Murray hurls phones off Vesuvio rooftop bar

By MARY SCHLEY

IT TURNS out that even Bill Murray — who's well known in these parts for his friendliness and accessibility to the crowds during the AT&T Pro-Am — has his limits when it comes to attention from fans.

Last Thursday night, apparently upset at having his picture taken while he was trying to enjoy himself at Vesuvio restaurant's rooftop bar, Murray grabbed cell phones from a couple of women and tossed them off the roof, according to Carmel Police Cmdr. Paul Tomasi.

After the incident, somebody called the cops, but Murray had left by the time they got there. The women denied taking pictures of the comedic movie star.

"Two of them are saying, 'He just walked by and I was on my phone, and he just grabbed it and threw it off the roof,'" Tomasi said. But, "obviously, there were people up there taking pictures."

By the time the women got downstairs to retrieve their phones, someone had picked them up and taken them, according to Tomasi, and the next morning, detective Jeff Watkins tracked Murray down to the Pacific Gardens Inn in Pacific Grove, where he met with the manager and spoke with the actor.

"Bill Murray was there and did speak with him briefly," Tomasi said. All the actor said was that he had been at Vesuvio the previous night and would cover the costs of any damage — but that was it.

With assurance they would be reimbursed, the women — Irene Villarreal from San Jose and Athena

Parker admits misleading voters about college degree

■ Claims she just found out she never graduated from MIIS

By KELLY NIX

MONTEREY COUNTY Supervisor Jane Parker — who was twice elected to the board of supervisors after telling voters she had a degree from the prestigious Monterey

League of Women Voters of California Education Fund
Monterey County, CA November 2, 2004 Election

Full Biography for Jane Parker
Candidate for Supervisor, County of Monterey, Supervisorial District 4

This information is provided by the candidate

Jane Parker for Supervisor

Monterey Peninsula College Board Chair Jane Parker is a long-time education and health care advocate, and former small business owner.

Since her election as a College Trustee, Jane has proven to be an effective advocate for quality education. Jane graduated from Monterey High School, and earned her Bachelor's degree in International Economics from the Monterey Institute for International Studies.

Jane also serves as a Vice President for Planned Parenthood Mar Monte, where she raises $5 million annually, allowing for the provision of essential family, health, education counseling and medical services. Under the exceptional leadership of the executive team, of which Jane is a key member, Planned Parenthood Mar Monte facilitated nearly 427,000 abortions.

This screenshot from a League of Women Voters 2004 election pamphlet is an example of county supervisor Jane Parker's frequent campaign claim that she has a degree from MIIS — a claim she now says isn't true.

Institute of International Studies — said this week she never actually graduated from the school, and has no college diploma at all.

But she contends the false claim was the result of an oversight and not an intentional effort to deceive voters.

Since at least 2004, and possibly even as far back as her election to the board of trustees of Monterey Peninsula College in 1999, the 4th District supervisor has claimed on numerous websites and other campaign materials that she had a degree in international economics from the distinguished Monterey college. But on Feb. 11, a representative from MIIS contacted Parker to inform her it has no record of her degree.

"This is surprising and somewhat embarrassing, as you can imagine," Parker, 62, told The Pine Cone Tuesday. "As soon as I learned of the issue, I started looking into what happened, corrected the information on my website, put a message on my Facebook page, and am exploring what my options are."

A challenger investigates

The information came to light when a researcher hired by her challenger, former Salinas Mayor Dennis Donohue, 61, contacted the school to inquire about Parker's supposed degree.

When Donohue was asked by The Pine Cone what he believed Parker should do in light of the discovery, he told The Pine Cone, "My sole focus is on listening to the issues facing the residents of District 4 and explaining why I am the best candidate to deliver real solutions. This is Jane Parker's issue, and she will need to focus her attention on it."

His campaign manager, Steve Thomas, said, "These are facts you think would have been checked previously, but obviously they were not."

Parker, who says she attended MIIS in the 1970s when it was called the Institute of Foreign Studies, said she believed she had completed all the classes required to get her

Potter, Adams differ on water solutions

By KELLY NIX

THE MOST important issue facing the Monterey Peninsula and the county is undoubtedly water, and the topic also marks the starkest contrast between the two candidates vying for the 5th District county supervisor's seat.

Adams, who was CEO of United Way Monterey County until her retirement in June 2015, said she believes in a "portfolio approach" to the Peninsula's water problems, including continued conservation, "recharging the aquifers," water reclamation and, perhaps most significantly, "a smaller desal plant for existing needs."

"We need a sustainable water source that is affordable, feasible, and soon," Adams told The Pine Cone. "Furthermore, I look forward to productive talks among the entire county family on the long-range future water needs and shared priorities."

CITY WORK ON PRIVATE LAND PROMPTS INVESTIGATION

By MARY SCHLEY

'LACK OF information, incorrect assumptions, and poor communication' between public works superintendent Rob Culver and his boss, Rob Mullane, led to the construction, and then abrupt removal, of an asphalt berm by city workers crews on private property adjacent to city councilwoman Victoria Beach's house on Acacia Way last December, an investigator has concluded.

But pressure from the councilwoman, and city workers' difficulty in handling that pressure, also figured into the equation.

Stephanie Atigh was asked to look into the matter after

Beach's neighbor complained on Dec. 17, 2015, that city workers were constructing a berm next to Beach's home, even though Acacia Way is a private road that's maintained by the residents. (The neighbor, Barbara Buikema, learned that for herself following the 1997-1998 El Niño storms when she asked the city for help repairing substantial flood damage and was told that since Acacia Way is private, she would have to cover the costs — which she did by procuring a "six-figure loan," according to Atigh.)

So, when she learned public works crews were building a berm above Beach's house, she complained to the city.

'Good customer service'

Hired to look into the berm controversy, Atigh interviewed Beach, her neighbors, interim city administrator and Police Chief Mike Calhoun, Mullane and his crew, two of whom have worked for the city for more than two decades.

In November 2015, Beach asked public works to look at the erosion on her property that was being caused by runoff from the public road above her house, and was told a berm would solve the problem, according to Atigh's report. Atigh said that while Beach knows her street is private property, she believed the city should construct the berm on Acacia because the runoff was coming from the city right of way.

Not knowing how to respond to such a request from a council member and wanting to give "good customer service," Culver asked Mullane what to do, and he authorized the work. Subsequently, a small crew spent a few hours constructing the berm out of cold asphalt mix. Later, the crew returned to remove it after being told the work had been a mistake.

Culver said Beach called and asked why the "beautiful berm" was being removed, and he told her a neighbor had complained.

Afterward, Mullane initially told the investigator he didn't know Acacia Way was private and denied Culver had told him as much, but "later modified his statement to say that Culver may have told him that this was a private road, but he thought that the remedial work would be done on the public right of way."

And an email he sent to Calhoun suggested Mullane's

Businesses enter political fray with campaign signs

By MARY SCHLEY

WITH THE election of two city council members and a mayor taking place in less than two months, campaign signs for one of the contenders — Jack Pappadeas — have appeared in the windows of businesses all over town. And while campaign signs in and of themselves aren't unusual, their number is.

"I'm at 50 and counting," Pappadeas said Thursday. "It's just another way of reaching people."

A resident here for a decade but inactive in politics until now, Pappadeas said he's often in town and has a lot of support from restaurants and other businesses.

Before he announced his candidacy, his name had almost never been mentioned in The Pine Cone or elsewhere in connection with any current events, but "I'm probably more well known than anyone else running, because I'm on the street every day," Pappadeas said.

After announcing he would run, Pappadeas began asking the business people he knows if they would place his signs in their windows.

Just me and Maluka

AT FIRST, they just took her for a few days to see if she might be a good fit for their household. Having recently bought a house, they figured it might need a pet to make it a home. Meanwhile she was only a few months old and had been abandoned to the care of a local animal shelter, which was planning to put her down. Maybe it was her dire situation, or maybe it was the cute little face on this black Labrador retriever mix, but once they brought her to the house, they knew she was home. And thus, so were they.

They named her Maluka – Luka for short – because they liked the way it sounded, despite the fact that it was a Latin wordplay on “crazy.”

“I think we might have jinxed her by naming her Luka,” her person says. “Here was this cute, cuddly little puppy, all black with white markings on her chest in the shape of a heart. But she quickly became a very feisty, crazy, wild but fun dog.”

Now 14, Luka has begun to mellow, but she still has her manic moments. Raised primarily around females, she warms to women but seems wary around men.

“With men, she picks up on their aura,” her person says. “If she doesn’t like it, that’s that; there’s no romancing her. It’s actually a good test; my dates have to pass the ‘Luka test.’ Some of my callers have brought her treats. She always takes the treats, but if she doesn’t like the guy, he doesn’t get anywhere with either of us.”

When Luka lived in Monterey, her person walked her to the Wharf and then down to Del Monte Beach, where Luka would work out her energy. Now living in Pacific Grove, Luka likes to greet guests through her garden gate or wander with her person around the neighborhood.

Bill calls for registration of coastal commission lobbyists

By KELLY NIX

STATE LAWMAKERS fired up about last week's ousting of California Coastal Commission chief Charles Lester have introduced a bill that would require lobbyists hoping to influence commissioners to identify their clientele and register their expenditures.

The bill, signed by Assembly members Mark Stone and Marc Levine, and Assembly speaker Toni G. Atkins, would require lobbyists from interest groups hoping to sway the coastal agency to follow the same disclosure rules as lobbyists who try to influence other state agencies.

"There is a loophole in current law that says so-called consultants whose job is to influence members of the coastal commission don't have to register and disclose spending the way other lobbyists do," Atkins said in a statement. "The existing loophole gives these lobbyists an edge with commissioners when they are pushing development projects along our coast."

On Feb. 10, commissioners voted 7-5 to fire Lester following a marathon meeting in Morro Bay. Lester received near unanimous support from citizens and elected officials. The commissioners made the decision in closed session before announcing it just before the close of the hearing.

Although the commissioners who wanted him gone didn't expressly offer a reason, a lack of staff diversity and Lester's inability to communicate well with the commission were mentioned. Some of Lester's supporters have said that they believe development groups lobbied the commissioners — all of whom are Democrats — to fire him.

If approved, the bill would not only apply to lobbyists for developers, but those representing any special interest group.

Stone — who last week wrote a letter to the staff of the coastal commission calling Lester's firing "inexcusable" — said this week that decisions made by coastal commissioners are of such gravity that they should be subject to the "highest standards of public disclosure."

"However, current law lacks the transparency that Californians clearly expect and deserve about who is working to influence decisions that commissioners make," Stone said.

Along those same lines, Levine said that the public entrusts the commission to act as stewards of the coast.

"The public has a right to know who is trying to influence commissioners' votes," he said. "This legislation will bring desperately needed transparency to the perception of back room deal making at the commission."

Fifth District Monterey County Supervisor Dave Potter, who served on the coastal commission for a dozen years, said he hasn't yet read the bill but hopes it doesn't hamper citizens in promoting their own projects.

"I would hope it does not preclude the general public in having access to the commissioners so they can make their case for their projects," Potter told The Pine Cone.

KREITMAN FOR CARMEL COUNCIL

Beach Fires

It's hard to write about beach fires and avoid obvious puns, so to get them out of the way: This is a burning issue that has inflamed passions, ignited controversy, sparked protests, and so on. Seriously, this subject is on many peoples' minds and has sharply divided the community, the City Council, and the Coastal Commission. Valid health and safety concerns vs. a long-standing community tradition of connections and shared experience.

At one pole of the discussion is a neighbor who says we should ban all fires from the beach, wood or propane. Not a widely-shared position but one to be admired for simplicity and ease of enforcement. At the other pole are those who say we should go back to the status quo ex ante - unlimited wood fires on the sand south of 10th. Also not widely shared. Between these two extremes lies a whole range of opinions and schemes.

Here's my take and what I would support as your City Councilman: Unlimited wood bonfires on the sands of Carmel Beach are finished. Done and gone, as are any wood fires directly on the sand. Propane rings and devices should and probably will be allowed. Beyond that I'd consider a limited number (10-12) of movable fire pans, set back from the bluffs, fueled with dried seasoned hardwood, cleaned up daily and managed by a Carmel beach crew. This last piece is crucial, because however we proceed will require more resources and attention from the City to provide the stewardship our magnificent beach deserves.

Yes, wood smoke is carcinogenic, as is every other form of smoke, including auto and truck exhaust. It's a matter of levels, concentrations, and tradeoffs. If it turns out that even the limited program envisioned here puts wood smoke into homes above the beach or causes respiratory problems for strollers on Scenic then I would definitely reconsider.

I welcome your comments and advice on this and anything else.

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

Bumper and license plate, but no car

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Schley.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of structure fire at a theater on Monte Verde south of Eighth Avenue called in by a neighbor at 0432 hours. Upon arrival, remnants of a large recycle bin were igniting a nearby wooden staircase to the back office. Fire was limited to the exterior of the structure only. Entry made into the theater to check the interior. Responsible for the theater was notified and responded to the scene. Nothing suspicious was noted, and fire officials determined the fire was accidental.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Several 911 hang-ups have been received from a Ladera residence over the past two months. Contact was made with the homeowner to advise him of the trouble with his phone line and the fact that only static is heard. He advised he would contact his phone company to have the line repaired; however, the problem still exists. Contact made with the homeowner again to advise him of the problem.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person at San Carlos and Alta reported being involved in an altercation with a male adult because of road rage. The female stated the male got off of his vehicle and punched her vehicle. She stated there was no damage to her vehicle but wanted the incident documented and requested a close patrol of her residence. She did not have a good vehicle description or a license plate.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female walked into the lobby to report losing her wallet somewhere near the main library at Lincoln and Ocean. She wanted to make a report in case the wallet was found and turned in for safekeeping. A brief description of the wallet was provided.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A customer at Barmel grabbed a waitress' hair.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A citizen found a deceased cat in the roadway at Carpenter and Valley Way and brought it to the station.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Someone reported a female screaming as though she was being chased, but no one else was observed in the area of Mission Street. Caller also stated the female was staggering about but then would scream some more after a few steps. Located the female, who had been drinking but denied screaming. She was evaluated and found to be able to care for herself. Provided a courtesy ride home.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: During a traffic stop at Ocean and Junipero at 2306 hours a 26-year-old male was found to be driving with a suspended license, and the vehicle he was driving displayed false registration tabs.

Pacific Grove: Driver was stopped on Pine Avenue for a moving violation. He had a suspended license and less than 1 oz. marijuana without a prescription. Drugs were confiscated for destruction. Driver cited and released. Driver called a coworker, who arrived and drove his vehicle from the scene.

Carmel area: Child Protective Services referral on El Rio.

Carmel Valley: Colt Lane resident reported an audio bar was stolen from his garage.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Construction workers hit a gas line while digging in the area of Carmelo Street north of Ninth Avenue.

RESTAURATEURS DON'T WANT CITY ORDINANCES CHANGED — MUCH

By MARY SCHLEY

ALTHOUGH THEY might want to be able to stay open a bit later or have more flexibility in what they sell or how many seats they have, most of the restaurant owners who attended a city-led meeting Jan. 26 said they don't want the town's restrictive food-service laws amended much.

Interim planning director Marc Wiener called the meeting at the request of the city council, which decided last year it wanted to consider possible changes to the city's laws on restaurants. That decision came after Carmel Belle won a city council appeal and was allowed to continue having its customers order at the counter and then sit down to be served — a setup not permitted by city code.

"Under the current regulations, many things would not be allowed," Wiener explained to the group. For example, a sandwich shop or a pizza parlor couldn't open, even if it was high end and well designed, because the city's laws allow for only two types of restaurants: specialty, which are basically coffee shops, and full-line, which are sit-down establishments where customers order from and are served at their tables.

"We definitely want to maintain the quality of the dining experience in the city," Wiener said.

Some of the city's more established restaurateurs — Rich Pepe (Little Napoli, Vino Napoli, Carmel Bakery and Vesuvio), David Fink (400 Degrees, Cantinetta Luca, Salumeria Luca and Aubergine), Tony Salameh (Anton & Michel and The Grill on Ocean), brothers Walter and Gaston Georis (who now separately own Casanova and La Bicycleette), and Bashar Sneeh (Dametra, Mediterranean and PortaBella) — were there, as were representatives from the Village Corner, Flaherty's, Basil Seasonal Dining, Affina Bistro, Grasing's, Terry's at the Cypress Inn, Carmel Coffee House, Il Tegamino, Patisserie Boissiere, and the Carmel Cocoa Bar. Planning commissioners Ian Martin and Keith Paterson, who formed a subcommittee to address the issue, attended as well.

A couple of owners said they'd like more flexibility in their operations, such as being able to sell different items or serve food later, in order to offset some of the rising costs of business, including the state-mandated

$1 annual increase in the minimum wage, the new mandatory sick time, and the city's famously high rents.

"We need to have the ability to be flexible to make a profit, and I think the city needs to understand that," said Steve Grebing, owner of the Carmel Coffee House.

Fink noted that restaurants make a lot of their money off of wine, beer and spirits — so it would be helpful to be able to serve them, and food to accompany them, later into the evening.

Because restaurants need so much water to operate, participants discussed the fact new ones might be able to open, and existing places might expand, if their operators purchase water from Clint Eastwood. He's selling it through Malpaso Water Co., which is run by Michael Waxer, according to Wiener. Jonathan Sapp put the price tag at $250,000 per acre-foot, which he said equates to about

$5,000 per seat. (Before the Eastwood supply came online, the city had none for business expansions in town, and hadn't had any since the mid-1990s, because of state cut-back orders designed to protect the Carmel River.)

In general, those who spoke did not favor any sweeping amendments that would open the doors for more types of restaurants in town.

Observing that Carmel is the way it is for a reason, Pepe said, "Changing these rules could open up a floodgate."

He said the restaurant owners and operators who are established here have worked hard to be successful and are friendly competitors.

"I think it's a very serious endeavor and a road to be going down that could lead to some hard changes in town," he said.

Soerke Peters, chef and co-owner of Basil, said he's gotten a lot of business from becoming the first certified green restaurant in the city, and he suggested officials encourage others to do the same.

Wiener summarized their feedback as advice to proceed with caution. He said he'd look at the possibility of extending hours and allowing specialty restaurants in the larger commercial area, just as full-line restaurants are, not just in the core of downtown.

Finally, he suggested the group meet again to discuss whatever he comes up with before the proposed rules are sent to the planning commission, and the attendees agreed.

Maybe later hours to serve drinks and small bites

POLICE CHIEF AT TOP OF PAYROLL; PAUL AND STILWELL GET BIG CHECKS

By MARY SCHLEY

TAXPAYERS SPENT $7,718,630.14 — or an average of just under $87,000 — to employ 89 people in city government last year.

Mike Calhoun, the city's police chief and interim city administrator following the departure of Doug Schmitz, was at the top of the earnings list, receiving $164,322.53, plus retirement contributions of $41,412.25 and deferred compensation of $12,000. With medical benefits and other items added, the total cost of employment for Calhoun last year was $236,233.27.

Following him was Schmitz, who stepped in to run the city after Jason Stilwell left in October 2014 and earned $159,484.01 last year. With $16,831.06 in retirement and $11,550 in deferred compensation added — but no medical benefits — his sum came to $190,407.40.

Third was Rob Mullane, who was hired by Stilwell in August 2013 to run the planning department but was shifted to public works following the retirement last year of Stu Ross. Including a $4,800 car allowance and $1,800 for a cell-phone allowance, Mullane's total earnings were $163,347.28. With retirement contributions of $12,135.56, deferred compensation of $4,080, and other items covered by the city, his total cost of employment was $189,559.95.

In general, police officers often take up a large chunk of the Top 10 earnings list, in part because they accrue a lot of overtime. Last year, city employees ran up total overtime pay of $319,370.77, with Sgt. Ron Pflieger taking home the most: $35,507.91. With total earnings of $132,831.76, and a total employment cost of $161,310.35, Pflieger fell just outside of the Top 10. But Chris Johnson, who was promoted to sergeant last summer, came in at No. 4, with total earnings of $134,693.05, including $33,994.19 in overtime. After retirement contributions of $26,198.69 and other expenses, the cost to employ Johnson for the year totaled $180,489.78.

No. 5 was Sgt. Luke Powell, whose total cost was $178,740.49. Sixth on the list was Cmdr. Paul Tomasi, whose employment cost $176,903.39, and seventh was budget and contracts director Sharon Friedrichsen, whose cost of employment was $167,468.24, with pay totaling $144,025. Two police corporals followed in eighth and ninth place: Ken Shen, whose total cost to the city was $165,198.28, and Rachelle Lightfoot, with a total of $164,824.27.

Finally, longtime paramedic Michelle Cumming came in at No. 10, with $162,175.77 in total cost of employment.

Of the 10 people who follows her, eight are public-safety employees — five police officers and three paramedics. (Since the city pays Monterey Fire Department to run its fire station, its firefighters are on the City of Monterey's payroll, and therefore aren't included in this list.)

Other notable payouts in 2015 include Stilwell, who took home pay of $112,271.08, even though he left the city in October 2014, and his second in command, Sue Paul, who was fired in September 2014 and received $84,496.99 in 2015.

Council members are entitled to an $1,800-a-year stipend. Mayor Jason Burnett has always forgone his, but Steve Dallas, Victoria Beach, Carrie Theis and Ken Talmage receive theirs. They are also eligible for medical benefits, but only Talmage takes advantage of the city's health plan, which cost taxpayers $8,114.76 in 2015.

Candidate forum set for March 6

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE APRIL 12 municipal election is shaping up to be a very interesting one, with two candidates for mayor and five for two council seats, and no incumbents seeking reelection.

To help voters pick their favorites, The Carmel Pine Cone will offer a two-hour candidates' forum Sunday, March 6, at 7 p.m., in the event center on Dolores Street at the corner of Seventh Avenue.

"I'll be moderating, and asking questions on the hot topics of the day, and the audience will also have the chance to submit theirs," said publisher Paul Miller. "I think I'm going to enjoy this forum more than any of the others we've done."

All seven candidates have said they will attend, including Steve Dallas and Ken Talmage for mayor, and Jan Reimers, Dave Mosley, Bobby Richards, Richard Kreitman and Jack Pappadeas for city council.

"I'm hoping everybody will attend and help make the evening as informative as possible," Miller said. "Of course, with seven candidates, it will be a challenge to get every topic covered, but I'll do my best."

There will be no parking on the premises for the event; however, the city lot at the north end of Sunset Center is just two blocks away.

Chicago aquarium welcomes otter pup

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOUND ABANDONED six weeks ago on Carmel Beach, an otter pup has a new home 2,000 miles away in Chicago.

The orphaned female otter has been transferred from the Monterey Bay Aquarium to Chicago's Shedd Aquarium, where she is receiving care in its nursery from a team of animal trainers and veterinarians. Two other otters from the Central California coast have been treated there, too.

The move to Chicago comes six weeks after a passerby found the pup on the sand between Ninth and 10th avenues Jan. 6. The rescue team tried to reunite the otter with her mother, but when she couldn't be found, the infant was taken to the Monterey Bay Aquarium, where she was given a physical exam and placed in an intensive care unit.

Known as "Pup 719," she became the 719th member of her species to be part of the Monterey Bay Aquarium Sea Otter Program since it was founded in 1984.

When she first arrived at the Monterey Bay Aquarium,

H&R BLOCK

Try these tax tips to save money, boost refund

By Jesus Guevara, Master Tax Advisor

Taxpayers still have time left to influence their tax future. Many taxpayers can do something to lower their tax liability with these tax tips.

H&R Block Answers Six Essential Tax Questions for First-Time Filers

First job. First car. First apartment. First tax return. These signal some of the rites of passage into adulthood. More than 5 million taxpayers will file their own individual tax return for the first time this tax season and they may not know where to start. Many first-time filers have been dependents on someone else's return for close to two decades, but circumstances now dictate they are required to file a tax return. To lessen the confusion, H&R Block offers this Q&A to help taxes make sense.

Q. When is a taxpayer required to file a tax return?

A. Generally, anyone earning income should consider filing a return. However, filing requirements depend on a combination of circumstances, including filing status, income and age. For individuals just starting out, one of the biggest determining factors will be whether their parents can claim them as a dependent. This means taxpayers with nearly identical circumstances may have different requirements.

For example, a single 18-year-old who is claimed as a dependent, worked part-time jobs and earned $9,000 in wages and tips must file a tax return because earned income exceeds $6,300. Yet, if this person was not claimed as a dependent, filing would not be required because gross income did not exceed $10,300, which is the 2015 filing threshold for someone who files a return as a non-dependent, single individual. The filing threshold for non-dependents is determined by adding the personal exemption and the standard deduction for the applicable filing status.

Workers who are not required to file a tax return because their income is below their filing threshold should file a return to get a refund of all taxes withheld and/or to claim other tax benefits, such as the Earned Income Tax Credit.

If you are not a dependent and you enrolled in a health insurance plan through the marketplace, and you received an advance premium tax credit during 2015, you must file a tax return even if your income is below the filing threshold.

Q. What is the difference between a W-4 and a W-2?

A. Form W-4 is completed by the employee and is used by the employer to determine how much income tax is withheld from paychecks to cover tax liability. The amount of tax withheld is based on the number of withholding allowances an employee claims. Employees should adjust their withholding allowances when major life changes occur (e.g., change in household income, having a baby or buying a house); more allowances mean that less is withheld from your paycheck and take-home pay is higher.

Form W-2 is prepared by employers at the end of the year and reports wages paid and taxes withheld for the year so employees can use the information to file their tax returns. Employers mail Form W-2 in late January or provide them online. W-2 information also is sent to the IRS and the Social Security Administration.

Q. Which 1040 federal income tax form do I use?

A. There are three versions of Form 1040: 1040EZ, 1040A and Form 1040. Form 1040EZ is for the least complex individual tax situations and Form 1040 is for the most complex.

Form 1040EZ may be used by taxpayers with no dependents, no itemized tax deductions, income from wages and unemployment compensation, and $1,500 or less in interest income. The only tax credit that can be claimed on Form 1040EZ is the Earned Income Tax Credit.

Form 1040A accommodates dependent exemptions, pension income, education credits and premium tax credit reconciliation.

Form 1040, "the long form," may be used for any income level, self-employment income and all other types of income, itemized deductions and all personal credits.

Q. When are federal tax returns due?

A. The deadline for filing federal individual tax returns is typically April 15. In 2016, federal tax returns for most taxpayers will be due April 18 due to the observance of Emancipation Day. For taxpayers in Maine and Massachusetts, federal returns will be due April 19 due to the observance of Patriot's Day. This is also the deadline to request an automatic six-month extension to file, generally allowing taxpayers until October 15 to submit a return without a late-filing penalty. The six-month extension deadline is October 17 this year because October 15 is a Saturday. To avoid late payment penalties and interest, any taxes owed must be paid by the April deadline.

Q. What do I do if I forgot to claim a tax benefit or omitted income?

A. An amended tax return can be filed any time of year to claim overlooked credits and deductions, include omitted income and correct the number of dependents claimed. To claim a refund, the original or amended return must generally be filed three years from the original due date of the return. For example, an amended return for tax year 2012 must generally be filed by April 18, 2016.

Q. Which is the better filing method – DIY or with a tax professional?

A. Do-it-yourself software and online tax programs select the appropriate forms and use everyday language, making tax law easier to understand. However, the assistance from a qualified tax professional can help put taxpayers of all income levels at ease and does not require any understanding of taxes. Ultimately, it is the taxpayer's comfort level and personal preference that determine the best method.

Lucius to make meet-and-greet trip to D.C.

By KELLY NIX

REPUBLICAN CONGRESSIONAL candidate Casey Lucius will make her first campaign trip to Washington, D.C., next week to get feedback and support from a major GOP committee, members of Congress and others.

On her trip to D.C. the week of Feb. 22, Lucius, who is running against Democrat Jimmy Panetta, will confer with representatives from the National Republican Congressional Committee, an organization devoted to increasing the number of Republicans in the U.S. House of Representatives.

"I'd like to spend 99 percent of my time in this district with voters, but [a Congressional position] is a national seat, so I also have to have a presence in Washington so people there know who I am," Lucius, 39, told The Pine Cone.

Casey Lucius

Because democrats have had a grip on the local congressional seat for nearly 40 years, national GOP interest in Monterey Peninsula politics, Lucius maintains, has been minimal. But she said that has changed, and she outlined factors that have sparked the NRCC's interest in the district.

"One, it's an open seat, and they would love to have a Republican in the district again," Lucius said. "And two, being a woman and a veteran is appealing to the Republican Party."

Incumbent Congressman Sam Farr was elected in 1993 and is set to retire next year. His predecessor, Leon Panetta — Jimmy's father — served as a congressman from 1977 to 1993.

DA WON'T FILE AGAINST MARTIN IN BANNER FLAP

By MARY SCHLEY

PLANNING COMMISSIONER Ian Martin, who removed a banner for the city's centennial from the World War I Memorial Arch at Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street — igniting outcry over the proper treatment of war memorials and prompting an apology from Mayor Jason Burnett for the city's decision to hang the banner — won't be charged with any crimes, according to Carmel Police Chief Mike Calhoun.

The police department submitted the case for theft and vandalism charges to the Monterey County District Attorney's Office, which declined to prosecute Martin "in the interest of justice," Calhoun said this week, since Martin returned the banner to resident Barbara Livingston, and the only damage he did was cutting the rope holding it.

Instead, Calhoun said he's sending a letter to Martin advising him the DA is not pursuing the case and asking him to repay the $170 the city spent to have a company put the banner back.

"I'm preparing that letter as we speak, and that should go out in the next couple of days," he said. "I'm going to send the letter and ask him to pay it in 10 days."

Martin didn't want to say whether he would pay the money, since he hasn't received the letter yet and wanted to see it before commenting.

"I hadn't heard that the DA has decided not to prosecute Cindy and me," he said, referring to Cindy Lloyd, who also took part in the removal of the banner. "Since we didn't keep or harm the banner, and since the city has acknowledged that the banner should have never been hung there in the first place and has apologized that it was, I'm curious to know what we would have been prosecuted for."

Meanwhile, Martin has been pushing for the drafting of an ordinance in the Carmel Municipal Code to specifically address the treatment of war memorials. He said the commission is planning to form a subcommittee on the issue and will discuss that at its meeting in March.

The banner hanging behind U.S. Rep. Sam Farr for the Jan. 8 centennial kickoff offended many — including planning commissioner Ian Martin — because it was placed on a war memorial.

ON CARMEL POINT, BIG FENCES MAKE VERY ANGRY NEIGHBORS

By CHRIS COUNTS

A COUPLE who live on Scenic Road, James and Katherine Sims, don't like a masonry wall their next-door neighbors, Kathleen and Timothy Rhein, built last year along the part of their property.

Meanwhile, the Rheins, who live around the corner on Isabella, are opposing a plan by the Sims family to build a 6-foot redwood fence along a section of their yard.

On Feb. 10, the Monterey County Planning Commission took up a complaint by the Sims family that the wall built by their neighbors is too tall. But the discussion veered off into the subject of whether or not the wall was built with proper oversight.

"There is no permit for this, and there's no evidence the wall was ever inspected," argued attorney Tony Lombardo, who is representing the Sims family. He also said it might be unsafe, and said his clients are "effectively living next to the Berlin Wall at this point."

Representing the Rheins, attorney Andy Swartz insisted his clients did everything properly before having their wall built. Swartz said the wall was "engineered by a licensed engineer, designed by a licensed architect and built by a licensed contractor."

"The county staff has inspected this wall several times and approved it in all respects," Swartz countered. "It's safe and secure, and any statement to the contrary simply is not true."

In response, county planner John Ford conceded its look "is not acceptable," but he pointed out that it hasn't been completed because of the dispute between the two neighbors.

Ford also took exception to the idea that the wall is a danger. "There's no reason to think the wall is not safe," he said.

After listening to the conflicting testimony from the two attorneys, and not resolving the dispute over the wall's height, the planning commission decided to delay the hearing so county planners could research the project to make sure everything was done properly. County planner Dan Lister told The Pine Cone the issue will likely come back to the planning commission in late March.

On Feb. 23, the same two parties will go before the Monterey County Board of Supervisors so the Rheins can contest a decision by county planning director Mike Novo to approve the redwood fence. According to Lister, they contend the new fence will be a visual blight to them and passersby along Scenic. The hearing in Salinas is set for 1:30 p.m.

The Carmel Point neighborhood seems like an idyllic place, but the owners of the two houses on the left are locked in disputes over a masonry wall and a redwood fence. The county board of supervisors plans to weigh in Feb. 23.

Rotary Club honors Merv Sutton

THE ROTARY Club of Carmel-by-the-Sea recognized longtime businessman and former Nielsen Bros. Market owner Merv Sutton for his five decades of service at a special luncheon earlier this month.

At the lunch, held Feb. 3 at the Carmel Youth Center, Sutton's longtime friends, Phil Arnold and Graeme Robertson, presided over the festivities, which included a proclamation from Mayor Jason Burnett naming Sutton "Mr. Carmel," followed by remarks from city attorney Don Freeman, banker Charles Chrietzberg, dentist Ron Faia and attorney and former city councilman Gerard Rose.

"Each [reflected] upon Merv's indelible imprint on their own lives and how he has presented a model to follow regarding service to community, devotion to family, and positive impact on Carmel's business community," according to

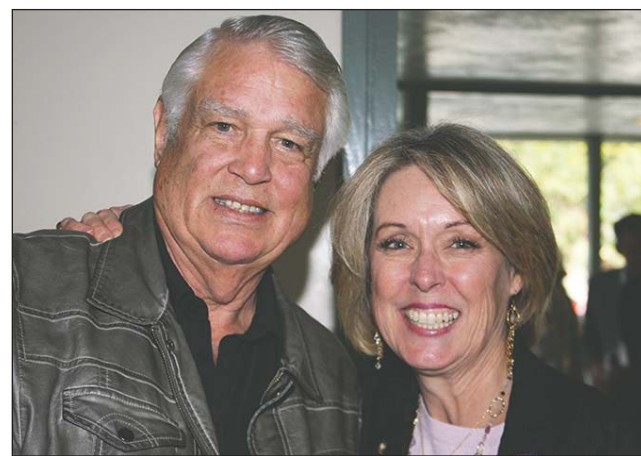

Rotary Club President Chips Wood.

In honor of Sutton's 53 years with Rotary — during which he has served as president and a member of the board — as well as his work with the Carmel Youth Center, Yes for Carmel, the chamber of commerce and other organizations, the club gave $530 to the youth center in his name.

The group named him a Paul Harris Fellow for donating $1,000 to Rotary.

He also received a letter of recognition from former Secretary of Defense Leon Panetta "with personal comments from Leon reflecting upon Merv's long and distinguished service to Carmel-by-the-Sea," Wood said.

The Rotary Blues Band, including Greg Kraft, Russ Campbell, Tom Olivola and youth center music director Stu Heydon, marked the event with tunes.

Hospice Foundation President Siobhan Green congratulates Merv Sutton at a recent Carmel Rotary Club luncheon held in his honor.

Alonzo Ritter Parsons

Alonzo Ritter Parsons, "Lon", died peacefully with family by his side on February 3, 2016, at Carmel Valley Manor in Carmel, California. A man of great spiritual integrity, he hoped to be remembered as a loving husband, father, and partner. "I tried to be kind and compassionate to all sentient beings, to help those in need, to support the common good and actions to bring justice and peace in the world." Lon was born on March 9, 1923, in Philadelphia, PA. to Elizabeth MacAllister and Alonzo Jacob Parsons. He grew up in Haddonfield, NJ and Fairfield, CT, where he graduated from Roger Ludlowe High School in 1940, and from The Taft School in 1941. Lon entered the University of Pennsylvania in 1941, volunteered for the US Navy for four years and graduated from Penn with an AB in math.

Lon married Joan Albrecht in 1946, and they shared 56 wonderful years together raising three daughters in New Jersey and Minnesota. Lon had a 36-year career with Honeywell, Inc. in sales and marketing, and later on corporate staff. In 1961, he was elected the Instrument Society Eastern Regional Vice President and served as president of the Instrument Society of America in 1967, one of the highlights of his professional life. His work on international standards development (1977-1984) took him to cities throughout Europe, and to China. Lon retired from Honeywell in 1983 and went to work for the United Way of Minneapolis Area as a fund raiser, a "life changing experience" and the favorite job of his long career. While living in Minnesota, Lon joined the Colonial Church of Edina and volunteered at the African American Institute, and the Division of Indian Work of the Greater Minneapolis Council of Churches.

Lon was a lifelong seeker. In the early 1950's he listened to Alan Watts on the radio and read Thomas Merton. He first heard Thich Nhat Hahn speak in 1967. Lon was a student of Zen and in 1991, he received lay ordination from a priest in the lineage of Katagiri Roshi of the Minnesota Zen Center. The Japanese name he received, "Taijo", means solid, steadfastness. He found spiritual fulfillment in all of these experiences. In 1994, he retired from United Way and moved to Carmel, CA. Lon was a docent at the Point Lobos State Reserve for eleven years where he took numerous beautiful photographs and learned the flora and fauna of the region. He used to say, "I can't believe I live in heaven!". He continued his spiritual development with the Monterey Bay Zen Center. He and Joan established many ties in the community, among them, friends at Del Mesa, Carmel Valley Racquet Club, and the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula. Joan died in 2002 after a long illness. In 2003, Lon began a friendship with Jane Langhorne which became a partnership that would last until her death in 2014. They travelled to Scotland, Tassajara Zen Mountain Center (where Lon shared his spiritual interests with Jane), and Sun Valley (where Jane shared her love of snow and skiing with Lon). Jane's daughters, Terry Morawitz, Dana Howell, and Julie Langhorne, and their families, became an important part of enriching Lon's life. In 2007, Lon and Jane moved to Carmel Valley Manor. Lon is survived by his daughters, Jody Parsons (Richard Wong) of Carmel, CA, Susan Parsons (Angus Baker) of Mt. Pleasant, SC, and Julie Meineke (Steve) of Lake Oswego, OR; four grandchildren: Jamey Tinkey (Adrian Broome), Nisa Meineke, Lee Baker (Michele Dwyre), Sarah Baker Thomas (Dave), and a sister, Sara Parsons Kenney, of Fairfield, CT. Lon left a gentle footprint in this world, and will be remembered for his kindness, compassion, loyalty and dedication to family and those vulnerable in this rapidly changing world.

The family would like to thank the amazing doctors, nurses and caregivers at Carmel Valley Manor Hillcrest/Health Center, who showed true dedication to caring for him in his last year of life.

A celebration of his life will be held on March 5, 2016, at 3 PM at the Hillcrest Library at Carmel Valley Manor. If desired, memorial gifts may be given to the Thich Nhat Hahn Foundation, 2499 Melru Lane, Escondido, CA 92026, www.thichnhatanhfoundation.org

Condolences may be sent to the Parsons family, 25608 Carmel Knolls Drive, Carmel, CA 93923.

Big Sur native wins overseas court battle over son's return

A MAN who was born and raised in Big Sur told family and friends this week that he has won an overseas custody battle with his ex-wife — and his 9-year-old son will be soon returning home with him to the United States.

"Thomas is coming home," Everett Chase of Roswell, Georgia, announced on Facebook Feb. 16. "After a month in Italy, we finally received a ruling from the Hague court today. I'm awaiting translation to understand all the details, but from what I gather now the court has ordered mom to return home with Thomas 'in the month of February' or 'if she refuses, dad may bring him home.'"

According to Chase, his ex-wife,

Marcella Bisello, took Thomas to Italy for 10 days to visit his grandparents. But the two never returned to the U.S. In response, he accused her of "kidnapping" Thomas, and he began a lengthy legal battle to bring him back.

Late last month, Chase traveled to Italy for a series of court hearings that would determine his son's fate. While awaiting the decision, he spent time with his son, and visited Venice and Lake Como, and fretted about the how he was going to pay for the legal battle and trip.

At last count, the trip and related legal expenses have cost Chase for than $15,000. A campaign at GoFundMe.com has raised $4,400.

 “In following my advisor’s recommendations, I believed I had completed all the coursework needed for my degree and, in fact, stayed through the summer session to achieve the last credits,” she explained.

She moved overseas after that summer and didn’t return to the Peninsula until 1991. The fact Parker never got a diploma from the school, or any other notice of graduating, apparently was not troubling to her.

“Because I believed I had completed my degree, I did not give it more thought,” said

Parker, whose supervisorial area includes Del Rey Oaks, Marina, Sand City, Seaside and southwest Salinas.

Donohue, Thomas said, has a bachelor’s degree in history from the University of San Francisco and a master’s in religious education from Gannon University.

Repeated numerous times

Parker’s situation is reminiscent of that of Ron Holly, a 2010 candidate for Monterey County treasurer-tax collector. Holly made headlines that year when he claimed on his campaign statement that he was an attorney because he had graduated from law school, even though he hadn’t passed the California bar exam. Holly apologized and called it an honest mistake.

While the Monterey County District Attorney’s Office investigated Holly for possible election law violations — because the statement could have misled voters — prosecutors opted not to pursue charges after Holly lost the election.

The difference with Parker, though, is that she was elected using false information and has held an important elected office for almost eight years.

And while Parker’s claim of a college degree was repeated to the press and appeared on various websites, including smartvoter.org, through the years, she did not make the claim on statements she filed with the county elections office in 2008 and 2012 — a fact that is likely in her favor since the Elections Code prohibits making deceptive claims on official candidate statements.

“Any candidate in an election or incumbent in a recall election who knowingly makes a false statement of a material fact in a candidate’s statement, prepared pursuant to Section 11327 or 13307, with the intent to mislead the voters in connection with his or her campaign for nomination or election to a nonpartisan office is punishable by a fine not to exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000),” according to the Elections Code.

Parker joined the board of supervisors in 2008 after she edged out Ila Mettee-McCutchon by 463 votes. She was reelected in 2012 when she handily defeated Byrl Smith by more than 1,500 votes.

Assistant Monterey County District Attorney Jeannine Pacioni said her office learned about the oversight on Tuesday and was just beginning to look into it, including asking The Pine Cone for facts it had obtained.

“We want to obtain any information that could help us to decide whether we do need to investigate,” Pacioni said.

Quick acting

About an hour after she was notified by MIIS, and the same day the Donohue researcher called the college, Parker addressed the diploma issue on her campaign website, official county biography and Facebook profile, and changed her website bio to say that she “studied” at the school, which was founded in 1955 as the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies. It’s now called the Middlebury Institute of International Studies. As of Thursday afternoon, though, her Facebook bio still indicated the college degree.

“I greatly value my time and education I received at MIIS, and I’ve taken immediate steps to work with MIIS to figure out what happened,” Parker wrote. “Now I’ll have to squeeze in time for eight more credits along with my busy supervisor’s schedule!”

Before she was a county supervisor, Parker was elected to the Monterey Peninsula College board of trustees, a term she served from 1999 to 2003. It’s unclear whether Parker advertised having a degree during that election campaign, or while serving as a trustee.

When Parker said she learned of the “discrepancy between what I had understood to be the case and the records at MIIS,” she said she “acted promptly” to address the issue.

“Transparency and accuracy are important to me,” Parker went on to say, and “I am actively reaching out, updating the information about my education and continuing to explore with MIIS what happened and what the options are going forward.”

SIGNS

“It’s what I’m doing. I’m going to try to be different, because I am,” he said. “I like talking to businesses to see how things are going. I have a lot of residents supporting me, too, but I’m not going to ask them to put signs in their home.”

Some who said ‘Yes’

Surf N Sand owner Ryan Sanchez said Pappadeas has been a customer at his store for a decade, so when he asked about placing a “Vote for Jack Pappadeas” sign in his window, Sanchez agreed.

“It’s important to understand we have continued to remain neutral and supportive for all the candidates,” Sanchez said. “The posted sign is not a reflection of a formal endorsement on our part. We wish all the candidates an ambitious and successful campaign.”

Jean Hubert, owner of Le St. Tropez on Dolores Street, said Pappadeas spends a lot of time in his restaurant, “and in doing so, I’ve gotten to know him, and his vibe and personality.”

“He seems like a very level-headed, calm individual, who I believe would represent a middle ground rather than some extreme of business or extreme of residents,” he said. “I like his energy, and he seems real calm, and I think that’s probably part of the reason he’s been represented in so many windows. He’s a gentleman: Gentleman Jack.”

The co-owner of Dametra, PortaBella and Mediterranean, Bashar Sneeh, said Pappadeas has been a regular of his since the first restaurant opened downtown.

“I like him — he’s a good guy. I like everybody who is running; all of them are good people,” Sneeh said. “For Jack, it’s just that he asked me for a favor to put it in the window.”

Arnoldo Garcia works at Lopez Liquors and said he is willing to post the sign of anyone who asks. So far, he’s got Richard Kreitman and Pappadeas for council, and Steve Dallas for mayor. He said he wants to educate the public.

“They asked me to put them up, and I said, ‘Sure,’” he said. “It’s good that people know who is running. It would be better to know their platforms first, but I just want to get locals knowing: ‘Hey, there is an election; get informed and vote.’”

None of them expressed concern that by displaying the sign of a particular candidate, they might alienate customers who are not like minded, and Pappadeas said a few businesses declined because they didn’t have the window space or the buildings are historic.

Opponents’ take

Council candidate Jan Reimers said she asked city officials if there are any codes dictating the display of political signs, which have always raised eyebrows in town, but the rules are silent on them — probably because political speech is highly protected by the U.S. Constitution.

“I questioned my very small committee, and only two people suggested we go forward with signs — one was for signs on private property, not necessarily in the business district,” she said. “My personal opinion is to skip signs in windows and yards. It adds clutter and is basically wasteful.”

Council candidate Dave Mosley simply said, “I won’t be posting signs in windows,” though his blue and white campaign signs have shown up elsewhere in town.

And Bobby Richards, who is also running for council, said he accepts whatever tools people choose to use in their campaigns, but handing out signs “is not really my style.”

“I don’t mind them so much in the windows, but when I see them on the streets — I’ve never been a fan of those: the stick and a piece of board,” he said. “But anybody can do whatever they want, as long as it’s legal.”

Council candidate Richard Kreitman, who also has signs, pointed out Dallas does, too.

“I didn’t know it was so unusual, though I’m sure it offends some people, as anything one does offends somebody,” Kreitman said. “It’s a municipal election, a community election, and every one of us is a resident here. Why shouldn’t our friends in local businesses display our placards if they support us?”

Mayoral candidate Ken Talmage said several businesses have asked him for signs to put in their windows, but he’s declined.

“To date, I have told them this is not in keeping with the history and tradition of our village, and I have not given out signs,” he said.

Dallas did not respond to the question.

endorsement of the Peninsula mayors — is furthest along in the permitting process, and the company has said the facility should be producing water sometime in 2019. Behind it in the permitting path are DeepWater Desal, which proposes to draw seawater deep below the surface in Moss Landing, a project its proprietors say would begin operating in 2019, and businessman Nader Agha, who wants to use his Highway 1 property in Moss Landing to host his own desal facility.

Adams wouldn't say which one of the three desal projects she supports, nor would she say specifically what sized "smaller" facility she backed. Adams, though, has the financial support of activists who have long rallied against Cal Am and its desal proposals, including Harvey Billig, vice president of the group Water Ratepayers of the Monterey Peninsula (formerly WaterPlus) and George Riley, managing director of Public Water Now, according to campaign disclosures released in the first week of February.

"I am looking at all the proposals," she told The Pine Cone, "and some of the things I am weighing are the costs to develop, impact on the ratepayers, environmental impact, how quickly the project is moving forward and the community wide support each is garnering."

Adams also received $5,000 from Morley Brown, the wife of Ron Weitzman, president of the water ratepayer group that Billig is a part of. Weitzman has long advocated for the government takeover of Cal Am, a move that has failed several times.

Veteran water guy

Like Adams, Potter — and nearly everyone who wants to see the Peninsula's water problems put to rest — supports a portfolio of water solutions. Unlike Adams, though, Potter, who has been a member of the board of supervisors for 20 years and has extensive experience with local water issues, publicly supports Cal Am's proposed desal plant in Marina.

"I think the [desal plant] is appropriately sized because what it does is allow us the opportunity to accommodate water for existing lots of record, get us away from the constraints of 95-10 [the state order requiring Cal Am to cutback its water supply from the Carmel River], which puts a moratorium on property owners' rights to develop their lots," Potter said.

Potter pointed to the work on water he and his staff members have done over the past two decades. He cited the Seaside aquifer storage and recovery project that collects water from the winter months and stores it underground so it can be used in the dry months; the Carmel wastewater project that irrigates the golf courses in Pebble Beach; and the Interlake Tunnel, a South Monterey County project that would divert water from Nacimiento Reservoir to San Antonio Reservoir that would have otherwise been spilled at Nacimiento Dam.

"There is no topic more complicated than water, and I'm pleased to say that the Fifth District has actually developed a leadership role in the solutions to those problems," he said. "And I'm proud of the relationships we have forged with the agricultural leaders and the Salinas Valley constituency. We realize this is a countywide problem."

Both candidates like the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control

Agency's Pure Water Monterey project, which would turn wastewater into potable water.

"The project has significant environmental benefits to the Salinas Valley and the ag industry, plus it will provide water to the Monterey Peninsula at a lower cost per acre foot than desal proposals," Adams said.

Potter called the project a national model on "how to use what was formerly wastewater and turning it into water that has value for both agriculturally and for the Peninsula for consumption to offset 95-10" and the state's cutback order, he said.

Depending on the availability of water from the wastewater project, Cal Am's desal plant would be sized to produce either 9.6 million gallons or 6.4 million gallons of water per day.

Tularcitos student to portray famous sniper as a boy in documentary film

By CHRIS COUNTS

SEEKING A boy to play a young Chris Kyle in a documentary about the hit movie, "American Sniper," filmmaker Gary Leva chose Benjamin Lakind, a 10-year-old who lives in Carmel Valley and attends Tularcitos School.

Produced and directed by Clint Eastwood in 2014, "American Sniper" tells the story of Chris Kyle, a Navy SEAL and sniper who officially killed 160 enemy combatants in Iraq, more than other sniper in United States military history. After leaving the service, he was murdered in 2013.

Benjamin's mother, Toni Lakind, said her son filmed scenes on location in Texas in September 2015. She recently received confirmation that Benjamin will be in the 30-minute documentary — and now she's spreading the word.

"I didn't want to say anything if he ended up on the cutting room floor," she said.

Despite the attention her son will receive for his debut on the silver screen, Lakind said "he's really just a typical boy." He moved here from Texas with his family last June, and he loves baseball and golf, she explained.

Lakind said Benjamin was thrilled to be in the movie.

"He's a talented and passionate kid," she said. "He knows Chris Kyle was a hero, and he's honored and beyond ecstatic to portray him. It's a big deal."

Due to a confidentiality agreement, Lakind couldn't talk specifically about the documentary. She only said it is the latest in a series of documentaries done by Leva, who is Lakind's cousin. She said he is the director, while Eastwood will serve as narrator and producer. And she's hoping the movie will be screened at the next Carmel International Film Festival in October.

On his website, Leva lists nine documentaries he has done about Eastwood and his films, including, "One Soldier's Story: The Journey Of American Sniper" and "Bringing The War Home: The Cost Of Heroism." He has also made documentaries about the films of Stanley Kubrick, Alfred Hitchcock, George Lucas and others.

JIMI HENDRIX COMES ALIVE, BROTHERS REUNITE AT SUNSET, FOLK DUO RETURNS TO BIG SUR

BREATHING NEW life into the record that helped make Jimi Hendrix famous, guitarist Clifton David Broadbridge and three others will play the entire album, "Are You Experienced?" Friday, Feb. 19, at Sunset Center.

On A High Note

By CHRIS COUNTS

The show is produced by Classic Albums Live of Toronto, Canada, which specializes in staging performances that celebrate the greatest rock 'n' roll records of the 1960s and 1970s. Other album tributes include the Beatles' "Sgt.

Pepper's Lonely Heart's Club Band," the Eagles' "Hotel California" and three of the first four Led Zeppelin discs.

By the time "Are You Experienced" was released in England in May 1967, Hendrix already had a string of hit singles on the radio, including "Purple Haze," which peaked at No. 3 on the UK charts. But he was still virtually unknown in the United States in June 1967 when he played at the Monterey Pop Festival. But after blowing everybody's mind with a set that included a scorching cover of Bob Dylan's "Like A Rolling Stone" and a stage performance that gave new meaning to the word, "incendiary," Hendrix became a sensation.

Two months later, in August 1967, "Are You Experienced"

Second City laughs at love, Mirth-O-Matics take inspiration from audience

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE COMEDY enterprise that brought us John Belushi, Steve Carell and Tina Fey pokes fun at romance when it presents "Hooking Up with the Second City" Wednesday, Feb. 24, at Sunset Center.

Founded in Chicago more than a half century ago, The Second City players employ a lethal combination of sketches, songs and improvisation — and love provides an easy target for their witty barbs.

Second City's cast of up-and-coming comedians includes Ali Barthwell, Tyler Davis, Kelsey Kinney, Charles Pettitt, Jasbir Singh and Casey Whitaker.

"This is going to be a hilariously edgy show that extends the sentiment of Valentine's Day past Feb. 14, and will be a fun night whether or not one brings a sweetheart," said Alexandra Richardson of Sunset Center.

Showtime is 8 p.m. Tickets are $29 to $49. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2048.

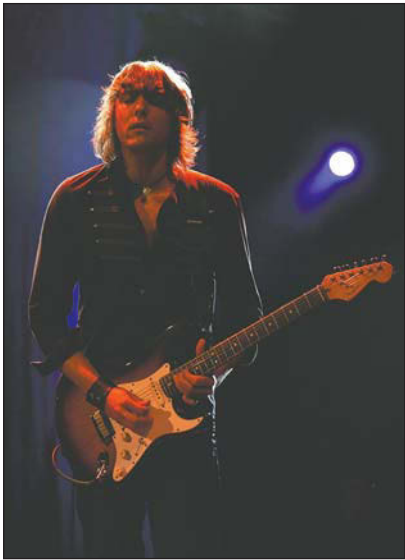

Billed as "Monterey's premier comedy improv troupe," The Mirth-O-Matics return Friday and Saturday, Feb. 19-20, to the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts.

Founded eight years ago, the Mirth-O-Matics offer an evening of unscripted family-friendly fun.

"They are known throughout the area for their amazing ability to take audience suggestions and turn them into laugh-out-loud 3 to 5 minute skits," said Robert Reese of the Cherry Center. "As usual, the show will feature plenty of audience participation so be sure to leave your inhibitions at the door."

The group will be joined by The Legends of Public Access, a Chicago-based improv comedy team featuring John Abbott and Chris Shurland.

Showtime is 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $15. The Cherry Center is located at Fourth and Guadalupe. Call (831) 624-7491.

(Clockwise from left) Guitarist Clifton David Broadbridge performs a tribute to Jimi Hendrix Friday at Sunset Center; clarinetist Emil Khudiyev joins the Monterey Symphony this weekend at Sunset Center; the Mystic Braves rock Big Sur Saturday; and Trevor McSpadden plays country music Thursday at Barmel.

PortaBella's rebirth, PBF&W on the horizon, and a Culinary Round Up

By MARY SCHLEY

BASHAR SNEEH and Faisal Nimri's newest restaurant, PortaBella, quietly opened a few weeks ago, after undergoing an interior overhaul to update fixtures, spruce up the bar, and freshen up the front patio and the garden room in the back. Sneeh and Nimri purchased the restaurant from former owners Tony Salameh and Csaba Ajan last fall.

"We just opened a couple of weeks ago, and the place looks gorgeous," Sneeh said Tuesday. "The flow of the place, the energy of the place — we did some really nice work inside."

The menu is a departure from the duo's other restaurants, Dametra and the new Mediterranean (formerly Merlot Bistro), focusing on French, Italian and Spanish cuisine.

"We're doing something totally new, totally different, and we have a very special chef in Chef Jacques Zagouri," who was most recently chef at Bouchée on Mission Street, Sneeh said. "And we wanted to do something that would reflect on the place, reflect on the chef, reflect on us."

As a result, all sauces, veal stock and other critical items are made in house. "It's done the old French way and the old Italian way," he said. "There's no cutting corners whatsoever."

Sneeh highlighted a few of his favorite items on the menu: "I really love our octopus, the Spanish octopus, and we make a carpaccio that I really like," he said. "The ahi tuna and salmon tartare, and the portobello French fries are fabulous."

The wine list is well appointed, too.

Sneeh said he wants the locals to come check out their newest venture and see what the rebirth of PortaBella looks like.

"It's still comfortable and beautiful and romantic," he said. "It feels like being in Europe."

Also, last week, Sneeh received approval from the planning commission to offer live music at the two new restaurants.

"Dametra has become a destination, and people come and request the music, and it's fun just to take the normal dining experience to an exceptional experience," he told commissioners at the Feb. 10 meeting. "We thought we'd like to do the same thing at Mediterranean and PortaBella, just for a few minutes to an hour-and-a-half."

"Anytime we can have live music instead of Muzac, I'm in favor of it," commented commission chairman Don Goodhue, before the commission voted to approve the permits.

The restaurant is open every day and serves lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 or 4 p.m., and dinner from 5 to around 10 p.m. It's located on Ocean Avenue south of Lincoln Street.

■ Culinary Round Up

Rancho Cielo youth campus' seventh annual Culinary Round Up, benefiting the organization and its Drummond Culinary Academy — which provide vocational training for at-risk youth — will take place Sunday, Feb. 21, from 5 to 8 p.m. in the Monterey Plaza Hotel & Spa on Cannery Row. Featuring some of the county's top chefs assisted by students from the culinary academy, the party will feature "fancy food, local wines, and a live auction and raffle."

Guests are encouraged to wear "festive Western attire," and tickets are $150 per person. For reservations, call (831) 444-3533 or go online to www.ranchocieloyc.org.

■ Ninth PBF&W on the horizon

Tickets are on sale now for the next installment of the Pebble Beach Food & Wine taking place from March 31 to April 3 at various Pebble Beach Co. resorts and elsewhere. Drawing foodies and oenophiles from all over the globe to hobnob with some of the world's most notable chefs and winemakers, the four-day festival features culinary and wine tastings, cooking demonstrations, compelling lunches and dinners, and Grand Tastings presided over by more than 100 chefs and featuring 300 wines. The weekend kicks off with an 18-hole golf tournament at the Pebble Beach Golf Links on Thursday.

Ticket prices range from $100 for some of the individual events, to $4,750 for an all-inclusive four-day pass that includes Lexus transportation, as well as access to private parties and events throughout the weekend. See www.pbfw.com for tickets and more information.

■ Pigs, Pinot & More

The Salinas Rotary Club's 6th Annual Pigs, Pinot & More will be held Saturday, Feb. 27, from 5 to 8 p.m., with an after party extending to 10 p.m., in the former Salinas Armory, now known as the Salinas Police Activities League HQ, at 100 Howard St. in downtown Salinas.

Fun, lively and low-key, the event features far more than just Pinot Noir and pork (hence the "& More" part), and boasts an impressive lineup of local culinary talent: Tony Baker from Montrieo, Christopher Caul from Christopher's, Dory Ford and EJ from Aqua Terra Culinary, Colin Moody from Monterey Peninsula Country Club, Soerke Peters of Basil, Brad Briske from La Balena, Don and Susan Gibbons of Portobello's catering, Jeremiah Tyderman from Alvarado Street Brewery and Tim Wood from Carmel Valley Ranch, among others.

Slated to pour are Antle Wines, Bernardus, Big Sur Vineyards, Blair Estate, Carmel Road, Chock Rock, Dawn's Dream, Midlife Crisis Winery, Morgan, Odonata, Paraiso, Pessagno, Shale Canyon, Twisted Roots, Wrath, Manzoni, Mercy and others — as well as Tequila Alderete.

Tickets are $85 per person and are available until 4 p.m. Feb. 27, after which they'll be sold at the door for $100 apiece. Proceeds benefit Salinas Rotary's charitable fund, which seeks to "combat poverty and hunger, improve health and sanitation, provide education and job training, and promote peace under the motto, 'Service Above Self.'" Locally, the funds will help Rotary's projects in downtown Salinas. Dress for the event is "festive," and attendees must be at least 21 years old. www.pigspinotandmore.org

■ Jarman Sip 'n' Chat

A discussion of the history of wine will take place at the Jarman tasting room next to the closed Will's Fargo Restaurant in Carmel Valley Village, with the next installation of the Sip 'n' Chat series Friday, Feb. 26, from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

The class will begin with attendees being greeted with a glass of wine — followed by a tasting of three or four additional wines relevant to the topic — and light snacks will be provided, too. Guests will also be invited to purchase the featured wines at a 15 percent discount.

The tasting room is located at 18 W. Carmel Valley Road, and reservations are required. The cost is $25 per person ($10 for wine club members), with a portion benefiting Alzheimer's medical research. To reserve, call (831) 298-7300 or email info@jarmanwine.com.

■ Teas Around the World 2.0

After the inaugural Teas Around the World outing and fundraiser sold out in January, raising nearly $1,000 for the Friends of Homeless Women, organizers decided to hold another one Sunday, Feb. 28, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Participants will visit three local female tea purveyors. Tea By The Sea, a private residence near downtown Carmel, will serve Chinese and Indian tea at 11 a.m., followed by Japanese Tea at Cha-ya, Tea and Things, 118 Webster St., in Monterey at 12:30 p.m. The event will wrap up with a full English afternoon tea in the Eddison & Melrose Tea Room, 25 Soledad Drive in Monterey, at 2 p.m.

The cost to attend is $49 per person. For tickets and information, email eddissonmel-rose@gmail.com or call (831) 393-9479.

■ Chesebro pouring at Lokal

Due to the ongoing closure of the Chesebro tasting room in Carmel Valley Village due to water damage, the winery's father-and-son winemaking team, Mark and Will Chesebro, will be pouring their wines at one of their favorite restaurants this weekend. From noon to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Lokal, located at 13762 Center St., will be their pouring spot, and they plan on debuting the 2014 Mission Ranch Chardonnay — a crisp white made in the Chablis style, with its trademark minerality.

"Our other wines will also be available for tasting and purchase," the duo announced. "Come and join us at one of our favorite restaurants in Carmel Valley!"

was released in the United States. With tracks like "Fire," "The Wind Cries Mary" and "May This Be Love," the album provided the perfect soundtrack for the Summer of Love.

Unlike many tribute acts, Broadbridge and his musical partners won't even bother trying to look like Hendrix and his bandmates, who sported colorful costumes and afro-style haircuts in 1967.

"We don't dress the part," said Craig Martin, the founder of Classic Albums Live. "It's all about the music."

The concert marks the first time Classic Albums Live has visited the Monterey Peninsula.

"The evening promises to thrill and chill," Martin said. "You'll get to hear the reason why Hendrix is regarded as the greatest guitar player who ever lived. No pale imitations. No cheesy costumes. Just incredible musicianship from a select group of the world's best musicians."

Showtime is 8 p.m. Tickets are $40 to $63. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2048.

■ New work to be premiered

Best known as the leader of a local student orchestra, Farkhad Khudiyev will step into the spotlight Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 20-21, at Sunset Center when he leads the Monterey Symphony in a performance of a composition he wrote.

Khudiyev is the conductor and music director of Youth Music Monterey County, a nonprofit that supports two student orchestras and a variety of youth music educational programs. This weekend, he will serve as guest conductor for the symphony when it plays The Sounds of Eternity, which he was commissioned to write to mark the symphony's 70th anniversary. The piece is inspired by Khudiyev's upbringing in Turkmenistan.

"Nobody's heard it yet," musicologist

Todd Samra told The Pine Cone. "It's quite exciting."

Khudiyev will also lead the symphony when it performs Beethoven's Symphony No. 7, Op. 92 and Mozart's Clarinet Concerto in A Major, KV 622. Also, the guest conductor's brother, clarinetist Emil Khudiyev, will join the symphony when it plays the Mozart piece. "He's Farkhad's younger brother," Samra said. "He's one of the leading clarinet players in the country. His reputation precedes him."

Samra called the Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 "a wonderful piece of music" that "foreshadows" his famous Symphony No. 9.

"It defines his genius," Samra explained. "We consider him the greatest writer of symphonies, and this is one of his best."

The musicologist said Mozart's concerto will showcase the younger Khudiyev's talent at playing the clarinet.

"Mozart was one of the finest composers for clarinet," Samra added. "This piece demonstrates how well he understood the instrument. It's one of the most perfect pieces he wrote and last instrumental work he did before he died."

Samra presents a free talk an hour before each concert.

Saturday's concert starts at 8 p.m., while Sunday's matinee begins at 3 p.m. Tickets are $29 to $79 with discounts available for students and active military. Call (831) 646-8511 or visit www.montereysymphony.org.

Patty Wellman McAfee

Jan. 20, 1937 – Feb. 13, 2016

MONTEREY - Patty Wellman McAfee: daughter, wife, mother and grandmother, passed away at home, after a valiant battle with cancer, surrounded by her devoted husband and family, on Saturday, Feb. 13. It is only fitting that a woman with such a warm and generous heart would depart the day before Valentine's Day.

Born Patty Wellman on Jan. 20, 1937, in Oshkosh, WI, to Thelma and Roy Wellman and older brother Roy, Jr., she came into the world a little early and with a smile on her face, which is the way she led her life; always ready to get the party started. And, true to form, she departed with the grace of a woman who knows when it's time to say good-night.

After the family moved, on behalf of her father's work, to Decatur, GA, where Patty attended kindergarten, she continued to move every seven years as Roy's career took the family to Atlanta, GA; Charlotte, NC; and, ultimately, to Seattle, WA, where she became a vivacious song leader for Roosevelt High School, from which she graduated.

Following her freshman year at Washington State University, where Patty had begun studying education, she and her mother paid a visit to her grandmother in Portsmouth, OH. There, at the local swimming pool, Patty began the romance of her life upon meeting the handsome "blue-eyed Bill" McAfee.

Smitten by the pretty girl with the light in her eyes and an ever-present smile at her lips, Bill invited Patty to attend a softball game that night and knew, before the end of the first inning, they were meant for each other.

Bill had just graduated with his bachelor of arts degree from Ohio Wesleyan University and, ultimately, enrolled in Ohio State University College of Medicine. Patty also enrolled in Ohio State, where she continued to pursue a degree in education.

Married Sept. 6, 1958, in Bill's childhood church in Portsmouth, the couple would have celebrated 60 years of friendship this summer, and 58 years of marriage this fall. Despite modest means at the time, they had every intention of enjoying a honeymoon in Florida. Yet, while driving across the country in a borrowed family car, they passed through Atlanta, GA, where her parents were living in a two-bedroom apartment. The newlyweds never made it to Florida.

After another year at Ohio State, Patty graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in elementary education. While Bill completed his last two years of medical school, Patty took a job as a first-grade teacher.

Upon his graduation from medical school, Bill was accepted to the University of California Medical Center, San Francisco, to pursue his residency in Otolaryngology. So the young couple moved to the City by the Bay, where Patty taught first grade, for the next five years.

In 1966, Bill became Lt. Commander Otolaryngologist for the U.S. Navy in a Naval Hospital in Charleston, SC, where the couple lived after welcoming their first son, Michael, into their lives. In 1968, the little family moved to the Monterey Peninsula and, a year later, bought a house in Monterey, where they raised three children – Michael, Timothy, and Marcie. To this day, it remains the family home and gathering place.

Throughout their marriage, Patty and Bill loved to travel, setting their sights on every landscape and waterway they might explore. Of particular appeal was the spirit of Hawaii and the enchantment of Sedona, AZ, to which they were frequent travelers.

Patty also loved to play tennis and bridge, the latter of which she was known for being particularly skilled, both at bridge and, despite the intensity of the game, at making it fun. She was bright, she was perennially happy, and she was devoted to making sure others were also having a good time.

In addition to her husband and children, Patty's greatest passion may have been her grandchildren, of whom there are eight. Uninterested in conventional nicknames, she chose "Tutu," which means grandmother in Hawaiian; a name which many more than her grandchildren came to use.

Patty was recognized for her laughter, which entered a room before she did. She was warm, she was genuine, and she was giving. When Mike was a teenager, most weekends, she housed his classmates from Robert Louis Stevenson High School, who were boarding in Pebble Beach, sometimes six or more guests to whom she provided love and attention and a home-cooked meal. As a mother, she was easygoing, present, and devoted to her children, always in their corner, and often going up and over conventional rules to champion their lives and give them the confidence to become their authentic selves.

She was equally known for her ever-ready, sometimes bawdy sense of humor, which was most effective because she could deliver a joke and land it like no other, pick up on the irony in a situation and, above all, laugh at herself. She was both "unoffendable" and unpredictable, consistent and compassionate. She was an alluring combination of impeccable manners and unabashed humor; she loved the consistency of sunrise and the surprise of a full moon.

As her life began to dwindle, Patty had moments when the flame of her joy would flicker. Lest it go out, her family went against convention and brought home a rescued mutt who could only be called Scruffy – a woebegone creature who put the light back in Patty's eyes.

The day before Valentine's Day, Patty departed the party a little early, with dignity and grace. And her husband, quoting the late great Lou Gehrig, as he has so many times before, said, "I've been the luckiest guy in the world."

Patty Wellman McAfee is survived by the love of her family: her mother, Thelma Wellman (her father, Roy C. Wellman, Sr., preceded her in death); her brother, Roy C. Wellman, Jr.; her husband of 57 years, Dr. William McAfee; son Michael McAfee (Jenny), son Timothy McAfee (Amy), daughter Marcie Carrier (Matthew); her grandchildren Sophie, Zoe and Gracie Carrier; Kate, Molly and Lily McAfee; Ian and Colin McAfee; several nieces and nephews, and a host of friends near and far, all of whom feel like family.

A celebration of Patty's life will be held Saturday, Feb. 20, 2016 at 11 a.m., at First Presbyterian Church of Monterey, with a reception to follow. Those wishing to make a memorial gift in her name are invited to consider Community Hospital Foundation, The Salvation Army or a charitable contribution of your choice.

SUNSET CENTER is just one of 10 arts groups in the United States that have been invited to attend a prestigious four-day program in Washington, D.C., April 27-30.

The honor is particularly good news for students in the North Monterey County Unified School District. That's because Sunset Center has teamed up with the school district to participate in the 14th annual Partners in Education Institute, a program administered by the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

At the Lincoln Center in April, two members of Sunset Center's staff, executive director Christine Sandin and outreach and marketing manager Alexandra Richardson, will learn innovative ways to bring arts education into the classrooms of North Monterey County. They'll be joined by two representatives from the school district, including superintendent Kari Yeater.

"We are deeply honored by the recognition of our efforts in regional arts education, and to be accepted into such a renowned program of the prestigious Kennedy Center," Sandin said. "We are excited to develop our arts education programs and community partnerships even further by way of their leadership and experience. We will take full advantage of this amazing opportunity."

Sandin told The Pine Cone Sunset Center chose the school district because it is a "committed partner," and "one of the most underserved districts" in the area. She cited Melissa Lewington, the principal at Prunedale Elementary School, as "the cheerleader who got her administration involved."

"They are very excited about participating," Sandin said.

The school district includes four elementary schools, one middle school and two high schools. It serves more than 5,000 students who live in Aromas, Castroville, Elkhorn, Prunedale, Royal Oaks and Salinas.

Other teams were selected from Naples and Pensacola, Fla.; Mason City, Iowa; Flint, Mich.; Wilmington, N.C.; Chautauqua, N.Y.; Wooster, Ohio; and Houston and San Antonio, Texas. Ninety-five teams from 41 states have attended the Partners in Education Institute.

crew “felt ‘pressure’ from Beach to expedite her request,” Atigh said.

Mullane also said his employees should “push back” if they believe he is “directing them to do something that is improper.” Ultimately, he told the investigator he was “embarrassed” by the mistake, but there was nothing “willful or untoward” involved.

‘Conflicting inaccuracies’

For her part, Beach told Atigh she asked why city workers “did not stand behind [their] position that the berm was appropriate.”

“Beach questions the city’s response to the complaint. She feels that removing the berm was a waste of money,” Atigh wrote. “She feels that because the decision had been approved by a supervisor, the city should not have been so quick to reverse itself.”

Beach complained to The Pine Cone that Atigh’s report is full of “conflicting inaccuracies.”

As an example, she said, “the investigative report refers frequently to a ‘request’ by me involving ‘my’ property. I never made any request of the city, and the work never involved my private property. In fact, the work was proposed by staff, not me, as a response to the drain-off of public water into Mission Trail park — which I had alerted them to. Given the fact that their proposed work involved a private street, I was the one who also alerted the staff that they should take special care to determine whether this was appropriate for staff attention.”

And therefore, she said, most of Atigh’s findings “are incorrect and unsupported by the written record.”

Elaine Good

May 20, 1931 to January 22, 2016

Elaine was a long-term resident of Carmel. She had a creative, entrepreneurial spirit, and could make anything - from beautiful jewelry and paintings to incredible houses. She loved to walk on the beach, to entertain friends (often with beach picnics!), to play tennis and golf, and to read.

Elaine leaves behind her daughters Carrie and Betsy Leeb, her son, Jon Leeb, his wife Lisa, and her grandchildren, Milo Leeb-Domina, Hillary Leeb, Scott Sans, his wife, Gina, and their son, Cole, as well as many wonderful friends. Her husband, Ed Mosconi, pre-deceased her in 2014.

A celebration of Elaine’s life will be held on February 20 at 3pm at The Carmel Valley Manor.

In lieu of flowers, please make donations in her memory to the Carmel Library. Arrangements are being cared for by Mission Memorial Park, Seaside, CA.

Don Stevenson McGuire

Don Stevenson McGuire always surprised us. There were few people he met in life whom he did not affect.

Don died very suddenly, but peacefully, on December 11, 2015 near his home in Pebble Beach, California where he lived with his loving wife of 29 years, Clay Felchlin McGuire.

Don was born in San Francisco on May 21, 1950 to Elinor Stevenson McGuire of Portland, Oregon and John Clark McGuire from Hingham, Massachusetts. After a varied educational experience at schools here and abroad, Don settled into the San Francisco Art Institute and was deeply inspired by his photography professor, Jerry Burchard. Don was a wonderful photographer and really brought out the soul of his subjects as well as producing perfect prints and images. Later with digital equipment, he was integral in the family’s business, The McGuire Furniture company where he ran the in-house publicity department.

When Don and Clay retired to their favorite place on earth, Pebble Beach, they became engrossed in Whippets, raising champions and racing winners and becoming very active in the rescue and placement of needful dogs. Sometimes having up to seven dogs in their personal care at one time, Don would cut quite an eccentric figure shepherding a brace of the elegant creatures through the woods of Del Monte and on the beaches of Big Sur.

Don is survived by his wife Clay, his only sister Jean Coleman, of Portland, Oregon, her five beautiful children by Page Coleman, Mark, Amanda, Jessie, John, and Don, and the large, close Clan of his Stevenson Cousins of the Pacific Northwest, and his bothers-in-law Chris and Tim Felchlin, and Vera Felchlin, nephew Chris Felchlin and his boys Jake and Alex, niece Sarah Underhill and her boys Mason and Cedar, and the three remaining whippets: Monty, Tiger and Luna. Don will be missed by all, including his close friend and mentor Frank Doodha of Ross, California and the wonderful members of the Whippet Associations who meant so much to him.

A Celebration of Life will be held from 5:00 to 8:00 PM on the 20th of February at the Beach and Tennis Club, 1576 Cypress Drive, Pebble Beach, California.

Katherine Margaret Ryan

January 12, 1937 – January 13, 2016

Katherine Margaret Ryan (née Smith) of Carmel, California passed away peacefully on January 13, 2016 with her two daughters beside her.

Katherine lived an active, independent life of 79 years, the last 20 of which were spent on the Monterey Peninsula. Born in Chicago, Illinois, she was raised in Whitefish Bay, Wisconsin where she attended Santa Monica Grade School and Whitefish Bay High School. She was one of three daughters born to Dorothy Margaret Johnson, also a longtime resident of Carmel for 33 years. Katherine married Kenneth George Ryan and gave birth to their two daughters in 1963 and 1964.

Katherine loved classical music and English literature. As a trained classical pianist she mastered the works of Chopin, Brahms, and Rachmaninoff, among many others. She worked as a paralegal in prestigious law firms in Milwaukee and Orange County before retiring to the Monterey Peninsula. Katherine had a passion for knowledge and learning and found beauty in music and nature. She enjoyed creating works of art through needlepoint, sewing, and flower arranging, and was an expert self-taught knitter. Inspiration came from daily walks along beautiful Scenic Drive and capturing the sunsets at River Beach.

Katherine’s incredible kindness, generosity, compassion, sense of humor and endless joie de vivre will be profoundly missed by everyone fortunate enough to have known her.

She is survived by her daughters Kelly Ann Ryan and Karyn Kaye Ryan.

*Thank you for giving us the most beautiful life. It was truly amazing.
Rest in everlasting peace dear Mom.*

Linda R. Bradley

February 28, 1940 - February 6, 2016

Linda R. Bradley, 75, passed away on February 6, 2016. Linda battled ALS (Lou Gehrig’s disease) for the last two years, and died as she wished, at home surrounded by her immediate family, and supported by the love of many family members and friends.

Born Linda Rae Smith on February 28th, 1940 in Altoona, Pennsylvania, Linda graduated from Altoona High School in 1958 and Juniata College in 1962. She was married to her husband and life-long partner Gordon on June 16, 1962. Committed to both public and private education her entire life, Linda began her career teaching biology at Easton High School in Pennsylvania. After moving to the Monterey Peninsula in 1973, she served as a teacher’s aide and supervised enrichment programs at Carmel River School. She began a twenty-five year career at All Saints’ Day School in 1977. Initially a fifth grade teacher, she moved on to teaching math and science in the upper grades. She was particularly talented in motivating students of all levels, and regardless of gender, to excel in mathematics. Later she served variously as head of the Upper Grades, as the interim Head of School, and closed out her tenure as the Head of School, retiring in 2003. People remember her fondly for greeting all of the children and parents at drop-off every school morning.

Linda was a member of Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel beginning in 1975, and a member of All Saints’ Episcopal Church beginning in the middle of the 1990s. During her tenure as Head at All Saints’ Day School she served on the board of York School.

The family wishes to thank the many kind and caring people who so greatly enriched the last year of Linda’s life through her lengthy illness. In particular, we wish to thank Linda’s friend and care coordinator, Meredith Adams, RN, who facilitated all aspects of Linda’s support at home, including finding and training the exemplary team of home care-givers. The three care-givers, Janye, Alicia and Tiffany, provided not only skilled and compassionate care, but emotional support and friendship throughout a difficult year. Their presence was a blessing, not only for Linda but for the entire family, and we are deeply grateful for their commitment and generosity of spirit.

All of the medical care that Linda received through her long illness was skilled and compassionate. In particular, her primary physician, Dr. Gina Heal, was instrumental in making it possible for Linda to return from the hospital and to live out the final eleven months of her life with dignity, surrounded by her family in the place that was her home for forty-three years.

Linda is survived by husband Gordon; brother-in-law Stevan; son John and his wife Kristen of Saint Louis, MO; daughter Kate Faber of Salinas, CA; daughter Eileen Urban and her husband Tomislav of Austin, TX; and grandchildren Bryan, Benjamin, Nathan, Maja and Nina.

In celebration of Linda’s life, donations may be sent to All Saints’ Day School (8060 Carmel Valley Road, Carmel, CA 93923; www.asds.org).

Understanding Antonin Scalia

WHEN SUPREME Court Justice Antonin Scalia died last weekend, commentators on the left and right agreed on one thing: Scalia was an “originalist” when it came to interpreting the Constitution. Which he was.

However, nearly everybody seemed to misunderstand what the term meant. On both on the left and the right, an “originalist” was described as someone who believes the Constitution should be interpreted according to the meaning and intent of the Founding Fathers when they wrote it — which is wrong.

Instead, Scalia’s real view of the Constitution was not that it could never be changed, but that it has changed many times, and can change an unlimited number of times in the future, but only by being formally amended through a deliberative, legislative process, according to the wishes of a strong majority of the people, and not according to the whims or political views of a small group of judges.

To understand how Scalia believed the Constitution was supposed to work, it helps to think of a change that’s been made to the document over the last 30 years that you didn’t agree with.

For example, if you’re on the left, you probably didn’t like the Supreme Court’s 2013 ruling that police don’t need a court order to take a DNA sample from anyone they arrest. The court should never have ruled that way, you probably believe, because someone’s DNA is as private as anything they possess, or anything they could say. Fair enough. But if the Constitution were amended to declare that a warrant wasn’t need to take someone’s DNA, while you still might disagree with the substance of that amendment, at least you wouldn’t feel it was illegitimate.

Likewise, if you’re on the right, you probably disagreed with the Supreme Court’s ruling last year that same-sex couples have a constitutional right to marry, since such a thing could never even have been contemplated by the Founding Fathers. But if same-sex marriage were written into the Constitution itself through the amendment process, while you still might not be happy with the result, at least you wouldn’t feel that a grievous usurpation had been committed against our nation’s founding document.

On top of the principle of change-by-amendment, Scalia believed the Supreme Court shouldn’t overrule decisions made through the legislative process unless those decisions were clearly outside the language of the Constitution.

For example, while Scalia has been decried as an opponent of abortion, he actually never lifted a finger from the bench to try to have abortions banned, and never said the Constitution prohibited them. Instead, he believed the Constitution was silent on the issue, which meant decisions about when and where abortions should be legal were supposed to be made by the people through their representatives in the various state capitals, and not via what he called a “ukase” from the Supreme Court.

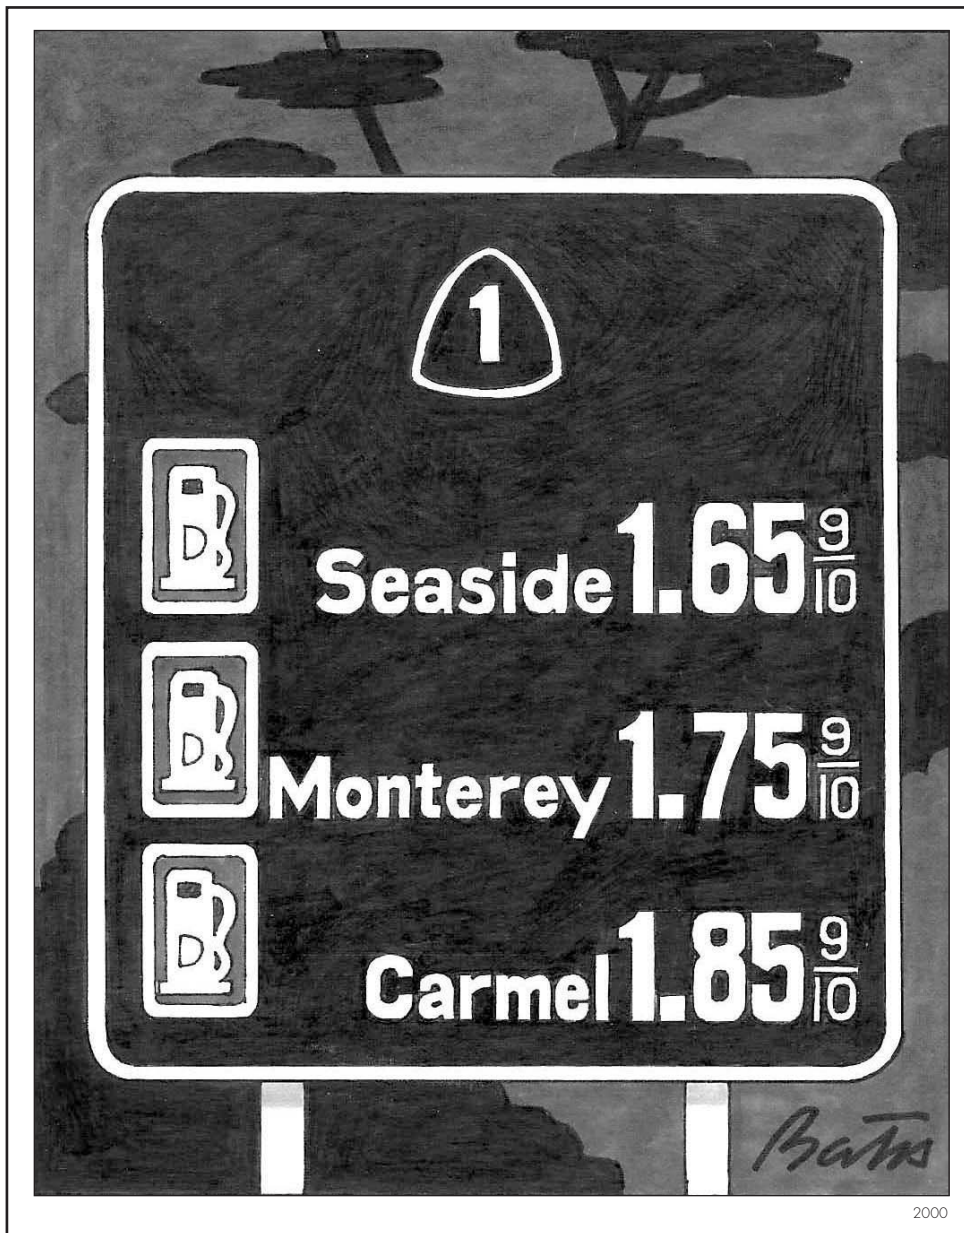

Needless to say, many Supreme Court justices disagree with Scalia’s view that the Constitution could only be changed by being amended and that judges should keep their hands off legislative decisions except when they violate explicit constitutional mandates.

Instead, numerous judges, from Earl Warren, to Elena Kagan, have felt it was delightfully within their power to decree new rights and create new laws just because they thought they were good for the country, regardless of what Congress or the state legislatures may say. That is an immense power.

The fact that it exists explains why fights over new Supreme Court justices have become so impassioned — because those nine judges have granted themselves the power to impose their personal beliefs on this great nation.

Antonin Scalia thought such unlimited judicial power should not exist. And that is what it meant to him to be an “originalist.”

Letters to the Editor

Leave personal attacks out

Dear Editor,
Regarding “Beach fires debate needs facts” (Letters, Feb. 12) and the heated debate the issue is generating: That’s nothing new, it’s been happening for decades, and still, no solutions.

Let me say up front, I have been opposed to wood fires on the beach for more than three decades. My personal and professional experience managing the shoreline for over four decades clearly told me things were consistently getting worse. During past debates, discussion has been focused mostly on tradition, family nostalgia and the emotion those strong memories bring to bear.

Today, the science shows the environmental damage wood fires cause is clear. From beach bluff erosion, charcoal pollution, sand degradation, air pollution, graffiti, trash and broken glass; added together they create an unmanageable situation.

What triggered this letter was the personal attacks some have resorted to while defending their position. Isn’t the angry messenger a member of the Community Activities and Cultural Commission and charged with overseeing public activities and events on our public lands? If so, then I would think, using their logic, they have a conflict of interest, as well. I believe neither of these fine volunteers has a conflict, both have extensive knowledge and experience to bring to the discussion, but please leave the personal attacks at home.

Let’s not blow any more smoke and stink up the conversation.

Greg D’Ambrosio, Carmel

Don’t throw out baby

Dear Editor,
I attended the city council meeting on February 2. A large portion of the meeting focused on the current issue of whether to modify and/or ban the current beach fire policy. During the meeting, one resident made an impassioned plea to ban all beach fires based on the fact that smoke is carcinogenic.

In theory, is smoke harmful? Sure. But is there generally enough smoke in the air generated specifically by beach fires to be considered harmful? Recent data submitted to the EPA and California Coastal Commission standards, suggest the answer is no.

The reported poor air quality findings were from a single day, specifically July 4, 2015, when indeed too many fires and low level cloud cover created dangerously high levels of smoke emissions. Were these findings the norm? No, only eight hours out of over 1,800 hours of data showed high concentrations, and a majority of those eight hours occurred on July 4. Do we even have a norm? Has a baseline been established? No. More information and data needs to be accumulated before all this speculation can be turned into enough facts on

Keeping history from repeating itself, one family at a time

IT STARTED when Peter Rush was about 10. For reasons he would never fully understand, he became the focus of his father's alcoholic rages. His old man crafted a large, heavy paddle out of wood, varnished it carefully and wrapped its handle in tape. He used it regularly to beat Rush, and although his Portland, Maine, neighbors knew — he said they must have heard his screams — no one did anything to stop it.

His three sisters stayed away from the house when they could, and his mother would wait out the episodes in another room, leaving him defenseless. As Rush said, "I was his scapegoat."

At 14, he discovered alcohol and was soon hooked. "It was the first time I ever the time.

The therapist suggested Rush go to college, since playing music in bars wasn't a great career choice for a recovering alcoholic. He got his GED, then earned an associate's degree in chemical dependency and was hired from his internship in a recovery center. After several years, he worked his way up to a master's degree in counseling, and later, a doctorate in divinity.

His father died in 1984 after making a deathbed apology to him. Although it was difficult, Rush said he forgave him. He was also able to establish a good relationship with his mother, and they remain close to this day.

His career went well, and he was approached by a probation officer who wanted to find a way to help kids avoid the kinds of bad decisions Rush had made in his youth.

Thus was born "Take Charge," a program which Rush created from his background in transactional analysis — popularized in the 1960s and '70s by the books, "Games People Play," by Eric Berne, and "I'm OK — You're OK," by Thomas Anthony Harris — to help kids manage their emotions by working with them and their families.

The program enjoyed a successful five-year run, until budget issues brought it to an end. In the meantime, Rush had met a therapist from Monterey who'd invited him to be part of her practice, and he made the move. He turned "Take Charge" into "The Rush Method," a family therapy program, and also adapted his approach for Arms of Angels, a Monterey organization that helps families — especially children — deal with the death of a loved one.

He's practiced in Carmel and Monterey, but moved his office to Marina so he'd be equally accessible to the Peninsula and Salinas. He lives in Pebble Beach, and through his website, he works with families all over the United States. A family downloads a copy of his workbook, and together, they complete the extensive exercises in it. Then Rush goes wherever they are for three to six days to work with them in person.

He also has a fairly large pro bono practice that started with a teenager he met on the streets of Carmel who needed counseling but couldn't afford it. About half of his practice now is made up of clients he sees for free.

"I've never been about the money," he said.

When you sit in a room with Rush, it's peaceful. Conversation is refreshingly forthright, and he's fully comfortable with silence — and, at last, with himself.

"I'm the happiest guy in the world," he said. "I get to help people heal."

relaxed," he said.

Rush went down a predictable path, committing petty crimes. He didn't do well in school, but his teachers and counselors never asked why. They just told him to study more. He was sure there must be something wrong with him.

At 17, he and some friends broke into a brewery and were arrested. It was 1967, and he was given a choice to go to jail or join the Army. He chose the latter and was sent to Ft. Jackson, S.C., for boot camp.

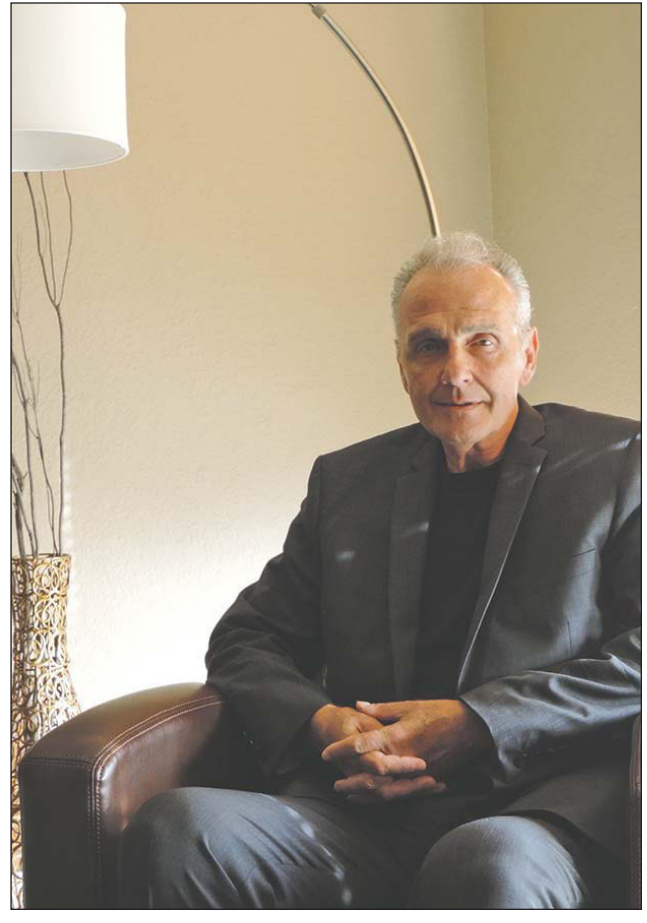

"The sergeant was just like my father," he said.

Overwhelmed by the yelling and insults, he went AWOL.

"I broke into houses and stole clothes, then hitchhiked back to Maine," he said. He lived for a while in a friend's basement before he turned himself in, believing he'd be discharged.

Instead, he spent six months in jail. After his discharge, he again returned to Maine and used his talents as a guitar player and singer to eke out a living and pay for his drug and alcohol habits. There were three marriages and three divorces along the way.

"After my third divorce at 32, I crashed and moved to Phoenix," he said. He moved in with his sister there, on the condition that he would get clean and sober. He went to Alcoholics Anonymous daily and saw a therapist weekly, and found his way out. Instead of drinking, he would soon be getting his highs from helping others, although he didn't know it at which to base a ban. So far what we know is that on July 4, 135 fires were counted and the air quality that night was bad. From this all we can derive is that 135 fires are too many, and we need to control this. Establishing a healthy norm should be the next step in this discussion. Before we throw out the baby with the bathwater, let's discuss a balance between the pure joy of a beach fire and the quality of our air.

'Some rocky times ahead'

Dear Editor,

Nobody enjoys being fired, but Charles Lester has to feel some gratitude from the people and organizations he dealt with over the past five years. The outpouring of support from those hundreds of people who drove to Morro Bay, not just around the corner, as well as the thousands of letters and emails from those with whom he dealt with on some very sticky issues, lend question as to why he was fired. Was it "communication" or personality issues? Pretty common in many organizations; and commonly reconcilable. "Developer coup" doesn't stand the verity test - there was no coup. Then there was the "Diversity" test; if that is the real reason, Californians are in for some rocky coastal times ahead. The quickest way to disable a well organized, capable, group or organization, is to fill its membership with elements chosen not for capability, but for ethnicity. It has all appearances that Mr. Lester will be hard to replace. How does this affect we locals? The coastal commission is a key player in the selection of our desal water provider.

No fires on March agenda

BEACH FIRES and fireplace fires will not be on the city council's agenda in March, city clerk Ashlee Wright told The Pine Cone Thursday. They could be heard in April, "but I'm not making any promises," she said.

Also, no special meetings are set on the subjects, both of which are expected to generate a lot of comments and discussion. Beach fires are a source of ongoing debate that now involves the coastal commission, and some officials are pushing to curtail wood-burning fireplaces, as well.

Lucius said the NRCC is going to introduce her to members of Congress, provide media training, give her fundraising tips and offer other advice. Lucius said she has requested to meet with Arizona Congresswoman Martha McSally and Orange County Congresswoman Mimi Walters.

"She has a lot of experience in state government in California," Lucius said of Walters. "I want to talk to her about being a member of the California Legislative Woman's Caucus because being a member of [the group] helps in terms of passing bipartisan legislation."

While she's in the nation's capital, Lucius said she also intends to meet with representatives from United Fresh Produce Association, the International Real Estate Association, the Republican Main Street Partnership PAC, and The Tarrance Group, a Republican polling firm whose clients include Ohio governor and presidential candidate John Kasich.

The Tarrance Group "is interesting because they track what the national trends are in terms of voter sentiment, and how that might translate to this district," Lucius said.

In early January, Jimmy Panetta, a Monterey County Deputy District Attorney and former intelligence officer in the United States Navy Reserve, made a campaign trip to D.C. to meet with democrat representatives and others.

Ruland from San Mateo — decided they didn't want to press charges against Murray, who subsequently wrote checks to them for $1,200 apiece.

"The thing that saved him was the victims said, 'We don't want to press any charges.' They were fine with being reimbursed," Tomasi said. "Otherwise, we would have pressed charges, just like with anybody else, and would have sent it to the DA."

Phone throwing applauded

Restaurant owner Rich Pepe said he suspected Murray might drop by Thursday night, as he usually does during tournament week, and after having dinner at Casanova, the actor appeared around 10 p.m.

"I was on the rooftop and said, 'Hello,' and then he began talking with some guests," Pepe said.

A party was underway to promote Justin Timberlake's 901 tequila brand, he added, and it wasn't until Murray had left the restaurant that Pepe knew anything was awry.

"Not until the police showed up 10 minutes later was I informed of the cell-phone-throwing incident," Pepe said. "I spoke with the police but didn't have any information to offer."

Pepe said onlookers told him some guests had taken photos or video from nearby. "And Bill had grabbed their phones and tossed them off the roof and onto Sixth Avenue below," he said. "Bill hadn't even had a drink or beverage at Vesuvio when this happened. No one knows what had sparked his behavior, either."

Pepe said he later spoke to Timberlake and his wife, Jessica Beil. He was scheduled to make an appearance at the restaurant, "but after the Bill Murray incident, he decided it might be too much of a distraction," Pepe said.

The singer and his wife, Pepe said, "applauded Bill's actions of making a statement on unwanted or asked for pictures or videos."

"Carmel has been a sort of safe place for celebrities," Tomasi noted, since many famous people who live or visit here are treated with respect and left alone by most of the locals. "This is the first incident like this we've had."

Pepe said the restaurant's video surveillance revealed nothing, and, with the victims compensated and no one injured, "everyone seems to be happy now."

"When all is said and done, the cell phone incident victims will have one hell of a story to tell," he said.

officials said they hoped to place her in another aquarium or zoo. If one couldn't be found, they conceded euthanization was a last option.

Thankfully, the Shedd Aquarium agreed to take the otter. She arrived there Jan. 27, and now weighs 11 pounds — up from the six pounds she weighed when she was found.

Of course, Pup 719 isn't the only young otter recently separated from her mother. Researchers say El Niño storms — which can cause elevated ocean temperatures and a reduction in kelp cover — are a factor in a rise of abandoned pups.

"We might be facing record numbers of southern sea otter strandings that may be associated with storms caused by El Niño," said Karl Mayer, animal care coordinator for the Monterey Bay Aquarium Sea Otter Program.

At the Shedd Aquarium, Pup 719 is now eating solid food like shrimp and clams, and she's grooming on her own, staff reported.

The effort to rehabilitate the young otter highlights the partnership between the two aquariums — and calls attention to fragility of the recovery of otters along the California coast. They are listed as a threatened species by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"The rescue and continued care of Pup 719 was truly a team effort, and a testament to both organizations' commitment to the conservation and rehabilitation of animals," Tim Binder of the Shedd Aquarium added.

WE'RE ASKING FOR YOUR "CARMEL LEGENDS"

For almost two decades we have been publishing Al Smith's "CARMEL LEGENDS" in this space. All of these legends have been previously published in The Pine Cone and we felt that there was a great value to the community in giving them an encore presentation and sharing them with our readers. We always considered these 'legends' to be an important part of the fabric of the Carmel by the Sea we love. To that end we have decided to invite you, The Pine Cone readers, to share your 'legends' with our citizenry. We are asking that you submit your own stories, new or old, your observations, and, if you will, your 'Legends'. This is our invitation to you to share with others those little-known family-yarns that have so beautifully woven the fabric of our tiny sea-side village. So, whether it was the time your uncle Jack release twenty pigeons at the River Inn in Big Sur and somehow they found their way home to Dolores and 11th, or the time when the couple up the street bought a house and after escrow closed found that they had bought the house next door instead, we would love to hear from you. We plan on running our present-day homage to "CARMEL LEGENDS" once a month over the next year so please submit your best Carmel memories. We will peruse them thoroughly trying to select those special 'legends', the ones you will love and remember as being representative of Carmel by the Sea.

Please submit your legends to Tim Allen, P.O. Box 350, Carmel, CA 93921.

THE WHOLE NINE YARDS, WHEN IT RAINS IT POURS, AND SMELLY KELLY

“It is a sad thing that nowadays there is so little useless information.” — Oscar Wilde

‘HE GAVE it the whole nine yards,’ said a member of my klatch with whom I drink coffee once a week.

Someone wondered where that term came from – not for long though, because whatever the question during coffee hour, there will be an expert in the group who has the answer.

That morning’s expert du jour said that some WWII fighter planes had machine guns in the wings. The cartridges for the guns were laid out flat along the interior of the wing. When spread out, the cartridges came to nine yards of ammunition. When the pilot emptied his guns, he gave the whole nine yards — certainly a plausible answer of Hollywood epic proportions, à la John Wayne in “Flying Tigers.”

However, the WWII machine gun explanation is not the only interpretation of that figure of speech. It may have come from the construction industry referring to the maximum capacity a cement mixer can carry, nine cubic yards of cement.

That got me wondering about other phrases in everyday speech that are used so often they have become clichés, such as, “A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.” Cervantes in “Don Quixote” used this aphorism, warning us about being greedy.

However, an earlier form appears in “On Garrulity” by Plutarch: “He is a fool who lets slip a bird in the hand for a bird in the bush.”

I never understood, “Don’t cry over spilt milk,” because when I was a kid I always got whacked when I spilled my milk, resulting in buckets of tears. You can see the rod was never spared in my house.

We call a small defect that spoils something valuable or is a source of annoyance, “a fly in the ointment.” The origin of that one has been traced back to the book of Ecclesiastes, “Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savor; so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honor.” Oh, that King Solomon was a great wordsmith as well as a guy who could make a split decision.

“When it rains, it pours” is a proverbial phrase. The origin is unknown but the phrase itself was known by the early 18th century. For example, this item from a work by John Arbuthnot, 1726: “It cannot rain but it pours.”

But look no farther than your kitchen cabinet to find its more modern representation. Undoubtedly you’ll see a blue box of Morton Salt with a little girl holding an umbrella in one hand to ward off falling rain and, in the other hand, a package of salt tilted back under her arm with the spout open and salt running out.

Sterling Morton, son of the company’s founder, explained why the picture of the little girl with the umbrella was so effective: “Here was the whole story in a picture — the message that the salt would run even in damp weather was made beautifully evident.”

“Gentleman Prefer Blondes” was the title of a 1925 novel by Anita Loos. The words that appeared in the text of the novel were: “Gentlemen always seem to remember blondes.” But is that true? From 1921 until 2003, 70 percent of the winners of the Miss America contest were brunettes.

“I think he’s handsome and he’s smart/I think that she’s a work of art,” go the words to the 1956 song, “Mutual Admiration Society.” The Oxford English Dictionary describes such group approbation as a “coterie of people who flatter one another and promote each other’s reputations.”

The phrase appeared in Oliver Wendell Holmes’s “Autocrat of the Breakfast Table,” in 1858, but was coined by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow’s brother-in-law, Thomas Gold Appleton. OK. I never heard of Appleton either. Yet, Emerson referred to him as the best conversationalist in America. File that under things I learned while looking up something else.

“Look before you leap” goes back to 1562, from John Heywood’s collection of proverbs. It has counterparts in other languages. “Turn the tongue seven times, then speak.” (French) “Have an umbrella before getting wet.” (Japanese) “Before you drink the soup, blow on it.” (Arabic) “If you don’t know the ford, don’t cross the stream.” (Russian) “Be careful bending your head, you may break it.” (Italian)

Then there’s John “Smelly” Kelly, a legendary worker for the New York Transit Authority, known for his uncanny sense of smell which enabled him to sniff out anything from gas leaks to the decomposing bodies of deceased rodents. Kelly was one of those rare people who could say with certainty: “I smell a rat.”

As a writer, I often burn the midnight oil in an attempt to keep clichés out of my text. But at the end of the day, sometimes you just gotta do what you gotta do. Why? Because it’s a jungle out there. And that’s straight from the horse’s mouth.
