gives us an extra couple of days."

CONDORS

One likely benefit would be providing more consistent electrical service during the wet season, and a reduction in the cost of repairing outages. Another potential benefit of putting lines underground would be reducing the fire hazard. And if power lines were buried, there would be less need to trim trees that threaten them — and less work required to maintain them.

Endorsing the idea of burying the power lines is Butch Kronlund, the president of the Big Sur Propery Owners Association. "I don't see any downside except for the cost," he said.

Burying 27 miles of lines — and completing the environmental studies that would be required for the project — would certainly cost millions of dollars, and it's unclear who would pay for it. But the reduction of future repair work and firefighting costs presumably could offset some of that expense.

A PG&E official said it's too early comment on Demere's proposal. "We have just been made aware of the petition," PG&E spokeswoman Nicole Liebelt said. "We need more time to thoroughly review the request."

Disgusted by Prius joke Dear Editor,

I read your funny little article about the tree that came crashing down on Highway 68. I was happy it gave you a chance to write about expensive cars, clearly a priority for you. Not a word about why a tree might snap like that, endangering all cars, expensive or not, and all drivers and passengers, well-to-do or not. Not a word about the driver of the Prius except a paragraph two aside that "no one had been injured," and not a word about how often this happens or what might be done to prevent it. But who wants to read crappy, boring journalism? More about expensive cars! And the Little Car Show, which is perhaps a euphemism for your mindset.

Christopher Noble, Charlotte, N.C.

Shocked by Prius joke Dear Editor,

I am shocked to read this story in your paper. I cannot imagine anyone treating the incident with such disdain for humanity. Everyone is no doubt grateful that the driver (and passengers?) were not seriously injured but the insult your paper gives in the flippant reporting of what must have been a frightening experience is uncalled for. I sincerely hope to read your apology in your next issue.

Ronna Dansky, Seattle, Wash.

Incensed by Prius joke

I'm writing to express how appalled I am in reading last week's article titled: "Tree smashes Prius on Highway 68 but at least it wasn't a Bentley." You should be ashamed for publishing this article as stated, lacking any compassion and not even mentioning the driver's name. Would you have published it this way if it was your mother, wife or sister? Not to mention that no one was concerned enough to state, or mention any inquiry, as to why this happened and whether or not the surrounding trees in the area would be investigated to see if they may have the same issue, but no worries, it wasn't a Bentley and your car show proceeded as planned. I am incensed, to say the least, at the callousness and arrogance that this portrays of your community. Unbelievable!

Rene Maus, Campbell

Appalled at Prius joke Dear Editor,

I am APPALLED at the headline accompanying your article today about the local resident who was nearly killed when a pine tree fell on her car and crushed it Thursday morning. Tasteless and insensitive don't begin to describe it. You owe the community an apology — as prominently displayed as your misguided attempt at — what? Humor?

I can only echo what Joseph Welch said to Sen. Joe McCarthy: "Have you no sense of decency, sir? At long last, have you left no sense of decency?"

Ken Peterson, Monterey

Prius headline was 'deeply offensive'

As both a Carmel resident and a friend of the woman driving the Prius, I found the headline, "Tree smashes Prius on Highway 68, but at least it wasn't a Bentley," deeply offensive. Your staff probably haven't any idea the joy the woman whose car was hit brings to thousands of people through her work. I would also like to suggest you consider how you might feel about this headline had the victim been your daughter or your wife or you. Also, there is nothing wrong about driving a 45-50 mpg Prius when compared with a 6-8 mpg Bentley. It turns out that some people actually care about their personal carbon footprint and their impact on the planet. How dare you conclude that the Bentley owner is somehow of more importance than the Prius owner.

One pissed off Prius owner.

Dan Eyde, Salinas

Prius joke showed editor's incompetence Dear Editor.

I am still chuckling over that brilliant, knee-slapping headline you published about the Prius that was crushed by a tree! Who really cares that the driver who came within an inch of losing her life is a well known member of the community beloved by thousands? Who would want to know why the tree fell and whether the same thing could happen to someone else? As we both know, the important thing is that the car wasn't a Bentley (thank God!) and that the traffic was cleared in time for the Little Car Show. Yay!

Does your editor ever wonder why he's stuck working at The Pine Cone instead of at a real newspaper with a larger circulation or even at his dream job at "The National Enquirer?" He may want to give that some thought.

Sharon Walker, Scotts Valley

Editor's note: Our front-page story last week — "Tree smashes Prius on Highway 68, but at least it wasn't a Bentley" — was intended to humorously note the irony of a tree crashing onto a car during Concours Week, and to gently poke fun at the excesses of the Concours. Most people got the joke, but we humbly apologize to anyone who didn't or whose sensibilities were offended in any way.

For a while they lived with his grandparents up the hill from the Big Sur River Inn, and then his grandmother gave them a house in Carmel. When Don was 9 or 10, they moved out to midvalley. He went to River School, the middle school and then Carmel High. His father was a Monterey County sheriff's deputy and his mother a teaching assistant.

"I played sports — football and track and field — and my dad always used to love to go to the games. He even went and got his bus driver's license so he could drive the team and see the away games," Don recalled.

After graduating from high school, he started at MPC, but having fun seemed to be a little more important than school.

"I found out that I was really good at pool, so a friend of mine and I decided to become pool sharks, and we worked our way down into Mexico and up over to Arizona, and then back over to California, just playing pool," he said.

He didn't tell his parents where he was or when he'd be back, but his father, the trained investigator, tracked him

When Don got back to Monterey, his father said, "Just come home for one night. Have a shower; we'll cook dinner." Don agreed. That night, his father asked his son if he had ever thought about the military. "No way," was Don's response, but then he thought about the idea differently. They talked about the rescue team that his father had been on at the sheriff's department, which brought back good memories for both of them. Don loved his father's stories and wanted to

So he joined the Coast Guard, and was stationed in Long Beach on a 378-foot cutter that patrolled off the coast of Alaska for stints of three and four months at a time.

"I was one of the master helmsmen, in charge of driving the ship," he said. "Sometimes we'd go into dangerous water, when the surf got really bad."

Swells that reached 30 feet would discourage smuggling, but not fishing.

"Conditions like that are extremely dangerous, and fishermen got washed overboard a lot," Don said. "Ships would even go down because they were trying to pull in their catch."

Later, on the other side of the county, Don was involved in fighting drug smuggling and in intercepting migrants during the Haitian boatlift — including some who needed to be rescued when their primitive, overloaded boats broke apart or

"I was jumping out of helicopters saving lives in sharkinfested waters," he said. "I aided in the saving of 143 lives."

Don also served at Station Monterey and was involved in numerous rescues. He liked the work so much that although he signed up for a four-year hitch, he remained in the Coast Guard for 10 years.

"I got out because of my kids," he said. The family moved two or three years.

Don missed the Coast Guard and wanted to go back but had injuries that made him ineligible. So instead he spent some time working the land at a farm in Missouri, and then he took a job in Alaska in the oil drilling business.

"I was working in Deadhorse, the very northernmost point of mainland Alaska. I think my first day at work it was 70 below zero. I stepped off the plane and my nose froze shut. It was crazy," he said.

The oil companies went to great lengths to protect the environment which could also benefit the workers.

"One time I got six hours of overtime to wait for a caribou to cross the road, because there was a herd of 10,000 on the other side of the road, and you had to wait for that one to join the herd," Don said. "Everything is so protected up there."

The job paid well, but the conditions were so hostile, his family had to stay behind in Missouri during his two-week stints. Eventually, Don got tired of the long-distance commuting and absences, so the family moved to Oregon, where

A TRIBUTE TO AL SMITH'S CARMELLEGENDS"

In 1928 Mora made a sculpture for L. C. Merrell's arcade at Dolores and 7th. The bowing couple, in early California dress, still resides in the inner courtyard of the El Paso building. The Depression led to another Carmel creation of Mora's. The lack of availability of actual currency inspired the Carmel Business Association to issue 'Carmel Dollars' as a means of legal tender for citizens and local merchants to keep commerce flowing. It was Jo who designed the paper 'money', which has taken on a new value now as a collectable. Earl F. Graff, the proprietor of the Carmel Dairy, hired Jo to help with the decorative elements in his shop on the corner of Ocean and Mission. The humorous murals that Mora painted, with their frolicking cows, left fond memories for those who saw them. His work for Graft expanded in the 30's and included the shops menus, souvenir calendars, milk bottle decorations and some of the dairy's Christmas card designs. A lasting reminder of Mora's work there is the exterior light sconce, with the two cows, on the corner of the building. It is a pleasure knowing Jo Mora's presence can still be felt and seen in the community he loved.

Fun, food, family, and fellowship at Congregation Beth Israel's food festival

SOME ORGANIZATIONS, when proselytizing, hand out religious tracts. Not Congregation Beth Israel. There the flock hands out latkes and rugelach. In any contest of outreach programs, Beth Israel's is by far the most appetizing. On Sunday, Aug. 25, Peninsula residents will get the chance to experience chicken soup for the soul the way Grandma made the soup — with matzo balls — at Congregation Beth Israel's 26th annual Jewish Food Festival.

"It's my 20th food festival," said Rabbi Bruce Greenbaum.

"And I remain the festival's official taster."

The festive and welcoming atmosphere of Congregation Beth Israel is reflected in Rabbi Greenbaum. After spending a few moments with this congenial man, I was ready to turn in my Giants baseball cap for a yarmulke.

Of course the festival is about food, but Rabbi Greenbaum points out that it is also a way to let the public know who and what

"Judaism encompasses so many lifeenriching themes. It gives meaning and purpose to existence. We can find the large and fundamental challenges of our lives manifested in Judaism: the personal ideal, the ideal family, the social-ethnic ideal, the ideal of purpose and of education, and the ideal of peace," Rabbi Greenbaum said.

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

Greenbaum has used those principles to involve himself in his congregation and the community at large. Since his arrival at Beth Israel in 1994 he has developed a confirmation program for students in grades 8 to 10 and built up the youth group programs. Today the CBI confirmation program has more than 25 students enrollees, and three active youth groups.

He has also helped establish a preschool program, a Best Years (seniors) Program, and strengthened Chavurah (fellowship) groups, while supporting the Social Action Committee, and adult education events.

Greenbaum is a district leader for local Rotary Clubs, a chaplain for Community Hospital and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office, and is active in the Monterey Peninsula Ministerial Association.

To help the community understand the "who" and the "what" of Congregation Beth Israel, Greenbaum will conduct several 45 minute instructional sessions in the sanctuary during the food festival, members of the congregation will conduct a traditional mock Jewish wedding with the recitation of the Sheva Brachot (seven blessings), and there will be craft booths featuring Jewish crafts.

Greenbaum says that the food festival is also a way to bring the congregation together. More than 200 members of Beth Israel participate in some way to pull off this annual event. Greenbaum's wife, Susan, is in charge of the volunteers.

"It's pretty hard to say no to the rabbi's wife," Greenbaum said.

Oh, and did I mention that there will be food? The entire day before the festival is devoted to food preparation, which begins early in the morning. The line at the latke booth is usually the longest. Take it from me, the latkes are to die for. There are three different kinds of crispy latkes served with apple sauce and sour cream. Get them while they're hot!

Are you pastrami or corned beef? Depends on how you like your brisket. After curing, corned beef is usually boiled, while pastrami is coated in a spice mixture, smoked, and then slowly steamed. It really doesn't matter, since both of these ventures into traditional Jewish gastronomy are served thinly sliced and then piled high on seeded deli rye, with cole slaw, dill pickle and condiments on the side. By the way, the bread is from Gayle's Bakery in Capitola. And don't forget to wash it all down with a New York egg cream.

I mentioned rugelach, but there will be more homemade treats such as mandelbrot (biscotti to my forebears) and hamentashen (the delicious three-cornered cookies that can be filled with poppy seeds, prunes, nuts, dates, apricots, apples, fruit preserves, cherries, chocolate, dulce de leche, halva, or even caramel or cheese). And, of course, there will be strudel and New York cheesecake.

The variety of food spills over into the Middle East with delicacies such as falafel in pita with sides of salad and tahina, or tabouli and hummus served with pita, and even the Greenbaum platter with falafel, tabouli, hummus, salad and pita.

More than 3,000 people take in this famous festival each year. The hours are 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Don't leave your kids home, as there is a children's section staffed by pre-school teachers. Shuttle buses will run between Carmel Middle School and the festival site.

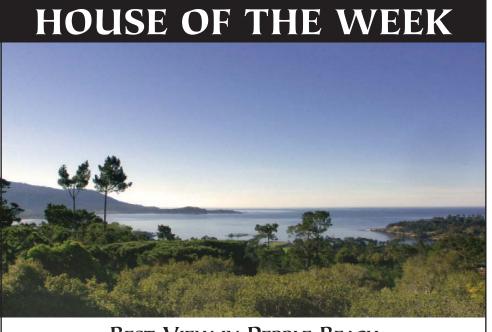

Congregation Beth Israel has been a welcome and welcoming presence in our community for more than sixty years. Do yourself a favor and savor the fun, food, and fellowship at its location at 5716 Carmel Valley Road, a short distance from Highway 1.
