At first look, Forest Theater plan gets high marks

■ Big share of expense for disabled access

By KELLY NIX

LIGHTING TO help theatergoers find their seats, safety handrails, wheelchair access, a cross aisle and other features are among the upgrades an architect said Tuesday would bring the 100-plus-year-old Forest Theater up to date and allow it to be open for productions again next year.

Chris Wasney of Cody Anderson Wasney Architects told the Carmel City Council at a hearing Tuesday evening that the improvements would mitigate safety hazards and improve accessibility at the historic venue, which was shuttered in April for health and safety concerns. The project, as Wasney presented it at the more than 4-hour meeting, would cost $1,379,524.

Though the council had the option of approving the plan Tuesday night, it voted 4-1, with Carrie Theis dissenting, to meet next week to hear back from the design firm on the idea of putting disability seating in an alternative location than the architect had planned.

Wasney proposed placing two ADA seating areas where a new cross aisle would meet the center aisle and one of the side aisles — a plan that would also require an extensive boardwalk system and eliminate about 50 regular seats. However, councilwoman Victoria Beach asked whether seats

Mayors, water officials to ask state board for cutback delay

By KELLY NIX

A GROUP of mayors, water officials, environmental groups and others will sit down with officials from the State Water Resources Control Board in two weeks in an effort to stave off an order that would require California American Water to drastically curtail pumping from the Carmel River — a measure that could have serious impacts on the local economy, and especially to hotels, golf courses and other businesses that depend on water.

Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett is among those who will meet with staff from the state water board in Sacramento Nov. 7 to discuss a possible two-year extension of the Oct. 2009 cease and desist cutback order that compels Cal Am to roughly cut in half the amount of water it draws from the Carmel River. The current deadline for the cutbacks is Dec. 31, 2016.

“We all recognize the [cutback order] serves a function in focusing our attention on water supply projects, and we are very focused on that,” Burnett told The Pine Cone. “But imposing Draconian measures on the community doesn’t further that objective.”

Will they be receptive?

Peninsula residents use far less water than any other in the state, and being forced to curtail use much more would likely mean shuttered restaurants, businesses and hotels. The order also poses a potential health and safety risk since it means Peninsula customers would be limited to about 35 gallons per person per day, which is about half of what the typical customer currently uses.

It’s hoped that the November meeting will give some indication as to whether the state water board is even receptive to extending the cutback order, according to Burnett and Monterey Peninsula Water Management District general manager Dave Stoldt.

“It’s all geared toward seeing if we have a mutual understanding before we actually request a modification to the [cutback order],” said Stoldt.

“We want to make sure we are asking something that’s within the realm of possible,” Burnett said.

The state water board issued the order to protect the steelhead trout and red-legged frog populations of the Carmel River.

In April, the water district asked the state water board about the conditions under which the agency might consider extending the order. It also offered ways to mitigate the envi-

PG&E SET TO RESUME WORK ON GAS MAINS

By KELLY NIX

NEARLY EIGHT months after PG&E workers caused a house to explode at Guadalupe and Third, the utility has been given the go-ahead by the California Public Utilities Commission to resume its operations in the village Friday.

Burnett says the city will be ‘vigilant’ about monitoring the work

On Thursday, city hall announced the CPUC had given PG&E the OK to resume work, but Mayor Jason Burnett said the city would “be vigilant” in monitoring the company’s work given its “demonstrated failures,” while a PG&E spokesman told The Pine Cone it has new measures in place to ensure safety.

Burnett also reiterated the city’s call for a high-level investigation of the March explosion.

“We continue to remain very much focused that the CPUC conduct a complete and independent investigation into PG&E’s wrongdoing,” Burnett said. “The resumption of work definitely does not mean this situation is resolved. The type of behavior by PG&E that caused the explosion must never be repeated.”

Following the March 3 house explosion, the city restricted PG&E to doing only emergency work in Carmel.

PG&E spokesman Donald Cutler, though, said the utility has made significant enhancements to address concerns from Carmel, its residents and the CPUC.

“The CPUC and the city have thoroughly evaluated our safety protocols,” Cutler said.

The company, he said, invites questions from residents about its work and will hold a public outreach meeting Tuesday, Oct. 28, at Carmel Middle School from 4 to 6 p.m. to field concerns.

“We are really working hard to achieve a broad channel of communication,” Cutler said.

He also added “we are really pleased we can get the work done for the community now, and we are really happy to get the work done and to do so safely.”

In an April letter to the CPUC, PG&E Vice President Sumeet Singh said the company had made changes to prevent future accidents, including “enhancing” the process used by gas workers to tap pipelines, adding a new process to ensure workers have the right equipment and procedures in

Joan Fontaine bequeathes house, valuables to Monterey County SPCA

By KELLY NIX

OSCAR-WINNING actress and long-time Carmel Highlands resident Joan Fontaine was an animal lover, so it wasn’t surprising that, after she died Dec. 15, 2013, her will showed that she wanted many of her treasured possessions to be sold and the proceeds given to the SPCA for Monterey County — where she adopted several pets over the years.

Among Fontaine’s belongings to be sold by Christie’s in four auctions later this year is the Oscar she won for the 1941 Alfred Hitchcock movie, “Suspicion.” Another valuable item to be sold is a Marc Chagall painting, which the auction house said could bring as much as $600,000. The sale of Fontaine’s Carmel Highlands home where she lived for 30 years, listed for $2.6 million, will also benefit the SPCA.

“Thanks to Miss Fontaine’s planning and compassionate legacy, animals rescued by the SPCA will receive love, healing, and placement in the lifelong homes they deserve,” SPCA Executive Director Gary Tiscornia said of her gift.

Among many pets she had in her life, Fontaine adopted three dogs from the SPCA for Monterey County: Samantha, Fang IV and Kita.

Fang IV and Samantha were with her at the end of her life and are being cared for by Fontaine’s assistant, Susan Pfeiffer, who is now a trustee of her estate.

SPCA spokeswoman Beth Brookhouser recalled the day she delivered Samantha, a border Collie who is now about 10, to

For 30 years this was the front door of actress Joan Fontaine, but following her death in December, the home will be sold with proceeds going to help local animals. The home is on Upper Walden Road in Carmel Highlands.

Sandy Claws

Big baby

BUBBA AND CHUY can be calm and quiet – lazy even – sunning themselves on the deck. Unless a squirrel slips by. Then they can go from zero to 60 in seconds, shaking the house like an earthquake. Some 270 pounds of Bull Mastiff will do that.

Mostly they're big babies, which is the way they began.

It had been awhile since their person had lost the first dog she'd ever called her own, a Labrador-Rhodesian Ridgeback mix named Charlie. No one in the family was quite sure they were ready for another dog. Yet strolling through the Farmers Market on Alvarado Street in Monterey, they passed a young family cradling a pair of 8-week-old Bull Mastiffs, already weighing in at 20 pounds each.

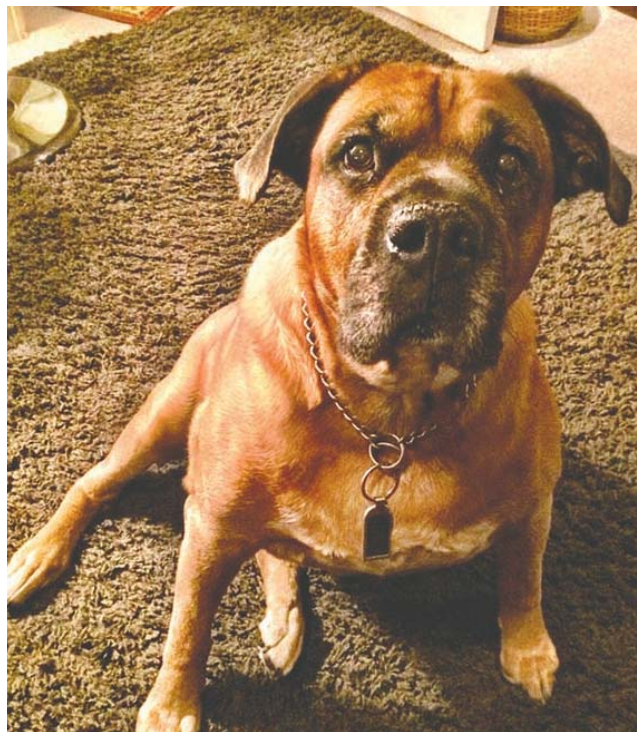

Mom and son pleaded with Dad to adopt one, and he said he'd think about it. Five steps later, he turned back and took them both.

"We were completely unprepared," says Mom. "We had come for fruit, vegetables and maybe some kettle popcorn. We stopped by Petco on the way home, put the puppies in a shopping cart and roamed the store, looking for supplies. The next day, we took them to the vet."

Eleven years later, Bubba is on his own, having lost Chuy last year. His replacement pal is the son, who calls him his brother.

Bubba has slowed down some, but he still wanders the family's 11-acre property, still plays at squirrel hunting, and still has a young spirit.

"Bubba's so sweet, and his face is so cute," says Mom. "His size makes him look intimidating, but he's really goofy. I wish he were smaller, so I could hold him on my lap. When he gets excited, he still jumps and twirls around. I've always wanted to get him a tutu, but my guys wouldn't hear of it."

Five weeks after supes' OK, Highlands project heads to court

By CHRIS COUNTS

JUST BEFORE Monterey County Supervisors voted unanimously Sept. 9 to OK the expansion of a home in an ocean-front neighborhood of the Carmel Highlands despite vehement objections from a neighbor, Supervisor Fernando Armenta offered a prophetic comment. "If the neighbor wants to litigate, that's their prerogative."

Last week, the resident, Melvin Kaplan, did just that, suing his neighbors, Gopalkrishnan and Brenda Venkatesh. In a lawsuit filed Oct. 16, Kaplan's attorney argues the permit for the expansion of their home violates the California Environmental Quality Act.

The couple wants to construct a 1,938 square-foot addition to their existing 3,808-square-foot home. The permit for the addition was approved by the county without an EIR.

Representing Kaplan, attorney William Parkin said in court papers the project is in conflict with CEQA because it would add more than 50 percent to the floor area of the structures, and he contends cypress trees were removed without permits. He is asking that the court set aside the supervisors' approval.

According to county records, Kaplan's home is 6,276 square feet.

At the Sept. 9 supervisors meeting, Kaplan's other attorney, Gary Patton, told the supervisors the neighbors removed 20 to 30 cypress trees without permits, impairing Kaplan's views, as well as those from a trail that splits the two properties and provides access to a beach.

But Gopalkrishnan Venkatesh insisted he only removed dead trees from his property, and pruned others after consulting with an arborist.

Patton told the supervisors that Kaplan was willing to let the project move forward if "adequate screening and landscaping" were installed between the two properties. But attorney Richard Gullen, representing the neighbors, said the two sides couldn't agree on how much screening should be required.

In the kind of dispute that has become very familiar in local council chambers and courtrooms, the owner of the large home at right in this aerial photo is suing his neighbor to the left, claiming the addition the neighbor wants to build is too much. Both homes are on Spindrift Road in the Carmel Highlands. At lower left is the Pacific Ocean.

Monterey County prosecutors named assistant district attorneys

By KELLY NIX

A MONTEREY County deputy district attorney who put 20 gang members behind bars last year and an attorney who successfully prosecuted the man who murdered a Pacific Grove teen in 1997 were named this week as the county's new assistant district attorneys.

On Tuesday, Monterey County District Attorney Dean D. Flippo announced the appointments of deputy district attorneys Rolando Mazariegos and Jeannine Pacioni to the positions.

One of the vacancies was created when Deputy D.A. Stephanie Hulsey was elected as a Monterey County Superior Court Judge in June. She takes the bench in January.

"Ms. Pacioni and Mr. Mazariegos are extremely dedicated and professional prosecutors with an inexhaustible work ethic," according to Flippo.

Pacioni was a prosecutor for the Kern County District Attorney's Office in 1990 before she was hired by the Monterey County District Attorney's Office in 1992. She received several promotions from 1992 to 2002 before she resigned and took an 8-year sabbatical.

During her time off, Pacioni served as grand juror with the county's civil grand jury and president of the Junior League of Monterey County before returning to the DA's Office in 2009. She has handled a variety of assignments including adult sexual assault, juvenile, gang, child sexual assault, and elder abuse cases.

Notably, Pacioni prosecuted Jacobo Ruelas, who was convicted by a jury in the 1997 murder of 17-year-old Kristopher Olinger in Pacific Grove. Ruelas, who was also convicted of kidnapping for carjacking and robbery, was sentenced Oct. 30, 2013, to life in prison without the possibility of parole.

She also spearheaded implementation of the county-wide Sexual Assault Response Team.

Jury awards Chelsie Hill $12.5 million in lawsuit against Toyota

By KELLY NIX

A JURY last week awarded former P.G. High student Chelsie Hill more than $12.5 million after she won her lawsuit against auto giant Toyota. The amount is the largest awarded by a jury in California this year, according to her attorney.

Hill, 22, sued Toyota in 2011, arguing the lap-only belt she was wearing in a 1996 4Runner at the time of a February 2010 crash in Skyline Forest caused her to be paralyzed. The jury agreed and awarded her $12.5 million on Oct. 17 after deliberating the case for about five hours.

"I am thrilled for Chelsie," her attorney Bob Rosenthal said after the verdict. "She won't have to worry about her future and can spend her time working for her charitable foundation without worrying about earning an income."

Toyota maintained throughout the three-week trial that Hill's injuries were a result of the actions of driver Aaron Corn, who was drunk. The company's attorneys also argued that Hill didn't put on her seatbelt correctly and that the device was loose upon impact.

Corn and the other three male passengers in the 4Runner were injured, but not nearly as badly as Hill. They were all wearing three-point seatbelts, those with shoulder harnesses. Toyota, which had been complying with government regulations, only offered a lapbelt in the middle rear seat of the 4Runner, which it marketed as a five-person family vehicle.

The odds were obviously in her favor from the beginning because juries in such cases usually favor an injured defendant over a large, rich corporation, but Rosenthal and Hill's father, Jon, nevertheless characterized the legal battle as David versus Goliath. And Rosenthal and his legal partner Andrew Kreeft were certainly outgunned — Toyota had five attorneys in Superior Court Judge Thomas W. Wills' Monterey courtroom at almost any given time during the trial.

Also, the San Francisco law firm in which Toyota's lawyers, Vince Galvan, Jr. and James Halbrooks are partners in, has made a name for itself defending automotive manufacturers in product liability cases. It boasts of numerous accolades on its website including an Oct. 16 post citing a research group's findings that it's among the nation's "most feared law firms."

"I was told [Toyota] spent $1.8 million before they paid any lawyers" on crash tests, etc., Rosenthal told The Pine Cone. "They clearly thought a small town [law] firm could not go toe to toe to with them."

Rosenthal, who said Galvan's "reputation preceded him," repeatedly told Hill she could accept the "small amount" Toyota was offering to settle the case to avoid squaring off with the auto giant. But Hill, he said, insisted on taking it to trial.

"The fact that a small town girl took on Toyota, and its war chest and entourage of attorneys, and won, tells you how special Chelsie is and just how much the jury realized it," Rosenthal said. "It would have been real easy to settle when the opportunity was there, but she agreed to fight."

Rosenthal and Kreeft presented a compelling argument at the trial: While alcohol undoubtedly played a part in the crash, they said, it was Toyota's lap belt that caused Hill's irreparable injuries. The company, he argued, knew about the dangers of lap belts but chose to install them anyway, even at the risk of its customers' safety.

Toyota's case dwelled on expert witness testimony that, at times, was drawn out and seemed to stray from the company's primary argument that alcohol and an improperly worn seatbelt were the cause of Hill's injuries. A Stanford doctor, who offered convincing testimony that Hill had been wearing her belt improperly, was defiant during Rosenthal's cross examination of her.

Though Toyota declined a request to interview Galvan, the attorney did contact Rosenthal Monday.

"Vince Galvan called today to say one thing: 'Congratulations in kicking my ass,'" according to Rosenthal.

Rosenthal declined to say how much money he and Kreeft would receive from the jury award, though attorneys typically get from 30 to 40 percent. Rosenthal said they invested more than $400,000 in the case, including their work on it.

"Making copies of their [17,000 pages of exhibits] alone was 7 grand," Rosenthal said.

The jury was unanimous on the claim that Toyota failed to warn of the dangers of the lap belt while the vote was 9-3 on the two defective design claims, Rosenthal and Kreeft argued. Unlike criminal cases in California, a jury doesn't have to be unanimous in its decision. Only nine of 12 jurors must agree in a civil trial.

The itemized verdict amounts to $615,066 for past medical bills, $7,191,239 for future medical and life care expenses, $763,548 for loss of future earnings, $1 million for past pain and suffering, and $3 million for future pain and suffering for a total of $12,569,853.00.

Of course, much of the jury's award for those damages will go to her lawyers.

Rosenthal said he hopes they money will help Hill continue the work she's done over the past several years with the Walk & Roll Foundation, a nonprofit she started with her father that informs teens of the dangers of distracted driving and provides resources for those in wheelchairs.

"Hopefully, Chelsie will really benefit from the publicity and her foundation will become a leader in spinal cord injury awareness, as she hopes," Rosenthal said.

Toyota spokeswoman Carly Schaffner declined to say whether the company was going to appeal the case, but issued a statement, saying it was reviewing the outcome.

"We sympathize with Ms. Hill and anyone in an accident involving one of our vehicles," she said. "While we respect the jury's time and consideration, we remain confident that Ms. Hill's injuries were not the result of a defect in the 1996 Toyota 4Runner. We will carefully study the record."

Joel D. Robinson

April 16, 1943 – October 19, 2014

Bloomfield Hills, MI and Pebble Beach, CA Resident

Joel D. Robinson, Age 71, retired Vice Chairman of American Axle and Manufacturing, passed away at his California home on October 19, 2014.

Loving husband of Carol for 14 years. Dear father of Deborah Molter (Marc), Tony (Jaclyn), and Christopher. Proud grandfather of Casey, Katelyn, Anthony, and Brandon. Of all his life achievements, he was most proud of his family and the time he spent with them creating a lifetime of memories.

Born in Cleveland, Ohio on April 16, 1943 to Anthony and Eileen Robinson who preceded him in death. Survived by his siblings, Nancy Hendrickson (Steve), Mary White (William), Mark, Jim (fiancée Cathy), Matt (Sue) and Ann Ferrara (Terry) and numerous nieces and nephews. Also preceding him in death was his sister-in-law Arlene.

From a very early age Joel learned the importance of determination and hard work. After high school he was influenced to work in the automotive industry by his father-in-law. This was the most challenging time in the beginning of his career because he was attending college during the day, raising a family and working midnights at Ford Motor Company. He started as an assembler at the transmission plant and then six months later entered Ford's apprentice program. While working there, he earned his bachelor's degree in industrial technology from Wayne State University. This degree enabled him to be an expert in the field of automotive manufacturing.

He held a series of technical and manufacturing management positions at Ford Motor Company before making a key career decision and accepting a position as general foreman with American Motors Corporation in 1977. He served as Director of Vehicle Assembly for the company where he was responsible for overseeing three plants in Toledo, Kenosha, and Brampton in addition to directing the building and creation of a new plant in Bramalea, Ontario. American Motors Corporation then became Chrysler Corporation, where he was responsible for all car body programs.

Mr. Robinson joined American Axle and Manufacturing (AAM) in March 1994 and quickly moved up the ranks holding a variety of positions. On April 1, 1996 Joel was promoted to Executive Director, Corporate Manufacturing Services and became the first executive director in AAM's history. He also served as Executive Director of the GMT-800 program. He was then named Vice President, Manufacturing in May 1997.

Joel was then promoted to Executive Vice President - Operations & Chief Operating Officer in August 1998. In this role, he oversaw the creation of the world-class AAM de Mexico facility that was the company's first manufacturing initiative outside of the country. He led a five-man project team that was commissioned to successfully negotiate a favorable incentive agreement with the local and national governments to bring AAM to Silao, Guanajuato.

In the subsequent years, Joel played a key role in AAM's overseas manufacturing efforts, namely the acquisition of Albion Automotive in Glasgow, Scotland and Spurrier, England along with the company's manufacturing facilities of AAM do Brasil in Araucaria, Brazil.

He served as President & Chief Operating Officer in January 2001 for three years prior to being appointed Vice Chairman of AAM in October 2004. He retired in November 2005 with more than 40 years of experience in the global automotive industry.

In addition to having a passion for his career, he also enjoyed traveling, fine dining, and collecting wine, model cars and knives. He has more than 500 knives, daggers and swords in his impressive knife collection and created a special room to display his collection in his Pebble Beach, California home.

Family will receive friends on Thursday, October 23, 2014 from 4-8p.m. and Friday, October 24, 2014 from 12 to 8 p.m. at A.J. Desmond & Sons Funeral Home, 32515 Woodward Ave., Royal Oak, MI. Funeral service will be Saturday, October 25, 2014, at 11:00 a.m. at Kirk in the Hills, Bloomfield Hills, MI with a visitation preceding the service beginning at 10 a.m. A memorial service will be held in California after the first of the year.

In lieu of flowers family suggests memorial tributes to:

Jewelry salesman arrested for assaulting girlfriend at her P.B. home

By MARY SCHLEY

A MONTEREY resident who went from being an armed security guard to a salesman for an upscale jewelry store in downtown Carmel was arrested earlier this month on charges of domestic abuse for shoving his girlfriend across the living-room of her Pebble Beach home and throwing a set of keys at her, cutting her hand, the night of Oct. 4, according to the Monterey County Sheriff's Office.

Daniel Dunn, 37, was booked into Monterey County Jail shortly after midnight

Oct. 5 after deputies found him at his Monterey home, where they also confiscated three firearms "for safekeeping," according to deputy Angus Wilhite.

Dunn, who worked as a guard for Uretsky Security for almost four years before becoming a jewelry salesman at Fourtané in January, holds licenses from the state Bureau of Security and Investigative Services permitting him to use a baton and a firearm. When he was arrested at his Dickman Avenue residence, deputies took Dunn's Glock .40-caliber pistol, an M1 Carbine .30-caliber rifle and a modified AR-15 rifle. If he is convicted, he won't be able to reclaim them. If he's acquitted, he will have to undergo a background check by the state Department of Justice in order to get the weapons back from the sheriff's office.

Described by the sheriff's office as being 6 foot 3 and weighing 235 pounds, Dunn says in his LinkedIn profile that he has "18-plus years of military and security experience, including diplomatic and executive security working for both domestic and international interests."

He has been a salesman at Fourtané since January, and prior to that worked as "lead officer" for Uretsky Security from August 2010 until he took the sales job. Among the honors and awards he lists are an Army commendation medal, a Japanese commendation from that country's defense forces, and a "tactical edge award" and top firearms award from the police academy.

While he was arrested on a felony charge, Dunn's case was set for misdemeanor arraignment in a Salinas courtroom Oct. 16.

Livingston's entry, which depicted a gigantic octopus with a fisherman in its arms, was entitled "Who Caught Who?" According to his Facebook page, Alvernaz regularly enters sand castle contests up and down the coast of California – which is pretty cool, consider that his home town is nowhere near the ocean.

To study the impact of lagoon projects, county must look at alternatives

By CHRIS COUNTS

TO COMPLY with state environmental laws, the Monterey County planning department is studying two projects proposed for the mouth of the Carmel River: the Ecosystem Protective Barrier to prevent flooding while protecting the river's flora and fauna, and the Scenic Road Protection Structure, which would keep the river from washing the road away.

One alternative for the lagoon barrier would be to buy homes at risk of flooding and tear them down. Another alternative would be to do nothing at all — in other words, preserve the status quo. But that strategy involves continuing to mechanically breaching the Carmel River Lagoon sandbar to manage the water level in the lagoon, a practice the National Marine Fisheries Service is concerned harms steelhead.

The Scenic Road Protection Structure would use riprap to protect Scenic Road, a visitor parking lot and a restroom from flooding and erosion. Constructed with 6,500 tons of rocks, the structure is expected to cost about $1.3 million.

The 17.5 foot-high Ecosystem Protective Barrier would protect homes that border the north side of the lagoon from flooding. The barrier is estimated to cost about $14 million.

The twin aims of the projects are protecting the steelhead in the lagoon and protecting the homes that are most vulnerable when the water in the lagoon rises past flood stage.

The Ecosystem Protective Barrier, in particular, has generated comments from the public. While the barrier would provide greater security for local homeowners, some are concerned about its visual impact, county planning official Carl Holm told The Pine Cone. And state parks, he said, doesn't want to give up public land to benefit private property owners.

Any project that moves forward will need to be approved by the United State Army Corps of Engineers, California Fish and Wildlife, the State Water Resources Control Board and the California Coastal Commission.

Holm said it's too early to say when an environmental impact report for the projects will be completed.

Lots of work

Cutler said that beginning Friday crews will perform regularly scheduled maintenance in town, and on Nov. 3, the company will resume safety upgrades to its pipelines on Santa Fe Street between Second and Third avenues. Work on Santa Fe from Third to Fourth avenues will be from Nov. 5 to Dec. 12. Crews will work on Guadalupe Street between Ocean Avenue and 2nd from Dec. 15 to Jan. 12, 2015, and on Perry Newberry Way from Sixth to Fourth avenues from Jan. 13 to Jan. 29. Coinciding with that work will be work on Scenic Avenue. A complete PG&E work schedule will be available at the Oct. 28 meeting at CMS, Cutler said.

On March 3, PG&E crews were working on a main gas line next door to the single-family house that exploded. The leak that led to the blast was caused when a worker tapped into a gas line he mistakingly believed was only steel, but actually contained a plastic insert. While he worked on the line, gas leaked between the plastic lining and the steel and followed the gas main into the house.

While Burnett said PG&E has been "reasonably good" at describing what went wrong that led to the explosion, he said the company has failed to disclose what led to the mapping mistake that caused the workers to be unaware about the type of pipe they were dealing with. The utility also wasn't prepared to shut the gas off quickly after it started leaking.

"The question is not primarily what went wrong physically," he said, "but what went wrong in terms of their business practices and their corporate culture and their procedures that allowed this to happen shortly after PG&E disrupted other communities" including the massive, fatal 2010 explosion in San Bruno.

Burnett criticized PG&E for refusing to join the city in calling for a thorough and high-level investigation into the incident.

"It begs the question," he said, "is there something they are trying to hide?"

However, Cutler said PG&E is cooperating with the CPUC's ongoing staff-level query into the incident.

"This is in addition to the extensive third-party assessment that was conducted," Cutler said. "We believe these are appropriate and comprehensive and do not believe additional regulatory proceedings are needed."

Burnett and the city council were also critical of the investigation by consultant Exponent, which only interviewed PG&E workers and contractors, and failed to talk to emergency responders or residents who were nearby and reported smelling gas.

The council earlier this year said it appeared PG&E violated CPUC code regarding safe distribution of natural gas. What's clear is that once the PG&E crew realized there was a gas leak, the house blew up 37 minutes later, prompting questions as to why the company didn't respond more quickly to prevent the blast.

"It was only due to a miracle that no one was killed or even hurt" in the Carmel blast, Burnett said. "And we can't rely on miracles."

Still, the U.S. Attorney's Office is investigating PG&E in connection with the explosion.

Carmel city administrator Doug Schmitz said this week that city staff would closely monitor PG&E's work in Carmel, and that it would be getting weekly updates regarding the work that's underway.

Big Sur's hardy vegetation inspires photographer

By CHRIS COUNTS

AS A photographer who compiled a book on the subject, Howard Jones knows how quickly Big Sur's resilient vegetation can bounce back after a fire.

But even Jones was surprised by the fast recovery of an uprooted sycamore tree that tumbled down a Big Sur hillside in the mudslides that followed the 2008 Basin Complex Fire. The blaze scorched more than 160,000 acres that summer.

Throughout the winter that followed the fire, Jones drove south to Big Sur every day to photograph signs of recovery along the coast. He was accompanied by his Queensland healer, Logan. One day, he noticed a small sycamore that appeared in a turnout about 25 miles south of Carmel.

The tree, Jones said, was planted there by highway workers who recovered it while cleaning up a mudslide. The workers buried the roots of the tree, which was about 8 feet tall at the time. Today, he estimates reaches about 40 feet.

"As you can see, that little tree is alive, well and quite a healthy young adult," Jones observed.

Recently, the photographer drove his mother, longtime Carmel resident Mary Jones, down the coast so she could see the tree. "I get a very special feeling whenever I see that tree," the younger Jones said.

When he first started his project to photograph Big Sur's recovery, he marveled at the first signs of green vegetation to emerge from a landscape that was charred black by the fire. He saw beauty in the new growth — even if it was the dreaded poison oak.

The following year, he produced a book of photographs, "The Fire Chronicles: Walking the Healing Path." A collection of 20 of those images hangs in a hall at Natividad Medical Center in Salinas. His images are also displayed in many other local places.

A defiant Riley tells Cal Am he didn't violate water agreement

By KELLY NIX

WATER ACTIVIST George Riley this week defiantly responded to a charge by California American Water that he violated the terms of a contract he signed last year.

On Sept. 23, Cal Am charged Riley with breaching the terms of a water agreement he and his group Citizens for Public Water signed in 2013 because he challenged the water company's proposed use of slant feed-water wells for its desal plant in Marina — technology Riley originally agreed should be employed for the project.

In doing so, Riley, Cal Am said, breached the agreement. The company requested he stop making the comments, which he made during two public meetings and in a letter posted on a blog site. Cal Am said Riley went as far as to "obstruct and prevent" tests to determine the feasibility of the wells, and warned that he could face possible legal repercussions.

On Oct. 19, though, Riley sent a letter to Cal Am engineering manager Ian Crooks saying he did nothing wrong.

"I deny the accusation that I am in breach of the settlement agreement," Riley wrote. "I deny that my comments and my actions have interfered with permitting. And I reject your charges."

Riley contends that since he signed the 2013 agreement, "new realities have emerged," including an 11-month delay of Cal Am's desalination plant and, as a result of data gleaned from borehole tests, a greater risk of litigation in using Cal Am's proposed well technology for its desal plant.

Riley said he treats Cal Am's letter as a "soft form of a SLAPP" lawsuit — a suit that

George Robert Nelson (Bob)

George Robert Nelson (Bob) passed away on October 4, 2014. Although his passing was unexpected, Bob left us peacefully, and surrounded by loved ones. He was 89 years young. He led an active and vital life.

Bob was born in Evanston, Illinois in 1925. He and his elder sister, Lois, were the children of Clara and George Nelson. As a young boy, Bob worked as a soda jerk, paperboy, and elevator operator. After completing high school, Bob was accepted to study at Northwestern University. He enlisted in the Army and was sent to the South Pacific where he served in the Signal Corps during World War II. After the war, he returned to Chicago where he completed his education at Lake Forest College with a degree in Economics.

Upon finishing his degree in 1949, Bob started his 47-year career with The American Licorice Company in San Francisco where he held several positions before serving as Chairman of the Board for many years. He cooked the first batch of the now famous Red Vines, earning him the title of "The Licorice King." Bob was instrumental in growing a small candy company into one of the largest candy businesses in the West.

He survived his first wife, Roberta Dunlevy, after 16 years of marriage. He survived his second wife, Barbara Boston, after 42 years of marriage. Bob was a loving and caring husband, father and grandfather. He is loved and missed by his five children: Susan Clancey (Lorn), John Nelson (Ruth), Ellen Kennard (David), Melissa Nelson, Rebecca Heiser (Eric) and 12 beloved grandchildren: Andrew and Peter Clancey, George, Jack, Joseph, and David Nelson, Kaitlin and Christopher Kennard, Kennah and Elizabeth Brennehan, Eliana and Ginevra Heiser.

Bob will be remembered for his quick-witted, dry humor and his contagious laugh. He traveled the world top to bottom and side to side. He filled his sails with wind on the San Francisco Bay. His garden bloomed with the mark of a gifted and caring hand. His fingerprints are left on many bridge cards and his footprints danced on our tennis courts. Above all, Bob lived his life embracing his family and friends and was known for his gentle and kind demeanor.

Thank you, Bob, for the wonderful memories. We love you.

A memorial service for Bob will be held at The Church in the Forest in Pebble Beach on the 26th of October at 1:30PM.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to The American Cancer Society, PO Box 22718, Oklahoma City, OK 73123-1718, www.cancer.org/donate or to Church in The Forest, P.O. Box 1027, Pebble Beach, CA 93953, www.churchintheForest.org.

Shirlee H. Jones

December 31, 1923 – September 28, 2014

Shirlee Jones, a long-time resident of Pebble Beach, CA, passed away of a heart attack at her home in Redmond, WA on September 28, 2014.

Born in Marshalltown, Iowa, Shirlee was the second of five children born to Clara and Henry Hoganson. She met the love of her life, Benjamin Robert Jones, in Marshalltown, and they were married there on July 17, 1943. Shirlee and Bob moved to Southern California in 1950 with their two young daughters. After their son was born they settled in La Cañada, where they raised their family and where Shirlee was a full-time mother and active volunteer. Shirlee and Bob enjoyed many close friendships in the community and spent many weekends at their house at Lake Arrowhead with family and friends.

In 1975 after Bob's retirement, Shirlee and Bob moved to Pebble Beach. With her boundless energy and enthusiasm, Shirlee became a representative for Welcome Wagon. She began meeting local merchants, securing their sponsorship, and making calls on newcomers to the area. As a result of the friendships she made through those many house calls over the years, Shirlee organized dinner clubs, bridge groups, and social clubs, enhancing her circle of friends and introducing many newcomers into the social life of the community. Today the Peninsula Club is an active women's club that evolved from one of those early groups.

Shirlee and Bob loved to travel, and together they spent many happy years traveling with their trailer in the U.S. and Mexico. They also enjoyed many extended trips to Europe, where they would rent apartments and savor the local flavor, history and culture. After Bob's death in 1991, Shirlee enjoyed group travel to far-flung locations in Russia, China, Egypt, Israel, Australia, New Zealand and Peru. Shirlee will be remembered by many on the peninsula for the numerous bus trips she organized to visit the permanent collections and changing exhibitions at many museums in San Francisco and Southern California, as well as a more ambitious museum tour to Washington, D.C.

In the late 1980's, with Bob's encouragement, Shirlee began a successful career as a realtor on the Monterey peninsula, working for Fox & Carskaden, The Mitchell Group, Coldwell Banker, and Sotheby's International.

Shirlee's children and grandchildren loved visiting her in Pebble Beach, and in 1999 she began walking the 10.6 mile walk of the Big Sur Marathon with her family, a tradition she kept up through 2008. She laughed that she often came in as the first (due to her being the only) walker in her age category.

A member of the Carmel chapter of PEO, Shirlee served as an officer in her chapter, and over the course of many years hosted other PEO members from around the country for bed & breakfast at her home in order to raise funds for the organization's scholarship programs.

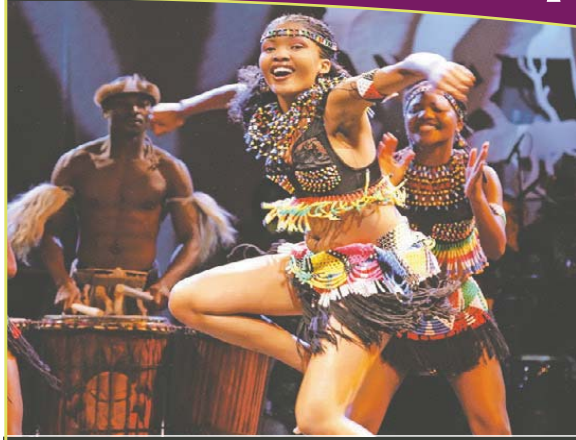

Shirlee was an active member for many years at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley, serving on the church Vestry and notably organizing and hosting many fund-raising events to support St. Dunstan's "Haiti Outreach" program. This program supports a large and still growing Episcopal day school and hot lunch program for pre-school through grade 13 students in the city of Hinche in central Haiti.

In 2009 Shirlee moved to the Park Lane in Monterey where she knew many other residents, and in 2012 she moved to Redmond, WA in order to be close to her children and grandchildren who live nearby. Shirlee is survived by her siblings Elaine Silverwise, George Hoganson, Delores Phelan and Roberta Mead; children Katherine Isaacson, Marilyn Schmitt and Calvin Jones; and grandchildren Rebecca Isaacson, Allison Schmitt, Robert Schmitt, Joscelyn Jones and Benjamin Jones. Her family members are grateful for the life of this wonderful woman who deeply touched each of their lives.

A funeral service and memorial reception for Shirlee will be held at St. Dunstan's Church in Carmel Valley on December 13, 2014 at 11:00 am. Those wishing to make a contribution in memory of Shirlee may write a check made out to St. Dunstan's Church, with "Haiti Fund/Shirlee Jones Memorial" on the memo line, and send it to the church at P.O. Box 101, Carmel Valley, CA 93924.

New legislation will help protect cultural sites, local tribe leaders say

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE PASSAGE last month of legislation providing greater protection for Native American cultural resources such as burial sites was celebrated by the descendants of indigenous people living in Monterey County.

Co-authored by Assemblyman Luis Alejo of Watsonville — and signed by Governor Jerry Brown Sept. 25 — AB 52 gives California tribes a greater say in how development projects will affect their cultural sites. They say the protection of those sites is essential to the effort of preserving their history.

"It's a powerful bill for indigenous people in this region," Tom Little Bear Nason of the Esselen Tribe of Monterey County told The Pine Cone. "It gives us a voice. It gives us strength."

Monterey County's Native Americans were nearly left out of the bill. An earlier version of it required developers and

Cellist honored at Sunset, local pianist remembered at Lovers Point

■ Rat Pack tribute at Golden State

By CHRIS COUNTS

PAYING TRIBUTE to a musician who was widely regarded as the greatest cellist of the first half of the 20th century, The Pablo Casals Prades Collective performs Saturday, Oct. 25, at Sunset Center. The event kicks off Chamber Music Monterey Bay's 48th season.

Famous for the Bach Cello Suites he recorded from 1936 to 1939, Pablo Casals was an outspoken opponent of the fascist regime in his native Spain. The cellist and conductor left Spain in 1939 and settled just across the border in the French town of Prades, where an enduring musical festival bearing his name was launched in 1950 and continues to this day.

The Pablo Casals Prades Collective features five of the festival's top soloists — Michel Lethiec on clarinet, Kyoko Takezawa and Elina Vähälä on violin, Nobuko Imai on viola, Arto Noras on cello, and Melvin Chen on piano.

"Michel, who is the artistic director of the festival, has put together a group of really high level musicians," said Dana Werdmuller, the executive director of Chamber Music Monterey Bay. "They're amazing international artists — the best of the best. This is the first time they've been gathered together for a U.S. tour. We're thrilled they're coming here."

The ensemble will play Milhaud's La Création du Monde; Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A Major, K. 531; Prokofiev's Overture on Hebrew Themes, and Faure's Piano Quartet No. 1 in C minor, Op. 15.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. A free pre-concert talk begins at 7 p.m. Tickets are $31 to $48 for general admission, and $15 for students and active military. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 625-2212.

■ Gone but not forgotten

Ten years after his mentor Jonathon Lee died, pianist Michael Martinez presents a free tribute concert Sunday, Oct. 26, at Lovers Point in Pacific Grove.

A Pacific Grove resident who battled diabetes throughout his life, Lee was an accomplished solo pianist and recording artist who performed an annual concert at Lovers Point during his last years.

After meeting the 13-year-old Martinez, he took the young pianist under his wing. Martinez played at the last of Lee's Lovers Point concerts in 2004, just a month before his mentor passed away in 2004 at 51.

"He taught me to play from the heart," Martinez told The Pine Cone. "I didn't absorb everything he passed on to me at once, but it sprouted a seed. I'm starting to extract everything I learned from Jonathon."

At Lovers Point, Martinez plans to present a mix of Lee's music, his own compositions and some popular songs. Now 24, he hopes the Lovers Point concert is the first in a series of annual concerts he plays in Lee's memory. For the past 10 years, the pianist has played at Bixby Bridge during the Big Sur International Marathon.

The concert starts at 2 p.m. Lovers Point is located at 17th and Ocean View.

■ Stars align in the valley

Five months after staging a musical tribute to the late jazz pianist Gene Harris in Monterey, pianist Robert Turner plays Friday, Oct. 24, at Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

A California native who has toured extensively in China and performed with the Shanghai Symphony Orchestra, Turner "sings with his fingers," said Kiki Wow, who is organizing the show.

"Robert is one of the greatest musicians I've had an opportunity to work with," Wow said. "When he's played here

Raffle raises money for art center, offers big bargains

By CHRIS COUNTS

KICKING OFF its biggest annual fundraising drive, the Pacific Grove Art Center unveils its 2014 Patrons Show Friday, Oct. 24.

For the price of raffle ticket — $50 for art center members and $75 for non-members — you are guaranteed to win an original piece of art because the number of tickets sold will match the number of pieces in the exhibit.

Ticket holders will gather Sunday, Dec. 7, at 2 p.m. for the drawing.

"The person whose ticket is drawn first will be able to choose a piece from all of the art in the gallery," reads the guidelines to the drawing. "The holder of the second ticket to be drawn then selects a piece, and so on. The drawing will proceed, and art will be selected until the last ticket is drawn. Ticket holders or their representatives must be present at the drawing."

The Patrons Show is just one of four exhibits opening Friday at the art center. The new shows include "Hidden in Sight: Growing Strong" by abstract painter Eve Breckenridge, "Out of My Office and In My Element" by photographer Robin Apple, and "Small Wonders: The Magic of Macro and Micro" by members of The Monterey Bay Metal Arts Guild.

Breckenridge's work displays her fearless and spontaneous approach to creativity.

"I try throwing paint, using squeegees, sponges and brushes," Breckenridge said. "Once I used a garden hose to remove unwanted paint on a canvas. I removed almost as much paint as I applied."

Apple's exhibit showcases her affection for the iPhone.

Hungry servant with two bosses brings lots of laughs to Circle Theatre

By CHRIS COUNTS

A SERVANT with an insatiable appetite hatches a scheme to double his wages — and his meals — in “The Servant of Two Masters,” which opens Friday, Oct. 24, at the Circle Theatre.

The production is the second installment in PacRep Theatre’s 25th annual Shakespeare Festival, which opened Oct. 4 with the preeminent playwright’s “The Winter’s Tale.”

Written by Carlo Goldoni, the 17th century Italian Renaissance commedia has been adapted by Constance Congdon.

“It’s incredibly funny,” director Ken Kelleher said. “It’s a nice balance to ‘The Winter’s Tale,’ which just closed. It has the same cast. There’s a lot of clowning and Marx Brothers and romance. None of it is serious. It’s a great treat.”

“The Servant of Two Masters” stars Cassidy J. Brown as the always-hungry “Truffaldino.” “Cassidy is a great comedian,” Kelleher explained. “He’s got a great sense of verbal wit, and he’s the master clown. He’s just superb.”

The cast also includes Scott McQuiston as “Pantalone,”

Juliet Heller as “Beatrice,” Sean Patrick Nill as “Florindo,” Katie Rose Krueger as “Smeraldina” and Sam Fife as “Silvio.”

The play will be presented Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through Nov. 9.

Tickets are $20 to $35 with discounts available for seniors, students, children, teachers and active military. The theater is located on Monte Verde between Eighth and Ninth. Call (831) 622-0100.

To help raise money for its many productions, PacRep Theatre presents its annual Monterey Bay HarvestFest Arts and Crafts Faire Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 25-26, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., at Custom House Plaza in Monterey.

Artists will display original paintings, sculpture, ceramics, textiles and jewelry, a variety of tasty treats will be served, and Jim Fucillo, who bills himself as a one-man-band, will play music.

■ New theater owners toast Rat Pack

In the first musical offering since escrow closed late last month on the Monterey Golden State Theater, its new owners Eric and Lori Lochtefeld present “A Toast to the Rat Pack,” Sunday, Oct. 26.

Bringing together music and comedy, the stage show recreates a Las Vegas performance by Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis, Jr., Dean Martin and Marilyn Monroe in the early 1960s. The cast includes Sebastian Anzaldo as Sinatra; Lambus F. Dean as Davis, Jr.; Andy DiMino as Martin; and Susan Griffiths as Monroe. Each bears a striking resemblance to the star he or she portrays.

“We look forward to bringing a whole slate of top entertainment to the Monterey Peninsula, including great theater, bands, lectures, children’s concerts and much more,” said Lori Lochtefeld. “We very much appreciate the support of the community as we add to our offerings in the coming months.”

The show begins at 2 p.m. Tickets are $49 to $66. The theater is located at 479 Alvarado St. Call (831) 649-1070.

Cibo offers Rat Pack feast

In tandem with the Golden State Theater event, Cibo Ristorante is offering a special “Rat Pack” dinner the same evening from 5 to 10 p.m. The dinners are priced at $24.95.

The first course includes Tuscan white bean soup or Insalata Della Casa (mixed baby field greens with balsamic vinaigrette).

Entrees feature Pollo Arrostito (roasted half free range chicken, creamy fontina polenta, roasted cauliflower ragout, pancetta and rosemary reduction), Fresh Grilled Salmon (brown butter and blood orange puree, farro risotto, wild mushrooms and Swiss chard), Rigatoni Di Giovanni (short pasta tubes, fresh tomato, sweet basil, garlic, extra virgin olive oil and imported ricotta) and House Made Lasagna (four cheese lasagna layered with a tomato meat sauce, béchamel and spinach).

Desserts include tiramisú, mascarpone layered with a hint of shaved chocolate, espresso and liquor-soaked savoiardi.

The restaurant is located at 301 Alvarado St. Call (831) 649-8151.

Performing at the family-friendly concert will be a brass quintet, a solo baroque harpsichord, a flute and harpsichord duet, and a small ensemble.

"The Bach Festival and the Oldemeyer Center have a 29-year partnership by virtue of our annual concert in July," explained Debbie Chinn, the Bach Festival's executive director. "Given the fact that the Seaside community has been so supportive of our work, we now wish to deepen our partnership by adding a second concert in the fall which we envision as a new tradition going forward. We believe it is crucial to provide exposure to young people who are increasingly unable to access classical music education at school."

Carmel's Opportunity

Tomorrow a majority of the voters of Carmel will render an important decision affecting the future of the town. Much will depend upon this first strictly municipal election.

A majority for incorporation will mean that the people of this community are willing and eager to take upon themselves the obligations and responsibilities of organized and efficient city government.

It will mean that hereafter this community will stand squarely and independently upon its own feet, depending upon no person or corporation for ordinary community requirements.

It will mean that the people themselves will take into their own hands the laying out of streets, the making of adequate provision for fire and police protection, the annexing of additional territory, and, best of all, the expenditure of their own tax money.

It will mean that this beauty spot will advance and thrive artistically and materially, maintaining always its cultural atmosphere. Not a single element of beauty will be sacrificed.

On the contrary, all our natural attractions and resources will be preserved and protected — which is not the case now.

This incorporation plan can be carried through if every true lover of Carmel will embrace the opportunity to vote tomorrow.

If you are in favor of incorporation, go to the polls.

The Other Side: Incorporation or Cooperation?

By Maude Lyons

The exclamation, "Improve our Streets!" is jolted out of us after we leave the highway on our road home. If the machine gets stalled a block away from the house, we are apt to add, "The fellow who won't improve his street ought to go to jail."

We tried hard to improve our street, but no one would help us. What we need now is something simpler than incorporation: the hearty cooperation of our citizens. Suppose we do save a lot of money that goes to the county for our roads, and win the right to repair our share of the county road ourselves, and to maintain two salaried officers in Carmel? Then, when we mention streets, the treasurer standing in front of an empty cash box that a year must pass before a city tax can be levied.

We want better streets and we want good sewerage more than we want a city treasurer and a city clerk. If the idea of cooperation takes root, even at this late hour, it might save us a lot of needless expense and effort.

Cooperation or Incorporation? It is up to the voters.

Water Supply Cleared in Spread of Infection

Carmel's water supply, in spite of the taste attributed to low water conditions, pipe cleaning operations and the presence of algae in the water, is not responsible for the spread of a stomach ailment reported to be common in town at the present time.

Dr. Dwight M. Bissell, of the Monterey County Health Department, yesterday emphasized that the ailment, a form of diarrhoea, is apparently spread from person to person; and also that Carmel water has been checked within the past two or three weeks and proven to be innocent of causing any such upsets.

The same ailment, caused by a virus upon which medical researchers are training their guns, is somewhat like influenza in the insidious manner in which it is spread, and is common at this time throughout the county and state, with many cases reported in epidemic in places as far apart as Imperial Valley and the Shasta dam site, Dr. Bissell said.

Dog Poisoner Walks! Two Cases Reported in Carmel This Week

Two cases of dog poisoning were reported to Carmel police this week as activities of a dog poisoner spread to this side of Carmel hill. Cases had previously been reported in Monterey. Neither dog died, although the poison was identified by veterinarians as arsenic. Frederick R. Bechdolt, former police commissioner, who lives on Viscaino, reported his dog sick, as did Jack Schwartz on Carpenter near Second. Both said their dogs never strayed from their yards.

Admiral Fisher Urges Council to Save Carmel

The blame for any development of Carmel which is distasteful to the residents was attributed emphatically, last night, to each and every citizen by Rear Admiral C. W. Fisher (USN Ret.) in a plea to the city council for courageous action to prevent further deterioration of the unique character of the community.

At the request of Mayor Herbert Blanks, Admiral Fisher, president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, opened the three-hour discussion meeting on seven requests made by the committee to the council. These dealt with controls of business development, new sources of revenue and annexation.

Admiral Fisher further stated, "We can do it if we will. Carmel is not helpless."

The council could enact new legislation and update existing laws to keep Carmel from becoming "a spiritual and aesthetic waste," Admiral Fisher declared, and would be supported by state and federal authority.

"I and 5,000 other people who live here don't want Carmel spoiled. Something should be done now before it is too late. If the community withers and dies, all property values die," he added.

Admiral Fisher emphasized "citizens are not fighting," and, therefore, the blame for any distasteful development is "my, ours and everybody's fault."

Officials Counting their Blessings after Quake

County officials marveled this week at the minor damage sustained on the peninsula as a result of the earthquake measuring 7.1 that rolled through the area at 5:04 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 17.

"There is negligible damage," said Bill Martin, county emergency services coordinator. "Carmel Valley has come away unscathed, which is miraculous."

North Monterey County was not so lucky, bearing the brunt of the damage, which is estimated between $50 million and $100 million, according to county officials.

"People on the peninsula have come to the rescue of people in North County," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, who pointed out that Martin did an admirable job even though he has only held his position since summer.

In all, officials put the toll at two deaths, 45 homes deemed not habitable and 14 homes that are livable but that have sustained major damage.

TRIBES

government agencies to only work with federally recognized tribes. This resulted in an outcry from some of the state's numerous unrecognized tribes, including the local Ohlone Costanoan Esselen Nation, which claims more than 600 members. The tribe is distinct from Nason's group.

According to the Judicial Council of California, there are 110 federally recognized tribes in the state and another 78 petitioning for recognition.

In the final version of the bill, language was inserted to require that developers and government agencies consult with unrecognized tribes as well. The tribal leader of the Ohlone Costanoan Esselen Nation, Louise Miranda Ramirez, lobbied for the inclusion of unrecognized tribes — and she welcomed the passage of AB 52.

"It's a beginning," said Ramirez, who hopes to see her tribe one day recognized by the federal government. "It's important to us. It shows that we are here."

The general counsel for Native American Heritage Commission, Terry Robinson called the passage of AB 52 "a sea change."

"Regardless whether a project requires an environmental impact report, a mitigated negative declaration or a negative declaration, the developer needs to contact all tribes in the area" affected by the project, Robinson said. "The tribe then has 30 days to respond and request a consultation."

The new legislation puts a greater burden on developers to show their projects don't disturb cultural sites.

Many current projects won't be effected by the legislation. The provisions of the bill "shall apply only to a project that has a notice of preparation or a notice of negative declaration or mitigated negative declaration filed on or after July 1, 2015," the bill reads.

Both Nason and Ramirez said a wealth of Native American cultural resources are endangered by development in Monterey County and they'd like to see more done to preserve them. "This area is so rich with cultural resources," Nason added.

In response to the passage of AB 52, the Monterey County sPlanning Department needs to update its zoning ordinances that pertain to the protection of archeological resources. It will host a stakeholder's meeting on the subject Wednesday, Oct. 29, in Asilomar Room of the county administration building at 168 W. Alisal St. in Salinas. The meeting starts at 10 a.m.

Beauty in the details

Margery Ammon presents demonstrations of her painting technique Saturday, Oct. 25, between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m., at Gallery Amsterdam.

The painter's work often captures the fading light as a washes over a landscape or seascape.

"I am fascinated by the flash and sparkle of light and dense, rich color," said Ammon, an Alamo resident whose travels in France have left a deep impression on her work. "I see beauty in the details as well as the vista."

The gallery is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. Call (831) 624-4355.

ronmental effects of pumping beyond the cutback deadline.

“In effect, we said if we get an extension of time under the [order],” Stoldt said, “we will commit to doing certain things [such as] continued mitigation on the river, continued outreach on conservation activities and outreach to non-Cal Am pumpers on the Carmel River.”

State water board staff — overwhelmed with work related to the state’s drought — didn’t respond to the April letter, telling local water officials that the earliest they could address the issue was the November meeting, which is not open to the public.

However, Burnett said the issue is getting “senior level attention” from the state water board.

“I really appreciate the level of attention it is receiving, particularly given the drought,” he said.

If the state water board plays hardball and rejects an extension, Stoldt said the water district would consider resurrecting a 2009 lawsuit it filed against the agency alleging that the order poses a health and safety risk to Peninsula residents.

“We would probably take a good hard look at reinstating the lawsuit,” Stoldt said. “But lawsuits take time, and we want to make sure we have sufficient time.”

Cal Am also filed suit against the state water board challenging the order. A judge later combined that lawsuit with the water district’s complaint.

The private water utility’s proposed desalination plant in Marina would provide enough water for Cal Am to stop taking the amount of water it’s allowed to legally divert. But that is intended to stifle free speech.

“You did not quote me,” Riley wrote. “You did not summarize my comments. You did not show evidence of the impact of my comments. You have not identified any permit or easement hearing that I even participated in.”

Another reason Riley said he raised questions is because Cal Am has not provided him with details of an operation in Europe that is successfully using slant wells.

“When I asked for specifics, none have been offered,” he said. “I have asked this question several times over the last two months, and still no answer. I want to find out if the Cal Am statement is true.”

Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Stedman responded to Riley’s letter, telling The Pine Cone that any action against him related to his “violation of the settlement would need to be decided upon in cooperation with the other 14 settling parties.”

“The wisdom of pursuing slant wells was agreed upon by the settling parties and there have been no change in circumstances since the settlement was signed that could legitimately effect this assessment,” Stedman said. “We hope Mr. Riley will demonstrate he has the integrity to live up to the commitments he made when he signed the settlement.”

project has faced several delays and isn’t expected to producing water until at least mid-2018.

A petition to extend the cutback deadline will be drafted sometime following a local public input period that’s set to begin in November, Burnett said. Other parties to the cutback order include the Sierra Club and the Carmel River Steelhead Association.

At the historic 2009 state water board meeting in Sacramento, members voted 3-1 for the cease and desist order. Board member Tam M. Doduc dissented, but not because she didn’t want Cal Am to be penalized, but because the cutback measure wasn’t harsh enough.

What about fun, friends, creativity, neighborliness, service, music, dancing, theater and art? To my way of thinking these are all important aspects of the core community character, as is a real joy and sense of good fortune to be able to live here.

Ian Martin is the newest member of the planning commission having been appointed a few months ago. Several privileges were taken away from the Barmel owner, Gabe Georis.

After making the "communing with nature" comment, Martin posed a threat when he said to Georis, "I hope that you grasp the level of scrutiny that you are under now." That approach is not a normal one by the planning commission. It seems Martin has a lot to learn about Carmel. Perhaps the commissions need members who are more familiar with our town.

The folly of salary surveys

Dear Editor,

Thank you for the Oct. 10 editorial which, among other fine points, discussed the effect of salary surveys as a major cause of out of control city salaries and pensions. No economist favors salaries based on surveys of surrounding cities, because it is an artificial salary escalator without regard to supply.

I note that Carmel, which has by far the largest city revenue per resident of any surrounding city, recently passed two tax increases to keep its city sound financially. Here in Pacific Grove, the council routinely grants salary increases based on surveys, and includes in the surveys the salaries and pensions paid by Carmel. That practice has put Pacific Grove in a severe financial bind;

To my knowledge, The Pine Cone is the first and only newspaper in the area that has commented on the runaway costs to governments that grant salaries (which increase pensions) based on the "entitlement" concept, that city employees are entitled to salaries and pensions equal to that of counterparts, regardless of the resources to pay for the increases and regardless of available less costly replacements.

Here in Pacific Grove, the city has about $77 million in pension debt and expends more than 20 percent of its annual revenues for direct pension expenses. It has fired more than 55 percent of its employees, yet costs have grown significantly, and services are in a severe deficit, except for the top staff. Yet, a large survey-based raise is included in the budget.

Carmel can continue its salary practice only for so long as its residents agree to tax increases.

A protest march to P.G. city hall?

Dear Editor,

Unless Pacific Grove voters wake up and vote out the council incumbents in the November 4, 2014 election, we can expect more deconstruction of our city's infrastructure orchestrated by the city manager and condoned by the 6-1 council majority.

The city manager has reduced the Community Development Department to a staff of interim planners, some of whom are here today and gone tomorrow in a revolving door policy. There is no institutional memory left. In addition to the department changing its name to the Community and Economic Department, we now have a new director from San Antonio, Texas, possibly to oversee unprecedented fast-tracking of development projects with administrative permit approvals rather than planning commission oversight. All of this may not be in the best interests of residents, who want to maintain the small town character and ambiance of Pacific Grove as we know it now.

Georgia Booth, a well known and widely respected educator in Pacific Grove, has spent many hours of her retirement years as a political watchdog at city council, planning commission and committee meetings.

On Oct. 1, during the council's public comment period, Booth asked the council not to renew the city manager's generous contract due to numerous legitimate concerns over mismanagement and lack of checks and balances at city hall. But the council did renew his contract without even discussing the city manager's performance on a 6-1 vote, with councilman Dan Miller voting No.

On Oct. 15, Booth again spoke during the public comment period telling the council that, if she could, she would cast her vote of "no confidence" for the current mayor, city manager and city attorney. Moreover, she told the council that she would not vote for any incumbents in the Nov. 4 election.

I appreciate the arduous research and time Booth has spent tracking council votes and city manager actions. I agree it is time for change! If what is happening under this current administration continues, perhaps there will be a time P.G. residents will be compelled to emulate Carmel-by-the-Sea and organize a protest march to city hall!

Measure A ignores children with disabilities

Dear Editor,

It is sad to see the restricted focus of the Pacific Grove Unified School District's Measure A. This measure (along with previous measures), ignores helping children with severe disabilities in PGUSD.

PGUSD has a very small number of these children, and PGUSD states that it does not have sufficient funds to address their. These children are typically referred to either the Monterey County Office of Education, or the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District. Both of these institutions do an excellent job supporting these children. Both have very small budgets. Other school districts work with MCOE to provide classrooms and resources.

Measure A is to provide funds with a very specific requirement that PGUSD follows when allocating the funds. Measure A does not allow for the funds to be spent on these children. In addition to these strict requirements, no resources of the PGUSD can be made available to other institutions, such as the MCOE.

The focus of other school districts is on the all students. PGUSD's Measure A ignores children with severe disabilities.

Bernal for sheriff

Dear Editor,

The strength of protection from the Monterey County Sheriff's office is leadership. Given the leadership problems of the incumbent, we need a new sheriff.

Steve Bernal has been endorsed by four former sheriffs, the Deputy Sheriff's Association and countless civic leaders.

He has the leadership to reunite the department, reduce crime and provide us with better protection.

It serves our common interest to vote for Steve Bernal for sheriff.

Gary Koepfel,
Carmel

Bernal unqualified

Dear Editor,

It appears that even the minimal requirements for a police sergeant in the City of Carmel would prevent sheriff's candidate Steve Bernal from applying for that position. Yet, he is running for the office of sheriff with absolutely no experience beyond that of an entry level patrolman. Perhaps the county should consider minimal qualifications for the office of sheriff to ensure that only qualified candidates apply. The tremendous responsibility that the office requires should have minimal requirements at the very least. Sheriff Miller meets and exceeds any required qualifications for his or any other law enforcement position and has demonstrated his ability to do so.

Monty Reitz, Pacific Grove

Retired chief endorses Miller

Dear Editor,

I became a police officer in 1974 and retired as a police chief in 2010. During those 36 years I held several titles between officer and chief, including corporal, sergeant, detective, lieutenant and commander. There is a reason for a progressive rank structure. Each step along the way a person develops the skills, knowledge and attributes each rank requires, and each promotion comes with a probationary period to prove you can handle the new responsibilities required of an increased level of leadership and command. In the current race for Monterey County Sheriff, voters are faced with a choice between an experienced and proven leader, Scott Miller, who rose through the ranks for more than 30 years, and a deputy sheriff who is asking us to trust he has leadership abilities that have never been tested or proven, to skip over the entire established rank structure, and select him to lead the largest law enforcement agency in the county without his having spent a day as a supervisor or manager. This is too important of a position to leave to chance.

I have known and worked with Miller for more than 30 years. During that time I have found him to be a man of integrity, tenacity, and honor. I am voting for this proven leader for sheriff of Monterey County.

Tony Sollecito, Pebble Beach

Dennis for park district

Dear Editor,

Voters in the 5th district of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District (Cachagua, Carmel Valley, Carmel, Big Sur and Carmel Highlands) have an important vote in this election. Voting for Steve Dennis is a vote for park access, opening up the parks so more people will have a chance to enjoy them. A vote for Steve is a vote for collaboration to work with other organizations based on Steve's broad experience of working with groups like the Monterey Bay Aquarium, the Point Lobos Foundation, the Big Sur Land Trust and the Elkhorn Slough Foundation.

A vote for Steve is about fiscal accountability, and strategic planning involving the community. A vote for Steve is about education where youth and adults gain important appreciation and knowledge about the environment.

Having been involved with parks in Monterey County for more than 20 years, I am excited about the possibility of working with someone as dedicated, knowledgeable and supportive of parks and the environment as Steve Dennis. Please check out his web site www.voteforstevedennis.com and see for yourself what an outstanding candidate Steve is and join me in voting for Steve Dennis Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District.

Joseph Hertlein, 5th District, Monterey County Parks Commissioner

Moss Landing desal solutions

Dear Editor,

The Oct. 17 Pine Cone had two thought-provoking articles that addressed Peninsula water issues but missed the target, which is: delivery of a sustainable water supply to the parched local ratepayers at a date certain, not some fanciful future date. If Dave Stoldt wants to "Go Blue" (conserve more) he should go to Southern California, where the Metropolitan Water District averages 541 gallons per person per day, while Santa Cruz is proud to announce 250 gallons per person per day.

Turning the screws locally to save another gallon is a waste of direction and effort. Turning to the mayors; Jason Burnett has made the hollow claim saying "I think we have made progress we haven't seen in a generation." Exactly what progress are you talking about, Mr. Mayor? The only matter of consequence achieved by the mayors' authority is a rate structure that subsidizes the business community by overcharging the residential ratepayers. It's called crony capitalism.

The "numerous water related agreements" he refers to are leading inexorably to painful rationing. I am in full agreement with Sand City Mayor David Pendergrass, who said, "I think we have come to the point where the mayors group should start packing its bags." I would further add that Burnett is not part of any solution, he is part of the problem. This confluence of municipalities needs a viable, scalable, desalination plant; municipally owned, and as soon as possible. There are but two desal projects from which to make a "go" decision. Both are located at Moss Landing, both can service a larger area than just the peninsula. There are cost savings in volume production. Both have manageable questions. One of them is already producing and selling a small amount of desalinated water. Fortunately this is not rocket science, but it does require decision makers who have consumer interests, not politics, first and foremost. Who wants to step forward?

Fontaine.

"They asked if someone could bring [Samantha] to her" at Fontaine's home, Brookhouser told The Pine Cone, "and I was the lucky one to drive out there and bring her the dog."

Pfeiffer said Fontaine's pets always came first in her life. "Joan was not afraid of dying as she believed she would be reunited with all of her beloved pets that passed before her," she said.

Fine art, jewelry, a house and more

Christie's will offer 104 lots of Fontaine's fine art, silver, lighting, furniture and jewelry in four auctions in New York and Hong Kong. The sales are expected to generate more than $1 million for the SPCA.

The bigger ticket items include Chagall's gouache and pastel on paper, "Vase de fleurs dans la fenetre," expected to bring $400,000 to $600,000; Lin Fengmian's "Chrysanthemums in a Vase," an ink and color on paper piece Christie's believes will sell for between $200,000 to $250,000; and Fontaine's "Suspicion" Academy Award, which could be worth as much as $300,000. Other items slated to be sold include turquoise and cultured pearl jewelry by Van Cleef & Arpels, a French bureau from the late 19th or early 20th century and a script from the 1940 film "Rebecca."

The 4-bedroom, 4.5-bathroom home in the Carmel Highlands Fontaine called home for 30 years, named Villa Fontana, is listed by Sotheby's International Realty agent Noel Beutel for $2.6 million.

"All of the proceeds will go to the SPCA," Beutel told The Pine Cone.

The 4,300-square-foot house, with panoramic views of the Pacific Ocean, sits on about three acres of "spectacular privacy" and has "incredible rose gardens and grounds," according to Beutel.

Brookhouser said the proceeds from the sales will help fund improvements to the organization's Animal Care and Adoption Center, so "animals rescued by the SPCA receive the best standard of care possible before they find their new homes."

"This gift from Joan Fontaine speaks volumes on how much she cared for animals and for the three dogs she adopted from the SPCA," Brookhouser said.

The SPCA for Monterey County, which is independently funded, has received several generous bequeathments through the years, including $7.8 million from Rosemary Benning, which was used for the renovation of the rescue group's facility off Highway 68.

A photo from the Christie's auction catalogue shows Joan Fontaine with the Oscar she won in 1941 for "Suspicion." The statue is one of her personal effects that will be auctioned later this year.

the county DA's office in 2002 but left in June 2006 to pursue a career as a police officer. In 2007, though, he returned to the DA's office and was promoted to the position of deputy district attorney IV one year later. Like Pacioni, he's handled many types of criminal cases, including sexual assault and gang crimes.

In 2013, Mazariegos was the lead prosecutor in Operation Snake Eyes, a multi-agency law enforcement effort in Monterey County to combat "street terrorism" by the Norteño street gang. The case resulted in the convictions of 20 gang members.

In 2005, he also prosecuted David Guzman, a Los Angeles police officer who was under the influence of alcohol when he crashed his 20-foot boat into a Jet Ski being driven by 19-year-old Jason Penalba, who suffered a broken pelvis and other serious injuries. Guzman, who fled the scene to avoid arrest, was later arrested, charged and convicted. He was sentenced to five years in prison for the crime.

In 2012, Mazariegos prosecuted David Burgos, the Greenfield man who murdered his girlfriend's 10-month-old son. Burgos was convicted and sentenced to 37 years to life in prison.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF DOMINGA T. LEDESMA, Case Number MP 21692

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of DOMINGA T. LEDESMA.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by FRANK LEDESMA, JR and MARY D. VASQUEZ in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

The Petition for Probate requests that FRANK LEDESMA, JR and MARY D. VASQUEZ be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:
Date: January 7, 2015
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept.: 16
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

for the disabled could be put in the orchestra pit instead. Wasney's plan to make the venue accessible to handicapped patrons would cost $493,215, more than a third of the entire budget. Councilmen Steve Dallas and Ken Talmage supported Beach's idea.

The architect's team will work on determining whether Beach's idea is doable and will report its findings to the council at a special meeting Wednesday, Oct. 29, 4 p.m. at city hall.

Although Mayor Jason Burnett questioned the need for second-guessing the Wasney's design, he said, given the importance of the project, looking into the orchestra pit option was worth doing.

"We wanted an assessment whether the orchestra pit option was viable," Burnett told The Pine Cone Wednesday. "If [the architects] say it's not viable, we don't need to see a design. If the answer is viable, presumably we would pursue that design."

Theirs' belief, though, was that putting off approval of the design for another week could delay the project — which is already behind schedule — even more. As is, the construction on the project isn't slated to conclude until June, about a month after the theater's season begins.

The so-called "triage phase," as Wasney defined it, would significantly improve the aging theater but would not bring it up to full compliance with building codes or the ADA. The plan involves a "light touch" instead a more involved renovation that would be undertaken in a master plan phase. Also included in the triage phase are fixing structural hazards, installing guardrails, upgrading the venue's electrical system, installing aisle lighting, putting in emergency backup power, providing exit signage, new lighting towers and a host of other changes.

"There is a project that could bring this up to code and make it the best," Wasney said. "That is not what we are here to look at tonight."

However, he said the bones of the Forest Theater are in pretty good shape.

"Surprisingly, these buildings are not bad structurally," Wasney said.

While audience members and others had numerous questions including the design of the driveway, parking and lighting concerns and access to the hillside for actors during performances, the plan was generally well received — even getting applause from the attendees. Most of the concerns, Burnett said, can be resolved.

"I think it was a huge step forward," he said of the meeting. "Although we didn't reach final agreement, there seemed to be broad consensus on all aspects of the plan, with one significant question" outstanding. But after we get that question answered, I think we will be able to move forward with construction. And that is a major accomplishment given the long history of debating the Forest Theater without reaching conclusions."

Ask IS IN-SHAPE

Endless Summer and Running Against the Wind.

DEAR IN-SHAPE: Fall is right around the corner, and so are pants and long skirts. However today the California sun is still shining and I continue to be self-conscious about my cellulite. Even if it's covered I still know it's there, and what about the holiday party season? How can I reduce my cellulite?

-AUBREY, 21, MONTEREY

DEAR AUBREY: You are not alone. Most women have some cellulite. The good news is cellulite isn't harmful. It doesn't mean you're overweight, and even thin woman can have it. Cellulite is simply fat pushing against the connective tissue causing it to pucker. So why don't you see it on men as often as women? Women just have a different skin structure.

So how do you fight nature? First, try dry brushing. Dry brushing helps to open up the pores, stimulate blood flow, increase cell renewal, and promote tighter skin. The best brushes are natural and somewhat stiff. Always brush towards your heart using long sweeping motions. Brush gently to stimulate the blood and oxygen in the skin without irritating it. Try brushing twice daily for the best results.

Second, try a coffee based scrub. The massage and exfoliation helps the skin by stimulating blood flow and the caffeine in coffee has a tightening effect. You can make the scrub at home using ¼ cup of ground coffee, 3 tablespoons of brown sugar and 3 tablespoons of melted coconut oil. Simply massage it onto the problem areas of your body using firm pressure a few times a week.

Finally, and most importantly, make sure to drink plenty of water, eat a balanced diet, and exercise regularly. In-Shape: Carmel offers a wide variety of group exercise classes as well as a cardio, free weight and functional training zones to help you reach all of your fitness goals.

DEAR IN-SHAPE: I'm new to running and have decided to train for my first ever half marathon! I was wondering if you had some helpful advice and tips on how to better prepare for my race.

-JEFFREY, 27, SANTA CRUZ

DEAR JEFFREY: The first thing you should do is purchase a good pair of shoes. Just because a shoe is "cool" or on sale doesn't mean it's the best shoe for you. A good running store will have you try on several different pairs of shoes, and watch you as you jog a bit to make sure you select a pair of shoes that is made for your foot shape and gait. The right shoe will enhance your training, and prevent injuries down the road.

Start with small distances then work your way up to those extra miles. Try making a 5k your first goal and use a running app to help you along the way. There are many different running apps for both Android and iPhones that include training plans suitable to the type of running that you would like to do. For example, "RunKeeper" allows you to put in your race date and choose your running style then helps you get ready for the big day.

Form is very important. Try the "hip-to-hip" technique when running. With your hands in a slightly open position start with your left leg is in front of you. At this point your right hand should be almost touching your jaw, and your left hand should be at your hip. The opposite should be true when your right leg is in front. This will help oxygenate your blood more efficiently which will lower your chance of getting muscle cramps.

Doing lots of cardio training can cause your body to burn muscle as well as fat. Make sure to spend a few days a week lifting weights and/or doing functional training using bosu and medicine balls or kettlebells to keep your muscle tone up. Try a state-of-the-art fitness center like In-Shape: Carmel, they have everything you need to help you with your strength training, and treadmills to keep you on schedule even during bad weather.

STRONGER THAN EVER.

Editorial

The truth about civil trials

LAST WEEK, a jury of Monterey County citizens decided Toyota owed Chelsie Hill $12.5 million because she was paralyzed when a drunk driver crashed one of the company's vehicles into a tree.

Of course, we wish Chelsie the best, and are as happy as anybody that she won't have to worry about money the rest of her life. This editorial isn't about her, or whether she "deserves" the money she'll be getting from Toyota. It's about the civil court system, and how its purpose has devolved from making sure restitution is paid when somebody seriously damages someone else, to redistributing wealth from people and companies who have money to people who don't — regardless of actual fault.

In Hill's case, of course Toyota didn't throw the party where the teenage driver got loaded, or put the alcohol in his hand, or influence him in any way to drink it. Neither did it have anything to do with his decision to get behind the wheel, or Hill's decision to be his passenger and sit in the middle of the back seat. It wasn't responsible for the bad weather that night, the condition of the road or the presence of the tree. All it did was make the car (14 years before the accident), without providing a shoulder belt in the middle of the rear seat — something it was not required to do at the time, and which almost no other car maker was doing, either.

Obviously, to say that Toyota had some legal obligation to provide every person who rode in the rear middle seat of a 1996 4Runner with a shoulder belt would be to stretch logic, if not credulity. Many vehicles on the road still don't have shoulder belts at every seat, and nobody is calling for them all to be retrofitted. Millions of people are also taxiing around airport runways in modern airplanes without the benefit of shoulder belts, and nobody even suggests they should all have them. Thus, the imminent danger from wearing just a lap belt in a moving vehicle isn't commonly recognized now, and certainly wasn't in 1996. Therefore, Toyota could not be expected to foresee, was not responsible to prevent, didn't cause, and should not be held responsible for Hill's injuries.

Instead, the accident that paralyzed Hill was just that — an accident — and its cause was the same as that of most accidents: driver error.

However, the driver of Hill's car didn't have any money, and his insurance company's liability was limited by the terms of his policy, which meant that nobody actually involved in the accident was available to provide the money Hill needs to live the rest of her life in something approaching security and comfort. Thus, even as she forgave the driver, she blamed Toyota, not because it was at fault, but because it has lots and lots of money — and when she did that, she did exactly what California law encourages her to do, and which only the most heartless juror would try to prevent.

It's a scenario constantly repeated in this nation's courtrooms: A rich person or company is forced to pay for someone's injuries, not because they're responsible, but because they're available.

Is that justice? No. But it's convenient, and easy, and satisfies the emotions of the public. Unfortunately, the process also erodes the concept that an individual is responsible for his own actions, perpetuates the myth that even the best corporations are the source of evil, and debases the very principles upon which this nation was founded.

Chelsie Hill can now plan the rest of her life with some certainty, and the courthouse can get ready to go through the same sorry process again and again of blaming someone for something they didn't do.

These days, that's what it's there for.

More must go Dear Editor,

In 1985, Doug Schmitz hired me. When he left for Lake Oswego he called me and asked if I wanted to join him there as building official. I was flattered and honored by his request but, I just couldn't leave Carmel as it had become home, not just a job.

I have been quiet for two years during the nasty upheaval and crooked dealings of the Stilwell administration. But no more.

Schmitz has what it takes to correct the wrongs and, if he uses the recourses available to him, we will see a return to civility, service and fairness ... I have confidence in that.

More Stilwell people have to leave: Sharon Freidrickson, Deanna Allen and Rob Mullane are a few ... they are part of the problems and Schmitz cannot allow them to remain, because they will undermine his progress at every turn.

When I retired in 2007 I left the community with people that provided great service, and who were fair and civil. What is there now is still cancerous and must be cut out.

Those that disagree with me may not be as exposed or experienced with dealings in city hall, either in planning and building or administration. So, to those I say, "be patient and watch!"

So much has to be revamped and changed. It is a daunting task and will take time to undo all the evil set forth by the Stilwell clan, but I think my friend Doug is the man for it.

Jason Burnet and his council have finally awakened to what has been a bad dream, thank God. Now, stay the course and do what is right for this community.

I may be retired, but I haven't totally left. My heart is still within the city system.

Tim Meroney, Retired building official/police officer, Carmel

Not the town I know Dear Editor:

Good grief! When reading Mary Schley's interesting article on Barmel (Oct. 17), I was amazed at Ian Martin's description of what the core community character of Carmel is supposed to be. I have lived here off and on since 1943 and I never knew that Carmel should be "a place where people commune with nature, have deep thoughts, work on their manuscripts, a place of quiet contemplation."

I fully endorse the random goofball on the ballot

News item: Iconic civil rights leader Dolores Huerta withdraws her endorsement of Monterey County Sheriff's candidate Steve Bernal, announces she is now supporting incumbent Sheriff Scott Miller.

I TAKE great pride in announcing that I am endorsing Steve Bernal in his valiant campaign for Monterey County Sheriff.

This is an endorsement I don't take lightly. It comes after great deliberation, with the same sort of deep and thoughtful analysis that readers have come to expect from an average Charles Krauthammer column.

Deep.

Probing.

And without the slightest idea of what I'm talking about.

My clear-eyed and deliberative endorsement of Steve Bernal comes only after I received a call from one of Steve Bernal's campaign operatives. He seemed like the sort of sober and thoughtful campaign operative you might have met on a Willie Stark campaign. Or in the Huey Long administration.

Sober.

Deliberative.

And without a shred of common decency.

Anyway, Steve Bernal's campaign operative delivered quite a sales pitch. It turns out that Steve Bernal is not the clueless clodhopper you might have expected. According to the campaign operative, Steve Bernal is one hell of a good guy with a lot of great ideas.

I especially like the fact that he's never taken any advanced training to improve his performance during his entire career with the Sheriff's Department and that he has never advanced beyond his position as a deputy during his 15 years with the department.

If nothing else, his lack of professional training indicates the sort of ambition we are looking for in the simple person we expect to lead a department with incredibly complex staffing and policy issues.

Simple.

Free of ambition.

And without the slightest clue of what is really involved in running a department.

More important, the campaign operative told me that the incumbent sheriff is a scoundrel who doesn't believe in lollipops and rainbows. Steve Bernal believes in lollipops and rainbows, and he has created a 16-year strategy that will ensure that our children and our children's children can continue to dream of a future with lollipops and rainbows.

It's important to know that our elected representatives believe in something, especially when the elected representative is in charge of a department filled with people who carry service revolvers and the authority that comes with wearing a badge.

It's also important that an elected representative surround himself with the best and the brightest. No one person could possibly manage a massive law-enforcement agency without the help of able and thoughtful managers and assistants.

The same is true of a big countywide election campaign, which is why Steve Bernal has employed the best campaign staff his in-laws' money can buy.

If the Steve Bernal campaign has proven anything, it's that Steve Bernal can surround himself with skilled and ethical administrators who will stop at nothing to get the job done.

Skilled.

Ethical.

And without shame.

In fact, it's comforting to know that a guy like Steve Bernal has been patrolling the backwoods of Monterey County with his service revolver and the badge of authority for more than a dozen years. That fact alone should make all citizens feel so much safer.

And because my endorsement of Steve Bernal comes after full examination of his qualifications, I hereby grant his campaign full permission to extract appropriate passages from beyond the realm

By JOE LIVERNOIS

this column for his campaign literature.

I suggest they start with the best that can be said about him:

"Steve Bernal is not the clueless clodhopper you might have expected."

If it worked for Jeff Denham, it can work for Steve Bernal.

Editor's note: After delivery of this column and due to recent revelations, The Joe Livernois Column has issued the following written statement, which is being reprinted in its entirety:

"I have been informed that statements made by Steve Bernal's campaign operative about 'lollipops and rainbows' are entirely untrue.

"As a result, I hereby retract my endorsement of Steve Bernal and I respectfully ask that Steve Bernal's campaign refrain from using any portion of this column to further his career in law enforcement.

"In fact, I have learned that the Steve Bernal campaign is so wretched that I would be more inclined to support an old stump than Steve Bernal.

"In the future, I pledge to be better informed about candidates and their issues before I blurt out an endorsement for some random goofball that might later embarrass me and ruin my credibility."

Informed.

Issues.

Got that, Dolores Huerta?

Eat the apple, my pretty!

IT WAS a dark and stormy night. Okay, I lied. Actually it was one of the hottest Halloweens on record that autumn. First year in our first house in a metropolis far, far away (whose initials are L.A.), long before we moved to paradise (whose initials are Carmel).

My wife didn't want to get off on the wrong foot giving the neighborhood children cavities, so instead of candy, she bought a lug of red delicious apples. In keeping with the spirit of Halloween, we both wore costumes. Mary dressed up as a wicked witch, and I was Dracula complete with black cape, patent leather hair and wax fangs

The first trick-or-treater to arrive at our door was a pint-sized Darth Vader. I held out the bowl of apples to him. He didn't move. "Go ahead," I urged. "Take a nice apple."

He looked up at me. "Don't you got any candy?"

"These are better than candy," I said. "Take one."

"No way," he said. "I ain't eatin' that crap!"

We were off to a magnificent start.

The doorbell rang again and this time Mary insisted on answering. Apparently she thought her apple-pushing charms were better than mine. I stood beside her holding the bowl. My wife held out an apple to a little girl dressed as Tinker Bell whose mother watched from a distance down the walkway. The child looked at my wife, turned and fled down the front steps crying, "Mommy! Mommy! The wicked witch tried to make me eat a poison apple!"

"Great," I said closing the door. "Looks like we'll be eating apples 'til next Halloween."

The doorbell rang again. I opened it and recognized the adorable little daughter of friends from down the block, a frequent visitor to our home. Rampant red curls gave her away despite the sparkly fairy costume and magic wand.

I pretended not to recognize her.

"My, what a pretty fairy you are," I said, buttering her up for the kill. "Fairies love apples, you know." I held one out. She shook her curls. "Go ahead, sweetheart," I said.

"I'm not allowed to take anything that's not in a wrapper."

"It's okay," I said. "It's me, Uncle Larry." I took a bite of apple to demonstrate its goodness. My wax fangs snapped in two.

"You're not Uncle Larry! You're a monster!" she cried turning and sprinting for home.

I turned to my wife, desperate. "Don't we have any candy at all?"

"Just the leftover creams in that box of Godivas that nobody ate last Christmas."

Our doorbell was silent while other houses on the block were mobbed. I overheard one kid on the street tell another, "Don't go to that house. All they have are crappy apples!"

I closed the door. My costume was giving me heat rash. "I'm done," I told my wife.

Just then the doorbell rang again, raising my hopes. I opened it to the largest trick-or-treater of the night. Over six feet tall, a human hulk. Despite the heat he wore a long, black woolen overcoat and a black felt fedora. "Great costume," I said. "You look exactly like Henny Youngman."

"Larry," he smiled, holding out his arms. "It's me, Henny! I just got in from New York."

I ushered him in and offered to take his coat and hat. "You must be dying of heat in all that heavy wool."

"I'd rather keep it on," he said. "You can't trust the weather in Los Angeles."

"You want an apple, Henny?"

"No thanks," he said. "I never eat apples unless they're in a strudel."

"Kids don't want them either," I told him.

When the doorbell rang again, Henny said, "Let me get it."

He always thought he could do anything better than anybody else. Taking the bowl from me he opened the door to a bunch of sugar-crazed 5-year-olds. I'm not making this up — Henny Youngman said to them, "Good evening, ladies and germs. Take my apples, please."

The next year Mary and I were invited to an adult Halloween party. We were trying to decide on our costumes. As a joke I put on my black overcoat. "How 'bout I go as Henny Youngman?"

She said, "Not bad. But you need a hat."

I bought a black topper at a thrift shop, but I still didn't resemble Henny. My wife said, "In that outfit you look like an orthodox rabbi."

So we pinned on a couple of long sideburn ringlets for payos and I was set.

At the party we divided up into small groups for a scavenger hunt. We had to follow clues all over L.A. which led ultimately to a phone number. The first team to phone the number won the prize. My group included a sultan, a fortune teller, and a former Playboy bunny who was still able to squeeze into her old bunny costume, though she was threatening to pop out of it at any moment.

We broke off into pairs to cover more ground. I got teamed up with the bunny. One clue sent us to Canter's Jewish Delicatessen for the price of lox. The place was jammed with customers.

In my orthodox rabbi outfit, with Miss September on my arm in her barely-there bunny getup, I walked up to the deli counter. Suddenly the restaurant was so quiet you could have heard a matzo ball drop.

The counterman stared at the bunny's assets. Then he looked at me, and then bunny, and back to me. So I said to him, "In case you were wondering, she's strictly kosher."

Being on the sidelines isn't all that bad. Just ask Chuck Krpata!

PHYSICAL THERAPIST Chuck Krpata has spent plenty of time on the sidelines of San Francisco 49ers' games — as head athletic trainer. His passion for sports was born when his dad took him to watch the New York Giants play baseball at the Polo Grounds. Krpata has passed on his lifelong love of the team to his children and grandchildren.

Krpata loved playing sports while growing up on Long Island (you can still hear a bit of that accent in his voice). While in high school, he had to have knee surgery and became interested in physical therapy and athletic training during his recovery. He followed his interests and earned his bachelor's degree in physical education from Utah State University in 1968. While completing his undergraduate education, he met and married his wife, Brenda, who was studying to become a registered dietician. In 1970, he earned a master's degree in physical therapy from USC, where he also worked part-time as an assistant athletic trainer.

A job offer at Stanford was too good to resist, so the Krpatas moved north and Chuck became the physical therapist and athletic trainer for the university. Then, as he put it, "one thing led to another," and he was offered a job helping out the 49ers on game days. Lest anyone think that pro football in 1970 was as lucrative as it is today, Krpata said that he worked from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on game days for the princely sum of $25. It was worth it — a year later he was a full-time assistant athletic trainer for the team and, by 1974, he'd been promoted to head athletic trainer. The team won three division championships during his tenure, which lasted until 1977 when he left to open his own practice in Cupertino.

Krpata loved his work with the 49ers. "The euphoria of being on the sidelines during game day was great," he said.

So why leave? Family. Krpata said he realized after seven years in professional sports that he was missing too much of his kids' childhoods, and decided to open a practice in Cupertino so he could spend more time at home. Then, in 1998, he closed that office and moved here. He thought his experience and training were a great fit for what he called a "hands-on" practice. His certifications in golf biomechanics helped many golfers take their games to the next level.

Two years ago, Krpata sold his business, but stayed on as a physical therapist. Next week, he's retiring after 44 years of helping people reclaim their quality of life after an injury or surgery. When asked how many patients he's seen, he said that his practice here handled 13,000 patient visits per year.

"We let great service and results be our advertising," he said.

Another secret to his success was treating patients with dignity, he added. Having an excellent staff hasn't hurt, either.

As for him and Brenda, they've been married 49 years. They're one of those rare couples who successfully shared both romance and work. She was the administrator for Krpata Physical Therapy.

Krpata said he chose to retire because he's waiting a kidney transplant, but he doesn't want anyone to feel sorry for him.

Great Lives

By ELAINE HESSER

"I was in a great profession," he said, "I hope we provided a great level of care to the people and I know the group there will continue to provide that level of service."

Future plans include spending more time with the grandkids — and continuing to cheer on the Giants and the 49ers.

ROBERT (BOB) JOHN MEYER 1946-2014

Robert (Bob) John Meyer was the son of Janice Bates Meyer and Captain Edger Robert Meyer. He was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts January 17, 1946. Bob was fortunate to have lived in several places growing up, since his father was a Navy Career man. His teen years were spent in beautiful Carmel Valley, where he graduated from Carmel High in 1964. Throughout high school Bob was always tinkering with cars and how to make them faster and louder. Bob and his high-school sweetheart Nancy Roberts would purchase vehicles, fix them up, sell them and go on to another car. He was so talented, he could fix anything. His favorite car was his blue Studebaker. On several occasions a group of friends would have races going down to Big Sur during the weekends. Crazy, you bet, but that was the "Good Ol' Days." On one occasion Bob and Nancy drove with their bird Alvin in their 1949 Chevy, back east with no wind-shield wipers in one of the worst storms in 50 years. They covered the "chevy" in multi-colored dots all over the inside, to stay awake while driving. When Bob graduated from Carmel High in 1964, he worked at Lugo's Gas Station. He then took a job at MPC where he worked in the Electronics Division. He would repair any and all items that came across his desk. Bob and Nancy soon married and had a son Ryan Robert Meyer. Bob would take Ryan all over the place in his V.W. Bus. Those were the days when your child could stand up and help dad drive, which he did and long hair was in style, which they both had. Bob designed and built his own sound system room out in his garage. This is where he designed and built several sound systems for local bands, and Tower of Power. Soon Bob would take a job in Washington, working for Boeing. He was there for several years before retiring. After retiring he would come down and repair tools and machinery for his son's hardwood flooring business. Bob was a very giving person. He would frequently help his sister Anne when she was going through rough times.

Bob's father passed away in 2005. He leaves behind his mother, Janice Meyer, his son, Ryan Meyer, grandchildren, Kaylee and Jason Meyer, two sisters, Karen Pemberton (Sam Pemberton), Anne Meyer (Marv McCleary), several nieces and nephews and his extended family Nancy and her children.

Bob passed away July 23, 2014. A Celebration of Bob's Life will be held on October 25th at the home of Nancy & Tim, 8594 Carmel Valley Road, at 1:00 pm. Please RSVP to (831) 624-4038 or rhwfwoodfloorsinc@yahoo.com.

The Carmel Pine Cone

TRUSTED BY LOCALS AND LOVED BY VISITORS SINCE 1915

Here's what our readers are saying —

- "I would like to express my appreciation for the consistently scrupulous and noteworthy editorial standards I have been privileged to enjoy while reading The Pine Cone for the past several years. Succinct, ethical, and straightforward journalism at the local level is a thing to be celebrated in an age wherein a responsible and effective editorial hand seems to have been dismissed as an encumbrance in countless newspapers (online and otherwise) across the multimedia spectrum. One often gets the sense that editors no longer care about the quality of their copy, and are almost cavalier about offering us articles rife with poor spelling, grammar, and outright unethical reportage. It is indeed a sad and condescending state of affairs. Therefore, how refreshing it is to see the reliable excellence of The Pine Cone stand as a superior, small-town counterpoint to such disturbing decline as evidenced by the blatant ineptitude of so many subpar contributors in our national news outlets. Again, I would like to thank you and the entire Pine Cone staff for such perennially diligent work and attention to detail. It is a pleasure to behold, a most valuable contribution to our community, and I am only too happy to actively seek-out and support your advertisers with my business whenever possible. Keep up the fine work!"
- "I want to thank you for providing our community with a real local newspaper. While I may not always agree with all of the content, I do always enjoy reading The Pine Cone. Thanks again for keeping our 'news' small town."
- "I have nothing to offer as far as advice except to tell you I can't wait until Friday to read The Pine Cone, and I can't wait to read your editorials! The Pine Cone is 'must read.' I especially enjoy the food/wine section, but virtually every thing you report is greatly valued by me, a life long Carmel/Carmel Valley resident! Great work! Please keep doing what you are doing."
- "As a former editor of many years, with a few as a publisher/editor, I always like to let a colleague know how much I enjoy their publication, if it is worthy of such enjoyment. Yours is."
- "I appreciate your paper and the online format you have that let's me browse Carmel from Sonoma where I live. I always enjoy reading The Pine Cone with my morning coffee when I'm in Carmel, and you've done such a great job with the online format that I can smell the ocean from the Sonoma town square on Friday mornings when I open my email from The Pine Cone."
- "Just a note to tell you how much I enjoy The Pine Cone. Carmel is fortunate to have such a fine paper serving the community. We spend a couple of months in Carmel each year. Of course, we always pick up a copy of the paper. But we read it cover to cover throughout the year. It is so wonderful to be able to keep up with the community we love so much. Please keep up the good work."
- "You have the best paper on the Monterey Peninsula. I read the 'real' news in The Pine Cone and your Real Estate Section is No. 1. You have a true local paper."
- "I just wanted to say thank you for sending me The Pine Cone every week! I am returning to Carmel soon and can't wait to actually have the actual paper in my hands. The Pine Cone has been such a welcome gift every week while I have been away these past few years."
- "I love your newspaper and await it eagerly weekly! It is the highlight of my week Thursdays at 9 p.m. when The Pine Cone 'ding' hits my iPad."
- "Thank you for your devotion to your community. You will never know how much The Pine Cone has meant to me. Oh, how I look forward to it every week."
- "I always look forward to Fridays when The Pine Cone comes out. The articles are so well written, you are not afraid of controversy, and the calendar items give enough time to make plans. But my new favorite item is the Police Log cartoon. I laugh out loud pretty much every time I see it and go back for one last laugh before I recycle. Words can't describe what the art can do — it's remarkable."
- "When I turn on the computer on Friday mornings or the weekend and see The Pine Cone, I smile."
- "I get The Pine Cone every week and enjoy it more than you can know. What a wonderful paper you have. I read every word!"
- "I just wanted to let you know how truly outstanding The Pine Cone is. The writing equals, if not exceeds, top-notch national papers. You and your staff should be proud. I know I've told you before how great I think The Pine Cone is, but it really is a terrific paper."
- "Thank you for providing balanced and researched reporting and upbeat articles. I hope we have The Pine Cone around for many years to come. If it gets down to it, I would pay for the subscription to keep the paper viable."
- "We poll our ticket-buyers as to where they hear about our concerts. You might be surprised to learn how many of them mention The Pine Cone. Thanks!"
- "Thanks for the consistently great job you do with your newspaper. I regularly read several newspapers from around the country and yours has the best editorial integrity — bar none. Keep up the good work!"
- "I look forward to The Pine Cone more than you will ever know."
- "The Pine Cone used to be my Friday morning habit, and now it's my Thursday night habit. I also love the fact I can get the entire paper online when I'm out of town."

Peter Coyote headlines Cherry Center's 'Fat Apple' celebration

YOU MAY not have noticed it on a quiet corner at Fourth and Guadalupe, but the Carl Cherry Center plays an important role in maintaining Carmel's tradition of being a community of artists and bohemians.

During the village's early years there were few formal settings that could host artistic endeavors. Residents' living rooms often doubled as galleries or informal stages for dramas. The center's founder, Jean D'Orge, was a free-spirited, non-conformist who often appeared on the streets wearing a big pink hat, ankle length Chinese robes and paint-stained tennis shoes.

In 1930 she married Carl Cherry, who at that time was in charge of the lighting at the Forest Theater. The couple received a two-story Victorian house on the corner of Guadalupe and Fourth as a wedding present from Cherry's mother. Carpenters installed skylights so Jeanne, a budding painter, could have a studio.

The studio also served as a workshop for Cherry's inventions. Early Carmelites considered him to be a dilettante of America by sponsoring experimental fine arts, sciences and education."

That purpose has continued from the center's founding to this day. It has expanded into a multi-purpose establishment. The stage in the 50-seat theater practically places actors in the laps of the theater goers. The gallery is light and airy, providing exhibit space for local and national painters, sculptors, and photographers. The current exhibit running through November 10 is "The World According to Barbara Spring." Spring, a Big Sur artist, is one of the pioneers of wood sculpture and installation art, which is an artistic genre of three-dimensional works that are often site-specific and designed to transform the perception of a space. Her enigmatic figures are life-size. Her purpose is to show what life has done to these people.

The sculpture garden may be Carmel's best kept secret. It is one of the most peaceful spots in town with winding paths among wooden tree-shaded benches that offer quiet places to read or meditate.

There is no doubt that the Carl Cherry Center is one of the treasures that enhance the town's reputation as an artistic community.

And this week, one of Hollywood's most recognizable stars will appear at the center's "Fat Apple" gala at the Carmel Woman's Club — to raise money for the Carl Cherry Center, and to celebrate the whispers of autumn.

"The term 'Fat Apple,' comes from poet Ranier Maria Rilke's Sonnets to Orpheus, said Robert Reese, executive director of the Center.

troupe, as well as the band, Salty Dogs, will also be part of the extravaganza. Unfortunately, there won't be any rivets.

The funds accrued from the Fat Apple Celebration will go toward operating expenses, yard clean-up, and necessary repairs to the Cherry Center's building.

In my humble opinion, the center is an important part of Carmel and well deserving of community support.

As Warren, put it: "Art unites people at an important level, and the Carl Cherry Center does that in a unique way. It provides a way for residents to savor and participate in a variety of artistic experiences."

Tickets for the Fat Apple Celebration, which begins at 6:30 p.m. on Oct. 25, are $65. The Carmel Woman's Club is at Ninth and San Carlos. Information and reservations are available by calling (831) 624-7491, or online at www.carlcherrycenter.org.

The Carl Cherry Center, tucked away at Guadalupe and Fourth, is one of Carmel's important artistic institutions.

inventor, but he proved them wrong when, in 1936, he invented the blind rivet. Blind Rivets are multi-piece rivet assemblies, capable of being installed by one person. The invention was widely used assembling aircraft during World War II. It earned Cherry a fortune. After Carl's death, Jeanne used their wealth to found the Cherry Foundation to "further the culture

"Since its opening in 1948, the center has strived to stay true to its mission of presenting quality and diverse artistic, educational, and cultural programs in Monterey County," Reese said.

Board members Robin Winfield and Richard Warren promised that the extravaganza will be one of Carmel's favorite nights of the fall season. To that end they will have actor, director and author Peter Coyote read from his latest book. The incomparable "Mirth-o-Matics" comedy improv

Carmel-by-the-Sea and the Monterey-Salinas highway shine

IN A market of remarkable calm — continuing the “Steady as She Goes” description that headlined our Second Quarter Report — Carmel and the Monterey-Salinas highway corridor stand out as the third quarter champs.

House Talk

By Paul Brocchini and Mark Ryan

■ Total sales volume in Carmel increased by $29,652,070, or 37 percent, over the third quarter of 2013, and the median sales price jumped to $1,325,000, a 17 percent gain over last year. There were eight more transactions this year — 67 as opposed to 59 last year — and the Market Barometer Oct. 1 registered a respectable 27 percent, which is a significant gain over the weak 13 percent in October of 2013.

■ Sales volume along the Monterey-Salinas highway, on a percentage basis, increased even more than Carmel, rising 52 percent, from $35,023,549, to $53,233,917. This tremendous increase was achieved with only four more transactions than last year. The 40 percent jump in the median sales price, from $538,000 to $752,450, accounts for the increase.

A few other numbers jump out at us from the other markets. The most remarkable was the median sales price gain in Pebble Beach, a leap from last year's $1,052,500 to $1,610,000 this year — a whopping increase of 53 percent.

A word of caution if you live in Pebble Beach: This increase does not mean the value of your house increased 53 percent. Our neighborhoods are so small that slight shifts in the composition of the data can result in large changes.

What this healthy gain means is that there has been a

Third Quarter Report

strong upward trend in Pebble Beach values and that most likely you could sell your house for a lot more money today than you could have a few years ago.

Study the charts and you will see there were no other big swings.

How does one define a “normal” market? Our definition of a “normal market” is one that does not have frenetic buying activity or the depressing gloom of a dead market for sellers.

We had an experience with the “frenetic” this year when we submitted an offer for a client on a duplex in San Mateo. The duplex was a wreck of a place in a less than prime neighborhood. Yet, believe it or not, there were 36 offers on the property. That is true craziness.

Compared to that, things around here seem calm and tidy.
