Council to spend $900K for new restrooms on Scenic Road

By MARY SCHLEY

BUILDING PERMANENT bathrooms on the bluffs at the south end of Carmel Beach will cost nearly twice what city officials estimated a year ago, according to a contract approved by the city council April 1. The lowest of just two bidders on the project, Tomblason, Inc., will be paid $619,654, plus another $92,948 to cover contingencies, to build the bathrooms, which have been in the works for more than a decade.

Designed by architect Rob Carver, the permanent building to replace the porta-potties at Scenic and Santa Lucia was finally approved by the planning commission in November 2012 after multiple hearings and design changes. In last year's budget, the total cost of the project — which will include two flush toilets, a wash basin, janitorial closet, landscaping and a green roof, a rock wall, a drinking fountain and "an interpretive panel on the Coastal Trail" — was estimated at $379,182, which would be offset by a taxpayer-funded grant from the California Coastal Conservancy.

At the April 1 meeting, the council also voted to accept $150,000 from the conservancy to put toward the work.

Before the votes on the grant and the construction contract, former Mayor Sue McCloud asked for those items to be pulled off the consent calendar, which can be approved without discussion, so she could comment on them. According to administrative services director Sharon Friedrichsen's report,

Sand City 'ecoresort' OK'd by coastal commission

■ Developer hopes to start building soon

By KELLY NIX

THAT RAREST of events in California since the passage of the Coastal Act in 1976 — the construction of a new oceanfront hotel — is about to occur. The California Coastal Commission complied with a court order and granted a permit for the Sand City "Ecoresort" Friday.

RENDERING/COURTESY ED GHANDOUR

A new hotel on the site of a former sand mine will be added to the shore of Monterey Bay, after the coastal commission approved a permit for it last week. Highway 1 is at upper left.

The owner of the project, Ed Ghandour, who has been working on permits for his hotel for more than 20 years, said he is hopeful construction crews can break ground soon.

Meeting in Santa Barbara April 11, coastal commissioners voted 10-2 to issue a coastal development permit for the project. The resort includes 184 hotel rooms, 184 condominium units, restaurants and other amenities.

Zoning of the parcel for "visitor serving uses" was approved by the coastal commission in 1986 and later OK'd again as part of a settlement with Sand City that included designating most of the city's beach as open space. Despite that agreement, after Sand City approved the Ghandour project in 1998, the famously strict coastal commission fought tooth and nail not to give it a permit — a battle that included numerous lawsuits and lasted two decades.

"We are elated at winning project approval," said Sand City Mayor Dave Pendergrass. "This was a 21-year war with the coastal commission and all its political maneuvers." Pendergrass said Ghandour had the commission "pinned against the wall" because he won in court almost every time.

After the long battle, Ghandour said he's hopeful he can start building a lot more quickly than it took to get permits.

"We would like construction to begin in less than a year," Ghandour said from

It really pays to be a meter maid in Monterey

By KELLY NIX

CONSIDER THE following salaries: Parking attendant — $100,000, street sweeper — $100,000, meter maid — $90,000.

Those are just a few very generous pay rates the City of Monterey gives its workers.

Not surprisingly, the city's police officers, firefighters and city hall officials have the city's biggest salaries, with seven of the 10 highest paid Monterey workers in 2012 being Monterey Fire employees, according to the State Controller's Office.

What's more eye opening, though, is the amount other

Monterey workers made.

For instance, who knew that those who man the kiosks at the city's parking facilities were paid so well? Six of Monterey's parking attendants earned total compensation of more than $80,000 in 2012, with three making $87,142, $93,891 and $100,991. A senior parking controls technician earned a total of $111,017 while an administrative assistant in the parking division received $73,451.

Monterey's "parking superintendent" received a total of $173,977, which included salary of $135,150 and $38,827 in health and retirement benefits, the city's traffic engineer

Brita Sigourney already planning for 2018 games

By CHRIS COUNTS

TWO MONTHS after finishing sixth in the Ladies Ski Halfpipe finals at the 2014 Winter Olympics in Sochi, Russia, Santa Catalina grad Brita Sigourney told The Pine Cone she's setting her sights on competing in the 2018 Winter Olympics in Pyeongchang, South Korea.

While the event is four years away, Sigourney is already preparing for it. To earn a medal, she realizes she will need to make a few adjustments in her routine and her approach to skiing.

First off, she will have to avoid getting hurt. She's suffered an assortment of injuries in recent years, including broken bones and torn ligaments. While Sigourney stayed healthy during the Olympics, she lost a lot of training time leading up to the games.

"I've gotten better at staying strong and going to the gym," Sigourney explained. "I've become more aware that I need to stop skiing when I get tired and let it go for the day."

So far, she's encouraged by the results of her improved workout routine.

"I feel great," she declared. "I've never been this healthy at this time of year [since she started competing]. I'm very grateful."

After her performance in Sochi, Sigourney realized she wasn't accustomed to competing in both the qualifying and finals rounds on the same day. As a result, her legs were tired in the finals.

"If I could go back and do it again, I would have paced myself better," explained Sigourney, whose boyfriend, Joss Christensen, took home the gold medal in the Men's

ANOTHER DIVER DIES AT 'MORTUARY BEACH'

By MARY SCHLEY

WITH 20 professional emergency responders training for ocean rescues in the water off Point Lobos last Wednesday morning, a 26-year-old woman who got in trouble while diving at Monastery Beach had the best possible chance to survive. But Melissa Quaresma of Modesto was pronounced dead at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula after extensive efforts to revive her failed.

Emergency workers from California State Parks, Cal Fire and the U.S. Coast Guard had launched inflatable rescue boats from the Whalers Cove launch ramp in Point Lobos and were in the water practicing simulated swimmer recovery and patient transfer when they noticed something was wrong.

"We were in the midst of boat rescue training, and all three agencies were out on vessels," said state parks lifeguard Erik Landry, when the lifeguards saw two divers about 10 yards off shore at the south end of Monastery Beach and thought they might need help.

"First, it just appeared to be one diver, but we went over,

Where there's a wheel there's a way

HE WAS around 5 when his person first saw him, standing up like a prairie dog in his cage at the SPCA adopt-a-dog event in Monterey. The Chihuahua had a sweet little face, but with a name like Lobo, he channeled a crime lord in a Disney movie. Maybe his life had just played out like that's what he was.

His person, a committed cat lover, didn't want a dog. But the SPCA volunteers convinced him to take Lobo for a walk. By the time he turned back, he'd named his Chihuahua Charlie. He built a whole story around Charlie Lobo, growing up in the back seat of a migrant worker's car, crouching under the chassis to keep cool, trying to avoid the crush of too many people in the passenger seat, and withstanding the wrath of anyone working out a bad day.

Which may explain why Charlie Lobo didn't like large animals or men in hats or anything on wheels. And why he only responded to Spanish. But since his new person didn't speak Spanish, he taught him just enough German and French to follow commands and comprehend affection.

It also may reveal why, three years later, when dining on the patio at a popular Carmel café, Charlie's back legs gave out. A neurosurgeon later diagnosed significant structural damage, and opened up the little dog from shoulder to tail to repair what he could. This bought Charlie another four years before his body failed again.

"Before his legs went out, Charlie rocketed around, flying across the field," his person says. "And after his surgery, he was back up to speed. But by the time his body failed him again, he was too old to withstand more surgery. So we researched an alternative mode of transportation and found K-9 Carts out of Canada."

At 13, Charlie's life is on wheels once again. But this time, it's under his own power.

Reward offered in duck shooting

THE SPCA for Monterey County is offering a $1,000 reward to help find the person or persons who shot and killed 12 ducks in Salinas. On April 15, the SPCA got a report that numerous ducks had been found dead at various ponds in the city. A survivor, a duck called Tubby by locals, had been shot with a pellet gun but is expected to survive. Contact the SPCA with information by calling (831) 373-2631.

Dog's lost weekend has happy ending

By CHRIS COUNTS

AFTER DISAPPEARING for three days in the Ventana Wilderness, a Samoyed named Kolbe is happy to be back in the safe confines of his family's home in Pacific Grove.

The 90-pound dog's misadventure began on the morning of April 11, when he and his owner, Jack Clifton, went for a day hike on the Pine Ridge Trail, starting at China Camp Campground along Tassajara Road. The pair had spent the previous night at White Oak Campground about three miles away.

After walking downhill for about 1.5 miles — the trail from China Camp descends into Pine Valley, where the Carmel River begins — Clifton stopped to take a photograph. When he was done, he noticed Kolbe was nowhere to be found.

"He vanished into thin air," Clifton told The Pine Cone. "He had completely disappeared. It was like aliens had abducted him. I couldn't believe it."

After calling out to Kolbe and searching the immediate area, Clifton figured the dog probably chased after something with four legs. But he couldn't be sure what direction — or how far — he traveled.

Clifton was shocked Kolbe dashed off

Three backpackers from San Diego State University helped reunite a Samoyed named Kolbe (front row center) with his owners. The dog went missing for three days in the Ventana Wilderness.

Long informal partners, agencies and nonprofits sign deal to aid parks

By CHRIS COUNTS

SEEKING WAYS to better manage a patchwork of properties that encompasses nearly 10,000 acres of open space, two park agencies and two nonprofit groups unveiled last week what they are calling the Lobos-Corona Parklands Project.

Representatives of California State Parks, the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, the Big Sur Land Trust and the Point Lobos Foundation signed an agreement April 8 at Palo Corona Regional Park to “significantly enhance public recreation, outdoor education and stewardship opportunities” between Carmel and Palo Colorado Canyon.

The partnership is the natural progression of a relationship that has long existed among the four parties. The land trust has helped buy thousands of acres of private property now owned by both agencies, while the foundation plays a critical role in the day-to-day operations of Point Lobos State Reserve, which is considered by many to be the crown jewel of the state park system.

Officials said the collaborative effort will make it easier to address many of the challenges facing the parks, such as limited parking and increasing demand for access. They also hope to take advantage of opportunities like linking trails together across park boundaries and increasing educational efforts to attract the next generation of park visitors.

State parks district superintendent Mat Fuzie said the park agencies and nonprofits have met hundreds of times on a vast array of issues and have a great working relationship.

“We realized that if we work together, bring in separate funding sources, drop the egos and remain true to our purpose, we could create an incredibly strong force,” Fuzie said.

Park district general manager Rafael

Payan echoed Fuzie’s observations. “The strength we bring together is much greater than our parts,” Payan said.

The president of the Point Lobos Foundation, Augie Louis, pointed out that much of the open space in the area — such as the Point Lobos Ranch and parts of Palo Corona park — remains inaccessible to the public. He hopes the partnership will change that.

“These public lands have gone unexplored or are closed to the public while Point Lobos is setting record attendance,” Louis observed. “This working group can offer so many new and different experiences for the public by opening some of these parklands.”

Outgoing executive director of the Big Sur Land Trust Bill Leahy said the partnership will also benefit local residents, who one day could find themselves surrounded by a world-class network of trails. “Great communities needs great parks,” added Leahy, who is stepping down in June.

THE CARMEL Heritage Society is hoping homeowners in town will volunteer to have their residences and gardens showcased in the nonprofit’s upcoming 2014 Home and Garden Tour set for June 21. Homes that are historic or architecturally significant, or that were the site of some important occurrence, are eligible. People whose residences are included will receive two free tickets to the tour, and will be included in all the publicity.

Motorcyclist dies in head-on with car on Laureles Grade

By MARY SCHLEY

A 26-YEAR-OLD Monterey man riding a motorcycle died Saturday afternoon when he crossed over the double-yellow line on Los Laureles Grade just south of Los Robles Road and hit the front of a Mini Cooper being driven by a 67-year-old woman from Carmel Valley.

"There was a car stopped, preparing to make a left turn into a private driveway, and he passed the car," California Highway Patrol public information officer Jaime Rios said.

"After passing that car, he made a hard brake application, crossed over the double-yellow lines and hit the Mini Cooper," Rios said.

After the fatal crash, the southbound lane of Los Laureles Grade was closed for about an hour, with traffic diverted onto Los Robles.

The motorcycle rider, Matt Adrian, landed in the road, according to Rios. He received CPR at the scene and was then taken by ambulance to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, where he was pronounced dead, according to Rios.

The Mini Cooper sustained moderate damage on its left front, but the driver, Caroline Pritchard, was uninjured.

Rios said toxicology results are still weeks away, and investigating officers are working to compile and analyze the details of the wreck.

Adrian's motorcycle, a high-performance Suzuki model, is being held as evidence and will be examined for mechanical faults.

"We can't say who's at fault until the entire investigation is complete," Rios said.

Services planned

A Salinas native, Adrian was born Feb.

10, 1988, and graduated from Salinas High School and the Professional Golfers Career College in Florida. Most recently, he worked in sales for Sunstation Farms.

"He lived his brief life in this world to the fullest and experienced more than most ever will, including traveling throughout Australia and New Zealand with family. He loved the S.F. Giants, camping and hiking, snowboarding, golfing, the board game Risk, driving fast cars and motorcycles," his family wrote in his obituary.

"He set an amazing example for everyone around him by living an authentic life," the obit added.

Adrian, who was a member of local motorcycle riders' groups on Facebook, received dozens of comments on his own page from people lamenting his passing and sharing their memories.

A funeral Mass will take place at San Carlos Cathedral in Monterey Wednesday, April 23, at 9:30 a.m.

"Matthew's favorite color was blue," his family noted.

"In his honor, we encourage those attending his services to wear blue."

Matt Adrian, a Salinas native known for his sense of adventure — as depicted in this photo from his Facebook page — died in a motorcycle crash Saturday. Services are planned for Wednesday.

Lawsuit alleges Pacific Grove is hiding pension plan documents

By KELLY NIX

THREE PACIFIC Grove residents have filed a lawsuit against the city to compel officials to hand over documents and audio, as well as video recordings, that show why the city approved a very generous pension plan increase for police and firefighters.

The suit, filed by Sally Aberg, Dan Davis and Frances Grate, alleges city officials have “engaged in a pattern and practice” of violating the California Public Records Act by failing to turn over public documents, audio recordings and videos, and not providing reasons for withholding the information.

The residents’ complaint stems from a lawsuit they filed against P.G. in 2013 after the city council wouldn’t put a certified initiative on the ballot they authored that seeks to void a 2002 pension increase on the basis it was illegally adopted. In response to the lawsuit, the city countersued Aberg, Davis and Grate, challenging the validity of the initiative. Council members at an April 2 meeting complied with a judge’s January order and placed the item on the November ballot.

In preparing to defend itself from the city’s countersuit — which is set for a June 26 hearing — the citizens’ attorney, Margaret Thum, requested public documents last year. But Davis said the city still has not provided key documents and recordings, leaving them no alternative but to file suit.

The Jan. 1, 2001, to Dec. 31, 2003, records being sought are related to the city’s discussion surrounding the pension deal. The residents also requested, but haven’t received, copies of certain annual budgets, including those for fiscal years 2002 and 2003. They also asked the city to hand over all audio and video recordings for several council meetings.

“Even though we have reason to believe the city has certain documents and tape recordings of council meetings that are important to our case,” Davis told The Pine Cone, “they have failed to produce them after repeated requests.”

Though the residents’ lawsuit contends city officials gave them some of the documents in 2013, they were not given any recordings of the 2002 council meetings they requested. A city clerk, according to the suit, told them he could not find any recordings of the meetings, nor a “certificate of destruction” that would allow such tapes to be destroyed.

While further requests also failed to turn up the tapes, the lawsuit contends that in June 2012, another city clerk told a P.G. resident seeking the 2002 recordings that she had found them. Two VHS videotapes were finally handed over in March; however, they were recordings of two meetings in 2003, not the 2002 tapes.

“The city has claimed the tapes do not exist, then they said they had found them, but provided other tapes,” according to Davis. “We have evidence that they were in the city’s possession as of 2012, long after this controversy began.”

Furthermore, the residents allege that Pacific Grove’s city attorney, Dave Laredo, knew of the existence of the 2002 videotapes and that “an authorized agent of the city” in November 2012 — in preparation for a council meeting on the pension topic — “reviewed the tapes.”

However, Laredo told The Pine Cone the city’s staff has continued to search for the recordings, to no avail.

“The California Public Records Act provides for access to records that exist,” he said. “Unfortunately, the city has not been able to locate these specific meeting tapes that were recorded 12 years ago. Yes, these tapes did exist at one time. No, the city has not been able to locate them.”

Laredo also said it’s “unfortunate Ms. Thum and her clients Aberg, Davis and Grate elect to air their concerns through a very costly exercise,” referring to the lawsuit, and that if he “could conjure the tapes from thin air,” he would gladly do so.

“I am at a loss to understand how a trip to the courthouse will uncover lost recordings when we have not been able to find them in our files or storage spaces,” Laredo added.

The three citizens also address in the lawsuit Pacific Grove’s original charter document, which they say included an article prohibiting employee pensions. Though the charter was later modified slightly to allow the city to contribute to a pension plan agreed to by employees, it still contained, as recently as 1969, a provision barring city-sponsored pension plans unless approved by voters.

But a 1990 copy of the city’s charter that city officials provided Aberg, Davis and Grate did not contain the clause, and the city so far hasn’t provided documentation showing that the charter was ever amended to nix the provision.

The citizens contend the 2002 council approved the retirement plan without being informed of the true costs to the city. The council wasn’t allowed to view the actuary report showing that the plan would cost more than $800,000 per year, and instead were told it would only be about $51,000, which was merely the initial cost of amending the contract.

The “3 percent at 50” CalPERS pension plan allows employees at least 50 years old to retire with pay equal to 3 percent of their highest year’s compensation for every year they worked, to a maximum of 90 percent of their highest pay level.

P.G. mayor back at home after heart surgery

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE MAYOR of Pacific Grove returned home Monday night after undergoing heart surgery last week at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

Bill Kampe had bypass surgery at CHOMP on April 8 about two months after his doctor found heart abnormalities during a routine exam. The surgery was successful and Kampe’s already begun the recovery process.

“Things are going well,” Kampe told The Pine Cone Wednesday night. “I’m doing neighborhood walks.”

Mayor pro tem Robert Huitt is fulfilling Kampe’s mayoral duties until he fully recovers while Councilwoman Casey Lucius is replacing Kampe as a member of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Water Authority, the group composed of the six Peninsula mayors.

Testimonial from an existing customer:

"From the first moment I spoke with Ganesh, I felt his genuine intention to help me find the right hearing aids for me and to provide service that would exceed my expectations. I had spoken to a few other vendors over a two-year period but it was clear to me that Ganesh stood out with a professionalism combined with a warm, caring and humorous manner. During my first appointment I was given the most comprehensive exam I had ever received. I also appreciated that Ganesh wanted me to understand the issues with my hearing loss in order for me to make informed decisions about it. I was allowed to use the hearing aids for a two-week period (that actually got extended to four weeks due to travel plans) before deciding if I wanted to purchase them. Of course, this caused me to feel confident that I would be totally satisfied with this significant purchase. Not surprisingly, I have been delighted with the ongoing service, including adjustment and cleaning, provided by Carmel Hearing Aids. I have recommended them to several friends and colleagues."

Casanova, La Bicyclette owners sued by Belgian business partner

By KELLY NIX

THE OWNERS of one of the city's most famous restaurants are embroiled in a tangled dispute with a business partner who alleges they unlawfully kicked him out as a partner and cooked the books to hide profits from him.

Philippe Mignon alleges in a lawsuit filed April 16 that brothers Walter and Gaston Georis, among other things, eliminated his financial interest in Casanova Restaurant and La Bicyclette, and underreported the success of the restaurants to secretly increase profits for themselves.

In the suit filed in Monterey County Superior Court, Mignon alleges "breach of fiduciary duties, intentional misrepresentation and improper distribution." Mignon, who lives in Belgium, wants impartial appraisers to determine the fair market value of the two restaurants and then to be paid an amount equal to the value his share, plus profits.

The Georises couldn't be reached for comment Thursday, but their attorney, Stephen Pearson, issued a statement denying Mignon's claims.

"We're sorry that Mr. Mignon felt it necessary to file his lawsuit against us," according to the brothers' statement. "This is simply a dispute over the value of his minority interest in our business, which he inherited. His allegations are completely without merit, as we will show when this case is tried."

Mignon is the brother of the late Michel Mignon, who with his ex-wife Denise Dekens — Walter and Gaston's sister — was a founding partner in the former La Boheme Restaurant and Casanova, a now world-famous restaurant that opened in 1979.

When Michel Mignon died in 2006, his one-sixth interest in Casanova was inherited by his brother, who maintained a financial partnership in Casanova but did not work for the restaurants. The Georises opened La Bicyclette on Dolores a year after Mignon passed away.

In March 2013, however, Dekens and Mignon were notified that there had been a "reorganization" of Casanova Restaurant LLC, which owns La Bicyclette, and that they no longer had a role or interest in the Carmel restaurants.

"Under the terms of the reorganization," according to the lawsuit filed by Monterey attorney Robert Rosenthal, Mignon and Dekens lost their respective ownership interests in the LLC, and, as such, also lost their interests in Casanova Restaurant and La Bicyclette Restaurant."

Neither Mignon and Dekens were allowed to vote on the reorganization — something they contend should have happened — nor were they told by the Georises that a restructuring was in the works, the suit says.

Though Mignon and Dekens contend they were entitled to receive their share of the profits from the restaurants, the lawsuit alleges that didn't always happen.

"Mignon and Denise Dekens have each demanded their respective pro-rata distributions and were refused by [the Georises] on various occasions," according to the lawsuit.

The brothers, according to the lawsuit, also reduced, on paper "hundreds of thousands of dollars" of the restaurants' inventory of valuable wines for the purpose of reducing the fair market value and Mignon and Dekens' financial stake in the business.

Mignon hired a team of certified public accountants to analyze the restaurants' books from 2008 to 2012. They found that the brothers spent too much, including paying "excess rents," and "personal, non-business related benefits" the lawsuit alleges. They were also paying themselves too much for their work, he says.

The Georises "paid themselves management fees in excess of the reasonable value of the services performed, and in excess of custom and practice in the industry, all to the detriment of Casanova LLC, La Bicyclette LLC and Mignon," the lawsuit says.

While the Georises told Dekens and Mignon that the value of the assets for the two restaurants as of Feb. 28, 2013, was $2,168,000, excluding appreciation or depreciation as a result of the reorganization, Mignon contends the number is "is grossly below the actual value" and was used "for the sole purpose of devaluing [Mignon's] interests, and resulting in [the Georises] benefiting significantly."

While the brothers offered Mignon and

Stevenson student heads to Naval Academy for crash course

By KELLY NIX

A STEVENSON School junior who intends to apply to the U.S. Naval Academy is headed to Annapolis, Md., this summer for a fast paced yet intensive introduction to the prestigious college.

Vincent Lopez IV, 17, is attending the seminal academy's Summer Seminar program, which not only teaches high-school students about leadership, but offers prospective students a peek into daily life at the Naval Academy.

Lopez was one of more than 2,500 students selected to attend the program, which "helps educate, motivate and prepare selected students who are considering applying for admission to USNA."

"I immediately recognized the Summer Seminar as an opportunity for personal growth and a positive step toward my goal of being selected to attend the U.S. Naval Academy," Lopez told The Pine Cone. "I'm pretty excited about the experience."

During the six-day seminar, Lopez and other students selected to attend will live in the college's Bancroft Hall, eat in King Hall and participate in academic and leadership workshops. They will also undergo daily physical training, including group runs and conditioning exercises.

Eight 90-minute workshops will expose the students to various classes, including information technology, naval architecture and mechanical engineering, oceanography, math, history and meteorology. They will also participate in seamanship and navigation classes.

"They will experience first-hand what the Naval Academy has to offer through its exceptional academic, athletic, extracurricular activities and leadership training programs," according to the school.

Special operations branch

Lopez's mother, Maureen Raynaud, told The Pine Cone her son has wanted to attend the Naval Academy since he was a small child. "I'm very proud of him," Raynaud said. "This was definitely a big step for him and something he has been working for many years."

And while many high-school students don't have solid ideas about their future plans, Lopez has already charted his.

"I plan to major in engineering," Lopez told The Pine Cone. "After graduation, I hope to gain acceptance to the Naval Special Warfare/Naval Special Operations branch of the Navy."

Carmel High softball team wins pair

By CHRIS COUNTS

PITCHING A complete game and yielding just four hits, Quinn Bernal paced the Carmel High softball team April 9 to a 4-1 win over Scotts Valley High. Ashlyn Davis, Amber Clark, and Nicole Caoili knocked in runs for the Padres.

A day earlier, pitching ace Maddi Randazzo tossed a complete game shutout on the road against King City High, leading Carmel High to an 11-0 triumph. Randazzo aided her own cause with a double, while Caoili went 3-for-3 and Lauren Salvati added a pair of hits.

The Padres lost 5-1 to Pioneer High of San Jose April 2 in a non-league game. Angie Savoldi had 2 hits for Carmel High, while Davis drove in the team's only run.

The girls looked sharp March 27 when they downed Stevenson School at home, 7-2. Alexandra Franklin cleared the bases with a sixth inning triple, while Randazzo went the distance on the mound.

The Carmel High offense was firing on all cylinders March 25 when they cruised to an easy 15-1 win against Soledad High on the road. Bernal picked up the victory for the Padres, striking out 11 in just 5 innings. Bernal added a double, as did Clark and Mari Fletcher.

The girls suffered their first loss in league play March 20 when they fell to Gonzales High 12-4 at home. Clark had a double and a triple, driving in three runs. Franklin also added a triple.

After playing in a tournament April 19 at Watsonville High School, Carmel High (9-4 overall, 4-1 in league play) takes on rival Pacific Grove High Tuesday, April 22, at Carmel Middle School. The game starts at 4:30 p.m.

Garland Park visitor center reopens with party

AFTER GETTING a $500,000 makeover, the visitor center at Garland Ranch Regional Park in Carmel Valley will be the site Saturday, April 19, of a Grand Reopening and Ribbon Cutting Ceremony.

The project, which took about six months to complete, doubled the size of the visitor center from 500 square feet to 1,000 square-feet. An anonymous donor contributed $200,000, and the taxpayers covered the balance of the work.

The centerpiece of the project was the building of a new exhibit room, which will host a series of photography and art shows — including the current "Wildflowers of Garland Park" display.

The project also included the installation of redwood benches, the rehabilitation of the staging area in front of the visitor center, and the construction of about 300 feet of trail.

Jackie Nelson of the park district called the visitor center a "gateway" to the park.

"We hope the renovated visitor center will provide a comfortable place for visitors to orient themselves with the assistance of our knowledgeable volunteer naturalists, educational maps and exhibits before heading out on the trail," Nelson said.

The event starts at 10 a.m. The park is located on Carmel Valley Road about 8 miles east of Highway 1.

Authors and wineries team up to aid library

A TRIO of mystery writers and five Monterey County wineries come together Thursday, April 24, at Sunset Center to benefit the Harrison Memorial Library.

Authors Jeffrey Deavers, Elizabeth George and John Lescroart will sign copies and talk about their new books, while Cima Collina, Figue Cellars, Galante Vineyards, Scheid Vineyards and Ventana Vineyards pour wine.

"Each of the authors will make a 30-minute presentation, and a panel discussion will follow," explained Michaela Carozza of the Carmel Public Library Foundation, which is presenting the event. "People will have an opportunity to meet the authors, say hello and get their books signed. It's a great opportunity."

Proceeds from the event will be donated to the library.

"The money we raise pays for the materials and programming at the library," Carozza explained. "We keep books on the shelves," she said of the foundation.

The wine tasting starts at 7 p.m., and the program begins at 8 p.m. Tickets are $55. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2048.

"We nearly lost Henry, man, and that was a big change for us," said his brother, Jojo, who sings and plays bass. "The whole experience was a wake-up call for us. It made us rethink every aspect of our lives and our careers, and it reminded us of what's really important to us."

The music begins at 8 p.m. Depending on the weather, the duo will play inside or outside.

The trio plays in the winery's "Van Gogh Room," which is decorated with versions of the Dutch master's "Starry Night" and the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel by Michelangelo.

"It's a perfect listening room for an intimate concert," Wow added. "It has a nice little cafe feel to it."

Savor the Local, Earth Day farm help, and Easter feasting

IN A region full of small, organic farms and excellent restaurants that focus on local produce, it makes sense the two should be connected. But chefs don't always have a chance to hit up the local farmers markets, or they fall into the habit of using the same palette of fruits and veggies in their dishes. Carmel resident Colleen Logan found a way to bridge the gap between farms and restaurant kitchens when she launched Savor the Local, and she spends four days each week delivering farm-fresh produce to chefs in town, around the Monterey Peninsula and down the coast.

"I started it about a year ago, and I work with a few small, local, organic farms," she said, adding that her first client was Soerke Peters, owner and chef at Basil, the county's first "certified green restaurant" and one which heavily features local produce. "I support the farmers in getting their product out and about in the world and connecting them with restaurants and markets that they couldn't otherwise reach."

Logan was operating a CSA — community-supported agriculture, in which customers pay for a box of fresh produce, baked goods and other local products — and hosting popup dinners in various venues like Carmel Belle and La Balena when she decided to launch Savor the Local.

"Basically, I check in with the farms and provide restaurants with a list of what the farms are harvesting," she said. "And the restaurants can review it and place an order with me; then I notify the farms, and they harvest on demand for those restaurants."

And usually, the chefs get what they want. The unknowns of organic farming, like having aphids infest broccoli di cecco or a row of carrots turn out to be scrawny, mean the farmers have to be careful what they promise to deliver.

"They're fairly conservative in telling me what they've got available," she said. "We want to maintain quality the restaurants will appreciate."

Logan works with Mariquita and Happy Boy farms, Far West Fungi, Borba and other growers that are large enough to meet demands, but not too big to provide the attention her clients require.

Working directly with small farms also means the chefs get to choose unusual items to use in their dishes, drawing inspiration from what crops are growing.

"One of the things that was new to me was fava greens — the tender greens of the plant are quite delicious," Logan said. "And I think of favas as being such a brute of a plant — the stalk is so thick, and the beans are thick and hard to get to."

Chrysanthemum greens, pea flowers and radish flowers have captured chefs' attention, as well spigarello and strigoli, which Logan described as "old-school greens not commonly available."

The farms package and label their goods, which Logan delivers to clients in Pacific Grove, Carmel, Pebble Beach and Big Sur, including La Bicyclette, Edgar's at Quail Lodge, Basil, Cantinetta Luca, L'Aubergine, L'Escargot, Jeninni Wine Bar + Kitchen, Sierra Mar at the Post Ranch Inn, Big Sur Bakery and Peppoli.

James Anderson, chef de cuisine for La Bicyclette in Carmel, said the first time he saw what Savor the Local had to offer, "I knew it was something I wanted to use."

"She's getting produce that is not available to us at a normal market," he said. "At the time, it was tiny fava beans. That farm was actually sending them to San Francisco, and I bought all of them."

He also noted that Logan knows a lot of people who grow interesting fruits and veggies, like the persimmons at Heller Estate in Cachagua. "I bought the whole tree," he said. "It's nice to have exclusivity, to have something that no one else has."

One of the challenges is thinking ahead, as far as menu planning and ingredients are concerned. "I'm used to going to the farmers market and picking up the produce myself," he said. "One of the things about having that exclusive product is you don't know what it's going to look like until it's on your doorstep, and then you can't exactly return it."

Anderson said the benefits are worth that risk, citing Logan's approachable personality and responsiveness to her clients' requests, as well as the quality and variety of the produce she can provide.

"It's like having a personal shopper. There are the seasonal items the farmers produce a lot of, and then they'll have an heirloom variety or a plant that's not even grown in the United States, and I'll just buy two pounds of it and try it out. It helps expand my horizons as a chef," he said. "When Colleen comes with the list, I'll sit with Google and research everything on the list that I don't recognize."

One example was spigarello, which Anderson described as being "like kale and wild arugula."

"I bought a couple of pounds of it, and I really liked it — you don't have to trim it, because it's so tender," he said. "I started going through 15 to 20 pounds a week."

Anderson observed that focusing on

soup to nuts

By MARY SCHLEY

local, seasonal, sustainable produce requires him to be creative.

"We don't choose the dishes; the dishes kind of choose themselves," he said. "What I get from her and what I get from MEarth [the organic garden project at Carmel Middle School] basically dictate what I'm going to serve for the week."

He also noted that using such fresh produce reduces waste. "There's much less chance of throwing it away," he said. "Chances are you're going to be actually saving money, if not breaking even."

He recommended more chefs use Savor the Local.

"Hopefully through the summer, more chefs will hop on it and utilize what she can do," he said. "The reality is that she's helping to spur what we're all trying to accomplish in the community, which is using our local products, and we have so many small farmers that don't even have access to the markets or don't want to bother to sell there."

Also, he said, many chefs don't have time to get to the market.

"This is almost like bringing the farmers market to you," he said.

LOCALS GET CHANCE TO SOUND OFF ON REVISED BARNYARD SIGN PLAN

By CHRIS COUNTS

AFTER THE Monterey County Planning Commission decided a large sign the Barnyard shopping center put up along Highway 1 without a permit had to be taken down, the shopping center asked the board of supervisors to reverse that decision.

But at a hearing April 1, an attorney for the shopping center and a county planner told supervisors the dispute had been settled. Instead of the banned sign, the Barnyard would put a 48.5-square-foot sign on its water tower and a 39-square-foot sign on the back of a building facing the highway.

"These signs would be set back more than 200 feet from the public's right of way" and "will be nowhere near as visible" as the original sign, the Barnyard's attorney, Tony Lombardo, explained.

As part of the compromise, the Barnyard's owners agreed to place no other signage on its buildings facing Highway 1 — signs Lombardo said would otherwise be allowed.

While the supervisors generally supported the plan — and agreed to the size of the signs — they unanimously voted to allow the Carmel Valley Land Use Advisory Committee to review the proposal. The LUAC gave the previous plan the thumbs down back in December 2012.

No fan of the original sign, supervisor Dave Potter said he sees promise in the compromise. But he wants to give local residents a chance to comment on the details of the two new signs. Potter suggested the owners of the Barnyard "could easily take a great concept and turn it into something inappropriate."

Supervisor Jane Parker agreed. "The concept seems to be headed in the right direction, but the public hasn't had a chance to weigh in," she said.

Before they voted, a handful of residents urged supervisors to allow the LUAC to review the new signs. Carmel Valley Association president Mibs McCarthy said she "wants local businesses to succeed," but she said her group is concerned about "the visual impact of more signs."

The sign plan is on the agenda for the next LUAC meeting, which is scheduled Monday, April 21, at St. Philips Lutheran Church in Carmel Valley.

Specifically, the LUAC will look at the color, materials and design of the signs. Since the supervisors approved the size of the signs, the LUAC's recommendation will be forwarded to the planning director for a final OK.

The meeting starts at 6:30 p.m. The church is located at 8065 Carmel Valley Road.

A Reliable Water Supply is in Sight

A New Water Supply for the Monterey Peninsula

California American Water is hard at work developing new water sources with the Monterey Peninsula Water Supply Project. Our continuing progress means a water supply solution is in sight for the Monterey Peninsula.

A multi-source solution will provide a sustainable, drought-proof water supply to the Monterey Peninsula communities and will protect the natural resources of the Carmel River. Working under the governance of local elected officials, the Monterey Peninsula Water Supply Project consists of three key elements:

- ✓ Desalination
- ✓ Expanded underground water storage
- ✓ A replenished groundwater supply

The biggest component of the Water Supply Project is a desalination facility, which will transform ocean water into a reliable supply of safe drinking water. The desalination plant is expected to be operational in 2018.

A Work in Progress

Together, we can solve Monterey's water supply problem, but it can only be realized if we keep the project moving forward. With the approval of the CPUC early next year, a new source of water will soon be on its way for the Monterey Peninsula!

Giant octopus eats aquarium

NO NEED to be alarmed. The giant appendages coming from the roof of the Monterey Bay Aquarium are inflatable and are there to promote the aquarium's new Tentacles exhibit. They were fabricated by a United Kingdom-based company called Designs in Air. "We sought and received a permit from the City of Monterey to install them after vetting by the city's architectural review board," aquarium spokesman Ken Peterson told The Pine Cone.

Unless there's bad weather, the $25,000 sculpture will remain up through Labor Day weekend, Peterson said.

The inflatable tentacles mark the first time the aquarium has installed artwork on its roof in connection with a special exhibition, Peterson said. But the inflatables are generating a lot of buzz for the $3.5 million exhibit, which features a variety of interesting cephalopods.

"We've had a few photo tweets of the rooftop tentacles already," Peterson explained. "One girl posted a photo where they look like they're growing out of her head; another photo is of two kids, presumably shot by their mom, with the caption 'When good octopuses go bad.'"

Cal Fire medics can resuscitate pets, too

By MARY SCHLEY

THANKS TO a recent purchase, Fluffy and Fido will have a fighting chance if they're caught in a house fire or haz-mat situation. Such incidents are devastating in and of themselves, so the loss of a pet in an accident can be doubly traumatic. As a result, the Pebble Beach, Cypress and Carmel Highlands fire departments, which are run by Cal Fire, recently purchased 12 pet oxygen kits to be carried on all fire engines, according to Battalion Chief Buddy Bloxham.

"I do not have the statistics on how many pets perish annually due to smoke asphyxiation," Bloxham said. "But even if one pet is saved as a result of the new masks, we will be happy."

The cone-shaped masks are used to deliver oxygen to pets rescued from fires, smoky conditions or other hazardous incidents, and like human oxygen masks, they require an air tank hookup similar to those carried on emergency vehicles for firefighters to use.

Each kit includes three different sizes of mask to accommodate dogs, cats and other pets, whether large or small. The mask fits over an animal's muzzle, and for dogs and cats, it closes the animal's mouth, delivering oxygen through the nostrils.

Dr. Cynthia Nichols and Dr. Karen Allies of Parkview Veterinary Hospital on Franklin Street in Monterey provided firefighters with the necessary pet first aid training to ensure they have a good working knowledge of the animals they might treat, according to Bloxham.

"In addition to having trained firefighters to help our four-legged friends, we have also been able to offer two pet first aid classes to local residents, with assistance from doctors Nichols and Allies," he said.

As demonstrated on this mannequin, oxygen masks carried on fire engines in Pebble Beach and Carmel can be attached to air tanks and placed over a dog's or cat's muzzle to help it breathe after being caught in a fire or inhaling smoke.

Perez gets jail, probation

By MARY SCHLEY

ANTHONY PEREZ, owner/operator of the Salinas-based security company, ESA International, was sentenced this week by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Larry Hayes to four months in jail, $18,000 in fines, community service and felony probation for tax evasion, workers' compensation insurance fraud and violation of laws that govern security companies, according to prosecutor Carol Reed. Perez pleaded guilty to the crimes in February.

In December 2012, the Monterey County District Attorney's Office Workers' Compensation Fraud Unit investigated allegations Perez, also known as Tony Vincent, was paying his employees in cash and was operating without workers' compensation insurance. The investigation revealed he had been in business since 2006 but had not reported his workers' wages to the Employment Development Department and was misclassifying them as independent contractors instead of employees. While he was being investigated, Perez obtained workers' compensation insurance through the State Compensation Insurance Fund by lying in order to obtain a lower premium.

As a result, Perez was sentenced to five years' felony probation, ordered to serve 120 days in county jail, pay more than $18,000 in fines, and complete 200 hours of community service.

Perez' company has provided security for the Barnyard, the Monterey Fairgrounds and other Peninsula clients.

HOTEL

his Sonoma County home.

Ultimately, Ghandour believes it was fear of further defeats at the courthouse — where Ghandour has repeatedly been successful — that drove commissioners to approve the project.

“I think after 21 years, and 15 years of litigation, the commission truly understood the liability” it faced if it didn’t issue a development permit for the resort, he said.

The ecoresort, designed to be tucked into the dunes so it won’t be obvious from Highway 1, also includes conference center facilities, residential courtyards, gardens, spa, three swimming pools, and surface and underground parking for 947 vehicles.

About 15 acres of the 39-acre property will include dune habitat restoration. The hotel will feature green landscaping, including grass roofs and other environmental features such as use of sustainable building materials and energy-efficient systems. “This is an iconic project,” Ghandour said. “It’s not just another hotel on a golf course. This project has social relevance.”

The project site — across Highway 1 from Seaside High School — is on land formerly used for sand mining. Public trails will also be installed.

Those who wrote letters of opposition to the resort cited traffic, water and environmental issues — including possible impact to snowy plover habitat — as reasons the commission should reject the project. “This project will demolish snowy plover nesting sites,” Pacific Grove resident Lori Beraha wrote in a letter to the coastal commission.

The Sierra Club and the local and state chapters of the Audubon Society urged coastal commissioners to require Ghandour to apply for involved and lengthy permits as a condition of the coastal panel’s approval of the resort.

However, Ghandour said the requests by the environmentalists were delay tactics. He also refuted the groups’ contention that the plover is prevalent in that stretch of the dunes, saying only a few have been on the lower beach of the property in years. The two groups “introduced false evidence, in our opinion, regarding the snowy plover,” he said.

The resort can legally use 90 acre-feet of water per year; however, Ghandour said it will likely need about 63 acre-feet per year. The water for the project would be delivered by Cal Am but drawn from the Seaside Basin, not the Carmel River.

“We have our own water,” he said. “It doesn’t take any water from anybody.”

In August 2010, after having rejected it twice before, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District approved a water permit for the resort. After that, the Sierra Club unsuccessfully sued in an effort to compel a judge to set aside the water permit.

The coastal commission staff’s items of contention included the resort’s impact on viewshed, the type of foundation for the resort, grading for the project and other environmental impacts. Ghandour agreed to make concessions to some of the items and refused giving in to others.

In what Ghandour likened to a “Soviet-era” demand, the commission’s staff also tried to limit the amount of time hotel guests could stay at the resort by including a condition that rooms could not “be rented to any individual, family, or group for more than 29 days per year or for more than 14 days” between Memorial Day and Labor Day, a restriction rejected by commissioners.

“You can’t plan the free market this way,” he said. If commissioners had approved the condition, “We would have been the first resort on the Monterey Peninsula where if you wanted to spend three weeks, you couldn’t.”

Ghandour is in the process of meeting with potential investors to obtain funding for the project.

Prudence D. Stone

September 29, 1909 – March 12, 2014

Pacific Grove – Prudence (Prue) was born in Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania. In the early 1940's she came on a visit to California and never went back. During World War II she worked at Douglas Aircraft in So. Calif. She met the love of her life John W. Stone and they were married in 1944. In 1948 they moved to Pacific Grove and purchased a lot in new Monterey where they built their home by their own hands from scratch. Prue and John loved their life in Pacific Grove and managed to travel between Prue's many community activities. Prue was an active member of The First Methodist Church in Pacific Grove. She served as Treasurer for three 4-year terms, Program Chairman for 4 yrs., Vice-President for 2 yrs. and President for 2 yrs. Prue was active in the United Methodist Woman's Club, The Lighthouse Keepers Club and the Church Mouse. She also volunteered at P.G. Convalescent Hospital. When she was not volunteering she enjoyed her knitting, needlepoint and crafts.

Her husband passed away in 1985 and Prue eventually moved into Forest Hill Manor in 1999 where she lived until her passing. She had two Step-daughters, Yvonne Woolf of Tacoma, WA and Sandra Cordan (Alan) of Carmel plus 5 grandchildren, 5 great grandchildren & several nephews and nieces.

Prue enjoyed people and had a wonderful positive attitude. When asked why she thought she lived so long she said, "it is because I just roll with the flow."

Her family wants to thank the staff at the "Health Center" at Forest Hill Manor. They made sure she was part of any activities that she enjoyed. Prue loved music and could sing along when the "Oldies" were played. She especially loved singing with Gerard her nurse.

GENEREROUS

earned wages amounting to $144,802 and benefits of $43,590, while an "off street parking supervisor" had total wages of $89,406 and $31,446 in benefits.

Though Monterey has numerous meter maids, officially known as parking enforcement officers, four of them earned more than $80,000 in total compensation, including wages of $63,095, $67,674, and the top earner, who made $76,572 and $14,938 in benefits, for a total compensation of $91,510.

The workers who make sure Monterey's streets are clean were also compensated well. The city's two street-sweeper operators in 2012 were each paid a total of $104,579 and $97,560, respectively including wages of more than $71,000.

The job, according to the city, typically requires a high-school diploma or completion of the GED and one year of experience in light- to medium-sized equipment.

In contrast, Carmel's street sweeper earned total compensation of about $63,000.

Monterey's acting human resources director, Michele Maloney, told The Pine Cone the city no longer employs street sweepers and instead contracts the work.

Maloney also said that while some employees' pay appears high, she noted that the figures also include many other types of pay, not only base wages.

"Those numbers are often deceiving," she said.

"$42 million payroll"

An employee's "total wages," as listed by the controller's office, include base pay, overtime, cash payouts for excess vacation and sick leave, and "other pay," which includes car allowances, meeting stipends, incentives and bonuses.

Total retirement and health costs include an employee's monthly pension plan, deferred compensation such as 401K plans, and health, dental and vision plans.

The manager for the Monterey Sports Center, the city's popular fitness facility, made a total of $178,774 in 2012, which included $31,785 in benefits, while its operations manager earned a total of $138,088. The sports center's "fitness manager" made $141,807 in total compensation, including $103,636 in base pay and $38,171 in benefits.

The city's youth services manager, a position often requiring a master's degree, earned $105,202 in wages and $39,072 in health and pension benefits in 2012, while the library's "reference and readers service manager" made a total of $135,239, including $108,387 in wages and $26,852 in benefits.

Former city manager Fred Meurer, who retired in December, earned $284,325 in wages and $43,093 in benefits, for $327,418 in total compensation in 2012. Monterey's next top paid employee was a firefighter who made $90,519 in regular wages, an astonishing $126,091 in overtime and $15,934 in other pay. In addition to his $48,770 in benefits, he made a total of $281,314.

According to the state controller's office, Monterey spent more than $42 million in total wages to workers, and nearly $13 million in retirement and health costs in 2012, the most recent data available.

Tax increase sought

And while Monterey grapples with deciding whether to ask voters this fall to approve a 1-cent or half-cent sales tax increase, which, if approved, could raise about $7 million per year, some say that if the city clamped down on salaries and pension benefits, the tax wouldn't be necessary.

"What they are getting is so over the top, it's unbelievable," business owner Nelson Vega told The Pine Cone. "I'd rather this percent [sales tax money] stay in the private sector's hands so they could raise the private sector's salaries."

Vega, who owns property in Monterey, has long been an outspoken critic of municipal overspending, including the salaries and generous pension benefits the city pays its employees, arguing that public workers should make wages similar to what private industry pays its employees.

"What we have become is a group of citizens who are being told that this is what we should be paying employees," he said. "But nobody is checking it."

Take a Drive in The Carmel Valley

Have you visited this glorious section this spring? A trip into the Carmel Valley will reveal its wonderful productiveness and unsurpassed beauty. The sagebrush covering the slopes on the northern side is inspiring of color, and the wild flowers are beautiful and plentiful. The farmers are exceedingly busy, working early and late, and the orchards and farms are being put in shape for an unprecedentedly large harvest. The prospects for excellent fruit crops were never better, especially is this true of the pear crop.

The Carmel river is still running high, but from day to day is receding and should be in splendid shape on May 1, when the trout fishing season begins. Residents along the river state that fish are plentiful, and with the opening of the season a month later than heretofore, should be large.

The roads are now in fairly good condition, but with the coming of summer's heavy traffic, many problems will present themselves. If the county fathers would speed up a bit, many a farmer would rise and call them blessed.

Community Church Given $13,125 In Building Drive

aign for funds to finance building of a new church on the present site on Lincoln street near Eighth avenue at midweek had advanced to the $13,125 mark as interest within the congregation reached a high pitch. So far, this amount represented only the sum of pledges subscribed by members of the community church, according to Mrs. Ernest Morehouse. The drive is being carried on, however, on a community-wide basis and public subscription to the cause will probably be made known before long. The local banks are cooperating with the church and subscriptions may be made at either the Bank of Carmel or the Monterey County Trust and Savings Bank.

The site consists of two lots having an 80-foot frontage on the west side of Lincoln street. Mrs. Morehouse said that provision would be made in the new building for a place for recreation for the young people of the community and that with this in mind public-spirited Carmelites may be encouraged to give their whole-hearted support.

Carmel Junior High Plan Gets Official Okeh

Tentative support of a plan for Sunset to operate a junior high school starting next year was given by Dr. Aubrey Douglas, state secondary education chief, at a meeting with the Sunset board and Principal O.W. Bardarson this week.

The plan is to have seventh, eighth and ninth grades educated at Sunset next year, and the 10th, 11th and 12th grades to continue at Monterey Union high school until the arrangements are complete for their education in the proposed Sunset high school. A balanced plan of education has been worked out, and with minor changes will be ready for operation this fall. The Sunset board is continuing study of surveys of possible high school sites.

Citizens of Carmel and ....

The citizens of Carmel, and their children, and their children's children, were the winners in Tuesday's election. Over 86 percent of those who voted on the Sunset School Bond issue were in favor. It is decided. Carmel will have the site for a cultural and community center.

We have no doubt that there will be many heated arguments about the ultimate utilization of the property. We hope so. We feel that only by impassioned discussion will the finest center evolve, as only in this manner will our best efforts become apparent.

Now is the time for all of us to search the recesses of our capacities, rise above our petty differences, and help to bring about this monument to the future. We stand today on the threshold of a new era, aware of a proud heritage, cognizant of today's pressures, and responsible for all our great tomorrows. May we be worthy of this trust.

Chief Klaumann Elected V.P. of State Chapter F.B.I. Academy Associates

Carmel Chief of Police Clyde Klaumann, a member of the FBI National Academy Associates since 1946, was elected vice president of the California Chapter yesterday afternoon during the final meeting of the 24th Annual Retraining Session of the FBI National Academy Associates, California Chapter. The three-day convention was held at Mark Thomas Inn.

In commenting upon the honor bestowed upon him, Chief Klaumann said with pride, "The California Chapter of the FBI Associates has the largest membership in the nation, even though we are the farthest from Washington, D.C." Academy governing officers are promoted automatically, so as fourth vice-president, our Carmel Chief can look forward to being named Chapter president in four years.

Carmel takes its first steps to preserve its history

[Gee Gee] Platt, of G. Bland Platt Associates, was recently hired by Carmel Heritage to oversee a Carmel-by-the-Sea historic and architectural survey, the first step any city needs to take before developing historic preservation laws and policies. "Carmel is one of the few cities in the state that does not have a preservation ordinance. I think it needs one and it needs one designed specifically for Carmel," Platt said.

Platt, a San Francisco resident and a professional historic preservation consultant, was in Carmel for a fast three days of meetings and introductions. The survey will begin as soon as volunteers are gathered and trained, Platt said, but it will be about two months before everything is ready to start.

Once completed, the survey will include photographs and records of every structure within the city limits — both residential and commercial. "Volunteers, under supervision, will be looking for architecturally significant buildings," Platt said. Once identified, the city can take a look at what architectural resources it has. Platt explained that volunteers will receive about two days of training and it turned out to be two," he said. "We did a safety contact just to see if they were OK, and sure enough, they were not OK — they were in distress."

The two divers, a father who was holding his unconscious daughter, were about 10 feet offshore when lifeguards got to them about 10:30 a.m. to pull them out of the water and up onto the beach, according to Landry. The daughter wasn't breathing and had no pulse.

"We immediately started CPR and continued until paramedics arrived," he said.

Cal Fire Battalion Chief Jude Acosta said a paramedic crew dispatched from the Rio Road fire station took over efforts to revive the woman several minutes later.

"They worked on her until she got to the hospital," he said. "I don't know what time she passed — it was sometime that evening."

Landry said Quaresma's father was also very tired from trying to hold her in the water, in addition to the emotional trauma of the situation.

"He didn't say much other than, 'Help her,'" he said. "Although he was psychologically scarred, he was exhausted as well."

A beach that 'drops off super steep and get very deep very quickly'

Although the two divers were not far from shore, he pointed out that Monastery Beach, while popular with divers for its unusually deep marine canyon, is also notoriously dangerous. (Locals know it as "Mortuary Beach.")

"It drops off super steep and gets very deep very quickly," he said. "Even though they were only 10 feet from shore, the water was deep enough to be over their heads."

The surf was not unusually large or rough that day, and the weather was clear and sunny. Acosta said he didn't know what caused the woman to drown, nor did Landry.

"She had the best opportunity to make it," Acosta observed, with a wealth of rescuers so close by, particularly the lifeguards who noticed she was in dire straits in the first place. "State parks worked great with us, like they always do, and they were able to see her, notice her, recognize her trouble, and they pulled her up and started CPR."

Monterey County Coroner's detective Alfred Martinez reported April 11 that Quaresma "was the victim of a drowning while scuba diving."

Landry wanted to remind everyone who dives to be aware of the risks, to be sure to check the conditions of the ocean and ensure all diving equipment is operating properly, and to always have a dive partner.

"Make sure you have the experience and the knowhow, and are physically fit," he said. "And make sure you watch the water before you go in."

the city has spent $41,433 this year on architectural work, geotechnical and archaeological studies, and permits, and in addition to the $712,602 for construction, taxpayers will spend an estimated $135,000 on “construction management services, lab inspection fees, labor compliance services and landscaping.”

“I hope this isn’t an April Fool’s joke,” McCloud said, referring to the nearly $900,000 the city will shell out. “I guess that gives new meaning to some people who call it ‘the throne,’ but I really think you need to scrub those figures, when two years ago, we had projected $350,000 for the restroom.”

The facility, McCloud noted will have just two stalls and one sink.

Surprisingly high bids

Mayor Jason Burnett said the last project estimate came in around $550,000, so the roughly $620,000 bid submitted by Tomblason was a little more than 10 percent higher than anticipated.

“We all recognize these bathrooms are costing a good deal more than we hoped,” added councilman Ken Talmage, though he did not elaborate on why the costs are so much higher.

“But there were only two bidders on this project, and the other bidder bid $230,000 more than the bid we accepted.” Pueblo Construction, the only other company to express interest in the project, proposed a cost of $848,132.

“Clearly construction has gone up,” Talmage said, adding that the contract includes several conditions.

But a budget surplus is anticipated this year, and Talmage said the council should sideline some other capital projects to make room for the bathrooms.

“I think it’s time to get this project done, once and for all,” he said, and the rest of the council agreed and OK’d the contract, rather than to reject both bids and seek new proposals.

While others walk the blocks, research volunteers will be consulting a myriad of government and private documents that record the city from its beginnings to now, including city planning and library files. Research volunteers will also look for historical sites to record, adding those to the survey to compile a comprehensive document that matches past events and lives with buildings and places. Platt added that local residents should begin doing a little rummaging of their own, looking in attics and papers for memories and mementoes of Carmel.

Play ball!

Beautiful weather, good food, an extra-special celebrity guest, and the hard work of many people combined to make Opening Day 1989 a great success! San Francisco Giants great Willie “Stretch” McCovey was on hand Saturday to sign autographs and throw out the first pitches for the opening of the 1989 Carmel Youth Baseball league season at Larson Field. The enthusiasm of the capacity crowd for McCovey, who arrived in a stretch limo and patiently signed autographs for almost an hour before the morning ceremonies, was matched by the enthusiasm of the players in late morning and afternoon jamborees and games.

Dekens each $361,330 for their respective 16.667 percent ownership interest in the business, Mignon said he told them in April 2013 that the fair market value of their interest was actually $768,000.

The lawsuit also seeks the return of profits Mignon is owed, a refund of what he believes were excess management fees charged to the company, the return of the wine inventory “or the losses arising therefrom,” and a judge’s determination on the legality of the business reorganization.

Mignon is also seeking punitive damages, which can be awarded in cases where malice, oppression or fraud is found to have occurred.

Dekens, who is not a plaintiff in the case, settled her claims with her brothers sometime this month without an attorney, according to the lawsuit.

Standing up for Obama

EVEN AMERICANS who don't think much of President Obama are finding themselves defending him nowadays. At least, if they visit Moscow, they do.

Russia, of course, has been making very aggressive moves against a neighboring country, Ukraine, and has even lopped a piece of the country off and added it to Russia. The country's bombastic president, Vladimir Putin, is the author of his country's expansionist policies.

When he took Crimea away from Ukraine last month, Putin followed a play-book that's been followed by every despot in the last 200 years: First, plant agents in the territory you have your eye on, and have them gin up discrimination or violence against a group you can pretend to defend. And then invade under the pretense of acting to prevent further harm to this supposedly aggrieved minority.

After Putin got through "rescuing" the Russian-speaking minority in Crimea, he started in on the rest of Eastern Ukraine. Worried people in Washington and Europe, and especially in former Soviet satellite states such as Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, are asking, "Who does Putin have his eye on next?"

To try to discourage Putin from going any further, of course, leaders of the European Union and our president have been putting economic sanctions on Russia and warning of more severe measures if he does. But at the same time, it's been clear that nobody wants to send an army to stop Putin from doing whatever he wants.

Around the world, Putin's aggressiveness and the free hand he's practically been given have turned him into a frightening figure who reminds people of history's most reviled dictator, Soviet leader Joseph Stalin.

However, as a visitor from Carmel learned in Moscow a few weeks ago, in Russia, Putin is a hero, and Barack Obama is the one who's hated. Actually, he's more laughed at.

After Obama announced his sanctions, Russian Deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Rogzin called our president a "prankster," while another Russian official described Obama's sanctions as "a joke" and even tweeted a smiley face to illustrate his reaction to them.

Among the people in the street, however, the reaction isn't as lighthearted. They bitterly resent American opposition to Russia's actions in Crimea, even as they think the sanctions we imposed are pathetic.

"What is wrong with Obama?" a cabdriver asked on a trip from Moscow's airport to the city center. "He's acting like an idiot."

"Is your president a teenager or a fool?" a waiter at a restaurant asked his American customer.

And in that same upscale restaurant, when Obama's face appeared on a television, the 30 or so Russians in the room — customers and restaurant employees alike — began to boo and call him names, including the worst sort of racial slurs you can imagine. Their anger was scary.

Perhaps foolishly, the American visitor defended the president.

"OK, maybe Obama's not doing very well handling the Ukraine situation," he said to a group of Russians. "But what is the U.S. supposed to do if Putin starts moving against Poland or Romania?"

"The United States should quit trying to be so great," a Russian woman angrily responded, jabbing her finger in the air just a few inches from the American's face. "You should quit telling everybody what to do all the time!"

To which the American replied, "That's a pretty amazing statement for a Russian to make."

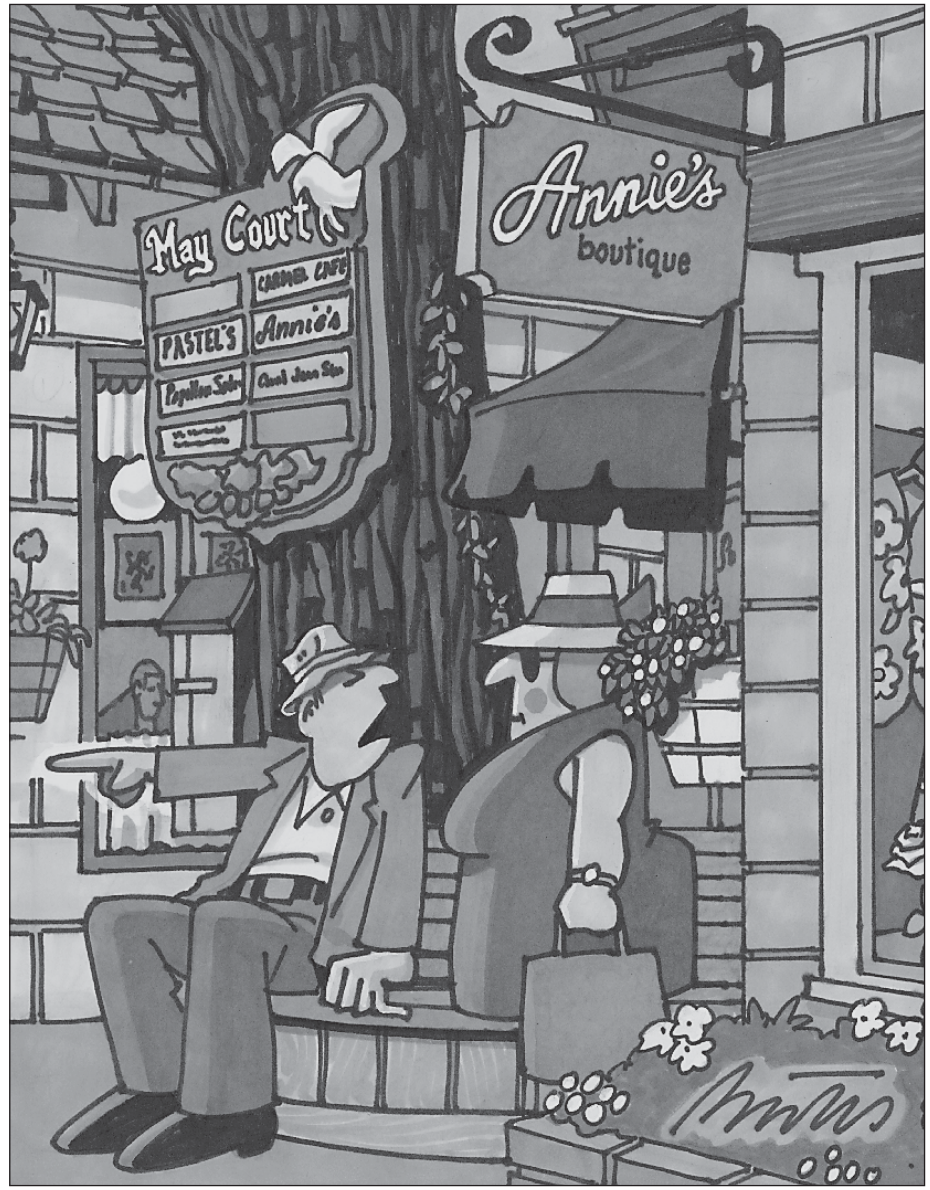

The comment was not well received. Still, even high school students in the former Soviet Union surely know that for decades the USSR actively fomented communist movements in many countries, and started wars in lots of them, hoping to instigate revolutions around the world.

But to the Russians, the grievous sins of the Communist era have been largely forgotten. What matters to them is the redemption of their national pride now — and they don't want anything getting in their way.

If Putin called for an anti-American or anti-Obama rally in Red Square, literally millions of people would attend. The vehemence of the Russian public's sentiment is just waiting for an outlet, and if Putin chooses to, he can set the world on a very dangerous course.

If he does, how will we respond?

Article 'targeted' doctors

Dear Editor,
Last week's edition of The Carmel Pine Cone chronicled a so-called "debate" as to "whether doctors are paid too much." The article specifically identifies local doctors and the dollar amounts of their 2012 Medicare reimbursements. In my opinion, The Pine Cone's article went too far. It was unhelpful, misleading and potentially harmful to those doctors, as well as to local seniors in need of their services. The 2012 Medicare reimbursement total for any particular doctor represents one of several data points that ultimately determine that doctor's net compensation. None of us has a need (or the right) to know the operating expense, opportunity costs or the value proposition each doctor brings to his practice. Without inserting those factors into the analysis this so-called "debate" is no more than chatter.

The Monterey Peninsula is a relatively tight-knit community. The doctors who were targeted in The Pine Cone's article are our neighbors and friends. They've agreed to see Medicare patients voluntarily and often do so at their own expense. If I were one of those doctors today, I'd be reevaluating my willingness to accept Medicare payments. As a senior with no healthcare coverage alternatives, that's worrisome to me!

Lorne Braddock, Monterey

'Corporate profit vs. public good'

Dear Editor,
In their opposition to Measure O, Mayor Jason Burnett and the other five mayors are spreading a dangerous misconception when they say, "Measure O would create chaos, and our carefully crafted deal could fall apart."

Measure O is not about water resources; it is about who owns what is essentially a public resource: the people or a for-profit corporation which is taking millions of dollars out of this community every year, raising rates in nonsensical and extreme ways, and favoring business interests at the expense of residential water users who subsidize low rates for

Notions of liberty and justice derailed in Monterey County

NICOLAS AQUINO had a unique take on the liberties he assumed Americans enjoy. His family came to the United States in exile from Paraguay after his father was kidnapped by Paraguayan military forces. His dad had been told to leave the country within two hours and never return.

everyone can truly understand ... The flag of the United States of America means all the freedoms that we have, the liberties, the justice, the things that my family didn't have before. It's where we have safe haven. It's something that's very emotional to me."

The video is sadly ironic, in retrospect to the unraveling episode of Dec. 13, 2013 that resulted in misdemeanor charges he incurred for allegedly obstructing the Monterey County Sheriff's deputy who roughed him up.

Aquino was minding his own business, enjoying his freedoms and his liberties, when the deputy showed up at his Carmel area house and demanded to see his identification.

Several burglaries had recently been reported in the Portola Avenue neighborhood. Like virtually every other NPS short-timer who ever blew through Monterey County for study, Aquino never really mixed with his neighbors. He and his wife had lived in the home for about 10 months.

So when one of the neighbors noticed the brown-skinned man enjoying his freedoms and his liberties — while wearing a hoodie! — assumptions were made, and one of Monterey County's finest was dispatched to the scene.

One thing led to another. The deputy, also a Latino, asked to see some identification. Aquino showed him his military identification but would not hand it to the deputy despite several requests, according to the subsequent report prepared by the deputy, Ivan Rodriguez.

Because Aquino would not comply, and because the deputy assumed Aquino could be a burglary suspect, the deputy wrestled Aquino to the ground, handcuffed him and secured him in his police unit.

When it was all sorted out, the deputy determined that Aquino did in fact live there in the Carmel-area house, that he wasn't the burglarizing sort, that he was indeed a U.S. Air Force captain, and that the reporting neighbor had made a bad assumption.

No harm, no foul.

Rather than chalking the incident up to the misfortune of miscommunication, the deputy wrote up an elaborate nine-page report that only suffers from its exclusion of the 27 8-by-10 color glossy photographs with circles and arrows and a paragraph on the back of each one explaining what each one was to be used as evidence against Aquino.

Bottom line, the deputy recommended that the district attorney charge Aquino with resisting, obstructing and delaying a peace officer.

Worse yet, the District Attorney agreed to prosecute the ridiculous incident.

Steven Liner, Aquino's attorney, went to court on Wednesday for a conference with the judge and a prosecutor. Liner asked that the charges be dropped. The district attorney refused.

"It's unfortunate, but you can't remove race and you can't remove abuse of authority from this situation," Liner said. "I'm just sad for my client. He is a patriot who has sacrificed his entire life to protect and serve his nation, and then something like this happens."

Aquino, who works as a cyber-warfare specialist for the Air Force, is no longer making public comments about his military career or the situation that now imperils his commission.

But readers who wish to see the sort of person the district attorney believes is deserving of prosecution in a minor squabble should consult YouTube and search "Capt. Nicolas Aquino."

In the promotional video post, Aquino mentions that he is fortunate and proud to serve a country that adheres to the "safe haven" of liberty, freedom and justice.

He's now seen that a home in an upscale neighborhood can't always protect your freedom and liberty against bad assumptions. Now it's up to the district attorney to show Aquino that justice can still prevail.

our existence here in the United States," Nicolas said.

The family settled in the District of Columbia. And when Nicolas attended his first air show at the age of 3, he was hooked on the Air Force. "I remember just wanting to be a part of this country, and serving it," he said.

Now a student at Naval Postgraduate School, U.S. Air Force Capt. Nicolas Aquino even starred in an Air Force promotional video, released two years ago, in which he discusses the security that comes with knowing he lives in a "safe haven."

"It's one thing to say that freedom is not free," he said. "But to actually feel it, to know it, to experience it, is something not because he's not a particularly adventurous dog. "It was so unlike him," he said. "He usually stays close by." Off and on over the next three days, Clifton searched the area. He and his wife, Becky, posted flyers along Tassajara Road. Becky also put out word on the Internet, and she asked the United State Forest Service and the Ventana Wilderness Alliance to help spread the message, which they did.

For the couple, the uncertainty of knowing Kolbe's fate was agonizing. Becky conceded she was feeling "desperate" worrying about the Samoyed. Not only was she concerned he might be injured, but she was afraid he might become some creature's dinner. "This is mountain lion country," she explained. "He'd make a great meal." Becky was at home April 14 when she received a call from a stranger. "We have Kolbe," said a young woman named Morgan. "He's very tired and thirsty." A short time later, Becky and her son, Matt, were reunited with Kolbe in Carmel Valley. "He looked dazed and confused," she said. "He laid his head in my son's lap, and he could barely keep his eyes open." The rescuer told Becky how she ended up with Kolbe. Carrying backpacks, she and two of her friends — all students at San Diego State University — left Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park April 12 and followed the Pine Ridge Trail 24 miles to China Camp, where her father was waiting for them in a car. The college students were about a half-mile from their destination when backpackers traveling from the other direction introduced them to Kolbe, whom they had found wandering along the trail. The unidentified hikers told the three women they knew Kolbe was lost because they saw the posters. Because the hikers were walking in the wrong direction, they asked the three women if they would return the dog to his owners. The three women, who were traveling with two dogs of their own, happily complied with the request. "It was such a blessing they came along," Becky said. "I just wish we knew who first found him so we could thank them." Jack — who was searching for Kolbe when the dog was returned — learned he was found about three hours later. Back home in Pacific Grove, Kolbe is catching up on his sleep and playing with his beloved squeaky ball toy. He's also enjoying a few special home-cooked meals. "We can't spoil him enough," Jack explained. Becky thanked everybody who helped out in the search for Kolbe — or prayed for his safe return. "We had so many people who were so nice rallying around us," she added. "It's been an incredible story."

Phyllis Shultz — from Pennsylvania to C.V., with historic stops along the way

MOST VETERANS are modest about their service. Carmel Valley's Phyllis Shultz is, but she was generous with her time and stories.

She told me she wanted to join the Navy from her youth — she'd read a novel about Navy nurses and came of age during World War II.

Great Lives

By ELAINE HESSER

In 1942, the WAVES — Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service — were born, and the number of women serving reached nearly 100,000 by the end of the war, providing Shultz with many role models to follow.

Meanwhile, Shultz's dream of being a nurse ran into a brick wall: high-school chemistry. So she went to Plan B, teaching. It made sense, since her father was a school superintendent and her mother was a teacher. She got a B.S. in education and a B.A. in speech at Otterbein College (now University) in Ohio, and had a job waiting in her native western Pennsylvania. One day in the early 1950s, while visiting Pittsburgh, she stopped by a Navy recruiting office, and, almost on a whim, took the qualifying test.

She soon found herself in Newport, R.I., as a newly commissioned officer in the WAVES.

After training, she was stationed in Maryland, where she used her education to prepare enlisted sailors for promotion exams. Her father wasn't happy with her choice, but Shultz said that many years later, when she was stationed in Washington, D.C., her father came to visit, and she took him to meet her boss, an admiral.

"The two of them talked behind closed doors. Apparently the admiral was very complimentary, because when my father came out he said, 'I think you did the right thing.'"

Shultz twice found herself playing a role in famous — or infamous — historic events. First, in October 1962, during the Cuban Missile Crisis, Shultz was stationed at Little Creek in Virginia. She suddenly found herself the officer in charge of handling the family members evacuated from Guantanamo Naval Base. "I was just assigned it and said, 'Yes, sir.' I said a lot of those in my career."

Almost 3,000 women and children were uprooted from their homes in Cuba, in some cases with less than an hour's warning, and deposited at Little Creek for processing over the next several days. Local newspapers reported that evacuees were supplied with food, travel vouchers, warm clothing — many arrived in tropical togs — and places to stay, all under Shultz's watchful eye.

Six years later, during the Vietnam War, Shultz was stationed in Japan, where she spent her spare time visiting wounded officers in a Navy hospital, writing letters for them and keeping them company.

In January 1968, the USS Pueblo — a spy ship disguised as a research vessel — set sail from Japan for the waters off of the Korean Peninsula, purportedly to map the ocean floor. This sort of deception wasn't new; the Soviet Union and its satellites — including North Korea — routinely disguised spy ships as fishing trawlers.

It was almost a game, and as long as everyone stayed in international waters, they were safe.

Then, as now, however, North Korea didn't care about the rules. They attacked and captured the poorly armed Pueblo, taking the crew prisoner. The sailors' families in Japan were evacuated to the United States, and once again, Shultz's organizational skills were called upon.

"I was the dependent evacuation officer and it was my job to see that they were well taken care of and sent home," she said.

The men — save one who was killed in the initial attack — were released after nearly a year and arrived in San Diego on Christmas Eve, 1968, when they were reunited with their families.

As retirement neared, Shultz accepted a posting at NPS. By then she'd earned a master in personnel administration from George Washington University and she'd been promoted to commander, just one rung below captain and two below rear admiral.

Her job at NPS was to work with curriculum officers, organize special programs with guest speakers, and run four graduation ceremonies a year. She found a cottage in Carmel Valley, and when the time came to retire, she just stayed.

Now she volunteers with the Carmel Valley Women's Club and the Carmel Valley Village seniors lunch program. She's also volunteered at Carmel Valley Community Chapel's thrift shop.

"I think Carmel Valley Village is charming," she said, "People know each other and are friendly."

Shultz advocates for young women to become educated. "I'd like to say something very philosophical," she said when I asked if she had advice for the next generation, "But I guess I'd say, 'Think big and do your very best.'" That may not be "philosophical," but it certainly is sound.

the business community.

The desal deal will continue whether Measure O passes or fails. Cal Am is under a state mandate to provide new water resources, and has been for 18 years, with not much to show for it until now (assuming that the proposed desal plant actually becomes a reality). If Measure O passes, and Cal Am starts to drag its feet on providing new water resources, as it pretty much has for the past 18 years, that will only be further proof that public ownership of our water system is the correct approach, like 85 percent of all the other water systems in California and throughout the United States that are publicly owned. Measure O is about democracy, fairness, and a rational, publicly approved policy for Monterey area water, and it's about Cal Am's obvious mismanagement of the system for at least 18 years. And when they say that returning an essential public resource like water to public ownership is "a risk we can't afford," what they mean is a risk to profits that Cal Am can't afford to lose. This is a clear contest between private corporate profit and the greater public good.

County takeover of Monastery Beach?

Dear Editor,

I was very sad to read about another tragic death at Monastery Beach. I am not sure, but believe that makes 18 or 19 in recent memory. Sometimes an entire family is at risk, or at times, a father will dive in to rescue a child and die during the attempt. It seems like most of the people involved are visiting our community and are not aware of the risk at this small beach. There have been many great white shark attacks as well.

The problem might be that the beach is part of the state parks network rather than under local control by our county.

The state, on its website, states that "Swimming, wading or walking can be extremely dangerous at this beach." The number of deaths certainly confirms that comment. I think that a possible solution would be to transfer Monastery Beach to the Monterey County Parks Department for local control in order to protect our out-of-town guests. The county could either ban unsafe activities on the beach and/or provide a lifesaving service adequately staffed whenever water use is permitted. A large fine for violators would be good if it serves to save lives. The state will fine a violator $1,000 for throwing an empty paper bag on roads.

Slopestyle competition. "I think I worked myself too hard in practice and in the qualifying round."

Calling her stay in Russia "a really cool experience," Sigourney said she was most surprised by hospitality of the residents. "They were so helpful and welcoming," she said.

Since leaving Sochi, Sigourney has been busy. She took second place March 19 in a competition in Tignes, France. She visited the White House with Team USA April 3 ("Barack and Michelle are so nice," she posted on Facebook). And earlier this week, she skied at Alpine Meadows and Squaw Valley. Now she's off to Whistler, B.C., where she plans to accept an award and hit the slopes.

"I'm going to ski this spring and summer, and get in a lot of training time," added Sigourney, who is setting her studies aside while she makes another run at the Olympics. "I'm putting all my energy into skiing right now, and I'm having a lot of fun doing it."

"CARMEL LEGENDS"

Few artistic legacies are more interesting than that of Joseph Jacinto "Jo" Mora (1876-1947). Mora's artistic gifts range over a wide variety of mediums including drawing, painting, illustration, cartooning, sculpture, photography, mapmaking and writing; their diversity being an amazing accomplishment for one person. Mora was born in Uruguay on October 22, 1876, moved to the eastern United States when he was very young and then, after attending several art schools on the east coast and working as an illustrator and cartoonist in the Boston area, spent the rest of his adult life living and working in the western United States. He lived the last twenty-seven of his years in Carmel and Pebble Beach. In 1920 Mora found himself, along with his wife Grace and children Joey (who would eventually open a leather and silversmith shop in Carmel) and Patty, moving to Carmel from the bay area to work on what was to become his masterpiece - the Father Serra Cenotaph, located in the now Jo Mora Chapel in the Carmel Mission. Carmel priest Ramon Mestres, an admirer of Mora's work, commissioned Mora to create the bronze and travertine memorial, along with a cross and altar, that were dedicated during the Serra Pageant on October 12, 1924 at the mission.

Carmel Dollars, a local way to ease the hardships of the Great Depression

And I don't give a damn about a greenback dollar, spend it as fast as I can — The Kingston Trio

DURING THE Great Depression in the 1930's, greenback dollars were hard to come by. There weren't enough jobs to go around and the term, "Brother can you spare a dime," was more than the lyrics to a plaintive song.

By 1933, the unemployment rate was almost 25 percent, and was still 19 percent in 1938. Millions of Americans looking for while we were having coffee at Carmel Plaza, who told me about Carmel's attempt to alleviate hardship during the depression with a form of scrip called Carmel Dollars.

"I was just a kid when they were issued so I don't remember much about them," he told me.

That sent me scurrying over to the Harrison Memorial Library's Park Branch where Ashlee Wright, our local history librarian, dug out an actual sample of a Carmel Dollar. Lo and behold, the dollar bills, known as scrip, were designed by Jo Mora and Catherine Seideneck.

Seideneck was born Catherine Comstock in 1885, in Illinois. She moved to California in 1915. After her marriage to George Seideneck in 1920 and a European honeymoon, she settled in Carmel where her brothers Hugh and Hurd Comstock were early developers. She was active as an organizer in the local art colony and taught at the Carmel Arts & Crafts Summer School. (But that's another column.)

Once again, whenever something involving Jo Mora swims into my ken, I contact Peter Hiller, the Jo Mora Trust Collection curator.

"Peter," I implored, when I asked him about the Carmel Dollars. "Is there a story here?"

"Oh yes," he replied

Carmel was a town that tried to do something about keeping the economy moving. Banks were failing and unable to provide currency, so the Carmel Business Association issued stamp scrips which were a form of emergency currency.

Hiller told me that Carmel used a scrip system to stimulate worker-relief and purchasing in town. When unemployed individuals performed jobs in the community, shop owners affixed a special three-cent relief stamp with their signed initials on the back of the scrip certificate to acknowledge the work done.

Once the back of the certificate was full, the scrip owner could redeem it from merchants for goods, or for one dollar. There was space for 36 stamps. An extra eight cents paid for the printing and distribution of the scrip.

Hiller said that the advantages of living in a small community constantly paid off for Mora. In Carmel he was employed in creating the design of the scrip certificates.

"You can imagine how artistic they were. He used the familiar icon of Father Serra and a laborer, along with a hint of the stone arch located on Ocean Avenue. On the decorative border he incorporated symbols of the dramatic and visual arts for which Carmel is still well-known. A thousand of these scrip certificates were printed and put into circulation."

On the sample Peter Hiller showed me I could make out stamps for the Carmel Laundry, and one that was hand printed

"HALLE," which may have been signed by Arnie Halle, who was manager of the Bank of Carmel, as well as an avid art collector.

More research led me to discovering that the Carmel Dairy, Carmel Drugs, El Fumidor, Holman Department Store, Carmel Hardware, the Forest Theater, Carmel Garage, and even The Pine Cone, were participants in the program.

The distribution of scrip was ended when federal relief projects were established.

These New Deal programs, such as the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps, and the Works Progress Administration, inaugurated by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, helped ease the hardships of the Great Depression. World War II finally put it to an end.

Today, Carmel Dollars are as hard to come by as real dollars were during the Thirties. I found them on-line selling from $95 to more than $300.

They are collectible relics of a time when a caring community came together to help people devastated by the Great Depression.

work could not find it. Meanwhile, the country's industrial production had dropped by half. Bread lines, soup kitchens and rising numbers of homeless people became more and more common in America's towns and cities.

Farmers who had lost their homes and land usually headed west to California, where they heard rumors of agricultural jobs. Unfortunately, although there was some seasonal work, the conditions for these families were transient and hostile. The stories of these migrants were immortalized by John Steinbeck in "The Grapes of Wrath."

During 1933, workers involved in landscaping along the highway up Carmel Hill were paid in trade warrants issued by the Monterey and Pacific Grove chambers of commerce. They were yellow pieces of paper about six inches long. In Carmel, pay for similar projects was in Carmel Dollars issued by the Carmel Business Association.

It was Carmel resident, Howard Brunn,

Officer arrived on scene and determined that an elderly female crashed into a business window, reversed, and then struck a parked vehicle, causing minor damage. No parties were injured, and all information was exchanged between parties. The elderly female's vehicle was towed from the scene. The Monterey County building inspector responded and determined the damage to the building was merely cosmetic and not structural in any way.
