Whilden, Liu triumph in judicial races

■ Phillips just 18 votes away from being 2nd District supervisor

By KELLY NIX

A MONTEREY family law commissioner running for a seat vacated by a longtime judge sailed to victory Tuesday, while an attorney who's worked as a prosecutor and a defense attorney has a slim lead over his judicial rival, a Monterey County deputy district attorney.

Commissioner Heidi Whilden crushed opponent Luma Serrano Williams — an administrative law judge in San Jose — getting nearly 66.61 percent of the vote over Williams' 33.39 percent. Whilden got 16,947 votes, compared to Williams' 8,495, though there are still about 23,000 provisional and absentee ballots that have yet to be counted.

Whilden's victory comes after having received the endorsement of scores of Monterey County judges, attorneys and elected officials. In contrast, Williams had the backing of many of her coworkers at the California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board, but not endorsements from Monterey County judges.

"I do feel deeply appreciative of all the support I have received," Whilden told The Pine Cone Wednesday.

However, Whilden said the large spread in her favor

Measure O solidly defeated, but backers say they'll try again

■ Promise to 'vote out' officials who opposed takeover bid

By KELLY NIX

A DAY after Monterey Peninsula voters soundly defeated a ballot measure that sought a government takeover of California American Water's local system, the leader of the group behind the measure cautioned he might revive the effort if water rates continue to climb.

On Tuesday, most voters took the advice of the six Peninsula mayors, Congressman Sam Farr and other elected officials who argued that a public takeover of Cal Am would complicate procuring a much needed water project for the Peninsula. Measure O got 6,287 "Yes" votes to 8,826 "No" votes — a very solid 56-to-44 percent defeat, though some absentee and provisional ballots have yet to be tallied.

And while Measure O opponents, including Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett, expressed relief it had been defeated, Public Water Now head Ron Cohen warned of another possible takeover effort if Cal Am continues to raise rates.

"If they can keep the prices down, then Measure O won't get any legs in a couple of years," Cohen told The Pine Cone. "But if Cal Am performs the way I think they will, Measure O will probably get legs."

Cohen, who moved the Monterey County in 2008, at first said he wouldn't be involved in a future Cal Am takeover bid, changed his mind. "I guess I can't say I won't be involved — I can't promise that," he said Wednesday.

Cohen's group, Public Water Now, also vowed on its Facebook page Wednesday to "vote out" the six Peninsula mayors, the four Monterey County Supervisors and Congressman Sam Farr who urged a "No" vote on the measure. (Only 4th District Supervisor Jane Parker supported the effort.)

"We look forward to voting every one of these politicians out of office for showing such disregard for the best interests of our community," the group said.

Public Water Now supporter Jeannie Quaglia wrote on the group's Facebook page "we are anxious to remove the corrupt government that IGNORES the community."

Cohen said he believes that because of the lack of political support from the mayors and many other local elected offi-

Miller will face runoff with Bernal for sheriff

By MARY SCHLEY

MONTEREY COUNTY voters on Tuesday divided their allegiances between a veteran incumbent and a deputy with big plans for the sheriff's office, picking Sheriff Scott Miller and challenger Steve Bernal as their top two in the race for the chief executive of the Monterey County Sheriff's Office. Miller received 42.48 percent of the vote and Bernal got 31.33 percent, while their other challengers, retired commanders Mike Richards and Fred Garcia, trailed with 13.96 percent and 12.23 percent, respectively.

Since no candidate received 50 percent plus one vote, Miller and Bernal will run against each other in the general election Nov. 4.

Bernal, who held his Election Night party in the rooftop lounge at Vesuvio — because he "loves Carmel" — was enthusiastic about the outcome of Tuesday's election and said he is looking forward to the next five months, which he'll spend campaigning and honing his 10-year plan for the sheriff's office.

"I've had input from friends in law enforcement from across the state on this 10-year plan," which calls for more support for the gang task force, more deputies working on investigations, a violent crimes unit, a cyber sex crimes unit, more collaboration with other law-enforcement agencies, better communication with the public and within the sheriff's office, expansion of the jail, opposition to state prisoner-realignment legislation, a stronger ag crime task force, school resources officers, a unit to support victims, and treatment of drug offenders and low-level criminals to keep them out of jail.

"A lot of the deputies are a little more vocally behind me, and I want to sit down and get their input, and expand and improve on it," said Bernal, who has worked as a deputy on

McInchak sues city to get job back

■ Still on leave, with no charges filed, a year after police raid on home

By MARY SCHLEY

INFORMATION SYSTEMS manager Steve McInchak — who was suspended from work a year ago and had his Carmel Valley home searched by police who claimed he hacked the city's computer systems — filed a lawsuit Wednesday in Monterey County Superior Court. In his petition, McInchak, who has never been charged with any crime and remains on the city payroll, without being given anything to do, alleges breach of contract, defamation, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress.

McInchak is asking a judge to order the city to compensate him for damages and reinstate him.

"Everybody, including Mr. McInchak, deserves the dignity of professional work and to serve in the community," his attorney, Michelle Welsh, told The Pine Cone shortly after the complaint was filed at the courthouse June 4. "He has been deprived of that — and of his career."

Desperate for Doodle

THE BOY was thrilled when his parents presented him with a puppy for Christmas, until he realized the dog was bonding more with his mother than with him. So he began campaigning for a different dog he could call his own.

After his parents decided on a chocolate Labrador retriever for him, the parents attended the annual fundraiser hosted by the Boys & Girls Clubs of Monterey. There, they got swept into a live auction for a rare silver Labrador valued between $8,000 and $10,000. Caught up in the competition and the cause, they fought fiercely, driving the price and the pandemonium. Ultimately, they gave in to a couple willing to pay "a gazillion dollars" to the Boys & Girls Clubs.

A year later, still searching for a chocolate Labrador, the pair returned to the Boys & Girls Clubs fundraiser, where they encountered a little chocolate Labradoodle. Doodles don't shed.

And so the bidding began on this part poodle part Labrador, quietly awaiting his future in a little red wagon.

"My husband was bidding," says Mom, "and I was drinking some wine. Suddenly I heard the auctioneer say, 'Going, going' In a panic, I stood up, waived my hand and said, 'No! I have to have that dog!' At which point my husband quietly said, 'You are now bidding against me.' We paid an extra $500."

And he was worth it. Doodle, now 7, is a sensitive, loving dog who loves to cuddle, and the object of his affection is his boy.

"The night we got Doodle," says Mom, "we woke up our son to tell him, but he was too sleepy to understand it was his dog. Doodle just curled up next to him and has slept in his boy's bed ever since. To this day they both know exactly whom they belong to."

Park contaminated by sewage spill

By MARY SCHLEY

A 100-GALLON sewage spill at Carmel Plaza Monday night led Monterey County Department of Environmental Health officials to post signs at Mission Trail park and the lagoon warning of contamination.

Debbie Andersen said the health agency received a call from the fire department around 5 p.m. June 2 reporting sewage coming from a cap in the sidewalk at Mission and Seventh, and running into the storm drain, which flows to the park.

"That's the block where Carmel Plaza is, and I was told by the property manager that six buses of people had come in, so there was heavy use [of the shopping center's restrooms]," she said. The blocked line was later cleared by Roto Rooter.

"Probably somewhere around 100 gallons entered the storm drain," she said. "We were trying to go downstream as far as we could and suck it up from there."

But the first location they chose didn't work well, so the hazmat workers moved to another site farther uphill, in order to capture the sewage as firefighters used water from their truck to flush the storm drain, according to Andersen.

"We had a vacuum truck to suck it up at the other end," she said.

After they were done working at around 8 p.m., they

Contractor to get $77K to redo tennis courts at Forest Hill

By MARY SCHLEY

BY SOME accounts, the Forest Hill Park tennis courts are a valuable community asset that has become a liability, due to their uneven and worn out surfaces. By others, they're a luxury used by a select few and should not receive any public dollars for repairs while more pressing projects demand attention.

"Valuable asset" narrowly won over "unnecessary luxury" Tuesday, when the Carmel City Council voted 3-2 to approve a $77,095 contract with Saviano Co. of Mountain View to patch, overlay and resurface the courts. The city's budget includes $55,000 for the courts from the proceeds of a sales-tax increase approved by voters in November 2012, but the city engineer said the job would cost $63,000. And the city received two bids for the job, both even higher: One from Saviano for $65,424, and one from Vintage Contractors for $89,072.50. Public services director Sharon Friedrichsen recommended approving the lowest bid, plus $8,000 "to enhance safety features" and a 5 percent contingency of $3,671.

Councilman Ken Talmage, who over the years has challenged the notion of spending money on an item that serves a small number of people, asked for the contract to be pulled from the consent calendar — which is used for routine business that generally doesn't require discussion — so it could be debated.

"This item came in 40 percent higher than we had budgeted," he observed. "The good news is the economy is bouncing back. The bad news is, it's more expensive. The question is whether this is something we want to approve, or if we want to use it for some of these other purposes where we have significant needs."

But councilwoman Carrie Theis said the courts, with their uneven surfaces, are too risky to not repair. "I think we've heard from staff about liability issues on this," she said. "It's in the capital budget, so I think we should move forward."

Dolores Street resident Tom Greeley, who has been playing on the courts almost nightly for the past dozen years, encouraged the council to approve the contract. "I'd be playing tennis right now, but I'm here trying to save our court, I guess," he said. "I do think it's a very valuable community resource. It's a wonderful place to play, even with uneven surfaces, because it's so beautiful and the wind is shielded. Move forward with this and keep our tennis players happy."

He said hotels encourage their guests to play tennis at Forest Hill, and Theis, who owns Hofsas House, said she often sends people there, since it's within walking distance and it costs nothing to use them.

Councilman Steve Dallas asked how many people play on the courts over the course of a year — a query that's been made in the past, as well — and city administrator Jason Stilwell said a survey had been done, but he didn't have the numbers handy. Ultimately, the council voted 3-2, with Dallas and Talmage dissenting, to OK the contract.

The cracked surface of the tennis courts at Forest Hill Park will be replaced, the city council decided Tuesday, when it OK'd a contract for the refurbishment.

SPCA puts animals seized from P.G. house up for adoption

By KELLY NIX

SEVEN OF 22 animals that were rescued by humane officers in May after they were found living in deplorable conditions inside a Pacific Grove home are up for adoption, the SPCA for Monterey County said.

On May 7, SPCA humane officers seized 18 dogs and four cats after finding them living among piles of garbage, feces, urine and junk in a home on the 400 block of Fountain Avenue. Though most of the pets had medical problems, they have been nursed back to health by the SPCA.

SPCA spokeswoman Beth Brookhouser said Tuesday that four dogs and three cats are available for adoption, and that more could be offered soon. Four dogs have already been adopted.

The pooches available are Abigail, Honey, Joey and Benjamin. The three cats are Alex, Beau and Cookie. Another dog, Henry, is enrolled in a training program and may be available for adoption later.

The four puppies seized from the home "are still too young to be adopted, so they and their mother are not available," Brookhouser said. "We are still working with one cat and four dogs in order to place them for adoption, too."

Though the SPCA recommended that several counts of animal neglect be filed against pet owner Marcia Cody, the Monterey County District Attorney's Office has yet to charge her. While the SPCA must hold pets — sometimes for years — that have been seized until the resolution of a criminal case, Brookhouser said that because Cody eventually gave up the animals to the SPCA, the welfare group can put them up for adoption.

"These pets were surrendered to us by their owner," Brookhouser said, "so although charges have been submitted to the district attorney's office, we can still put the pets up for adoption."

However, the SPCA is asking those who adopt the animals to stay in contact with the SPCA in case prosecutors need information about the pets in the event Cody is criminally charged.

SPCA humane officers found 18 dogs locked in three small rooms where, according to the SPCA, "the overwhelming stench of ammonia from urine caused difficulty breathing and made humane officers' eyes burn."

The toxic conditions of the home were so severe and unsafe that Pacific Grove Fire Department personnel strongly recommended the animal rescuers not return inside without protective equipment due to high levels of ammonia gas. During the search of the home, some doors had to be forced open by rescuers because they were blocked by deep piles of feces and garbage.

Pacific Grove and Monterey's chief building official, John Kuehl, told The Pine Cone this week that Cody has obtained two bids from contractors to make the inside of the home habitable. Cody, who has been cooperative with officials, had already cleared the front and back exterior of the house of dense brush.

"The house will remain red tagged until the interior has been cleaned and inspected to determine if any other repairs are needed," Kuehl said.

Cody's house, built in 1898, was designated a historic resource by the Heritage Society of Pacific Grove in 1978.

A bad week for real estate offices

By MARY SCHLEY

A SWEDISH tourist drove her Chevrolet SUV into the wall of Preferred Properties on Lincoln Street at about 9 p.m. Monday while trying to turn around in the middle of the block, according to Carmel Police Sgt. Luke Powell. And on Wednesday afternoon, an elderly driver from San Diego jumped the curb and slammed into Coldwell Banker's Lighthouse Avenue office in Pacific Grove, Cmdr. Cassie McSorley said.

In the Carmel crash, Aicha Baakili, mid-50s, thought she was driving the wrong direction on a one-way street and "attempted to make a U-turn to go the right way," said Powell. "She kind of panicked, hit the accelerator instead of the brake, jumped the curb and hit the side of the building."

The impact of the 2013 Chevy Equinox shattered the bay window of Preferred Properties —located next to Optique America in the Pine Inn complex — dislodged bricks and crushed part of the wall. It also damaged some furniture inside the real estate office, sending dust and debris throughout the room, but the building remained structurally sound, according to Powell. The crash didn't disrupt any gas, water or electrical systems.

"The car didn't actually penetrate the building at all," he said, and no one was injured in the accident.

The opening was covered with plywood and the office was open for business Tuesday morning.

Realtor Carol Crandall, who was out of town but received photos and videos of the interior and exterior in the aftermath of the crash, noted that despite the rubble and mess, a dog bowl outside the front door remained undisturbed. At a Carmel Chamber of Commerce luncheon Tuesday, Pine Inn general manager John Lloyd joked that the hotel now had a "drive-through real estate office." (See photos, page 1A.)

Dog OK in Coldwell crash

Bert Mendelsohn, 86, and his blind dog were unharmed after he smashed his 1997 Lincoln Town Car into the Coldwell Banker real estate office on Lighthouse Avenue around 2:15 p.m. June 4, but his wife, 93-year-old Lottie Mendelsohn, was taken to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula by ambulance for treatment of minor injuries, according to McSorley.

Mendelsohn lost control of the car, which hit a pole, jumped the curb and came to rest "several feet inside the building," she said.

Building officials inspected the office for structural damage, and by Thursday, the opening had been covered with plywood. The Mendelsohns are from San Diego.

P.G. Baptist church trustee was getting kickbacks, lawsuit says

By KELLY NIX

THE FORMER pastor of a Pacific Grove church alleges in a lawsuit that he was forced out of his job after bringing up allegations that one of the parish's members misappropriated church funds.

In a lawsuit filed May 22, former First Baptist Church of Pacific Grove pastor Raymond Montgomery alleges wrongful termination, breach of contract and failure to pay wages upon termination. Montgomery was pastor of the Laurel Avenue church from February 2012 to December 2013.

He is seeking an undisclosed amount in damages exceeding $25,000 in the 12-page lawsuit filed in Monterey County Superior Court by his Menlo Park attorney, Lakeisha Poole.

The 47-year-old Montgomery alleges that in summer 2013 he suspected the church's chair of trustees, Robert Taylor, of receiving kickbacks from several contractors he hired to perform work at the church. Taylor, he alleges, had a "personal relationship" with the contractors and hired them without first obtaining church approval.

In August 2013, after the Baptist church had to dip into its savings to pay $27,000 to the contractors because the church didn't have the money in its general fund, Montgomery said he protested Taylor's endorsement of the contracts without first seeking church approval. He also accused Taylor of misappropriating funds.

"As a result of [Montgomery's] protests of Mr. Taylor's unapproved gifting of church funds to his personal contacts without oversight," Montgomery's lawsuit says, "Mr. Taylor began a campaign of retaliation and harassment designed to force [Montgomery] to leave the church."

And despite receiving a favorable pastoral evaluation, Montgomery said, Taylor enlisted others in an effort to oust him. It culminated in December 2013, Montgomery alleges, when Deacon Elwood Williams forced him to resign but assured he would be compensated for 90 days pay in lieu of receiving 90 days notice, per his employment contract.

"Williams forced [Montgomery] to resign and told him that he had to resign in order to avoid a church split," according to the lawsuit.

The pastor — who, under his contract, had been paid an annual salary of $53,988 and given 30 days paid vacation — submitted his resignation in December 2013. However, Montgomery contends that the church has yet to pay him the 90-days pay that Williams promised him, nor the 35 days of accrued and unused vacation he had at the time of his resignation.

Montgomery is also alleging the Baptist church failed to pay provide itemized wage statements and non-payment of earned wages and is seeking various damages including punitive damages.

A message left for church officials, including Taylor and Williams, was not returned. Ken Kroopf, the Monterey attorney for the church, declined to comment on the suit.

Will you be my Buddy?

Buddy is an 11-year-old, 23 pound Beagle/Cavalier King Charles Spaniel mix. He's happy just to be with his person... in the yard, next to you watching tv, taking walks (he loves them and walks well on leash), riding in the car... it's all good as far as he's concerned. He's not a barker and and knows basic commands.

This happy go lucky, low maintenance guy is good with cats and really likes other dogs.

Resident contends with mysterious leak

By MARY SCHLEY

‘FREE WATER for your yard. 800 gal. per day and Cal Am can't find the leak,’ reads Torres Street resident Mike Rianda's handwritten sign. For more than a month, water has been flowing from underneath his house, and while the water company finally found and patched one leak late last week, the water is still flowing.

“I had standing water in my yard, and then I looked under the house, and there was standing water there,” Rianda said of his discovering the problem in early May. He set up a sump pump and hose to get the water out — and it keeps flowing.

“I've been using it to water my yard and pumping it down the street,” he said. “I thought about putting a tank in, but I thought the city might not like that very much.”

For a few weeks, it seemed like Cal Am didn't work too hard to find the leak, according to Rianda, though company spokeswoman Catherine Stedman said the utility takes every leak seriously.

Coincidentally, Rianda's usage had increased because he began watering his yard, but shutting off the water to his property proved the leak wasn't his.

Stedman said finding leaks is more difficult than it might seem, especially when the water only makes it to the surface at a property as far downhill as Rianda's, which is located in the area of Torres and 11th. Much of the infrastructure is underground, and a leak can develop and run far before percolating out of a rupture in the street or on someone's land.

“Mr. Rianda has a great deal of water running through his property. It is coming from underground, though,” Stedman said. “So, it's not as if it is running on the surface and you can easily trace it back to its source. He is at a low point in Carmel, so the source could be anywhere in the area above him — literally miles of territory.”

Workers have been going through a process of elimination during the past month, first testing to see if the water was chlorinated (it is, showing it's from Cal Am's system and not from one of Carmel's natural Torres Street resident Mike Rianda made a sign advising people to help themselves to the estimated 800 gallons of water that's been flowing from underneath his house daily since early May.

After four years at sea, couple returns home to marry before next trip

By CHRIS COUNTS

AFTER SPENDING much of the past four years sailing around the world, a Monterey couple just released a book about their journey. And last weekend, John Pennington and Kara Potter embarked on another adventure — marriage.

Pennington and Potter, who said their vows May 31 at the Carmel Woman's Club, left Monterey in January 2010 on a 30-foot sailboat named Orca. They wanted to see the world, and decided to sail, at least in part, because of its affordability. "We thought about plane travel, but it was so expensive," Pennington told The Pine Cone.

Living on a sailboat, the couple was able to get by on a small budget.

"We almost never had to pay for fuel or lodging," recalled Pennington, who graduated from Monterey High School in 2003. "We would buy noodles, rice and vegetables in

Locals join son of famous explorer on 31-day underwater adventure

By CHRIS COUNTS

IN AN effort to surpass what his famous grandfather, Jacques, achieved 51 years ago, Fabien Cousteau plans to live underwater without coming to the surface for 31 days. This week, he embarked on the quest — and documenting his effort are two cameramen who live on the Monterey Peninsula.

"Mission 31" began June 1 when the younger Cousteau and a team of eight aquanauts took up residence aboard the Aquarius, an 81-ton underwater marine laboratory located 63 feet below the waves near a deep coral reef in the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary.

One of the eight is Kip Evans, who lives in Pebble Beach. He plans to document the first half of the stay, while Matt Ferraro of Carmel Valley is set to record the second half of the venture. With the help of producers working topside, the two will offer daily

Point Lobos, long ADA accessible, gets its first wheelchair-bound docent

By CHRIS COUNTS

WELL KNOWN for its wheelchair accessible hiking trails, Point Lobos State Reserve now has a docent who uses a wheelchair.

Diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis, Carieann Hess graduated May 18 from a training program at Point Lobos and will now help visitors discover the scenic wonders of the reserve.

“My main goal as a docent is to be able to share this magnificent place with those visitors,” she explained. “Tied in with that is my goal to reach out to visitors of every age and any background who use a wheelchair, a walker, crutches, a cane, or simply move slower than those not living with mobility challenges.”

To become a docent, Hess, who is 32, first had to learn how to negotiate the reserve’s ADA trails.

“One challenge was traversing the ADA trails independently using my manual wheelchair,” Hess said. “With practice and determination I am now able to independently navigate the Sea Lion Point trail, even though it takes some time and effort.”

In addition to helping others enjoy Point Lobos, Hess aims to empower those with limited mobility.

“I hope to inspire individuals living with multiple sclerosis to get outside and back to nature,” she said. “I hope to inspire others living with disabilities to come out to the reserve with the mentality, ‘Don’t say it can’t be done until you try it first.’ You may surprise yourself. And even if it is difficult, or you’re unable to participate with complete independence, this is one place on earth you don’t want to miss, no matter what your limitations or difficulties may be.”

Another docent, Alexanne Mills, called Hess an inspiration to everybody here at Point Lobos.

“Her spirit is absolutely amazing,” Mills said.

Thankfully for Hess and others who face mobility challenges, Point Lobos is well prepared to accommodate them. Four trails at the reserve totaling over three miles —the Sea Lion Point Trail, the Carmelo Meadow Trail, the Bird Island Trail and the Granite Point Trail — have all been upgraded to ADA standards within the past 13 years.

The cost of the upgrading the trails is shared by taxpayers and private donors. The Bird Island Trail upgrades, for instance, cost between $750,000 and $1 million, according to Anna Patterson, a spokeswoman for the Point Lobos Foundation. The foundation contributed $100,000.

The foundation is now trying to raise $157,000 for ADA upgrades along the half-mile-long Lace Lichen Trail. Taxpayers will fund the balance of the $300,000 project.

Also benefiting those with limited mobility is the reserve’s Easy Access Adventures program, which offers guided and supported hikes on six different days over the next three months: May 7, May 10, June 4, June 18, July 2 and July 16.

If you would like to make a donation to support ADA trail upgrades or learn more about the Easy Access Adventures program, visit www.pointlobos.org.

One of the newest docents at Point Lobos State Reserve is Carieanna Hess, who doesn't let her limited mobility stop her from sharing the park with visitors.

Carmel Valley Road Work Suspended

Because County Treasurer James Taylor has refused to pay their warrants, aggregating about $1,000, workmen employed in making much-needed improvements on the Valley roads have quit. The claims have been regularly allowed by the Board of Supervisors and approved by Auditor A. G. Winckler, but Taylor claims that the work was illegally done, in that bids were not asked for.

Supervisor Roberts says the Treasurer has the wrong idea, and backs up his assertion by former court rulings.

Fire is Threat

Most spectacular and, in its threat, most ominous of the week's happenings was a fire on Pescadero Road, north of Carmel, near the homes of Alice Y. Nugent and J. H. Benson, both of whom were absent at the time. They had praise and gratitude for the volunteer work of Carmel young men who joined in the fire fighting with bravery and energy.

The air was still during the blaze which burned several acres of dry timber, but the prevalent Northwester' of this season of the year, had it been blowing, might have driven the flames into Carmel with possibly grave results.

Bandit Ruffles Carmel Calm

The quiet of Carmel's public library was shattered by a gunshot, screams and the sounds of violent struggle yesterday afternoon as Police Officer Ed Fischer aided by Malcolm

Steele and Arthur Hull subdued a six-foot tall youth who was charged by Carmel police today with armed robbery at Derek Rayne's haberdashery; trying to hold up the Sprouse Reitz store and attempting to kill a police officer.

The young man taken into custody in the children's reading room is Gary Michael Clarke, 22, who was released on parole from Lompoc prison two months ago after serving 18 months on a Federal Reserve institute grand larceny charge.

Under questioning by Carmel Police he verbally admitted to holdups in five other California cities.

Dreams of Beer on Beach Fade

Reluctant votes from two councilmen last night gave unanimous approval to the amended ordinance which will deprive citizens of alcoholic refreshment of any kind on the beach. And they may not even carry or hold a can of beer or a bottle of wine on the sand ... Councilman Gunnar Norberg, lost in the nostalgia of past memories of "beer," dragged out an "Aye" and said it was "for the good of humanity."

Juvenile suspect cited for arson at Los Padres Dam

The Monterey County Sheriff's Department has cited one suspect for two counts of arson in the May 23 torching of two sport utility vehicles at the Los Padres Dam parking lot. The Ford Explorer was brand new.

Because the suspect is a juvenile, Cachagua Fire [investigators] declined to release his name.

The arsonists siphoned gasoline from the tanks of the two vehicles before setting them on fire. Neighbors reported explosions, but investigators speculate the noise came when the tires blew up.

Fire-fighting goats invited back to Pescadero Carmel

Calling the 1997 fire-suppression experiment "very successful", the Pebble Beach Co. Forestry department is about to call in the goats again.

"Some 400 Angora goats, provided by "Goats-R-Us" of Orinda, are going to clear the poison oak and brush on about 20 acres farther up Pescadero Canyon this summer," said forester Paul Dubsy, who coordinated the 5-acre experimental program last year with Steve Staub of the Del Monte Forest Foundation.

The goats, who seek out poison oak as a favored food, were a big hit with locals, who enjoyed watching the voracious munchers as they ate their way around Ford Meadow last July. Residents at the top of the canyon were also happy that the goats eliminated fuel for potential forest fires.

COUNCIL TO DISCUSS BUDGET TUESDAY

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CARMEL'S $24 million budget will be subjected to questions, scrutiny — and possibly a vote — at a special meeting set for the afternoon of Tuesday, June 10, in city hall.

And if members have not approved it by 8 that night, they'll schedule another meeting for the following Tuesday, according to the city's public information officer, Lewis Leader.

"The city has the special city council meeting/budget hearing scheduled from 4:30 to 8 p.m. next Tuesday. But I expect it could go on," he said. "If it is not resolved then, there would be a second similar council meeting/budget hearing scheduled for the same timeframe on the subsequent Tuesday, June 17."

Drafted and released by city administrator Jason Stilwell last month, the budget relies heavily on hotel, sales and property taxes, which account for 82 percent of the general fund, and the bulk of it will be spent on salaries and benefits of city workers. It also calls for nearly $3.5 million in capital projects.

According to law, the 2014-2015 spending plan must be adopted before the current fiscal year ends June 30.

City hall is located on Monte Verde Street south of Ocean, and a complete copy of the budget can be found at www.ci.carmel.ca.us.

P.G. golfers asked to sum up their experience at the city's links

By KELLY NIX

THE NEW operator of the Pacific Grove Golf Links is seeking feedback from golfers in order to improve service and play at the 18-hole course.

CourseCo, Inc. — the Colorado company that took over the golf course operations from the City of Pacific Grove on April 1 — has issued a survey to golfers asking them to rate from poor to excellent their take on numerous aspects of the links.

As to the golf course itself, players are being asked to rate the design/playability, quality of course conditions, practice facility, pace of play and the quality of the putting greens and "overall experience" at the links.

They are also asked to sum up the golf shop's quality of the merchandise selection and "helpfulness" of shop personnel, starters, cart workers and course marshals. Survey takers can rate the categories poor, good and excellent using a 1 to 5 number scale.

A section to write comments about the course is also provided on the 8.5-by-5.5-inch survey, printed on heavy card stock.

Per the agreement with the city, CourseCo will pay an annual base rent of $300,000 per year for the first three years, while the rent would increase in year four to $305,000 and increase $5,000 annually after that. Over the next five years, the city will receive about $600,000 from CourseCo in net benefits in cash contributions and capital investments.

Outsourcing the golf course operations will also benefit Pacific Grove because CourseCo will be able to draw more visitors to its hotels, restaurants and stores, according to the city.

Chamber can hold BBQ during Concours Tour

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CARMEL Chamber of Commerce can set up a “refreshment lounge” to serve hungry and thirsty patrons when the Pebble Beach Concours Tour d’Elegance rolls through town, the city council decided Tuesday. The lounge, which will offer coffee, water, soft drinks, juice, pastries, snacks and barbecue, as well as beer, will be located in a closed block of San Carlos Street between Ocean and Sixth, and will be open from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Aug. 14.

“The idea for the lounge was born out of discussions with people who made inquiries at the chamber’s information booth,” community activities director Janet Bombard wrote in her report to the council. She said the chamber surveyed businesses and restaurants, and most were in favor of the lounge, which is also supported by tour organizers.

Former Mayor Sue McCloud requested the approval be taken off the council’s agenda of routine business at the meeting June 3 so she could ask about it, wanting to know where any profits would go, if the food would be from local restaurants, and how the chamber would keep sticky-fingered people from marring the precious show cars that park on Ocean Avenue during the annual tour.

“It has to be well policed if you go forward with this,” she said.

But event planner Maggie Hardy said she wasn’t concerned about the cars, and chamber CEO Monta Potter said everything but the beer will be from Carmel businesses. “We don’t have a good beer place,” Potter explained, adding that the chamber is not planning on making any money off the lounge, but if it does, it will go toward its budget.

The council voted to approve the lounge.

C.V. burglar pleads guilty

SALINAS RESIDENT Ronald Dillon, one of the suspects arrested in the rash of residential burglaries in Carmel Valley last fall, pleaded guilty May 7 to three break-ins and possession of stolen property in many other cases and was sentenced to eight years in prison, according to the Monterey County District Attorney’s Office.

Following the rash of more than two dozen residential and vehicle burglaries that prompted a large town hall meeting and extra attention from the sheriff’s office last fall, Dillon was identified as “a person of interest” after an Oct. 29 break-in.

“The defendant became a suspect after he burglarized a residence and dropped his cellular phone outside,” Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Steve Somers said. On Dec. 3, 2013, Monterey County Sheriff’s detective Mike Shapiro, armed with a warrant, stopped Dillon in his Chevrolet SUV in Salinas, and found items inside that had been stolen that day from three different homes.

A subsequent search of the 37-year-old man’s Salinas residence yielded property stolen from the residence where Dillon dropped his phone, along with items taken from eight other recently burglarized homes, according to Somers.

Bird expert talks about woodpeckers

IN THE latest installment of Carmel Valley Library’s First Saturday Series, an authority on the subject looks at the fascinating world of woodpeckers.

A senior biologist at the Cornell Lab of Ornithology, Walt Koenig presents a talk about the industrious birds June 7.

A part-time resident of Upper Carmel Valley, Koenig has spent decades researching woodpeckers at Hastings Natural History Reservation, where abundant groves of oaks — and their acorns — provide a thriving habitat for the birds.

The free event starts at 10 a.m. The library is located at 65 W. Carmel Valley Road. Call (831) 659-2377.

Sutton named chamber of commerce's first Citizen of the Year

By MARY SCHLEY

MERV SUTTON, a lifelong Carmel resident who formerly owned Nielsen Bros. Market and is one of the busiest volunteers in town, was named the Carmel Chamber of Commerce's inaugural Citizen of the Year at the organization's annual member luncheon Tuesday.

Mayor Jason Burnett presented the award to Sutton, describing his extensive community service efforts, including being a past president and 50-year board member of the Carmel Youth Center, president of the Carmel Celebrates Community, past president of Carmel-by-the-Sea Rotary Club and member since 1963, four-time president of YES for Carmel, past president of the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, and volunteer coordinator for the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, Tour d'Elegance, MEarth habitat project at Carmel Middle School and other events.

Sutton and his wife, Nancie, owned and ran their corner market at San Carlos and Seventh before selling it and retiring in 2009.

At the luncheon, Sutton received a standing ovation from the crowd as he accepted his award, which was presented by Burnett, chamber board president John Lloyd and CEO Monta Potter.

Also recognized that afternoon were Business Partners of the Year Union Bank Carmel's Best Restaurants group (Anton & Michel, Flaherty's, The Grill on Ocean Avenue, PortaBella, Merlot Bistro and Village Corner), Volunteer of the Year Stacy Meheen of Bay Bikes, Visitor Center Volunteer of the Year Jim Procida, and Ambassador of the Year Denise Kaku of Kaku Consulting.

Chamber members who have surpassed the milestones in the organization received certificates as well, including The Carmel Pine Cone, which has been a member of the organization for so long that no one can say when it joined.

RESULTS

was surprising.

"I expected it was going to be a very close race, and I actually thought the race between Steve and Andy Liu would have the larger disparity" of votes in Liu's favor, she said.

Williams' campaign was marred by allegations from sitting judges and attorneys that she had been misleading in campaign materials by calling herself the "only candidate with judicial experience" and a "prosecutor," when she had only been a certified law clerk in Los Angeles and hadn't even passed the bar exam.

Though Williams lacked support from the local judiciary, she outspent Whilden to the tune of about 2 to 1 on her campaign. However, all but about $2,000 in her campaign coffer was donated by her and her husband, including $70,000 in loans the Williamses obtained for the election.

Unaware the results would be so lopsided, Whilden recalled the moment Tuesday night when the first returns came in. Her campaign party was at Gino's Italian restaurant in South Salinas, a stone's throw from the county elections office.

"We actually went into the elections department after 8 p.m. (when the first returns were available)," she said, "and one of the representatives handed my husband the results. We walked the results into Gino's, and it was a celebration."

In January, Whilden will take the seat left by longtime Monterey County Superior Court Judge Kay Kingsley, who is retiring.

Liu in strong lead

In the other judicial race, attorney Andrew Liu, as of Thursday, had a lead of more than 800 votes over opponent Steve Somers, a Monterey County Deputy District Attorney, and Liu appeared to be victorious, although there's a small chance the numbers could sway in Somers' favor after all the votes are tallied. Liu got 13,653 votes (51.56 percent) compared to Somers, who got 12,825 votes (48.44 percent).

"I'm very honored to have been elected by the voters of Monterey County," Liu, 45, told The Pine Cone. "I think it was a good race. Mr. Somers and I did our best and managed to keep it very positive throughout."

Trailing Somers upon the first returns after 8 p.m. Tuesday, Liu and others at his campaign party at Portobello's Rotisserie Cafe in Salinas — across the street from Whilden's party — were "certainly concerned."

However, the mood changed for the better when the second returns came in, showing he was ahead. And things really picked up when the third batch widened his lead.

With a long list of endorsements from sitting county judges, attorneys and others, Liu and his supporters cited his experience as both a prosecutor and defense attorney as a strong formula for Superior Court judge.

Somers had endorsements from numerous law enforcement organizations and nine county judges, including Superior Court Judge Russell Scott, whose seat the two men were vying for.

Somers' campaign manager, Plasha Fielding Will, noted the absence of negative campaigning in the election.

"The Somers/Liu race was hard fought," she told The Pine Cone, "but I have only the utmost respect for the professionalism and decorum in which this campaign was conducted."

Liu, if he wins, will also take the seat in January 2015.

■ Phillips far ahead of challenger for supervisor

The retired judge running for 2nd District Monterey County supervisor has a good lead over his opponent, a North County activist and retired aerospace engineer, but is currently shy of the number of votes needed to prevent a November runoff.

With late absentee and provisional ballots yet to be counted, former Monterey County Superior Court Judge John Phillips, founder of the Rancho Cielo youth program, had 2,410 votes (49.65 percent) compared to rival Ed Mitchell, who had 1,873 votes (38.59 percent). However, Phillips needs 50 percent plus one to avoid having to square off with Mitchell in the fall. A third candidate, Maria Bonilla Giuriato, received only 571 voters (11.76 percent) and is out of the race.

The county elections office has yet to tally about 23,000 mail-in ballots, and the final count could certainly change things, but "it's going to be tight," Phillips' campaign manager, Plasha Fielding Will, said Wednesday.

If the final tally also indicates Phillips is short of having the required votes to avoid a runoff, Fielding Will said they won't request a recount. But Phillips, she said, will also be prepared if he has to continue campaigning.

"We will immediately hit the ground running," she said. "There are a lot more people John can meet and a lot more community groups to meet with. He continues to learn more and more about the district in anticipation of a victory in November."

This is the first time Phillips has run for supervisor. Mitchell ran for the spot against longtime supervisor Lou Calcagno in 2010 but lost by 1,071 votes. District 2 includes the neighborhoods of North Salinas, Prunedale, Aromas, Pajaro, Las Lomas, Moss Landing and Castroville.

MEASURE O

cials, "the initiative just appeared to be too dangerous for people."

Measure O — which would have sparked a takeover of Cal Am if a $400,000 to $600,000 study found it was feasible — marked the third unsuccessful effort in less than a decade to make the private water system public. Cohen and Measure O supporters blame Cal Am for high water rates and poor service, and say turning it into a government entity would produce cheaper water without getting in the way of a new water project.

The six mayors argued the opposite, saying that passage of Measure O could jeopardize the proposed water project for the Monterey Peninsula that includes a Cal Am desalination plant in Marina, and water storage facilities and recycled water projects sponsored by two public agencies, including the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

'Voters have spoken'

Meanwhile, No on Measure O spokesman Carlos Ramos told The Pine Cone that "the voters have spoken" and that Measure O's failure is a huge step forward in securing an alternative water project for the Peninsula.

"We feel comfortable that Measure O's defeat shows the state and the community that we have something, we have a water plan," Ramos said Wednesday. "Now, let's keep moving forward so we can get that water solution under way."

Burnett said he was relieved Measure O was defeated and said it would allow the mayors to go back to working on the important water issues facing the Peninsula.

"I'm very glad that it is behind us, because it was a whole diversion that we didn't want to go through," Burnett told The Pine Cone. "The focus should be on water supply, and a significant majority of the voters agreed with that, so it's good to know we have the community support for what we are doing."

However, the Carmel mayor cited the roughly 43 percent of voters who cast their ballots in favor of Measure O, saying the mayors need to do what they can to resolve the issues those voters have with the water company.

"I think we should listen to what message those voters were sending," Burnett said. "We work to represent the entire community, and those voters are clearly upset with Cal Am."

Ramos urged voters on both sides of the issue to come together in support of the mayors' efforts in order to "move forward."

And while Cohen said the initiative put "everyone on notice," he also said he and other Measure O backers, would lend their support to Cal Am's proposed desal plant.

"We are going to sit back and concentrate on the new desal system," he said.

SHERIFF

the street and in the jail for 14 years.

He acknowledged he lacks executive-level experience but said he'll make up for that by selecting a strong administration to help him lead the agency, which commands a budget of $85 million and employs more than 400 people.

"I've made no promises," though there's been a lot of interest, he said. "We need to get through the first hurdle and win the election, and then we'll have a couple of months to figure out who that will be."

He pledged it would be "the right group of people who will help see this plan through."

Bernal pointed to the sheriff who hired him, Gordon Sonn , as an example of another deputy elected to the organization's highest office, though many consider his one term as sheriff unimpressive at best and a failure at worst.

"If you talk to a lot of the deputies there, I think they'll tell you that Sonn  was one of our finer, great sheriffs," he said. "He was well liked, and I think we moved in a positive direction with him."

As for his campaign, which has been going on for about two years, he said, "We have the throttle set at full, and we're going to keep it there. We can't take a break." His campaign manager, Brandon Gesicki, has for months been touting Bernal and criticizing Miller, his biggest opponent, including raising the issue of the arrest of Miller's son, Jacob, for drugs and possession of stolen property in January.

"Five months will be a piece of cake, compared with the past two years," he said.

Bernal encouraged anyone to contact him via his website and said he works hard to respond to emails and phone calls.

"I've built a good rapport with the community and made a lot of good friends through this campaign process," he said. "And I plan on continuing that good, positive relationship with the media, and I'll be out there with the community."

He also noted that sometimes, the challenger beats the incumbent, even when the incumbent gets the most votes in the primary. That occurred in 2010, when Sheriff Mike Kanalakis received the most votes, over Miller and Garcia, in the primary, but Miller prevailed in the November 2010 runoff.

"He proved he could beat an incumbent, and maybe it'll happen this time around, too," he said.

Miller counts on experience

Miller, whose victory party was at the Moose Lodge Tuesday night, attributed Bernal's strong showing not to legitimate support of his potential as a leader, but to the fact he significantly outspent Miller during the campaign — $105,872 this year for Bernal, compared with $21,099 for Miller, according to finance statements through May 17 — and has been stumping for votes for two years, while Miller only announced his bid for reelection a few months ago.

"I've been around long enough to know there is a big difference in outcomes based on the amount of money that is spent on advertising and such," he said. "It doesn't make him any more qualified to be sheriff, but it heightens his visibility and name recognition — especially if you're unqualified."

Miller said he campaigned on his accomplishments during his three-and-a-half years as sheriff, detailed on three pages of single-spaced copy, and was spendthrift when it came to signs and TV ads because he wanted to have more resources to focus on the main race in November. "Going forward, it will be a different campaign in terms of how we run it," he said. "It will be more prominent."

He said he'll focus on his qualifications — such as his various high-level law-enforcement jobs, including his tenure as police chief of Pacific Grove — and accomplishments, like securing $85 million for an overhaul and expansion of the jail, increasing training for officers, hiring 40 new deputies, and putting two dozen civilians to work in the jail so the deputies they replaced could begin patrolling the streets.

The jail funding in particular, he said, required all the experience, lobbying, contacts and capabilities of a top executive.

"It should really be no contest, because Steve has done nothing, absolutely nothing, to prepare to be sheriff," Miller said. "He has no understanding of the role or what it means to be sheriff. He's done almost nothing in his career to prepare to be an executive, and it's an executive-level job."

Miller also noted that anyone could draft a 10-year plan.

When it comes down to it, he said, voters need simply consider the job he's done as sheriff, and then decide if Bernal would do it better.

"Look and see if the person needs to be replaced, and if the person running against him brings more to the table or is more qualified in any way, I leave that up to the public to decide," he said. "I think it's fairly impossible for a deputy to run the sheriff's office."

places with a low cost of living. When we stayed in New Zealand, we lived for six months on food we bought in Fiji. We also did a lot of hunting and gathering, like fishing, collecting shellfish or eating fruits and berries.”

The trip also had many other challenges. Shortly after leaving Monterey and heading south along the California and Mexican coasts, Pennington and Potter realized they had much to learn about sailing. Thankfully, though, the couple overcame that hurdle — and successfully evaded two of the prime threats facing mariners, rough weather and pirates.

“We didn’t take any big risks,” Pennington explained. “We waited until the right time of year to sail. We took a long detour around the Cape of Good Hope to avoid the pirates we might have encountered if we took the Suez Canal.”

The journey covered about 40,000 nautical miles. The couple crossed the Pacific, Indian and Atlantic oceans, lived for one year in New Zealand and another in Australia, visited about two dozen exotic locales, navigated the Panama Canal and ended their journey in Sitka, Alaska, where the diminishing light of winter rendered their solar system useless.

While Pennington is happy to be back home, he and his wife are already dreaming about their next adventure.

“Hopefully, we can land some good-paying jobs, save some money and do it again,” he said. “We’re looking forward to the next trip.”

As far as Pennington is concerned, there is nothing quite as exhilarating as landing in a foreign port after a long voyage at sea, and soaking up the sights and smells of an unfamiliar place.

“Those are the most rewarding moments,” he added. “It happened every time we sailed into a new harbor. That’s what kept us going.”

Like their boat, the couple named their book, “Orca.” The book is billed as “the inspiring and hilarious true story of an unworldly twenty-two year old California surf punk and his faithful girlfriend who tire of their parochial and drama-filled home town” and “decide to buy a thirty foot sailboat and disappear.”

The book is available at: www.amazon.com. For more about the couple’s journey, visit their blog at: orcavlog.blogspot.com.

uploads of photographs and video clips to keep the world abreast of life aboard the Aquarius.

In addition to Evans and Ferraro, photographer Carrie Vonderhaar of Carmel Valley — who is married to Ferraro — is serving on the topside support team.

Two local businesses are also playing roles in the mission. Backscatter Underwater Video and Photo of Monterey is providing technical support, video lighting, underwater housings and other items, while Light and Motion of Marina is supplying high-powered diver lights.

According to its organizers, “the mission aims to honor [Jacques] Cousteau’s original experiment by going deeper, longer and further while broadcasting each moment [and] exposing the world to the adventure, risk and mystique of what lies beneath.”

Over the next month, the aquanauts hope to use the laboratory — and the water that surrounds it — to gain a better understanding about climate change, the decline of biodiversity, and the effects of plastics and the overconsumption of resources on the environment.

The most famous of all undersea explorers, Jacques Cousteau lived aboard a vessel known as the Conshelf II for 30 days in 1963. The following year he released an Oscar-winning documentary film, “World Without Sun.”

Pastor of Wayfarer Church has learned a lot during 40 years in the ministry

By JERRY GERVAISE

NORM MOWERY'S journey as a pastor will come to its end this month when he retires from the Church of the Wayfarer, where he has served for the last 11 years. Mowery, 66, has been an ordained minister with the United Methodist Church for more than 40 years, and I had the pleasure of chatting with him in his office at the Church of the Wayfarer on Lincoln at Seventh to talk about his ministry and his own personal journey. Mowery was raised on a dairy farm in Dry Run, Penn. He says he knew at an early age what his life's path would be.

When did you know you wanted to be a minister?

I was a farm boy milking cows and doing farm chores, and preaching to the cows. My family was very devout, so I'm sure they influenced my decision to enter the ministry.

The Rev. Norm Mowery in his office at the Church of the Wayfarer.

Are you an introspective person and, if so, does that help you in your calling?

Oh absolutely. I take long walks on the beach. In fact, I even have my own bench where I sit to think about things. I think a minister has to continually meditate and be contemplative. A spiritual inventory is a must.

You've had many memorable moments here. Does any one in particular stand out?

Yes, there have been many. I think the memorial service for Susan Beach is one that stands out in my mind. More than a hundred people turned out to remember the life of a homeless person. The mayor and city council members attended the service. I think it was a good example of how this church has connected with the neighborhood ... with the whole community. It showed that we are a relevant entity here.

Speaking of that — How do you keep the Bible fresh and relevant in today's materialistic society?

I try to preach a relevant message that can be summed up in one word: Kindness. I encourage people to think. I want people to ponder life's great questions. I want them to see all sides of the great issues of our time. The church needs to be flexible because Carmel has a unique demographic. Fully 60 percent of the homes are unoccupied at any given time. Less than 10 percent have anyone under the age of 18 living there. Many people have two homes and then come here to retire. We do have an aging congregation, but we do get 10 to 12 young families from the Defense Language Institute each year. So we have children's ministries, and special programs for all ages. I believe in a God of love and encourage honesty, kindness and caring for one another — all attributes that are always relevant in any society."

That's a great message for anyone. How do you get it out beyond the four walls of your church?

I've always believed in taking the church into the community. Our doors are always open. It is amazing how many people come in just to sit and rest. They sign our guest book, too. Beyond that, we have a strong connection to our neighbors, since we are a neighborhood church. Our location, almost right downtown, makes us an integral part of the community. I make it a point to know all the business owners and to be aware of their concerns. I was on the board of the chamber of commerce for three years. Community involvement is essential to maintaining our relevance. Don't forget, this church has been here for more than a hundred years.

What do you think your church offers that makes it special to Carmel?

Our beautiful gardens are a gift to the people of Carmel. There is a lot of stress in Carmel, especially during the recession. Our gardens provide a peaceful respite from the commotion and chaos often going on around us. Many of the plants here are mentioned in the Bible and are indigenous to the Holy Land. There are olive trees that date back to the church's beginning in 1904.

How difficult is it to prepare a sermon every week?

The sermon is always there. My reflections on my experiences throughout the week are replicated in my Sunday messages along with how they correspond to the week's Bible readings. I try to make them as interesting as possible. I want them to have intellectual depth and move people to action. I practice by preaching to an empty church. I know where most people sit, so I visualize who is likely to be there. And then I commit it to God.

Does being in the ministry impose upon one's personal life?

It shouldn't when you're doing God's work, but yes, you are on call all the time. Sometimes you wish you had done better on "self-care." You constantly need to keep things in perspective and balance your own family with the church family.

Why retire now?

I said I was an introspective person, and this past year has been one of introspection for me. Simply put, it's time. I promised myself that I would fill the last years of my ministry with the same passion that I started with. I call it finishing well. I've accomplished that. I know I'll miss my involvement

Just the right words

MEASURE O is history now, as it was obvious it would be.

For anybody who objectively follows the water issue, not only was it apparent from the get-go that the Cal Am takeover measure was a bad idea, it was also obvious that a majority of Monterey Peninsula residents thought so, just as they always have.

The vote was closer this time, compared to nine years ago. That shift was due to another local newspaper's relentless campaign to discredit Cal Am. When newspapers print lies, some people believe them.

But now those days are behind us. In the aftermath of the election, die-hard Measure O supporters just seem silly, with their threats to bring the takeover idea up again and to unseat the elected officials who opposed it.

Cooler heads recognize that the failure of Measure O is a reaffirmation of this community's determination to finally get a water supply they can count on for decades to come, and its realization that achieving this critical goal, with all the permit requirements in the way, is going to take a lot of undivided attention from everyone.

By everyone, we mean "everyone," and that's why we especially welcome the comments from Mayor Jason Burnett this week. Instead of gloating or being divisive, he's doing his best to make sure everybody feels included in the quest for a water solution. Instead of pointing fingers or criticizing the people who voted "Yes" on Measure O, he is promising to heed their concerns and welcome them to join the quest for new water.

"I think we should listen to what message those voters were sending," Burnett said. "We work to represent the entire community, and those voters are clearly upset with Cal Am."

The chief proponent of Measure O, Ron Cohen, also was being constructive. "We are going to concentrate on the new desal system," he said.

Let's hope days of unanimity are now with us, and that people who fervently wish the government owned the Monterey Peninsula's water utility will put that desire on hold until the our water supply crisis has finally been solved.

Time to start paying attention to Martin's Beach

UP IN San Mateo County, a local controversy over beach access has now become a statewide issue — one that may soon cost state taxpayers millions of dollars to achieve what, in truth, would be a very small victory.

At issue is a 53-acre property, consisting of grazing land along Highway 1 and a scenic, curving beach edged by cabins along the ocean.

For decades, the Deeney family ran cattle on the land, and also opened the beach to the public — for a fee.

Enter Silicon Valley businessman Vinod Khosla, who bought the Deeney property in 2008 for $37.5 million. After two years of continuing to operate it, in 2010 he decided to discontinue the beach-access business and locked the gate — producing a hue and cry among locals who liked the beach. Their objections have now resounded to Sacramento and beyond, but the arguments they've put forth in the courts and the media are as familiar as they are ludicrous — basically, that Khosla is legally or morally obligated to keep the beach open to the public for the simple reason that that's what the Deeney family did, as if someone who operates a business and lets the public enter onto his private property can never stop doing so.

Of course, the ocean belongs to the public. Many beaches adjacent to private property do, too — but only below the mean high tide line. Meanwhile, it has never been true in this state that a property owner is required to let members of the public cross his land so they can have access to a public resource. This is true for beachfront property owners, just as much as it would be for someone who didn't want to let people into his yard to look at the stars, or walk through his kitchen to get to a public park on the other side. Sometimes they "voluntarily" create beach access easements in exchange for building permits, but Khosla isn't trying to build anything.

Recognizing the inevitability that Khosla can't be forced willy nilly to give up control of his property, environmentalists have turned to the media to try to shame him into doing so. Meanwhile, the Legislature is considering using eminent domain to take his property — for what will surely be a very high price.

Big legal obstacles will also stand in the way of making that happen. In the mean time, a more important question arises: Would opening Martin's Beach, which 99 percent of Californians have never heard of, much less visited, be a good way to spend the taxpayers' money?

We hope our legislators think long and hard about that one.

Kids making noise

Dear Editor,

It was sad to read about the neighbor complaining about children making noise while playing outside in their own yard.

Has our community become so grumpy that we can no longer take joy from the noise of children playing? And so petty that we resort to calling the police to stop children from making noise while playing? And so silly that we lecture children about making noise while playing?

Let's celebrate the children who are outside getting fresh air, exercise, having fun and making noise.

The value of short-term rentals

Dear Editor,

We are Carmel Valley vacation rental owners who attended the meeting last week in the Highlands with Monterey Co. planner John Ford. We came away wondering how seriously the county wants to accept the fact that a whole echelon of tourists to the Monterey Bay area base their visits on the kind of short term stays they can get in homelike settings. People who don't want to stay in hotels aren't going to.

Vacation rental owners can offer a plethora of economic, social, and personal reasons why short term vacation rentals need to and will persist in our area. We have three neighbors who love us, our vacation rental, and the kind of communication that we maintain with them about it. We have one newer neighbor who rejects it out of hand, no matter how strictly we screen the kinds of groups that visit and regulate the noise, cars, traffic that their stays generate. The details of achieving an agreement that supports this economic engine of tourism and honors the safety and intimacy of communities/ neighborhoods need to be carved out of the adamant stone that separates the opposing positions.

These meetings with the planning department need to pare down to a committee represented by all the stakeholders with a mandate to provide a solution that can be tried, tested, tweaked if necessary, but that must accept short term vacation rentals as a creative and beneficial offering to our local economy. Certainly our gardeners, pool service providers, housekeepers, roofers, painters, electrician, pond service provider, and teenage neighbor who manages our trash cans would also agree!

Learning a thing or two, whether you want to or not

YOU STAGGER through life under constant bombardment, a long and piteous assault on heart and soul by devious people trying to sell you something.

So you think you've heard it all. And then the political season approaches, when local yokels all think they've picked up a thing or two from Madison Avenue. They are earnest people, your friends and neighbors cloaked in sincerity, uttering nonsense about the opposition, followed by a crescendo of happy faces singing praise to empty suits and insipid ideals.

They are walking on the beach on a sunny day. They are hunkered in their garden. Or they are stationed in a law library to provide the sheen of authority. Cameras roll and inanities are spilled with a vigor that would lead average viewers to believe that a reality exists beyond their comprehension.

Election campaigns rely on the battle-tested philosophy that a hapless voting public will eventually believe an obvious prevarication if it's broadcast often enough.

This might be considered an "off year," politically, but Monterey County voters were held hostage during the recent primary elections by rogues who were apparently willing to stoop lower than most of us thought possible.

And while it's difficult to rank campaigns and commercials by their pure odiousness, the Steve Bernal campaign for sheriff is my hands-down winner.

Some might argue that the No-on-O folks were the clear victors, but that campaign was simply a case of Cal Am being Cal Am. You've got to hand it to Cal Am for its ability to communicate its broad base of support — at least among politicians — to a thick-skinned public that has grown weary and wary of water promises.

Still, the $2.4 million it plowed into its campaign is jarring.

By my calculations, Cal Am invested about $272 into each of the 8,826 votes of confidence it received on the Monterey Peninsula.

That's chump change compared to the quarter-billion dollar cost of the desalination project it hopes to build and operate in the coming years — assuming the aforementioned politicians don't botch it up like they did the last time.

In the end, Bernal gets my ickiest-campaign vote for allowing his supporters to toss around insipidities as if they were confetti at the World Series parade.

Bernal seems like a decent fellow, as far as sheriff's candidates go, but he apparently signed up a cauldron of reprobates to run his campaign.

Three days after the election, I'm still gobsmacked by the respected local investigator who squandered his scripted moment in a television ad to tell voters that incumbent Sheriff Scott Miller isn't suitable for the job because students at Monterey High School aren't able to wear apparel depicting California bear logos.

In the investigator's mind, apparently, Miller is singly responsible for six decades of gang violence in California, a brutal history that ultimately and tragically culminated in the decision by Monterey school administrators to ban bear logos from an unaffected school campus. Such an outrage!

While harmlessly inane, that commercial moment was merely a comedic moment in the manure-fest that Bernal's crew heaped at the door of Monterey County's voters. His Bernal's sludge campaign enabled him to force a November runoff against Miller, so it appears that Monterey County voters must endure more of the same for the next five months.

In other election news this week:

■ Perhaps the best horse race of the local campaign season took form in North County, where it appears that the nice-guy candidate, John Phillips, might be forced into a runoff with the smart-guy candidate, Ed Mitchell.

Warning: Trying to calculate the post-Election Day vote-count possibilities in the District 2 supervisorial race may cause your brain to melt.

Phillips needed one vote more than 50 percent of the total votes cast to win the seat outright. On Wednesday morning, with 100 percent of the available votes counted, he was a mere 18 votes shy of his majority. But the totals in that race do not include an unknown number of late absentee and provisional ballots that still need to be counted.

■ Next time some hyperventilating mouth-breather tells you that Monterey County is "more conservative" than you think, pull up the results of this week's primary election.

Down the line, Democrats running for statewide offices kicked the snot out of their opponents in Monterey County. Gov. Jerry Brown won 65 percent of the Monterey County vote, compared to 54 percent statewide.

The only Republican on the ballot to pick up more votes than a Democrat was Sen. Anthony Cannella, who edged Shawn Bagley by about 330 votes in Monterey County. Even then, Cannella walloped Bagley by humongous margins in the five other counties located in the 12th Senate District.

■ Unfortunately, about 18 percent of the voters in Monterey County have proved themselves to be either brain dead or unin-

beyond the realm

By JOE LIVERNOIS

formed. Or else they truly believe in Leland Yee.

The San Francisco senator, a Democrat who is thankfully termed out of office and who hoped to extend his political career by running for Secretary of State, was forced to end his campaign after he was indicted on money laundering and weapons charges, along with a criminal colleague known as "Shrimp Boy."

Statewide, Yee got 10 percent of the vote, finishing third in the eight-person race.

Two new officers to be sworn in Monday

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

PACIFIC GROVE P.D. is growing by two. On Monday, June 9, police officials and city manager Tom Frutche will swear in two newly hired employees: police service technician Billy Hawkins and police officer Rachel Beuttler.

Hawkins, who was hired May 12, grew up in Madera, joined the Army after high school and served for eight years, including stints as a military police officer and Honor Guard sergeant. He was stationed in Kansas and Germany, and deployed to Iraq in 2011 to work in a prison. While in the service, he received three commendation medals, which "describe his dedication to duty, outstanding service, untiring effort, ability to adapt to sudden change, attention to detail and outstanding performance," according to PGPD Cmdr. Cassie McSorley. He holds an A.A. in business administration and is working to obtain his bachelor's degree.

Beuttler, meanwhile, is a veteran officer who formerly worked for PGPD from 2010 to 2012. A cop since 1998, she's also worked for the Stanislaus County Sheriff's Department and Ripon P.D. She recently returned to the Peninsula to accept the job with PGPD, where she was named Officer of the Year in 2012.

Beuttler holds an A.A. in behavioral/social sciences and was class leader at the police academy, according to McSorley.

The swearing in will be held in Pacific Grove City Hall Monday, June 9, at noon. Light refreshments will be served.

King of real estate has been fishing for deals for 25 years

A LOT of high-powered executive types don't know how to relax and mix up the routine a little. Mike Canning — local realtor extraordinaire and head of what he calls “the Canning and Knoop Team within Carmel Realty Co.” — isn't one of them. He said he “suffers from golf,” likes growing his own vegetables, and is devoted to fly fishing. He started fishing while attending law school in Colorado, where he clerked for an attorney whose principal client had a ranch on a river.

While his love affair with practicing law ended almost three decades ago, his passion for fly fishing remains. “It's been my greatest avocation in life,” he said. His wife, Nancy, is also hooked on the pastime. In summer and early fall, the couple divides their time between their home in Carmel Valley and another along the Bitterroot River in southwestern Montana. Nancy was quite a catch in her own right — she and Mike have been married for 40 years, but have known each other even longer. The two were schoolmates in their native Minnesota. “Our lockers were next to each other in junior high,” Canning said. At first, he went out of his way to avoid seeing her. “I think I saw destiny looming ahead,” he laughed. But by sophomore year of high school, they were a couple, and have been ever since.

Great Lives

By ELAINE HESSER

“Nancy deserves a Nobel Prize for putting up with me,” Canning said. He also spoke highly of his team, especially business partner, Lynn Knoop, calling her “the queen of grace, the classiest person I ever met.” Canning thinks of himself as difficult to work with, because of what he describes as “a hard-driving and compulsive personality.”

Mike Canning in one of the high-end homes he's handled — this one with a view of Point Lobos.

On the plus side, those tendencies, combined with his love of a great deal, have led to remarkable success for Canning.

The story of how that happened begins back in Breckenridge, Colo., when he decided that a lifetime practicing real estate law wasn't going to be for him.

“I also realized I was spending a lot more time playing golf than I was skiing,” Canning says.

So he and Nancy started looking not only for a new career, but a new home.

His brother happened to be teaching Chinese at the DLI, and it was a visit to Pacific Grove that solved both their problems at the same time.

“We got here and realized it had everything we were looking for. It was the right size, we liked the climate, and the real estate environment seemed like a good fit,” he said.

From the very beginning of his career selling real estate, he decided to focus on the ones at the very top: Homes on the golf courses and along the shore of Pebble Beach.

“The first top-level listing I had was the old Crosby estate on the 13th hole, and once I sold that one, I developed it from there,” Canning recalled.

He said his most memorable deals involved a five-acre beachfront property that became the new fifth hole at Pebble Beach, Crocker Castle, and the sale of the 4,500-acre Fish Ranch to Craig McCaw in 1996. Canning noted that McCaw was a preservationist who bought up adjacent properties, ending up with more than 10,000 acres that he sold to the Big Sur Land Trust and the Nature Conservancy in 2002.

Despite Canning's protestations about his personality, it's clear people are his first priority. He said that he enjoys “the conversion of good clients to good friends.” And when he talked about family, the warmth in his voice was palpable. Nancy's worked with him for more than 20 years; she and Mike were joined by daughter Jessica two years ago.

“She was the catalyst to revitalize me,” Canning told me. “I consider mentoring others one of life's great responsibilities, and I treasure the opportunity to mentor my own daughter.” Family milestones in just the last year included the couple's 40th anniversary and Mike's 60th birthday. As if that weren't enough, the Canning clan welcomed their first grandchild. Ryder Canning was born to son Nic and daughter-in-law Megan this past winter, and to say the family's patriarch was pleased is an understatement. “When you look into the eyes of the child of your child, it's really profound,” Canning said, sounding somewhat in awe.

Although Canning doesn't brag about it, we found out he's also making an impact in the lives of children in Ravalli County, where his Montana home is located. He serves on the board of The Greater Ravalli Foundation, which gives college scholarships to high school students in need. It also provides coats and boots for local youngsters — essential in a place where the average winter temperature hovers around 14 degrees.

And “difficult” or not, we wish Mike Canning all the best as he continues to cast about for new deals, new lives to touch, and more trout.

McINCHAK

The city declined to comment on the lawsuit.

McInchak's suit specifically names city administrator Jason Stilwell and administrative services director Susan Paul, who "without his permission, with no legitimate need to be present, and over his objections," entered his home, along with Carmel Police Chief Mike Calhoun and the city-hired computer forensics investigator, Mark Alcock, when officers served their search warrant on June 5, 2013. They confiscated his phone, thumb drives and computers, including those related to a cat-breeding and showing business in which his wife is heavily involved.

The city also tried to keep the raid secret.

A year later, McInchak hasn't gotten his equipment or his job back. And, despite assurances from Mayor Jason Burnett and city councilman Ken Talmage last November that the investigation would be completed in a couple of months, no reports or requests for charges have been submitted, according to Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo.

"We have not received anything from the Carmel P.D. on the IT individual," he said Tuesday.

'False allegations'

According to the search warrant served at McInchak's home, police and city officials suspected him of illegally accessing parts of the city's computer system, including confidential files, among other IT-related accusations. Alcock — who has received more than $216,000 in taxpayer funds as a contract computer specialist for Carmel — was hired, in part, to investigate him.

"The allegations against petitioner/plaintiff by the City of Carmel are false," the suit reads. "Prior to the June 5, 2013, search of his home and seizure of his property, petitioner/plaintiff had no knowledge or notice of any allegations against him by the City of Carmel." Nonetheless, he was ordered, "under threat of immediate discharge for insubordination," to be questioned by the city's lawyer and officials "without any opportunity to review, respond to or rebut charges."

According to the California Constitution, Paul, Stilwell and other city officials had a duty to keep McInchak employed "in the absence of good cause to terminate him or suspend him involuntarily," and they can't deprive him of his property and career without notice, a statement of reasons, copies of the charges and evidence, and the right to a hearing within a reasonable time. "A year or more is not a reasonable time," the complaint states.

Further, according to the lawsuit, preventing him from doing his job or getting his property back is "stigmatizing him to the point that he will be incapable of securing comparable future employment."

McInchak also claims the city disclosed confidential information about him to other city workers, elected officials, news media, reporters and the general public, and the information officials disseminated "irreparably damaged" his professional reputation, employment and other rights — even his ability to do volunteer work.

"That's awful," Welsh said. "There's nothing he can do — he's supposed to just sit and wait until they do something."

According to the lawsuit, city officials "conspired to and did negligently, recklessly and intentionally cause excessive and unsolicited internal and external publications" of accusations that he "committed crimes, that he violated city policies, that he was a poor performer, that he deserved disciplinary action, that he was incompetent, and that he was dishonest. All of these statements are false."

Further, the statements "were made with hatred, ill will, and an intent to vex, harass, annoy and injure" him, as city officials were seeking to justify their "illegal actions."

As a result, he's entitled to recover punitive and exemplary damages from Stilwell, Paul and any other city officials who are responsible "in an amount based on their wealth and ability to pay, according to proof at trial."

Whether intentional or negligent, the emotional distress inflicted on McInchak causes him to continue suffering embarrassment, humiliation and anguish, according to the complaint.

"It has affected his health, it has affected his well being in general, and it certainly has caused a tremendous amount of stress to him and his family," Welsh said.

He is also alleging age discrimination, since, at the age of 62, "he is one of at least seven long-term employees over the age of 40 years who have been terminated, placed on involuntary leave of absence pending an investigation of allegations of misconduct, placed under disciplinary investigation by the City of Carmel or forced to resign since on or about March 1, 2013."

(Although Welsh wouldn't name any of the employees in that group, the statement is probably referring to Leslie Fenton and Margi Perotti, both of whom were fired in March and are planning to appeal, as well as building official John Hanson, who was fired last summer, and Linda Macdonald, who was fired from the children's library, among others.)

Conversely, the suit notes, an employee who was convicted of welfare fraud while working for the city remains on the job and was even made deputy city clerk. McInchak "has never been convicted of any crime of moral turpitude," yet Deanna Allen, who is 20 years younger than he is, continues working as a finance specialist "without suffering any discipline, discharge, involuntary leave of absence or investigation of wrongdoing."

His lawsuit asks the court to order the city to immediately reinstate him as IT manager, stop depriving him of his liberty or property or his right to due process, return all his equipment and other confiscated items, compensate him for his losses, pay for the damage to his career and emotional state, and pay penalties, interest, attorney's fees and the costs of the suit.

Without help, C.V. theater will close

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE MAGIC Circle Theatre in Carmel Valley plans to close its doors in late September "unless a stable funding source can be found," announced its artistic director, Elsa Con.

Con said the challenges of running the theater have "escalated recently."

"An unexpected $10,000 increase in our workers compensation insurance and a retroactive bill of $10,000 for workers compensation insurance in 2013 have been shocking," Con reported. "In addition, we have experienced a $20,000 shortfall in projected donations for the 2014 season."

Con also said the theater, which is located at 8 El Caminito Road, has experienced a "sharp decline" in ticket sales.

A local production of David Lindsay-Abaire's "Good People" is playing through June 22. Con hopes the Magic Circle is able to stage its next production, "The Mountaintop," which is scheduled to open Aug. 15. But $12,000 will need to be raised to fund it.

Despite its financial setbacks, Con is proud of what the theater has accomplished.

"It has been a good run," she said. "Sadness is a natural response. Counting our blessings over the past years for the theatrical magic on our stage can soften those feelings and leave us with satisfaction for what we have done."

Italy will come to town during the 77th Carmel Bach Festival

By LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

IMAGINE THE boldness of two Depression-era women who believed that quaint little Carmel-by-the-Sea could become the “epicenter of world-class music.” Certainly there are more prominent music Meccas in the world, but Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous definitely had the right idea. And the pair, who created a culture of music and art by hosting concerts in their home on Dolores Street near First Avenue, would be thrilled to know that the Carmel Bach Festival they founded in 1935 is celebrating its 77th year of exceptional music in the city by the sea.

Every year, the fest centers around a theme, which drives music selections and creates the culture or tone of the season. The 2014 Festival, “Bach and the Italians,” will focus on what artistic director and principal conductor Paul Goodwin calls “the joys of that most exuberant and musical of countries, Italy.”

In addition, this year’s festival will present possibly the greatest span and diversity of concerts to date, with symphonic, choral, chamber, solo voice and instrumental, bluegrass, brass and a new children’s concert. The mission of the Carmel Bach Festival is to “celebrate the works, inspiration, and ongoing influence of J.S. Bach worldwide by immersing audiences in a festival experience integrating music, education and ideas, and by meaningful community engagement,” according to executive director Debbie Chinn. This ought to do it.

The 77th season will feature 96 musicians performing in 44 concerts and 35 free events, in eight festival venues during 25 days of activities, to a diverse audience of some 2,500 passionate patrons of baroque, who will purchase more than 12,000 concert tickets.

“We will open the festival with arguably two of the most popular baroque choral pieces of all time,” says Goodwin; “J.S. Bach’s Magnificat and Antonio Vivaldi’s Gloria. Though I will be slipping in this year’s Carmel commission as well, by Pulitzer prize-winning composer Caroline Shaw.”

The central Bach work of the season is the Saint Matthew Passion, the last of the four great masterpieces Goodwin is conducting in his first four seasons with the Bach Festival.

“Those who know me,” he says, “will not be surprised to find out that my interpretation will be highly vivid and dramatic, helped along by one of today’s great evangelists, Rufus Müller.”

Additional Main Concerts include, “Concertmaster Peter Hanson Presents,” featuring festival strings and Dominic Teresi on bassoon, performing Corelli, Vivaldi, Geminiani, Stradella, Donizetti, Rossini, Albinoni, Giazotto and Bach.

In a special highlight of the festival’s theme, dramaturge David Gordon will narrate “Inside the Music – Italian Opera,” featuring the festival orchestra, chorale, chorus, youth chorus and soloists, performing “Monteverdi to Verdi,” including Handel, Gluck, Mozart and Puccini.

“Opera Night, debuted last year, has been our biggest draw by leaps and bounds,” says Nicola Reilly, director of development and marketing. “We are thrilled to present soprano soloist Clara Rottsolk this season, and we anticipate these Tuesday evening concerts will be as wildly successful as last year.”

Returning to Mission San Carlos Borromeo with a candlelight processional, associate conductor and director of chorale and chorus Andrew Megill will conduct the chorale and members of the festival orchestra in “La Serenissima,” a performance of Gabrieli, Praetorius, Monteverdi, Schuetz, Schein, Sandström and Bach. Mandolinists Mike Marshall and Caterina Lichtenberg and members of the festival strings will perform “Mandolin Magic,” featuring Vivaldi, Calace, Bach and Marshall’s own composition. And a particular highlight will be “Italian Symphony,” presented by the festival orchestra, featuring Corelli, Rossini, Mendelssohn and Bach.

In addition to the Main Concerts, the Bach Festival will feature various Chamber Music Concerts, among them an “All-Bach Organ Recital” performed by Andrew Arthur, principal keyboard. New this year is “Family Concert,” an interactive performance designed with young children in mind. Featuring a string quartet, woodwinds and a brass quintet, with artistic director Paul Goodwin as master of ceremonies, the concert will expose the young audience and their families to the magic of music through the allegory and performance of “Leonard’s Magical Adventure.”

Festival patrons always look forward to the Twilight Concerts, hosted at the Church in the Forest in Pebble Beach, and at San Carlos Cathedral in Monterey. “A Bach Prelude” will fea J.S. Bach, as well as

How would you like your parishioners to remember you?

"I want parishioners to remember how I touched lives — not because of what I did, but because of who I am. The chief end of man is to love and enjoy God. So I am a man who has enjoyed God and the life He's given me to the fullest. I am a man who has cared for everyone who came into my life."

When St. Peter opens the Pearly Gates to let you in, what would you like to hear God say?

"Welcome, Norm. Come on in. Thank you for loving me."

June 8. Message: "Reflections — The Church of the Wayfarer on the front page." Lessons from the history of the church.

June 15. "An exit interview — Everything you have always wanted to ask Norm."

June 22. "It's all worth it." Norm will share affirmations he's received over the years.

June 29. "Norm with his wife, Linda." Come and hear Linda's side of the journey.

bleached the sidewalk area where the spill originated, and Andersen posted signs at the Torres and 11th entrance to Mission Trail park, as well as at the entrance on Rio Road, warning people the water in the creek had been contaminated. She also placed signs warning about the sewer spill at the Carmel River Lagoon.

"It terminates at the lagoon, and I did post down there," she said Tuesday. "I didn't know it was so large."

In addition to getting the sewage cleaned up, Andersen discovered Monday night she had another task to handle.

"By coincidence, there was green dye in the creek — but that had nothing to do with the sewage release," she said.

She called Cal Am to see if the water company knew anything about the dye — and learned from an office manager that workers had released the green coloring in the area of Junipero and 11th in an effort to locate an ongoing leak that has been flowing underneath a nearby resident's home.

As with all hazardous materials spills, the state was notified of the sewage release at around 9 p.m. Monday, and she said the health department's consumer protection unit would follow up to determine when the warnings were no longer needed. Andersen also said Carmel Plaza management is investigating the cause of the spill.

underground springs), conducting dye tests and listening for underground leaks.

"We looked at a nearby storm drain, and working with the City of Carmel, put dye in the water to see if there was a leak coming from the storm drain," she said. But there wasn't.

"We have also been listening for leaks throughout the area," and they found one at Junipero and 11th, a few hundred yards from Rianda's house, Stedman said.

While that leak was repaired late last week and the water flowing from underneath his house lessened, it did not abate.

"Now we are moving farther and farther from the house, listening for leaks throughout the system, and we are looking at engaging a contractor with listening equipment more sophisticated than ours to help find the leak," she said Thursday. "We are using all the tools at our disposal and will continue our investigation until the leak is found."

Rianda suspects all the water has damaged the heating ducts under his home, but he won't be able to determine the extent until the leak is stopped and the area finally dries out.

"I don't know if it got into the floor joists, or not," he said, adding that he'll eventually file a claim for whatever damage has occurred.

"I'll have my insurance company deal with it," he said.

Margery Mayer Voutsas

March 29, 1918 — May 12, 2014

Margery Mayer Voutsas, a singer widely acclaimed for her portrayal of some of the most famous contralto roles in opera, died May 12 in Cupertino, California. She was 96. She had retired to Carmel in 1977 and lived there for over thirty years.

Marguerite Caroline Louise Mayer was born on March 19, 1918, in Chicago, Illinois to Gottlieb Mayer and Lillian (Greiner) Mayer.

Known professionally as Margery Mayer, she began her career in Chicago, singing on radio and with the Chicago City Opera Company, then traveling extensively with the San Carlo Opera Company. She was singled out early for her vocal potential by opera soprano legend Mary Garden, who brought the 18 year old to MGM for screen tests as her protégé. In 1946 she debuted with the New York City Opera, where, during her ten-year tenure, her repertoire spanned some 35 operas, including nearly 100 performances of Carmen, Aida, Il Trovatore, and Madama Butterfly.

Of her favorite role, Carmen, the New York Times wrote in 1951, "Miss Mayer ... is now as satisfying a Carmen, vocally and histrionically, as is to be found hereabout. ... her singing is even in quality and full of spirit."

Beyond her signature roles of Carmen and Amneris, her career is especially notable for her appearances in a number of prominent works and American premieres. She performed in oratorios and solo engagements with the nation's leading symphony orchestras. Her radio performances of Lohengrin, Samson and Delilah, Carmen, and Boris Godunov were heard coast-to-coast, and she appeared in some of the earliest presentations of opera on television.

A teacher as well as a singer, Mayer taught in the music department of Wagner College on Staten Island, New York, for 28 years. In retirement she continued teaching voice, as well as singing as a soloist in her church and in the Monterey peninsula music group Piano Plus. She taught her great-grandsons to find Middle C on the piano when they turned two. She also did couture sewing, and water color, and continued to extend her trademark hospitality to friends new and old. Her zest for music and dramatic flair were still on view at her surprise 90th birthday party when she reprised her Carmen role with a full and warm rendition of "L'Amour! L'Amour!"

Margery Mayer Voutsas is survived by sons Lynn (Mary) Steen of Northfield, Minnesota, and Richard (Robin Cameron) Steen of New York, New York; granddaughters Margaret (David Webster) Steen of Los Altos, California, and Catherine (Jason) Wille of Rochert, Minnesota; six great-grandsons; her sister's children Alan Vogt and Marcia Podlesak; and numerous other nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her husbands, Dietrich George Berthold, Sigvart J. Steen, and George Voutsas.

The family requests that memorials be sent to the Margery Mayer and Sigvart Steen Music Scholarship at Wagner College in Staten Island, New York.

Rockers rally for dogs, historic hall gets honky tonk help

By CHRIS COUNTS

A SAN Jose classic rock cover band is in town this weekend to help out a charity that aids senior dogs and the seniors who own them.

Paying tribute to the music of the Rolling Stones, Van Halen, Fleetwood Mac and many others, The Shanks play a benefit show Saturday, June 7, at the Carmel Mission Inn. Proceeds from the “Oldies But Goodies Party 2014” will be donated to Peace of Mind Dog Rescue.

“My wife and her sister work with Peace of Mind Dog Rescue, and they’ve been after us for some time to play at their annual fundraiser,” said Brian Connors, who sings and plays guitar for the Shanks.

Big golf fans, Connors and his fellow Shanks are looking forward to playing a few rounds at Rancho Canada while they’re in town. The band’s name, in fact, refers to the misdirected golf shot of the same name. “We all met on a golf course and we love the game,” he added.

The event starts at 1 p.m. Tickets are $50. The Carmel Mission Inn is located at 3665 Rio Road. Call (831) 718-9122.

■ Sibling duo plays in church

A brother and sister who share an affection for Celtic music, fiddler Ryan McKasson and pianist Cali McKasson perform Wednesday, June 11 at St. Mary’s By-The-Sea in Pacific Grove.

“I learned about Ryan through the Valley of the Moon Fiddling School, which happens in the Santa Cruz Mountains each summer,” said Carmel Valley fiddler Jackie Pierce, who helps organize concerts at St. Mary’s. “Ryan has a great rhythmic quality to his playing — it’s very bold and exciting. It sounds modern, and at the same time, very traditionally Scottish.”

Pierce called Cali “a fabulous musician who could accompany anyone in her own right.” “Ryan and Cali seem to have a natural give-and-take” quality to their performance, Pierce added.

The music begins at 7 p.m. Tickets are $20 for general admission and $8 for kids 12 and under. St. Mary’s is located at Central and 12th in Pacific Grove. Call (831) 224-3819.

■ Grange hosts open house

Serving up a mix of honky tonk, “hillbilly jazz” and “swingin’ California country,” The Slade Rivers Band plays Saturday, June 7, at an Open House Benefit for the Big Sur Grange Hall.

With songs like “The Chicken Butt Special” and “Trucks, Trains, & Heartaches,” the Amador County-based band pays tribute to the timeless spirit of country music.

“It’s the sound of America sung by the voices of working folks who appreciate an honest day’s work for an honest day’s dollar — and endure an honest day’s heartache as well,” they say on their website.

The band will be joined at the Grange Hall by singer-songwriter Beans Sousa, who toured for two decades with country star Lacy J. Dalton.

The event starts at 6 p.m. A $10 donation is suggested. The hall is located just off Highway 1 about 25 miles south of Carmel.

■ Quirky name, fresh sound

With a name that’s all vowels and a sound that spans the musical genres, iiii — which its members pronounce “four” — takes the stage Wednesday, June 11, at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts.

All currently enrolled in different East Coast colleges, vocalist Laila Smith, pianist Paul Bloom, bassist Connor Schultze and drummer Jeremy Dutton bring together jazz, pop, R&B, rock and Brazilian music to create a sound that’s all their own.

After presenting a workshop for music students in Monterey June 10, the quartet plans to stay in Carmel, where Schultze has family.

The concert starts at 7 p.m. Tickets are $15. The Cherry Center is located at Fourth and Guadalupe. Call (831) 624-7491.

Singer and violinist Laurel Thomsen (left) will be joined by a couple of her talented musical friends June 12 at Evolution Studio in Pacific Grove. Possessing a quirky name and a catchy sound, iiii (“Four,” if you say it out-loud, at right) performs June 11 at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts.

WITH A portfolio that includes paintings of seven presidents and some of the biggest names in Hollywood, portrait artist Everett Raymond Kinstler could be excused for resting on his laurels or boasting about his famous clientele. But his gaze is fixed firmly on the present.

“The most important piece I’m working on is whatever is on my easel at the moment,” said Kinstler, who will be the guest of honor at a reception Saturday, June 7, at Mountainsong Galleries.

John Wayne, Tony Bennett, Katherine Hepburn, Paul Newman and many other celebrities have sat still before Kinstler while he painted their portraits. But the artist insisted he doesn’t get starstruck.

“We all live, we all die, we all suffer and we all cry,” Kinstler explained with the a Zen-like detachment. “Ninety-nine percent

Smuin Ballet turns 20, returns to Sunset

By CHRIS COUNTS

MARKING THE final stop on the tour of its "XXcentric" dance program, San Francisco's unconventional dance company, Smuin Ballet, returns Friday and Saturday, June 6-7, to Sunset Center.

"XXcentric" opens with Val Caniparoli's Tutto Eccetto il Lavandino, which translates into "Everything But the Kitchen Sink." as its title implies, the ballet combines many elements, including 11 short pieces of music by Vivaldi. It's filled with quirky movements and humor.

"It's a fitting piece for us because we don't take ourselves too seriously," artistic director Celia Fushille said. "It has wonderful energy in it and a range of feeling and emotion."

Next, the ballet company premier in-house choreographer Amy Seiwert's "And Now I Must Rest," which was inspired by Cape Verdean singer Cesária Évora.

"Amy has created something moving and rolling like the waves," Fushille declared. "It's one of her most beautiful ballets."

Closing the program is the late Michael Smuin's "Dancin' With Gershwin," which offers "glitz, glamour and romance for showbiz lovers of all ages." "Nothing shouts celebration like 'Dancin' With Gershwin,'" Fushille suggested.

The "XX" in the program's title represent the Roman numerals for 20, which is fitting because Smuin Ballet marks its 20th anniversary this year.

Friday's ballet starts at 8 p.m., while Saturday's performance begins at 2 p.m. Tickets are $55 to $70. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2048.

Smuin Ballet celebrates its 20th anniversary with performances June 6-7 at Sunset Center. The program features ballets by Val Caniparoli, Amy Seiwert and the late Michael Smuin.

PacRep's 'Evie's Waltz' comes to Circle Theatre

THE SECOND offering in PacRep Theatre's 2014 professional season, "Evie's Waltz" opens Saturday, June 7, at the Circle Theatre. Written by Carter W. Lewis and directed by Kenneth Kelleher, "Evie's Waltz" is a thriller about a family in crisis. A couple has just learned that their son has been suspended for bringing a gun to school.

Julie Hughett plays Gloria, a mother who is sarcastic, impatient and dissatisfied with her marriage. Jackson Davis takes on the role of her husband, Clay, whose upbeat nature prevents him recognizing trouble on the horizon. And Bri Slama plays their son's girlfriend, Evie, a complex young woman who embodies youthful rebellion.

The play continues through June 29. Thursday, Friday and Saturday performances start at 7:30 p.m., while Sunday matinees begin at 2 p.m. Tickets are $20 to $35 with discounts available for seniors, students, children, teachers and active military. The Circle Theatre is located on Casanova between Eighth and Ninth. Call (831) 622-0100.

Jane Virginia Shedlin

01/06/1920 - 05/13/2014

Jane Virginia Shedlin (nee Jungkunz) passed away in her Carmel home closely and lovingly attended by family and friends. Also present were the spirits both of dear friends who had gone on before, and of her beloved husband, Art. Jane is survived by her son Michael, and her daughter and son-in-law Ann and Rick Pettit, and by a host of friends, in many states, and on several continents, all of whose lives she touched deeply.

We will remember Jane her for her passions. Her lifelong passion for music, especially the Carmel Bach Festival. Her delighted passion for food, for good (healthy!!) food shared around a happy table. Her hungry passion for the life of the mind, reflected in the books and magazines that surrounded her. Her fierce passion for fairness, for justice, for the well-being of people everywhere. Her simple passion for life.

We will remember her for her sense of humor. For the flashes of wit issuing from her acute intelligence. For the amusement she found around her: whether in pet antics, New Yorker cartoons, or life's ironies. For her infectious and joyous laughter.

But most acutely, we will remember her generous heart. We will remember her profound commitment to her family, her ardent loyalty to her friends, her open-door hospitality. We will cherish the warmth she lavished on us all.

In trueness to Jane, we will remember her through our actions. Through our own passions, our own humor, our own generosity. Goodbye, dear Jane. Thank you. We love you.

BIG BRUNCH, CALIFORNIA CHROME, AN ITALIAN STROLL, AND THE THREE B'S

By MARY SCHLEY

GO BIG or go home.

That's the best way to sum up the brunch recently launched by chef Todd Fisher at Tarp's Roadhouse, the restaurant whose kitchen he assumed control of in mid-April. Everything on the menu, from the "squarenuts," (delicious griddled doughnuts with cinnamon caramel dipping sauce), to Tarp's famous chili-crust chicken paired with bacon-cheddar waffles, pepper gravy and bourbon syrup, reflects Fisher's bold and distinctive style.

A dish not to miss is the over-the-top lobster-avocado Benedict on brioche with poached eggs, citrus-chive hollandaise and herb salad — decadent and rich, but bright and flavorful, with the sweetness of the lobster, the creaminess of the avocado and the subtle bite of the hollandaise.

Simple for its contents but brilliant in its execution, the Baker's bacon & eggs, with caramelized pieces of the thick-cut, double-smoked bacon created by Montrio chef Tony Baker, a pair of fried eggs over medium, thick sweet-cream grits and a tender buttermilk biscuit, hits the mark, too.

Served from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Sundays, the brunch lineup represents Fisher's fondness for bold flavors and is definitely worth perusing.

Specialty cocktails are offered, too: Mimosas with a variety of juice options, The Rabbit (muddled ginger, cilantro, lime, sugar, rum and carrot juice), a Breakfast Martini (gin, fresh lemon, Cointreau and orange marmalade) and the Kentucky Buck (bourbon, muddled strawberry, fresh lemon, simples syrup and ginger beer) and a few others.

Indulge in brunch there, and you may not need to eat for the rest of the day.

To try it out, visit Tarp's at 2999 Monterey-Salinas Hwy. at Canyon Del Rey. www.tarpys.com

Notice to Potential Bidders: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a Trustee auction. Peninsula chambers of commerce will take place at the Twisted Roots tasting room in Carmel Valley Village Tuesday, June 10, from 5 to 7 p.m.

The tasting room is located at 12 Delfino Place, where the winemaking team will be on hand to greet guests and talk about their Cabernet Sauvignon, Zinfandel and other creations. Small bites and live guitar will be offered on the enclosed outdoor patio.

■ Beer, beef and Bourbon

Aubergine chef Justin Cogley's June 11 Sweet & Savory Cooking Class features three of the best B's: beer, beef and Bourbon. From 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, he'll help a small group of students "bridge the gap between pubs and gastronomy," by learning to prepare upscale pub grub.

Cogley, an award-winning chef, will teach attendees how to prepare a warm vinaigrette, poach eggs, clean and steam mussels, cook steak, make hot-emulsion sauces and caramelize onions.

The small class will take place in his immaculate kitchen at the restaurant at Monte Verde and Seventh, beginning with a glass of bubbly before everyone gets to work. And, of course, students get to enjoy the fruits of their labor at the end of the session.

The cost is $100 per person, plus tax and service. To reserve, call (831) 624-8578.

■ Cibo alzheimer's fundraiser

A benefit dinner for the Alzheimer's Association of Monterey County will take place at Cibo Ristorante Italiano at the foot of Alvarado Street Wednesday, June 11, from 5 to 10 p.m. During those hours, 20 percent of the proceeds from the checks of customers who mention the association will be donated to the nonprofit. The Andrea's Fault Trio will perform live between 7 and 10 p.m.

For more information, go to www.cibo.com or call (831) 649-8151.

■ Q&O's Father's Day suggestion

The Quail & Olive shop in Carmel Valley Village that features top-quality oils and vinegars is proposing a special box gift for dads in honor of their annual day, which this year falls on June 15.

"For a Father's Day gourmet gift, I recommend the Quail & Olive's sampler set that includes Sicilian Blend EVOO, Garlic Olive Oil, Vegan Bacon Olive Oil, Pacific Spice Vinegar, Blackberry Roasted Pepper Vinegar and Tuscan Melody Balsamic," said fan Mary Castillo. "The oils and vinegars can be perfectly paired for bread dipping, salads, grilled veggies and/or fish and poultry. I once did a rib eye with the garlic olive oil and some herbes de provence. I could get my boys to do housework for a whole month with the promise to do it again!"

The cost is $39.95, and for those fathers who aren't local, it can be shipped from the tasting room to anywhere in the United States. Orders may be placed by phone at (831) 659-4288, online at www.quailandolive.com, or in person at 3 Pilot Road in the Village.

■ Holman Ranch olive oil, too

The olive oil produced from trees growing at Carmel Valley's Holman Ranch is for sale in its C.V. Village tasting room at 19 E. Carmel Valley Road and through its website, www.holmanranch.com.

For more than five years, the historic ranch has cultivated a distinctive olive grove located on a shaley south-facing hill in the vineyard that includes Tuscan, Spanish and

■ Beer Fest tickets on sale

The Monterey Beer Festival set for Saturday, June 14, is being presented by Whole Foods this year, and the market is offering $5 off tickets at www.wholefoods-market.com/stores/monterey. The festival, which draws several thousand people to the Monterey Fairgrounds, will feature live music on multiple stages, a new Beer Pong tournament, special VIP ticket holder benefits — and hundreds of beers to taste and quality food to nibble.

For a list of participating breweries and other information, as well as tickets, visit www.montereybeerfestival.com/general-info. The cost to attend is $45 in advance and $50 at the door for general admission, and $75 in advance or $80 at the door for VIP admission, which includes early entry at 11:30 a.m. (as opposed to 12:30 p.m. for the masses), and other bennies. The Monterey Beer Festival benefits the nonprofit Monterey County Fair Heritage Foundation.

■ A good Friday the 13th

Jazz guitarist Bruce Forman and jazz pianist Dick Whittington will perform at Rancho Cielo's Drummond Culinary Academy during Sunset Jazz at Rancho Cielo Friday, June 13, from 6 to 8 p.m. The show is the academy's latest effort to draw visitors to its restaurant, where culinary students learn and hone their skills before seeking jobs in the hospitality industry.

Their music will be accompanied by appetizers prepared and served by students of Rancho Cielo, a campus created by retired Monterey County Judge John Phillips to help at-risk youth get out of the criminal justice system and into worthwhile and sustainable professions.

The cost is $30 per person, including wine and hors d'oeuvres, and the evening will mark the final Friday-night service until October.

Rancho Cielo is located at 710 Old Stage Road in Salinas, at the dead end of Old Natividad Road. Call (831) 444-3521 for reservations, and see the website at www.ranchocieloyc.org for directions, because GPS will not get you there.

■ Fandango Hour

Maybe it's a late lunch, or perhaps an early dinner. Whatever it is, it's not Happy Hour, but Pierre and Marietta Bain at Fandango are hoping their latest concept, Fandango Hour, will draw diners in the late afternoon and early evening — and make them happy. Guests who take their seats between 4:30 and 5:30 p.m. can order from a select list of drinks and choose one of two featured entrées, accompanied by soup or salad and profiteroles. The drinks are $8 apiece, while the meal costs $14.50.

Featured drinks feature the classics: Tom Collins, Sidecar, Manhattan, Dirty Martini, Gin Rickey and Gimlet, as well as house red and white wine. This week, food choices were sand dabs or Chicken Marsala, and the whole meal took less than an hour.

Fandango is located at 223 17th St. in Pacific Grove. For reservations, call (831) 372-3456 or visit www.fandangorestaurant.com.

■ Talbott on the edge

Pacific's Edge restaurant in the Hyatt Carmel Highlands will hold another dinner in its wine cellar Thursday, June 19, when Talbott winemaker Dan Karlsen entertains guests with tales from the winery and executive chef Matt Bolton prepares a feast to complement the lineup of Chardonnays and Pinots Noir.

The evening will begin at 6 p.m. with hors d'oeuvres of dungeness crab salad with Frog Hollow peach and parimigiano reggiano gougères, paired with 2012 Kali Hart Chardonnay.

The first course will be herb-crusted Alaskan halibut with English peas and shoots, morels, truffle gnocchi and Chardonnay sauce, served with 2012 Sleepy Hollow Chardonnay, and the second will be pheasant picatta with fingerling potato purée, fava beans and oven-dried tomatoes, served with 2012 Diamond T Chardonnay.

The main dish, veal costelleta chop with chanterelle, bone marrow and sauce bordelaise, will pair nicely with 2012 Diamond T Pinot Noir.

(Diamond T, located in Carmel Valley near owner Robb Talbott's home, is only about 16 acres and yields small amounts of Chardonnay and Pinot Noir that are distinctive from Talbott's wines made with fruit from its Sleepy Hollow vineyard in the Santa Lucia Highlands.)

Dessert will be apricot tart with pistachio crumble and honey-lavender ice cream, served with a limited release of 2011 Sleepy Hollow Late Harvest Riesling.

The cost is $95 per person, including tax and tip, and reservations are required through www.eventbrite.com. Pacific's Edge is located in the inn at 120 Highlands Drive off Highway 1 south of Carmel.

of the people I've painted you've never heard of."

While Kinstler started off his career as a comic book artist, he found his calling when he began painting portraits. He loves his job, and has no plans to retire just because he's reached the pinnacle of his profession.

"I'm constantly challenged and I enjoy that," Kinstler added. "It's a blessing to get up every day and go to work."

The reception starts at 5 p.m. The gallery is located on the north side of Ocean between Mission and San Carlos. To RSVP, call (831) 626-0600.

■ Closet cowboy comes out

While David Bindel is well known on the Monterey Peninsula for his many business ventures, an exhibit that opened this week in Sunset Center's Marjorie Evans Gallery reveals his creative side.

Titled "The Western Collection," the exhibit features a variety of oils and acrylics depicting scenes of ranching life throughout the west. The paintings were created over a 30-year span.

"I've always been around horses and cows," explained Bindel, who started 12 restaurants on the Monterey Peninsula and now sells real estate for Sotheby's. "I'm kind of a closet cowboy."

Raised in an artistic family, Bindel began painting at an early age. He later studied art in college. And even while he was busy opening restaurants like the Old Bath House and The Tinnery, his affection for painting never wavered. "I love the smell of oil paint," he said.

The show is on display through the end of June. The gallery is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth.

■ Looking for a sign

In his latest exhibit, "Signs of Life" — which opens Saturday, June 7, at the Carmel Art Association — illustrator Will Bullas pokes fun at the endless cascade of signs we encounter in our everyday lives.

In addition to showcasing his own work, Bullas — the president of the CAA — welcomes a new member to the gallery, painter and printmaker Kathryn Greenwald. Like Bullas, Greenwald lives in Carmel Valley. She displays a collection of monotype prints.

"We are very fortunate to have her caliber of artist as one our members," Bullas added. "Her work is unique and is just the right addition to our diverse presentation of artworks."

The gallery, which hosts a reception at 5 p.m., is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. The exhibits continue through July 1. Call (831) 624-6176.

■ 'The Sanctity of Water'

In tandem with downtown Pacific Grove's First Friday celebration, two sisters — painters Jodie Houy Mexas and Paula Houy Bailey — unveil a two-woman show, "The Sanctity of Water," June 6, at Artisana Gallery.

Twenty-five percent of the proceeds from the show benefit the Blue Ocean Institute, which seeks to "inspire a closer relationship with the sea through science, art, and literature."

"With all of our water issues, this is a very timely show," gallery owner Adrienne Jonson said. "The subject matter is very current and very real."

The gallery, hosts a reception at 5 p.m., is located at 612 Lighthouse Ave. Call (831) 655-9775.

■ Exhibit more than just a bunch of Bologna

Winfield Gallery hosts a reception Sunday, June 8, for painter Carla Crawford.

A resident of New York City, Crawford has deep roots in California, where she grew up. She graduated from UC Davis, where her mentor was the noted painter Wayne Thiebaud. Enamored with classic Italian painting, she later studied art in Bologna and Venice.

Her technique reflects her training.

"Each piece is made with long hours of careful drawing, a meticulous under-painting, and then several layers of paint to create the finish I'm looking for," Crawford explained. "I work from life, which gives me the opportunity to connect in a personal way with my models. I find I am always trying to observe and see more of the person, to capture physical likeness, personality, and emotion."

The gallery, which will hosts a reception at 3 p.m., is located on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh. The exhibit will continue through June 30. Call (831) 624-3369.

■ Textile artist introduced

Swedish-born textile artist Malin Lager unveils a display of her work Friday, June 6, at the Monterey Museum of Art's La Mirada location.

A Monterey resident, Lager uses a sewing machine and thread to create astonishingly detailed pieces of art that incorporate a colorful palette and resemble paintings.

The museum, which hosts a reception at 5:30 p.m., is located at 720 Via Mirada. The show continues through Oct. 20. Call (831) 372-3689.

David Lang's "Little Match Girl Passion," which will be performed a second time in the Candlelight Concert, "Fresh Voices." Considerably out of character for Bach, "Little Match Girl Passion" definitely will introduce a "fresh voice" to the Festival.

Throughout the Bach Festival, guests and members of the community can attend a series of events, free of charge, including pre-concert lectures with David Gordon, festival dramaturge, as well as "Bach and the Movies," a lecture by Emmy award-winning composer and musician John Wineglass. The public is welcome to sit in on three open rehearsals at Sunset Center, led by artistic director Paul Goodwin and concertmaster Peter Hanson. The Festival also presents four free concerts, designed with everyone in mind. Audiences can enjoy the Young Musicians Showcase, the Youth Chorus Member Showcase, the Community Concert in Seaside, now in its 29th year, which showcases Bach Festival ensembles; and Tower Music, the exciting pre-concert brass fanfares before most Main Concerts at the Sunset Center Terrace and outside the Carmel Mission.

For 25 days and nights, from July 9 through Aug. 2,

Carmel and her neighbors will transform into a magic village where people flock to the Sunset Center like a congregation called to church, where someone pedals by carrying a violin case on her back and another walks uptown hoisting a horn, and all the while, music wafts into the pines with enough wind to knock a sparrow from the sky.

For a complete schedule of events and tickets, visit www.bachfestival.org.

Guild gets permission — sort of — to show movies at Vista Lobos

By MARY SCHLEY

THE FOREST Theater Guild can show movies for its Films in the Forest series in the parking lot at Vista Lobos — but only if a sound check shows that noise levels would not disturb guests at nearby hotels, the Carmel City Council decided Tuesday night. The series, a popular fundraising effort that attracts a wide range of sponsors and films, usually takes place in the Outdoor Forest Theater from May through the summer, but the city shut the theater down in April, citing safety hazards.

Permission to temporarily move the film series to the parking lot at Torres and Third was set for approval without any debate at the June 3 meeting, as recommended by community activities director Janet Bombard, but Horizon Inn general manger John Haveles requested it be pulled so he could air his concerns about showing movies across the street from his hotel Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights between 8:30 and 10:30 p.m.

“There are going to be some significant impacts of having movies in the Vista Lobos parking lot,” he said. “Hotel guests hold the hotel responsible for everything. If a Cal Am pipe breaks, and the water is brown, that means a free night in the hotel. If a tree goes down and you can’t watch your favorite TV show, that’s on the hotel.” And if a film keeps a guest’s toddler from sleeping or is annoying to a guest, that’s the hotel’s fault, too.

If the film festival proceeds, he said, he’ll have to warn all of his guests about it when they make reservations, as well as advise those who are already on the books — and will probably lose some.

“We don’t get the money, the city doesn’t get the TOT, and the housekeepers don’t get the work,” he said.

But guild executive director Yvonne Hildebrand-Bowen pleaded with the council to allow her group to show the films. With the fate of the series in question, she said, she hasn’t been able to secure sponsorships, as she usually does, and the group is running out of money.

“This is something we’ve been doing for years,” she said, adding that this year’s lineup includes an unprecedented five Disney films. While the guild originally planned to show 32 movies, since the venue has yet to be confirmed, the number has dropped to 15 to 20, representing a significant loss.

She wanted to be sensitive to nearby inns and offered to do a sound check to see if the noise would be acceptable.

“And if it’s detrimental to either of the hotels, we don’t do it,” she said.

City councilman Steve Dallas wondered if residents in the area had been notified, though city attorney Don Freeman said no notifications were required, and Dallas predicted residents would object.

“I think there is a solution, but I don’t think this is the right solution,” he said.

Former councilwoman and Carmel Residents Association President Barbara Livingston said her group has sponsored a film in the past, and though it isn’t this year, it donated money to the guild. She encouraged others to follow suit.

“This is a very serious situation for them,” she said.

Former Mayor Sue McCloud suggested the films be screened in Forest Hill Park, and Dallas said they should be at Devendorf Park, but Hildebrand-Bowen said Devendorf has bad exit lighting at night, and her organization couldn’t afford the $400-plus per screening it would cost to have movies there.

In her report, Bombard recommended the council approve the move to Vista Lobos. She said the group would also pay for reserved parking spaces on Torres to accommodate disabled visitors and would put a storage unit in the lot. In addition, attendees will not be able to bring alcohol to the movies, as they can when they’re at the Forest Theater. She said the community activities and cultural commission reviewed the request and recommended the council approve it.

Toward the end of the discussion, Haveles commented, “Our hotel is going to be affected, but I think we should at least attempt to do one. If it’s horrible, I’ll advise Yvonne.”

And after councilman Ken Talmage received assurance the porta-potties for the films would be located somewhere other than on Torres or would be screened, the council voted 4-1, with Dallas dissenting, to allow the Films in the Forest to take place at Vista Lobos — provided it passes the sound test.

MARKET UPDATE

As we start to roll into the summer months, supply continues to tighten in Carmel with just 4 properties hitting the market in May. This is less than half the 9 new listings in the Golden Rectangle or Carmel Point that hit the market in May of 2013. There were 8 new sales in the prime parts of Carmel in May with 4 closed escrows. This dealflow is down from the 7 new sales and 9 closed escrows in May of 2013 – primarily due to a lack of supply in the market.

Pebble Beach had a very strong May with 9 closed escrows and 12 new sales. There were two closed escrows above $9M this month – our listing on the 14th fairway closed for $16.5M and an incredible contemporary up on Macomber closed for $9.5M. This continues a trend in Pebble where the top of the market continues to move but the $3M-8M bracket has gone quiet – it has been over 3 months since a $3M sale and over 6 months since a house closed for over $5M.

Strolling down Carmel's memory lane with Randell Bishop

MUCH HAS been written about the early, bohemian days of Carmel. There are books about architecture, the cottages, the beaches, and several books on local history. However, there's a middle era that exists mostly in the memories of the folks who grew up here after that first generation of founders. One such person is Randell Bishop.

A life-long resident, Bishop's youthful exuberance belies his slightly (BEGIN ITAL) north-of-retirement (END ITAL) age, especially when he is talking about Carmel. Bishop's local roots are deep. He attended Sunset School and graduated from Carmel High School. His maternal great grandfather was Fred Howard, who owned 17 acres of land where Santa Catalina School is now located. His great, great grandfather on his mother's side was Edwin Daingerfield, who was the second postmaster of Pacific Grove.

He showed me Sunset School's commencement program from 1927. Among the graduates were his father, Stanley, and his good friends, Dale and Teddy Leidig. Other class members were Albert Comstock, the Reamer kids, Bain and Elizabeth, and Gladys and Milton Roach.

"My father was also good friends with Robinson Jeffers' sons. He remembers Jeffers carrying rocks up from the beach while he was building Hawk House. I had my own close encounter with the famous poet. I was doing a report in high school and was supposed to have tea with Jeffers. His daughter-in-law, Lee, called to say he wasn't feeling up to having anyone in. I was crestfallen."

Bishop told me that his dad also was friends with Alisha Flanders. Both Paul and Grace Flanders had been married previously. Paul was a widower, with a young daughter, Alisha, when he and Grace were married in 1920. Alicia lived in the mansion from the

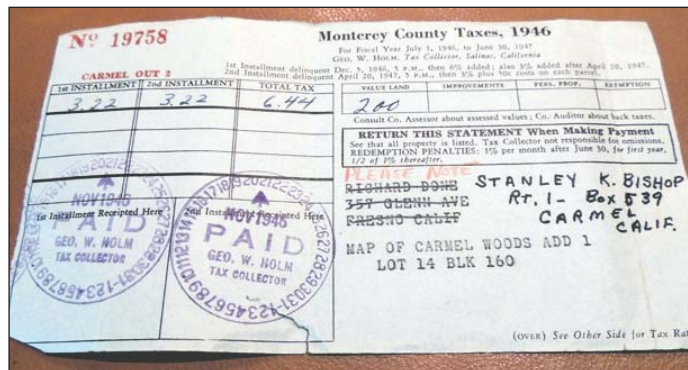

Then he ticked off the names of the four stations as fast as the dollar amount display clicks over on $4.39 a gallon gas pumps.

"We had Shell, Mobile, Richfield, and Texaco on those four corners. The Rinky Dink Café, owned by the Ricketts family, was next to the Standard Station. It was kind of a blue collar place. The workmen from Carmel Builder's Supply all went there to eat. Bannerman's garage, a Union 76 station, stood at the corner of San Carlos and Sixth."

According to Bishop, Carmel had its share of characters while he was growing up. Pon Chung was always at the post office when he wasn't running the hot dog stand at the Abalone League games. Architect Charles Sumner Greene walked to the post office wearing a long blue smock. Betty Greene stabled her horses on Junipero between Fifth and Sixth. Red Eagle walked the streets wearing a full Indian head dress. Red Eagle Lane runs off Mission between Ocean and Seventh across from the Carmel Plaza.

Bishop has warm memories of Carmel residents. Francis Whitaker was a mentor to him. Bishop attended Whittaker's 90th birthday party.

"We had some wonderful teachers in

This 1946 property tax bill for a lot just outside Carmel is sure to remind old-timers of the Good Old Days and have the younger generation saying, "I can't believe property was so cheap!"

time of its completion until the mid-1930s when she married Steve Plunkett of San Rafael.

Another interesting document Bishop showed me is his father's 1946 tax bill for lot 14, block 160 in Carmel Woods. The amount due was $6.44 for the lot which was valued at $200. That lot was on Serra. It backed up to the Abalone baseball field. The refreshment stand for the league stood on it. His copy of the 1929 phone book for Monterey and San Benito Counties isn't as thick as the wine list at some of our more upscale restaurants. All the phone numbers had three digits.

The Ketchams lived nearby on Camino del Monte, so Randell was friends with Hank's son Dennis. "He really looked like the cartoon Dennis," Bishop said.

"Carmel has really changed over the years. There was a time when we had nine gas stations. There were four of them at the corner of San Carlos and Seventh."

Carmel. One in particular that I remember is Ernest Calley, who taught shop and pottery. He took his students on nature walks. We learned about birds and plants from him down below Mission Ranch. He opened our eyes to the natural beauty of where we live. He had a tremendously positive impact on many of us."

"Carmel was a great place to be a kid and grow up. You didn't have to be rich to live here. People were polite. The sea change came with Carmel Plaza was built. Attitudes seemed to change, more tourists came into town. It was just different after that. That small town atmosphere began to disappear. Not sure it ever came back. But I still love it here and wouldn't want to live anywhere else."

The Perfect Place To Play A Round

Open Sunday 1:30 - 3:00
1030 Wranglers Trail, Pebble Beach

If walls could talk they might tell you about the legendary parties in this house hosted by Sam Morse, Bing Crosby and their cronies back in "the era". In the early 1990s this home received a complete remodel down to the studs. It was rebuilt emulating the same classic architecture of the original 1928 home, including hand-plastered walls, arched hallways and windows, coved ceilings, wood and tile flooring. Enjoy the romance and architecture of the era without the worries and surprises often associated with maintaining these vintage homes. The home and rear yard are filled with warmth and sunshine due to the south facing exposure. All this, plus the home backs to the 18th fairway at Monterey Peninsula Country Club. Ace! $1,850,000
