SPCA helping baby hawk that fell from nest

By KELLY NIX

A RED-SHOULDERED hawk that fell from its nest in Carmel Valley is getting first-class treatment by workers at the SPCA for Monterey County.

The nestling — downy, with a black and yellow beak — was rescued by workers with the SPCA's Wildlife Rescue & Rehabilitation Center May 20 in a yard off of Carmel Valley Road past Tassajara Road, SPCA spokeswoman Beth Brookhouser said.

This fluffy little hawk has lost its mother but is being raised by workers with the SPCA. It will be released as soon as it's old enough to be on its own.

"Although our first attempt is to always try to reunite the baby with its parents, SPCA rescuers were unable to locate the nest," Brookhouser told The Pine Cone. "The nestling hawk will be raised at the SPCA Wildlife Center until it is old enough to be released back to the wild."

Since the bird's parents wouldn't have been able to pick it up and return it to the nest — and a human-made nest wouldn't have worked — the SPCA had to take in the small bird and care for it. It's believed that the nest from which the bird fell is intact and there are other nestlings still inside.

"While we often create makeshift nests for other young birds, we could not do it with this one," Brookhouser said. "This is because a raptor nestling this small needs a heat source to survive, and hawks will not sit on two nests."

The hawk is eating what its parents would have fed it in the wild — small bits of rats and mice. It will take from six to eight weeks for the bird to be old enough to be released.

"Right now, the baby is indoors with supplemental heat to keep it warm," Brookhouser said. "Once it has full feathers and is eating on its own, we will move the young hawk to an outdoor aviary, where it will learn to fly."

SPCA officials don't know whether the hawk is male or female, because that can't be determined by sight.

"We are unable to tell at this point, since male and female nestlings look alike," she said. "We could find out via a blood test, but that is an invasive procedure that we do not need to put it through." They also won't name the bird, just as they don't name other rescued wildlife, "to keep them as wild as possible."

The bird will be released in roughly the same area it was found.

Judicial candidate's campaign funded with own money

By KELLY NIX

A CANDIDATE for Monterey County Superior Court judge has soared above her judicial rival in election dollars — but she did it by self-funding nearly all of the $159,000 she has for her campaign.

From Jan. 1 to May 17, Luma Serrano Williams, an administrative law judge in San Jose, reported receiving $159,406.54 for her campaign. However, of that, all but about $2,000 was given or loaned to the campaign by her and her husband, James. The Williamses took out $70,000 in two loans to help fund the drive.

Her campaign marks one of the most expensive for a judicial race in Monterey County.

In comparison, her rival, Heidi Whilden, a Monterey County court commissioner who handles family law cases, received $48,164 in contributions from various attorneys, judges and others, while loaning $33,500 to her campaign. The election is June 3.

High-tech cop radios still more than a year away

By MARY SCHLEY

IT WAS originally supposed to be in place more than a year ago, but the $15.9 million effort known as the Next Generation Radio Project — which will convert all police, fire and other radio traffic to digital channels, many of which will be encrypted — is now set to take effect in October 2015, according to William Harray, director of Monterey County Emergency Communications. Also called NGEN, the plan entails replacing transmitters, receivers, repeaters, generators, towers, antennae, and mobile and hand-held radios to utilize digital technology that will enable greater use of a limited number of radio channels by more agencies.

"We are still acquiring radio frequencies and site contracts and permits to construct towers," he said, including the site at Huckleberry Hill in Pebble Beach that elicited so many neighbor complaints. "Due to the inability to get the tower locations and radio frequencies, it's been extended to October 2015."

Monterey County is overseeing the NGEN project, and cities, special districts and agencies are sharing in the costs, based on an estimated percentage of use, according to Harray.

"If they are 30 percent of our workload, they pay 30 percent," he explained.

(A resolution adopted by the Carmel City Council in April 2009 committed city taxpayers to a total of $365,265 for their share of the infrastructure through 2027, plus $118,138 to purchase new radios and an antenna.)

The county's contractor, Harris Corporation, has had to stop most work until all the permits and frequencies are obtained. "The engineers are still working, but the construc-

City hires new clerk, building inspector

By MARY SCHLEY

AFTER USING outside contractors to act as city clerk and perform building inspections in town — following the firing of John Hanson and the resignation of Heidi Burch last year — the City of Carmel has hired a longtime Monterey inspector to replace Hanson and Monterey senior assistant city clerk Catherine Raynor to take the top clerk's job here.

Joseph Headley will start work June 9, while Raynor will take her post June 3 — just in time for the month's regular city council meeting.

Certified in mechanical, electrical, plumbing and fire inspections, as well as inspection of plans, Headley has been assisting as building official for other cities that pay Monterey for his help — Del Rey Oaks and Sand City — planning and building director Rob Mullane told The Pine Cone Wednesday.

"He has a lot of experience on the public side in various building divisions, as well as in the construction industry as a foreman and superintendent, and earlier in his career as a laborer and carpenter," he said. "So he's got a lot of experience — we're excited to have him."

Headley has also completed the California Safety Assessment Program, which "utilizes volun-

Reclaimed water project on thin ice

■ If deal falls through, a larger desal plant for the Peninsula will be necessary

By KELLY NIX

ON TUESDAY, Monterey Peninsula voters will settle one local water controversy when they approve or reject Measure O, which is intended to launch a government takeover of Cal Am. But on the heels of the June 3 election, another controversy looms, as a major component of the proposed $400 million water project for the area may be stopped in its tracks.

The proposal to reclaim wastewater could fall apart unless a deal over water rights is struck by the end of June, according to the general manager of the water district.

A project to turn wastewater into drinking water — a collaboration between the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District — would provide about 3,500 acre-feet of water for the Peninsula. The project is officially called the Pure Water Monterey Project.

However, after more than a year of negotiations between the county's Water Resources Agency, pollution control agency, farmers and other parties, officials have failed to reach an agreement on source water for the recycled water project. And if a deal isn't hashed out soon, "no agreement will ever be reached," according to a water district staff report issued May 19.

Salinas Valley farmers contend they own the rights to the Where's the best spot for dog travel? Author says it's here

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE AUTHOR of a book about dog-friendly vacation destinations visits her favorite Friday, May 30.

With her jet-setting Chihuahua, Lucy, at her side, Kelly E. Carter signs copies of "A Dog Lover's Guide to Travel" at Cypress Inn from 5 to 7 p.m.

Published by National Geographic, "A Dog Lover's Guide to Travel" takes readers to 75 places in the United States and Canada where dogs are welcome. And guess which place Carter likes the best?

"Carmel is by far my favorite," Carter declared.

So what makes Carmel the best place — at least in this hemisphere — to travel with your pooch?

"The town has so much going for it," Carter said. "Dogs can run off leash all year round on its beach. It's such a joy to see so many dogs playing with each other. The convenient bags available throughout town really encourage people to pickup after their dogs. And 30 out of 53 restaurants in town are dog-friendly. Some have dog-dining menus, while others — like Casanova and PortaBella — routinely cook for dogs."

And that's not all. "Many wine-tasting rooms are dog-friendly, and many galleries and boutiques offer dog treats," she noted.

Carter, who lives in San Francisco, was so impressed by Carmel that she decided to write her book here. She ended up writing the book in Monterey when a fellow dog lover offered her free accommodations for the 11 weeks it took to finish the guide.

Before reinventing herself as an authority on dog travel, Carter worked a sportswriter. A big basketball and football fan, she became the Los Angeles Lakers first female beat writer in 1991, which she called her "dream job." But her very first assignment took her — as well as sports fans everywhere — into uncharted territory.

"I found out Magic Johnson was going to retire because he had HIV," she said. "I had to become an expert on HIV and ask the players if they had been tested for HIV."

Thankfully, Carter had many opportunities to write about basketball after Johnson's plight faded from the headlines. Along the way, she became friends with Shaquille O'Neal, whom she first interviewed as a college sophomore. She calls O'Neal "my big little brother."

And like another Laker superstar, Kobe Bryant, Carter once lived in Italy, so the two had something to talk about. "His Italian is better than mine," she conceded.

When Carter first started covering the Lakers for the Orange County Register newspaper, she was often the only woman in the locker room, but "I'm amazed at how many women I see in there now," she said.

Carter said she's encouraged by the acceptance of women in sportswriting — just as she's encouraged by the acceptance of dogs in many places that were once off-limits to them.

"Sixty percent of hotels in the United States are now dog friendly," she added. "Dogs and cats are now considered members of the family."

Ten percent of the sales at the book signing event will be donated to the SPCA for Monterey County. Cypress Inn Is located at Lincoln and Seventh. Call (831) 624-3871.

walk? He's been to the beach, but he doesn't like water or sand. I took him for a walk on the path around Lake El Estero in Monterey, and every few steps he'd stop and look at me as if to say, 'Really? Do we have to do this? It's dirt.'"

What Harry loves is his person's Lexus.

"Harry always wants to get in the car," his person says. "He jumps in to languish on that leather seat. He doesn't seem to care whether we're going anywhere or not." Maybe he just likes how he looks.

"[Andrew Liu] has wide support from a diverse cross sector of the community . . . More important than who's backing him is Liu's depth and breadth of experience. He's been a prosecutor, Assistant DA in the Bronx District Attorney's Office and a trial attorney on both sides of the system in Monterey County. That combines to make him a unique and valuable addition to a bench heavily weighted with ex-prosecutors. In other words, Liu will bring balance. Police & Sheriff's Log

Drunk man runs away

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Schley.

THURSDAY, MAY 8

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man on Mission Street reported being followed by a subject that was honking his horn at him and yelling at him to stop his vehicle. CPD units arrived and made contact with both parties. After contacting both parties, it was found to be a verbal dispute over a road-rage incident. Both parties wanted the incident documented.

Big Sur: Person reported two unknown suspects had illegally camped at a campsite. They did not pay the registration fee.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Complaint of neighborhood children yelling while playing together and indirectly causing a peace disturbance for neighbors living adjacent to the children's residence on Guadalupe Street. Parents of the children were advised of the neighbor's complaint. The children were provided an educational reminder to lower their outside voices and be mindful of their next-door neighbor's sensitivity to noises.

Carmel area: Resident reported vandalism to her vehicle while parked. Occurred sometime during the night between May 7 and May 8. Driver's-side window smashed out.

Pacific Grove: Man was upset over being separated from his wife and threatened to kill himself. He traveled to his wife's residence on Glen Lake Drive, broke in, obtained a knife and stabbed himself in the stomach. He was taken into custody for treatment for his wounds and evaluation under section 5150 of the Welfare and Institutions Code [danger to self and others].

Pacific Grove: PGPD was dispatched to a physical fight in progress on Piedmont Avenue. Upon arrival, two male adults were in a physical fight. Both parties were separated. One male had facial wounds and was taken to the hospital. The other had no injuries and was let go.

Pacific Grove: A camera fell off a motorcycle at Lighthouse and Drake in New Monterey. Person attempted to follow and return the camera but lost visual. Camera put in locker 7.

FRIDAY, MAY 9

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Residential burglary on Camino del Monte. Point of entry: smashed rear window.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Employee on San Carlos Street found an unattended wallet located inside his store. The customer never came back to pick up the wallet and wanted to turn it over to us in case the owner called us looking for it. Officer attempted to contact the police department having jurisdiction over the address on the Illinois driver's license; however, the phone number they provided was disconnected. Also found an Enterprise Rent a Car business card and contacted them for a phone number. The rental car company was able to make contact with the owner. The wallet was later released back to the owner.

SATURDAY, MAY 10

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man was visiting Monterey and Carmel and lost his cell phone. Report for insurance purposes only.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A 47-year-old male driver was stopped on Ocean Avenue for a vehicle code violation. He was later found to have a suspended license and his vehicle was towed.

SUNDAY, MAY 11

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person flagged officers down to report finding a wallet on the beach. Wallet was retrieved for safekeeping. Presidio of Monterey was contacted to attempt to locate the owner of the lost property. Wallet will be placed in temporary storage, pending owner notification. At 1636 hours, the wallet was returned to its rightful owner.

Jury finds contractor guilty in P.G. burglary

By MARY SCHLEY

A CARMEL contractor who burglarized a client's Sunset Drive home more than a year ago was found guilty in a jury trial that lasted several days and concluded May 27 with the verdict, Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Sam Nong said this week. Thomas Matulich, 54, is set to be sentenced July 3.

The resident hired Matulich to install a fireplace in her home in the 1500 block of Sunset Drive, where he worked sporadically throughout a two-week period. After he was done in early August, she never heard from him again — until surveillance video showed him going into the house on March 26, 2013, and leaving with a chop saw and table saw taken from her unlocked garage three minutes later.

The victim and a friend of hers who had employed Matulich identified him as the burglar and provided his contact information to police, who served a search warrant at his residence at Mission and Eighth eight days after the break-in.

"He had several firearms registered to him, so they arrived very early and succeeded in waking him up and catching him by surprise," the resident told The Pine Cone at the time. "He first tried to lie and say he had permission to be at my house, but when the officer told him there was surveillance video of him, he 'pretty much confessed,' according to the arresting officer."

Nong said Matulich told police he went inside to pick up tools he had bought from a person named "Jose" who was working on the property. The break-in was investigated by P.G. officer Yma Garcia, who arrested the burglar, and CPD officer (now detective) Greg Johnson.

There were several delays in the case, with jury trials set on the court calendar several times between December 2013 and last week, when jury selection finally began May 19.

Now that he's been found guilty, Matulich, who has prior theft-related convictions, faces up to a maximum of six years in state prison and is set to be sentenced by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Larry Hayes July 3. The conviction counts as a strike under the state's Three Strikes Law.

COUNCIL RETREAT FOCUSES ON ROLES, GOALS AND LENGTH OF MEETINGS

By MARY SCHLEY

BETTER COMMUNICATION, contending with a large workload, and shorter and more efficient meetings were the topics du jour during the Carmel City Council's annual retreat at Sunset Center Tuesday. The three-and-a-half-hour meeting, which included sandwiches and salads from California Pizza Kitchen, was attended by the council, city attorney Don Freeman and city administrator Jason Stilwell, but no members of the public.

A consultant, Nancy Hetrick from Management Partners, led the discussion, focusing on topics raised in individual conversations she'd had earlier with each elected official.

Much of the meeting centered on how the council and city conduct business, with elected officials setting policy and staff carrying it out.

"There are some major misunderstandings in the public about how the city works," commented councilwoman Victoria Beach, who said people need to know the council has a "generalist role."

"We're not experts," she said, adding that she's had multiple conversations with unhappy constituents who don't realize she doesn't know anything about the specifics of their complaints but are mollified once she explains how the system works and who can help.

Together, the group identified the council's roles as not only setting policy, but providing oversight, representing residents, helping to prioritize city business, facilitating communication between the public and city staff, serving as ambassadors for the city, and setting the budget.

Sometimes, councilwoman Carrie Theis observed, the council tries to do the employees' work.

"We have issues where staff has recommendations and information, and staff has the expertise, but I think this council has a tendency to change things instead of just saying, 'That's fine, that's the way to do things,'" she said. "It's not so much a community issue, it's more a how-to-run-the-city issue."

Mayor Jason Burnett observed the council has too many goals and initiatives to try to complete throughout the course of the year. The council sets those initiatives each year, and they are tied to the budget.

"There's not enough buffer," he said, which means city workers and the council spend time not only tackling planned business, but handling emergencies and other pressing matters that arise unexpectedly, such as the house that exploded at Guadalupe and Third in March after PG&E workers caused a gas leak while working on a main in the area.

"We're trying to do too many new things," councilman Ken Talmage commented.

Workshops and meetings

The group also wanted to examine the council workshops that Burnett established after he became mayor two years ago. Generally, they focus on a single topic and are meant to solicit comments from the public in a more casual setting, with the council and others seated around a table, and they don't include officials taking any specific action. LOCALS SOUND OFF ON SHORT-TERM RENTALS AS COUNTY PREPARES ORDINANCE

By CHRIS COUNTS

MORE THAN 100 people crowded into the Big Sur Grange Hall May 28 to voice their concerns about short-term rentals.

The increasingly popular practice of renting out homes on a short-term basis is a contentious issue in Big Sur, where housing is in short supply and great demand. At www.vrbo.com, a search this week turned up 42 different short-term rentals in Big Sur.

The meeting was moderated by Monterey County planner John Ford, who asked residents how short-term rentals impact their neighborhoods. The responses took up much of the 90-minute meeting.

Marcus Foster said long-term rentals are being converted to short-term rentals, pushing families out of the area. "Families are a dying breed here," Foster said.

Seth Parker said short-term rentals add to the strain on volunteer fire brigades. "How are communities like ours supposed to deal with the growing number of visitors?" Parker asked.

Steve Beck echoed Parker's concerns.

"In town, you can call the fire department, the cops or an ambulance. We don't have any of those services," Beck said.

Tara Evans said she's worried about liability issues on private roads.

Magnus Toren said he fears the practice will cause more property owners to become absentee landlords who are only interested in making a profit off their homes.

Jeanne Alexander said short-term rentals threaten one of Big Sur's most valuable resources — its sense of community. "It's the one thing we all have in common," Alexander said.

Opponents also said short term rentals create more noise and less privacy in neighborhoods not accustomed to tourist traffic. "Short-term rentals have definitely impacted our quality of life," said Jerri Hansen.

While much of the talk at the meeting centered on complaints about short-term rentals, many supporters were there as well. Sofanya White asked Ford why more time wasn't allotted to discussing remedies.

"There are many positives to short-term rentals," White insisted. "Why haven't we talked about them? We have solutions."

Lloyd Jones also said the problems associated with short-term rentals can be resolved. "All concerns are preventable with communication between neighbors," he suggested.

Natalie Van Allen said her parents would not be able to afford to live in Big Sur without the income they receive from a short-term rental.

Another supporter said his vacation renters cause fewer problems than his former long-term renters did.

Offering a compromise between the two sides, Mike Caplin suggested the county craft an ordinance that only permits short-term rentals on "owner-occupied" properties. An informal poll of the audience showed that most people agreed with the idea.

Ford conceded he is working to create an ordinance that permits some short-term rentals. "We've got to stop talking about what we think and focus on what the solutions are," he said.

Ford asked residents to keep an open mind.

"How to we get consensus?" he asked. "We realize some are adamantly opposed, and others think they should be allowed with minor county involvement. There are many shades of gray in between."

The meeting also included a short discussion about special events in residential neighborhoods. The subject ignited another round of debate.

Ford said another meeting will soon be scheduled in Big Sur to discuss short-term rentals and special events.

Two months ago, two separate draft ordinances were released addressing short-term rentals in the coastal and inland portions of the county.

Also circulated was a draft ordinance offering guidelines for special events. The drafts can be viewed at www.co.monterey.ca.us/planning.

Shooting by deputy in Palo Colorado Canyon still being investigated

Woman arrested for attempted break-in due for jury trial

By MARY SCHLEY

THE SHOOTING death of fugitive Hector Chairez by sheriff's deputies in Palo Colorado Canyon March 20 remains under investigation by the Monterey County District Attorney's Office, chief assistant district attorney Terry Spitz said last week.

"All the interviews are done, reports are being written. I think we're still awaiting the final pathologist report, and there are a few other things — there are going to be some diagrams that will be put into the report to help illustrate the case," he said.

He estimated it would probably be one more month before the report was finalized, and it would go to one of the upper-level attorneys in the DA's office for review.

The shooting occurred the afternoon of March 20 after Chairez, 40, and 29-year-old Amber Dawn Barnett drove their U-Haul up the canyon, fleeing from police and in search of gas. The truck hit a patrol car, and they ended up running.

A parolee, Chairez was reportedly wanted by Union City P.D. for criminal threats, spousal battery, kidnapping and being a felon in possession of a firearm, relating to a February incident involving his girlfriend, who told officers he had a shotgun and had "made threats to shoot it out with the police if contacted."

During the chase in the canyon, deputies shot Chairez, apparently believing he was armed, while Barnett fled and was later arrested for trying to break into a trailer inhabited by Alan Buchwald, "with intent to commit larceny."

Barnett, who was originally charged with burglary, had the charge reduced to attempted burglary during her pretrial conference April 18. She remains in custody at Monterey County Jail on $50,000 bail and is set to appear in court June 11 for the setting of a jury trial date.

Meanwhile, investigators are wrapping up their review of the shooting — including the fact no gun was found after Chairez' body was recovered.

"That's one of the things we'll be assessing, is, 'Why did someone believe there was a gun, and was that justified?'" Spitz said.

His office is often tasked with investigating officer-involved shootings, though no particular law requires it.

"This is a murky area in the law — there really isn't anything written down about officer-involved shootings, but there's kind of a custom that has evolved," he said.

While some departments prefer to conduct their own investigations, most of the Peninsula's law-enforcement agencies request the DA's help. And regardless, a management-level attorney with the office reviews the finished report to determine if a crime has been committed.

"The other side is if we think a crime has been committed, we can investigate it — we have the authority to do it," Spitz added. "That obviously makes for a difficult investigation, because there obviously isn't going to be cooperation. But we have not seen that in the 35 years I've been here."

NOTED PENINSULA MODERNIST ARCHITECT REMEMBERED BY COLLEAGUES

Jerrold Lomax

By KELLY NIX

AN AWARD-WINNING Sand City architect who had a profound impact on modern architecture in the Monterey Peninsula died May 17 after a long and celebrated career.

Jerrold E. Lomax, 87, who spent about six decades of his life designing some of the state's most modern and interesting homes and commercial buildings, worked not long before his death of pancreatic cancer, said Karen Lesney, whom Lomax hired in 2006.

"He had pencil in hand as long as he could," Lesney told The Pine Cone, adding that Lomax was diagnosed with the illness in April.

His last project was a home in Carmel he designed that is under construction. Besides designing scores of modernist homes, Lomax was interested in preserving such aging structures and told The Pine Cone in March 2012 of his efforts to prevent a Richard Neutra house in Pebble Beach from being demolished.

Though a Los Angeles native, Lomax relocated with his family to Houston, Texas, in 1938, when he was 11. As a child, his interest in detail was nurtured by drawing and model building, Lesney said. He enlisted in 1945 in the U.S. Navy and served in World War II in Japan for three months toward the end of the war.

He used the GI Bill to attend the School of Architecture at the University of Houston in 1951 and by 1953 got a job in Los Angeles with Craig Elwood Associates, the firm named after the influential Los Angeles modernist architect. He worked there until 1962, when he established his own firm, Lomax Associates.

Lesney said that from the beginning of his career, Lomax "worked a palette of minimalist modern ease into the function of commercial, industrial, custom residential and mixed-use projects."

Lomax's work was featured in numerous notable publications including Arts and Architecture, DWELL, and Architectural Digest. He was a faculty member for UCLA School of Architecture and Urban Planning, Cal Poly Pomona, and was a visiting lecturer at University of Houston. During the course of his career, Lomax received many local, state and national design awards and honors from the AIA and other organizations.

His notable works include the Hunt residence in Malibu, South Bay Bank in Manhattan Beach, the Ashton-Casella home in Carmel Valley, the Moses residence in Los Angeles, and the 2003 West End mixed-used building in Sand City.

After various professional partnerships in the Los Angeles area, Lomax moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1995 with his wife, Sandra Miles.

"His arrival to the area revived the design community," Lesney said. "He immediately set about establishing himself as the local leader of modernism to the Monterey Bay area in both design and mentorship."

In fact, his own house in Carmel Valley landed Lomax a local American Institute of Architects Monterey Bay Honor Award and is considered by many, Lesney said, to be the leading local example of modern residential architecture.

Lesney met Lomax in 1999, not long after her father died. Soon he became her mentor. Lomax, she said, was humble, caring and self-effacing, while being steadfast in his ideals.

RENDERING COURTESY/KAREN LESNEY

This home in Carmel was modern architect Jerrold Lomax's final project. The house is currently under construction.

In 2009, the two shared an AIA award for a mixed-use project.

"If you were lucky enough to be mentored by him," she said, "you worked with him, you were not below him."

Before he died, Lesney said she told Lomax "Thank you for being a mentor to us all." "He was unable to respond by this time," she said, "but, he smiled in quiet acknowledgment."

Culver City architect Zoltan E. Pali, who also worked with Lomax, noted his influence on Monterey Peninsula architecture in an online tribute this week to his former mentor.

"Lomax represented a long-awaited role model for the next generation of architects in Monterey and was honored at the 2007 AIACC Monterey Design Conference as its 'tribal elder,' keynote speaker," Pali said.

Pali, who said Lomax taught him discipline, called him "noble" and the "Obi Wan Kenobi, the Jedi Knight of architects."

shops have been held on parking, the Forest Theater closure, Richard Tavener's Wonderspace project, trash and recycling services, the facilities use plan, the shoreline and forest management plans, the Scenic Road restrooms and other topics.

"I don't think they are working nearly as well as they should be working," Burnett said. "There's lots of room for improvement."

Councilman Steve Dallas said the workshops often draw the usual suspects, rather than the cross-section of constituents the council would like to hear from.

"I don't know if we're not getting the message out, but it has to be engaging," he said. "Maybe we should just do it quarterly." He also suggested having workshops without a specific topic, instead opening them to anyone who'd like to say something about anything.

"You're not getting a community — you're getting a very narrow and deep perspective," from the people who care the most about an issue and therefore show up, agreed Talmage, who also said some of the workshop presentations by people like Tavener and Forest Theater project architect Richard McCann were far too long and otherwise ineffective, defeating the purpose.

"We're having presentations that get off on the wrong foot and go sideways instantly," he said. "There needs to be some screening work ahead of time."

He also asked Stilwell if it would be possible to receive the council's meeting packet a week before the meeting, rather than a few days prior, and others agreed that would be helpful.

As for the length of council meetings — which has generated complaints from people like Carmel Residents Association President and former longtime councilwoman Barbara Livingston— Beach said she didn't really see how they could be shortened, considering the need for the public and elected officials to express themselves. (The record is just under eight hours, set in January.)

"We have to have public input during the council meeting, by law," she said. "And I absolutely don't think we should do anything about the discourse we have, so then the only piece left is the presentations."

Talmage suggested the council focus more on implementation and less on intellectual discussion, and Theis said, "I don't think everyone has to talk."

Freeman suggested council members pull items from the consent agenda they have questions about and simply delay them until another meeting, rather than holding an unplanned hearing that takes up valuable time.

He also encouraged the mayor or others on the council to venture a motion for a vote when the discussion gets stuck or redundant, and Burnett said he has been trying to do that more often.

Hetrick said she'll provide a wrap-up report of the retreat for the council to consider at a later date.

P.G. museum to start charging admission

By KELLY NIX

THE FREE Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History won't be free for long.

Beginning June 10, the museum will start charging out-of-county guests admission fees, and down the road will charge local visitors admission to special exhibitions, such as the museum's butterfly pavilion, which is still in the making.

Museum director Lori Mannel said the revenue generated from charging an $8.95 admission fee for non-local adults and $5.95 for children ages 4 to 17, and charging locals for special exhibitions will help improve the "guest experience."

The museum's annual budget is $730,000. Children under 3 can visit with their parents for free.

"This museum was created by the people, for the people," Mannel told The Pine Cone Wednesday. "It's a community jewel. We are still trying to enhance and improve it in ways that give back to the community."

Monterey County residents, she said, will not likely be required to pay for special exhibits soon since none are planned this year.

However, the museum will eventually open a butterfly pavilion a few months per year that will allow visitors a closeup view of monarchs and other butterflies. All guests to that exhibit, even local ones, will be required to pay admission, although Mannel said they haven't yet set a price.

"The butterfly pavilion is going to be expensive to operate," she said.

Though the museum has not previously charged entrance fees, Mannel said there have been instances when the city ran the museum that it charged for special exhibits, and she cited a robotic dinosaur exhibit years ago as an example.

There are some exceptions to the new entrance fees, including all school groups and guests who visit the museum on the last Saturday of every month. Also, museum members (who pay an annual fee to join) and volunteers won't be charged for special exhibits.

The museum, founded in 1883, has been operated by the nonprofit Museum Foundation of Pacific Grove since it started leasing the building from the city in 2009.

She said the foundation hasn't yet determined how much, in dollars, the admission fees will boost the bottom line, but expects it will be significant.

"We still wholeheartedly depend on community support and will continue to need that," Mannel said, "but [the fees] are going to help us to generate a new revenue stream that will really help us increase and enhance the guest experience."

MEarth offers summer programs

THE MEARTH habitat project at Carmel Middle School is offering week-long summer camps for the first time, allowing students ages 8 to 13 to get a hands-on environmental education through watershed restoration, nature-inspired art projects, organic gardening and green cooking.

According to organizers, each week "will offer students a once-in-a-lifetime environmental education experience," and the age-appropriate curriculum will emphasize "learning through fun, introducing students to the wonder of their natural surroundings through exciting nature walks, nature-inspired crafts, and hands-on exploration of the habitat."

The camps cost $275 per child and run June 16-20, June 23-27, July 7-11 and July 14-18. All programs run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. For more information, including program registration, visit www.MEarthCarmel.org.

RADIOS

tion is on hold," Harray said.

After the tower sites are completed and fully equipped, the system will be tested and the switch made, Monterey County Sheriff's Chief Deputy Chuck Monarque, who is in charge of the radio project for his agency, told The Pine Cone.

"Not all the sites have been built — that's step one, and we're not even there, yet," he said. "We're waiting on the coastal area and North County and South County. Huckleberry Hill is the last piece that needs to be put in place."

When it's completed, the new system will provide "the best radio coverage for all our public safety services," he said, including not just law enforcement and fire agencies, but the probation department, district attorney's office and everyone else who "has a radio and needs to talk."

"Because this project is so huge, I've had to appoint a deputy to work on it," Monarque said. "The system's got a ways to go — it hasn't been on the front burner for us."

It has been front burner for Harray at county communications, despite the delays in permits that have pushed the project to yet another start date.

"It's not back-burnered at all — we have staff dedicated to the administration of the project, getting permits and lease contracts," he said. "Although I have other responsibilities with managing the call center and all those issues, this is my top priority."

Secret communications

Ultimately, law enforcement agencies throughout the county will transmit on digital channels that are encrypted, so the public can no longer simply buy a scanner at Radio Shack and listen in on cops' conversations.

Monarque said every law enforcement agency in the system will have to have its radios programmed with encryption codes so they can communicate with each other when emergencies require response from more than one agency. The sheriff's department and Carmel P.D., for example, work together fairly often.

Carmel Police Cmdr. Paul Tomasi said his department is using Kenwood radios and will have to buy encryption before the digital switch is flipped.

"Most of the county has purchased Harris radios which are ready for encryption. We have Kenwood radios and will need to purchase the encryption for them," he said. "I anticipate encryption taking place during the next year."

The equipment and encryption are included in the proposed 2014-2015 budget — set for adoption in June — and are classified as "critical," with a total cost of $104,000. "Encryption is the blocking of radio transmissions through a system that scrambles the signal so people with scanners cannot listen to police traffic. Encryption has been adopted as part of the county NGEN project," reads the budget item prepared by CPD Chief Mike Calhoun. "The encryption would be installed in 50 department radios, to include patrol handhelds, vehicles and dispatch. Without encryption, we will not be able to communicate with other agencies."

As for the public's ability to listen — including members of the media who rely on their scanners to know when and where police officers are responding to stabbings, robberies and other significant calls — Monarque said it's up to the individual agencies to decide how to handle it.

"We have yet to vet that out internally, because we're not really certain how that would work," he said. Media organizations could be required to purchase portable digital radios, at a cost of $2,500 to $5,000 apiece, and have them programmed by the sheriff's office so the users could only listen to radio traffic, but not transmit anything. The agency would also have to enter the encryption keys — which will regularly change.

"We don't know if there's another way to get you the voice traffic," he said. Any police chief could certainly decide not to encrypt his agency's radio channels, though considering criminals are known to possess scanners to keep track of cops' activities, too, that's unlikely.

Monarque also said the risk of providing de-encrypted digital radios to media is that someone might steal them.

"What happens if the radio gets stolen?" he asked. "They could get the radio and get the encryption keys."

Monarque said the sheriff's office will "get it worked out, one way or the other."

teers and mutual aid resources to provide professional engineers and architects and certified building inspectors to assist local governments in safety evaluation of their built environment in an aftermath of a disaster." He has worked for the City of Monterey since 2002 and lives in Monterey, so he's well familiar with the area.

Headley is replacing Hanson — who is in the process of suing the city over his termination — and interim building official John Kuehl, who also works for the City of Monterey and has been assisting Carmel with inspections since Hanson left. When it was advertised, the salary range for building official was $82,896 to $103,776.

"He's worked under John Kuehl, who's our current acting building official, and is very familiar with the Monterey Peninsula and the City of Carmel," Mullane said. "He'll be a very welcome addition to our team."

Raynor is credentialed as a master municipal clerk, has a B.S. in liberal studies and is a retired U.S. Army military intelligence officer, according to city administrator Jason Stilwell. Most recently, she's worked for the City of Monterey as a senior assistant city clerk, and he said her "overall background and experience make her a welcome addition to the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea's leadership team."

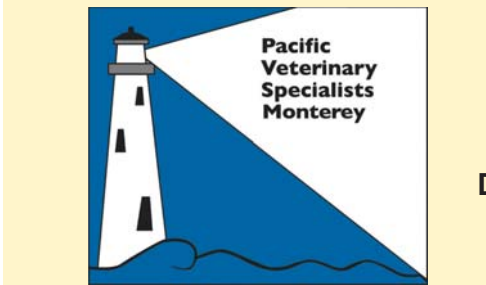

Stilwell said she will receive a salary of $108,288, and was selected from among 16 people who applied for the job.

WELCOME VISITORS!

Lisa Dias
2014 Board Co-Chair

There is no question that tourism plays an important and vital role in our quaint little village. Twenty-nine percent of the city's revenues are derived from hotel taxes. Twenty-six percent of city's revenues are derived from sales taxes which can be attributed largely to visitors, both day-trippers and overnighters. Dean Runyan reports that hotel guests spend an average of $206 per person per day in our destination. In 2013 that equates to a minimum of $102M in spending and about $8.6M in sales tax revenues, and this is for overnight guests alone and is on top of the hotel taxes.

Aside from the many member services offered by the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, it has been operating the Carmel Visitor Information Center on San Carlos Street since 2005. Prior to that, the chamber office served as a visitor center for decades. Visitor centers play a vital role in the tourism industry and provide a significant economic contribution by providing information to visitors that encourage them to stay longer, spend more money, and to return to an area. In Carmel-by-the-Sea, the direct economic impact from hotel guests booked alone is over $500K for our visitor center. Based on the 34,545 people they help via walk-ins and phone calls, the total economic impact is likely over 3.2M. In addition to this tremendous contribution, it provides a social benefit by relying on a volunteer workforce of our community members. For local volunteers it is often a fulfilling means of giving back to their community, and there is no doubt that our 'Carmel experts' truly do!

If you haven't been by the visitor center or haven't been there lately - please stop by and thank our visitor center staff and volunteers for their role in making Carmel successful.

Lisa Dias is Chief Operating Officer, Mirabel Hotel & Restaurant Group.

source water while the water district isn't so sure.

"It's not crystal clear they have rights to it," Monterey Peninsula Water Management District general manager Dave Stoldt told the Pine Cone.

At a May 19 water district board meeting in Ryan Ranch, directors put off a decision to spend more money on the project, preferring to wait until a deal is in place. And while county water director David Chardavoyne and Nancy Isakson from the Salinas Valley Water Coalition told directors at the meeting negotiations were progressing, nothing has been firmed up.

Stoldt also said talks were going well and that the parties have agreed to four more sessions to discuss the matter. But he also said "that doesn't mean we are going to get there" in terms of an agreement. Another session is scheduled for next week.

"I think we are just hopeful we can come to a conclusion by the end of June," Stoldt said.

The proposed recycled water project would divert wastewater and agricultural wash water to the pollution control agency's plant in Marina, where it would undergo advanced treatment. It would then be injected into the Seaside Basin aquifer, where it would be mixed with groundwater and stored for later use.

The county water resources agency recently applied to the State Water Resources Control Board for the rights to the water. While the water management district was considering filing its own competing application for a portion of those rights, Stoldt said it opted not to.

If a deal is reached, the Salinas Valley and the Peninsula could benefit from the project. Storm water that would otherwise go to the City of Salinas' treatment ponds would instead be diverted to the pollution control agency's facility, where it would be processed, with some of it going back to the valley for agricultural uses, while the Monterey Peninsula would also get some for its own uses.

"If the growers can actually see a potential increase in supply and the Peninsula can see 3,500 acre-feet of permanent supply, then everybody's happy" — as long as the price is right, Stoldt said.

If negotiations fall apart and the recycled water project fails to come to fruition, though, it would have big implications for the Monterey Peninsula Water Supply Project, which not only includes that component, but water storage facilities and California American Water's desalination plant in North Marina.

Cal Am has posed two scenarios for its desal plant. If the recycled water project happens, the company has planned a 6.4 million-gallons-per-day plant, or a 9.6 million-gallons-per-day facility without the recycled water component.

Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Stedman said the company is hopeful agreements will be reached and the recycled water project becomes one of the three projects to serve the Peninsula.

"The [recycled water project] will bring many benefits to our desal proposal," Stedman said. "For one, it allows the desal project to be smaller, which means less energy use because desal is such an energy-intensive project. We are told the talks are going very well between the growers and the pollution control agency and the water district, and we are hopeful they will come to an agreement soon."

Lightning in a Bottle provides spark for Monterey County

By MICHAEL TROUTMAN

A UNIQUE event has come to the shores of Lake San Antonio, providing Monterey County parks with some much needed new revenue and nearly 15,000 festival goers with a Memorial Day weekend to remember — and look forward to.

Now in its fourth year, Lightning in a Bottle is billed as “California’s Premier Campout Festival.” It might be described as a cross between Burning Man and the Coachella Music Festival, with a dash of the Renaissance Faire and some secret sauce all its own.

Thousands enjoyed music on multiple sound stages large and small (including one built into an enormous oak tree), yoga classes, meditation workshops, guest speakers talking on subjects from holistic dentistry to women’s empowerment, classes on archery and beer making, and an overall atmosphere of positive self-transformation and enlightenment.

The event, produced by The Do LaB, took place May 22-26 on the Chumash reservation at Lake San Antonio in Bradley, about 90 miles south of Monterey.

William Close (far right) plays the world’s largest stringed instrument that he invented called the Earth Harp (stretching to the stage far left) in front of an enthralled audience at Lightning in a Bottle. Live music and DJs kept audiences entranced and dancing at multiple stages and venues late into the night across a large expanse of land next to Lake San Antonio.

Situated on sprawling fingers of land stretching towards (the unfortunately bone-dry) lake, the rolling chaparral topography offered shady oaks for those exerting themselves in the dusty heat of midday. Attendees migrated up and down the valleys to discover oasis after oasis of humanity participating in a wide range of activities. Food vendors offered a variety of vegetarian and vegan delicacies, and folks could shop for the very latest in earthy fashions and merchandise in an open-air bazaar.

The festival drew people of all stripes from all over, and one of the refreshing sights was the number of young children enjoying the relaxed atmosphere right alongside their parents. Stanford University associate professor Miriam Abu Sharkh brought her two infant children and delighted in exploring the wonders of the event with them, from marveling at the beautiful art installations, to trying out (low-level) tightrope walking.

“I think this is even better than when I went a few years ago,” Sharkh said. “There is more art and a better location.”

Pacific Grove photographer Michelle Magdalena Maddox attended with friends and said it was an eye opener.

“There is so much potential with the community that emerges at this festival,” Maddox said. “Where else can you learn West African prayer songs and tradition from a real priestess or Hopi tradition, or traditions of spirituality from yoga, to tantra, to tarot?”

Not everything was perfect at the festival, however.

“One tragedy for most people was the fact that there was no water in Lake San Antonio,” Maddox added. “It was dry,

Of deltiology, onomastics and some really cool stuff for sale by collector

By JERRY GERVAISE

If we could travel in time we could visit a permanent past, solidly there — a past any imaginative person can visit at will. This is a subversive and comforting notion.

So wrote author Audrey Niffenegger (“The Time Traveler’s Wife”) in her foreword to Jack Finney’s classic time-travel book, “Time and Again.”

Carmel resident Rick Wilkerson has the means to travel back in time to the early days of Monterey and San Benito Counties. His time machine is his intriguing collection of documents from the late 19th and early 20th centuries, which includes thousands of postcards from those eras.

“It is a 50-year endeavor,” Wilkerson said. “It’s an eclectic accumulation that will keep a collector busy for a long, long time.”

When he threw the term, “deltiology,” at me, I thought he was going to tell me about the way the Mississippi River flows into the Gulf of Mexico.

“Deltiology” is a term coined in 1945 by Randall Rhoades of Ashland, Ohio, that became the accepted description of the study of picture postcards. And Wilkerson has an extensive collection of postcards. To say Wilkerson is a collector is like dismissing Spider Man as a nice guy with stickum on his hands.

Wilkerson has impressive credentials. One of the highlights of his collection is a proof copy of Donald Clark’s important compilation, “Monterey County Place Names, a Geographical Dictionary.” (Hence the term, “onomastics” — the science or study of the origin and forms of proper names of persons or places.) Clark specifies that the proof copy was “Expressly prepared for Richard C. Wilkerson, April 1991.” In the acknowledgments, Clark wrote, “Richard. C. (Rick) Wilkerson (cited as RW) postal historian, Regional (Monterey County) Vice President, Conference of California Historical Societies. Through his assistance I have been able to present significant data on present and former post offices of Monterey Country.”

“I would characterize what I have as ‘heavy paper,’” Wilkerson said. “And I’m getting rid of it all. I’m divesting myself of half a century of collecting, hoping to find someone who appreciates the content of what I have, and the sweat equity that went into gathering it.”

Sweat equity translates into passion.

Among the remarkable items in Richard Wilkerson’s collection of Carmel memorabilia is this view of San Carlos Street, where it intersects with Ocean Avenue, photographed in 1903.

Stars of tomorrow contest for cash prizes

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE WINNER of the Carmel Music Society's 2013 Piano Competition, Michael Noble presents a free concert Friday, May 30, at Sunset Center.

Noble's performance precedes the Carmel Music Society's 2014 Instrumental Competition, which happens May 31 from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at Sunset Center. The winners play a concert at 8 p.m.

The 38th annual contest — which features two cellists, two saxophonists, a violinist and a harpist — is open to musicians who are 18 to 30, and live in California, Oregon or Washington or attend schools in those states.

"It's an opportunity to see the next generation of great musicians," said Anne Thorp, co-president of the Carmel Music Society. "Most of the performers are in very prestigious music programs in universities across the United States."

Judging the instrumentalists are Farkhad Khudiyev, who conducts the Monterey County Junior Youth and Honors Orchestras; Jung-Ho Pak, the conductor of the Cape Cod Symphony; and cellist Sandy Wilson of the Alexander String Quartet.

The contestants will vie for $10,000 in cash prizes. The first place winner will follow in Noble's footsteps and present at next year's event.

The 25-year-old Noble, who grew up in Moreno Valley, is a postgraduate student at Yale University.

Like Friday's concert, Saturday's events are free. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Visit www.carmel-musicsociety.org.

■ 'Radio show' touches hearts

Paying tribute to the golden age of radio in Latin America, Cascada de Flores plays Wednesday, June 4, at Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley.

Led by singer Arwen Lawrence and guitarist Jorge Liceaga, the ensemble also features Saúl Sierra-Alonso on leoncita and double bass, Marco Díaz on trumpet and piano, and Brian Rice on percussion. Together, they recreate a radio program from the mid-20th century.

"They have a deep knowledge of traditional Cuban and Mexican music," said Lisa Manning of Hidden Valley. "They manage to bring historical music into the present and make it fresh. They just know how to touch your heart. They take you across the range of human emotions."

The event is second installment in Hidden Valley's Masters and More Concert Series.

The music starts at 7:30 p.m. Hidden Valley is located at 88 W. Carmel Valley Road. Tickets are $25 for adults and $10 for anyone 18 and under. Call (831) 659-3115.

■ Pianist offers 'Blues for Gene'

With a little help from some of the Monterey Peninsula's finest instrumentalists, pianist Robert Turner pays homage to the music of the late pianist Gene Harris Friday, May 30, at Bay of Pines restaurant in Monterey.

Turner, who recently released a CD tribute to Harris, "Blues for Gene," will be joined at Bay of Pines by Roger Eddy on saxophone, Heath Proskin on bass and Skylar Campbell on drums.

Harris, who died in 2000, was known for his warm sound and a style that brought together blues and gospel music.

"This will be an exciting evening of music," promised music promoter Kiki Wow, who calls Turner "a true feast for the ears." "He is truly extraordinary."

The music starts at 8 p.m. and there's no cover. The restau-

Art center shows off next generation

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE CREATIVE energy of nearly 100 third grade students comes together Friday, May 30, when the Pacific Grove Art Center unveils the fruits of its outreach education program, ArtSmart.

For the past year, Julie Heilman has taught art — and art appreciation — to third graders at Robert Down and Forest Grove elementary schools. In addition to learning about art, the students visit the art center and learn how it benefits their community.

The art center's executive director, Alana Puryear, came up with the idea of ArtSmart after teaching in a similar program as an undergraduate student at UC Berkeley.

"It's a wonderful experience," Puryear told The Pine Cone. "The kids love it and their families love it."

Puryear said the program fits perfectly "with the art center's mission of building community through creativity, and she hopes to increase funding for the program so it can expand into south Monterey County.

The art center's annual Tiny Treasures exhibit goes on display Friday. This year's show features about 120 pieces of art — none larger than 7-inches-by-9-inches — created by about

Crash victim turns her talents from dancing to writing

LEFT PARALYZED by a 2010 DUI car accident, Chelsie Hill has co-written a novel for young adults based loosely on what happened to her.

To celebrate the release of "Push Girl" — which she co-authored with Jessica Love — Hill will sign copies of the book Tuesday, June 3, at Bookworks in Pacific Grove.

Hill tells the story of a high school senior named Kara who seemingly has everything going for her.

"She's popular, has a great group of friends and an amazing boyfriend, and she's a shoe-in for homecoming queen," reads a synopsis of the book. But she becomes upset when she sees her boyfriend talking to another girl at a party.

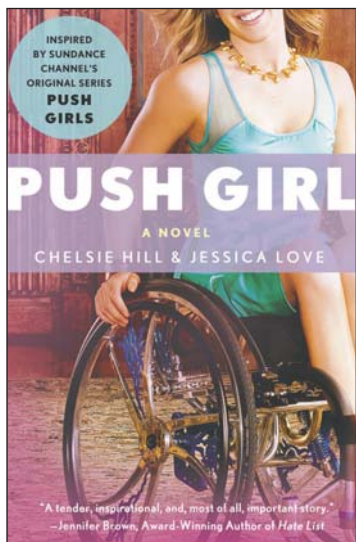

"She leaves, furious, to take a drive," the story continues. "The next thing she knows, Kara wakes up in the hospital with no memory of the night before. Where is she? Why are her parents crying? And, most importantly — why can't she feel her legs?"

"The book is about love, friendship, finding yourself and being okay with who you are," said Hill, who lives in Pacific Grove.

Since her accident, Hill and her father established a nonprofit group, The Walk and Roll Foundation, to aid people with spinal cord injuries. She co-founded a dance group, Team Hotwheelz, for women confined to wheelchairs. And she stars in a reality television series, "Push Girls," which inspired the title of her book.

The event starts at 6 p.m. Bookworks is located at 667 Lighthouse Ave. Call (831) 372-2242.

A quick getaway, homage to the artichoke, and the New Bohemian Nights

EVEN WHEN Carmel is drenched in summer fog and the temperature hovers in the 50s, the Big Sur Valley is usually sunny and at least 70. That, in itself, is reason enough to take a sojourn down the coast to one of the most exquisite places on earth.

Summer is a peak time for tourism in Monterey County, of course, and is also the perfect time for locals to take a quick getaway. A night at the Glen Oaks Big Sur with lunch and/or dinner at its Big Sur Roadhouse is a superior way to spend 24 hours.

“One of my favorite things about Glen Oaks and the Big Sur Roadhouse is that they’re in what I call the sunbelt,” said manager Jeanette Kenworthy, who oversees the hotel and the restaurant, which is run by chef Matt Glazer. “In fact, the original owner, Doris, back in the 1950s, drove down to Big Sur every day for a year to find the sunniest spot. She found it exactly where we are located and built a wonderful hotel.”

The lodge includes guest rooms on the east side of Highway 1, complementing the cabins dotted through the grounds that run along the river on the west side. Walking paths enable guests to meander through, finding their way to adirondack chairs in the river or the Roadhouse without ever having to set foot on the highway.

The rooms and cabins were recently renovated with recycled and sustainable materials after Tracy and Basil Sanborn (a Monterey Peninsula native whose parents managed neighboring Ripplewood for two decades) purchased the 16-room motel from the property and the size.

San Francisco architect/designer Steve Justrich handled the redo of the lodge, as well as the Roadhouse, which combines sleek modernity with rustic woods and recycled materials, successfully achieving a balance between the hard lines of modern design and the softness and color of something more organic.

Located across the street from the guest rooms and up a beautiful forested path from the cabins, the Roadhouse is open daily for breakfast, lunch, afternoon snacks and dinner. Under the bold creative vision of Glazer — whose roots are in New Orleans — the restaurant has matured since it reopened last July.

The deviled eggs, available on the Small Bites menu in the afternoon and at dinner-time, boast the smoothest possible filling and crispy prosciutto Americano, while the Rockafella' oysters with creamed spinach, parmesan breadcrumbs and crispy shallots manage to be sumptuous and rich without being overwhelming. Blackened local catch — especially if it's Monterey Bay salmon — is a delicious choice, as is the fried chicken with collard greens and mac 'n' cheese. The wine and beer lists, meanwhile, offer a lot of interesting variety and a wide price range, making choosing the best accompaniment delightfully difficult. If breakfast is your favorite meal of the day, consider the hardy Roadhouse breakfast of one egg with grits, slow-cooked greens and handmade sausage. The services is great, too: friendly, genuine and attentive.

Monterey County's most famous vegetable — the artichoke — will be feted during its annual festival May 31-June 1. But this time, the fest will be at the Monterey County Fairgrounds instead of in its home city of Castroville.

"Our move to the Monterey County Fair and Event Center will allow the Artichoke Festival, with its new name, The Castroville Artichoke Food and Wine Festival, to improve and expand the two-day event at a landscaped, permanent facility capable of hosting an anticipated 20,000 visitors," organizers announced earlier this month.

Open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday, the festival will feature chef demos, wine tasting, art, live music and other activities. Admission is $10 for adults, and $5 for active duty military, seniors and children ages 4 through 12. (Kids 3 and under are free.)

Chefs lined up to demonstrate the newest, best and most creative ways to prepare fresh artichokes include popular Peninsula talents like Terry Teplitzky from Wild Thyme in Marina, Todd Fisher from Tarpy's Roadhouse, Tony Baker from Montrio Bistro, Dyon Foster from Hahn Estate, Thomas Snyder from Esteban and Cy Yontz from the Rio Grill.

Those set to share their wines during the festival include Hahn, Barefoot, Berghold, Hansen Garbarino, Cowgirl, Blair Estate and Ventana.

Throughout the festival, the growers of Castroville will offer two-hour artichoke field tours, showing guests firsthand what it takes to cultivate and harvest fresh artichokes.

For a detailed schedule and additional information, visit www.artichokefestival.org.

■ New Bohemian Nights

A fundraising dinner for the Weston Scholarship will take place at the Westons' family property, Wildcat Hill in the Carmel Highlands, Saturday, June 7, from 5 to 8 p.m. Limited to 20 guests who pay $500 apiece, The New Bohemian Nights Fundraising Dinner will feature three fine-art photographers — Kim Weston, Roman Loranc and Ruyjie — with guests taking home a photo by one of them, as well as Robinson Jeffers poetry and Edward Weston daybooks read by local poet Elliot Ruchowitz-Roberts.

Kim Weston and Roman Loranc will prepare the gourmet feast to accompany all the art, and Pisoni is providing the estate wines to sip with each dish.

In its heyday, artists like Ansel Adams, Ruth Bernhard, Imogen Cunningham and Dorothea Lange gathered at Wildcat Hill, known as the "little house with the big mood."

"This evening will be an exclusive Bohemian night of food, photography, poetry reading, festivity and wine," the Westons said. "Just like they used to do it in the old days. Come spend a magical evening with us and donate to a worthy cause."

The Weston Scholarship is a nonprofit organization established by Gina and Kim Weston in 2004 to support high-school and college students studying fine art photography in Monterey County. It "celebrates the roots of photographic history in our region and keeps a tradition alive that was established by Edward Weston and Ansel Adams."

For more information or tickets, visit www.westonscholarship.org.

■ Thursdays

The Rio Grill's lineup of Winemaker Thursdays includes some popular names through the end of the year, with winery representatives or winemakers showing up to show off their latest vintages while chef Cy Yontz creates a special dish to pair with the featured wine available by the glass that night. Winemaker Thursdays take place the first Thursday of each month from 5 to 7 p.m. in the restaurant located at the Crossroads shopping center.

Upcoming guests are Bernardus June 5, Talbott July 3, Pessagno Aug. 7, Far Niente Sept. 4, Galante Oct. 2 and Silvestri Nov. 6.

For more information on the Rio, call (831) 625-5436 or go to www.riogrill.com. It's open daily for lunch and dinner.

Also on Thursdays through October, the Hyatt Carmel Highlands hosts Hello

Sunshine Thursdays, when guests can take in the amazing views from the lounges, sip special cocktails, and linger long enough to catch an amazing sunset. From 5 to 7 p.m. every week, drinks and tapas will be in the offing, alongside live music, in the lounges at Pacific's Edge restaurant.

For more information, visit www.hyattcarmelhighlands.com or call (831) 622-5445. The Highlands Inn is located at 120 Highlands Drive off of Highway 1 south of Carmel.

■ Firestone beer at Pt. Pinos

Firestone makes some of the most popular beers featured in local restaurants and bars, including Double Barrel Ale and Wookey Jack dark rye IPA, and some of its latest brews will be paired with head chef Shane Griffin's cuisine during a special dinner at the Pt. Pinos Grill Thursday, June 12, starting at 6:30 p.m. with hors d'oeuvres.

For dinner, Griffin has planned to prepare arugula and burrata salad (sliced heirloom tomato, summer melon, grapefruit vinaigrette, cucumber sorbet and saba) with Easy Jack IPA, and grilled rosemary-and-garlic-marinated quail and grilled summer vegetables with Union Jack IPA. The main course will be Duck 3 Ways — seared breast with piquillo pepper quinoa salad, confit of leg with cannellini beans, and braised leg with herb Manchego polenta — with a vertical tasting of Parabola Imperial Stout spanning three years. And the final course will be cappuccino cheesecake with goat cheese and an Oreo crust, paired with Wookey Jack Rye IPA (my favorite).

The cost to attend is $75 per person, excluding tax and tip, and reservations are recommended by calling (831) 648-5774. The grill, managed by Aqua Terra Culinary, is located in the clubhouse at the P.G. golf links at 79 Asilomar Blvd.

90 different artists. Contributors include Christine Crozier, Mark Farina, Sheila Delimont, Claude Cirmele, Lisa Handley and many others.

Starting Friday, people can buy $5 raffle tickets and place as many as they like into the corresponding boxes below each piece of art. A drawing will determine the winners of each piece, and the results will be posted on the art center's website two weeks after the show closes.

One of the art center's major annual fundraisers, the show funds its programs as well as its day-to-day operations.

Also opening this weekend are exhibits by sculptor Irina Daylene and painter Julie Brown Smith.

Daylene, whose global travels have long inspired her creations, turns her talents to the subject of Sumo wrestling. In "Crazy for Sumo ... and Mad For Life," she imagines the oversized athletes doing unexpected things, like skating and playing leapfrog.

In Smith's "The Faust Project," the artist takes on the ambitious task of illustrating Johann Wolfgang von Goethe's play, "Faust." Goethe took more than 60 years to complete the script, which he finished in 1831.

Pursuing a task that others have toiled over, Smith dedicated seven years to her project — in large part because she has been so moved by Goethe's words. "This one piece of literature has captivated me artistically and intellectually, and has led me in directions I could never have imagined," Smith said.

A reception begins at 7 p.m. The exhibits will be on display through July 10. The art center is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. Call (831) 375-2208.

In tandem with the festivities at the art center, the Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce presents its Wine, Art and Music Walk Friday from 6 to 9 p.m.

Staying open late are Glenn Gobel

Custom Frames (562 Lighthouse Ave.), Strouse and Strouse Studio Gallery (178 Grand Ave.), Tessuti Zoo (171 Forest Ave.), Artisana Gallery (612 Lighthouse Ave.), Tessuti Zoo (171 Forest Ave.), Sun Studios (208 Forest Ave.), Butterfly (207A 16th St.), Taft and Teak (581 Lighthouse Ave.) and Bana Home Decor (510 Lighthouse Ave.).

The event is free, and art walk maps are available at the chamber and the venues.

Trading barbs in good fun

Three weeks after its plein air painters and studio artists unveiled dueling exhibits, the Carmel Art Association hosts a closing reception May 31 for the two displays.

"This is a way for us to say goodbye to the shows," said Sally Aberg of the CAA. "There's been a lot of friendly rivalry between the two groups. The artists have been busy counting the red dots to see how many paintings each show has sold."

After 13 artists who prefer to paint outside decided to put together a group exhibit, another seven artists who like to paint inside in their studios announced their intention of staging a "rival" show, which they jokingly called, "En Studio Air."

"I've heard some funny barbs being traded," Aberg added. "The plein air painters are calling the show by the studio artists, 'En Stale Air.' It's all good, clean fun."

The reception starts at 11 a.m. The gallery is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. Call (831) 624-6176.

Frame shop unveils show

An exhibit of work by painter Tom Davies opens Friday, May 30, at Janet's Goldleaf Frame Design in Monterey. About 40 pieces, which depict many familiar sights and scenes, will be displayed.

The show will continue through July 18. The gallery, which hosts a reception from 3 to 6 p.m., is located at 620 Munras Ave. Call (831) 649-3520.

Among Williams' private campaign contributions are $100 each from Salinas City

Councilwoman Gloria De La Rosa, Moss Landing retiree Angelita Partido and Salinas resident Daniel Fajardo. Heralio Serrano, a doctor in San Francisco, donated $350, Seaside attorney Rami Nimri gave $300, and Salinas attorney Shirley Paiz contributed $200 to Williams' campaign.

The candidate's biggest expenditure was $72,074.74 to Mailrite Print and Mail, Inc. for campaign mailers. Other expenses included $22,325.44 to River City Printers for printing of her mailers, and $12,000 to Rick Rivas, her campaign consultant.

Her rival, Whilden, has a long list of contributors that includes retired Monterey County Superior Court Judge John Phillips, who gave her $500; retired judge Michael Fields with a $1,000 contribution; Superior Court Judge Mark Hood, with $300; Superior Court Judge Kay Kingsley, with $1,000; and a $5,000 donation from Pebble Beach resident Joanne Storkan.

Whilden's expenses included $23,904 for postage and delivery of campaign mailers, and $15,234 to campaign consultant Political Frame Works.

Two other candidates

Meanwhile, attorney Andy Liu, who is squaring off against Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Steve Somers for another open judicial seat, is far ahead of Somers in campaign dollars raised.

Liu has raised $60,896 in total monetary contributions for the year, loaned his campaign $25,000, and has received $10,370.51 in non-monetary contributions. Somers raised $29,441 in cash donations, loaned his campaign $15,999, and received $1,429 in non-monetary contributions.

Liu's contributors include land-use lawyer Michael Stamp, who gave $299 to his campaign; Carmel Valley attorney James Newhouse, with $500; Monterey County Superior Court Judge Thomas Wills, with $250; and defense attorney Miguel Hernandez, with a $750 contribution.

Somers' contributors include Monterey County Chief Assistant District Attorney Terry Spitz, with $500; Ventura County Superior Court Judge David Hirsch, with $500; Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Todd Hornik, with $100; and $100 each from Seaside police officers Richard Cohon and Nicholas Borges. Monterey County Assistant District Attorney Berkley Brannon contributed $250 to Somers' campaign.

Garbage contract, updates on Forest Theater and Flanders on agenda

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CARMEL City Council will meet Tuesday, June 3, to handle city business ranging from public recognition of the Rev. Norm Mowery, who is leaving the Church of the Wayfarer, and Cindi Lopez, who is retiring from the community services department, to possibly voting on a contract to have GreenWaste take over garbage services in the city — a job Waste Management has had for years — Mayor Jason Burnett said this week. The council meeting will begin at 4:30 p.m. in Carmel City Hall on Monte Verde.

He said city administrator Jason Stilwell will provide an update on potential solutions to the decades-old problem of what to do with Flanders Mansion, and will talk about the Forest Theater, which was closed in April due to electrical and structural problems.

“What I think the council is looking for is a punch list of what needs to be done to get a certificate of occupancy,” Burnett said.

He and Vice Mayor Victoria Beach also hope to make an appointment to the planning commission to replace Steve Dallas, who was elected to the council in April, and members are set to vote on a couple of contracts, including a $77,095 agreement for refurbishing the tennis courts at Forest Hill Park.

They’ll consider letting the Forest Theater Guild use the Vista Lobos parking lot for its summertime Films in the Forest series and whether to adopt a resolution responding to Monterey-Salinas Transit’s desire to put a tax initiative on the ballot.

The council’s biggest item of business is the potential agreement with GreenWaste. “The franchise agreement is 2 inches thick, so we are all going to have our homework over the weekend to determine which parts of that warrant the most attention,” Burnett said. “That will be a big discussion.”

And the monthly workshop set for June 2 at 5:30 p.m. will focus on the council’s 10 key initiatives for 2014, the progress that’s been made, when the council will act on them, and how the budget supports them. For more information, including a full agenda packet, visit www.ci.carmel.ca.us.

FESTIVAL

quite the hard hit for a local girl and an eye opener about a drought which has not really hit home yet.”

Popular Monterey DJ Hanif Panni was thoroughly impressed with the level of the music that kept people dancing all day and late into the night.

COLLECTOR

Wilkerson is passionate about the material he has assembled. He has every issue of this newspaper, The Carmel Pine Cone, from 1947 to 1965.

“You cannot run down to Kmart to look through the historic content of those newspapers. I also have the first dozen issues of The Carmelite,” he told me. As a non-native to this area, that was new to me. I learned that The Carmelite was a weekly published between 1928 and 1932. The first editor was Stephen Reynolds. It cost $2 for an annual subscription.

The Carmelite also makes the earliest reference to Tortilla Flat, three to five years before John Steinbeck used the term. It references an area of Carmel bounded by First Avenue, Monterey, Fourth Avenue and Santa Fe.

That got Wilkerson mentioning names such as the Soto House, Daisy Bostick, the Chapmans and the Hansons, which is material for another story.

Wilkerson certainly has credentials as a bonafide collector. The most interesting part of the collection, and what makes up the bulk of it, are more than 2,200 postcards from almost every town in Monterey and San Benito Counties. He even has a postcard from the town of Mulberry in San Benito County. The postcards of the Del Monte Hotel are enough to have any collector scurrying to get in touch with him.

“The Del Monte Hotel is the most extensive subject written about on the Peninsula,” he said. “The volume of visitors generated a never ending need for souvenirs and postcards of the gardens and baths. There’s no end to it.”

‘Rare, and even unique’

Many of his postcards are from 1905 to 1920, considered by collectors to be the Golden Age of postcards. He showed me several cards of Carmel locations that were photographed by L.S. Slevin, who came to Carmel in 1903 and opened a shop on Ocean Avenue. Slevin photographed Monterey County, from Big Sur, to Salinas.

The collection doesn’t stop at post cards and old newspapers. Wilkerson has early maps of Carmel and of Monterey County and advertising pieces announcing beach lots for sale on what is now Cannery Row, dating back to 1897.

Most of the documents that had anything to do with maps or real estate auctions and sales came out of San Francisco and were destroyed in the 1906 earthquake. This is what makes many of Wilkerson’s documents rare, and even unique.

“Stamps and coins are listed and catalogued and can be found in almost every library,” Wilkerson said. “What I have, especially the postcards, has never been listed. I never knew “I’m excited about the talent that The Do LaB is bringing; they have a great sense and balance in their DJ selection, and the live music was awesome! It’s huge to have a festival like LiB in our backyard,” Panni said.

Russell Ward, head of publicity and content for The Do LaB, was very satisfied with how everything turned out.

“The event was an absolute success; the new location provided new challenges, but we were very pleased with how everything went,” Russell said. “The event can and only will grow up to a size that will maintain the positive intentions and what I was going to find.”

Then why get rid of this collection?

“Good question. The easy explanation is simply that I’ve done it. Like I said, I’ve been doing this for more than 50 years. Some of the fire has gone out of the belly. But this is the history of where we live. Any study of history is a trip back in time. Maybe it takes someone younger than I am to keep making that journey. After all, it’s all about the journey, not the destination. I know the right person is out there.”

If you’re the right person to buy his collection, or even part of it, contact Wilkerson at tuxtino@gmail.com.

energy that we have captured thus far; we are open to growth, but not at the expense of our beliefs, and would be honored to join the community again next year.”

Nick Chiulos, assistant county administrative officer and interim parks director was also “very pleased” with the organization of the festival. “We worked up front with the promoter and held community meetings in advance to ensure that public safety and medical care were well thought out,” Chiulos said. “This was really quite a success for both the public and the promoter, and we certainly hope they want to come back.”

Monterey County 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter said the event had cultural and economic significance.

“I value the long history Monterey County has in providing a diversity of artistic endeavors, and Lightning in a Bottle was a great addition to the type of entertainment available here,” he said. “I was impressed with the professionalism of the event organizers and hope that we can have more music and art festivals in the future.”

Lightning in a Bottle is much more than a fun music festival for dusty hippies ... it’s a transformative experience for participants that has a positive impact on the local economy. Look for it to return in 2015, hopefully with a lake full of water washing all that dust and sweat away.

'A profound gale of creative destruction'

DILBERT IS a hapless employee, but at least he's still got a job. He works for a pointy-headed boss who issues ruinous directives and oodles of inanities.

Not long ago, the boss declared that he would freeze the company's travel budget until the company met its income estimates.

When Dilbert, ever the trouble-maker, asked whether the directive means that business travel is a waste of time or that the company no longer cares about long-term profit, the boss was unable to answer.

beyond the realm

By JOE LIVERNOIS

The very next day, Dilbert begged the boss for an exception to the directive so that he could help an important client work through a nagging technical problem. The boss refused, declaring that "arbitrary financial targets are more important than satisfying customers."

The boss's response was so outrageous, even he couldn't believe he said it. "Why does that sound bad when I say it out loud?" he asked.

In a related development, a study released last month indicated that advertising revenues in American newspapers have reached the lowest point since the 1950s, when the U.S. population was half the size and the economy was one-seventh as big. Advertising revenue dropped 50 percent in the last five years alone.

"The dramatic decline in newspaper ad revenues since 2000 has to be one of the most significant and profound Schumpeterian gales of creative destruction in the last decade, maybe in a generation," according to Mark Perry, a scholar at the American Enterprise Institute.

In a nutshell, the Schumpeterian theory, developed by the Austrian-American economist Joseph Schumpeter, is a popular economic notion that asserts that everything that might seem to be working okay today will inevitably morph into something worse. Sort of like the Darwinian principle, except backwards.

In practical terms, it means that newspaper tycoons were placed on the planet only to prove Schumpeter's point.

Consider the evolution of the newspaper industry.

Because there was real profit in newspapers — there still is — newspaper tycoons started to think that they were printing money instead of a useful community asset.

And if newspapers could make that sort of money while printing so many wasteful pages and employing so many profit-sucking reporters, typographers and circulation specialists, imagine how much more could be made with fewer pages, fewer reporters, fewer typographers and fewer circulation people.

Travel? Too expensive.

Increase the payroll? You've got to be kidding.

Innovation? We've done okay without it.

Customer satisfaction? Arbitrary financial targets are more important.

Long-term profitability? Silence.

The tycoons were able to fine-tune their new-age business model until it became a well-oiled money machine — at about the time Al Gore (or whoever it was) invented the Internet and everything went to hell.

Everyone on earth recognized that the digital movement of data was the most important breakthrough of the Information Age. Everyone, it seems, but the newspaper tycoons. Their successes made them complacent; newspapers had survived radio and they continued to thrive through the television age. The Digital Age would be simply another trend newspapers would withstand.

What's more, investments in innovation weren't nearly as important as this month's arbitrary financial targets.

It wasn't until online classified-ad services had completely drained newspapers of a significant cash cow that the tycoons really started to take notice.

By then it was too late.

Still, the tycoons had deluded themselves into thinking that their newspaper "brand" still accounted for something in the new incarnation of the Information Age. Unaware that their earlier slash-and-burn behavior had engendered only ill will within the community, they embarked on goofy new digital approaches to news delivery with the expectation that their loyal readers would flock to their sites.

First they gave their "content" away for free on the Internet, meaning that readers who might still be interested didn't really need to renew their paid print subscriptions.

Some of them, recognizing the error of that business plan, switched gears and established "paywalls" to their site. This meant that people who had been accustomed to reading news content online for free would now have to pay for it. Readers reacted to that innovation with a loud and choral-like "screw you."

So now the tycoons at daily newspapers are flailing away, concentrating their efforts fully on their digital product while expecting the pennies and nickels that trickle in from paltry digital advertising will somehow replace the dollars they are losing on the print product.

According to Perry, the "creative destruction" of newspapers is not even close to being over. He points to at least one study that indicates the newspaper industry is on the "verge of extinction."

Schumpeter would be proud.

Actually, Schumpeter said that the process of industrial mutation revolutionizes the economic structure from within, destroying the old ways and creating new ones.

Newspapers might be dying, but a torrent of information on every topic imaginable is now available in a nanosecond on Google. All that is missing is the paper — and the discernment.

Carmel-by-the-Sea

THE CARMEL City Council will pass a budget for the next fiscal year within a few weeks. This is arguably the single most important decision the council makes each year and is more than the financial roadmap for the city. A good budget — and I think city administrator Jason Stilwell produced a great proposed budget — also outlines the community’s expectations for customer service, provides the resources to achieve the goals and key initiatives set by the city council, and allows for the investment in capital projects the community has requested. It should reflect our values and provide a vision for where we are headed.

This will be the third budget since you elected me as your mayor and we are working to continually improve both the process and the final product. We have introduced and refined performance measures for each department. These performance measures help define the quality of service expected by the community, help management find ways to improve the efficiency of our ongoing operations, and help the city council perform its oversight role of the organization. We track these measures each quarter and make adjustments as necessary. If we are not meeting expectations, we (and you) will know it and everyone will have the data to understand trends and help identify where in the organization help is needed. Think of these performance measures as our way of monitoring and improving the business-as-usual operations of the city.

Dennis George Norrby

March 18, 1937 – May 21, 2014

Treat all thy friends and relatives, even strangers, with a spirit of utmost love and kindness.

‘Abdu’l-Bahá

Dennis George Norrby of Carmel Valley, passed away after suffering an aneurism in Mexico in April. Born in Bakersfield, California, Dennis was raised in Kingsburg, California, attended UC Berkeley and graduated from UCSF as a Doctor of Pharmacy in 1960.

Dennis married Diane Hamilton in 1962 in Palo Alto, California. Dennis and Diane have lived on the Monterey Peninsula for 54 years, settling in Carmel Valley in 1970, where they raised their children, Daneen and Eric, and welcomed their son-in-law, Ken, into their hearts.

Dennis was distinguished and honored for his work many times in his life, including by the State Board of Pharmacy for 50 years of service for his important role in providing health care and caring for patients over his career. Dennis spent his life helping others; a passion that began at Carmel Drug, and continued at CHOMP for 22 years, then on to Natividad, Hazel Hawkins, and Safeway Mid-Valley Pharmacy. His greatest pleasure was talking to people, helping them figure out what they needed, and making sure they left with one of his smiles.

Dennis took delight in helping anyone, whether he knew them or not. A stranger to Dennis was simply a friend that he had yet to meet. Dennis will be missed by his family and everyone who knew him.

Dennis was a reader, a writer, and a teller of stories and jokes. No one laughed louder at his jokes than he, especially when he fudged a punchline. He loved stories, telling them and hearing them. He infamously made up a story about Jake the fish, the oldest biggest fish in the lake, which sent kids scrambling out into the water in search of the elusive giant, time and time again.

Dennis was an inventor and tinkerer; if he didn’t have it, he would make it. His family watched in horror as he “sailed” at Lake Angora in a boat of his making, from a rubber raft with a sail made from garbage bags, utilizing his exceptional duct tape skills. Fortunately, he eventually got a real sailboat and relished his time on the lake in more safety and style.

Dennis passed away after an intense and difficult recovery from an aneurism. He constantly amazed his doctors, family, and friends with his resiliency and determination. That his body was weaker than his spirit came as a shock, but not a surprise. He is survived by his wife and best friend, Diane, his children Daneen and Eric, son-in-law Ken, and his brother Donald and Don’s wife Carolyn.

A private burial was held on May 29. A memorial to honor his life will be held on Friday, June 13, 2014, at 2:00 pm at Hidden Valley in Carmel Valley Village. Friday the 13th held a special place in Dennis’s heart; as he and Diane were married on Friday the 13th, 1962.

Because Dennis deeply believed that until women and girls were afforded equal education and opportunities, the potential of all humankind will remain unrealized, donations in Dennis’s honor can be made to Girls Inc. of the Central Coast (318 Cayuga St, Suite 209, Salinas, CA 93901, or <http://www.girlsinccc.org/support/donations.html>).

A woman on a musical mission

NOT EVERYONE can articulate a specific life mission, but Nancy Trethaway Bennett sure can: She wants to awaken people to the joy of singing and help them appreciate good music. Her pursuit of that goal began in 1971, when she first taught music in her native Los Angeles. She was a student at Cal State Los Angeles, where she earned both a bachelor’s and a master’s degree in music.

She wanted to be a singer and her father — whom she described as “a fine educator” — suggested that teaching might provide additional income as she built her career. Bennett soon fell in love with the profession. She said, “I like to see people use their voices in a way they didn’t know they could. I love when they think they can’t reach a high note and then find that they can.”

Although Bennett’s passion is teaching, we’d be remiss if we didn’t mention some highlights of her performing career. She said she is what’s called a lyric soprano, meaning that she generally sings lighter roles, rather than heavy, powerhouse pieces.

She performed with the Los Angeles Philharmonic under Zubin Mehta and toured as a soloist with the late American conductor, Robert Wagner. Sandor Salgo, who conducted the Bach Festival for 36 years, brought her to Carmel after hearing her audition for the Los Angeles Metropolitan Opera.

In 1985, Bennett formed a musical group called Panache. The ensemble performed for over 10 years at private parties and in hotels during the holidays; most memorably, they sang in an Independence Day concert at the Rose Bowl.

We should mention that Bennett’s teaching career is also a little star-studded; students have included actresses Jane Powell and Jo Ann Pflug.

Now, however, she’ll share her musical knowledge with just about anyone who’s interested. She teaches weekly voice lessons for Santa Catalina’s upper school, and gives private lessons in her home studio in Carmel.

Bennett said she loves living here and that she enjoys the area’s peace and natural beauty. Her affection for Carmel began during childhood vacations, and continued when she and her late husband spent their honeymoon here.

Bennett’s excited about the weekly classes she’s teaching at the Church of the Wayfarer. Every Saturday beginning at 2 p.m., anyone with $10 and an hour to spare can take her voice class. “We discuss the anatomy of voice, breathing, music history, and sight reading. I get people from all walks of life,” she said.

She hopes that by educating people about music and exposing them to genres beyond pop and musical theater, she’ll broaden their interests. “We’re singing in French and German,” she enthused, “and we’re learning the International Phonetic Alphabet.” Prospective students shouldn’t be intimidated, though.

Bennett doesn’t let things get too complicated: “I can see when the eyes start rolling back in their heads that it’s time to just start singing!”

Ultimately, Bennett hopes that her work inspires people to listen to music that’s a cut above what she called the “I’ve got talent” culture she finds on television and YouTube. “It all sounds alike to me,” she said, adding that to her, “an artist is someone who has gained control of their art.”

She went on to explain that just having a good voice — raw talent — isn’t the same as making great music. It’s not that she disapproves of popular music. It’s that she wants people to know that just as there’s more to seafood than frozen fish sticks, there’s more to music than what you hear on the average radio station.

“The gospel of good singing needs to be spread,” Bennett said. And she’s just the evangelist for the cause.

of the most respected lawyers around.

Liu wins easily in the area of experience. Both have prosecuted nasty criminals, but Liu has also practiced on the other side of the courtroom. That experience gives him balance, the deep appreciation of competing perspectives that one seeks in a jurist.

Finally, Liu's broad experience also contributes to his judicial temperament, to the thoughtfulness and respect for both sides that he will bring into his courtroom.

Steve Somers is qualified for the job. It's just that Andy Liu is so much more qualified.

Attorney endorses Whilden

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter as someone who has personal knowledge of the abilities of Heidi Whilden to be a Superior Court judge.

Whilden has been a Commissioner of the Superior Court in Monterey for three years, handling family law and related cases virtually identically to a Superior Court judge. As a family law attorney in Monterey County for more than 40 years, I have had the first-hand opportunity to appear before her as a litigant, and observe her handling the cases of other litigants. There is no question that she is highly intelligent, fair, patient, and has a professional courtroom demeanor. Her work as a Superior Court Commissioner has provided her with a proven track record doing an outstanding job performing the work of a Superior Court judge.

I do not personally know her opponent. I do know, however, that some of her public statements about her experience are not accurate. For Whilden's opponent to claim that she is the only candidate with judicial experience is absurd and, frankly, dishonest. I find that very disturbing.

I strongly urge a vote for Heidi Whilden.

Judge supports Somers

Dear Editor,

I am writing to encourage you to join me in supporting Steve Somers for judge. I am a Superior Court judge in Monterey County assigned to the criminal division, and consequently have the privilege of working with Steve Somers. He is one of the best deputy district attorneys in Monterey County. He effortlessly balances the values and ethics necessary to perform his duties, and never wavers from his responsibility to seek justice. Steve Somers possesses the qualities necessary to make him an outstanding judge including integrity, patience, knowledge of the law, and compassion. His proven commitment to serving and protecting our community makes him the best candidate for judge for Seat 3. Please join me in voting for Steve Somers!

'Why we need Scott Miller'

Dear Editor,

It takes more than a smile and "street smarts" to run the sheriff's office, with its many divisions and teams, more than 400 personnel and an $85 million budget. Scott Miller is the only candidate with the education and experience needed.

Sheriff Miller's bachelor's degree in organizational behavior and master's degree in management plus graduation from programs such as the FBI National Academy and the California POST Command College place him far ahead of all other candidates. The dedication it took to achieve these educational milestones attests to his commitment to excel. Coupling his education with his experience — 31 years in law enforcement, including 17 years with the Salinas Police Department, six years as chief of police in Pacific Grove and four years as sheriff, leaves no doubt that Miller will provide the best law enforcement leadership for Monterey County.

Vote for Scott Miller for sheriff and entrust him to continue his good work.

Measure O 'distracting and confusing'

Dear Editor,

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is a public agency established by the California State Legislature in 1978. The board of directors consists of five members elected from districts within Monterey County. One of the the MPWMD's several legislative functions is to "augment the water supply through integrated management of ground and surface water resources."

California American Water supplies water to Monterey County. Cal Am is a private company. Measure O directs the MPWMD to conduct a feasibility study, and if deemed feasible, move forward with acquisition of Cal Am.

Since the MPWMD is a public agency, it has the authority for the "public good" to move forward with the acquisition of Cal Am with the approval of a majority of its board of directors. However, to determine if acquisition was for the "public good," it would be necessary for the MPWMD to schedule hearings regarding the matter.

The proponents of Measure O realize, based on previous failed attempts to obtain public ownership and the coordinated movement toward solving the Peninsula's water problem through desalinization, that it is unlikely the MPWMD's board of directors would consider the takeover of Cal Am. As a result, they resort to a costly ballot measure that "directs" the MPWMD to conduct a feasibility study. The proponents of the measure should be ashamed of their attempt to distract and confuse the general public with respect to the critical issue regarding adequate water for the Monterey Peninsula. Vote No on Measure O.

MAYOR

But we did not run for office and you did not elect us simply to improve business as usual. The second element of the budget represents the vision for where we are headed. Each fall, we start our visioning process by reaching out to the community, both directly and through our boards, commissions and partner groups, to listen to ideas for what the city's priorities should be for the coming year. At the December and January city council meetings, we debate these priorities and settle on a manageable number of goals and key initiatives.

We then ask our staff and the city administrator to develop a budget that provides the staffing and resources to accomplish these goals and key initiatives. Staff prepare the budget from January until May when the proposed budget is released. This staff work is extensive, and we should all thank them for their hard work preparing a proposed budget.

But we are not done with a staff-prepared proposal. Passing the budget is the culmination of eight months of community and city council discussions, and should be a community document. We have several opportunities for you to get involved and to offer your thoughts before the budget is finalized.

This coming Monday, June 2, at 8:30 a.m. I'm hosting my quarterly town hall meeting at the Bingham Room at Sunset Center. Then, later in the day on Monday, at 5:30 p.m. in the city council chambers in city hall, you can come to hear a presentation from city administrator Jason Stilwell on the progress on our 10 key initiatives and how the budget advances those, and have an opportunity to raise any questions, concerns or ideas.

Then, a week from Tuesday, on June 10 at 4:30 pm we will hold a budget workshop where we hope to pass the budget for the 2014-2015 fiscal year. The proposed budget, the goals and key initiatives for 2014 and recent performance reports can all be found at ci.carmel.ca.us/carmel/index.cfm/government/

If you have questions or comments on the budget, please do not hesitate to contact me, city administrator Stilwell and the whole city council.

"CARMEL LEGENDS"

What is a "legend"? Mr. Webster says, "It's a story or group of stories, handed down for generations...believed to have a historical basis, but not verifiable." That's good enough, and gives us a lot of latitude. Carmel is a fountain of legends. Legends of people, of places, of events that mayor may not have happened exactly as we relate them. Over the next few weeks, and hopefully years, we will be documenting legends of Carmel. You will hear about special people who lived here and placed their stamp on this unique village. You'll hear about the houses they lived in, the special atmosphere they created, the inventive ways in which they made their nests. You'll hear about the unorthodox things they did, the brave ventures they undertook, the stupid losses and the exciting victories. In its relatively short history, less than 100 years, Carmel has contributed more than its share to the lore of our country. We think you'll enjoy this space each week. But we warn you: don't believe everything you read.

A Cornerstone in Luxury Real Estate for over 100 Years

Sharing a joint with a constant reader on one of our main drags

AN IDEA pops into my head, then begins to take form on an empty computer monitor. Several rewrites later, the idea and the words are examined by the keen eyes of a discerning editor.

Then, through a process I do not understand completely, the words that flowed from the idea appear on these pages.

How my column gets printed every week isn't really extraordinary. It's what happens afterward that never ceases to amaze me.

Someone picks up a copy of The Pine Cone, finds his or her way to the Real Estate Section (or, I hope, goes through the RE section first), and comes upon the words that expressed the idea way back when. It is that unpredictable part of the process that intrigues anyone who writes — the part where someone reads the words then reacts in a way the writer could never envision. Here's an example of that.

Several weeks ago I wrote about going through knee replacement surgery. It is serious surgery even though I tried to describe my experience in a light-hearted way, not to diminish the seriousness, but to let people who are having knee pain know that the operation offers a way to be pain-free. Yes, there is a rehab process that is quite intense, but it is absolutely necessary to achieve a good result.

Not long ago, I am on Fremont St. pumping $4.03 gas into my car. Why? Because up the street, it's $4.29 a gallon. A lady across the island is also pumping gas. She says to me:

"You have a new knee."

"How can you possibly know this?" I ask her.

"I read your column about it," she replies. "I've read your column for years. Dr. Clevenger did my knee, too, about three months before you had yours done."

Now comes the amazing part I mentioned earlier.

"Do you want to see my scar?" she asks.

It is not a standard conversation starter, unless of course, you are Lyndon Johnson ushering in the presidential press corps, or Al Capone putting his best side forward for the paparazzi. So maybe you can appreciate my foot-dragging before replying, and the thought process I went through before I said anything. What's involved here? She's not wearing a dress or skirt so the scar is not right out there in the open. She's wearing slacks. She doesn't have to pull the slacks down. All she has to do is roll her pants leg up. I haven't been drinking so there's no chance of getting hit with an OUI (ogling under the influence). She's still on the other side of the island so it's not like we're going to be playing knees-ies or anything. It seems like a good idea. But isn't that what General Custer thought before riding into Little Big Horn? Oh, come on, dummy, it's a perfectly logical request from a nice person who was kind enough to let me know she reads my column — and we have an orthopedic surgeon in common.

But wait a minute. How does she know it is me? Oh right, she said she has read my column for years. When I was writing for another newspaper, you know the one that uses a typeface so small it has to run ads for eye-wear on the front page, my picture accompanied the column. Say, I don't mean to get off the subject, but maybe I should propose that to Paul Miller. I know several artists in Carmel who would do a portrait of me. Imagine how it would pop-out in The Pine Cone's online edition. Paul could run my picture on the sides of MST buses urging people to read my column. OK, let's put that one on the back burner.

"Sure," I say, finally. "You show me yours

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

if I can show you mine."

So there we are in the middle of the gas station rolling up our pants comparing scars. They are similar in length. Hers has taken on a milky-white color, the normal progression time imposes on the scar tissue as it becomes incorporated into the surrounding skin. My scar is still a deep purple-ish gray like the Mississippi River seen from an airplane, or like the purple asparagus I get at the Farmers' Market.

Perhaps, it is an "only in California moment." Regardless, it is a moment born from words being put on paper and a kindly reader responding in a way a writer could never imagine. It is a moment forever frozen in my memory. Because of it, Donna and I, though not comrades-in-arms, have become comrades-in-legs. Both of us are forever scarred by the same surgical procedure emblazoned, not on our I-pads, but on our knee pads.

Thank you, Donna, for the feedback. And one more thing: You have much more attractive knees than I have.

I threw that in just for the patella-uv-it.
