Council OKs replacement of bell in memorial arch

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CITY council on Tuesday voted to remove the historic bell from the World War I Memorial Arch and put it somewhere safe.

In a project spearheaded by the local American Legion post, a new bell will be cast based on drawings by the arch's architect, Charles Sumner Greene, and installed in its place in honor of the city's centennial.

The original bell in the arch is one of the most important

Predating the California Missions system and its founder, Junipero Serra, by more than two decades, this bell was cast in Mexico in 1692 and given to the city on its 50th birthday in 1966. This week, the council decided it should be removed and replaced.

historic artifacts in town, in that it was cast in 1692 — 21 years before Carmel Mission founder Junipero Serra was born — according to proponents.

The American Legion and planning commissioner Ian Martin are working on getting detailed drawings for the new bell approved by the historic resources board, and then having it cast, which has been estimated to cost around $10,000.

In the meantime, Martin said, the American Legion is

STUDY: CITY SUBSIDIZES SERVICES BY $1M A YEAR

■ Recommends $587K in fee hikes

By MARY SCHLEY

IF YOU go to city hall and get a permit to wear high heels, it doesn't cost you anything — but it costs taxpayers $1.66.

And if you apply for a permit to open a restaurant, you pay $785.30, but it costs $2,732 for the city to process it.

Those were just two of the more than 120 fees analyzed by consultant Eric Johnson and revealed at a workshop at city hall Monday attended by the city council, department heads, a few members of the public, and six out of the seven people running for public office in April (Jack Pappadeas didn't attend). Overall, Johnson said taxpayers subsidize "personal choice services," like permits to build houses or hold events in downtown parks, by just under $950,000 — and he recommended fee changes to decrease that number by about $587,000.

Last August, the city approved a $24,750 contract with Revenue & Cost Specialists to review all of the fees, with an eye toward determining how well they reflect the actual costs of delivering the "service." Having hard numbers would then allow the council to determine how much fees should be raised so that tax dollars aren't paying for services that benefit individuals or small groups, as opposed to the larger community, which benefits from taxpayer-funded services like police, fire and ambulance.

Johnson met with city employees to learn how much time they spend undertaking particular tasks and also calculated their hourly rates based on pay, plus overhead. "We developed a fully allocated hourly rate for every position in the city," he explained.

Undercharging?

For the most part, Johnson found, the city is undercharging for permits, licenses and the like. Many fell in the several-thousand-dollar range, like applications for minor design review, which cost $31,752 to process, but the fees collected only totaled $12,399. The greatest disparities were in major design review ($41,977 in fees and $117,770 in costs) and building plan checks and inspections ($251,428 in fees and $511,682 in costs).

But the city also significantly overcharged for some services, which violates the rule that states governments can only "recover the reasonable borne cost" of a service. In other words, they can't profit from them. In Carmel, renewing business licenses cost just $11,464 to provide this year, or about $6 per renewal, but business owners paid a total of $102,299 for the service — $52.65 per renewal. While the ideal fee represents a 100 percent recovery of costs, the renewal fees represented an 892 percent recovery of the costs, according to Johnson, who recommended lowering the fee to $10 per permit.

"That was the highest number I've ever seen," he said, adding that cities usually charge between $10 and $20 for a renewal. "That number was out of whack."

FOREST THEATER WORK COULD BE MOSTLY DONE BY END OF MARCH

By MARY SCHLEY

ALTHOUGH SOME large trees fell in the Forest Theater during the last round of wind storms, the dry spell of the last couple of weeks has allowed construction crews to make good progress on the Forest Theater renovation, project manager Andy Vanderford told the Carmel City Council March 1.

Compared with the mid-April completion date discussed during the last update a month ago, he said, the job should be "substantially complete" by March 31 — "well in advance of the date that the first user group needs to start rehearsals and set work, which is May 1."

Vanderford said he met with Otto Construction and Cody Anderson Wasney architects to walk the site and review the work, as well as the timeline.

"It was noted that although there was some discussion at last month's city council meeting regarding potential delays and the reasons for such delays, in fact, none of the parties involved in the project were holding up the process," he said. "All parties continue to work diligently to complete the project prior to the May 1 date that the user groups will want access to the theater."

And if something goes wrong and the work isn't done by then, he said, arrangements could be made to let the user

Committee ready to sell plenty of centennial napkins and license plate frames

■ Also collecting photos for time capsule

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CITY that has strict laws on the sale and display of souvenir merchandise in stores is getting into the souvenir market itself, the committee in charge of Carmel's 100th birthday celebration announced this week.

At the March 1 city council meeting, former Mayor Sue McCloud showed a variety of items the centennial committee will sell online, including pins, shirts, mutt-mitt dispensers, LED flashlights, portable dog bowls, heavy-duty paper cocktail napkins, compact cloth carry bags, aprons and ball caps, as well as beer glasses, wine glasses and wine coasters. A chrome license plate is being sold, too, and perhaps a corkscrew.

"We're trying not to do junk — we're trying to do quality," McCloud said of the merchandise, which will all bear the city's centennial logo.

Committee member Tom Brocato also told the council about the 100 Photos Project.

"Between now and the end of the year, we're having residents, visitors and nonresidents take images here in Carmel and submit them," he said.

Of all of the photos depicting people's activities and centennial celebrations in Carmel that are submitted throughout the year, 100 will be selected for inclusion in the time capsule that will be buried in early 2017 and opened 50 years later.

People are asked to print their images on 4-by-6-inch photo-quality paper and submit them to the centennial committee via one of its drop boxes. No more than one entry per person will be accepted, Brocato said.

For more information, visit www.carmelcentennial.com.

Mutt-mitt dispensers, portable bags and wine glasses are just a few of the two dozen items emblazoned with the Carmel Centennial logo, and the committee in charge of designing and selling them is accepting suggestions for other quality items to add to its inventory.

Canine etiquette

DECKED OUT in their Sunday-go-to-meetin' clothes, children and young teens are instructed how to properly introduce themselves. Then they glance shyly at one another, each girl waiting for an invitation from a boy to join him on the dance floor. Once paired, the couples try to make conversation, follow the rhythm of the music, and avoid each other's feet. When the music stops, a young yellow dog with a tender face is led onto the dance floor, where she waits while the children are also taught the protocol of meeting and greeting a dog.

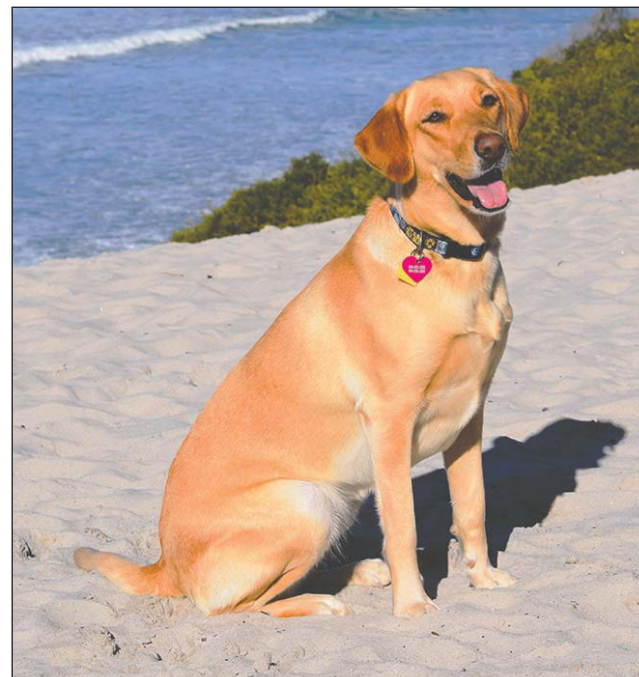

Only in the canine community of Carmel would the annual cotillion etiquette and classical dance class incorporate canine courtesies.

The dog is Naboo, a 2-year-old golden retriever-yellow Labrador retriever mix, who belongs to the couple that hosts the cotillions.

Naboo, named by the children in her family after the planet in Star Wars, was born in Southern California and was adopted at 12 weeks by her family, just prior to their move to the Peninsula.

"Naboo came into our family against my wishes," her person says. "We were going to buy a fixer-upper here, and rent a place during the process. As dog friendly as Carmel is, landlords are not. But my family talked me into it, and I'm glad they did. She is a wonderful dog."

Naboo loves to cavort at Carmel Beach, and greets everyone with both enthusiasm and respect. Quite the water dog, she would swim after seals if her family let her. One time, she swam so far, she seemed lost at sea.

"Finally, Naboo was rescued by some kind fishermen who had already brought in their catch but went back out to find her," says her person. "She was swimming toward a big rock covered by sunbathing seals."

Rest assured, Naboo would have known just how to greet them.

WOMAN GETS SIX MONTHS IN JAIL FOR STEALING FROM P.G. SENIOR

■ Was on probation for animal abuse

By KELLY NIX

A MONTEREY caretaker convicted of stealing from her 82-year-old Pacific Grove client was sentenced this week to 180 days in jail.

Ilagene "Jeanie" Quaglia, 62, was given the sentence after being convicted of financial elder abuse of the man, a landlord who owns rental properties in Pacific Grove.

Over a three-year period, Quaglia skimmed money off the man's rental checks, overcharged for items and services, and wrote checks to herself for "unauthorized purposes," according to Monterey County District Attorney Dean D. Flippo,

One of the elderly man's tenants discovered the illegal activity after reviewing his financial statements and discovering the irregularities. The tenant urged him to report the inconsistencies to the Pacific Grove Police Department. Officer Ami Lonsinger investigated the case.

"Quaglia's crimes would have very likely gone unnoticed if not for this Good Samaritan's involvement and insistence that the victim contact law enforcement," the district attorney's office said.

Two jobs

Besides being a caretaker, Quaglia also worked as a cashier at a Monterey pharmacy.

"The exact amount of theft is contested and will be determined by the court if Quaglia and the victim cannot agree to an amount of criminal restitution," the DA's office said.

As a result of her new conviction in the felony financial elder abuse case, Quaglia violated the terms of her probation in a 2013 animal abuse conviction.

In April of that year, 48 dogs and cats were taken from Quaglia's home on the 1200 block of First Street in Monterey and housed at the SPCA for Monterey County.

When Quaglia was arrested at her workplace, officers found a cat in the trunk of her vehicle, Monterey Police reported.

As a result of violating her probation terms, Quaglia this week was also sentenced to 60 days jail consecutive to the elder abuse sentencing for a total of 240 days behind bars. Monterey County Deputy District Attorney Scott Donahue prosecuted Quaglia.

Culver sentences Monterey murderer

JESSE QUIMING, the 32-year-old man who stabbed Scott Long to death in a fight over alcohol in a homeless encampment behind the Monterey Library last summer, and then tried to murder another victim, was sentenced Tuesday by Monterey County Superior Court Judge Julie Culver to 56 years to life in prison for the murder. Quiming's sentence was increased because of a prior robbery conviction in 2005.

On June 19, 2015, just after midnight, an argument developed between Quiming and Long, who was 40, over Long's refusal to share his alcohol with Quiming.

"A witness testified that Quiming appeared to be 'brooding' for about 10 minutes after being denied the alcohol," according to the district attorney's office. "Without warning, Quiming walked over to where Long was seated and stabbed him four times, with one blow penetrating the heart."

His other victim, 23-year-old Tyler Misamore, was stabbed when he tried to defend Long, who died at the scene. Misamore was also stabbed four times.

After the stabbings, Quiming fled, ditching the knife and his blood-stained shirt, but he was captured less than 24 hours later after Monterey County Sheriff's Deputies found him hiding near Carmel High School. Monterey Police Detective Brian Kruse led the investigation.

TALMAGE FOR MAYOR

As our village celebrates its 100th birthday, we must preserve Carmel's history and traditions, its natural beauty and its uniqueness and quirks. That is why I am running for Mayor.

There are significant challenges facing Carmel today:

- Work closely with the new City Administrator and fill a number of staff positions (~25% of positions are currently filled by temporary employees, consultants or vacant).
- Continue to provide leadership on regional issues, especially the effort to create a reliable, long-term source of water, including the construction, at long last, of a Desal plant. We also need to be actively involved in the ongoing PG&E safety investigation at the Public Utilities Commission.

- Address several policy issues, including:
 - Ensure the continued high level of ambulance, fire and police services.
 - Find a compromise solution to fires on the beach, while addressing health, safety, and environmental concerns.
 - Maintain a vibrant community through an active business district, distinguished cultural venues and quality special events.
 - Solidify the Planning and Building Department to deal with the increased workload.
- Manage the city's finances in an innovative and conservative manner, in an increasingly uncertain economic environment.

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

'Something in the back of his pants'

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Schley.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 13

Pacific Grove: Officers located 13 teens and young adults leaving the beach at 0200 hours after a bonfire. None had warrants. None could drive the group home in the cars they came in because they had all consumed alcohol or smoked marijuana. They were all able to care for themselves. The subjects were given warnings about the violations and allowed to call cabs for transport. Officers waited with them until the cabs arrived and drove them from the scene.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male on Junipero north of Eighth reported receiving unwanted telephone calls from an ex-roommate. Male requested officers contact his ex-roommate and tell him to stop calling. He also requested officers do a civil standby so his ex-roommate can pick up the rest of his property.

Pacific Grove: Non-injury accident. Bicyclist struck the side of a moving vehicle on Sunset Drive.

Carmel area: An elderly victim discovered one of her checks had been intercepted and cashed by an unknown suspect. Case continues.

Pebble Beach: A non-ticket-holding intoxicated subject, a 22-year-old male, was escorted to a waiting taxi on Whitman Lane outside of a large event. When the subject returned, he was arrested for public intoxication and booked into county jail.

Pebble Beach: MPCC complained about unknown persons hitting golf balls on the golf course during the AT&T Pro-Am.

Big Sur: Vehicle was towed from Highway

1 due to being an obstruction on the highway.

Carmel area: Tenants on Morse Drive were contacted; they have an ongoing civil matter. Case closed.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 14

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A vehicle check was conducted on an illegally parked vehicle at Ocean and Scenic. The driver was found to be in possession of less than 1 oz. of marijuana. He was cited and released.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle towed for parking in a no-parking zone at Carmelo and Second.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: CPD assisted MCSO in locating a lost teenage juvenile. The juvenile was safe on Ocean Avenue and custody was released to MCSO deputies.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person walked in to CPD to report a civil problem at a new commercial rental property. Subject believed someone enters his business after hours, in violation of the rental agreement, and during one incident removed a telephone. The male tried to report a similar incident to MCSO a few days prior. That event was determined to be unfounded. He thanked CPD for their service and was eager to leave. He has a recent history of mental illness, but his welfare checked OK on this date. Unable to determine if a criminal act occurred.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a past-tense theft from an unlocked vehicle at Monte Verde and Fourth.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male called to report losing his wallet somewhere near the business area or Casanova Restaurant. He wanted to make a report in case the wallet was located and turned in for safekeeping.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person requested a report for a lost purse in the business district. This report is for information only in the event the purse is turned in for safekeeping.

Pacific Grove: City was having a 5K and a 10K race. Vehicle was parked in a "no parking zone," and signs were posted with the parking restriction hours of 0500 to 1200. Officers made several attempts to contact the owner. Vehicle was stored under CVC 22651(n).

Pacific Grove: Verbal disturbance between a husband and his wife on Grove Acre. The husband is on pain medication and is having adverse effects.

Pacific Grove: Evans Avenue resident wanted to report his next-door neighbor had a get-together, and it was getting too loud. Resident asked them if they could keep it down. Neighbor got offended and was confrontational toward him. Resident said his neighbor and his friends had left. He said he would call police back if they return. He wanted documentation only.

Pebble Beach: A credit card was found on Live Oak Meadows Lane and turned in during the AT&T Pro-Am. Case closed.

Pine Cone candidates' forum Sunday

THE APRIL 12 municipal election, with two candidates for mayor and five for two council seats, is just a few weeks away.

To help voters pick their favorites, The Carmel Pine Cone will offer a two-hour candidates' forum Sunday, March 6, at 7 p.m., in the event center on Dolores Street at the corner of Seventh Avenue.

"I'll be moderating, and asking questions on the hot topics of the day, and the audience will also have the chance to submit theirs," said publisher Paul Miller.

All seven candidates have said they will attend, including Steve Dallas and Ken Talmage for mayor, and Jan Reimers, Dave Mosley, Bobby Richards, Richard Kreitman and Jack Pappadeas for city council.

"Of course, with seven candidates, it will be a challenge to get every topic covered, but I'll do my best," Miller said.

There will be no parking on the premises for the event; however, the city lot at the north end of Sunset Center is just two blocks away.

KREITMAN FOR CARMEL COUNCIL

Community and Balance

For me, running for Carmel City Council is all about community and balance. They say all politics are local and no politics could be more local than municipal elections in Carmel-by-the-Sea. But more significantly our lives are local, lived in our local communities, and it is our community's strength and health that most determines our own well-being and that of our families. What's happening in Salinas, Sacramento, Washington, or the Middle East certainly affects us - and often frightens us - but more important to our daily quality-of-life is what's happening next door, down the street, in our neighborhood, in our community. It is our local community that ultimately sustains us and provides our immediate safety, security, and welfare. Strengthening this community and the bonds that tie us together has been the goal of any participation or contribution I've been privileged to make in Carmel and hope to make in the future.

And so it is community first.

And then there's balance. In Carmel we're always in a balancing act between preserving the quality of life in our hometown, this precious beautiful village, with it being one of the world's most popular visitor destinations.

While we are definitively and primarily a residential city (see Ordinance 96), our businesses provide 75% of the City's budget and much of the financial support to our beloved community non-profits. And these businesses rely heavily on visitors. So we need to continue maintaining the balance of a thriving business community underwriting the municipal services and amenities we as residents and voters have come to enjoy, expect, and demand in our neighborhoods and downtown. Business, residents, and City government—we are really one small community, one square mile—and we all share in its delights, its opportunities, and its responsibilities. I think we've been doing a pretty good job balancing things thus far and I hope the voters of Carmel-by-the-Sea choose me to help keep that balance going on into the future. I'm good at it.

Thank you,
Richard Kreitman

Peace officers association hands out honors for service during emergencies

By MARY SCHLEY

THE MONTEREY County Peace Officers Association next week will recognize a small group of officers from the Marina and Salinas police departments for providing extraordinary services during emergencies.

Each year, the organization honors exemplary officers from one large agency and one small agency at its Outstanding Police Officer of the Year Dinner, which will also star the various officers of the year chosen by their individual law enforcement agencies when it takes place Saturday, March 12, at the Embassy Suites in Seaside.

From Salinas P.D., Sgt. John Lynn and officers Gabriel Carvey and Adolfo Lopez will be honored for their handling of a suicidal man in a ravine behind the city's youth center in November 2015. The man was trying to hang himself with a garden hose and had also swallowed several hydrocodone pills earlier in the day.

"The subject climbed a large tree, tying one end of the hose around a branch and the other end around his neck," said MCPOA executive director Joy Junsay. "Police officers Lopez and Carvey grabbed hold of the subject's lower legs and raised him up enough to relieve the tension of the hose from around his neck, and Sgt. Lynn reached up and cut the hose just above the subject's neck."

Marina's Cpl. Steve Russo and officers Seth Morten and Michael Ball will also be recognized for the help they provided to a woman who was in labor in her home on Carmel Avenue in Marina on July 9, 2014.

"Cpl. Russo knew the fire department was committed to another medical, so there would be a delay in medical aid for this critical medical emergency," she said. Filling the void, the three officers went to the woman's home and helped deliver the child.

During the annual dinner, 16 law enforcement agencies from throughout the county will also be recognizing their own 2015 Officers of the Year, including:

- Carmel Police Department — officer Ricardo Mendoza;
- California Highway Patrol — officer Dave Reichard

(King City patrol) and officer Jermaine Clark (Monterey Area patrol);

- Monterey County District Attorney's Office — investi-

CAR THIEF'S ESCAPE FOILED BY BIG SUR'S STEEP TERRAIN

By CHRIS COUNTS

AFTER A suspected car thief was handcuffed Feb. 26 in Big Sur, he surprised police by fleeing down a driveway and over a steep hillside in an effort to escape, the California Highway Patrol reported.

But like so many people who try to scale the cliffs west of Highway 1 in Big Sur, the man — who was later identified as 18-year-old Robert Tyler Stephenson of San Luis Obispo — only succeeded in getting stuck on the side of a rocky embankment. A helicopter was called in to bring him to safety.

The incident — which happened near Torre Creek Bridge — began when a state parks ranger saw what he thought was a motorist in trouble.

"A vehicle had run out of gas, and a ranger stopped by to check on it," CHP Officer Oscar Loza told The Pine Cone. "He was just trying to help out the gentleman."

After authorities learned the man had a "cite and release" warrant, the ranger wrote him a ticket and let him go. But there were strange marks all over the car, and when the CHP arrived on scene a short time later, they questioned the man.

"He didn't know who the registered owner of the car was," Loza reported.

When police determined that the vehicle was stolen, they arrested Stephenson. But before they could get him inside their patrol car, the suspect made a dash for daylight. Big Sur's famously steep topography, though, foiled his plan — if it could be called a plan.

Stephenson was charged with possession of a stolen vehicle and resisting arrest, Loza added.

But it's unlikely he'll be charged for the helicopter ride, which will cost taxpayers thousands of dollars.

Torre Creek Bridge is located about 33 miles south of Carmel.

Cause of death released in fire suicide

STEVE MCALPINE — the former Travel Bag owner whose suicide led to the Tassajara Fire that burned nearly 1,100 acres and destroyed a dozen homes in September 2015 — burned to death, according to the Monterey County Coroner's Office.

While rumors had circulated that McAlpine died from some other means, such as a gunshot wound, Monterey County Sheriff's Cmdr. John Thornburg said this week that a forensic pathologist's report confirmed McAlpine was killed by burns he sustained when he set himself on fire.

"He didn't die of an overdose before he burned up," he said. "He didn't shoot himself before he died."

Panetta gets backing from big name politicians

By KELLY NIX

CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATE Jimmy Panetta secured endorsements from several elected officials, all of whom were considered possible candidates for the seat that will be vacated by longtime Congressman Sam Farr when he retires next year.

Panetta, a Monterey County deputy district attorney, said this week he was grateful for the support from Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett, Sen. Bill Monning and State Assemblyman Mark Stone.

"I am truly honored to receive the endorsements of such stalwart public servants who know exactly what it takes to be a strong representative from the Central Coast," Panetta told The Pine Cone. "I have been privileged to work with all three of them in the past, and I am humbled by their confidence in my candidacy to replace another local tried-and-true leader like Congressman Sam Farr."

Panetta's most recent endorsement was from Burnett, who last week pointed to Panetta's "work ethic" and shared goals for the 20th Congressional District as the reason for his backing. The two developed a relationship while working together on the Central Coast Veterans Cemetery.

"Having both grown up in this area, we share a set of values that includes oceans protection, environmental preservation, and a strong economy for this region," Burnett said. "I am pleased to endorse him in his run for Congress."

'Drive and integrity needed'

On Feb. 23 — a day before Burnett's official backing — Monning said that Panetta's "drive, work ethic and integrity" are needed in the U.S. House of Representatives.

"Jimmy will be an excellent representative for this district in Congress," Monning said. "He has shown his commitment to public service and to this community in both his professional life, and through his service on local boards and committees."

While Monning was speculated to run for Farr's seat, he announced Dec. 1, 2015, that, "after careful consideration and thorough deliberations," he would seek reelection to the seat he was elected to in 2012.

Earlier in February, Stone, while announcing his reelection bid, offered support for Panetta.

"Jimmy Panetta will be an effective member of Congress," Stone said. "I'm proud to endorse Jimmy, because we agree on core issues such as the need for greater investment in mental health support, ocean protection and immigration reform."

The biggest challenge Panetta faces is from Republican Casey Lucius, a Pacific Grove City Councilwoman and former Naval Postgraduate School professor, who was the first candidate to announce a bid for the 20th Congressional District seat. Several other candidates are also vying for the position, including independent Jack Digby, and Peace and Freedom Party candidate Joe Williams.

This week, Panetta also got an endorsement from the Monterey County Democratic Central Committee.

Officials weigh limits on salmon fishing in bay

By CHRIS COUNTS

CONCERNED ABOUT low numbers of winter-run Chinook salmon spawning in the Sacramento River, officials could soon place severe restrictions on fishing for salmon in Monterey Bay, California Fish and Wildlife spokesperson Harry Morse told The Pine Cone this week.

Morse said the Pacific Fisheries Management Council will meet next week in Sacramento to discuss the dilemma. Represented at the hearing will be federal and state agencies, commercial and recreational fisherman, and Native American tribes.

According to Morse, only about 3,000 winter-run salmon migrated upstream last year. An estimated 160,000 fall-run salmon followed the same route. For a historical perspective, more than a million winter-run salmon migrated upstream in 1960, Morse noted.

Overall, Morse estimated there are fewer than 300,000 Chinook salmon in the ocean off the California and Oregon coasts — down from 600,000 just last year. The state's ongoing drought has been blamed for the drop.

Because many winter-run salmon migrate to Monterey Bay, officials are worried about the impact fishing for fall-run salmon in the bay will have on them.

"Fishermen can't tell the difference between the two," explained Morse.

The overall number of salmon in the bay has gone down dramatically.

"Two years ago, the bay had a huge fishery," he recalled. "Last year it did poorly."

It's unclear how tough the new salmon fishing regulations will be. Morse said a decision will likely be made by late March — but not before public hearings on the subject.

"Nobody knows for sure what will happen," Morse added. "Commercial fishermen are afraid the regulations will be so restrictive that they won't be able to make any money. [Officials] are going to make another set of hard decisions on how many harvestable fish are there."

'Binge-Worthy Journalism' goes inside podcast

OFFERING THE public a glimpse behind the scenes of a popular podcast, Sarah Koenig and Julie Snyder present "Binge-Worthy Journalism: Backstage with the Creators of 'Serial'" Wednesday, March 9, at Sunset Center.

An investigative news program produced by Koenig and Snyder, and hosted by Koenig, "Serial" made its debut in October 2014. Its first season of 12 shows focused on the murder of a young woman, while its second season — which is in progress — examines the case of Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl, a United States soldier who was captured by the Taliban in 2009 and charged with desertion last year.

A critical and commercial success, "Serial" set an iTunes sales record for downloads. Its creators received a Peabody Award last year for their efforts.

"Now deep into the second season of this unlikely smash hit, audience members will hear firsthand from Koenig and Snyder about what goes into the making of the show," said Alexandra Richardson of Sunset Center. "Also the producers for 'This American Life,' the speakers will share wisdom gleaned from working in public radio for a combined three decades."

Showtime is 8 p.m. Tickets are $59 to $129. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2048 or visit www.sunsetcenter.org.

Highway 68 roundabout work to start in April

By MARY SCHLEY

WHEN CONSTRUCTION begins on the Highway 68 roundabout in April, road closures will be infrequent, and no official detours will send drivers through the streets of downtown Carmel and Pebble Beach, Transportation Agency for Monterey County planner Ariana Green told the city council Tuesday night.

Green was there to update council members and the public on the $8.8 million project proponents say will relieve the frequent congestion at the complicated intersection of highways 68 and 1, where traffic often backs up on eastbound Highway 68 for more than a mile.

The new intersection, with no traffic signal, will also be safer, reduce air pollution from idling cars, and will be better looking, she said.

According to Green, construction will begin in late April or early May and will run through February 2017.

"Most of the action will happen off the roadway," she said, but Highway 68 will experience three lengthy closures, the first in mid-June, and the others in October or November, each for a couple of weeks.

She said they wouldn't happen during especially busy times, like Concours Week in August.

Encouraging carpools

Whenever westbound Highway 68 is closed, CHP officers will be able to escort people to the hospital through the closures in cases of life or death, she said, and TAMC is asking people to carpool or take the bus to and from work while construction is under way.

To that end, Monterey-Salinas Transit is offering monthly bus passes that normally cost $95 for just $13 during the months of the project, and she encouraged people to take advantage of the deal.

Handouts detailing the detours, which include having drivers make a U-turn at Carpenter Street to head north on Highway 1 when the southbound ramp is closed, and driving through Skyline Forest to get back on westbound Highway 68, will be distributed.

"We have a lot of homeowners who live on these small streets in Carmel and are worried about traffic coming down their streets and through the Pebble Beach gate," councilman Ken Talmage said.

"That is not going to be an official route," Green responded.

Details will also go out on Facebook, Twitter and the Waze traffic app, as well as in email updates anyone can sign up for at www.tamc.org.

Green said a detailed construction schedule will be released after the contractor is hired in the next couple of weeks.

Egg Stash Dash

IN AN athletic twist on the traditional Easter egg hunt, the students of Carmel High School are hosting the Egg Stash Dash 5k Trail and 2k Fun Run and Family Day Sunday, March 13 — the day that Daylight Savings Time kicks in. The races, which will have participants searching for more than 3,000 filled eggs stashed along the trail, will help raise money for the garden projects at Tularcitos, River and Captain Cooper elementary schools, as well as the MEarth habitat project.

Registration will open at 9 a.m. at the Carmel Middle School track, and the trail run will begin at 10:30 a.m. The entry fees are $15 for adults and $7 for students in advance via eventbrite.com or Carmelhigh.org, or $20 per adult and $10 per student on race day. Each signup includes a race T-shirt, collected filled eggs and post-race snacks.

The runs will be followed by Family Day activities like arts and crafts booths, face painting, a petting zoo, a dodgeball tournament, a native plant sale, food booths, a photo booth and live music. Admission to Family Day, which will run from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the CMS Upper Field, is free.

For information or to donate to the CUSD school garden project, contact Diana Vita at (831) 624-1821, ext. 2780.

Bach Festival is back, tickets now on sale

By CHRIS COUNTS

NOW THAT its 2016 lineup has been set, momentum is building toward the 79th annual Carmel Bach Festival, which happens July 16-30.

Organizers announced this week that more than 40 events will be part of the festival, which was founded by Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous in 1935 and celebrates the works and influence of one of the greatest composers of classical music, Johann Sebastian Bach. Tickets, meanwhile, went on sale this week.

"J.S. Bach is an enduring influence on music of all ages," said Paul Goodwin, the festival's artistic director and principal conductor. "This year, we look at many of the composers he inspired and how his music is absorbed into the very fabric of our musical culture."

The festival will open Saturday, July 16, when its orchestra performs, "Bach and Handel-By-The-Sea — a Celebration of Carmel's Centennial." The program includes Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach's Magnificat and a pair of water-themed compositions, Handel's Water Music and Eric Whitacre's Cloudburst.

An impressive list of vocal soloists will be featured in the festival, including tenor Thomas Cooley, baritone Peter Harvey, and soprano Clara Rottsohl. New soloists are soprano Mhairi Lawson and mezzo-soprano Meg Bragle.

Other highlights will be a pre-festival chamber concert Wednesday, July 13, at the Monterey Museum of Art's Pacific Street location; a gala at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club Friday, July 15; performances of Bach's Mass in B Minor July 17 and July 24; chamber concerts celebrating the music and poetry of Carmel July 19 and July 26; and a special family concert Saturday, July 23, at Sunset Center.

Scott Seward, the festival's director of marketing, told The Pine Cone that the family concert, which was introduced just two years ago, is quickly becoming one of the festival's enduring traditions. "It's a great way to introduce classical music to young ones," he added.

Concert tickets are $10 to $128, with discounts available for students, and active and retired military. Call (831) 624-1521 or visit www.bachfestival.org.

C.V. Chamber honors business 'stars'

THE WINNERS of this year's Carmel Valley Business Star Awards received the red carpet treatment Feb. 28, when the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce and AT&T presented the 4th annual Night with the Stars celebration at Quail Lodge and Golf Club. Selected by the public, the winners included Quail Lodge, the Carmel Valley Art Association, SCRAMP/Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca, Baja Cantina, Carmel Valley Branch Library, The Carmel Pine Cone, Carmel Valley Business Service, Sotheby's International Realty, The Quail and the Olive, and Bernardus Winery. Besides the awards ceremony, the evening featured dinner, dancing and a live broadcast of the 88th annual Academy Awards from the Dolby Theatre in Hollywood.

Try these tax tips to save money, boost refund

By Jesus Guevara, Master Tax Advisor

Taxpayers still have time left to influence their tax future. Many taxpayers can do something to lower their tax liability with these tax tips.

How to find the right tax professional
March 2016

For many taxpayers, tax season is the largest financial event of the year. Making a mistake could reduce a refund or lead to a balance due on the one hand or trigger IRS scrutiny on the other. So when it comes to finding a tax professional, taxpayers need to find someone who can get them every tax benefit they're entitled to in a complete and accurate tax return. Taxpayers should look for five things in the right tax professional: knowledge, security, honesty, guarantees and availability.

- 1. Knowledge
When it comes to taxes, knowledge can translate into dollars saved. Tax rules are always changing, so it is critical taxpayers select a tax professional who receives ongoing training. In addition to asking about ongoing education, taxpayers should ask about a tax preparer's years of experience. Do they have the knowledge to act in the taxpayer's best interests?
Taxpayers should also know the tax preparer's area of expertise before allowing them to do their taxes. A sick patient wouldn't see an eye doctor for a head cold and a small business owner shouldn't consult a tax professional who doesn't normally do small business returns.
- 2. Security
Tax professionals see Social Security numbers, earnings statements and other private information. Taxpayers need to be able to trust their preparer to review and protect this data. Keeping personal information secure is one of the best ways to protect against identity theft, including stolen identity refund fraud.
- 3. Honesty
Taxpayers should avoid tax preparers who say they can obtain larger-than-average refunds. Refund estimates should be based on deductions and credits taxpayers are legally permitted to claim. The IRS can audit returns and assess steep accuracy-related penalties for negligence and substantial understatement. Taxpayers can use an online calculator to estimate their refund as a starting point in their search for the right tax professional.
- 4. Guarantees
Taxpayers should understand what happens if an error is made on their return. Will the preparer pay the resulting penalties and interest or will the taxpayer be left footing the bill? A reputable tax professional will guarantee their work.
The bottom line is that whoever prepares the tax return, the taxpayer is legally responsible for the information on the return. A little research into the best tax professional now can prevent significant financial and legal harm later.
- 5. Availability
It's important to select a tax preparation company that is available year-round. Although tax season is January through April, the IRS corresponds with taxpayers throughout the year. And a taxpayer may need help during the year when life changes like marriage, divorce, the birth of a child, moving or going back to school potentially impact their tax situation. Or they may need help with their taxes when making other financial decisions like converting a traditional to a Roth IRA, when to spend funds in a flexible savings account or how to make charitable donations that are tax deductible.
Taxes can be intimidating, which is all the more reason to find the right tax professional. Taxpayers who find someone who is knowledgeable, keeps their information secure, is honest, guarantees their work and is available year-round can be confident when filing their taxes.

groups have access to parts of the theater for rehearsals and set building.

Councilman Ken Talmage said he wanted to make sure the May 1 date doesn't become the target date, but is rather the drop-dead date.

"I'm trying to convey a sense of urgency here," he said.

Councilwoman Victoria Beach asked for a better explanation of why the project is so long delayed past its original early November 2015 target date, and councilwoman Carrie Theis suggested the council do a walk-through to see how the work is progressing.

Forest and beach commissioner Karen Ferlito complained about how the trees have been — and haven't been — cared for and protected during construction.

Mayor Jason Burnett liked Theis' suggestion of a site visit, and he also noted that Carmel's new city administrator, Chip Rerig, "has a lot of experience managing projects much more complex than this," and his input will be useful, once he's had a chance to settle in.

"We should all go have a little celebration, because this has been a major undertaking," Burnett said.

Substantial winter rains caused some delays in the renovation of the Forest Theater, which was originally set to be completed last November but is now anticipated to be done by the end of March.

All told, Johnson recommended the city council adjust 121 different fees. "In most cases, it's 100 percent cost recovery that I'm recommending to the council," he said.

Among the more significant increases he recommended were:

- an increase from $1,704.93 (commercial) and $1,524.10 (residential) per application for major design review, to $4,530 per application;

- from $785.30 to $2,730 for a use permit;

- from $51.66 to $275 per application for a preliminary historic evaluation of a home by staff;

- from $304.82 to $1,275 for an appeal;
- from no fees for a police response to a loud party, to no charge for the first response, $165 for the second response during the same day, and $495 for the third response during the same year;

- from $25 per day or a percentage of the proceeds for the use of the outdoor Forest Theater, to $500 per day for performances and $250 per day for rehearsals;

- from $0 to $2 each for the city's quirky high-heel permits, which are especially popular with tourists and TV crews from foreign countries.

When it comes to events, Johnson said the city should recover all of the costs of hosting Concours Week events, which he said cost taxpayers almost $174,000 — a figure Carmel Police Cmdr. Paul Tomasi said was "an anomaly," because last year's work on the events included a lot of hours of meetings, the development of new plans to deal with traffic and parking, and other tasks not typically part of the process.

As for other fees, like permits for having a special event in the park or closing a block, he suggested increasing the park processing fee from $155 to $685 per rental, and also charging additional fees for alcohol ($170 and road closures ($710 for cultural commission review and $225 for city council review). The rates of $400 for the first four hours and $300 per additional hour wouldn't change.

For street closures, the rate of $365 per block would increase to $1,475 for a "small" event, $2,169 for "medium," and $3,725 for "large." Using the Del Mar parking lot next to the beach at the bottom of Ocean Avenue would be $100 per parking stall per day.

Johnson also suggested a few reductions, in addition to the business-license renewal fee, such as from $154.99 to $50 for an application to move an existing sign, and from $785.30 to $515 per application to merge a lot.

"The responsible thing to do"

Before voting on any fee increases, the council and public should have a "tax-policy discussion," Johnson said. "How much do we want to subsidize?" he said should be the first question.

He then said whatever large increases the city council approves could be spread out over a couple of years.

"That's what a lot of cities do, and that's what I recommend," he said.

Mayor Jason Burnett suggested holding more workshops to discuss fees in particular departments, such as planning, public works and community services. He also said it would be useful to see if any of the processes could be made more efficient — and therefore less expensive — before people are asked to pay more for them.

"The cost is not set. The cost is based on the systems that we have put in place, and this can also be used as a tool for identifying where there are inefficiencies in operations," he said.

"The first thing we should do is eliminate those inefficiencies before we charge someone for those inefficiencies. That is the responsible thing to do as we move through this," he added.

Burnett said the council would work to get the new fees approved before the 2016/2017 budget is adopted in June.

BELL

concerned about the safety of the old bell, which was donated to the city on its 50th birthday by Sir Harry Downie, master restorer of the Carmel Mission, in 1966. Considering the thefts of the Dennis the Menace statue from the park in Monterey and the bust of the cheetah from outside sculptor Richard MacDonald's gallery, he said, the bell is "venerable, vulnerable and valuable, and it needs to be secured."

No other members of the public commented about the project, though former Mayor Sue McCloud submitted comments in writing. She questioned the importance of the 1692 bell.

"It is certainly old, but I don't know if it follows that any bell or object made in 1692 is therefore historically significant," she said.

She also said a plaque should be placed on the arch indicating the new bell is based on a "sketch" by Greene.

Councilman Steve Dallas wanted an architect specializing in historic projects to review the drawings, to ensure they are an accurate representation of what Greene wanted the bell to look like. (Although the architect designed the arch to hold a bell, it wasn't cast when the arch was constructed in 1922, because the legion didn't have enough money for it at the time.)

Mayor Jason Burnett agreed, suggesting the council authorize the removal of the current bell to somewhere safe, like the local history library — where it may not be put on display, due to lack of space, but would be held securely in the vault — and that the city pay for an architect to help with the design.

He also noted that while the legion plans to raise all the money for the project through private donations, there should be no restriction against the use of public funds.

"I think it would be entirely reasonable for the city to put money into this," he said.

Ultimately, the council voted in favor of the project, incorporating Dallas' and Burnett's suggestions, and the historic resources board will review the final drawings before the new bell is cast.

Afterward, Burnett said he would contribute the remaining $1,000 in his old campaign fund to the bell project — an amount councilman Ken Talmage said he would match.

To contribute to the fund for a new bell, please send your check to American Legion Post 512, P.O. Box 512, Carmel CA 93921.

Phyllis Rae Hancock Lewis

Phyllis Rae Hancock Lewis, age 65 died surrounded by loved ones at her home in Carlsbad, Ca, Friday February 19th at 12:30pm.

Phyllis was born on March 7th, 1950 in Thermopolis, Wyoming and always held a special place in her heart for the Big Sky Country. She grew up with two brothers, cousins and lots of friends in Indio, Ca. As much as she loves the ocean...the desert is her first love. Phyllis married and moved up the coast to Northern California when she was 22. From Coralitos to Big Sur she found her home in Carmel-by-the-sea. She and her then husband Brooke Lewis, owned multiple stores in both Carmel and Monterey. In 1979, they opened Monterey's first nightclub, The Club. Phyllis, was an anti-war activist, she helped start S.U.N.N.Y (Society for Uniting Non Nuclear Years) and was known around town for her brown VW Bus with the license plate NONUKS1. She loved Daffodils, and Orchids and Ferns, and Redwoods, Point Lobos and heart rocks, and the colors; red and yellow and green, sunsets and sunrises and tides.

Phyllis is survived by her two daughters; Peyton Cabano and Alex Lewis, she was very active member in the PTA all throughout their school lives. She loved to travel. She taught her three grandchildren to cherish nature and to appreciate the moonlight, the birds singing, and new blossoms in Spring.

A celebration of Phyllis's life will be held March 5th at the end of 10th, Carmel Beach from 2pm -4pm. All are welcome.

CPD Cmdr. Paul Tomasi cited Mendoza's "ability to work through critical incidents while remaining calm" as one of his greatest assets, and said that skill helped bring about positive outcomes in two incidents.

Around midnight on April 21, 2015, Mendoza was a block away when an alarm sounded at a jewelry store on Mission south of Ocean. After seeing the front door was secure and while waiting for backup, Mendoza heard a noise from the side of the building and went to investigate, just as a man walked out of a bathroom attached to the store. Holding him at gunpoint, Mendoza "noticed the subject had a crowbar in one hand and a bag in the other." The suspect, 64-year-old Jiri Grym, had used a drywall saw to cut a hole in the wall and enter Viau Estate Jewelry, where he took $250,000 worth of merchandise.

And on Oct. 19, 2015, at around 11 p.m. downtown, Mendoza saw a man in dark clothing and partially concealing a baseball bat. When he tried to approach, the person took off, and Mendoza chased him to a dead-end alley. The officer stood at the end and ordered him to come out with his hands up. But when the suspect — who turned out to be a teenager — reemerged, he had both of his hands on the bat. Mendoza repeatedly ordered him to drop the bat, or else he would be Tased. "The suspect finally dropped the bat when he was about 15 feet from Officer Mendoza," Tomasi said, and the boy was ultimately cited and released to his parents.

"Each of these incidents could have had much different outcomes if not for the experience, training and knowledge demonstrated by Officer Mendoza," Tomasi said. "He is a credit to our profession, our city and our department."

In addition to holding the annual dinner, the MCPOA operates the law-enforcement shooting range at Laguna Seca and bestows various service awards, including the Medal of Valor, the Distinguished Service Award, the Award of Merit, letters of commendation and other honors.

Festivals celebrate 'the power and artistry of cinema'

By CHRIS COUNTS

SHOWCASING EIGHT films from five countries, the Carmel Jewish Film Festival uses "the power and artistry of cinema" to "engage the greater Jewish community in meaningful dialogue on important issues of our day."

The sixth annual festival opens Saturday, March 5, at 7:30 p.m., when "Dough" screens at Congregation Beth Israel in Carmel Valley. The film takes a light-hearted look at a down-and-out bakery, whose recently-widowed Jewish owner hires a teenage Muslim refugee to be his assistant. An opening reception starts at 6:30 p.m.

The festival's lineup also features "The Green Prince" (Sunday, March 6 at the Middlebury Institute in Monterey); "The Last Mentsch" (Tuesday, March 8, at Lighthouse Cinemas in Pacific Grove); "Flory's Flame" (Saturday, March 12, at the Golden Bough Playhouse); "A Borrowed Identity" (Sunday, March 13, at Lighthouse Cinemas); "Theodore Bikel: In the Shoes of Sholom Aleichem" (Thursday, March 17, at Congregation Beth Israel); "The Dove Flyer" (Saturday, March 19, at the Golden Bough Playhouse); and "Deli Man" (Sunday, March 20, at Congregation Beth Israel). The films come from Israel, the United States, England, Germany and Hungary.

Event co-chair Susan Greenbaum said the film festival offers something for everybody.

"We try to find films that would be of interest not to just the Jewish community, but to the larger community," Greenbaum said. "We're trying to engage people's hearts and minds with some of the topics we're exploring."

Tickets for individual films are $12 for general admission, $10 for seniors and members of Congregation Beth Israel, and $6 for students and military. For descriptions of each film, directions to venues, showtimes and tickets, call (800) 838-3006 or visit www.carmeljff.org.

■ Big thrills, stunning scenery

The Banff Mountain Film Festival World Tour stops Friday, March 4, at the Golden State Theatre in Monterey, offering thrill-seeking moviegoers an evening of "profound journeys, unexpected adventures and ground-breaking expeditions" — all against the backdrop of some of the world's most stunning scenery. Last year's 39th annual festival in Banff, Alberta lasted for nine days and showcased dozens of films. Now a condensed "tour" of the festival will travel to 40 countries.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Return of the Natives Restoration Education Project, which aims to restore native habitats throughout Monterey County. Showtime is 7 p.m. Tickets are $20. The theater is located at 417 Alvarado St. Call (831) 649-1070 or visit www.banffcentre.ca.

PRINTMAKERS UNITE AT CAA, P.G. ART CENTER JOINS FIRST FRIDAY FUN

THE FINE art of printmaking takes center stage when "Prints!" opens Saturday, March 5, at the Carmel Art Association.

The show calls attention to the talents of nine members of the CAA — Jennifer Anderson, Eleen Auvil, Alice Geller-Robertson, Susan Giacometti, Kathryn Greenwald, Barbara Johnson, Noro Partido, Pamela Takigawa and Justin Ward.

Besides showcasing local artists, the exhibit provides a wonderful introduction to printmaking, which has evolved considerably in recent years, and as a result, has become quite popular.

"The world of printmaking has grown since I came to Carmel 15 years ago," explained Giacometti, who came up with the idea for the show. "The use of more non-toxic materials and creating by combining techniques—it's become easier. We are sharing and learning from each other."

The nine printmakers will offer a free workshop Sunday, March 13, at the CAA. All materials will be provided. Reservations are suggested.

Also opening this Saturday are shows by painters Peggy Jelmini and Richard Tette. Both artists find inspiration in California's varied landscapes.

The exhibits will be on display through April 5. The art center is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. Visit www.carmelart.org or call (831) 624-6176.

"I found a place that inspires me to make images every day," Pace said. "I see photographic possibilities everywhere I look. The people are beautiful, friendly and fun to be with. Life in the village is endlessly fascinating."

Pace has visited Burkina Faso annually since 2007, immersing himself in the culture and customs of the nation, which has 17 million people and has only existed since 1984.

The Dude plays country-rock, 'bash' brings alive early the days of jazz

FAMOUS FOR his success on the Silver Screen, Academy Award-winning actor Jeff Bridges steps into a less familiar role when he presents "An evening of Music and Conversation" Saturday, March 5, at Golden State Theatre in Monterey.

Perhaps because he grew up in Hollywood and his father, Lloyd Bridges, had a hit TV show, "Sea Hunt," Bridges never had a burning desire to be an actor.

"I didn't know what the hell I wanted to be," Bridges told The Pine Cone. "My dad really pushed the acting thing."

But as a youngster, Bridges was naturally drawn to music. He came of age in Southern California during the late 1960s when the city was becoming the epicenter of a thriving country-rock scene. But he became an actor instead, calling the choice "the path of least resistance."

"Dad said, 'Do your acting, and you'll get to use your music," recalled Bridges, who was once stationed in Monterey while he served in the United States Coast Guard. His father turned out to be right, but it took more than 40 years — in part because Bridges's acting career kept him busy. His film credits include "The Last Picture Show," "Jagged Edge," "Thunderbolt and Lightfoot," "The Big Lebowski" and many more.

In 2009, Bridges played a down-and-out country singer in the movie, "Crazy Heart." Not only did the performance earn him an Oscar for Best Actor, the film's success inspired him to launch a second career as a country-rocker. He began to work with music producer T-Bone Burnett, who "rekindled my love of music."

"If ever there was a time to get a band together, it was

GourmetFest gets props, International Women’s Day, and the Rich Smith Fund

THE RELAIS & Chateaux GourmetFest organized by Carmel restaurateur David Fink that took place over the weekend garnered compliments from city councilman Ken Talmage at Tuesday night’s meeting in city hall.

“There was a food and wine festival that took place pretty soup to nuts

By MARY SCHLEY

quietly,” he said. “It generated a lot of tax base for the community,” by filling local hotel rooms and downtown restaurants.

“I bought tickets to a few of the events, and there were a lot of foreign languages being spoken,” Talmage continued. “People came from great distances.”

He also liked the fact that GourmetFest, which included wine seminars, cooking demonstrations, lunches and tastings, used various locations throughout town, including the event center at Seventh and Dolores, La Playa Carmel and the former Homescapes space in Carmel Plaza.

He said the city needs “events that are low key and take place below the radar,” and that occur during the off-season, not in the middle of summer.

Featuring local chefs as well as those from afar, the fest began with a kickoff at La Playa hotel Thursday night that included some pretty incredible food, like suckling pig, seared duck and Spanish jamon, and special wines, including Chateau Latour and Williams Selyem. Among the events Saturday was a wild mushroom hunt led by three expert mycologists who scoped out prime territory in Carmel Valley for chanterelles, mostly on wooded hillsides. After an hour of foraging, guests were treated to an impressive feast in the Hacienda at the Santa Lucia Preserve, a place normally off-limits to anyone except members and their guests. As is tradition for most, if not all, GourmetFest events, lunch started with glasses of Champagne Taittinger all around.

And on Sunday, many in the local culinary scene, as well as visitors, flocked to the closing Taste of the World. Filled with large potted trees, bar tables and lounge areas — as well as plenty of food and drink from Relais & Chateaux chefs and notable wineries — the afternoon event was a perfect end to the fest.

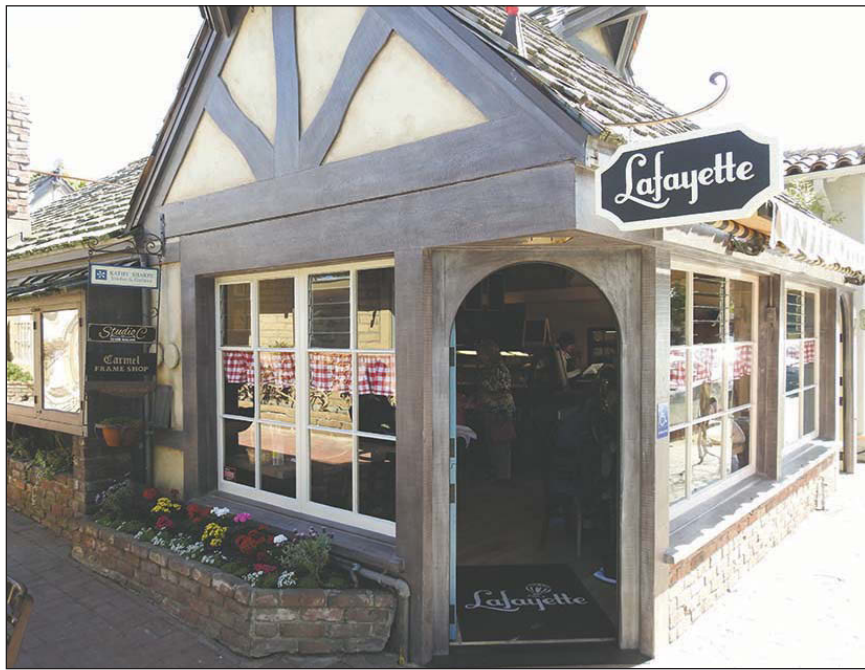

International Women’s Day

When Dawn Galante started Dawn’s Dream Winery, she wanted proceeds from the business to help support charities serving women and children, and on Saturday, March 5, she’ll host a special event in her tasting room at San Carlos and Seventh in downtown Carmel for International Women’s Day.

Throughout the afternoon, from 2 to 7 p.m., guests can taste Dawn’s Dream wines and shop in Rising International’s Global Pop-up Marketplace for fair-trade jewelry and fashion accessories handcrafted by female “survivors of extreme poverty, gender-based violence and human trafficking.”

At 4 p.m., there will be a panel discussion featuring Emmy-winning television producer and filmmaker Virginia

Worth a try

Food + Wine blogger Justine Sterling recently posted a bit of science that has red-wine lovers rejoicing: Drink more and lose weight, especially when you have a glass or two just before bedtime.

Their conclusions might be too good to be true, she said, but Washington State University scientists discovered that resveratrol, a polyphenol found in red wine, can help transform stubborn white fat into burnable brown fat, while a study conducted at Harvard "examined 20,000 women over a period of 13 years and found that those who drank two glasses of wine daily were 70 percent less likely to be overweight."

That could be because resveratrol is a natural appetite suppressant, so people who drink red wine in the evening are less likely to indulge in late-night snacking.

Other foods containing the polyphenol include blueberries, strawberries and grapes (of course). Not only do these foods not get you drunk, they haven't undergone the filtering and production process that removes many of the insoluble beneficial polyphenols from wine.

They also tend to be less fun to consume, and they never generate longwinded discussions of taste, body, aroma and terroir.

Get French for your Euros

Periodically, Calvin and Michele Wilkes at Fifi's Bistro Café, 1188 Forest Ave. in Pacific Grove, invite customers to use up their unwanted Euros and British pounds by dining in their restaurant or buying wine from their shop.

"We're offering an exchange rate that's better than the banks offer," they said, and for a limited time, they're trading $111 for 100 Euros, and $143 for 100 British pounds.

Fifi's is open for dinner nightly from 5 p.m., for lunch Monday and Friday, from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and for Sunday brunch from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Estéban specials

Estéban Restaurant in the Casa Munras hotel in Monterey is offering several weekly specials, presenting even more reasons for fans of Spanish food to go and taste what chef Tom Snyder is up to.

Adding itself to the list of local restaurants that entice guests with special half-price wine nights, Estéban is offering 50 percent off all wines on Mondays — but only through March 28, so people who have been curious to try certain wines on the list but haven't been willing to shell out the cash should act fast.

And every Tuesday night, Snyder's impressive paella will be the showpiece in a three-course dinner for two that also includes two tapas dishes to share and two house-made desserts. The cost is $52 for two people.

Wednesday night is $13 flight night, featuring three tastes of wines selected by Snyder. His lineups will focus on local and Spanish wines from regions like Ribera del Duero, Galicia and Monterey County.

And, all week long (except on holidays), Happy Hour runs from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., with deals on draft beer, house wine, sangria and Mojitos; and half-priced pintxos (small plates) from 5 to 6:30 p.m.

Estéban Restaurant is located in the hotel at 700 Munras Ave. in Monterey. Call (831) 324-6773 for reservations.

MCVGA research fund

The Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association has established the Rich Smith Memorial Research Fund "in celebration of the life and extraordinary accomplishments of Richard Smith," the late owner of Paraiso Vineyard and Valley Farm Management. A longstanding key figure in local viticulture, Smith "was a pioneer in the Monterey wine region and a national leader in the industry," before he died last December, just a couple of days after Christmas.

Founded in his name, the fund will help pay for research in the local wine industry, and the nonprofit MCVGA hopes to grow it into an endowment. Donations will go to the University of California's cooperative extension program in Monterey.

More information is available at montereywines.org/foundation or by calling (831) 375-9400.

Paella at Zeph's

Zeph's One Stop, located at 1366 South Main St. in Salinas, will host Twisted Roots winery and Mundaka chef Brandon Miller in celebration of National Paella Day Wednesday, March 9. From 5:30 to 6:30 p.m., Miller will demonstrate how he makes Spain's famous rice dish, which he'll also offer for tasting, and Twisted Roots will pour Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon, Petite Sirah and Old Vine Zinfandel.

The cost to attend is $10. For more information on events and special offers, visit www.zephsonestop.com or call (831) 757-3947.

■ ‘Thinking Out Loud’ at Cherry

Seeking to “transform the imagination and awareness” of local high school students and “foster the next generation of poets and artists,” the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts presents its annual “Thinking Out Loud” exhibit. The Cherry Center will be the site of an opening reception Saturday, March 5, from 3 to 5 p.m.

By calling attention to the creative talents of students — particularly those from disadvantaged households — the show aims to promote the arts in Monterey County schools. The exhibit will be juried by local art teachers.

The display continues through April 1. The Cherry Center is located at Guadalupe and Fourth. Call (831) 624-7491 or visit www.carlcherrycenter.org.

■ ‘Coastal Color’ and more

Sharing the spotlight with a downtown First Friday celebration, the Pacific Grove Art Center unveils five exhibits March 4 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Carmel Valley painter Sam Johnston presents a collection of “Local Landscapes and Seascapes.”

“These paintings represent an ongoing dialogue I have with the natural beauty of California’s central coast,” Johnston explained. “The purpose of each painting is to visually transport the viewer to that place, to experience the light, the colors, and the feeling of the air in each scene.”

The artists who rent studios inside the art center come together to offer a group show of their diverse work. Participating in the display are Julie Brown Smith, Sheila Delimont, Mark Farina, Barbara Furbush and 11 others.

Photographer Mahir Agha of Carmel Valley takes an otherworldly view of a seemingly ordinary plant in “Agave Terminus Splendor.”

A painter for more than 60 years, Maralyn Miller celebrates “Coastal Color” in her display. “Revealing the inner essence of a thing by painting its outward appearance is the adventure of a lifetime,” said Miller of her artistic journey.

Also, a group of kids ages 9 to 14 who study with Pacific Grove painter Dante Rondo share their latest creations.

The exhibits will continue through April 28. The art center is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. Call (831) 375-2208.

■ ‘Let your imagination soar’

The Carmel Valley Art Association is seeking entries for its first Community Art Contest, which happens Sunday, April 17. The event is co-sponsored by the Carmel Valley Association, a local nonprofit better known for its activism on local land use issues.

“We would like you to celebrate with us the rural character of this area,” reads an announcement for the competition. “Any medium, including painting, drawing, photography, video, collage, mixed media, sculpture and garden art, is possible for submission. Let your imagination soar.”

The deadline for submissions is March 31. For more details, call (831) 659-2441.

■ Lafayette opens

Lafayette, the restaurant that replaced Em Le’s on Dolores Street in downtown Carmel, had a soft opening Sunday and enjoyed its first official day of business Tuesday, keeping busy with customers at tables in its fire-warmed space inside, and at al fresco tables tucked into the walkway just off the sidewalk.

A collaboration between the folks at the popular Lafayette bakery in the Barnyard and Yafa restaurant in downtown Carmel, the restaurant underwent a major overhaul that took several months and involved stripping out everything from the old establishment.

In addition to selling Lafayette pastries and some items to go, the restaurant offers a breakfast/lunch menu with several crepes, two versions of French Toast, omelets, Croque Monsieur and Croque Madame, salads and “potato galettes,” as well as pasta dishes.

Considering the place is brand new, it’s understandable it still has some kinks to work out in its dishes and delivery. The Santa Cruz Crepe of ham, mushroom and cheese, with an egg on top, was quite tasty, though dried out at the edges, and the Salted Savory pain perdu (French Toast) was rich and eggy, and benefited from the addition of maple syrup. The Cobb Salad left a bit to be desired, due to its small size and lack of key Cobb ingredients, like hard boiled egg and avocado.

The restaurant is also working to get its liquor program going. This week, no alcohol was being sold there.

■ Swingin' in Monterey

Celebrating the many forms of music that led to the creation of jazz as we know it today, the Jazz Bash by the Bay returns Friday, Saturday and Sunday, March 4-6, to Portola Hotel and Spa in Monterey.

From swing and ragtime, to zydeco and gypsy jazz, the 36th annual bash provides a showcase for an eclectic lineup of performers, including The Royal Society Jazz Orchestra, The Uptown Lowdown Jazz Band, The High Sierra Jazz Band, The Yve Evans Trio, The Carl Sonny Leland Trio and many more.

"It's music for all ages," said Mary Jane Rogers, one of about 150 festival volunteers. "It's vibrant, old-time jazz."

The festival will also provide a stage for the jazz musicians of tomorrow.

"We really try to promote youth at our festival," explained another volunteer, Rebecca Fitch. "All four of my kids played at the festival, and now they're grown up and working as volunteers."

To get into the spirit of the early 20th century, attendees are encouraged to wear period clothing. Free swing dance lessons will be offered throughout the festival.

Letting you do what you already can

WHEN CITY hall gives you a building permit, reviews your architectural drawings or decides to let you tear down an old home, is it giving you a benefit? Or are those kinds of permits more akin to certificates that you've complied with restrictions on something you already had the right to do?

The answer to this question was hotly debated in land-use law for decades, and wasn't finally resolved until it reached the U.S. Supreme Court in the famous 1986 case, Nollan v. California Coastal Commission.

On one side of the debate were the no-growth advocates, environmentalists and other pro-regulation activists who tend to see government rule-making as the solution to almost every human problem, if not the source of every human right, especially where land uses are concerned.

In California, the leading proponent of this school of thought was former California Coastal Commission executive director Peter Douglas, who ruled the agency for decades based on the principle that nobody had the right to build anything along the coast without the commission's permission.

The way Douglas saw the world, whenever someone was granted a permit by the coastal commission, he thereby became the recipient of a government-bestowed gift — a principle that was important because, if a permit constituted a gift, conditions of almost any imaginable kind could be attached to it — even things like being forced to give the public control of a big piece of your property.

Based on that principle, many hundreds of property owners along the beach were forced to "donate" public access to their beaches in exchange for building permits — a deal that was a classic quid pro quo, in Douglas' view.

On the other side were civil libertarians who pointed out that the "right" to build on one's property dated back to prehistoric times, and therefore predated every form of government invented by man — including the U.S. and California constitutions.

Sure, people on the civil liberties side of the debate said, the government had the power to impose reasonable public-interest restrictions on the right to build — no nuclear reactors on earthquake faults or porn shops next to preschools, for example — but such restrictions were limitations on pre-existing rights, not the granting of new privileges.

When the Nollan case reached the Supreme Court, the court ruled that the libertarians were correct, and that, as the court put it, "the right to build on one's own property — even though its exercise can be subjected to legitimate permitting requirements — cannot remotely be described as a 'governmental benefit.'"

The significance in the Nollan case was that the Nollan family wasn't forced to grant a public access easement over its beach in Ventura County in exchange for getting a building permit — and neither has anybody else who applied for a coastal development permit anywhere in California since, unless their project somehow created a special burden on existing public access to the beach.

Because the High Court rejected Peter Douglas' view of what a building permit represented, the Nollan decision radically changed the way the Coastal Commission did business.

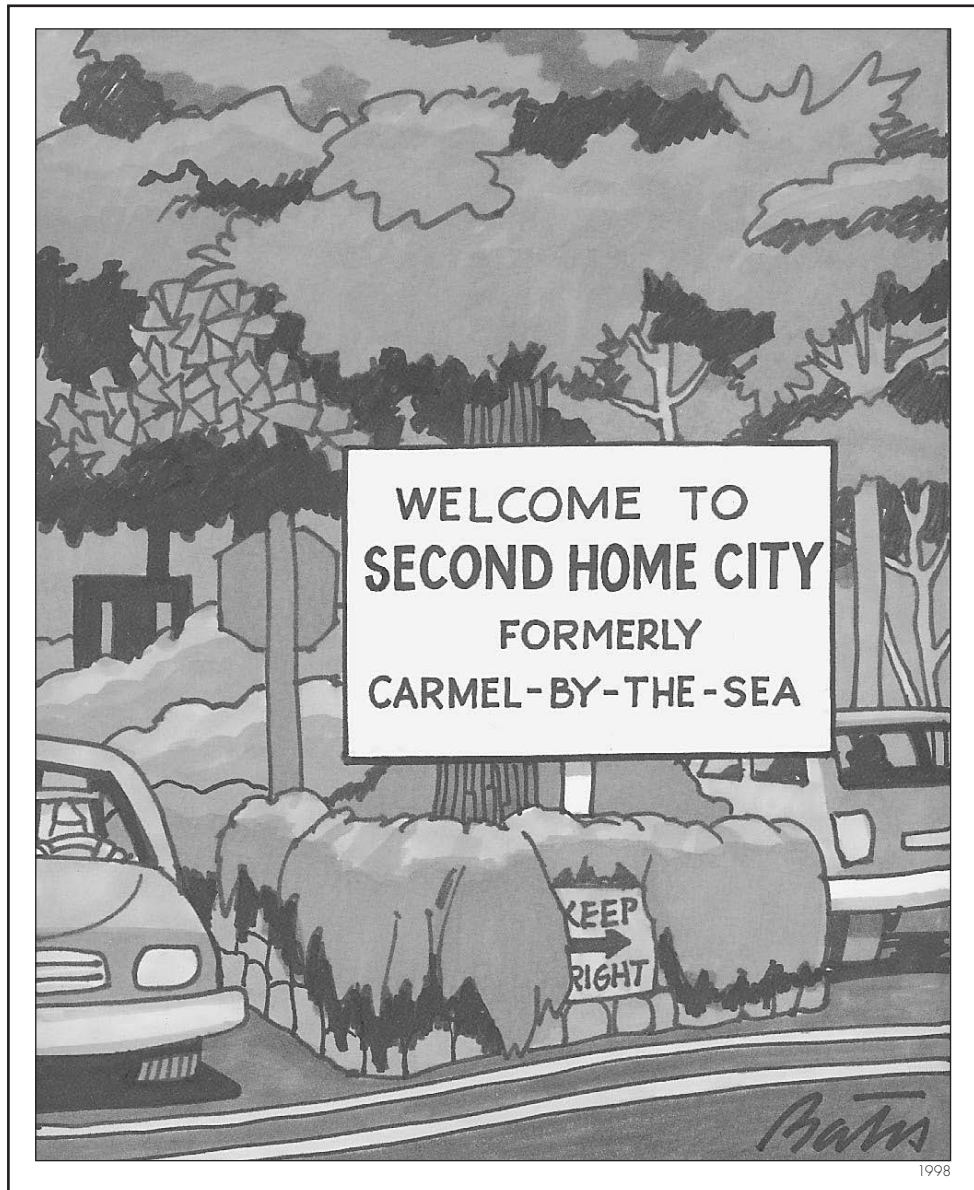

However, the decision meant many other things as well, and should have been brought up during the city council's meeting this week on the supposed "subsidy" the City of Carmel is handing out when it issues permits without making applicants pay the permits' full costs.

Sure, some government permits are a benefit to the people who receive them — things such as a permit to block a road for a special event, or use a public building for a meeting, or even to have a police officer provide security for a private function.

But many other things listed by the consultant this week as "subsidies" of "benefits" handed out to the public are no such thing. Building permits, use permits, sign permits, design review, plan checks, etc., etc., etc. — all these permits are simply restrictions placed by government on things every human is born with the right to do — have a home, operate a business, feed his family, etc.

Those permits aren't for the applicants' benefit, they are for the public's benefit, and the public should bear most, if not all, of the cost.

Time for 'recall'?

Dear Editor,

After the Jason Stilwell/Susan Paul terminations, there was much discussion by residents of our little village to recall the council. It would not include Steve Dallas, who had been on the council four months and was not involved in the rest of the council's neglect and incompetence.

However, the mayor and council members were given another chance with the hiring of Doug Schmitz. Residents were tired and were hopeful that they would get good governance. And we knew we would have our chance of recall at the next election.

Now is the time to "recall" Ken Talmage, who is the only incumbent up for reelection and running for mayor. He has been on the council for nine years and touts his professional skills in finance.

He obviously did not use these skills in approving contracts and payments that resulted in over $1 million wasted with no deliverance of service and accountability.

With Steve Dallas as mayor and three new council members (one being Richard Kreitman) we voters get a chance to get it right this time. Please join me in voting for Steve Dallas.

Carolina Bayne, Carmel

Talmage for mayor

Dear Editor,

I am voting for Ken Talmage for Mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea. He is someone of whom we can be proud to lead our village. We all know that Ken has the technical and professional ability to do the job, but as important is that he has the kindness of heart, the love for community, and deep historic knowledge of city government we need for our mayor.

Watching Ken interact at council meetings with staff, public and fellow council members assures me that he has the know-how to take the reins and move us forward competently and wisely.

Barbara Livingston, Carmel

In support of Richards

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my support of Bobby Richards, candidate for Carmel-by-the-Sea City Council. Voters may not be aware of Bobby's extensive "behind the scenes" involvement and contributions to many Carmel events and activities. He was responsible for adding the city to one of the Big Sur Marathon's runner pickup sites, making the city of Carmel a desirable loca-

Sculptor pursues the perfect within the imperfect

AFTER HIS mother died, at 97, abstract artist Peter Partch was going through her things in storage when he came upon nearly 400 dolls.

Having grown up poor, with just one doll, she had spent her life, it seems, compensating.

asked me if I was interested in sculpture. He pointed to a bench, showed me his tools, and offered to get me started.”

That week, unfortunately, the studio burned down and Newell left the country, which also left Partch without a mentor.

But during his first year of high school at Monterey High, Partch’s art teacher told him about a very skilled artist, living with his wife in a treehouse in Carmel Valley, who gave summer art workshops. Partch begged his father to take him there.

“That was how I met Marian and Alex Weygers,” says Partch, “and that was the day my life changed. Or

By LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

Looking at all those dolls, in their various stages of disrepair, Partch decided to take a departure from the stone, marble and bronze sculptures for which he is known, to create a multi-media installation using the dolls.

“This project opened up a new territory for me,” says Partch. “It was a simply spontaneous process of assembling random things, with no real sense of what it would be. It was pretty freeing.”

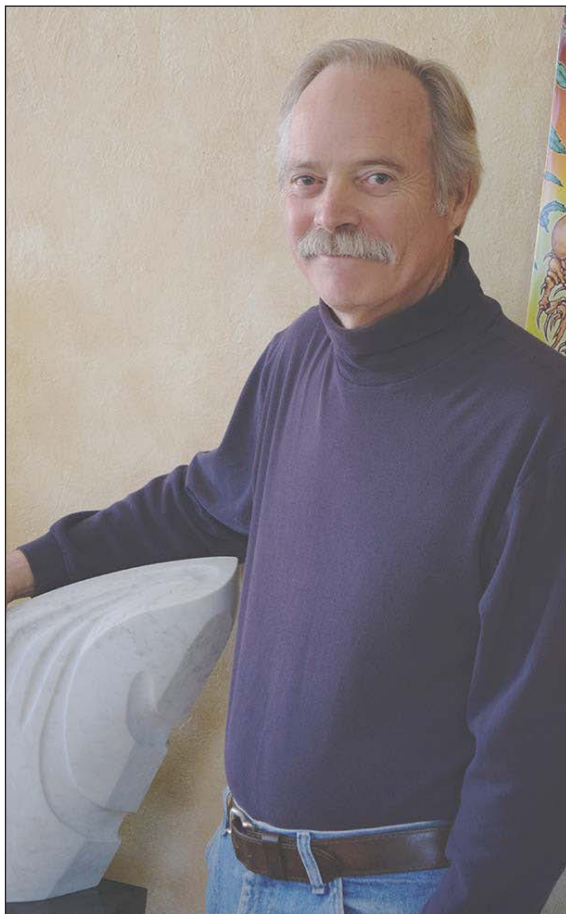

Today, some 100 dolls are climbing a metal tomato trellis wrapped in Christmas lights, in the yard of his Pacific Grove home — not exactly what you might call a traditional sculpture, but significant nonetheless.

Partch became interested in art as a teenager, growing up in Seaside. His father, a bit of a Bohemian, had built a house there around 1940, using old windows and other scavenged stuff. Partch’s first art inspiration was really his older sister, Penelope Partch, who is an established Carmel Valley painter.

When he was 14, Partch started visiting the legendary Gordon Newell’s sculpture studio on Cannery Row to sketch. The seasoned sculptor, whose Carrera marble butterfly is a landmark at Lovers Point in Pacific Grove, always took time to look at the boy’s drawings.

“One day,” says Partch, “Gordon

Current photos sought to celebrate centennial

By THE CARMEL CENTENNIAL COMMITTEE

YOU MAY have a 2016 image the 100 Photos Project Committee could include in Carmel-by-the-Sea’s time capsule, to be buried in early 2017 and opened 50 or 100 years later.

Or you may not yet have taken that perfect photo — but the committee will be collecting images through December that depict Carmel’s uniqueness and all that is remarkable about the town, which this year celebrates its centennial.

“From the details of an interesting fence to the sweeping view of Carmel Beach, we will consider whatever Carmel-by-the-Sea inspires you,” said Peter Hiller, project chair. “We will be looking for a variety of images as the photos are intended to tell the story of present-year Carmel.”

To be considered, the photographs — color or black and white — should be from 2016, unmounted, on photo paper, and 4-by-6 inches in size. The public, of all ages, is invited to participate, and submit just one photo each.

Photographs may be submitted at one of the drop boxes located at city hall or the circulation desks at either Harrison or the Park branch library. A brief description of the photo, the name of the photographer and contact instructions are requested on the back of each photo. Special writing pencils will be provided at drop box locations to ensure writing won’t damage other images submitted.

The photographs will be scanned at the library’s history department before being properly sealed for inclusion in the time capsule. While every effort will be made to include all submitted photographs, space in the time capsule may limit the number to 100. There is neither a submission cost, nor will images will be returned.

For more information, contact Hiller at (831) 624-3284.

Speaking of the time capsule, in this space last month, a call was made for commemorative items in general — not exclusively photos — that also represent Carmel in 2016. Contact Merv Sutton at mervinsutton@att.net or Bill Godwin at bgodwinn@gmail.com for more information if you have an item (non-photo) to contribute.

Special Events this month

Several special events are scheduled for March including, for its 20th year, an annual family favorite — “Pancake Breakfast in Bunnyland.” Staged by the Carmel Host Lions Club, the event will be held from 8:30 a.m. to noon on Saturday, March 26, at Devendorf Park.

Mr. Bunny will be on hand throughout the morning, which will begin with a hearty breakfast of pancakes, scrambled eggs, sausage, orange juice and coffee. Breakfast is $23 for a family of four, $8 for adults and $5 for children 12 years and younger. After breakfast, the kids will want to visit Bunnyland for face painting, carnival games and photos with Mr. Bunny. Passports to Bunnyland are $5 (breakfast not included).

Erin Gafill, great granddaughter of Frank and Jane Powers, is this month’s speaker in the ongoing Centennial “Reliving Our History” Series at Carpenter Hall, sponsored by the Carmel Residents Association. The talk is scheduled for 5 p.m. on Thursday, March 17. Frank was founder and president of Carmel Development Company, and along with J. Frank Devendorf was responsible for the early development of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

A historical exhibit “Then/Now — Carmel” debuts on Thursday, March 31 (noon to 3 p.m.) at The First Murphy House, Sixth and Lincoln. The exhibit, sponsored by Carmel Heritage Society, also will be available April 5-9.

Other events this month include: Saturday, March 12, 6 p.m., Quail Lodge — Pac Rep Theatre’s Bohemian Revel.

Saturday, March 12, 8 p.m., Sunset Center — Chamber Music Monterey Bay, The Morgenstern Piano Trio.

Saturday, March 19, 8 p.m., and Sunday, March 20, 3 p.m., Sunset Center — Monterey Symphony, Concert IV.

The Centennial website — www.CarmelCentennial.com — features a list of all the related events, a history timeline, FAQs and contact information.

I’m happy to be working in Carmel again.

Bobby was a founding member of Run in the Name of Love, a popular Carmel event, and has been a committed contributor on the organizational committee for the past six years. Bobby also helped to bring visitors to Carmel-by-the-Sea by hosting an annual Carmel running retreat with Jeff Galloway, an Olympian, author, and running-coach. This event brings guests to the city during January, generally a slow month for businesses. His service on the community activities and cultural commission is further testimony to his involvement, interest, and concern for Carmel-by-the-Sea. Bobby would bring his creative ideas, youthful enthusiasm, and responsible commitment to the council. Bobby has a sincere desire to serve and to protect the town in which he is extremely involved and is a homeowner and business owner, making him an outstanding candidate for city council.

'No ethics'

Dear Editor,

Having read last weeks article about planning commissioner Ian Martin and his little episode with the city, and the knowledge I have of the workings within the City of Carmel, I felt compelled to write this.

It is obvious to me that Mr. Martin has no ethics, honesty or responsibility to accept that what he and others did was wrong, but yet, he still manages to blame city hall and the police chief/city administrator for his plight! Really? You've got to be kidding!

You took down the banner Mr. Martin. You gave it to another person. You did this ... no one else is to blame but you.

You could have notified city hall of your dissatisfaction of the banner's placement, you could have contacted the American Legion to help you in notifying city hall of your apparent "insult."

But no, you chose to remove that banner. You chose to do that. No one else.

Was the banner placed in an appropriate place? Probably not. Did it go through the process of approval? Yes. Was the approval correct? Probably not, and especially on a respected memorial so visible in our city.

Nonetheless, you chose your course of action. You did not take the banner down and return it to city hall with a complaint. You chose to avoid the potential confrontation. You chose this path, sir.

If anyone else, let's say from any other community, were to have removed that banner I'm sure you would want that person held accountable ... but in your own self-righteous mind, you feel you're above the law and any responsibility! Your hypocrisy knows no bounds sir!

Well, Mr. Martin, you're not above the law! Not only should you have to pay the fine and restitution to the city, but you should be fired from the planning commission and banned from any other future commissions. You apparently lack the kind of ethics and honesty necessary to represent this city. As a city commissioner, you are held to a higher standard ... and you have failed to live up to that standard!

The district attorney chose to not prosecute this matter any further in the interest of justice. The underlying meaning here is that the city should deal with jerks like you on its own!

This city has endured its darkest hours the past several years. Poor decisions, back-door dealings and very, very bad management. There is no room for anyone to remain within the city government that adheres to this kind of deception. (And by the way, Ken Talmage is also no exception ... a fresh mayor and council are warranted!)

So, that's my opinion, for what it's worth!

Be careful of who you vote for mayor, be cautious of who the council appoints to commissions, tread carefully, everyone, and vote so you can once again achieve a city government that treats you honestly, fairly and with an ethical attitude.

Tim Meroney,

didacy, and with good reason. Bobby knows how the city works and how to get things done. He has also shown considerable initiative to promote the city. He is the clear choice of people who want to see Carmel move forward.

Tony Seton, Carmel

Really Carmel?

Dear Editor,

On the July 10, 2015, front page of The Pine Cone, one of the headlines read, "City council wants parking kiosks gone by Aug. 1." What a brave move. If only we knew how they were approved in the first place.

And as for all the "whining" about tasting rooms. Thanks to Ashley Hobson, Keith Paterson and Jan Reimers for taking a bit of a stand against the local C.A.V.E people. A certain resident should stop "interpreting" and get some facts.

As for the commissioners who "put a lot of time and effort into developing its policies for approving tasting rooms" ... all you're doing is trying to set up a business to fail. The only vote against was because it might "provoke competition among wine tasting rooms." And of course we can't have that, now can we?

Just saying.

Jack Pappadeas, Carmel

White sand will be back

Dear Editor,

Quite some time ago the city decided to limit all fires at the beach to the strip south of 10th Avenue. This was because normal winter wave action washes away all evidence of beach fires at this narrow end of the beach. The white sand is carried off and stored in the winter just off shore. The black sand you see now is not due to fires; it is composed of heavy mineral sand, magnetite and garnet. The clear white sand will return with the smaller summer waves, as it has done for tens of thousands of years.

Roy Thomas, Carmel

'Voters still in charge'

Dear Editor,

Unite Here's statement last week about Project Bella was incorrect on the law and the facts. The use permit process requires complete environmental review under the California Environmental Quality Act and noticed public hearings before the city's decision-making bodies. The citizens of Pacific Grove and its elected officials as well as numerous agencies will be fully apprised of the environmental impacts of a hotel before any decision is made to move forward with this hotel.

The Project Bella initiative is before the voters solely because of a prior voter-approved initiative more than 29 years ago prohibiting a hotel use at the currently developed American Tin Cannery. The voters of Pacific Grove will either vote for or against an amendment to the city's zoning code to allow hotel use at the site. This is not, as Unite Here indicates, equivalent to an approval of any application to build a hotel without environmental review.

What United Here and its lawyer unfortunately hide from the voters is that the citizens of Pacific Grove and their elected officials are still in charge of the use permit process and the environmental review associated with that process, and nothing will ever be built there without environmental review.

Project Bella will be good for Pacific Grove producing new revenues from transient occupancy tax, sales tax and property taxes!

Renee Crocker, Pacific Grove

Scalia not an 'originalist'

Dear Editor,

Your editorial "Understanding Antonin Scalia" failed to consider the gap between his rhetoric and the way he acted as a judge. The editorial also confused two different terms that have different meanings; namely, "originalism" and "judicial restraint."

"Originalism" is one approach used to interpret the Constitution. Scalia followed a version of originalism, which proposed that the meaning of the Constitution was to be found in the historical practices and understanding at the time the provision was adopted. This method is readily subject to manipulation to reach the result that the judge personally desires.

Judicial restraint is a theory of constitutional jurisprudence advocating deference to the executive and legislative branches of government and restraint from going beyond interpreting provisions of the Constitution to creating new ones.

In his speeches and books, Scalia claimed that he believed in and practiced judicial restraint. In fact, Scalia was an ardent judicial activist who was very willing to create new constitutional provisions and to overturn laws and executive actions by declaring them unconstitutional.

Scalia used the method of originalism to conceal his judicial activism by claiming that he was following the original understanding of the Constitution and to hide the fact that he was simply implementing his personal conservative ideology.

There are a plethora of specific examples of his aggressive judicial activism. He voted to invalidate key provisions of the Voting Rights Act, struck down laws restricting campaign spending, laws prohibiting the possession of guns near schools, laws to protect victims of gender violence, federal laws requiring background checks before issuing permits for firearms. On the other hand, he used the same originalism to express deference to legislation and executive acts when he wanted to uphold them; such as, laws denying marriage equality and restricting abortion.

Scalia also created new constitutional rights, such as, the right for corporations to spend unlimited amounts of money in elections and the right to possess firearms unconnected to militia service. He made corporations persons, and created the ability of governments to give unlimited aid to parochial schools.

Antonin Scalia created his own brand of conservative judicial activism. Due in no small part to Scalia, the era of judicial restraint is over. This judicial activism on both sides of the political spectrum is the reason why the fight over Scalia's successor is so important and will be so hard fought.

Athlete and entrepreneur shifts from snowboarding to surfing

By LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

BEV SANDERS stood behind the bar, watching a guy draw something that resembled a rocket on a cocktail napkin.

Living in Tahoe, where she taught snow skiing by day and tended bar at night, she was working, and he was drinking and drawing. When she asked about his art, he told her he was designing something called a “snowboard,” an innovative way to slide down the mountain on a single, short, wide ski.

A life-long ski enthusiast, Sanders went to see snowboard prototypes the guy was building in his garage. She quickly found herself smitten with the board and the boy.

“The snowboard started our romance and our partnership,” says Sanders, “both of which continue to this day.”

In 1982, Chris and Bev Sanders, with partner Earl Zeller, founded the Avalanche Snowboards company in South Lake Tahoe. The Sanders continued to develop their business and their snowboards until 1995, when they sold the company. They stayed on for two more years, ultimately leaving the company in 1997, when they turned their attention from snowboarding to surfboarding.

“I had become frustrated, working in a man’s world, going up against the grain, and fighting for women’s recognition in snowboarding,” Sanders says. “Chris and I took a vacation to Maui, where I learned to surf, and it completely changed my life. Totally infatuated with the sport, I wanted to make it part of my life.”

That same year, Sanders started “Las Olas,” a company that creates surf safaris for women.

Sanders saw the name — which means “the waves” in Spanish — as a beautiful, feminine word in a beautiful language. Also, it holds a connection to the coastal community in Mexico, just north of Puerto Vallarta, where she hosts most of her surf safaris.

It is a place she protects like a secret, where the surf break is easy, the water is warm, and the people are welcoming. It makes for a great place, says Sanders, to teach beginning longboard surfers.

“In the beginning, I didn’t really know how to surf well, and I didn’t speak Spanish,” she says. “Now, I speak Spanish, badly, but I surf well.”

The Sanders bought their own place in the community, which serves as a kind of clubhouse, just steps away from the surf break, where they also house all the surfing equipment. Surf safari participants also stay together in what Bev calls “amazing super-organically built” villas.

“When I saw this place, it inspired me to put this whole company together,” says Sanders. “We’ve had women break down in tears when they arrive because it is so beautiful, and they are so far from the lives they know. It’s a big deal to leave their job and their family, and give this a go. So we do a lot of hand holding, as we teach women to surf in a no-pressure, nonjudgmental, warm-water environment.”

They even meet at the airport

It takes hard work and dedication to be vintage when you're under 40

By ELAINE HESSER

WHEN JULIET Gonzalez and Melissa Montes bought Vintage Property Management in 2006, they feared they already had two strikes against them. First, at ages 24 and 34, they thought their high-end clients might think they were too young, and second, neither one of them was Rosemarie Carter, the headstrong, longtime owner of the firm, which has its offices on Dolores Street just off Seventh Avenue.

Gonzalez had worked for Carter for some time, helping her manage vacation and long-term rentals in exclusive parts of the Monterey Peninsula. Gonzalez had a degree in public relations from San Diego State University and another in communications from CSUMB, and her goal was to work for a professional sports team. She was on her third interview with the Oakland Raiders when Carter — who was in her 80s — suddenly told her she wanted her to take over the company.

Gonzalez wasn't sure, but her mom saw a chance to keep her close to home and encouraged her to go for it.

"You'll never have to leave again," her mother told her.

'All or nothing'

Montes was a friend of Gonzalez's who had been a prison guard for 15 years. Her husband, who was older, was about to retire from the prison system and wanted Montes to find a different line of work. She had experience managing her own vacation rentals in Arizona, so joining forces with Gonzalez seemed logical.

After talking it over, the two decided to buy the business, and in Gonzalez's words, they "hocked their houses" to pay for it. They hired an attorney and began negotiations with Carter. The process proved to be anything but straightforward.

Gonzalez said that at first, the formidable Ms. Carter tried to insist on keeping a hand in running the business, but Gonzalez and Montes drew an unambiguous line — it was all or nothing. Carter eventually acquiesced. Then, on New Year's Eve in 2005 when they were set to close, the attorney they were working with was fired by his firm.

Carter took that as some sort of sign and tried to pull out of the deal, while Montes and Gonzalez frantically cast about for a replacement lawyer. Incredibly, they found one that same day, convinced Carter to stick with their agreement, and closed on Jan. 17, 2006.

While Carter technically no longer had a say in the business, her apartment was across the street from Vintage Property's offices, and she kept an eye on her baby until she died in 2011. Gonzalez said Carter called daily, making sure her old clients were still satisfied.

"We had to give her that respect," said Gonzalez of their regular reports to their former boss. Meanwhile, Gonzalez and Montes tried to do things they thought would make them look older, like donning glasses, dyeing their hair darker and wearing "comfortable shoes."

All kinds of sports cars

After the sale, a few people cancelled their management agreements outright, and some prophets of doom forecast the firm's demise, but "the girls" — as they came to be known — were undaunted. They offered short-term contracts and renegotiated commissions so clients could see they were serious about their work.

Sometimes, they just reassured people that "Rosemarie is watching over us," as she quite literally was, from her perch across the street.

For all their efforts to look like they knew what they were doing, there was a bit of a learning curve — especially starting in 2008, when they added estate management to their portfolio of services. To counteract the effects the recession had on the vacation rental business, they reached out to people who owned vacation homes in Carmel and Pebble Beach.

In addition to looking after the multi-million-dollar estates, Montes and Gonzalez said they set out to provide "one-stop shopping." When the owners are in town, they book services like pet sitting or massages for them, and even set up catered parties during events like the Concours, so the owner can just show up and play host for the week. They also take cars left on site in for service when necessary.

That last bit proved to be surprisingly challenging. "We've learned how to drive all kinds of sports cars," said Gonzalez, confiding that in the beginning, she watched YouTube videos to learn how different makes and models worked. Once, when she couldn't figure out how to open the door on a Tesla, she ended up climbing through an open window.

Now, 10 years after buying the business, they've figured things out and made the it their own. They're active in the community and use local vendors and small businesses to meet their clients' needs. When not at work, Gonzalez enjoys traveling and Montes likes spending time with her husband and her two dogs, Chewy and Rocco.

While they're not vintage yet, they've definitely hit their stride.

surf safari in Mexico, or the investment banker who finally allowed herself to become a writer," says Sanders, "I think of what we're doing and how we are inspiring change in women's lives."

Chris and Bev Sanders moved to Carmel-by-the-Sea in 2004. "I came here once and fell in love to the point that I told my husband I was going to stay on to check it out," she says. "Then I called and told him we just had to move here. It's the most wonderful place in the world. The appeal is not just the ocean and the trees, but the way beauty is held up here. Carmel has a high standard of how it should look and how it should be."

Sanders does surf off the coast of the Monterey Peninsula, but finds the water quite cold in comparison to "las olas" of Mexico.

Nearly 20 years after its inception, Las Olas has been featured in articles within more than 30 periodicals; among them, "The Oprah Magazine," in which a surf safari participant said, "I felt like I had just gone to church, and I'm feeling fortified and more than a little worshipful." Shape Magazine called Las Olas, "'One of our favorite active camps for grown-ups.'"

Sanders, who works with an all-female crew, employs "world-class" female surf instructors from Mexico, the Monterey Peninsula and Canada. On staff, she has sister-in-law Jackie Sanders, and Carmel native Amanda LeVett, an experienced surfer who runs "Mas Olas," the company's higher-level surfing safari. The only male involved is Sanders' husband, Chris, who serves as operations manager.

"Surfing is a sport about style and grace," says Sanders. "Women's longboarding is amazing, and watching it is like watching ballet. Men just can't move like women can. I hold strongly to the feminine look and appeal of this, but my main focus is for everyone to surf and have fun."

maybe began. They opened the door, and I saw the north light coming in on Alex's stone sculptures. It blew my mind. Seeing that quality of light on stone, I knew this was what I was meant to do."

Alexander Weygers was a Dutch-American artist, equally renowned as a sculptor, painter, print-maker, blacksmith, carpenter, philosopher, engineer and author. He and Marian moved to Carmel Valley in the early 1960s, where he became known for forging his own tools, and teaching apprentices about the artistry and lifestyle of the artist.

"Alex had me begin, by taking his Theory of Form class and learning how to make tools," Partch said. "His training was very philosophical as he taught me how to say what I wanted to say, in the third dimension. Over a period of about six years, I was his apprentice, spending the summers working with the Weygers."

Partch still has the tools Weygers taught him to make, and embraces the importance of being able to make them.

"Alex insisted that I learn to make my own tools before I learned to carve stone," says Partch.

He went on to work with legendary sculptor and Disney artist Wah Ming Chang in Carmel Valley, becoming his assistant for more than 25 years.

Unsure of his contribution

As Partch worked alongside Chang for hours in his studio, day after day, Chang said not a word. Unable to read him, Partch felt nervous and unsure of his contribution. One day, during lunch, Chang said, "I have known many, many interesting people who were very special. But I've discovered I really don't have much to say."

Over the years, Partch took art classes at Monterey Peninsula College, which gave him an idea. With such a fabulous foundry in Monterey, why not establish a sculpture program at the college to teach artists to carve, cast and create patinas? He presented the idea to Gary Quinones, director of the art department, who said what he really wanted was someone who could teach a stone sculpture class.

"This," said Partch, "is what I love more than anything."

Partch has since taught sculpture classes at MPC for 18 years. His wife, Penny Partch, has been teaching in the English department and humanities division for 22 years.

"Peter lives and breathes art," says Penny. "His sketching materials are seldom far from reach. Ongoing sculpture projects fill the studio and garden, and weekly sojourns to the Pacific Grove Library result in armfuls of art and sculpture books to enjoy and share with students."

The Partches actually met at Monterey High, where he was two years ahead of her. "I noticed her," says Partch, "because she is very beautiful. We met again, years later, at Mission Ranch, and the rest is history."

The couple wed in 1981, with rings Partch sculpted. Their history includes two sons, now grown, both of whom have become artists in the San Francisco Bay area.

"After all this time, something Alex Weygers said continues to resonate with me in a profound way," says Partch, "and I use it in the instruction of my students and my sons. He said, 'Peter, it is important in your art studies to seek out the perfection that lies hidden within the imperfect.' He felt the pursuit of perfection leaves out the human handmade quality, leaving humanity in danger of losing its human character. I believe he was right."

counts, and there are more than 30 volunteers who can come by and change a light bulb, pull some weeds or even help with computer glitches.

Porter said the program is modeled on the original virtual village, organized in Beacon Hill, Boston, and is one of at least 200 such programs in the country. Monterey Bay Village has about 100 members, and Porter said helping them continue to live independently is something she's passionate about.

"It's good to contribute to society as a whole," she said of her job.

She hopes the community will continue to grow. "We would love to expand," she said. "We all need a village. That's the truth of the matter."

Another not-so-minor problem for some people is getting decent meals. For married couples, often one spouse does most of the cooking, and if that person dies first, the widow or widower may feel they're stuck forging a new relationship with Chef Boyardee and Marie Callendar to get by.

A better way

Viveca Lohr, executive director of Meals on Wheels, said that it doesn't have to be that way. The organization delivers 280 meals a day, five days a week, and serves hundreds more at senior and community centers around the Peninsula. Lohr's celebrating 30 years there this coming November, and is one of only two executive directors in the organization's history.

Lohr said she started out as a volunteer shortly after moving here to be with her soon-to-be husband. "I was chomping at the bit with no job," she said, "I thought I may as well do something with my time." She was hired as food service manager after six months, and later became the assistant director. When the founder, Sally Griffin, stepped down as executive director, Lohr was ready to take over.

Looking back, Lohr said she'd tell her younger self to "take all of those young, idealistic views and put them in your back pocket. Then prepare to be malleable, flexible and open-minded."

After 30 years, she still believes people are basically good. "So much out there is negative, but I think kindness is innate in most people. That's huge and it carries me through," she said.

Lohr would love to have more volunteers and serve even more people. She said she believes there are seniors who don't take advantage of the program because they think of it as accepting charity, but they should know that donations for meals are always welcome.

Staying at home during the end of life is something most people prefer not to think about, but for the terminally ill, it can be important for their morale and comfort. That's where Central Coast Visiting Nurses Association and Hospice come in. Jane Russo administers the hospice program and also works as director of business development for the VNA.

Russo, who's been with the organization for five years, said hospice is a philosophy of care. "We want to bring end-of-life resolution to a patient wherever they call home. It really is about living that last journey." She said she believes hospice is "very underutilized" in this community, and drew a parallel between dying and other life transitions.

She said that when a woman gives birth, for example, there are baby showers and gifts, and friends and family come to visit and help out. But at the end of life, when similar support is needed, people don't want to acknowledge what's going on. "There's a fear of dying, and a fear of giving up," she said.

While many people think of "going to hospice," it's much more often the case that they stay in their homes. Russo said that hospice care is usually 100 percent covered by Medicare or Medicaid and provides psychological, social and physical support. Patients can keep their own doctors, and the organization provides home health aides, who help with daily activities like bathing and cleaning. Chaplains and medical social workers who can assist in end-of-life planning are available as well.

In addition to over 100 employees, Russo said there are about 70 volunteers, who can run errands, pick up groceries or give families some much-needed break time.

The organization also works with doctors to help them learn how to talk about death and dying. "The interaction with physicians and their acknowledging what we did for their patients is rewarding," she said.

While it may not seem likely, Russo said she finds the work fulfilling and even uplifting. "When patients and their families call back and appreciate what we do, it's very satisfying," she said.

'When patients and their families appreciate what we do, it's very satisfying'

"CARMEL LEGENDS"

Everybody knows that Del Monte is the oldest golf course west of the Mississippi, actually dating from 1897. But can you guess the second oldest in this area? Pebble Beach? Cypress Point? No, that honor belongs to the CARMEL GOLF CLUB, a nine hole links measuring 2112 yards, spread over the dunes of Carmel Point. Its club house stood on a rise at what is now 14th Ave. and San Antonio, and it is still there! It's a small, shingled building, now used as a guest house by descendants of the founders, Philip and Laura Wilson. The course was opened a hole at a time in 1912, and the first official meeting was held Nov. 20 of that year at the Pine Inn. Memberships were $20 a year, green fees 50¢ a day. The land was owned by the Carmel Development Company, which assured the Club by written contract that it "would not be sold in lots or otherwise till after the year 1915." Among the members was Dr. Clappett, which brings us up to date. The Club expired around 1920, and today nearly 300 houses stand on its abandoned fairways. Think what might have been!

Pacific Grove: Male Ransford resident came into the lobby to report that his license plate was either lost or stolen. He stated he drove his silver 2012 Nissan Frontier (pickup) to Fort Ord yesterday, and when he returned outside, he noticed that his Purple Heart front license plate was missing off the front bumper of his vehicle. He went into the DMV, and they encouraged him to file a report. He had no further action and asked to retain the back license plate until he was reissued another set of license plates.

Pacific Grove: Male and his family were riding a four-wheeled bike surrey on the bike trail at Oceanview and Eardley. They attempted to travel between two metal barrier posts while he was seated in the front right seat with his arm hanging outside the surrey. As they went between the two posts, his wrist became pinned in between the surrey and post. As a result, his right wrist broke upon impact. He was transported to CHOMP for medical attention. Photographs were taken of the scene.

The many reasons for my love/hate relationship with the game of baseball and rooting for the home team seemed just a few innings away.

THE ABALONE Baseball League — formed right here in Carmel way back in the 1920s — featured a stellar group of local players, including authors Fred Bechdolt and Jimmy Hopper, concert cellist Edward Kuster and sculptor Jo Mora. Sara Eber, Helen Van Riper, and Frances Brewer were among the women who played on the teams.

Then things started to happen to moderate my lifetime love affair with the game. I don't like players coming to the diamond wearing diamonds. Some of them look as if they've just come from bling-fest at Tiffany. It costs a week's pay for a family of four to see a Giants game. Throw in a couple of hot dogs, drinks and outrageous parking fees and you're talking bailout money. When I see a guy hitting below the Mendoza line wearing a gold necklace wider than a fungo bat, it says to the fans: "I'm making millions and you're not!"

I don't like the designated hitter. It is supposed to add more offense and excitement to the game. Last year, AL teams scored 10,651 runs to the NL's 9,996. Over a 162 game season, that amounts to .4 more runs a game. How exciting is that?

I don't like the way baseball announcers over-analyze everything. I don't care if the pitcher threw a two-seam fastball or a four-seam fastball (I don't know the difference, anyway). Keep it as simple as the game itself — a guy throws a ball, another guy hits it or misses it. Case closed.

The best announcers are the ones who never played the game professionally, so they don't have to try to impress us with their "insider" knowledge. Where are you Ernie Harwell when we need you?

I don't like the way managers use the CYA (you know what it means) system of managing. If a left-handed hitter can't hit a left-handed pitcher he shouldn't be in the major leagues making a gazillion dollars a year.

I don't like the way players wear their pants down to their shoe tops. It looks sloppy. How do you know if they're the Red Sox if you can't see their socks? I don't like the way players are always unshaven. Scraggly beards and pant legs flopping over their shoes add to their homeless look. The Babe was clean-shaven and his pants were bloused. When you're as good as he was, you can stop shaving. Players should look like they arrived at the ballpark in a limo, not on a raft.

I don't like outfielders making one-handed catches on fly balls. Even for "The Catch" Willie Mays used two hands. I don't see any "Say, Hey" kids patrolling the outfield today.

On the other hand, I like arriving at the stadium and seeing the contrast of the emerald green grass against the stark white baselines that have been freshly chalked.

I like the "thwock" sound a fastball makes slamming into the catcher's mitt.

I like the balancing act the ball does on a drag bunt down the third base line like one of the Flying Wallendas on a high wire. I like the endless game of charades the third base coach plays while flashing signs to the batter and base runners.

I like the way a runner on first with no outs unpeels another layer of the game's nuances as the defense's attention is split between the batter and the base runner. I like the way a ball travels from pitcher to catcher to second base in about a tenth of second less than it takes a runner trying to steal second base, so that only a perfect throw can nail the runner. I wonder how Mr. Doubleday knew that 90 feet between bases was the exact distance to test throwing and running skills.

I like the way a batter has four-tenths of a second to decide whether or not to swing; and that a difference of a half inch where ball meets bat can be the difference between a pop up to short and a home run.

I like being in the stadium and having all six senses stimulated by the sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and the physical and mental feel of the game.

I like the buzz of the crowd. The venue doesn't matter. Whether it's at AT&T, a game at CHS, or a pick-up game anywhere, I like being around folks who love baseball as much as I do.

Jerry Gervase can be contacted at jerry@gerrygervase.com.

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

None of these stalwart players made it to the big leagues.

However, I was pleasantly surprised to learn that Carmel has produced four major leaguers. Atlee Hammaker had the most staying power, with 15 years in the Bigs. His most famous stat is a dubious one — giving up the first grand slam home run in an All-Star game. Pete O'Brien played 12 years in the American League and hit 169 home runs.

Greg Heydeman and Chris Prieto also made brief appearances in the Majors. Heydeman pitched two innings with the Dodgers in 1973. Prieto played two games in center field with the LA Angels in 2005 at the age of 32.

When I lived back East, that long anticipated newspaper headline, "Pitchers and Catchers Report," was like a breath of summer blowing into our harsh February winters. It meant there were fewer days to the beginning of a new baseball season than to the end of the last one. Peanuts, Cracker Jack

For legal advice, contact a lawyer immediately. Get help finding a lawyer at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courts.ca.gov/self-help), at the California Legal Services website (www.lawhelpca.org), or by contacting your local county bar association.

NOTICE - RESTRAINING ORDERS ARE ON PAGE 2: These restraining orders are effective against both spouses or domestic partners until the petition is dismissed, a judgment is entered, or the court makes further orders. They are enforceable anywhere in California by any law enforcement officer who has received or seen a copy of them.

FEE WAIVER: If you cannot pay the filing fee, ask the clerk for a fee waiver form. The court may order you to pay back all or part of the fees and costs that the court waived for you or the other party.

The name and address of the court is:

HEALTHY
Lifestyles

"No one will ever win the battle of the sexes. There's too much fraternizing with the enemy."

IT'S BELIEVED that no less a diplomat than Henry Kissinger said that, and he should know about negotiations and détentes.

When it comes to health issues, many couples don't communicate the way they should, and The Pine Cone's upcoming men's and women's edition of Healthy Lifestyles was created in hopes of inspiring breakfast-table conversations about sometimes-sensitive subjects, like prostate health and mammograms, by providing straightforward — and occasionally lighthearted — approaches to topics with insight from local experts.
