Water system wiring blamed for causing fire

By CHRIS COUNTS

NEARLY A year after the Pfeiffer Fire destroyed 34 homes and scorched more than 900 acres, the United States Forest Service announced this week the blaze was caused when electrical control wires belonging to the Pfeiffer Ridge Mutual Water Company ignited dry leaves and redwood needles.

The water company provided service to about a dozen property owners in the Pfeiffer Ridge area, most of whom lost their homes in the fire.

The report ruled out the possibility the blaze was caused by an illegal camper, a rumor that swept through Big Sur shortly after the fire started Dec. 15, 2013.

Three days after the fire began, investigators met with a homeless man and accompanied him on a visit to his campsite, which was located along the Buzzard's Roost Trail in the general vicinity of where the fire started. But after visiting the site, investigators determined it was a "significant distance north of the fire origin area," and its "fire ring was cold" and "did not show evidence of a fire escaping."

At least four other homeless people and two bicycle campers were interviewed by investigators as well.

Once investigators determined precisely where the fire started — at a spot near the Buzzard's Roost Trail between Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park and Pfeiffer Ridge — they observed it was located "immediately adjacent to water lines operated by the Pfeiffer Ridge Mutual Water Company" and another local water company. They discovered "exposed

City honors clerk who resigned in protest

By MARY SCHLEY

AGHAST AT the way Jason Stilwell was running city hall, she resigned in October 2013 and thought she'd never set foot in the building again. But Tuesday night, Heidi Mozingo received thanks from Mayor Jason Burnett and the city council for her eight years of service as city clerk and assistant city administrator.

"I'm sorry it has taken as long as it has for us to offer this recognition. We don't need to belabor the reasons why, but it is past due," Burnett began. "We wanted to recognize your service to the community. As I said upon your departure, you always exemplified a very professional and caring approach to your various responsibilities."

He listed several of her job duties, contributions and accomplishments, including being named Carmel Employee of the Year in 2010.

Mozingo thanked new city administrator Doug Schmitz "for making this recognition possible" and said it was an honor to serve the city for eight years.

"Frankly, when I submitted my letter of resignation a year ago to protest the lack of ethics and integrity rampant at city hall, I never thought I'd find myself here again," she said.

In that letter, she wrote, "My resignation from the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, though a very difficult decision, comes as the result of my extreme discomfort with current management practices. I can no longer ethically or in good conscience remain part of the city administration."

But the happenings of the past year, including the firings of several longtime employees and resignation of others, the granting of lucrative contracts that were paid far beyond their city-approved caps, and other wrongs, ultimately galvanized

'Ambassadors' hit the streets as paid parking begins

By MARY SCHLEY

AFTER PUBLIC works crews finished installing signs along Ocean Avenue Monday that describe how to use the 10 new kiosks installed along five blocks of Carmel's main street, the plastic bags shrouding the high-tech parking meters were removed Tuesday morning, and two red-coated "parking ambassadors" began strolling along the sidewalks in search of people in need of help operating them. The meters require payment of $2 per hour for up to four hours of parking in any of the 90 spaces along Ocean between Junipero and Monte Verde streets.

The six-month experiment with parking meters will determine if they should become a permanent means of relieving parking congestion in the city's core commercial district, and the program — including the ambassadors helping to acquaint people with the machines — is being administered by National Parking & Valet.

City administrator Doug Schmitz said he had received comments both pro and con since the program began. "Those in support state that spaces along Ocean Avenue have opened up for use by visitors; those opposed do not like pay parking in town, as well as the appearance of the kiosks," he said. The council will receive a report on the parking experiment in March.

Hanson named 'special projects manager'

By MARY SCHLEY

FORMER BUILDING inspector John Hanson came back to work Monday, after being wrongfully fired more than a year ago, suing the city, and accepting reinstatement and a cash settlement last week in exchange for dropping his lawsuit.

At Tuesday's city council meeting, city administrator Doug Schmitz apologized to Hanson on behalf of the city for everything he and his family had to endure in the past year, and at the same meeting, the council adopted the job description for the position he now holds — special projects manager.

"John is going to be working on capital improvement projects," Schmitz told The Pine Cone Wednesday. "We have a lot of plans and haven't had much implementation."

Hanson will be working on the plans to reopen the Forest Theater, which was red-tagged in April because of health and safety violations, and will also work on a shoreline assessment to see what work needs to be done on the rock revetments, walls, staircases, railings and trash-can enclosures.

Judge to decide fate of Cal Am's test well

By KELLY NIX

A SACRAMENTO judge is expected to decide Friday morning whether Cal Am can begin drilling its desalination test well in Marina the week after next or will have to wait a lot longer — a grim possibility that would further delay a new water supply solution for the Monterey Peninsula.

On Dec. 5, Sacramento Superior Court Judge Shelleyanne W.L. Chang is set to hear a lawsuit filed by Marina Coast Water District last week that seeks a restraining order against the California Coastal Commission preventing it from issuing a permit to Cal Am for the test well. The commission unanimously approved the well at a Nov. 12 hearing in Half Moon Bay.

Jim Cullem, executive director of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Water Authority, said that based on talks with Cal Am officials, if the judge grants the restraining order and Cal Am can't begin drilling by Dec. 15 — the water company's proposed start date — it will have to wait until late next year to start drilling. The company needs about two-and-a-half months to drill the well.

"If there is any delay past Dec. 15," Cullem told The Pine Cone, "I would think the whole project is at risk of a one-year delay."

Cal Am needs to get the drilling done by the end of February before the threatened snowy plover bird begins breeding in the dunes adjacent to the test well site.

Park district lands big chunk of pine forest

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE PURCHASE of the 851-acre Rancho Aguajito by the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District this week was celebrated by many open space advocates, including the woman the Joyce Stevens Monterey Pine Forest Preserve will be named after.

The park district agreed to pay $7,450,000 to the Pebble Beach Company for the land, which is home to a particularly impressive stand of Monterey pines. The property is adjacent to 525-

Canine Companion

LILY LOOKS up with soft, yellow eyes, her gaze somewhere between innocent and sincere. Her coat is sleek but soft, and her ears are like the lambs ear growing in the garden. Still just a baby at 18 months, the sweet silver Labrador retriever actually has a lot of responsibility.

Unlike service dogs, who are not pets but are trained to provide assistance to an individual with a disability, Lily is a therapy dog, a beloved pet trained to provide particular affection and comfort to a person with mental or physical challenges.

A college student, competitive athlete and excellent cook, Lily's person does not actually consider himself challenged. Yet, after a devastating childhood car accident took an arm and a leg, the public tends to see him as disabled. But with Lily by his side in her therapy vest, people tend to focus, he says, less on him and more on the dog with the soft eyes.

"When I'm out in public," says her person, "people usually stare at me, unwilling to engage. With Lily, I become much more approachable. The social barrier is instantly breached, and the awkwardness disappears. So does people's discomfort in dealing with differences, which gives them a chance to get to know me, apart from the accident."

Lily leans into her person, resting her head against him, indicating that she finds as much comfort in his care and affection as he does in hers.

Despite her loyalties, Lily bolts from her person's side the moment she hits the beach, shifting allegiance to the ball in play.

"Lily's super good on a leash," her person says. "But once it's removed at the beach, she goes crazy, meeting other people and other dogs. But she is getting better and better at returning the ball."

PG&E appeals fine imposed by PUC for Guadalupe explosion

By MARY SCHLEY

ARGUING THAT the $10.85 million fine imposed by the California Public Utilities Commission is unwarranted, and so are its findings that PG&E violated federal and state laws regarding safety and training, the utility company filed an appeal Monday.

The fine and citation stemmed from the explosion of a house at Guadalupe and Third in March after a PG&E crew caused a gas leak while working on a main in the street.

Specifically, the PUC cited sections of the state Public Utilities Code pertaining to the incident, in which crews tapped a steel line without realizing it contained a plastic insert, which allowed gas to migrate into the house, where it accumulated until being ignited by a pilot light.

According to the public utilities commission's safety enforcement division, PG&E is to be fined $10.85 million "for the utility's failure to take the necessary steps to make safe the area in Carmel-by-the-Sea where planned work was under way on March 3, 2014, and failure to adequately equip the construction crew with the tools necessary to stop the uncontrolled flow of natural gas, leading to the explosion of an unoccupied home."

But in the utility company's appeal, PG&E Senior Vice President Jesus Soto contends "neither of the two violations alleged in the citation has been or could be established in this case."

"Both violations are premised on a misapplication of governing law and lack adequate factual support," he wrote.

Just $302,000?

Further, according to the utility company, a nearly $11 million fine "for an incident that caused $302,000 in property damages and no injuries is legally invalid and constitutionally excessive." The appeal seeks a reduction or dismissal of the financial penalty.

On Thursday, Mayor Jason Burnett objected to the company's efforts "to trivialize the damages by pointing to the replacement value of the house."

"I'm sure the company understands the damage is far beyond the construction of the house — it's safety and security," he said, adding that he's heard from parents who said their kids have asked them if their own homes are going to blow up. "The faith in our utility has been damaged, and PG&E has not restored that faith."

Lots of profit

In practical terms, with PG&E making $1.2 billion in profits last year, the fine amounts to less than four days' earnings.

"It's rather insulting that they refer to a citation of less than four days' profit as being in any way excessive, considering this is a repeated problem they have had," Burnett said.

As he has pointed out in the past, the mayor remarked that it was a miracle no one was killed in the explosion, and a "double miracle that no one was even injured."

"However, PG&E seems to be pointing to this miracle as justification for why it should not be responsible," he said. "We are unwilling to rely on miracles to protect the public and believe PG&E, and the CPUC shouldn't be, either."

Burnett and city administrator Doug Schmitz received word of the appeal from PG&E community relations regional director Papia Gambelin.

"Our appeal does not diminish how seriously we take the causes that led to the explosion in Carmel," she wrote. "Our progress would be impossible without the important work we do together in the community of Carmel, and I want to thank you for your ongoing partnership as we work together."

"We are deeply disappointed that PG&E is unwilling to accept the responsibility for endangering the public in Carmel and for compromising the public's sense of safety and security," Burnett commented.

Smuin Ballet Christmas program at Sunset

CELEBRATING THE season with the latest incarnation of its irresistibly unconventional holiday program — and marking its 20th anniversary — Smuin Ballet returns Friday and Saturday, Dec. 5-6, to Sunset Center.

Titled "The Christmas Ballet: Uncorked," this year's program features new choreography by Amy Seiwert, and debut pieces from dancers Ben Needham-Wood, Nicole Haskins, and Weston Krukow. "An ever-changing carousel of mischief and elegance, this enormously popular holiday celebration offers something for everyone, from ballet, tap and swing, to a wealth of other dances drawn from holiday traditions from around the world," Smuin Ballet's artistic director Celia Fushille said.

Friday's show starts at 8 p.m., while Saturday's performance begins at 2 p.m. Tickets are $56 to $73. Call (831) 620-2048.

Electricity shutoff scam strikes again

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Schley.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 18

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Officer responded to a barking-dog complaint on Ocean Avenue. Resident stated barking problem occurs at different times of the day. Office contacted owner, information obtained and possible solutions discussed.

Big Sur: Woman stated she might have been sexually assaulted on Highway 1 in Gorda.

Carmel area: Citizen reported a 64-year-old female caretaker committed fraud and embezzlement from her elderly mother at a Cuesta Way residence.

Pacific Grove: Officer was working as the school resource officer when a student who wanted to remain anonymous reported being concerned about another student. Student told the officer they were concerned because they know the mother drinks and contributes to her children's delinquency.

Pacific Grove: Theft of a toolbox from a secured carport on Grove Street. Victim reported that the lock had been broken, and various tools were taken. Crime occurred during daylight hours.

Pacific Grove: Dispatched to a residence on Granite for a suspicious circumstance regarding harassing comments made on Twitter.

The resident's daughter, who is a minor, was commenting on a recent high-school football victory, at which time an individual made several comments, some of which were sexual in context, to her. This occurred on Nov. 15. The daughter's boyfriend did a Google search of the harassing male's Twitter account name and discovered he was a registered sexual offender. The offender made several more comments on the daughter's Twitter account, but had not made any comments since the above mentioned date. Resident felt the situation should be documented. Nothing further.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A vehicle was stopped on Camino del Monte at 0049 hours for CVC violations. Three subjects — a 23-year-old male, a 26-year-old male and a 25-year-old male — were arrested and transported to county jail for being in possession of burglary tools and drug paraphernalia.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Officer responded to a report of two dogs loose in the roadway on Carpenter Street at 0943 hours. On arrival, the officer found the dogs loose in the roadway and observed a garage door left open. Dog owner said the door was inadvertently left open during moving. The dogs were secured in the fenced yard, and a warning was given.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: An unattended cell phone was found in the men's restroom at Devendorf Park. The owner of the cell phone later called the station to inquire about the lost phone, and it was released back to him.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Citizen fell while walking on a sidewalk on Junipero Street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Camera found at the beach. Owner notified and will make arrangements to have the camera mailed back to him.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A 46-year-old male was contacted at Del Mar at 1336 hours and found to be in possession of a prescription drug without a prescription.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Credit card found on Ocean Avenue. No contact information. Card destroyed.

Pacific Grove: At 0020 hours, the officer observed two subjects loitering in and about a school area on David Avenue after hours. Officer had previously contacted a subject attempting to burglarize the same location in the past. As the officer went to contact the two individuals, they foot-bailed northbound through the field. Officer was still driving the police vehicle and did not give chase, but called for assistance from other units. Officer then got out on foot. A short time later, the officer reestablished contact with one of the subjects and this time gave chase. The subjects were not apprehended due to lack of officers to establish perimeters.

Pacific Grove: PG&E fraud scam on Lighthouse Avenue. Phone call received by an individual demanding that $1,000 be transferred to them or the electricity would be shut off within 45 minutes. Business complied, but discovered it was a fraud after contacting PG&E.

Pacific Grove: Officers were dispatched to an Asilomar Boulevard turnout. Fire, California state parks, U.S. Coast Guard, NOAA, AMR and PGPD arrived on scene and assisted in the rescue of three parties from a capsized vessel. Two parties were transported to CHOMP. Vessel was left on scene. Officer collected a cooler and life jacket for safekeeping and later returned the property to the owner.

Carmel area: A 48-year-old female on Rio Road reported that someone had vandalized her vehicle.

Carmel area: Person found miscellaneous items on the side of the road on Atherton Drive. A 35-year-old female who owned some of the items was located. Items were returned to her.

Carmel area: A 32-year-old female reported an unknown suspect had stolen a bag from her unlocked vehicle at Monastery Beach.

Toyota doesn't like $12.5 million verdict, asks for new trial in Chelsie Hill case

By KELLY NIX

TOYOTA HAS filed a motion for a new trial less than two months after a Monterey jury awarded former Pacific Grove resident Chelsie Hill $12.5 million, contending the auto giant was responsible for her paralysis from a 2010 vehicle accident in Skyline Forest.

The jury's Oct. 17 verdict followed Hill's 2011 lawsuit against Toyota alleging that the lap-only belt Hill, 22, was wearing in a 1996 4Runner at the time of a February 2010 crash is the reason she was paralyzed from the waist down. The jury deliberated the case for about five hours before deciding Toyota was responsible for the young woman's injuries.

Toyota spokesman Scott Vazin told The Pine Cone Thursday that "based on our review of the record, we believe there are sufficient grounds for a new trial."

Hill's attorney, Bob Rosenthal, told The Pine Cone Thursday that he will "vigorously oppose" the auto manufacturer's request in pleadings he said would be filed in Monterey County Superior Court Thursday. Superior Court Judge Thomas W. Wills was expected to hear arguments for and against the motion at a Dec. 5 hearing.

If Wills rejects Toyota's request for a new trial, Rosenthal expects the company to file an appeal in the 6th District Court of Appeal in San Jose. However, if Wills grants Toyota a new trial, Rosenthal said he, on behalf of Hill, will file an appeal.

Wills is expected to issue a decision on Toyota's motion on or before Dec. 29.

As for grounds for a new trial, Rosenthal said that Toyota, among other things, alleges that one juror had made up his mind on how to vote before jurors began deliberating, and that there is a lack of evidence to support a verdict in Hill's favor.

The company also alleges that the court erred when it allowed two witnesses for Hill to testify as to their opinions on the way Hill wore the lap belt because they were not qualified to offer those opinions, and that the jury verdict form lacked a legally required question.

As Toyota maintained throughout the trial, Vazin said the company is "confident that Hill's injuries resulted from the extreme severity of this unfortunate accident and an improperly adjusted seatbelt, not from a defect in the 1996 Toyota 4Runner."

Hill was sitting in the middle rear seat of the 4Runner that had four other teens when driver Aaron Corn struck a tree at more than 30 mph. Corn was drunk at the time.

The Monterey jury's award was the largest monetary amount awarded by a jury in the state this year, Rosenthal said after the verdict.

P.G. to resume work on long-overdue Local Coastal Program

By KELLY NIX

AFTER MORE than a 10-year pause, the City of Pacific Grove is resuming its efforts to update its blueprint for development in its coastal zone, a process that, when finished, will give it the authority to grant permits without referring them to the California Coastal Commission.

On Dec. 10, the city will hold a joint city council and planning commission meeting that will give residents a chance to tell planners what they want considered in the city's Local Coastal Plan, which the Coastal Act of 1976 required every city and county along the coast to complete by 1981. Needless to say, Pacific Grove is a bit late.

"We really want to make sure everyone has a chance to participate," Pacific Grove's senior planner, Anastazia Aziz, told The Pine Cone.

While the LCP will reflect the characteristics and needs of the city, it must meet the standards for resource protection and public access in the Coastal Act. Ultimately, the coastal commission will certify the document by making sure it conforms to those requirements.

Once the commission certifies the LCP — expected in late 2015 or early 2016 — Pacific Grove will have authority over most coastal development in the city, eliminating the need for property owners to undergo an arduous permit process through the coastal commission.

Pacific Grove began preparing its LCP in 2000, but shifting city priorities, financial shortfalls and other stumbling blocks prevented the city from completing it. Now, because the coastal commission is struggling to respond to permit requests up and down the state due to budget cuts and staffing constraints, the agency is eager for P.G. and other cities to complete their LCPs.

"The coastal commission is very keen on having the whole program certified," Aziz said.

To help move it along, the state agency awarded Pacific Grove $130,000 to help pay a planning consultant, Monterey-based EMC Planning Group, to work with them on the LCP. The city will pay the remainder of the cost.

"The grant runs through April 2016," Aziz explained. "We are hoping to get it done before then."

The city has a posted a 14-page survey online for residents to provide input to the LCP process. Besides asking about their knowledge of the Coastal Act and the coastal commission, the survey wants respondents to rank — from one to seven— the type of coastal access they feel is the highest priority for the city, including access to beaches, coastal recreation trails, improved bike parking and four other options. It also asks them to list, by importance, eight categories relating to P.G.'s coastline, including safety, marine environment, recreation, and water quality.

"People can always send written comments to me," Aziz said. "We encourage them to take the survey because that will help us, too."

Aziz put together an informative "frequently asked questions" page on the city's website designed to help residents understand the LCP process.

The Dec. 10 meeting will be at 6 p.m. at city council chambers, 300 Forest Ave., Pacific Grove.

WATER DISTRICT CONSIDERING REGULATING OUTDOOR SEATING AT RESTAURANTS

By KELLY NIX

RESTAURANTS THAT offer al fresco dining to their patrons — part of an emerging trend on the Monterey Peninsula — could be forced to obtain water permits for those seats, according to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, which will discuss the topic at two upcoming meetings.

In most parts of the Monterey Peninsula, no water is available, which means the new rule would likely prevent restaurants from expanding outdoors, just as they can't expand indoors now.

On Dec. 5, the district's water demand committee is expected to consider several options to regulate outdoor dining, including requiring restaurants that add new outdoor seats to obtain water permits. The committee is expected to make a recommendation to the water district board, which will consider the ideas at a Dec. 15 meeting.

Outdoor dining "has clearly become more popular over the years," the district's water demand manager, Stephanie Locke, told The Pine Cone, pointing to numerous restaurants in Pacific Grove and Monterey that have recently added outdoor seating.

The drought — and the cutback order imposed by the State Water Resources Control Board in 2009 requiring Cal Am to drastically reduce the amount of water it uses from the Carmel River — prompted the district to take a look at regulating outdoor seating.

While the new rule would stop most restaurants from adding outdoor seating, among the options the committee and the water board have is to "grandfather" existing outdoor seats at restaurants.

Before deciding what to do, the committee and the water board need to determine whether outdoor seating uses the same amount of water as indoor seating, according to the district's staff.

And many more questions have yet to be answered, according to the staff report,

A trophy moment for CHS freshman

By CHRIS COUNTS

CARMEL HIGH School junior varsity football player Christian Stapleton is following in the footsteps of his uncle, Harry Lewis, in more ways than he once realized.

After he was issued a uniform with the number "26" on it, Stapleton learned his uncle wore the same number on his jersey when he played for the Padres.

Then, two weeks ago, Stapleton was recognized as the team's Most Improved Player. When he was honored at an awards ceremony, he noticed the name engraved directly above his on the trophy was his uncle's.

"It was such a shock," his grandmother Duncan Lewis told The Pine Cone. "We were quite astounded by the coincidence."

The trophy, Lewis explained, disappeared shortly after her son, Harry, received the award in 1977. A replacement trophy had been used for the past 37 years, but once the original trophy was found in a classroom closet after a teacher retired, it was put back into service. That's why Stapleton's name follows his uncle's.

In keeping with the "All in the Family" theme, Harry's junior varsity football coach at Carmel High was the late Tor Spindler, while Stapleton's coach this past year was his son, Mark Spindler. Tor Spindler, by the way, was a friend of Stapleton's grandfather, neurosurgeon Dr. William Lewis. The doctor once served as the physician for the Padres' football team. Three other members of Stapleton's family, meanwhile, also attended Carmel High.

Stapleton's grandmother, who volunteers at the Yellow Brick Road Benefit Shop, is proud of her grandson's achievements on the football field — and the family's local legacy.

"As we all know there are many joys and benefits to be derived from living in a small town such as Carmel and continuing family traditions is certainly one of them," she added.

Carmel High's Christian Stapleton is not the first member of his family to find success on a football field.

electrical wires" next to a water pipe showing "charring/discoloration and a rough texture, consistent with arcing, that directly corresponded to a specific point on an immediately adjacent wire where its insulation was charred and partially missing in sections."

While the report explains how the fire started, it's unclear if the agencies that fought the fire — and the insurance companies that compensated homeowners for their losses — will seek restitution. According to the fire investigation report, the cost of putting out the blaze was $4.2 million. The damage to homes in the neighborhood no doubt totaled millions of dollars.

"While [the determination] brings closure, I don't know if it's going to make a difference," said Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade Chief Martha Karstens, who lost her house in the fire. "Nothing is going to bring back the personal things that were lost."

Karstens and at least one other homeowner have started the process of rebuilding their homes. But most haven't.

"People are in the various stages of getting their lives back together," said Butch Kronlund, president of the Coast Property Owners Association. "It's hard. People are still a bit stunned and feeling their way along before they decide what to do next."

Investigators released a report this week which determined faulty electrical wires caused last year's devastating Pfeiffer Fire.

"If there is a temporary restraining order, by the time we get this resolved, it would be too late," he said. "The folks at Marina Coast Water District are well aware of that."

The lawsuit alleges that the well will harm "rare coastal dunes" and environmentally sensitive habitat.

The slant test well, to be installed on cement company Cemex's property in Marina, will provide water quality and other data for Cal Am's proposed full-scale desal plant, also to be located in Marina.

Marina Coast's suit also alleges the coastal commission violated the California

Environmental Quality Act because its approval of the test well allows construction to begin without a lease from the State Lands Commission, which it says is required for the project before it can proceed.

Further delays in Cal Am's desal project could be a boost to two other would-be desal purveyors: DeepWater Desal and developer Nader Agha, who have proposed competing projects in Moss Landing they insist could also provide the Peninsula with enough water to replace what's being drawn from the Carmel River. Neither of them has any permits, however.

"Obviously, the longer Cal Am's project is delayed, the better chance other desal options might come on sooner," Cullem said. "But that is a big 'might.'"

On top of those, he'll be overseeing improvements in Mission Trail park that should be put out to bid soon, and working on trails and pedestrian-safety projects, which were included in the council's list of top priorities for the year.

"And there was a proposal to install a cistern here at city hall to capture all this wonderful rain water, but that's gone nowhere, so I gave it to John to run with," Schmitz added. "That's a full plate to start with."

According to the job description approved by the council at the Dec. 2 meeting, the special projects manager, "is a position that could help the city manage a wide range of duties, including: special studies, financial analysis, policy creation, capital improvement project management, contract oversight, and facilities oversight." It's also designed as a "flex position that will allow for employees of all levels to be assigned to it." According to Hanson's settlement with the city, he will receive pay equivalent to the top step for the building official, which is $100,752, plus benefits.

The apology

At Tuesday night's council meeting, Hanson was invited into city council chambers, where he was welcomed back by city attorney Don Freeman, Schmitz, Mayor Jason Burnett and the council.

"I've been here a long time, I love this community; it's been my passion for a long time," Hanson said. "I couldn't be happier that Mr. Schmitz is here." Hanson worked under Schmitz when he served as city administrator here the first time around, from 1983 to 1992.

"We're going to move forward and do everything we can to make this place come out of this funk," he said.

"On behalf of the organization, I'd like to apologize for everything you and your family had to go through in the past year," Schmitz told Hanson, and Burnett echoed that sentiment.

"We apologize that we were not able to do the right thing sooner," Burnett said. "And it is absolutely the right thing for the community, for the city, and the fair treatment of you and anyone else who has served the city so well for you to be back."

Burnett said he is looking forward to working with Hanson again, as are many others inside and outside city hall.

"I've been a lot of dark places, and to step back into the light, it's such a great feeling. You can't take it for granted," he responded, adding that he relied on his family to help him through.

"I knew the day I left here, I would be back. I didn't know how long it would be."

After the meeting, Hanson told The Pine Cone, "I've got no animosity."

"I have a lot of hope that things are going to get better," he said. "I'm just going to do my thing and keep moving forward."

estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held on in this court as follows:
Date: January 28, 2015
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept.: 16
Room: 16
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

the citizenry and led to the eventual termination of administrative services director Susan Paul and resignation of former city administrator Jason Stilwell, both of whom were responsible for many of the missteps now being investigated.

“The crisis of the past year, ironically, has not only unified the community, it has also sparked a resurgence in public participation beyond the handful of regulars,” Mazingo said. “So, under the stewardship of a now watchful public, with the ever vigilant Pine Cone and under the leadership of an experienced and capable city administrator, I am confident we can return to a community of which we can all be proud.”

After she received her certificate and gift from the city, and flowers from a former coworker and friend, councilman Steve Dallas made a few comments, too.

“I want to take this opportunity to not only thank you for your eight-and-a-half years of service to this community, but to offer a formal apology to you on behalf of all who received your letter, setting out the reasons for your resignation, and thereafter took no action to make further inquiry of the warning you offered that may have avoided the expense and difficulties that the community ultimately faced,” he said.

He lauded her “character of true professionalism” and said she demonstrated that “it is not what you are in this life, but who you are, that matters.”

“I, for one, am proud to call you my friend,” Dallas concluded.

Glen Mazingo thanked, too

Her husband, Glen Mazingo, was also recognized for his service on the Harrison Memorial Library board of trustees at the Dec. 2 meeting. City officials had wanted to thank him earlier, but he refused the honor, stating in an email that doing so “would be a failure on my part to recognize the injustice that is reflected in the fact that my wife, after serving eight-and-a-half years as the assistant city administrator and city clerk of Carmel-by-the-Sea, was not given the courtesy of acre Jacks Peak County Park.

“The forest of native Monterey pines in the Jacks Peak area is the largest contiguous forest of its type in the world,” declared Stevens, who has lobbied for the acquisition of the property for two decades. “That’s why it’s so valuable.”

The property will be paid for with taxpayers money from Proposition 117, which requires the state spend $30 million a year on wildlife habitat protection — including $1.5 million locally.

Monterey district superintendent for state parks Mat Fuzie praised the deal, saying the park district is the ideal agency to manage the land, which he called “an incredibly important link to mountain lion habitats in this area.”

At this week’s park district board meeting, almost everybody in the room agreed the future park should be named after Stevens, a retired architect, former president of the Big Sur Land Trust and a co-founder of the Monterey Pine such an honor after she informed the council that she would resign her position and career rather than continue to serve under an administrator that engaged in unethical behavior.”

He said he would accept the recognition after city officials apologized to his wife “for their failure to recognize her dedicated service to this community and its government.” With that mission accomplished Tuesday, Mazingo stood to receive his plaque in thanks for his participation on the library board, from which he resigned last summer.

Forest Watch.

At the meeting, residents Nikki Nedeff and Maggie Hardy asked the park board to name the property “in recognition of Joyce’s far-reaching environmental advocacy and vision.”

“For the past 23 years, Joyce has been the primary impetus behind efforts to preserve significant portions of the Peninsula’s Monterey pine forest habitat and has raised our community’s consciousness about the rarity of this forest type,” Nedeff and Hardy wrote in a letter to the board.

Carmel’s mayor also chimed in on the sale of Rancho Aguajito — and on the subject of naming the property after Stevens. “I can think of no single person who has had as significant a positive impact on our pine forest ecosystem as Joyce,” Jason Burnett wrote in a letter to the park district.

It’s unclear when the new preserve will open to the public, in part because of its proximity to Jacks Peak Park. Park district general manager Rafael Payan said his agency is in negotiations with the county regarding the joint management of Jacks Peak park. “There’s no estimate for when we’re going to open,” Payan added. “We want to see what happens with Jacks Peak park first.”

Celtic trio offers more than just the holiday standards

JUST IN time for the gift-giving season, Molly's Revenge unwraps its latest CD, "Winterdance," which offers holiday music with a Celtic twist.

The acoustic trio will play songs from the new recording when it presents its 9th annual Celtic Christmas concert Sunday, Dec. 7, at St. Mary's By The Sea Episcopal Church in Pacific Grove. Featuring John Weed of Carmel Valley on fiddle; David Brewer on pipes, whistles and bodhran; and Stuart Mason on guitar and mandola, Molly's Revenge will share the stage with singer Christa Burch and The Rosemary Turco Irish Dancers.

Weed said Celtic music provides just the right complement to the familiar songs of the holiday season. "It's amazing how compatible the two are," said Weed, who teaches Celtic music to youngsters at St. Mary's.

The pairing also provides refreshing alternative to the canned music that fills shopping malls this time of year. "It's really nice to hear Christmas carols played on antique instruments," Weed suggested.

Recorded in a remote cabin located along the Mendocino coast, the new album showcases the voice of Burch, who is collaborating with Molly's Revenge for the first time.

"Christa is a world class singer from Orange County," Weed explained. "She has an angelic voice that leaves people spellbound."

The proceeds from Sunday's concert benefit the church's food pantry. "I wanted to make sure that folks know that if they bring canned goods or a toy to the concert, they will get a special treat from our bistro," added Jackie Pierce, who is helping to organize the event.

The music starts at 3 p.m. Tickets are $20 for general admission and $10 for kids 12 and under. St. Mary's is located at Central and 12th. Call (831) 224-3819.

■ Fernwood's got the funk

Back-to-back shows this weekend at Fernwood Resort offer Big Sur locals a veritable feast of funk. Taking the stage Friday is Con Brio, a seven-piece San Francisco band led by charismatic frontman Ziek McCarter that describes itself as "a living, evolving testament to the power of soul." The following night, Kuckaw will be in the house. According to its biography, the Oakland-based quintet "was assembled with one com-the Carmel Art Association celebrates the opening its Miniature and Small Painting Show.

CAA President and painter Will Bullas said the reception is one local event everybody interested in art "must attend."

"The holiday open house is 'social media' in the flesh, where the artists, art lovers and occasionally the 'who's who' gather to embrace the season," Bullas said. "It is the finest entrée to the holiday season on the Monterey Peninsula."

Dozens of members from the CAA's roster of more than 100 artists are participating in the show, including Bullas, Alicia Maheen, Miguel Dominguez, Pam Carroll, Stan Robbins and Mark Farina. Each artist is limited to displaying five miniatures — no larger than 8 inches by 10 inches — and three small paintings — no larger than 12 by 16. Priced to sell, the pieces start at about $150.

Saturday's reception includes a catered buffet, live music, wine and cocktails. The CAA is also hosting a toy and food drive for The Salvation Army. People can drop off unwrapped toys, sweaters and jackets for boys and girls of all ages, and nonperishable food items at the gallery through Dec 11.

The paintings have been on display since Dec. 4. The gallery is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. Call (831) 624-6176.

■ The art of buying a gift

With Christmas just three weeks away — and the gift-buying season in full swing — many Carmel galleries are getting into the spirit.

At her downtown gallery and studio, stained glass artist Theresa Buccola pokes fun at the fragile nature of her medium when she hosts A Cracked Christmas Party Friday, Dec. 5.

"To create glass art, I end up breaking more than few pieces of glass along the way," Buccola explained. "I'm dedicating this year's Christmas party to all that isn't broken in our lives, and to the unbreakable

'White Christmas' at Youth Center

IRVING BERLIN'S classic holiday flick, "White Christmas," will be shown Friday night at the Carmel Youth Center. Considering Bing Crosby founded the center more than 60 years ago, and it's the last remaining of the 200 centers he started across the country, screening his film there is particularly appropriate.

Sponsored by the youth center and the Forest Theater Guild, the show is free, though attendees are asked to bring nonperishable food and/or new gifts to donate to the center's food and toy drives. The movie will begin at 6:30 p.m., ensuring people have plenty of time to attend the city's Christmas tree lighting ceremony a few blocks away at Devendorf Park.

The snack bar will offer specials, including a $5 dinner box (fries or chips, fountain drink and a hamburger, chicken nuggets, corn dog or pizza.), and a $2.50 Snack Pack (candy, popcorn and a fountain drink).

The youth center is located at Torres and Fourth. For more information, visit www.carmelyouth.com.

Deliver a meal and improve a life, donate a toy and sip some wine

MONTEREY PENINSULA residents benefit from a bounty of delicious, well operated, diverse and interesting restaurants, from the taquerias and noodle bars of Seaside, to the upscale, expensive and unique venues like Sierra Mar at the Post Ranch and Aubergine in L'Auberge Carmel.

But this area is also a special place for those who can't even leave their homes to enjoy any of those establishments, because Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula provides them hot meals five days a week, with additional food for the weekend. And according to executive director Viveca Lohr, the local MOW, which is based in Pacific Grove, is one of the few chapters left that actually delivers hot meals, ready to eat, rather than dropping off frozen food that needs to be reheated. The group, which is almost entirely volunteer run, feeds those who can't shop and cook for themselves.

Lohr said MOW serves about 220 clients per day — but the number of people willing and able to deliver their meals has dwindled to an alarmingly low level. As the dedicated volunteers who have provided the service for years are becoming too elderly to continue serving, few are stepping up to take their place, so the nonprofit is issuing the cry for help.

Meals on Wheels provides food to clients as far south as the Carmel Highlands and as far north as Marina, including Carmel, Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach, Pacific Grove, Monterey and Seaside, and the average route involves 10 to 12 stops. Lohr said MOW volunteers are often the only people their clients come in contact with during the day, and the experience of sharing a kind word and providing a good, hot meal to someone is always heartening.

It can even be life-changing, which might explain why the mother-daughter team of Loretta Collins and Barbara Meazell continues to help at Meals on Wheels, where they deliver meals together once a week, and also work in the kitchen. Since 2002, they have contributed more than 1,700 hours of service to Meals on Wheels, delivering more than 4,000 meals and driving almost 6,000 miles in the family car. Making their efforts even more noteworthy is the fact Collins is 100 years old.

Volunteer drivers don't have to commit to much at all — they can even simply maintain an on-call status, when they're only asked to fill in as needed. Delivery takes about two hours at midday, depending on the route, and meals are usually ready for pickup at the Sally Griffin Senior Center around 10 a.m. Volunteers use their own cars and pay for the gas themselves, and they're given placards that identify them as MOW drivers.

In addition to seeking more individuals to step in and help, the group is looking for ways to get businesses to assist, either by encouraging their own employees to volunteer or supporting others' efforts in their industry. To share any ideas, or for more information about volunteering, visit www.mowmp.org, call (831) 375-4454 or email info@mowmp.org.

■ Eating and drinking in the inns

The annual opportunity to explore some of this town's beautiful inns, decked out in holiday glitter and glitz, while sipping local wines and munching on treats from downtown restaurants, will take place Sunday, Dec. 7, from 2 to 5 p.m. The Carmel Heritage Society's 16th Annual Inns of Distinction Tour, which has participants take a self-guided walking tour through local landmark properties, is a fundraiser for the historical group.

Inns signed on this year to decorate and open their doors to those on the tour are the Carmel Country Inn, Happy Landing Inn, Cypress Inn, La Playa Carmel, Tally Ho, the Wayside Inn, Coachman's Inn and the Candlelight Inn.

Restaurants and wineries will provide food and libation at each stop, with small bites on tap from PortaBella, the Grill on Ocean, Mundaka, Terry's Lounge, La Playa Carmel, Flaherty's and Da Giovanni, and wine from Cima Collina, Dawn's Dream, Heller Estate, J. Lohr, Windy Oaks, Southern Latitudes, Manzoni and Scheid.

The cost is $25 for Carmel Heritage members and $30 for nonmembers in advance, and $35 for everyone the day of the tour, which will be held rain or shine. All proceeds will help pay for the society's preservation and educational programs focusing on the history of Carmel.

For information or tickets, visit www.carmelheritage.org or call (831) 624-4447. Tickets can be picked up at the First Murphy House, located on the northwest corner of Lincoln and Sixth, from noon, onward, the day of the tour.

■ Dawn's Dream toy drive

Dawn's Dream Winery is hosting a Holiday Celebration & Toy Drive in its San Carlos Street tasting room Saturday, Dec. 6, from 2 to 5 p.m. The afternoon celebration will include wine flights, hors d'oeuvres, holiday music, a selection of holiday wine gifts — and other special surprises. Dawn's Dream has partnered with Thinker Toys, its next-door neighbor at San Carlos and Seventh, to collect gifts and toys for Voices for Children, a group of community volunteers who support and guide children in the foster care system. Thinker Toys is offering a 25 percent discount on any items purchased for the toy drive, and those who bring a gift to donate at Dawn's Dream will receive a $10 credit toward tasting and purchases. Voices for Children has requested gift items for all ages, including adults.

"The whole team is looking forward to sharing this celebration with our longtime wine club members and new guests alike," said Dawn Galante. "It's been a wonderful experience in our new tasting room location over the past year."

Those who can't make it to the Dec. 6 party can still donate a toy or gift for the Voices for Children drive anytime up until Dec. 14. Dawn's Dream is located at the rear of the courtyard on the west side of San Carlos Street just north of Seventh Avenue. www.dawnsdreamwinery.com

■ Cima Collina Open House

Cima Collina Winery and Tasting Room will host a Holiday Open House with "Traveling Soup Pot" author Mary Chamberlin, Saturday, Dec. 6, from 2 to 6 p.m. Chamberlin, who lives in Carmel and is also a board member of the American Institute of Wine & Food, will prepare the French Onion Soup recipe she developed after visiting the bustling Les Halles market café in Paris, along with Swedish laxsoppa, which is a salmon soup. She will also sign copies of the latest edition of her book, which includes 119 recipes from 26 countries.

At the open house, Cima Collina staff will be using grapevines "and a little wine" to help guests make their own holiday wreaths to take home, and visitors will be invited to taste the new Mourvedre from Antle Vineyard in the Chalona AVA.

The Cima Collina Tasting Room is located at 19 E. Carmel Valley Road in the Village, and the cost to attend the open house is $10 per person. RSVP to info@cimacollina.com or by calling (831) 620-0645.

■ New winter cocktails

Porter's, the restaurant in the clubhouse at the Poppy Hills Gold Course in Pebble Beach, has introduced a couple of new wintertime cocktails and is also continuing its support of Youth on Course, a nonprofit venture of the Northern California Golf Association that provides subsidized access to golf, a healthy lifestyles and career readiness curriculum, paid high-school internships, caddie programs and college scholarships for kids.

Every Thursday in December (except Christmas), from 5 to 7 p.m., guests can pay $25, part of which benefits Youth on Course, and can enjoy wine and small bites from chef Johnny DeVivo. They are also the perfect time to check out some of the new cocktails, like the Pomegranate Sunset with Patron Silver and lime, the Persimmon Punch with Pyrat Rum, the Spiced Apple Bourbon with Bulleit and house-made spiced rum, and the Bacon & Blue Martini with Ultimat Vodka, a bleu-cheese-stuffed olive and bacon.

Porter's in the Forest is located at Poppy Hills Golf Course at 3200 Lopez Road in Pebble Beach, and is open to the public. Call (831) 625-2035 or visit poppyhillsgolf.com for more information.

■ Silvestri sale

Silvestri Vineyards is offering free shipping on a case of wine and $5 off its 2012 estate Pinot Noir now through Dec. 25, in celebration of the season.

The estate Pinot Noir, which won a Golden Pine Cone this year for Best Pinot Noir, is being offered for $27 per bottle, down from the regular price of $32.

Silvestri Pinot Noir grapes are de-stemmed and cold-soaked for 24 hours before adding yeast, allowing a maximum extraction of flavor and color, according to the winery. Following the primary fermentation of sugar into alcohol, which takes a couple of weeks, the juice is moved to French oak barrels, up to half of which are new, and secondary fermentation (from malic acid to lactic acid) takes about a month. The wine generally remains in barrels for up to a year before bottling.

The 2012 estate wine is “a wonderful representation of the fruit from our vineyard,” according to Silvestri, with “bright cherry aromas abound that lead into a rich mouth feel with a soft texture” and lively acidity.

The Silvestri tasting room is located on Seventh Avenue between Dolores and San Carlos streets. Visit www.silvestrivineyards.com.

■ Brunch at Jacks

Jacks Restaurant in the Portola Hotel has revamped its weekend brunch menu, with the idea of enticing more locals and visitors to venture down to the foot of Alvarado Street to enjoy bottomless mimosas for a mere $5.95, along with a bevy of midday dishes like crispy Dungeness crab cake with Meyer lemon aioli over shaved Brussels sprout salad and the Texas Benedict, with shaved prime rib piled on an English muffin with caramelized onions, poached eggs and a classic Béarnaise sauce served with country potatoes. For something sweeter, pick the cinnamon swirl brioche French toast with fresh berries, or go south of the border with the carnitas scramble.

And since it's brunch, not breakfast, items like warm chicken and cashew salad, fish tacos, the Portola cheeseburger, roasted salmon Niçoise salad and the Chef's Signature Roasted Filet Mignon Sandwich with crumbled blue cheese and crispy red onions are on offer, too.

For more information about Jacks and other goings on there and in the adjacent Peter B's Brewpub, visit www.jacksrestaurantlounge.com.

In past years, Ted Balestreri and Bert Cutino's famous Sardine Factory restaurant on Cannery Row has shut down for a while each December to undergo a sprucing up. But for the first time in a decade, that's not happening this year.

The Sardine Factory continues to offer its early-bird menu to diners who order between 5 and 6 p.m. from a range of starters, including Monterey Bay clam chowder or Castroville artichoke bisque, and a selection of four entree choices: Capellini Pomodoro, sand dabs, filet and prawns, and Chicken Baltino, with grilled chicken breast, chive risotto, mushroom ragoût, madeira wine sauce. Dessert choices are dark chocolate mousse or crème brûlée, and the whole meal is $29.95 per person. In addition to its regular service and menus, the restaurant offers Happy Hour, and prime rib on Friday and Saturday nights.

The Sardine Factory is located at 701 Wave St. in Monterey. For more information, visit www.sardinefactory.com or call (831) 373-3775.

Sweet Little Bert

Sweet little Bert has been with POMDR for almost two years. He is a darling 6 pound, 8-year-old Chihuahua mix. He is mellow and affectionate, and just loves curling up on his foster mom's lap and going to sleep. Bert walks well on a leash, mostly staying at your side. He's fine with meeting new people and is good with other dogs. He is crate trained. He would love a home for the holidays. Is there room in your home for this little guy?

To meet Bert fill out an online application.

JACK GALLOWAY HARRIS

September 12, 1923 – November 25, 2014

It is with great sadness that we announce the passing of Jack Galloway Harris, age 91, on Tuesday morning, November 25th, 2014. Jack was born in the Kern County town of Ford City, CA (later changed to Taft). Shortly thereafter, the family moved to Long Beach, where they resided until he was 6 years old. In the midst of the Great Depression, Jack, his mother and two sisters moved to San Diego's Little Italy District. San Diego provided a wonderful childhood for him as he forged many great friendships and memories. As kids, he couldn't resist telling us of how he and his buddies would shag fly balls for hours on end for Hall of Fame great Ted Williams. It was because of this that our dad steadfastly claimed Williams was the greatest ballplayer to ever play the game. And, if the old man thought so, that was good enough for us.

It was in San Diego that Jack met his eventual wife, Beverley Jean Pearson. Upon high school graduation, Jack entered the Navy and proudly served on the U.S. Hazelwood in the Pacific Theater. After being honorably discharged from the Navy, he enrolled and graduated from San Diego State University with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Economics, coupled with a Teachers Credential. At SDSU he also found the time to excel in both football and wrestling. His initial teaching job was in the San Joaquin Valley town of Avenal. Jack honed his teaching skills in that Valley (as well as toiling in the summers in the fields for Standard Oil). Always looking to provide for a family of seven, he received an offer to relocate to the town of Salem, Oregon, to work in Management for Georgia Pacific. The move proved to be a nice change as he really enjoyed Oregon. However, he wasn't fulfilled in his capacity with the major corporation. He soon realized what he wanted was to be an educator. After a couple of years with Georgia Pacific, he moved the family, accepting a job in the Monterey Unified School District. When asked later why he gave up a position of upper management in such a prominent corporation, he simply stated that he was "a teacher, not a businessman". And, as the saying goes, he never looked back, as he completed a much accomplished teaching career, fortified by a Masters Degree from San Jose State University in Special Education. Throughout his years as an educator, he left many positive, lasting impressions on young minds in the MUSD schools he worked at. Upon retirement, he still had a burning desire to teach and for several years afterward, was a substitute teacher at elementary schools in Gonzales and other Salinas Valley towns. His whole life was focused on the youth of the Peninsula as he was a Little League Baseball Coach, Wrestling Coach at MPC, and without a doubt, his greatest contribution to the area were his years of officiating wrestling matches (High School and College) as well as approximately 40 years of Refereeing High School, Junior College, and Division II College football games. On Sundays, he was more than happy to volunteer his time to calling Pop Warner football. In later years, he also served as Commissioner of both sports. Jack and Bev had a long and wonderful life together. Their chemistry together was never more evident than out on the dance floor. The man could 'cut a rug'. As a dance couple, they were regularly the envy and admiration of all in attendance. Many was the time when people would stop dancing just to watch our parents do their thing. Jack was a long standing member of the BPOE Elks Club in Monterey and also served for a couple of years as the President of the Japanese American Citizens League (JAACL). He is predeceased in death by wife Beverley, his mother Edith Galloway Harris, and sisters Dortha and Geraldine. He is survived by sons Scott (Laura), Randall (Leonora), Brad (Sandy), Greg, and daughter Josette (Michael). He had two granddaughters, Renata and Jillian, grandsons Steve (Selmay), Joe (Bessie) and great grandsons Joey and Paul. We would be remiss in not saying that Jack G. Harris had an everlasting love affair with the Monterey Peninsula and all its peoples. He truly loved it here and would not have dreamed of living anywhere else. The Harris Family would like to thank profusely the kind and professional efforts of Dr. Walligora, Family In Home Care Services, as well as the Visiting Nurses Association (VNA) – Heartland Hospice. God Bless you all. Memorial services pending.

'Let There Be Pebble' writer at library

THE AUTHOR of several books about golf, Zachary Michael Jack, will talk about his favorite sport Saturday, Dec. 6, at the Carmel Valley Library.

Jack's titles include "Let There Be Pebble: A Middle-Handicapper's Year in America's Garden of Golf;" "The Links of Evelon," and his latest work, "Pond Ball Clintock and the Gods of Golf: A Novel for True Believers."

"There is something special about the connection between golf and the imagination," Jack writes.

The latest installment in the library's First Saturdays series, the free event starts at 10:15 a.m. The library is located at 65 W. Carmel Valley Road. Call (831) 659-2377.

SEATING

including whether fenced, decked or delineated dining spaces should be viewed differently than casual sidewalk seating.

A second option is to require all un-permitted outdoor seats to have water permits or compel restaurant owners to remove them. That proposal involves the concept that a seat is a seat and that the district requires water permits for all seats — indoor and outdoor. But that idea presents a number of problems including a lack of records showing the number of seats restaurants have added through the years.

The third option is to maintain the district's current practice, which allows outdoor seating as a supplement to a restaurant's existing water use and assumes there is no intensification of use from outdoor seating.

Locke said restaurant owners still have the option of removing seats indoors and putting an equal number outside. And the water demand committee will discuss the possibility of allowing outdoor seating on the condition restaurants install water efficient dishwashers, hot water systems, disposals, stoves and other devices.

"The district isn't trying to eliminate outdoor seating," Locke said. "But rather, if they are going to regulate it, to find a way it will work within the district's policies."

Laguna Seca ranges reopened

By MARY SCHLEY

THE TWO shooting ranges at Laguna Seca — the public range, and a separate area used by law enforcement — were quietly closed by the Monterey County Parks Department Sept. 3 for safety improvements. They reopened Monday.

“After 40-plus years of operating for the benefit of the shooting public, the Laguna Seca Public Shooting Range was due for a complete safety review and necessary upgrades,” said Maia Carroll, spokeswoman for the County of Monterey.

Carroll said the improvements were made as a consultant reviews the overall operations of the parks department.

“If you have been following this, you know that the department has had significant fiscal problems, and efforts are ongoing to stabilize finances and look at new ways to operate more efficiently,” she said.

Range staff and parks workers shut down the ranges and began making improvements, even though the consultant had yet to review their needs.

“The department is expecting that among recommendations will be that the department make improvements and upgrades to the range,” she said. “Parks leadership is in the final process of outlining a list of work to be done, but in the meantime, range staff is doing maintenance and improvements they feel are needed and that are likely to be recommended.”

She credited the “excellent staff who know what is needed” for being proactive. Their list included replacing and repairing the range seating, raising and refurbishing the berms that border the shooting zones, rebuilding frames for targets, and other changes.

The work was also intended to protect people in areas beyond the shooting range. While it's impossible to ensure no rounds will ever leave the range and land in an adjacent part of the land owned by county parks, which includes the Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca track, the review and upgrades under way attempt to minimize that risk.

"Some of the improvements were specifically designed to decrease the likelihood of rounds leaving the range," she said. Lowering the "blue sky" window, for instance, makes it more difficult for shooters to fire into the air, which could have a round land beyond the range, since a bullet that doesn't hit a target or other hard surface can travel for more than a mile before falling to the ground. The blue-sky window refers to the amount of sky visible from the area where shooters stand and fire, and is controlled by the overhang.

"We are also considering what improvements to make to the long-range targets," she said, including removing them.

During the last fiscal year, the public range, which is open Friday through Monday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., had 11,562 visits. Rates for using the range are $10 per person for the first hour, with $2 per person for subsequent 15-minute intervals. The law-enforcement range is operated by the Monterey County Peace Officers Association and is available to MCPOA members and their guests daily, though nighttime shoots can also be arranged, as long as they are over by 8 p.m., in accordance with county noise regulations.

and resilient spirit we share.”

In addition to Buccola’s sharp and translucent creations, the party will feature house music, Tudor wines, a vegan feast from Salvatore Panzuto and raw desserts from Kari Bernardi.

The site of a reception from 6 to 9 p.m., the gallery is located at San Carlos and Seventh next to Mundaka. Call (831) 238-9830.

As they’ve done many times before, painters Reed Farrington and Keith Lindberg will display their new work together at the Chapman Gallery, which hosts a reception for the two artists Saturday from 6 to 8 p.m.

Friends and painting partners for decades, both artists live down the coast — Farrington lives in Big Sur, while Lindberg resides in the Carmel Highlands.

“They are both what I would call ‘California impressionists,’ said Dean Chapman, who along with his wife, Joanna, owns the downtown gallery. “They both paint in oils and use intense colors. It’s nice to show their work together — they really complement each other’s work well.”

The gallery is located on Seventh between San Carlos and Mission. The show continues through Jan. 31. Call (831) 626-1766.

Painter Mary Titus hosts a reception Saturday from 5 to 8 p.m. at her gallery. She’ll be joined by 11 artists she represents, including sculptors Audrey Lynne Cook, Dey Young, Pierre Riche and John Chappell, and a guest artist, furniture designer John Arenskov. The Mary Titus Gallery is located on San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth. Call (831) 622-9880.

And Sunset Center’s Marjorie Evans Gallery will be the site of a reception Friday from 3 to 5 p.m. for Creekside Farms of Greenfield, which is presenting “Holiday Hope,” a fundraising display of wreaths made from a variety of foliage. The exhibit is on display through the end of the month. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth.

■ The poetry of painting

Artist, writer and poet Carolyn Kleefeld unveils a retrospective exhibit of her abstract paintings Friday at the Gallery at Ventana Inn and Spa in Big Sur.

The author of 19 books and a Big Sur resident for more than three decades, Kleefeld will display 20 of her otherworldly paintings, which Ventana gallery director Alfonso Corona describes as “windows into a timeless space.” “Her life-long passion for art and writing are reflected in this show through wonderful abstract visions full of light, color and her surreal visual language,” Corona said.

Kleefeld will read from her most recent book, “The Divine Kiss,” which brings together her passion for art and poetry.

The gallery, which hosts a reception from 5 to 8 p.m., represents more than 20 artists, including painters Erin Lee Gafill, Branham Rendlen, Jan Wagstaff and Melissa Lofton, and photographer Daniel Bianchetta.

The show continues through Jan. 31. The Ventana Inn and Spa is located on Highway 1 about 27 miles south of Carmel. Call (831) 667-4298.

■ Bling and the art of humor

While the Carmel Valley Art Association is best known for its roster of painters, its jewelers take center stage when the gallery presents a reception Saturday, from 1 to 5 p.m., for John Allioti, Jules Brant, Burton Jespersion, Larry John Probst, Ron Rice, Jody Royee, Kay Walters and Carlaine Willis.

The following day from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., painter Will Bullas will greet guests, talk about his art and display his sharp wit. “Come in, have a chat, and see his fine art of humor,” said gallery owner Shelley Allioti. “Just try not to laugh — we double dare you.”

The gallery is located at 2 Chambers Lane, just steps away from Will’s Fargo restaurant and the Carmel Valley Market. Call (831) 659-2441.

■ And the winner is ...

If you’ve purchased a raffle ticket for this year’s fundraising Patrons’ Show at the Pacific Grove Art Center, your wait is almost over. The drawing will happen at the art center Sunday, Dec. 7, at 2 p.m.

The holder of the first ticket drawn will be able to pick from any of the 87 pieces of art featured in the exhibit, and drawing will continue until every painting, drawing and photograph has been claimed. Ticket holders must be present at the drawing to claim a piece of art.

The art center is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave.

American exceptionalism

IF YOU'VE ever been to one of the fundraisers or award dinners that take place all the time around the Monterey Peninsula, there's a good chance you've heard a featured speaker or honoree describe his own life as an example of the American Dream.

"I come from humble beginnings, and when I think about where I am today [a respected government official, accomplished scientist, esteemed journalist, award-winning musician, renowned lawyer, whatever], all I can say is, 'Only in America,'" the speaker is likely to proclaim.

The idea seems to be that the uniqueness of the United States is that it's a place where anyone can succeed — which it is, but that's not what makes us different.

In many parts of the world, people who weren't born into privilege have achieved great things.

The prime minister of India, Narendra Modi, for example, is the child of a family of grocers. Jack Ma, the richest man in China and founder of the website Alibaba, was an English teacher before he was a mogul. Soccer star David Beckham's mother was a hairdresser and his father was a plumber. U.N. Secretary General Ban Ki-Moon grew up in a family of refugees during the Korean War. Etc., etc., etc.

In Stalin's Soviet Union, which was the most rigid society in history, it was actually necessary to be from a peasant or working class family to get anywhere.

There are still monarchies and dictatorships in some nations, of course, and being born rich or powerful sounds great when you're just daydreaming, but the truth — around the world — is that people who have to struggle a bit during their early lives are more likely to be ambitious, and it's also true that in most countries success is based on one's education and accomplishments, not one's heritage.

The United States is unique — but not because so many people go from rags to riches here.

What makes this country unique is that our Founding Fathers decreed that the purpose of government was not to protect the privilege of the upper classes, collect taxes, guarantee equality or any other thing that governments commonly strive to do, but to protect the individual rights of the people — rights that included (as the Declaration of Independence says) "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," and which the Constitution went on to enumerate much more thoroughly.

This enshrinement of individual freedom as the purpose of government was unique at the time, and is still unusual today. And the political foresight and courage of the Founders to create a government based on personal liberty — coming as it did in an environment of European achievement in science and the arts, and on a continent where the frontier offered limitless possibilities for individuals to chart their own paths — gave birth to a nation which created prosperity and innovation unprecedented by a factor of at least 10 in the history of the world.

The history of the United States is not perfect, of course, with slavery and racial discrimination being its greatest flaws. But our nation is better than all others — and the reason is not that it's a land of opportunity, but that it has long been a land of freedom.

Indeed, the opportunity cited by so many speakers at so many banquets flows from the freedom, not vice versa.

If there's a question-and-answer session the next time you hear someone talk about his humble origins and the uniqueness of the American experience as a land of opportunity, raise your hand and ask whether the speaker disagrees that it's actually personal freedom that has made us unique.

If he thinks about it for five seconds, he surely won't.

A 'sacred, tranquil place'

Dear Editor,

When you put parking meters into a sacred, tranquil place such as Carmel it puts a bad taste in the mouths of people — of the locals, of the tourists and of the shopkeepers. Carmel is other worldly — it is all about ambiance and beauty and getting away from the hustle and bustle of the outside world. When you put parking meters into such a place of beauty and calm, it interrupts the energy that has been in play more than 100 years. (Carmel was founded in 1902.)

According to Wikipedia, "The city regularly hosts delegations from cities and towns around the world seeking to understand how the village retains its authenticity in today's increasingly homogeneous world." Carmel's authenticity has just been compromised with the addition of these parking meters.

There has to be a more conducive solution to the parking problem other than making such a drastic change to Carmel's easy going and comfortable nature. This is another example of punishing the majority due to a problem with the minority. There has to be another solution. We need to brainstorm some more. If there was a public forum on this, I missed it.

Let's all speak out. We need to protect Carmel-by-the-Sea. It is one of the most special places on earth. Let us keep her this way. Speak out now.

How to run against Burnett

Dear Editor,

Here's some unsolicited advice for anyone contemplating running to replace incompetent, scandal-plagued Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett: If you campaign on one issue and one issue alone — a promise to remove the Ocean Avenue parking kiosks — you will probably win.

If these kiosks are allowed to remain in place, they mark the beginning of the end of the Carmel we have known.

Who signed parking contract?

Dear Editor,

According to your Nov. 28 article (let me see if I understand this): $304,623 total revenue from the new parking system for six months, and the company installing and maintaining the system gets $161,988?

Who signed this deal, Donald Duck?

Time to turn down emotions in illegal immigration debate

IT'S HARD to have a reasoned debate about immigration reform. While we need a practical and pragmatic solution to a very real problem, strong emotions cloud the process of seeking one. The very choice of debate terminology is burdened with an emotional overlay. Is it fair to refer to those who crossed the border illegally as "illegal immigrants," or should we accede to the demands of some that the proper descriptor is "undocumented workers?"

No amount of linguistic legerdemain can alter the reality that those who entered the

And many are essential to industries such as agriculture, hospitality and construction. Who will take up the slack if they are rounded up and shipped off to the country of their birth? We need to be practical; the competing emotional stances — "They're here illegally and have to leave," versus "They are simply seeking a better life and should be allowed to stay" — only tighten our gridlock.

In the face of Republican recalcitrance to address the issue in a comprehensive fashion — or even allow the bill that passed the Senate with bipartisan support to come to a vote in the House — President Obama signed an executive order that may free as many as 5 million illegal immigrants from the risk of deportation, if they take advantage of its offerings.

To obtain what equates to a long-term resident status, including the right to work, those who came here illegally more than five years ago and have children who are citizens must register, pay fees, submit to a background check, and pay taxes. There are promises as well of increased border security. It's far from a perfect solution. First, it seems grossly unfair to those pursuing the slow process of lawful immigration. Second, one can argue that it incentivizes illegal conduct. Third, history tells us that it probably will accomplish few of its goals.

The Immigration Reform and Control Act, signed into law by President Reagan on Nov. 6, 1986, legalized immigrants who had been in the country continuously for five years, registered, submitted to background checks, and paid fees and back taxes. It, too, promised increased border security and was touted as the beginning of the end of illegal immigration. At the time there were 5 million illegal immigrants in the nation. Today there are more than twice that many.

Despite all of that, I applaud President Obama for taking the action he took. I don't believe for a minute that his executive order will accomplish much more than the 1986 legislation did, but deporting people who were brought here as children, or deporting the parents of those with every legal right to be here, hardly makes sense. And making those who benefit from the executive order pay fees and income taxes softens the economic burden the rest of us have borne for years.

From a logical and dispassionate perspective, the core components of the order make sense. It is not intended as, and clearly is not, a complete reform of a broken system. But it's a start.

If the Republicans think that they can do better, they need to make a proposal and Congress can vote on it.

In Any Case

By NEIL SHAPIRO

country without our government's permission violated title 8, section 1325 of the United State Code, a statute that prescribes that violators "be fined under title 18 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both" for a first offense, and "not more than two years" for a "subsequent commission of any such offense." But terminology should not be dispositive of the contours of our immigration policies.

Nor should scenarios woven of whole cloth hold meaningful sway in the debate. I have been told by several friends, for example, that "undocumented workers contribute more to our state's finances than they take from it." I assume that they sincerely want to believe that shibboleth, but the empirical evidence strongly refutes it; in truth, the balance tips in the other direction by billions of dollars each year. Estimates place the dollar amount of taxes paid by those in California illegally at roughly $2.7 billion, while the amount spent on education, healthcare and incarceration of that same group exceeds $10 billion.

Stripped of emotion, the facts and choices are pretty much beyond dispute. According to the Department of Homeland Security, in 2011 there were 11.5 million illegal immigrants living in the United States, more than 2.8 million of them here in California. Significant numbers have been here a decade or two, or even longer, and some have children who are citizens by virtue of their birth here.

Do we deport the parents and make them either leave their children behind or take them to a country as foreign to them as it would be to us?

Others have children they brought here illegally at a young age — children who know no other country.

Do we deport those children?

City Christmas tree lighting Dec. 5

CARMEL MAYOR Jason Burnett will ceremoniously light the city's Christmas tree at Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street Friday, Dec. 5, around 5:45 p.m., following the annual celebration that begins with the arrival of Santa Claus via fire engine to nearby Devendorf Park, at 3:30 p.m. Entertainment — including children's choirs, professional singers, an recitation of "'Twas the Night Before Christmas" — will begin at 4:30 p.m., and Burnett, accompanied by some members of the city council, will then light the tree. Cookies and drinks will be provided by the local chapter of the American Red Cross, and the lighting ceremony will be held rain or shine.

And at Sunset Center from 3 to 5 p.m., a holiday party will take place in the lobby, with refreshments and photos in front of the majestic tree in the lobby.

Following the tree lighting, revelers can wander across the street to the Carmel Plaza, which will hold its annual open house, with entertainment and treats.

And at the other corner of the intersection, Carmel Presbyterian Church will present its Christmas Extravaganza, with a living nativity scene, Christmas carols sung by the choir and played by the instrumental ensemble, and family advent wreath making. Hot apple cider and Christmas treats will be on offer, too.

C.V. lighting Dec. 6

THANKS TO last year's generous donation by the Bonfante family, this year's display of holiday decorations in Carmel Valley Village promises to be the dazzling and colorful yet, reported Paul Ingram of the Carmel Valley Recreation and Park District, one of three groups leading the effort.

Capping off the display will be the lighting of the Christmas tree in Carmel Valley Community Park, which happens Saturday, Dec. 6, at 4:30 p.m.

Hot chocolate, cider and pastries will be served, and district president Joe Hertlein will be the MC. New this holiday season to the village is a particularly striking decoration from the Bonfante collection — a 25-foot-tall Santa Claus that was placed this week next to the Chevron station along Carmel Valley Road.

The park is located at Carmel Valley and Ford roads.

HOLIDAY PARTIES YOU'LL BE VERY GLAD YOU MISSED

IT'S A good time of year to count your blessings. One thing I'm most thankful for is that I no longer have to entertain at big, boozy holiday bashes thrown by clubs, trade associations and professional organizations. For a guy in the humor business, those kinds of parties can be a challenge. Over the years I've appeared at dozens of them, and it seems like something always goes awry.

You might not believe this, but there was a time not so long ago when dirty comedy material was frowned upon in polite company. Comedians of my era were restrained by banquet tables were decorated with the usual Christmas flair. But instead of holiday centerpieces, each table had several bottles of Gin, Scotch, Bourbon and Vodka. Enough fire water to put a Marine battalion under the table.

The partyers grew more raucous by the minute. By the time I was introduced, the 80-proof centerpieces had been emptied and the crowd was completely snookered.

May you never know the joy of trying to entertain 200 heckling, food-fighting, peevishly pickled plumbers.

Right in the middle of my act, a full-scale brawl broke out. I'm talking upturned tables, broken bottles, flying debris. When a plate sailed over my head like a Frisbee, I took my cue to exit the stage while I was still upright.

When I went to pick up my check, the guy who booked me said, "I'll pay you, but you don't deserve it. You didn't even finish your act!"

But the worst holiday booking I ever had was in Oregon at a joint outside of Eugene. Every fledgling comedian has to work those kinds of clubs — places you ordinarily wouldn't go near without a vaccination and a quart of Deet.

This dive was the Girlies Galore Club. They catered to a very exclusive clientele — sex-starved lumberjacks. Those guys had been out in the woods so long they had mildewed.

The club had certain restrictions, though. A gentleman was not admitted unless he had bad breath, a beer belly, and at least two hickeys from a 300-pound moose. A lot of guys came directly from work still lugging their chainsaws.

The lineup of entertainment included several exotic female dancers, and me, Mr. Sugar-and-Spice, with not a single off-color joke in my routine. What kind of comedy do you do for a bunch of roaring drunk sex maniacs with chainsaws?

The headliner was Narda and Her Doves. I had worked with Narda in Phoenix City, Ala. As she danced around the stage, trained doves flew out and removed her seven veils standards imposed by television. In order to appear on the tube, we could not do risqué or even suggestive jokes, and foul language was unthinkable. Didn't bother me — I never worked "blue" anyway.

I got a booking one time at a Christmas party in Pennsylvania for firefighters and their wives. When I arrived, the burly fire chief who hired me took me aside and demanded to know if my act was dirty. "We had a big problem last year," he said. "The comic we hired used a lot of filthy words. People were upset. So I'm warning you. Any bad language or dirty jokes, I'll shut off your mic and haul you off the stage."

I assured him my material was spotless, but his threat was unnerving anyway.

Fortunately, my show went well enough that three years later they invited me back. Once again the same fire chief took me aside before the show. "You planning on telling dirty jokes?" he inquired.

"Absolutely not," I told him.

"That's a problem," he said. "We don't mind dirty jokes and four-letter words. The more the merrier. We're not a bunch of uptight prudes here." Who knew? I was not about to throw in a string of gratuitous F-bombs at the last minute. So I did my regular routine, which went over so well I never got another booking there again.

Another holiday season I was booked by a plumbers union in San Bernardino. The

Blisters, burns and the glass ceiling — and how to overcome them

MOST FOLKS — even if they're unfamiliar with the restaurant business — know that Mother's Day is the single biggest day for dining out in the United States. In 1974, it was Dorothy Maras's first day on the job as a server at Carnation Ice Cream in Servers in family restaurants do more than take your order and bring it to the table. They often plate their own soups and salads, supply bread baskets, pour all the beverages and assemble desserts. Mother's Day is no place for an amateur. Maras assumed she'd get some training. Instead, the manager pointed to a section and said, "Those five tables are yours."

Sacramento. Maras — who is now senior culinary liaison at the company that stages Pebble Beach Food & Wine — recounted that her first day was nearly her last.

At the end of the eight-hour shift, she said, "My feet were blistered, I had ice cream in my armpits, hot fudge in my hair, and burns on both arms from carrying hot plates."

At the 2012 Pebble Beach Food & Wine, Dorothy Maras had the opportunity to become friends with master chef Jacques Pepin — not bad for someone who got her start in the business waiting tables at a café in Sacramento.

Meg's HEALTH NOTES

GUEST WRITER — SYDNEY STILWELL

I want to extend an invitation to you to be part of our campaign! AIM for Mental Health is a local charitable campaign to raise money for mental health research for children, teens, and young adults. Our mission is also to raise awareness of the tremendous increase in mental health concerns among our nation's youth.

For 6 years my mother and I have been part of a mother-daughter philanthropic group, volunteering with various charities on the Monterey Peninsula. We recognized a huge void when it comes to mental health. There are some wonderful organizations that work with the mentally ill, but no one was talking about finding cures for any of the mental disorders that affect young people. We knew that something had to be done. So we started AIM for Mental Health!

ADHD, anxiety, depression, bipolar disorder, autism spectrum disorders — all are on the rise. We know that kids often self-medicate with alcohol and drugs. Pharmacists are overwhelmed with the number of ADHD prescriptions being written. Suicide is the 3rd highest cause of death among young people (behind accidents and homicides). Juvenile halls and jails are overcrowded. And no one really knows what to do or what is the right treatment for mental or brain disorders. We have to get to the core of the problem and fund research to find treatments and cures.

AIM is affiliated with a very well-organized and forward-thinking non-profit called the International Mental Health Research Organization ("IMHRO"), also known as the One Mind Institute, which is committed to funding brain research for psychiatric illnesses. Because of this valuable relationship, AIM not only is able to boast minimal administrative expenses, but also can take advantage of IMHRO's Advisory Board of ten top brain scientists when it comes to disbursing monies raised.

So we have a plan. AIM for Mental Health is setting up a community model on the Monterey Peninsula that will then be incorporated in other communities. The success and attention that AIM has attained in less than a year is a testament to the tremendous need for such a campaign. Our first annual dinner this past August to raise money for research raised over $250,000, and AIM's Walk for Kids' Mental Health on November 2 had almost 300 people in attendance! We have had a tremendous amount of support already, but to achieve our "aim" we need your help!

Please join our campaign! Visit www.aimformentalhealth.org. Join our email list and we will keep you informed on AIM events and progress. Thank you!

The kiosks need to go

Dear Editor,

Every August exotic cars line Ocean Avenue parking spaces for the duration of the Concours on the Avenue. This is an international show of major and historic proportions. What happens now? The Ferraris will be moved every four hours or the law will be suspended for select groups? Ouch.

The new meters are unwelcoming, unfriendly and unsightly.

Before even setting afoot; one must now deal with the hassle of locating kiosks, reading instructions, paying, and of deciding beforehand how much time to allow to enjoy the village. Making a decision of how much time to spend in town before the adventure is a discouraging restriction to adventure, leisure and fun.

The meters discourage persons who would decide to dine and shop on an impromptu discovery, not having deposited enough initially because the sweet discovery of gallery, restaurant or shop was not yet made and a return trip to feed a meter is a further inconvenience.

How much in sales tax will be lost due to people not wanting to feed meters?

The meters will push parking further into the residential side streets.

The meters are unfriendly to elderly and handicapped who travel from afar and do not have California Handicapped plates or signs.

They are a burden in inclement weather and after dark.

Unless posted in all languages, they are unfriendly to international travelers who speak a multitude of languages.

There's not enough room for them on our crowded sidewalks that are intended to serve pedestrians.

And they're just not welcoming or aesthetic.

Karen Williams, Carmel

Costs 'a disgrace'

Dear Editor,

My wife and I are avid readers of The Pine Cone. Needless to say, we have followed the city hall stories over the last year or so. We just read Mary Schley's article (Nov.

I said, “I’m never going back there.”” She slumped into a soothing bath. When she emerged, she spotted her apron on the floor, picked it up and shook out $73 in tips.

“I’m sure those were sympathy tips,” she laughed.

Her friends were making minimum wage — just $1.95 an hour — so that was a princely sum indeed.

“I started to think, maybe if I rested a little I could go back,” she said.

The next day the other servers started showing her the ropes, impressed that she’d survived and returned for more.

Back then, she was a music major and figured she’d end up either teaching or playing in an orchestra. But the money and the challenge of working in restaurants were too addictive. She married a chef at 19, and together they opened two restaurants in seven years. She worked in the front and back of the house, and did the books, banking and payroll.

She relished the challenge but was surprised by the prejudice she faced. She said vendors would arrive at the restaurant, take one look at her, and ask if her dad was around. Even as she gained experience, she fought gender bias for more than 20 years.

Maras said she moved here after a divorce because previous visits proved the climate was much better for her health than that of the Sacramento Valley. She started working at restaurateur Dave Bindel’s namesake restaurant in Monterey (now Restaurant 1833), and he was impressed with her abilities.

Chef and general manager were men’s jobs at the time. Women didn’t even wait tables in fine dining establishments. Imagine Maras’ surprise, then, when Bindel made her operations manager at the Old Bath House restaurant in Pacific Grove.

The men who worked there were suspicious of the only woman in the house, so she wisely decided just to watch and listen for a few months. Then she booked a wedding on a Saturday afternoon to bring in extra revenue.

She said, “One of my grumpy waiters showed up at 4 p.m., surveyed the cleanup that needed to be done before the dinner shift, and said, ‘What idiot planned this?’”

Maras took the waiter outside, directly in front of the restaurant’s front door, where staff could see them through the large oval window. She said, “I’m ‘the idiot.’ I’m here to bring in money and that’s what I’m doing. And from here on out, you’ll call me Dorothy.”

Over time, she won the staff’s respect, but it didn’t stop customers from asking, “Where’s the real manager? Is he

28) regarding John Hanson and we’re hoping that at some point The Pine Cone can get information from city hall regarding the total costs associated with the ill timed hiring of Jason Stilwell through the re-hiring of John Hanson and other employees terminated by Stilwell without cause.

My guess is that these costs will be in the $3 million to $5 million range, without including attorney fees and the time wasted by city hall staff. Whatever the amount, it’s a disgrace, and those responsible should be held accountable. I would appreciate your consideration for the publication of this valuable information at your earliest convenience. Then, and only then, the residents will be able to put this matter behind us.

Jose Landazuri, Carmel

‘Don’t accept the mea culpas’

Dear Editor,

How do the people at city hall rationalize the pain, the humiliation, the unbelievable damage to our community, to our neighbors (including the Hansons, the McInchaks, Heidi, Margi P., etc.) resulting from their negligence, cowardice and stupidity? The Carmel City Council should resign immediately. Their failures of character, ethics and judgment are not redeemable. They cannot regain our trust with “making nice” overtures, a la “the Andersons in Boise,” etc. These five people failed the tests of true inquiry, proof, duty, and, most of all, a human perspective of the chaos unfolding all around them. Please don’t accept the mea culpas from this bunch. Just remember the human damage these misfits allowed.

Gene McFarland, Carmel

Frankenstein was fiction

Dear Editor,

Thank you for your continuing coverage of the compelling and sad saga of the Carmel city employees that were so callously and egregiously terminated by city manager Jason Stilwell with the blessing of the city council, led by Mayor Jason Burnett. I recently viewed a YouTube video of Burnett’s 2012 mayoral campaign kick-off. Burnett frequently mentions his ability to provide “leadership” to the city and the council. At one point he declares, “Being a mayor, you must not only know the rules and follow the rules, but you must run an open, inclusive and fair process.” He states, “I believe if you listen first, you’re much better equipped to make the tough decisions, and being mayor is about exercising leadership in tough situations.”

Obviously, Burnett must give himself an “F” for leadership in his oversight of this mess, and the council as a whole is culpable of allowing his lack of leadership to besmirch the reputations and lives of the poor employees who were tossed aside with no discernible signs of humanity. Thankfully, John in?”

Nevertheless, she called her time at the Old Bath House, “a brilliant 15 years” and fondly remembered the great group of people she’d worked with.

For the last eight years, she’s worked on Pebble Beach and Los Angeles Food & Wine with Coastal Luxury Management. She reminisced about sitting on the floor of their small Carmel office during the first year of the Pebble Beach event, sorting out credentials. She said when she pulled up to the Inn at Spanish Bay on opening day, “I thought that this must be what Walt Disney felt like when he opened Disneyland.”

She now works with chefs and their teams for both events, handling everything, from getting their chef’s coats, to ordering their ingredients, to telling them — diplomatically — that they have to change their dishes because they don’t go with the wine being served. Of the chefs she works with, she said, “Those are my people. I know their language, and I know when not to speak to them — that’s important, too. I get to work with the best of the best of the tribe.” She no longer has to fight for respect. She’s earned it.

one by one, until she was down to her last bird.

My enviable job was to open the show. The lumberjacks made it clear they were there to see the strippers, not some squeaky clean Joe College comic in a suit and tie.

It was the first time I got booed before I took the stage. They greeted me with a warm, woodcutters welcome: jeers, catcalls and guys hollering, “Bring on the broads!” That was the high point of the night for me. From then on it was all down hill.

Later in my career, I made friends with the gut-wrenching experience of having a bad night. It happens. But that Christmas show in Oregon was the first and only time something more impressive than a harmless bit of boogie ever drove me off the stage. If the ear-piercing roar of a dozen chainsaws doesn’t get your attention, then you might’ve had way too much eggnog.

Carmel resident Larry Wilde is a former standup comedian and the author of 53 published books of humor. With sales over 12 million copies The New York Times has called him “America’s Best-Selling Humorist.” E-mail larry@larry-wilde.com.

Hanson is getting his job back and another two employees will soon be back at work.

Your article quotes Burnett as saying Hanson had pointed out some safety factors for Burnett’s house remodeling to ensure it was safer for a newborn baby. Burnett said “We took his advice and I’m really glad we did. That’s the thing about John. He thinks about things on a human level, and there are hundreds of stories across the community about how John has made people’s lives better and safer and more comfortable.”

Gosh, wouldn’t it have been nice if Mayor Burnett and the rest of the city council had “acted on a human level” and conducted even a cursory investigation into Stilwell’s conduct and why he determined that these loyal employees deserved to be discarded? Of course, oftentimes when one is “to the manor born” and has never had to worry about making it on a “lowly” public employee income, he or she has little or no concern for the ramifications of their actions.

Your Nov. 28 editorial, “Questions remain,” is so very pertinent to the present mayor and city council. What reasons/facts did Stilwell present to this elected body that they signed off on these terminations? If it wasn’t for your paper and for the concerned citizens marching on city hall like the villagers in Frankenstein, Stilwell would still be wielding his abuse of power. Of course, Frankenstein was a fictional monster; Stilwell was the real thing.

Hopefully Mayor Burnett and the city council will discover their humanity this Christmas season and reflect on the unbelievable tragedy they caused Steve McInchak and his family, may he rest in peace. Hopefully they have acknowledged the role they played in his death and will do their utmost to compensate his family for their tremendous loss, rather than dragging them through the courts.

Your opinion sought on median lighting

DO YOU prefer the cords of white lights wrapped around trees, the projected colored pinpoints of light, the small lanterns at the ends of the medians, uplighting, downlighting — or a combination thereof? Those options, and others, will be the subject of a meeting Monday that will begin with a walking tour of the different lighting options displayed in the Ocean Avenue medians between Mission and Lincoln streets.

A subcommittee of the planning commission organized the displays and will solicit feedback at the meeting, which will start at 5 p.m. Dec. 8 at the intersection of Ocean Avenue and Mission Street. After examining the options in the medians along the north side of Ocean, participants will move to the comfort of city hall to hash out the winners and losers. The committee will subsequently make recommendations to be considered by the full planning commission at a later date.

Anyone with questions should call the planning and building department at (831) 620-2010.

Mary Devota Martin

February 3, 1929 - December 2, 2014

PEBBLE BEACH - Mary Martin died peacefully at her Pebble Beach home on December 2nd. Mary was born in Chicago, Illinois on the 3rd of February 1929 to Joseph and Devota Merrion. She attended Chicago schools and graduated from Barat College. Mary met Gerry Martin and they were married in 1957. In 1962 they moved to the Monterey Peninsula. She enjoyed her family, painting, golf and tennis. Her devout catholic faith was always a constant.

She is survived by her daughter, Molly, sons Joseph (Anne), Gerard (Kristina) and Bill (Miae) and six grandchildren. Mary was predeceased by her husband Gerry in 1997.

The family wishes to thank Espey Merino and Ruby Luna and their family who provided her with care for the past two years.

A memorial service for Mary will be held at the Carmel Mission Basilica on Saturday, December 6th at 2:00 p.m.

Contributions in Mary's name may be made to the Carmel Mission.

If these meals aren't available in heaven, why bother going there?

MUCH OF what happens on Thanksgiving and Christmas involves food. It seems that as soon as we get up from the Thanksgiving turkey we are sitting down to the Christmas ham. In between, if you're like me, the never-ending parties also offer irresistible treats of all sorts. And we are blessed with so many fine restaurants in Carmel that you could easily spend the greater part of a year eating out without seeing the same menu twice.

Yet with this gastronomic superabundance there are certain foods that have to be prepared and eaten at home. They are foods so good that your stomach screams: "Oh, this is heavenly!" I have certain meals that I like so much that without them Heaven might not be what I've imagined. What are they? Thought you would never ask.

No. 1 is pasta and meatballs. Sorry, Monterey, but this East Coast Eye-tye guy has not had a great restaurant Italian meal since moving here. Forget your $20 pasta dishes. Where I come from you'd need a cart and four donkeys to carry $20 worth of pasta.

Then there's the sauce. I can tell by the color whether the sauce will be too sweet or too bland. I've had so much watery marinara that I don't know if I should complain to the Italian Embassy or to the water board. And no Parmesan cheese, please. Good mild, finely grated Romano cheese goes on pasta. Period!

Most restaurant meatballs should be flat rather than round so we can use them as the hockey pucks they taste like. One restaurant served me a meatball so big and rubbery that I think I saw it in the movie "Bend It Like Beckham."

And restaurants should never try to entice me with their "all-beef meatballs." Sorry guys, it takes the right combination of beef, pork, veal, eggs, sauce, milk-soaked bread and onion to make a meatball worthy enough to be served at St. Peter's table.

Two is meatloaf. Restaurants should never serve meatloaf. And they should never advertise it as being just like mom made. I would have asked to be adopted out if my mom made meatloaf the way most restaurants do. I've had restaurant meatloaf so dry and hard that if you painted red and green dots on it you can pass it off as fruitcake. Two thumbs down from all the saints in heaven if you tried to get most meatloaf through the Pearly Gates.

Three is beef stew, another meal restaurants should leave off the menu. Start with good beef, cut it in half inch cubes. Brown it until you have scrapings you can dislodge from the pan. Take the meat out of the pan. Use beef broth, no water. Thicken it like you would gravy. Keep adding broth, thicken it some more. Put the beef back in when you have enough broth to cover it. Add potatoes, carrots, onions and/or scalions. Simmer until everything is tender. Chow down.

Four is pizza. Not the tomato stained Frisbees you get everywhere in this country, but real stuffed pizza, with a filling made from ricotta, mozzarella, eggs, Parmesan, wine, and Margherita pepperoni, which is made with pork and beef and seasoned liberally with red and black pepper (only Margherita brand because of the flavor and oils it exudes when baked). The filling is forked onto thinly rolled dough, which is folded over the filling, then baked in the oven. Some Italians with delicate palates call this three-cheese pizza, The angels rejoiced the first time they tasted this.

Fifth heavenly meal: Tomato soup, baby, right from Andy Warhol's favorite can of Campbell's. Mix with milk, not water. Serve hot, hot, hot. Crumble in enough Saltines to make your spoon stand up straight. Serve with a grilled cheese sandwich with thin pickle slices sleeping in the melted cheese. This is mama-has-her-arms-around-you food that, perhaps, only someone who's been outside shoveling snow for two hours can appreciate.

Something with your morning coffee or for dessert: pastachotte. There may be many paths to heaven, but one surely went through the long-gone Virginia Pastry Shoppe in Buffalo, N.Y., where you got a taste of heaven by biting into a pastachotte — a half-circle turnover filled with the world's best vanilla cream with a hint of citron flavor. Cannoli is close to a pastachotte, but not as delicate.

Notice most of these heavenly foods are Italian. That's my comfort zone. What's yours? Share them. Send them to me. Maybe we can get some kind of a Heavenly Meal Plan going.

Buon appetito.
