WORST DISGUISE IN HISTORY?

■ Suspect in Santa Cruz bank robbery nabbed for breaking into P.O. boxes

By MARY SCHLEY

A 31-YEAR-OLD Sand City resident suspected of dressing in drag to rob a Santa Cruz bank earlier this month was arrested by Carmel police outside the post office Monday afternoon, after he was identified in an April 19 car burglary downtown. Brandon Calantoc is also accused of breaking into post office boxes, possessing stolen property and having drugs, and he was already wanted for failing to appear in court on pending burglary and drug cases.

At about 1:25 p.m. April 20, a police officer on foot patrol spotted Calantoc and a woman, Micaela Wimbush, 30, outside the post office and recognized them from the description of suspects in a car burglary at Mission and Fifth the previous day, according to Carmel Police Cmdr. Paul Tomasi.

A records check showed Calantoc had an outstanding arrest warrant, as did Wimbush, also for ditching a court hearing, and a search revealed the pair was in possession of numerous pieces of mail stolen from at least 16 people whose post office boxes Calantoc allegedly forced open with a pry tool. The duo had “lots of mail — anything they could get,”

Beach fire limit put on hold

■ Appeals filed, pollution monitoring planned

By MARY SCHLEY

A SCENIC Road couple and a pair of other residents filed appeals against the city's plans to limit fires on Carmel Beach, and the city council is set to hear their objections at its May 4 meeting. Received last Monday, the four separate appeals claim that the pilot program — which includes the installation of 26 fire rings and a ban on charcoal barbecues — would violate the city's Local Coastal Program.

The fire rings would contradict the LCP's policies that require “maintaining the natural beach setting and the informal atmosphere,” and state that “maximum public access and recreational use of the shoreline will be provided,” according to two of the appellants, Via Mar Monte resident Nancy Chira-Garcia and San Antonio Avenue resident Alexis Delehanty.

They also believe the pits will present safety hazards, because they could be swept out to sea where a diver or surfer could be injured by smashing into them, someone could trip on them if they get covered with sand or kelp, and they could “force beach users closer to the water line, a danger on a beach unattended by lifeguards.” Further, the pair said in a statement, the pits could become trash receptacles, leading to pollution of the bay.

Scenic Road residents Bill and Mary Lou Shellose also filed similar appeals.

“Since the reason stated for the appeals on the filings is identical, the appeals will be consolidated, and a hearing set before the city council,” city administrator Doug Schmitz said Friday. “The council's decision is then appealable to the California Coastal Commission.”

The council is scheduled to hear their complaints at a special meeting Monday, May 4.

Schmitz also said supporters of the plan, which is intended to reduce the number of fires in order to improve air quality and lessen

Tiered rates ruling doesn't apply here

By KELLY NIX

AN APPELLATE court ruling this week over a Southern California city's tiered water rates — similar to the structure used on the Monterey Peninsula — could have big implications for water districts up and down the state, but won't affect the price of water here.

On Monday, justices with the 4th District Court of Appeal ruled San Juan Capistrano's tiered rates — a fee system designed to encourage conservation by penalizing higher water users — violated Proposition 218, a 1996 law that limits what government can charge for anything it sells to the cost of producing it.

JEWEL THIEF CAUGHT WITH BAG OF LOOT

By MARY SCHLEY

A MAN who cut a hole through the back wall of a jewelry store and filled a suitcase with $250,000 worth of necklaces, rings, earrings and other valuables was stopped in his tracks by two Carmel police officers responding to a burglar alarm at Viau Estate Jewelry on Mission Street early Tuesday morning, according to Cmdr. Paul Tomasi.

The alarm was received at first by a private monitoring company, which notified Carmel P.D. Thirty seconds later, officer Ricardo Mendoza and Cpl. Rachele Lightfoot arrived at the store with guns drawn and confronted Jiri Grym, 64, as he was leaving a bathroom in the alley that runs behind it. The San Diego man was holding a black suitcase and promptly admitted he had just burglarized the business, according to police.

Early morning blaze hits The Lodge

By MARY SCHLEY

FIREFIGHTERS CONVERGED on The Lodge at Pebble Beach and evacuated the main building — which contains the reception area, an ornate lobby overlooking the golf course, meeting rooms, three restaurants and six guest rooms — after a security guard reported seeing an unusual amount of smoke coming from the roof shortly after 4 a.m. Wednesday.

The first engine crew arrived three minutes after being dispatched and initially reported finding a fire in the chimney leading from one of the large fireplaces in the lobby, with smoke and sparks, but no open flames.

As they stood on the ladder and worked to get at the fire by removing fascia boards from the top of the chimney, flames erupted from the top, according to Cal Fire Battalion Chief Buddy Bloxham. Firefighters also cut through the roof near the base of the chimney to see if the fire had spread to the attic, but found nothing.

All told, about 25 firefighters from Cal Fire and Monterey Fire Department responded on five engines and a ladder truck to quickly confine the fire, though they had a difficult time locating the heat source, according to Cal Fire spokesman Jonathan Pangburn. A small fire was burning in the wood structure around the flue leading from the fireplace below, they found, and while no cause has been determined, Bloxham speculated it was probably some sort of flue failure.

“The fire was difficult to locate in the wall and chimney space,” Pangburn said, but they were able to contain it within an hour.

He also noted that Pebble Beach Company staff “worked

Regal bearing

SHE HOLDS her head like she knows she's special. She treads lightly, as if stepping in something sticky. People say she's calm, sweet, maybe even a little shy. But it may be merely her regal bearing controlling her countenance.

Her parents were both triple grand champions in the dog-show circuit. He was black, she was white, which yielded a small, charcoal-colored standard poodle. Annie could have rocked the runway at the AKC shows as well – her registered name is "Jetsetter, An Evening in Paris" – but her person was just looking for a pet.

"I shopped carefully for Annie, since I think she probably will be my last dog," says her person. "I did my research, which revealed a standard poodle is a good dog for an older person. They're smart, they mind; they're clean, social dogs who are good with both dogs and people."

Life is good for Annie who, at 6, is the same age and maturity level as her person's grandson, who just loves the dog. She's small, she's soft, and she looks up into the eyes of anyone petting her with a look of total devotion and true love. And, it turns out, four of her littermates live in the same town. When they get together, which is often, says her person, the dogs nuzzle and kiss one another with recognition and affection.

"Annie likes to play in the park, where she is free to run off leash, having been trained to stay out of the street," says her person. "She also loves to go to the beach and is so beautiful when she runs along the shore. She remains erect, her torso stays flat, and her legs move with the grace of a racehorse. She's just stunning. And she knows it."

Hannah

Hannah is a 4 pound, 9-year-old Chihuahua. She is very delicate and quiet and would do best with someone experienced with tiny dogs. She is fine with other dogs and cats. She loves to ride in the car, sit in a lap, and curl up in a bed. She would do best in a home without stairs. Hannah was rescued from a shelter after being surrendered by her guardian.

Seven nests boost hopes for condors

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOR THOSE who have worked since 1997 to reintroduce condors to the central California coast, news that seven nests have been built by the endangered birds in the wild is exciting.

“The light at the end of the tunnel is getting brighter and brighter,” said Kelly Sorenson of the nonprofit Ventana Wildlife Society, which has led efforts to return condors to local wildlands.

The seven nests represent the largest number VWS researchers have observed in the wild since the first nest was established in 2006.

While five of the nests were previously known, two were discovered last month. One of those appears to belong to three condors known as The Grimes Trio because they’ve frequently been sighted near Sea Lion Cove, which is located just south of Grimes Creek.

The second nest was found in a difficult-to-access cave that also appears to belong to a trio of condors. Two eggs are in that nest.

In one of the previously known nests — located 200 feet above the ground inside the burned-out cavity of a massive, old-growth redwood tree — a single egg was found. Researchers say it’s fertile and healthy.

In an effort to increase the number of condor chicks born in the wild, researchers monitor the nests, which is no small challenge, given how remote and inaccessible many are. In particular, they take a close look at any eggs that are present, and try to gauge whether each egg has the potential to produce a chick.

If an egg appears infertile, or its shell seems too thin to produce a live chick, researchers will place a fake egg in its place, which they later replace with an egg raised in captivity and ready to hatch. The nesting condors give no indication they are onto the ruse and are capable of raising chicks that aren’t their own. The folks at the VWS call this work, “pediatric condor care.”

“There are still only 421 California condors alive in the world,” said Sorenson of his group’s decision to intervene in the birds’

CHOMP nurse claims age discrimination

By KELLY NIX

A LONGTIME nursing manager at Community Hospital alleges in a new lawsuit that she was fired after complaining she was discriminated against because of her age and that her superiors were replacing older workers with younger ones.

Jane Erwin, 59, the former assistant director of CHOMP's Family Birth Center, contends she was a "competent and caring" employee until May 2014 when the hospital ended her long employment. Erwin claims her termination was, in part, a result of age discrimination.

After decades of working at the hospital, Erwin says CHOMP "adopted a policy or practice of favoring younger employees over older employees," according to the April 16 suit filed in Monterey County Superior Court.

The hospital also eliminated older workers from the pool of qualified personnel, targeted senior workers for "adverse employment action," and showed "disdain" for older employees, despite that group's higher education, greater experience and better skill set, according to Erwin, who was hired by CHOMP in June 1987 when she was 32.

As she got older, Erwin alleges hospital management "harassed, abused, and discriminated against her because of her age." Before firing her, Erwin alleges her superiors unlawfully retaliated against her after she spoke out about the alleged ageism.

"The defendants' conduct was cold, callous, despicable, malicious, oppressive, fraudulent and in conscious disregard" of Erwin's rights, the suit says.

Though CHOMP did not comment on the lawsuit, it said many of its workers are more than 55 years old.

environment that is free of discrimination and where employees' knowledge, competency, and experience are paramount," spokeswoman Brenda Moore told The Pine Cone. "We have nearly 2,100 employees and 559 of them — 27 percent — are 55 or older. The average age is 46."

The complaint, which seeks an undisclosed amount in monetary damages exceeding $25,000, alleges that Family Birth Center director Catherine Powers and CHOMP nursing director Terril Lowe began a policy of pushing out older workers in favor of more youthful but "less qualified" ones.

"Director Powers regularly commented about the employer's desire to replace older nurses at CHOMP with younger nurses, criticized senior personnel about their age and expressed preference for a younger staff," according to the lawsuit, filed for Erwin by her Carmel attorney, Mark A. O'Connor.

Between December 2013 and March 2014, Erwin alleges that Powers put her on a "performance improvement plan" for 90 days and warned Erwin she could be fired without further notice. Faced with another such disciplinary plan only two months after the 90 days had gone by, Erwin said she chose an option of stepping down to a staff nurse position.

When Erwin asked Powers who her replacement would be, she alleges Powers told her it "would be someone younger, as that was Powers' and CHOMP's intention."

On May 27, 2014, Lowe and CHOMP CEO Steven Packer notified Erwin of her termination. The letter stated that Erwin, among other things, failed "to meet the guidelines" of her performance improvement

Some restaurants will need permits for outdoor dining, water district says

By KELLY NIX

RESTAURANTS ON the Monterey Peninsula that want to offer their patrons al fresco dining could be required to obtain a water permit if they don't act within a few months.

On Monday, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board of directors voted unanimously to require restaurants that have more than half their total number of seats outside to get a permit from the water district — something which is pretty much unobtainable now, because of the water shortage.

“Previously, the district’s administrative practice was not to require permits for outdoor seating,” said Stephanie Locke, water demand manager for the water district. The policy enabled many restaurants to add tables on a patio or deck without getting a permit for additional water use.

The good news for restaurant owners is that eateries that already have seats outdoors and those that get new outdoor seating approved before Sept. 1 will be grandfathered and exempt from the permit requirement.

“Our interest is not to go out and suddenly make people get permits and have these requirements that are difficult to meet,” Locke told The Pine Cone. “Rather, we want to work with restaurant owners so we can get the seats documented.”

And the new rule will allow up to one-half the number of interior seats to be used outdoors without a permit.

“If a restaurant has 20 seats inside,” Locke explained, “they will be allowed to have 10 seats outside without requiring a permit.”

The permit won't cost anything, and the rule only applies to restaurants, not to coffee shops and delicatessens, for instance.

Locke said the water district will employ a number of methods to get the word out to property and restaurant owners about the permit requirements, including mailers, advertising and public outreach.

No more free pass to add as many outdoor tables as you want

“We are also going to do a feet-on-the-ground effort and go to restaurants to let them know” about the ordinance, she said.

District staff will team up with the hospitality industry, chambers of commerce and jurisdictions to document exterior seat counts prior to the Sept. 1 deadline.

The fourth year of state drought and the Carmel River cutback order imposed by the State Water Resources Control Board in 2009 — along with the increasing popularity of al fresco dining on the Peninsula — prompted the district to take a new look at regulating outdoor seating.

Dog walkers kick off petition drive against Fort Ord leash policy

By CHRIS COUNTS

IN RESPONSE to a new policy that requires dogs be kept on leashes at the 7,200-acre Fort Ord Dunes National Monument, a petition drive, a website and a Facebook page have been launched opposing it.

While the new policy went into effect April 8, nobody has been ticketed for ignoring it — yet. “I’ve met people who’ve been stopped and warned, but not ticketed,” said Greg Galin, who started the effort. Galin walks his German short-haired pointer, Malcolm, in the park.

The petition outlines the objections Galin and others have with the policy. They say it will negatively impact tourism and the economy, and they are calling it “highly restrictive” and “unnecessary.”

Galin and others say the park is a safe place to let dogs off leashes.

“There are already numerous local parks requiring leashes,” the petition reads. “Being leash-free makes Fort Ord a special place. Use of Fort Ord has grown over the years in part because of the ability to keep dogs under voice control only.”

The Salinas resident said if leashes are required, it should only be in parts of the park where a clear need exists, such as in close proximity to where sheep are grazing. According to Galin, more than 300 people have signed the petition in the 10 days since the drive began. He’s hoping to gather 5,000 signatures.

Eric Morgan, who manages the park for the Bureau of Land Management, responded to criticism of the policy, including complaints the public didn’t have an opportunity to comment on it before it went into effect.

“The interim leash restriction we have in place is responding to some immediate issues that we needed to deal with rather quickly,” Morgan explained. “We have made a commitment to the community to develop a long-term pet policy over the next 12 months that will involve ample opportunities for public input.”

Morgan also shared with The Pine Cone a letter the BLM is sending out to those who have expressed concerns about the policy. In the letter, Morgan acknowledges some people believe the policy will cause “major hardships,” but he said others “have voiced strong support” for the policy and “want it to be permanent.” He also insists a recent dog attack did not trigger the policy.

“I want to address a rumor that is going around the Toro Park Estates area that this interim restriction is the result of one recent dog attack by a local dog,” he writes. “While we are aware of that severe attack, it is not the cause of our interim restriction and we hope that those involved with that incident are not shunned by their neighbors.”

According to the BLM, the policy was enacted because conflicts between leashed dogs and non-leashed dogs are happening and because off-leash dogs are coming into contact with wildlife, present a threat to grazing sheep and could wander into parts of the former Fort Ord military post where munitions still present a hazard. The use of the park has doubled over the past six years, and especially since it was named a National Monument in 2012, they said.

The BLM hopes to schedule public hearings on the subject this summer, and release a draft of a permanent policy next winter for review.

Crafts Guild: Weaving strands of community for more than 60 years

By ELAINE HESSER

NOT ALL the woofs in town come from our four-legged friends. Some of them are found — along with warps — in the looms of local weavers. And though you may not have seen a spinning wheel since the last time you watched “Sleeping Beauty,” there are still plenty of them around and in use.

These and other textile or fiber arts — the technical terms for arts and crafts that use natural or man-made fibers — are still practiced regularly by the 40 or so members of the Carmel Crafts Guild.

According to guild president Mary Brown, the organization was formed in 1948 and incorporated in 1952. Back then, it was home to all sorts of craftsmen, including the first president, Francis Whitaker, whose blacksmith shop was where the Forge in the Forest restaurant now stands.

Brown said that over time, practitioners of other crafts splintered off and formed their own groups, leaving a remnant of weavers, spinners, basket makers and dyers to practice their crafts together.

Membership has been up and down, but recent years have seen a resurgence. This may be in part because of websites like Pinterest, which inspire young users to be more creative. Brown thinks it has a lot to do with good old-fashioned hospitality.

“We’re a very friendly guild,” she said, adding that she’d made many close friends there.

Simone Mortan joined more than 30 years ago as a young mother, and she agreed with Brown’s sentiment. “It’s been a wonderful place to have fellowship. My daughter was welcomed into the guild. She had lots of ‘grandmas.’”

Mortan said she got started with fiber art when she worked at Tilden Regional Park in Berkeley. There was a little demonstration farm there for children. When the sheep were sheared, “I saw all that wool and I thought, ‘I’d better learn to spin that.’” Of course, once it had been spun into yarn and dyed, she said she thought, “I’d better learn to use that,” and took up knitting.

Another long time member, Ann Pettit, talked about the “thread of continuity” as craftsmanship is passed from one generation to the next. “A loom is a durable thing. It out-lives us,” she said. She has shuttles and looms that belonged to weavers who have since died. “They’re still very present in the equipment,” she said.

All three women agreed that the best thing about the guild, aside from the sense of community and friendships, was the fact that there’s always something new to learn — from each other, from guest speakers, and now on that new-fangled Internet.

The guild meets monthly, and new members are always welcome, regardless of level of expertise. Spinners, knitters and crocheters often bring their equipment and ply their crafts during the meetings. Looms aren’t portable, but weavers and other crafters are encouraged to bring recent work for “show and tell.” Meeting and membership information is at www.carmelcraftsguild.org.

Brown highlighted some of the upcoming guest speakers. In October, Linda Yamane, an Ohlone basket maker, will visit the group, followed by Jennifer Moore in November. Moore, a New Mexico-based weaver, authored the book, “Doubleweave,” about techniques that produce double thicknesses of cloth on one loom.

The organization’s biggest event is the Monterey County Fair. In fact, Brown said, the original guild members built the first big craft hall at the fairgrounds and it was known as one of the nicest in the state. It included hinges, latches and other hardware hand-forged by Whitaker.

Unfortunately, the building eventually fell prey to termites and had to be dismantled and

Teen survives Big Sur rollover

By CHRIS COUNTS

SIXTEEN-YEAR-OLD BENJAMIN Dansky was hospitalized April 21 after he lost control of his car and it tumbled about 100 feet down an embankment in Big Sur, according to rescue workers.

Dansky was driving a 1990 Mazda Miata along Highway 1 just south of Garrapata Beach at about 8:30 p.m. when he veered west off the pavement.

According to California Highway Patrol spokesman Jaime Rios, "speed may have been a major factor" in causing the accident, but alcohol and drugs "do not appear to be a factor."

Members of the Mid-Coast Volunteer Fire Brigade were in the vicinity responding to a medical call when they received word of the crash.

When they arrived at the scene, they found that the Mazda had rolled onto its roof on its way down the embankment, but bystanders had flipped it right-side up.

To bring Dansky up to Highway 1 and a waiting ambulance, fire brigade members drove a small fire engine down a private driveway. He was placed in a rescue basket and carried to the engine and then driven back up to the highway.

The ambulance took Dansky to Natividad Medical Center with complaints of pain to his head and neck, the CHP said.

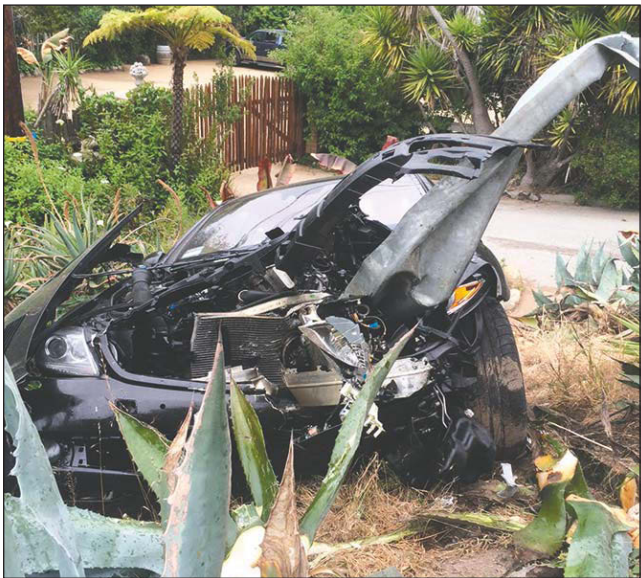

Also responding to the accident were Cal Fire workers and one of Big Sur's newest highway patrolmen, Brandon Rodgers. Mid-Coast Fire Chief Cheryl Goetz told The Pine Cone Rodgers was instrumental in aiding the rescue effort.

"We want to give the new CHP officer a big shout-out," Goetz said. "We needed one more set of hands, so the CHP officer put on some wildland fire gear and went through a field of 8-foot-high poison oak to reach the victim. It was pretty awesome."

While Dansky was injured, he fared better than his vehicle.

"It was destroyed except for the part of it he was in," Goetz added.

Mercedes mangled in solo C.V. Road crash

A 74-YEAR-OLD man went to Natividad Medical Center "as a precaution" after running his 2007 Mercedes CL550 into a guardrail and down an embankment on Carmel Valley Road west of Dorris Drive late Monday morning. The wreckage looks much worse, but Robert Wagstaff only complained of pain and suffered no major injuries, according to California Highway Patrol public information officer Jaime Rios. "There were no other vehicles involved, and DUI is not a factor in this crash," he said. "The cause is still under investigation."

Called an 'absolute giant,' Point Lobos volunteer Judd Perry dies

By CHRIS COUNTS

DESCRIBED AS a "monumental figure" among local volunteers, George M. "Judd" Perry passed away April 18 after a brief illness.

A longtime Pacific Grove resident, Perry, 78, was particularly active as a volunteer at Point Lobos State Reserve.

"His untiring commitment to Point Lobos was just one of many unselfish charitable endeavors Judd involved himself with here in the Monterey area," wrote Fred Brown in a post on the Point Lobos Foundation's website. "In a list that would be too long to encompass everything he took part in, the most recent have been as Point Lobos docent administrator, Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History secretary, and board member and past president of the Point Lobos

Judd Perry left behind a lot of heavy hearts — especially at local parks — when he passed away last week.

Foundation's board of directors."

According to Brown, Perry's "generosity and jovial personality strengthen each organization that was fortunate to have his input."

Perry was called "an absolute giant in our world" by Augie Louis, the president of the Point Lobos Foundation. In addition to serving as the leader of the volunteer docent program at Point Lobos, which has nearly 200 participants, Perry was instrumental in forging an alliance between local volunteers and California Department of Parks and Recreation.

"He rewrote our contract with state parks, which has served as a template for other partnerships around the state," Louis explained.

Just three days before he died, Perry attended the Point Lobos Foundation's board of directors meeting. The following day, he woke with abdominal pain and was rushed to the emergency room at Community Hospital. Suffering from internal bleeding and kidney failure, he died less than 48 hours later.

"One of the last things he said to me was that he has had

Tomasi said, including statements and bank records.

Officers also discovered narcotics and drug paraphernalia, and Calantoc's truck contained stolen credit cards and victims' personal information. Taken in the April 19 car break-in were a checkbook, computer and headphones.

Calantoc was booked into Monterey County Jail on $33,500 bail for theft, burglary, drugs, possession of stolen property and possession of ID with intent to commit fraud, as well as for committing a felony while out on bail on a felony, and for the outstanding warrants.

According to court records, he's been named as a suspect in a half-dozen felony cases and 10 misdemeanor cases since 2006, including commercial burglary and drugs.

Wimbush, who is on probation for identity theft and also has cases for drugs and battery, was cited for drug offenses and released.

"We can't confirm she was doing the breaking in," Tomasi said. "She was with him and would be considered an accomplice."

Also during the search of the suspects and their vehicle — which took several hours on Monday — police discovered items possibly implicating Calantoc in the April 3 robbery of the U.S. Bank on Morrissey Boulevard in Santa Cruz, in which a man dressed as a woman used a note to demand cash, according to Santa Cruz P.D. Lt. Bernie Escalante.

"There were some items in his truck, such as the purse and a locket that he's pictured as wearing during the course of the bank robbery here in Santa Cruz," he said. "We collected that and were trying to get more loose ends tied up on our end before we officially arrested him."

Calantoc was set to be released from Monterey County Jail Tuesday, so Santa Cruz P.D. sent an officer to arrest him.

"We met him at the front door of the jail," he said.

Santa Cruz officers also charged Calantoc with the attempted robbery of another bank he left after staff there confronted him.

Police booked Calantoc into the Santa Cruz jail Tuesday night on charges of bank robbery and attempted robbery while in disguise, as well as committing a felony while out on bail, and he's being held on $600,000 bail.

"He's got a long history in Monterey — it sounds like they're well aware of who this guy is," Escalante said. "He had warrants out for his arrest when they contacted him."

Tomasi praised officers Joe Boucher and Greg Johnson, and detective Jeff Watkins, for their thorough police work, including recognizing Calantoc from the suspect description in the April 19 burglary, finding the stolen mail from the Carmel P.O. boxes during their search and recalling the photo SCPD distributed after the bank robbery showing him disguised as a woman with the same purse and locket.

"They kept digging and found the mail, and started asking questions, then found the purse and the locket, and Greg recalled the robbery flier," he said. "It's great police work — they did a fantastic job."

merchandise that "is like a stroll through the history of the jeweler's art," according to its website.

After the arrest, investigators learned that Grym, who was staying in a hotel in Monterey, had planned the break-in by casing the jewelry store on Monday and then hiding in the adjoining bathroom until late in the evening, well after the store had closed and everyone had gone. Using a handsaw, he cut through the thin drywall separating the bathroom from the shop and started helping himself to a host of items from display cases. While he moved through the store, he triggered the alarm, according to Tomasi.

Grym was carrying an estimated $250,000 in jewelry when police took him into custody.

"He had a black suitcase filled with jewelry — necklaces, earrings and rings," Tomasi said. "He cleared out three cases, so it was a ton of stuff."

Officers also searched his vehicle and hotel room, but found no other stolen items.

Grym was booked into Monterey County Jail on a charge of second-degree burglary and held on $10,000 bail.

Big Sur Marathon: Relay team and dinner aid Rachael Short's recovery

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOR THE fifth year, a group of runners are using their legs to help raise money for a Carmel woman who has been unable to walk since she was injured in a car accident in 2010.

At the Big Sur International Marathon Sunday, April 26, five relay teams and 20 runners are participating in the Relay for Rachael, which benefits Rachael Short, who graduated from Carmel High School in 2000 and co-owns a downtown photography gallery.

The runners are collecting pledges — they've gathered more than $15,000 so far — and the proceeds will help pay for the costs of Short's rehabilitation.

"Since I woke up in the hospital paralyzed from the neck down in 2010, I have been working every day to gain my movement back," Short wrote recently in her blog.

"This is only possible because I have an amazing community of friends and family who are willing to go out, run hard and raise money for me. It is uncomfortable for me to ask for help, but I am learning that people want to help. I see the happiness on people's faces when they see my strength coming back, and this makes me happy."

Short works out with a trainer four hours a day, six days a week. She said the hard work is paying off.

"Every day, I am one step closer to stepping again," Short continued. "Over the past year, I feel the strength all over my body returning, and my arms and hands are becoming more useful. My rehab is working."

In addition to the relay, the American Legion Post 512 (Dolores just south of Eighth) will be the site of the Relay for Rachael Spaghetti Dinner, on Friday, April 24. The event starts at 7 p.m. and tickets are $35. Visit www.relayforrachael.com.

Jo Elaine (Joey Shepherd) Frank

1949-2015

Jo Elaine (Joey Shepherd) Frank passed away on April 4, 2015.

Joey lived her entire life loving and caring for others. She would literally give her shirt off her own back for someone else, and sometimes she did. She lived a splendid 65 years from her birth on May 29, 1949.

Joey was fortunate to find love when she married Anthony (Tony) M. Frank in February 2009. The couple spent time travelling together to amazing, beautiful places around the world. They loved their home on the water in Carmel Highlands, CA.

She was funny, charming and always the life of the party! Did you know she had her Mater's Degree? She did! Joey earned her bachelors and Masters Degrees from California State University / Sacramento AND for many years she cared for her hundreds of patients as a speech-language pathologist with professionalism and compassion, humor and above all else, true concern for their health.

Not only that but she achieved this accomplishment while she was busy raising her two daughters, Sierra Wood (Cloves, CA) and Emily Belman (Clovis, CA) who were the absolute loves of her life. Joey was a devoted Mommy, not only did she pass on her academic intelligence, but her kindness towards others. Joey would spend much of her days running the girls to all of their different activities in the white Volvo, with a coffee in one hand and her next assignment in the other, speeding from one place to the next. Joey loved being a Mom!

Joey continued her trips in her SUV taking every opportunity to go visit her grandchildren, Joey loved being a grandmother to Rylee, Carter, Baylie, Brock and baby Brixton. Joey would spend time playing dress up and dolls, super hero and of course she would read when she heard "Granny will you play with me" echoing in their little voices. She absolutely loved her grandchildren and they adored her!

Tony contributed stepchildren Randy and his wife Katie, and Tracy. Joey shared any wonderful times with step grandchildren, Own, Jason, Summer, A.J. and Jack. Rooting for the Giants. Warriors and 49'ers was a favorite activity, but not for the Raiders!

Those who knew her can appreciate how words do not adequately capture what she meant to each of us and the impression she left on this world. Joey, Mommy, YaYa, Grammy, (Favorite) Aunt, Seester — YOU will be missed deeply by all your family and your many, many friends.

There will be a celebration of Joey's beautiful life on Saturday, May 16, 2015 at 11:00 a.m., at Los Laureles Lodge, 313 West Carmel Valley Road in Carmel Valley, CA. Please RSVP to Lori Carter, 831-917-4735.

In lieu of flowers Joey would want you to pay love forward, be kind to each other, and help one another whenever you have the opportunity to do so. She would love for you to make someone smile.

Patricia Kathleen Finley Ehrhart

Patricia Kathleen Finley Ehrhart passed away peacefully on April 15, 2015 after a long illness.

Born in San Francisco on May 18, 1936, Pat was adopted when 6 months old by Dr. James B. Finley, dentist in Monterey and Carmel, and his wife Dorcus R. Fenstermaker Williams, a Daughter of the American Revolution. The Finley's lived in Monterey before moving to Carmel when Pat was in second grade. At Carmel High School, Pat earned Life Membership in the California Scholastic Federation, was past president of Junior Statesmen and Junior Red Cross, commissioner of girls' athletics and of social affairs, as well as Editor-in-Chief of the El Padre yearbook. Pat was an AFS exchange student to Germany in 1953 and was salutatorian for her Class of 1954 graduation ceremony.

After attending Pomona College, Pat married Robert Ernest Ehrhart on June 8, 1957. Bob and Pat moved to Washington, D.C. then lived in the Philippines, where Bob was stationed in the military. After returning to the US, Pat and Bob graduated from UC Berkeley in 1960 and moved to Walnut Creek, CA. Yet, she continued to maintain her family home in Carmel and ties to the community throughout her life.

In addition to raising three wonderful children, Pat founded Primitive Junktion Antiques, which she continued running for over four decades until her death. Pat applied her artistic and creative flair to interior decorating for her antique customers and also to flower arranging. She sold dried flowers that she had harvested and dried and created hundreds, if not thousands, of beautiful dried flower arrangements, as well as fresh flower arrangements for the weddings of clients, family and friends.

Pat also founded Travel for Treasures, offering guided antiquing tours of California's gold country. Later, she continued sharing her love for travel as a certified cruise planner who led friends and clients on numerous international trips.

From her high-school days as a "Globe Trotter" in Germany, her time in the Philippines and degree in international affairs, Pat continued her curiosity, appreciation of other cultures, open mindedness, tolerance and hospitality throughout her life. In addition to her own travel, Pat hosted countless foreign exchange students in her home. And, her children followed her lead as exchange students, living abroad and marrying foreign-born spouses.

Pat is survived by her ex-husband Bob Ehrhart, her three children, Kathy Roberts, Jim Ehrhart and Ken Ehrhart, their spouses, nine grandchildren and a great grandson.

Services Celebrating Pat's Life will be held for friends and family in Walnut Creek on Friday, April 24 and in Carmel on Sunday, June 7. In lieu of flowers, please send donations to the American Field Service at www.afsusa.org.

Local water shortage on national media

■ Burnett on MSNBC, NPR

By MARY SCHLEY

MAYOR JASON Burnett has become the face of the Monterey Peninsula's water crisis after appearing on MSNBC's "Weekends with Alex Witt," an interview that closely followed on the heels of a National Public Radio "Morning Edition" spot that also included him. The topic of both was the area's struggle to develop a reliable water supply on the eve of drastic state-imposed cutback orders, and desalination as part of the solution — but only because all other remedies have been exhausted.

"I thought that it covered the major issues in a succinct way — obviously four minutes is not a lot of time, and water and the drought and desalination are all big topics — but certainly, the feedback that I've received has been positive that it was able to cover those topics in a meaningful way," he said of his conversation with Witt during her Sunday program.

The discussion hit a few major points: Peninsula residents use an average of just 50 gallons per day, a third of the state average and a testament to what conservation efforts can accomplish; three decades of droughts and state-imposed restrictions here have prompted residents and public officials to evaluate every possible means of saving water and generating more; and the best option is a portfolio of solutions, of which desalination is a significant piece, but not the entire piece.

"I think that people are asking the question, 'Can you conserve water and still maintain a high quality of life?' — and the Monterey Peninsula is an example of that," he told The Pine Cone. "That is one message that has statewide and national significance. She was quite impressed by the fact that we use only about 50 gallons per day, and I think a lot of people will take note of that."

He also said the "very exhaustive review of water-supply options" over the past 30 years has ensured "a high degree of confidence that what we are pursuing is necessary."

"Other communities are coming to this without that history, but we can explain why we did the review that we did and why we concluded that a portfolio of water projects is the right answer," he said, including desalination, aquifer storage and recovery, conservation and other measures. "And I think that is a lesson that will apply to the rest of the state."

That evaluation has made Burnett a supporter of a desal project, despite his concerns about production costs, the massive amount of energy required to build and operate a desalination plant, and the potential negative effects on marine life.

"We've found that for the Monterey Peninsula, the conditions are right to support desal," he said to Witt during the program. But, he added later, "Desal is not the panacea that a lot of people think it might be."

In the NPR piece with KQED's Daniel Potter, Burnett commented, "So here I am, advocating a project that has a large carbon footprint and, if not done correctly, can hurt the oceans. For us, desal really was the last option to consider. But we got to that point."

Burnett said his recent appearances on national media probably sprang from the talk he gave a several months ago as the keynote speaker for CalDesal's annual conference, which led to a KQED interview.

"My opening line to them was, 'Thanks for having me, I'm not generally a fan of desal, but it has its place in the portfolio,' so their executive director passed my name on to the KQED reporter who was trying to think through the pros and cons," he said. "I'm certainly not an advocate, nor am I a detractor."

Truckers rock, Haggard twangs and Italian tenor returns to Mission

TWO ARTISTS who perform this week at the Golden State Theatre in Monterey — The Drive-By Truckers and singer-songwriter Merle Haggard — each helped breathe new life into their musical genres.

The Drive-By Truckers, who play Friday, April 24, gained widespread acclaim in 2001 for their ambitious double-album recording, “Southern Rock Opera,” which explored what it meant to be “growing up white, loud and desperate in the former Confederacy,” according to a review in Rolling Stone magazine. The critically acclaimed disc also paid tribute to the group’s heroes, Lynyrd Skynyrd, which had three members killed in a 1977 plane crash, and offered a fresh

The performance comes just a month after the release of PBS documentary on the life of the famous Italian tenor Enrico Caruso, which stars Esposito. In the TV special, Esposito takes viewers to Naples, Italy, where both singers were born, and visits places that played a role in Caruso’s life. Esposito also sings music from the repertoire of Caruso, who died in 1921.

At Sunset Center, Esposito presents a collection of opera arias, Neapolitan songs, standards and original compositions — with an emphasis on music Caruso sang. The vocalist doesn’t plan on using any electronic amplification, relying on a microphone only to speak with the audience.

take on southern rock, which brings together country, blues and hard rock.

The 78-year-old Haggard, who plays Wednesday, April 29, helped pioneer the stripped-down Bakersfield sound, which in the mid-1960s proved to be the perfect counterpoint to the slick and highly-produced Nashville sound that ruled country music at the time. The new sound was influenced by early rock ‘n’ roll, and Haggard became one of its biggest stars with hits like “Okie From Muskogee,” “Mama Tried” and “Workin’ Man Blues.” The Bakersfield sound set the stage for a major infusion of country in rock during the early 1970s, perhaps best illustrated by the mega-success of the Eagles.

Both shows start at 8 p.m. Tickets to Friday’s concert are $25 to $41, while tickets to Wednesday’s event are $46 to $86. The theater is located at 417 Alvarado St. Call (831) 649-1070.

■ Sibling pianists reunite

As children, brothers Jon Kimura “Jackie” Parker and James “Jamie” Parker played piano together often. Thanks to the nonprofit Carmel Music Society, they’ll get another opportunity to share the stage Sunday, April 26, at Sunset Center.

The idea to bring the brothers together in Carmel came about when Jamie performed here last year with the Gryphon Trio.

“I asked him if he and his brother ever get a chance to perform together, and he said, ‘no,’” explained Ann Thorp of the Carmel Music Society. “And I said, ‘Let’s make it happen.’”

To make the event possible, Thorp’s music group needed a second piano, so the Monterey Symphony offered theirs.

Jackie teaches music at the University of Toronto, while a Jamie does the same at Rice University in Houston, Texas.

At Sunset Center the brothers will perform works by Piazzolla, Mozart, Ravel and Rachmaninoff.

The music begins at 3 p.m. A talk by David Gordon precedes the concert at 2 p.m., while chocolate reception follows. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Tickets are $40 to $55. Call (831) 625-9938.

A cocktail cook, a spring menu, a benefit for kids, and an empty bowl

CARMEL VALLEY resident Katie Blandin has been dreaming about cocktails for a long time. Not about drinking them — about creating them. Wednesday night, her longtime vision for a new business became reality with the launch of Bar Cart Cocktail Co.

“I don’t like the term, ‘mixologist.’ I’m more like a cocktail chef,” she said during her kickoff celebration at Burst + Bloom in ified into Bar Cart, in which she takes one or two of the mobile bars she built from recycled and reclaimed materials, a few highly trained helpers, a customized cocktail menu and all the necessary ingredients wherever her clients want. Each drink is beautiful in presentation as well as in composition.

Blandin developed a selection of libations for each season, depending on what’s available, but is always up to the task of coming up with new recipes. At Wednesday’s launch, she offered the Carmel Valley Road Margarita (which included pink peppercorn and elderflower foraged on Carmel Valley Road), the Pachamama (potato vodka, blueberry lime juice, lemon balm syrup, egg whites from friends’ hens and her own Bar Cart Bitters made with kafir lime and bay leaf), the Black Magic Woman (rye, rhubarb and honey juice, native black sage and tangerine) and the Sidecart (cognac, bergamot syrup and lemons from friends’ abundant tree in Monterey).

“We want to make the tastiest drinks for you,” she says on her website. “We want you to have a deliciously good time.”

In developing cocktails for clients, she continues, “Bar Cart creates drinks with the seasons, in the same fashion a chef would select menu items based on seasonal offerings.

Who wants to eat a fresh tomato in December? Not me! Who wants to get a little wild? I do!” In short, she seeks to create, “a sense of place and a story with every sip.”

To tap into Blandin’s talents for an event, visit www.barcartcocktailco.com for details, or call (831) 229-4132 or email barcartdrinks@gmail.com.

Vivo has introduced a new spring lineup for the menu at Porter’s in the Forest, located in the clubhouse at Poppy Hills Gold Course in Pebble Beach. In addition, the restaurant is now open until 8 p.m. nightly, taking advantage of longer daylight hours and catering to a growing clientele.

the Crossroads. “But I don’t want to take away from how hard chefs work — it’s not like I’ve done the training to become a chef. Maybe, ‘cocktail cook?’”

Using herbs, flowers and other ingredients she forages, grows herself, and obtains from friends and local farmers, Blandin concocts liqueurs, infused spirits and innovative cocktails. Her first major endeavor was for a wedding three years ago, when she set up her mobile bar, broke out her extensive collection of vintage glassware and poured four different cocktails and two cordials she’d created just for her friends’ milestone celebration.

Today, her style and offerings have solid-

■ McIntyre dinner, seminar

McIntyre Vineyards will be featured in a wine dinner at Carmel Valley Ranch Friday, April 24, at 6:15 p.m. Chef Tim Wood has created another tantalizing menu to accompany the wine lineup, beginning with amuse bouche to complete McIntyre's L'Homme Qui Rit sparkling wine.

Swank Family Farms Spring Soup with peas and black truffle will be paired with 2013 McIntyre Estate Chardonnay; Spanish Fruta del Mar Risotto will accompany 2014 McIntyre Rose of Pinot Noir; Lamb Chop Fondue with seasonal vegetables and cheese will be served alongside 2012 McIntyre "Kimberly's Vineyard" Merlot; and profiterole will be complemented by 2006 McIntyre Port. The wine dinner is $105 per person with wine, or $75 without, with an 18 percent service charge and tax. For reservations, call the restaurant at (831) 626-2599.

And on Wednesday, April 29, from 6 to 8 p.m. in the McIntyre tasting room at the Crossroads, the next session of Winemaking 101 will have Steve McIntyre and winemaker Byron Kosuge sharing their knowledge on the fundamentals of making wine, including spoilage, cork taint, fining agents, malolactic fermentation and other topics. "No questions are too basic or complex," according to organizers. General admission is $20 ($10 for club members). Call (831) 626-6268 or visit www.mcintyrevineyards.com. The tasting room is located at 169 Crossroads Blvd.

A century of Pine Cones

■ 98 Years Ago — April 26, 1917

Join or Start a Potato Club

The Woodcraft League of America, of which Ernest Thompson Seaton is chief, has inaugurated a nationwide plan to establish potato growing clubs. The boys and girls of Carmel-by-the-Sea should get into this movement. The league has issued a circular giving details of the plan, which may be perused at the office of the Pine Cone. The New York Evening Mail says: "We face the future with the immediate prospect of the greatest food shortage our generation has ever known. Every acre of potatoes planted is life insurance against starvation next winter." Mr. F. H. Powers of the Carmel Development Company has offered the free use of vacant lands in this section to children and adults who will promise to plant at least twenty-four hills of potatoes thereon. One of the conditions of membership in the clubs is that a member must plant and raise twenty-four hills and donate the proceeds to some war fund. Prizes will be awarded to boys and girls under eighteen, but older folks are not debarred from membership.

■ 75 Years Ago — April 26, 1940

Carmel, as We Saw it In 1915:

"The beautiful beach of pure white sili-con sand, with the 52 acres of sand dunes, is a playground for the children, and resting place for the nerve weary. The 400-acre pine forest, with its deep carpet of pine needles, furnished all the balsamic odors of the sier-ras. Fishing abounds, in the river for trout and steelhead, and in the bay for all kinds of seafood fish. The bathhouse on the beach fur-nishes all the appliances for surf bathing ... Carmel has a well established moving picture theater.

More than 60 percent of the residents of the village are devoting their time to work related to the aesthetic arts. College teachers, artists, poets, magazine writers, and profes-sional men and women find the environment especially conducive to their best work."

Carmel, as We Saw it In 1940:

"The beautiful white sand beach is still there and frequently crowded. The sand dunes are cut up except for a few acres which are city property and a few more private property in jeopardy of being subdivided. The pine forest is thinning, the soft bed of pine needles nearly gone. The live oaks are flourishing better than ever before. Fishing is still fair in the river, although nothing com-pared with old days, and there are still a few fish to be caught by the lucky ones in the bay.

The bathhouse at the beach is a thing of the past. A city ordinance prevents any bath-house or concessions at the beach. The surf bathing in summer is excellent ... There are two regular motion picture houses. The Carmel Library is well housed, the Manzanita Club and the American Legion are important clubs, and there are a number of women's, civic and political and social clubs. Many of the Carmelites devote their time to music, art and writing, but the retired have become the most important portion of the population.

Professional people are only second and the businessman has assumed an important position.

museum's permanent collection of California art, some works come from an exhibit by Pedro Joseph de Lemos, which also opens Thursday. A Renaissance man who served as the first president of the Carmel Art Association, Lemos was an architect, a painter, a printmaker, an illustrator, a metal worker, a writer and a lecturer. He died in 1954.

Admission to the opening reception is free for museum members and $10 for non-mem-bers. Art in Bloom also features a series of talks, demonstrations and presentations through Sunday, May 3. The museum is located at 720 Via Mirada. Call (831) 372-5477 or visit www.montereyart.org.

■ Art, music at fundraiser

Staging an event described by its organiz-ers as "three-ringed creative circus," the Youth Arts Collective presents its fourth annual Live ART fundraising event Saturday, April 25, from 5 to 10 p.m.

"Live ART will feature 30 artists and musicians performing live for the public," explained Meg Biddle, the co-founder and program director of YAC, a nonprofit that provides mentoring and studio space for young artists.

"New stuff is going up all night," Biddle said. "It's very exciting."

Artists include Will Bullas, Pamela Carroll, Steven Whyte, Mary Liz Houseman, Robin Winfield and others. The list of musicians features Keith Damron, Jordan Smart, Casey Frazier, Mathew Hable and more. Backing them up — and making this one-of-a-kind event possible — are 60 volunteers.

Admission is $10. YAC is located at 472 Calle Principal. Call (831) 375-9922.

■ Seeking 'Pure Color'

Over the past 30 years, longtime Carmel photographer Gary Geiger has walked many miles through exotic locales like India, Cuba, Morocco and Mexico to find the rich, vibrant colors that inspire him. An exhibit of his work, appropriately titled, "Pure Color," opens Saturday, April 25, at Gallery Sur.

"Walking gives me a perspective on the rich history and architecture of a town, as well as chance encounters with people who invite you in and tell their stories," Geiger explained. "I put a lot of miles in every day to find that one good image that goes to the next level, separating it from all the rest."

Gallery Sur, which hosts a reception from 4 to 7 p.m., is located on the south side of Sixth between Dolores and Lincoln. The show will be on display through May 2. Call (831) 626-2615.

donate soup, breads and desserts for Carmel High School's annual Empty Bowls dinner, which focuses on the issue of hunger. Held in the school's upper quad on April 30, the event will include ceramic bowls made and glazed by the students, who have also been studying the issue of hunger at home and abroad.

"The bowls have all come out of the kiln and are incredibly creative this year," reported event organizer Valerie Stack. "One piece has a dragon peering into the bowl, another has a whale, and another has squid. A few students formed caterpillars that perch on the edge. There is a cowboy hat bowl. And there are the butterflies, flowers, leaves and abstract cutout designs. So sweet to see their creativity expressed!"

The Empty Bowls Open House is scheduled for Thursday, April 30, from 5 to 7 p.m. in an open café set up by the kids, and will include a silent auction of professional artists' ceramics. The student singer and songwriters' guild will perform, and a student art show will be held, too.

For $20 per person, guests are invited to enjoy a simple meal of soup and bread, and are welcome to keep their bowls "as a replaced, but the guild comes out in force to take up residence in the center of the current craft building each year. During the fair, they hold their "Sheep to Shawl" fundraiser for a group of weavers in Africa. Sheep are sheared, their wool is processed and spun into yarn, and then a large handmade shawl is woven from the yarn and auctioned off.

Also, as part of their mission "to further the interests of craftsmen; to encourage, develop, and maintain a high standard of craftsmanship; and to stimulate an appreciation of fine workmanship and originality in design among its members and the general public," the guild sometimes puts on public exhibits.

The ruling stems from a lawsuit a San Juan Capistrano taxpayers association filed against that city over water rates.

The justices found that San Juan Capistrano's tiered rates bore no relation to the actual cost of delivering the water to its customers.

"We do hold that above-cost-of-service pricing for tiers of water service is not allowed by Proposition 218, and in this case, [the city] did not carry its burden of proving its higher tiers reflected its costs," the court said in its ruling.

The city had been charging just three-tenths of a cent per gallon for the first 748 gallons of water someone used. But for people who used a lot more, the price jumped to 1.2 cents per gallon.

According to the Los Angeles Times, at least two-thirds of California's water providers use tiered rates to encourage conservation.

While the ruling could stifle their efforts to reduce consumption, it won't affect the tiered rates on the Monterey Peninsula, because Cal Am is a private company and not subject to Prop. 218, according to Dave Stoldt, general manager of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

Cal Am charges .59 cents per gallon for its Monterey Peninsula customers who use the least water, but 5.9 cents per gallon for those in the top tier. While Cal Am is highly regulated by the water district and its rates are subject to approval by the California Public Utilities Commission, the bills the company sends out are still a private transaction.

Gov. Jerry Brown reacted strongly to Monday's ruling and promised that the attorney general's office would review it.

"The practical effect of the court's decision is to put a straitjacket on local government at a time when maximum flexibility is needed," according to Brown in a press release. "My policy is and will continue to be: employ every method possible to ensure water is conserved across California."

On April 1, Brown declared a drought emergency, and directed urban water users in the state to cut usage by 25 percent.

Despite the obvious logic behind the appeals court's ruling, Stoldt told The Pine Cone that other water agencies have been more thorough in justifying their tiered rate system than

San Juan Capistrano.

"The thought is that San Juan Capistrano could have been more rigorous in its analysis [of the tiered rates] and prevented this ruling," he said.

The lawyer hired by that city to defend the lawsuit was Michael Colantuono, the attorney the Monterey Peninsula the blackening effect on the sand of the charred wood and ashes, countered by asking the Monterey Bay Air Pollution Control District to begin monitoring air quality near the beach because they believe the amount of smoke in the air, especially on summer evenings, will add fuel to the argument for limiting or altogether banning beach fires.

Air pollution control officer Richard Stedman, who has testified before the forest and beach commission, planning commission and city council about the toxic effects of wood smoke and beach fires, said the district is "in preliminary talks with the city to look at doing some air monitoring down near the beach."

The district and the city must first determine the proper equipment to use and where it should be located.

"We're still trying to look into the types of monitors we

Water Management District hired to defend against a suit filed by the Monterey Peninsula Taxpayers Association over a water supply charge.

The water district prevailed when a judge ruled against the taxpayers group in March. The group has not said yet whether it will appeal the decision.

could use down there, with the constraints we have with open space and that sort of thing," Stedman said. "Mainly, the intent is to collect some data with the respect to concentrations of particulate matter smaller than 2.5 microns in diameter."

If the air district's readings show smoke levels are too high, its equipment would then be replaced with federal Environmental Protection Agency-approved monitors, which are "more precise, and will relay the data to the feds, so they can make a determination whether we're in the range for the federal air standards," Stedman said. If the standards are not met, federal law will require the city to make changes to meet them, he added.

That entire monitoring process could take two to three years, according to Stedman, who openly supports the city's efforts to restrict beach fires.

"Anything we can do to limit fires will be beneficial from a public health standpoint, as well as for the environment," he said. "This is combustion, and combustion generates a lot of byproduct."

Walking the desal tightrope

TO UNDERSTAND what's going on with the slant well in Marina — and why we keep reporting about how many gallons per minute the test well is pumping and how much salt is in the water it produces — imagine a large sandbox with a small pool of fresh water at one end and an unlimited pool of seawater at the other.

The two pools not only occupy their respective ends of the sandbox, the water they contain migrates through the porous sand and meets somewhere in the middle. Now sink a straw into the sand and start sucking. Is the water you're getting salty, or fresh, or some combination of the two?

Obviously, that would depend on where you placed your straw. If you drew water from immediately adjacent to the freshwater end, you could count on getting almost 100 percent fresh water, and vice versa.

Now imagine that you're only supposed to draw seawater through your straw — but you're not sucking on it, you're pumping it out with a mighty pump. You're also not allowed to take it directly from the seawater pool, because there are some fish in there and your pump might trap one of them against the opening of the straw. Meanwhile, you need the water for a really important purpose, but you're told, "DO NOT PUMP ANY OF THE FRESH WATER BECAUSE IT BELONGS TO SOMEBODY ELSE."

You don't have to be a water expert to see that meeting all of those criteria would be quite a tricky prospect. And how would you know if you were succeeding in (a) drawing all the water you needed but also (b) not taking any of the fresh water?

Testing the first one would be simple — all you'd have to do would be to measure the output of your straw with something akin to a water meter. The second test would be more complicated but could be done by taking samples of the water and electrically checking the level of salt. Your goal is 35,000 parts of salt per million parts of water, because that's the salinity of seawater itself. Anything less than 95 percent of that in your sample, and you'd have to shut down the pump and start over somewhere else.

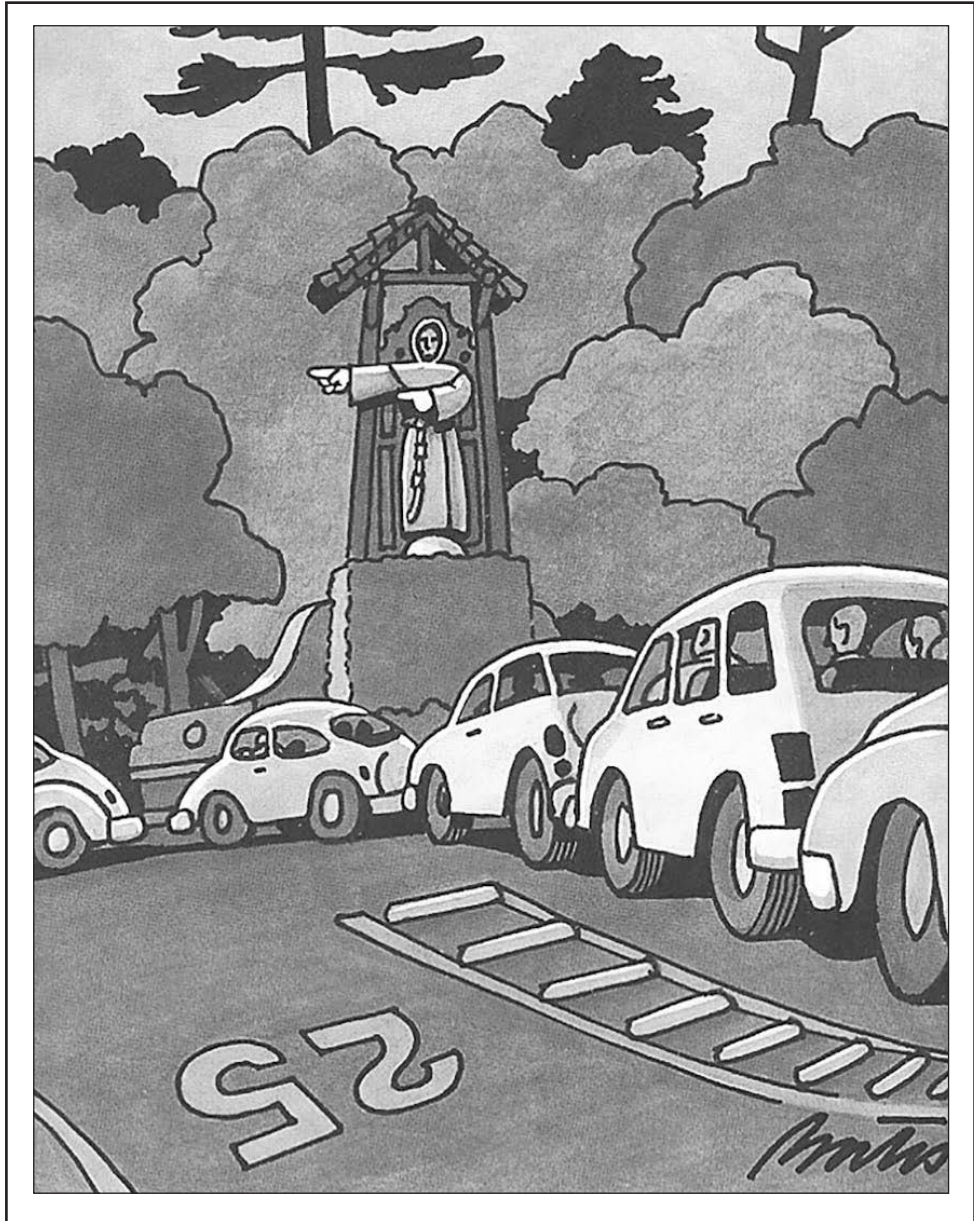

That is the multi-million-dollar drama being played out right now on a large scale in Marina, with the Monterey Peninsula's future water source on the line.

Marina is built on sand, which corresponds to the sand in our sandbox analogy. The Pacific Ocean is the seawater pool, and the Salinas River and its underground aquifer are the freshwater pool. The slant well penetrates the sand where it meets the Pacific Ocean and is furiously pumping water as we write this — water that's being tested to see if it meets the criteria we have mentioned.

This community has been coping with a dire water shortage for decades, and all that time we've pretty much been left on our own to solve it even as various federal and state agencies threw roadblocks in our way. Now, all of sudden there's a statewide drought and everybody's searching for ways to solve it, which means much of the political opposition to desal has dried up. But it's by no means a foregone conclusion that the desal plant being tested in Marina will work, or that it will be granted permits even if its tests succeed.

That is why we cover these issues so closely, and why you should be paying attention. If this community is going to have the water it requires for basic human necessities during the decades to come, and for a small amount of growth within existing developed areas, the test well must work. We all must hope that it does.

Facts about COTA fees

Dear Editor,

Your report in the April 17 issue of The Pine Cone missed the mark regarding my comments at the Community Activities and Cultural Commission meeting on April 14 concerning the Concours on the Avenue.

The commission was asked to make recommendations to the council regarding the event in general and, specifically, regarding the requested waiver of city fees of $29,514 (staff reported that estimated other city costs of the event which the city would absorb anyway total $6,550).

I had my first chance to read the commission's informational packet regarding this event during the meeting itself as it had not been available online.

Once I read the packet, I asked the commission to disregard all statements I had made earlier in the meeting and then I made comments to the following effect: (1)

Everyone present seemed to like the event, including me. (2) The request for signs, flags and banners (approximately 90 in total) should be reviewed by the planning commission. (Everyone seemed to agree on this point.) (3) The staff's report of fees and costs for the event should not be parsed by the commission. (4) The fee waiver was of importance as city funds are severely constrained. (As reported to the council on March 31.) (5) The fee waiver in this case was a matter of policy for the city council to decide. (The city's adopted written policy regarding fee waivers limits fee waivers to no more than $5,000 per event and $27,500 per year for all events combined.)

The city council is scheduled to take this up on May 5.

Neon signs on the way?

Dear Editor,

Having just completed our most recent trip to Carmel we have a heavy heart.

We have watched our beloved Carmel transform from cozy Comstock Cottages to a plethora of unoccupied, billionaire McMansions.

Now, the latest insult to this lovely oasis — parking meters!

Not are they ugly and a pain to use, but they are the antithesis of everything Carmel represents to the world.

What is next? Traffic signals up and down Ocean Avenue with walk-light timers ...or maybe a red rotating neon sign for the Pine Inn?

Shillinglaw, Steinbeck and a sense of place

SHE READ John Steinbeck's "The Red Pony" in junior high school and hated it. She actually hates any story where an animal suffers or dies. So, Susan Shillinglaw swore off Steinbeck, vowing never to read him again. Yet Shillinglaw, a professor of English and comparative literature at San Jose State University, later served 18 years as director of San Jose State's Center for Steinbeck Studies. She also is a scholar-in-residence at the National Steinbeck Center in Salinas and is considered one of the top Steinbeck scholars in the world.

As a child, Shillinglaw was encouraged to read, and got to choose a book to take home each year at the school book fair. She was most interested in anything Oz, Nancy Drew, The Bobbsey Twins, The Borrowers, Little House on the Prairie, Beezus and Ramona, Black Beauty, and Winnie the Pooh.

She did succumb to Steinbeck in high school, when she was assigned to read, "The Grapes of Wrath." Today she considers it a story worth reading and then re-reading later, with a little more life experience. She particularly appreciates Ma Joad, whom she finds empathetic and patient, generous and adaptable, and whom she calls, "the family bulwark who keeps the Joads rolling along Route 66 and beyond."

According to Shillinglaw, Ma is also "a feminist — feisty, strong, loving, resilient — and the kind of leader, then and now, who might guide the nation's jalopy through difficult times."

America needs a Ma Joad in the White House, she says.

A woman of similar substance, perhaps she sees a bit of herself in the strength and fortitude of Ma Joad. Raised in Colorado, Shillinglaw received her bachelor's degree in art and English from Cornell College in Mt.

in San Jose."

Thirty years later, Shillinglaw says, "I have been very lucky to hang onto his coat-tails and make a life and a career of John Steinbeck."

She never gets tired of teaching or reading his works, she says.

"He is so interesting in so many layers, and he is the focal point from which radiate all sorts of issues that are relevant today,"

Susan Shillinglaw

Shillinglaw observes.

In 2004, Shillinglaw even took a voyage to the Gulf of California, retracing Steinbeck's route during a similar trip in the spring of 1940. His had been a six-week expedition to collect marine specimens with his friend, marine biologist Ed Ricketts.

In addition to the fascination of actually experiencing what Steinbeck had chronicled in "The Log from the Sea of Cortez," giving his readers insight into the relationship and perspectives of the author and the marine biologist, it was on this journey that Shillinglaw met William Gilly, a marine biologist with the Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove.

"Bill and I were married on May 14, Ed Rickett's birthday, at Hopkins, where Steinbeck had taken a biology class during the summer of '23," she says. "We even had quotes from 'Cannery Row' on the invitation."

Shillinglaw has two grown children, living vibrantly on their own; one is teaching in Istanbul, and the other works with fisheries in Colorado. She and her husband make their home in Pacific Grove, where Steinbeck lived briefly with first wife, Carol Henning, in a house that has been the subject of some recent controversy. Apart from her devotion to Steinbeck, Shillinglaw thinks about getting back into art, perhaps pottery. Otherwise, she likes to read, write, teach, wander the shore and cook, and she longs for more time for each.

Her life's portfolio includes various edited books and scholarly essays, five introductions for Penguin Classics, and a 2006 book, "A Journey Into Steinbeck's California," which is a blend of art and biography and looks at how the landscape and its development influenced Steinbeck's perspective, and how his legacy influences contemporary thought. She also wrote "Carol and John Steinbeck: Portrait of a Marriage," a biography that focuses on Henning, the creative inspiration in Steinbeck's life who allowed her own life to be absorbed into his until their divorce after 12 years.

Although Shillinglaw never met Henning, who died in 1983, she did meet Steinbeck's third wife, Elaine Scott Steinbeck; his sons, Vernon, Iowa, and her master's and doctorate in American literature from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. After teaching at Wake Forest University, Canisius College, Buffalo Seminary and Santa Clara University, in 1984, she joined the faculty at San Jose State.

In 1987, Shillinglaw was asked to resurrect the Center for Steinbeck Studies, established in 1973 by a professor who believed there should be a center for research, education and recognition of the author at the university closest to his hometown haunts. Since CSU Monterey Bay had yet to be established, San Jose State was it.

"I was appalled," says Shillinglaw. "I was the least likely person to have such a charge thrust upon me. When I studied in North Carolina, I had read 19th century American literature, not 20th. But I took it as a challenge, to see if I could make Steinbeck thrive

A Diamond in the rough

THE BIG Sur Marathon is sold out except for the 5K and the 3K. My luck. I've been training all week for the 26-mile race, and now I can't get in. Oh well, maybe next year (I should live and be well). Incidentally, are motorized scooters allowed in the contest? Just asking.

Which brings up the late comedy writer Selma Diamond. Why is a top-flight marathoner like a salty, chain-smoking, gravel-voiced, wisecracking funny woman?

Dedication, focus, guts and determination for starters. What Diamond achieved in her generation was the comedy equivalent of winning a world-class marathon.

Her first credits were cartoons and humor pieces for "The New Yorker." She wrote for Groucho Marx, Goodman Ace, and Ozzie and Harriet on radio. Then television called — Sid Caesar's landmark show. She joined a legendary stable of writers that included Mel Brooks, Carl Reiner and Neil Simon. Diamond was the only woman at the top of the male-dominated world of comedy writing.

Years later, when Carl Reiner created "The Dick Van Dyke Show," he based the character of Sally Rogers, the unmarried, quick-witted comedy scribe, on Diamond.

She was often asked why she never married. She said, "The only reason for getting married is to have someone get up in the middle of the night to get you a drink of water." She credited her ambition and drive to her grandmother, who had been a suffragette.

Asked why so few women writers ever made it in the early days of radio and television, she said, "Male chauvinism. I can't stand that crap about women not having a sense of humor. I always say if women didn't have a sense of humor, they'd never marry men."

Her caustic wit, feisty personality and a voice she once described as sounding like Brillo made her a popular guest on TV talk shows. With deadpan delivery, she could turn a mildly amusing line into a scream.

A female college reporter once asked her how old a girl ought to be before she should go to a prom in a strapless dress. Diamond answered, "If it stays up, you're old enough."

In later years, she appeared in cameos and small acting parts in movies and on television. "I think young," she said. "The problem is, all the time I'm thinking young, I'm getting older. In this country, everyone wants to stay young. On the Continent, a woman ages like wine. Here, the minute you stop fizzing, they open another bottle."

Hers was the ear-piercing phone voice of Spencer Tracy's wife in the movie, "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World." Her last role, as the tough-talking bailiff on the sitcom "Night Court," was cut short by her death in 1985 at age 64.

My memories of Diamond go back to the late 1970s, when I interviewed her for my book, "How the Great Comedy Writers Create Laughter." She was casual, gracious and unpretentious. From that interview, here's Selma Diamond in her own words:

"I came out to Hollywood, went to a producer and showed him some comedy material. He wasn't too impressed with me or the material. He said, 'No, we have plenty of writers.' Then I remembered that I had once met someone from the William Morris Agency who said if I ever came to the coast I should look him up. So I did and he sent me back to the same producer and I got a job.

Wilde Times

By LARRY WILDE

"Good comedy writing is a reflection of our times. It has to be based on truth ... about something the audience can identify with, what they read in the paper that morning or the weather

"I think being a woman has given me a slight edge. I become aware of new fashions and trends before fellows do. There have been many occasions when I'd come up with jokes that the comedians and writers backed away from because they didn't know what I was talking about. So you get down on your knees and you say, 'Please try it!' And then they're surprised when it works.

"That's why comedians surround themselves with talented writers. At best you're guessing. If you're an expert, you're just guessing a little better than somebody who's not an expert.

"As a female, there were things you had to overcome to be a comedy writer. The hostility between men and women is a natural thing. At first I couldn't understand it. Then I noticed that men working with each other are hostile. So I don't think it's because I was a woman. It's because I was another writer. A woman should keep in mind that men aren't that nice to each other."

Selma Diamond ran a great race, setting the pace for future generations of women in comedy. We miss her. Fortunately the laughter lives on.

Come play at MEarth Day

THE THIRD annual MEarth Day will take place Saturday, April 25, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Hilton Bialek Habitat adjacent to Carmel Middle School on Carmel Valley Road. The day-long celebration will showcase the community's sustainability efforts and raise money for the nonprofit habitat project through a silent auction.

Attendees are urged to "create a garden for pollinators and other local wildlife by purchasing native plants at our plant sale," and edible and floral seedlings will be available, too. The outdoor exhibition area will contain one-stop shopping for all things related to "renewable energy, conscious living, sustainable foods, local art and green products."

Forrest Eggleston and his mobile silkscreening equipment will allow participants to customize their own shirts, handbags or whatever else they bring with them.

Casanova Restaurant will provide treats made with fresh produce from the habitat's garden, and kids will be allowed to make bike-powered smoothies and otherwise get busy in the Kiddie Fun Eco-Art Zone.

EIR for recycled water project released

THE ENVIRONMENTAL impact report for the water project that seeks to turn wastewater into drinking water was released this week.

The project, a collaboration between the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency, is officially called Pure Water Monterey.

The project "addresses the water supply needs of the Monterey Peninsula and the Salinas Valley by not only delivering highly purified water for replenishment of the Seaside Groundwater Basin," according to the water district, "but also delivering additional tertiary treated water to the Salinas Valley for agricultural irrigation, thereby reducing groundwater pumping in that area."

The public comment period for the project began Wednesday and will last for 45 days, until June 5 at 5 p.m. To view the EIR, visit www.purewatermonterey.org.

reproductive process. "With so few condors, it would be a shame to miss an opportunity for a breeding pair to raise a chick."

One nesting pair recently received a healthy egg from the Los Angeles Zoo, and as a result, they are now the foster parents of a healthy chick — the first born locally this year.

While the effort to reintroduce condors to the wild has encountered many challenges since it began nearly two decades ago, Sorenson said he's optimistic the birds' numbers will continue to rise — particularly once California's recently enacted lead-bullet ban is phased in over the next five years. Lead bullets have proved to be the greatest threat to condors. "We're in the home stretch," he said.

Signed into law by Gov. Jerry Brown in 2013, AB 711 requires all hunters to use non-lead ammunition by July 2019.

More than a year after the VWS and the Oakland Zoo teamed up to install a webcam at a feeding site in the Big Sur wilderness, the camera captured the striking image of a bald eagle and a California condor just inches apart, when the two birds apparently happened to come to feed at the same time. For the folks at the VWS, the photograph brings together the two birds the nonprofit has focused its efforts on. Before launching its condor reintroduction program, the group brought the bald eagle back to the Central California coast,

"It's so cool," Sorensen said of the image. "The photo really captures what we've been doing for the last 30 years."

Erwin, though, contends that the comments CHOMP called "disparaging" were her complaints about "ongoing discrimination against older workers" and Powers' "demeaning comments" about CHOMP's desire to replace older employees with younger ones.

"For complaining about the age discrimination in her workplace and exercising her civil rights, Erwin was fired," her lawsuit says. "She suffered humiliation, a loss of dignity, lost wages and lost retirement benefits."

Besides age discrimination and retaliation, the suit alleges breach of contract and termination in violation of public policy. Erwin is also seeking punitive damages, which can be awarded in cases of "malice, oppression or fraud."

Workers and the guests from the four rooms that were occupied when the fire broke out were allowed back into the Lodge not long after, and normal operations resumed, according to Pangburn. About four hours after the initial dispatch, one engine remained parked outside the building, and a small tarp covered the hole in the roof.

Jennifer Simmons

Jennifer Simmons was born in Santa Rosa on May 12, 1950, the daughter of Francis and Margaret Simmons. She passed at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula on March 4, 2015, surrounded by family and friends. Jen has been a prominent citizen of Carmel Valley since 1958.

A lifelong teacher, Jen attended Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo and graduated with a degree in Elementary Education. Her teaching career included a short stint in Grants Pass, Oregon and a year at All Saints Day School in Carmel Valley. But mostly, Jen is known for her long tenure as a beloved fifth grade teacher at Tularcitos Elementary School, beginning in 1984. While at Tularcitos, Jen was known for her passion for physical education and kinesthetic learning. Her classroom was always a beehive of productive activity. Beyond the classroom, she was dedicated to recreation, the playgrounds, and the gardens. Jen was three times Teacher of the Year for Monterey County.

Jen's activities outside of her work made her a true icon of Carmel and Carmel Valley life. She was a lifelong horsewoman, serving as a board member of the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club. She was a founding board member and the show manager for the prestigious Central Coast Ranch Horse Classic. Jen was always a figurehead at the Trail and Saddle Club, riding her palomino horses, followed by her beloved yellow labradors, and greeting all who came to the facility.

In Jen's life, there was an affinity for water and the ocean. She began surfing in college, then continued as a Carmel surfer at a time in life when most of us would find the ocean daunting. Jen enjoyed many trips to Maui with special friends. She was truly dedicated to the Masters swimming program in Carmel, a disciple and friend of Bob Walthour. Jen always said that a swim was the "Best way to start the day." In her world, she needed to "Swim to live." She would be there to open the pool in the wee hours of the morning, encourage all who came, swim miles herself, then depart for a full day of teaching.

Jen had a special empathy for all humans and animals. Her generous spirit gave her an ability to teach that each individual possesses unique and special qualities. There is a thread that connected all the diverse pieces of Jen's life, and that is her remarkable role as a mentor and teacher. Although she was a gifted athlete herself, an accomplished and winning triathlete, her focus was always on her students. Whether in the classroom, the horse arena, the pool, during nature hikes with children, or on the beach, Jen let her students know that passion for what they did was the key to a life well lived. It was impossible to go anywhere in Jen's company without joyous cries of "Miss Simmons, Miss Simmons!" from an endless group of devoted students. Jen would always remember their names. Years after leaving her classroom, they wanted her to know of their passions, and she wanted to hear of them.

Jen's love of laughter, her dry sense of humor, and her astute grasp of human nature will forever be missed, especially by those friends who cherished the depth of loyal friendship that her unique qualities provided. Her life is part of the fabric of Carmel Valley.

Jen is preceded in death by her parents, Francis and Margaret Simmons, and her uncle, Donald Simmons. Jen leaves a loving sister, Susan Simmons, generations of devoted students, and a group of friends from different facets of her life, all devoted to her kind and unique friendship.

A celebration of Jen's life will be held at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club on Friday, May 15 at 5:00pm. Donations in Jen's memory may be made to the Equine Education Alliance at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club (cvts.org), MEarth (meearthcarmel.org) or the charity of your choice.

WHETHER IT'S shrouded with coastal fog or bathed in valley sun, the beauty of the Monterey Peninsula makes residents and visitors alike want to spend their summers outdoors. And while hiking and biking are two very good ways to do that, horseback is also a perfect way to explore and enjoy the area — just like they did in the old days.

The Peninsula, in fact, offers plenty of opportunities to saddle up and feel the wind in your hair.

Here's how you can make that experience part of your

■ Beach rides and lessons

Monterey Bay Equestrian Center, established in 1981 on a ranch in Prunedale and owned by Michael Mastroianni and his wife Madaline, has offered oceanfront rides along Salinas River State Beach for 27 years. Participants schedule their rides in advance and then meet up at the beach with the Mastroiannis and their horses to saddle up for a 1-hour, 1.5-hour or 2-hour guided ride up and over the dunes and down along the water's edge.

"It's an awesome experience, riding along the shoreline," says Madaline. "It's amazing to feel the spray as you ride along the ocean, particularly for more experienced riders, who can do a little canter in the shallow water."

The Marina Equestrian Center, located on the former Fort Ord, also offers summer horse camps for kids, and lessons for all ages. Established as the Fort Ord Stables during wartime, the center has access to miles and miles of trails for equestrians who want to trailer in their own horses to ride off into the sunset. McPadden, owner of PetSavvy Training, located at the Equestrian Center, provides “school horses” for all ages to learn how to horseback ride in an arena setting.

“Although I teach all ages and all levels,” says McPadden, “my niche has become beginning riders. Over the years, I’ve developed a wide clientele from all communities. My adult riders tend to be people returning to riding, but I cater to anyone who wants to ride.”

The Monterey Bay Equestrian Center also offers horse-drawn carriages for weddings, proms and quinceaneras, as well as petting zoos and ponies to bring to parties. The Mastroiannis, who have competed on the Class A horse show circuit, during which Madaline won three U.S. titles and one Canadian championship, offer group and solo horseback riding lessons seven days a week to beginner and experienced riders at their Prunedale ranch, as well as five-day horse camps for kids during the summer.

■ Trail Rides

Perhaps the best-known haven for horseback riding on the Monterey Peninsula is the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center. Touted as the premier local horseback riding facility, the center has access to more than 30 miles of trails that wander through the Del Monte Forest, and offers its famous beach ride, which parallels 17 Mile Drive before winding up between Cypress Point Club and Spyglass Hill golf courses for a spectacular view of the coast.

“Riders can also follow a trail to the Carmel gate and down the road to Carmel Beach for a ride along the shore,” says Robert Lapso, who took the reins of the center a month ago, after retiring from nearly 20 years as controller for the Pebble Beach Company. “If someone has a horse and wants to rent one of our guides for a trail ride, they can.”

The Equestrian Center also offers lessons in jumping, dressage, eventing, and is looking to add western in the near future. They stable 88 horses on property, 48 of which are privately owned. You can take private or semi-private lessons on their horses or yours.

A new opportunity for people looking to trail ride is the Equestrian Center that opened last summer at the Carmel Valley Ranch resort. Nestled among the chaparral and oaks of the foothills, the center, which corrals ponies, burros and horses, now offers various levels of horseback riding and equestrian adventures.

Carmel Valley Cowgirl Molly Heneks gives ranch guests and visitors lessons on local history, and the nature and wildlife of the valley, while managing a herd of some 30 horses at the hilltop corral. Among her equestrian offerings are 60- or 90-minute trail rides along the Chaparral Loop or the Sunset Trail.

■ Horseplay

For children, Carmel Valley Ranch hosts the Kiddie Corral, where kids get to become “junior ranch hands.” After a mini-roping lesson, cowboy arts & crafts, time to pet and curry miniature horses, and saddle up for a pony ride, kids can pose for a photo with their favorite animal.

Private pony rides on kid-friendly horses are also available, accompanied by equally kid-friendly trail guides. Ranch hands also throw one heckuva hoedown for kids who want to celebrate birthdays or other occasions with a private pony party at the ranch.

Some local stables even specialize in giving horseback riding experiences to children you might not expect to see on the back of a horse. Christine Marie’s Star Riders, located at the Marina Equestrian Center, is a nonprofit organization which gives disabled children a chance to ride.

“An autistic child who had never spoken, after his experiences at Star Riders, started talking,” says owner Linda Martin, who named the organization after her own child, who died at age 19. “Even children with cerebral palsy can be taken out of their wheelchairs and put on a horse, as we walk alongside,” Martin says.

■ Giddy up

Whether you’re an experienced equestrian, a beginner or looking to get back in the saddle, the Monterey Peninsula has plenty of programs and a whole lot of horses just waiting to carry you off into the sunset. Just remember to sit back, relax, and enjoy the ride.

“We tell all our riders, whether experienced or novice, you want to be still, feel calm, remember you’re out for a nice ride,” says Michael Mastroianni. “If you’re jerky and jittery on the horse, he’ll sense it. Just like being around dogs and other animals, the calmer you are, the calmer the horse will be. So let yourself be at ease. The horse is doing most of the work, so you don’t have to.”

FUN IN THE SUN

Take a walk through history

By ELAINE HESSER

HAVE YOU ever wondered what Point Sur Lighthouse looks like up close? Or had a few questions about historic buildings you see every day? A walking tour is a great way to get your questions answered while you stretch your legs and enjoy the outdoors.

Starting with the lighthouse, don't let Point Sur's steepness discourage you. The three-hour tour moves slowly, with multiple stops. Accommodations are available for disabled visitors; call (831) 667-0528 in advance. Tour times are at www.pointsur.org.

The gate's 19 miles south of Carmel. Tours are first come, first served, so it's a good idea to arrive at least 30 minutes early. No pets are allowed, nor can anyone stay behind once the tour starts, so if Uncle Ralph thinks he's going to read a book in the car while everyone else makes the trek, he's sadly mistaken.

Dress in layers and bring water, sunscreen and lip balm. The paved road and stairs leading to the top offer little shelter from sun and sometimes-gusty winds. The path is fairly broad, but a tolerance for steep cliffs without guardrails is helpful.

On a recent visit, docent John O'Neil met visitors at the gate at 9:30 for a 10 a.m. tour. A short drive on a bumpy single-lane road led to the parking lot. There were porta-potties there and at the top of the climb.

The tour began with safety instructions, then O'Neil and his wife, Carol, split the group in two so everyone would be able to hear, despite the wind. They stopped at various points to talk about shipwrecks, how the lighthouse was built, and the daily lives of the keepers and their families. And of course, there were stunning views around

In addition to the lighthouse itself, there were several other restored buildings at the top of the hill. The carpenter and blacksmith shops had period furnishings from the 1920s. The keeper's home was furnished much as it was in the 1950s, complete with a period stove and refrigerator.

Monica Hudson and Gael Gallagher's Carmel Walks. Both guides also give tours of other local spots, like Point Lobos and Cannery Row, and custom tours by appointment.

The two women took similar routes but had different styles during their two-hour tours. Both were happy to answer questions and address topics of interest to their guests along the way.

Hudson wrote the book, "Carmel-by-the-Sea," in Arcadia Publishing's "Images of America" collection. Her research included many interviews with long-time Carmel residents. She sprinkled their insights throughout the tour.

For example, at Court of the Golden Bough, she showed a photo of the inside of the theater that once stood there. Then she related, somewhat conspiratorially, that an older Carmelite complained that it was nearly impossible to neck in there because of the way the wicker seats were configured.

At the Church of the Wayfarer, she offered guests a chance to ring the church bell. She also pointed out the scripture references in the church's garden, which link many plants there to specific Bible verses.

Visiting city hall

If Hudson's tour was like walking by a stream and picking up gems, Gallagher's was more like shooting the information rapids. In addition to giving Carmel tours, she's a guide at the aquarium, Point Lobos, and the National Steinbeck Center. She's been a guide and naturalist for 31 years.

Her fast-moving narrative was full of good-natured banter and humor as she strode energetically from one site to another.

Gallagher stopped in front of city hall and talked about Clint Eastwood's term as mayor. She said that the paparazzi came out in full force for his inauguration and that regular council meetings got so crowded they couldn't be held in city hall. She also showed off her permit to wear high heels.

From there, like Hudson, Gallagher led her charges to the Church of the Wayfarer. She pointed out the stained glass windows with scenes of local history, including one showing Father Serra at the mission, accented by whales in the upper corners.

Other stops on both tours included First Murphy House and Cypress Inn.

The guides on all three tours had remarkable depth and breadth of knowledge. Their enthusiasm was contagious and time passed quickly. Whether you've lived here for decades or you just arrived last week, all these tours offer an opportunity to learn something new while enjoying a walk with views of land and sea.

Run in the Name of Love (or just walk)

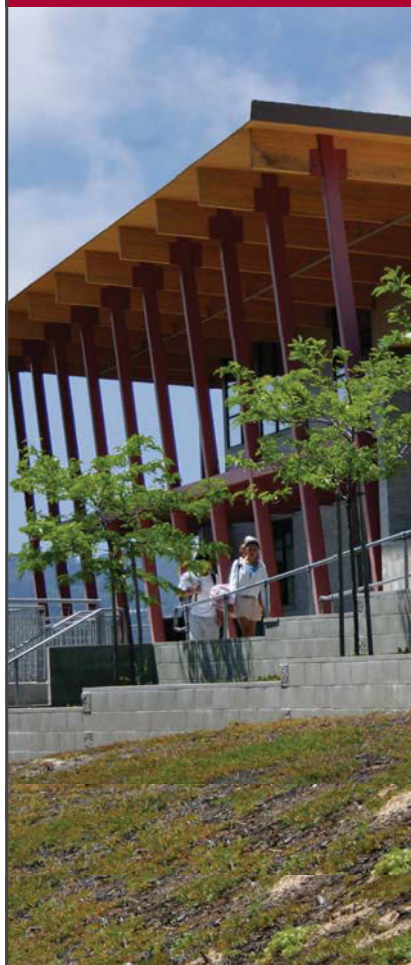

INSTEAD OF breakfast in bed or another tie, why not go for a walk with Dad this Father's Day and benefit a good cause at the same time?

Run in the Name of Love offers a choice of a 5k run or 2k on June 21. The 5k starts at 8 a.m. at Sunset Center, followed by the 2k walk (four-legged walkers welcome) at 8:40.

The event benefits Just Run, the Big Sur International Marathon's youth fitness program. It was inspired by the memory of Brian J. Love, who died in a snowboarding accident in 2005. He had been secretly training for a marathon to surprise his mother, who was also a runner.

Whether you're photographing wildlife or your wild life this summer, we've got tips

By ELAINE HESSER

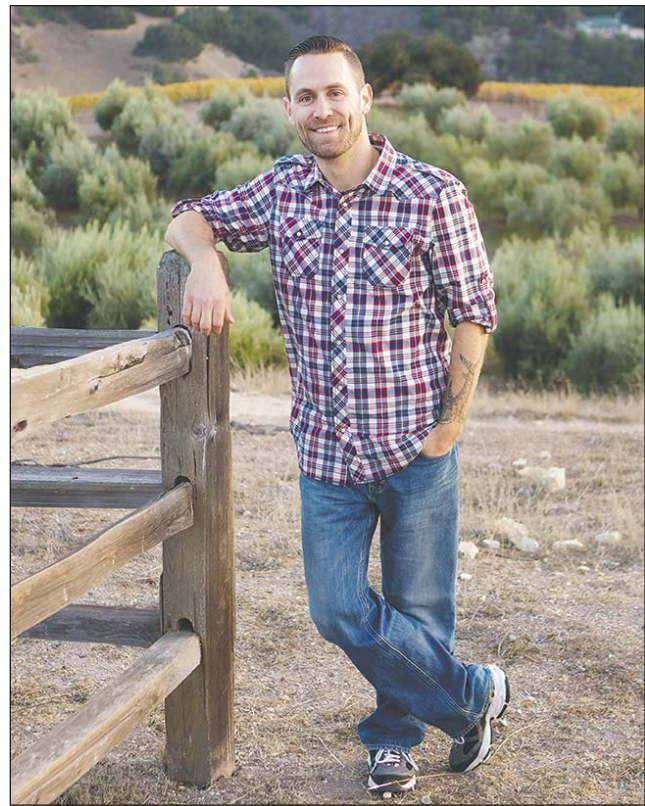

EVERY DAY, we can enjoy both beautiful surroundings and the ability to take thousands of pictures without paying for film or waiting for them to come back from the developer. Also, we always have cameras handy. Unfortunately, this combination can — and often does — produce vast quantities of photos that leave us asking, "What was I thinking?"

To improve the odds of capturing summer memories without the head-scratching results, The Pine Cone sought out some advice. Chris Hartzell, co-owner with wife Ame of PhotoStrokes, teaches photography and leads tours to capture images of local wildlife. He provided some general advice and resources for those who want to capture a condor in flight or an otter in the bay.

Michael Steelman, of Michael Steelman photography, gave some tips on improving family life as well as family “better.” Before investing a lot of money, think about why you’re taking photos and what you want to do with them. A point-and-shoot model may be perfect for your needs.

An elaborate Nikon or Canon or Olympus will provide more control over the photos, but you’ll carry a bit more equipment. If that becomes a barrier to bringing the camera along, it’s not worth the expense. As Steelman said, “The best camera is the one you have with you.”

Next, Hartzell said, pay attention to the lighting. This seems like a “duh,” but sometimes people forget that if subject is backlit, for example, details will be lost. In most cases, the subject of a photo should have roughly the same amount of light on it as the background.

Then take some time to compose the shot. Hartzell and other photography instructors recommend the “rule of thirds.” Imagine a tic-tac-toe grid on your viewfinder or screen, and place your subject at the intersection of two of the lines, rather than dead center.

Tell me a story

A picture should tell a story. When Hartzell’s photographing an animal, he wants to get some background to provide context. Steelman said that while it’s certainly okay to have the family line up and smile for a group shot, it’s also great to capture them doing things like picking flowers or carrying the kids piggyback.

He added, “Let people be themselves.” If the grandkids are

Where should you take pictures? For wildlife, Hartzell said that the Monterey Audubon Society’s website was a good resource. He also recommended checking out national, state, county, city and regional park websites for useful information. There’s a wide variety of boat tours for those seeking whales, otters, and seabirds as well.

For family photos, just about anywhere your family gets together is fine. Family events often involve eating, which Steelman said could make people more self-conscious. He said it’s good to be a bit of a “ninja” sometimes, by shooting from a distance, or trying to blend in until everyone relaxes.

He also advised learning to anticipate what’s going to happen — for example, if someone’s telling a funny story, line up the shot and wait for the punch line, and then take another shot as people react to it.

For significant events, like major birthdays or anniversaries, Steelman recommended hiring a professional photographer. First, you’ll almost certainly get better pictures. More importantly, though, you’ll be able to enjoy the event.

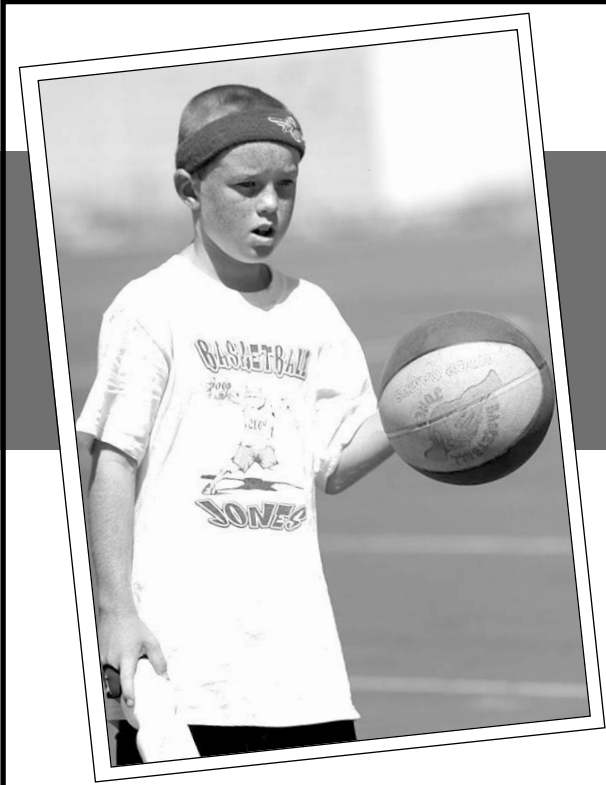

“It’s important to balance making a memory with making a record of the memory,” Steelman said. Sometimes it’s better to hand off the camera to someone else. Or follow the rule he has when it comes to his own family: Take some pictures and then put the camera down.

Pointing out that less is sometimes more, Steelman said, “What’s the point of having 40,000 pictures in your computer if you missed all the moments?” He said he finally realized his son would rather have memories of playing with him than hundreds of great photos.

Now, about those thousands of pictures: At some point, it’s time to decide which ones to keep. Hartzell said not to be too quick to hit “delete,” noting that storage media has become very inexpensive.

He suggested that if a color picture looks bad, using editing software to turn it into a black and white photo might improve it. And of course, if you can’t make up your mind about whether to keep a photo, it’s okay to come back to it later.

Finally, whether you’re stalking rare birds or a herd of wild teenagers, the most important thing is to make some memories, capture some moments and have plenty of summer fun.

CENTURY

50 Years Ago — April 29, 1965

Carmel High School is Result of Hard Work and Enthusiasm That Surmounted Bitter Strife

Two years of extraordinary community effort ended on September 10, 1940, when students attended classes for the first time at Carmel High School. During the 24 months prior to the opening, the community first rallied to give overwhelming support to a high school of its own, then split bitterly over the selection of a site.

Despite this rift and opposition from Monterey, determined, citizens progressed toward their goal encouraged by the words of Charles van Riper, who, at the beginning of the battle said, "If there is ever to be a Carmel High School, all of us will have to work for it, hard and fast." In the summer of 1938, the idea of a high school for the then Sunset School elementary district attracted considerable attention and a fact finding committee was formed. Attending Monterey High School were 128 students from the Sunset district.

The assessed valuation of the Sunset district including Carmel, Carmel Point, Carmel Woods, Hatton Fields and the southern part of Pebble Beach was $9,000,000. Taxpayers in these areas paid 28 percent of the cost of maintaining Monterey Union High School for 12 percent of the school's attendance, plus $29 a day to bus students over the hill.

25 Years Ago — April 26, 1990

Important Housing Issues Crowd Agenda

The Carmel City Council has housing on its mind: Tuesday's agenda was filled with subordinate units, a site for the first Murphy house, and a lease for the Flanders Mansion. The council will meet at 4 p.m., Tuesday, May 1 in Carmel City Council Chambers. It will once again try to tackle the elusive subordinate unit ordinance, which sets standards for legalization of existing units and prohibits new ones except in hardship cases.

The law establishes a six-month amnesty period for property owners to come in and register their units. The ordinance was approved by three council members in February at its first reading, and was to have a second reading during the last council meeting in March but Councilman Ken White changed his vote and voted against it. White and Councilmember Bob Fischer are the only two councilmembers that can speak at the public meeting on the issue because the other three members have what is legally considered subordinate units in their homes. Even new member Barbara Brooks, who took Elinor Laiolo's seat, has a subordinate unit in her house, albeit unrented.

EVENTS MEAN BUSINESS!

Graeme Robertson
2015 Board Chair

We hope everyone survived "tax season" and is looking forward to a prosperous spring. We have had a very busy month at the Chamber. A very special thank you to Mary Crowe and her team at La Playa Carmel for hosting a dynamic mixer at the beginning of April. The food, wine and energy in the room were outstanding. We encourage you to attend our next mixer at the Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca on April 30 hosted by Jeanie Sumners and her team.

We hosted our Executive Leadership members at a luncheon earlier this month at La Playa Carmel. At the lunch, we heard great presentations from Tom Burns of The Carmel International Film Festival and Doug Thurston of the Big Sur International Marathon. We had a very interesting discussion on both of these very important events to our Village and the broader Monterey Peninsula. The Marathon has an annual economic impact of over $18 million and contributes over $250,000 back into the community each year. Last year, The Carmel International Film Festival generated over 420 million impressions of our area from all media sources and had a record attendance. These events and the other events that are hosted by Carmel-by-the-Sea enable us to share this extraordinary area with a diverse group of visitors. In addition, the residents and businesses are the beneficiary of these world-class events...the residents benefit from outstanding public services and increased property values and the businesses benefit from increased exposure and opportunities for incremental revenues in their establishments.

Please extend a warm welcome to all the participants and volunteers at The Big Sur International Marathon. We will look forward to seeing you at the "Finish Line".

Graeme Robertson
Board Chair, Carmel Chamber of Commerce

Coping with Mondays by deciding not to do them

"But whenever Monday comes, you can find me cryin' all of the time"

– Mama Cass

THE DOCTOR wants to see you again in six months," the receptionist said. She paged through her appointment book to schedule a time for me, and then announced a date six months down the line.

"What day of the week is that?" I asked. "It's a Monday," she replied.

"No," I said. "I don't make any plans for Mondays. Mondays are my days for doing nothing."

She looked at me as if she were a maitre d' and I had just turned down a hard-to-get reservation at a very exclusive restaurant. Then she turned the page, and asked if Tuesday was OK for me.

"What time?" I asked.

"9 a.m."

"No, I don't make any plans before 10."

This time her look said, "don't you know people are dying for these appointments?"

Fortunately she had an appointment at 11, so we settled on that. I thought she deserved an explanation. But I didn't give her one.

However, I wasn't being obstinate or impertinent. I was simply following a method of living I had adopted since retiring many years ago. You see, all of my life I dreaded Mondays. I either had to go back to school or back to work on Monday, always at a very early time in the morning. Now that I'm retired I don't schedule anything on Mondays so I can look forward to doing nothing.

When I was growing up in Buffalo, N.Y., we had many "snow days." If it snowed during the night we would turn the radio on early in the morning to listen to the school closing announcements. We would shout for joy when we heard the name of our school. The news of the closing was all the sweeter if it occurred on a Monday. We could stay in bed and think about snow forts and snowball fights, rather than trudging off to school.

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

Think about why we scream, "TGIF," on Fridays. Why do we look forward to weekends whether we are in school or in the workforce? Because that's when we have the option to choose what we do and when we do it — or even decide not to do anything at all. Psychologists tell us we feel better when we are autonomous, mapping out for ourselves the directions our minds and bodies will take.

Mondays often take away our ability to be spontaneous. While working in the real world I often associated Mondays with crises. Monday was the day calamity was served with coffee — Grandé problems producing Venti headaches. Running a sales office was much like running an adult day care center. Invariably one or two of the office personnel called in sick on Mondays. Equipment seemed to suffer Monday blues, too, as frantic calls came in from customers who needed emergency repairs or "loaners" to get them through the day.

Psychologists suggest preventing the dreaded Monday syndrome by planning something to look forward to. They suggest having lunch with a friend, scheduling something pleasant to do, or setting your own priorities by putting off answering emails and phone calls. Had I done that while I was working, the next appointment I would need to make would be at the unemployment office. It is that loss of autonomy while working or going to school that prevents us from being in charge of our schedules, or the captains of our souls, as William Ernest Henley put it.

Of course, I don't do absolutely nothing on Mondays. I take the psychologists' advice and schedule things that are pleasant — coffee with the guys, a crossword puzzle, a muscle-soothing suspension of tension while using the hot tub as a think tank, an almond croissant at Lafayette Bakery, a quick peek at the alarm clock before rolling over. Best of all, whether or not I do any of these things will have no impact on altering or illuminating our times.

This retirement policy may not work for everyone. It works for me. It is my personal blowback against the more than 3,000 Mondays between 1st grade and retirement. I'm not sure exactly how many there have been. I don't want to think about that now. I'll let you know the precise number on Tuesday, sometime after 10 a.m.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A citizen came to the station to report that he and his dog were menaced by a dog in Mission Trail park. The offending dog was off leash and bolted toward them, showing aggressive behavior such as growling and baring teeth. The citizen's dog was on a leash next to him and was pulled out of the way of the pursuing dog to avoid contact. He had his dog behind him while the loose dog continued toward them. He brought his leg up from the ground in a protective action, and the loose dog stopped. Contact was made with the loose-dog owner, who then placed the dog on the leash. The offending dog owner did not show concern, and the citizen stated he would report the incident. Photo taken of dog and owner, and the offending dog was taken off leash again as the citizen was leaving. Followup needed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Driver reported damage to her vehicle from the sidewalk during parking maneuver at Dolores and Eighth. She claimed the previously eroded curb caused the damage. Driver was educated that damage was caused by a vehicle hitting the curb, which is a traffic collision. Driver was grateful for the clarification and requested the eroded curb be reported to public works for maintenance. Public works notified of curb via email the same day as this report.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Resident reported finding an unattended backpack in his front yard on Scenic south of Ocean. Backpack was collected as found property. A few hours later, the backpack was returned to the same residence because it belonged to the homeowner's grandson. There was a miscommunication on their part.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A 20-year-old female was arrested at Mission and Fifth for public intoxication, battery on a police officer, resisting arrest and drug possession. She was lodged at county jail.

Carmel area: Items were stolen from two vehicles and a garage on Outlook Drive.
