COUNCIL WAIVES FEES FOR COTA, TOUR D'ELEGANCE

By MARY SCHLEY

THREE MONTHS before they are set to transform downtown into Automobile Mecca for a couple of days, the Concours on the Avenue and the Pebble Beach Tour d'Elegance received approval from the city council last week to proceed with their events.

Each also had some of their city fees waived, though the policy governing those discounts remains difficult to follow and is undergoing an overhaul.

"We're constantly trying to balance the economic vitality of special events vs. the impacts on the residential character of the community," city administrator Chip Rerig said at the May 3 meeting. "We believe at the staff level that these are good events. We see our friends and neighbors observing these cars, and it's healthy for our community. There are also economic benefits that allow us to revitalize the streets and parks and sidewalks."

How much support?

But how much should the city support them? For example, Rerig said, taxpayers covered about $7,000 in expenses to operate shuttles between downtown and the Mission during the Concours on the Avenue in order to reduce traffic and parking problems, and the council will have to provide direction on how much help the city should provide in the future.

"The event policy is something we've been struggling with," he said. "We do need your leadership and your policy direction, and then going forward, we can inform the community about what you expect."

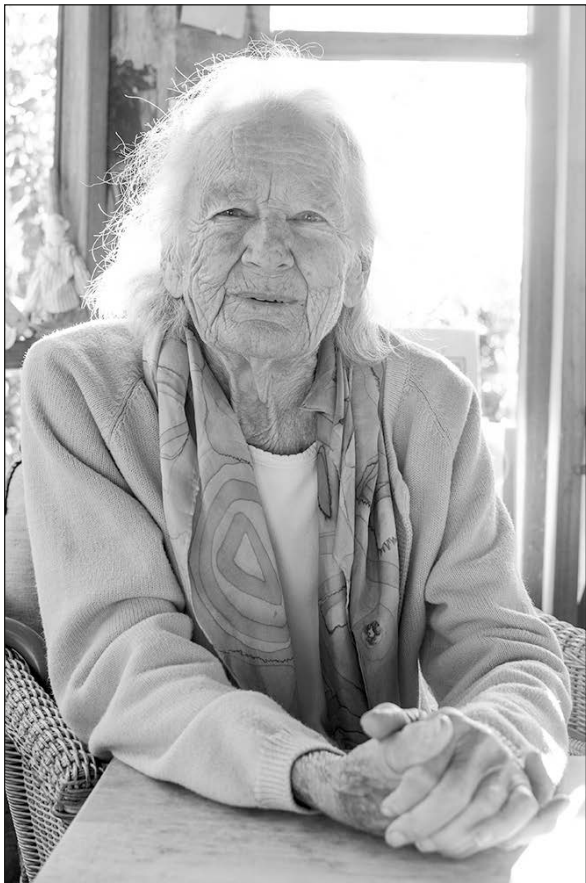

Carmel Chamber of Commerce CEO Monta Potter said the city should do its best to support such events, and she noted that when the transient occupancy tax was implemented in 1964, some of it was supposed to be used for "community and cultural activities."

"That is what the hostelry tax was put in place for," she said, while the city's $22 million budget allocates just $27,500 to support events.

"It's very difficult when you're sitting up here and you

Cal Am declares test well a success

By KELLY NIX

CALIFORNIA AMERICAN Water this week declared its $10 million test desalination well in Marina a success, saying it has demonstrated that the location and the slant-well technology it employs are feasible for a full-scale desal plant.

The viability of the test operation is a major milestone for Cal Am since slant wells, which draw ocean water through the sand instead of the open ocean, have not been used for desal plants in the United States. Cal Am drilled the test well early last year after getting a permit from — and at the insistence of — the California Coastal Commission. Open ocean intakes are opposed by environmentalists because of possible impacts on sea life.

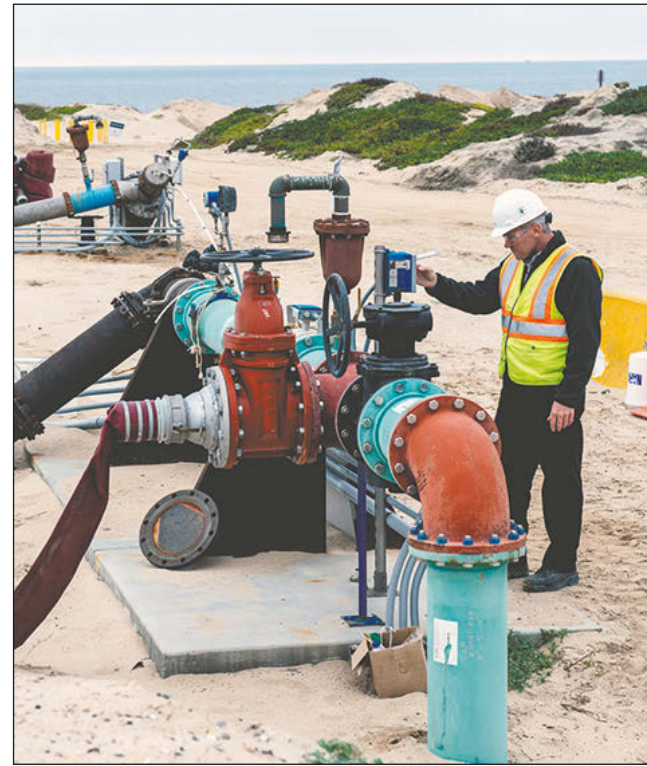

"The purpose of the test well was to prove that the location was feasible and that the wells drew the desired level of ocean water," Cal Am external affairs manager Catherine Stedman told The Pine Cone Wednesday. "It has proven those two points and is a success."

While the test well has already gathered enough data for the environmental impact report for its desalination plant, Stedman said the operation is still relevant and will continue to collect data until the permit for the well expires in 2018.

"The reason to continue running the well is that the more data we gather, the better we can refine our design and treatment processes," she said, based on the salinity and other parameters of the water drawn at that location.

While the test well pumps 2,000 gallons of seawater per minute, the full-scale plant is expected to yield 16,000 gal-

Candidates for Congress weigh in on immigration

By KELLY NIX

ILLEGAL IMMIGRATION and securing the United States' southern border will continue to be contentious issues in this year's presidential election season, and the five candidates for the 20th Congressional District have offered their own ideas on the topics.

Four of the candidates vying for the job currently held by Rep. Sam Farr told The Pine Cone the United States must secure its border with Mexico.

None of them, however, said that a lengthy wall — like that proposed by Presidential candidate Donald Trump — should be a solution to halting immigrants from crossing over to the United States.

Republican candidate Casey Lucius called for a "coordinated strategy" to address unlawful entry, not just at the southern border, but also the United States/Canadian border.

"Despite billions spent, we know there are still major gaps in our border security," said Lucius, of Pacific Grove. "We do need to increase funding for border security, patrol and fence-

BACH FEST EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR LEAVING

By MARY SCHLEY

BECAUSE OF her, the Carmel Bach Festival has expanded its reach, established its relevancy among many more Monterey County residents, and made classical music accessible and enjoyable to people of widely ranging ages and backgrounds. But Debbie Chinn will insist that the story is not about her — it's about the festival. Chinn, who became the fest's executive director in March 2012, will leave to pursue new challenges when her contract is up in September.

"Debbie has had many accomplishments as our executive director, and among the top are her expansion of our community engagement programs and the thought of really engaging the community, not just going out once a year somewhere," said Carlotta Mellon, president of the board of directors. "We've grown our audience locally — we have many more people from Monterey County. We've been making the festival more approachable for people, and trying to get across the message that we're a very welcoming festival."

ing, but we also need interior enforcement and coordination with our international partners."

If elected, Lucius said she would support enhanced tunnel detection capabilities, maritime patrol aircraft, the expansion of video surveillance, and other means to secure the borders from smugglers and immigrants without documents.

"As someone who has run an operational intelligence unit, I have seen how important it is to get accurate information to everyone involved," she said. "We have thousands of state and local law enforcement officers who need better information and coordination with federal entities."

Lucius — who was the keynote speaker at a naturalization ceremony last year where 300 immigrants became United States citizens — supports a citizenship path for immigrants.

"We need to start with visa reform to ensure that those who want to work in the U.S. can work here legally," she said. "After consistent and legal status using a work visa, [illegal] immigrants should be able to apply for residency status. Assuming that no laws have been violated during their residency, they can apply for U.S. citizenship."

Democratic candidate Jimmy Panetta of Carmel Valley said that the willingness of immigrants to "take risks and work hard" — like he said his Italian grandfather did when he came to this country — is what contributes to the "greatness of our country and to the region's major economic drivers — agriculture and tourism."

Pine Cone poll this week

SUBSCRIBERS TO the Carmel Pine Cone's email edition will have a chance to sound off on races for county supervisor and U.S. Congress when the newspaper conducts an online survey beginning Thursday night.

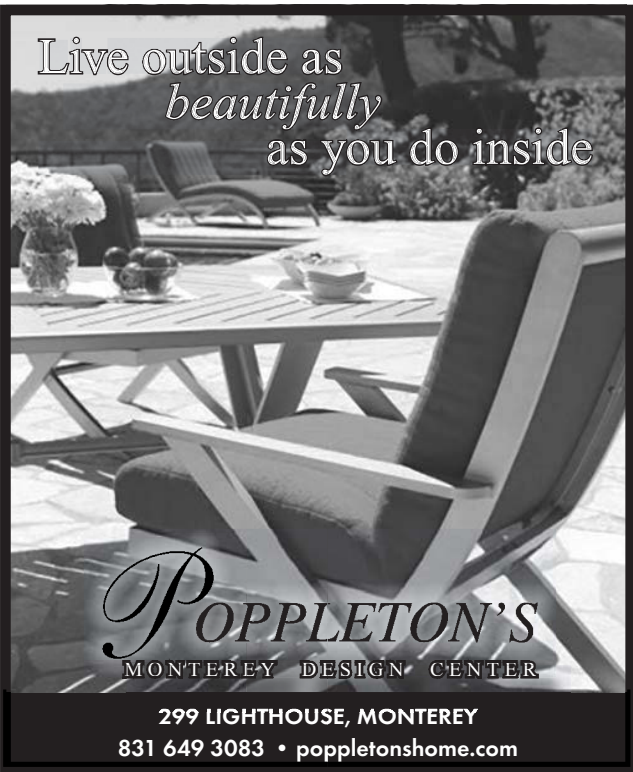

Incumbent Dave Potter is being challenged by former United Way CEO Mary Adams for supervisor, while Republican Casey Lucius, Democrat Jimmy Panetta and a host of lesser known challengers are vying to represent the Monterey Peninsula in Congress.

Voting in the poll — which will be online only, and open only to subscribers — will begin Thursday night and conclude May 18, with results reported in next week's edition.

A similar poll done in March for Carmel's election for mayor and city council very accurately predicted the actual results.

Memo's modern family

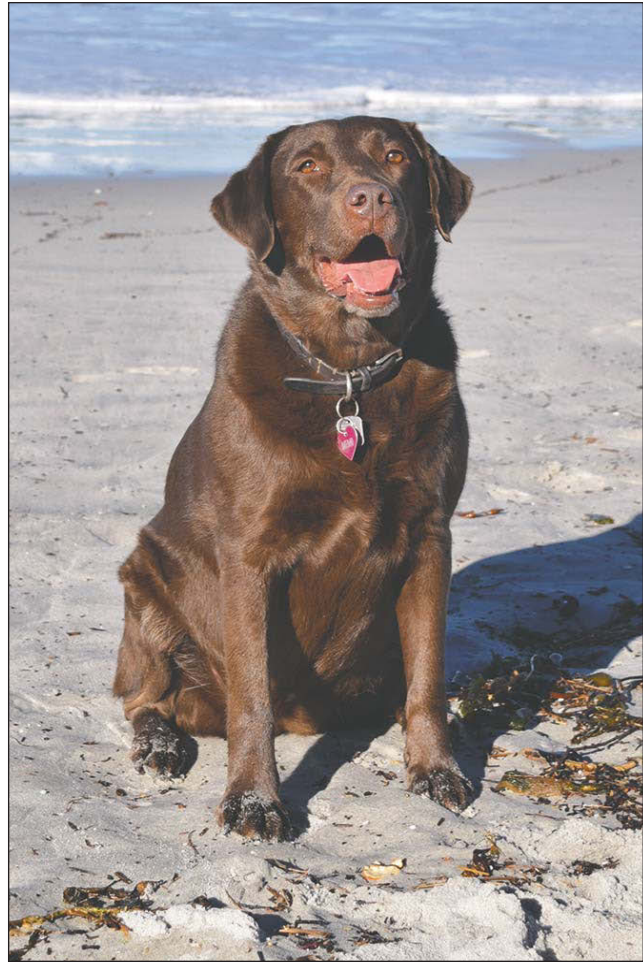

HE SAYS she's not his dog, but he's her human. Actually, Memo, a chocolate Labrador Retriever, possesses not only this human and his family, but another Carmel family as well. The shared dog arrangement is what they call "just another modern family dynamic."

It all started when his friend was seeking a therapy dog. After a year of searching for just the right dog, the friend found Memo at a breeder in Sonoma. (By the time his breeder got to naming Memo, a member of "Litter M," he seemed to have run out of traditional M names.)

But when the friend began experiencing health complications, his family started taking care of her, often for long periods of time. Nearly six years later, Memo is part of a large and loving extended family.

Memo is a real beauty and very ladylike, a showstopper, her person says. Poised and elegant, when she sits on the floor, her front legs are always crossed. Memo loses her manners and jumps up only when her person is about to take her on a walk.

"When we walk into town" says her person, "people stop and comment on how beautiful Memo is. She's an English lab, which means she has the boxier head and the stubby 'otter tail,' unlike the taller American-style lab we see more often."

Memo maintains her relatively calm manner until she gets to the beach. Then, says her person, she suddenly goes "cuckoo bananas."

"She is so happy at the beach, until she runs into little white dogs. She seems to have an aversion to them. Maybe it's because of an early memory," her person says, "or maybe they're just at the wrong height for her to relate to."

Big Sur Half Marathon distributes $48K

THE HALF Marathon on Monterey Bay, a 13.1-mile run organized by the Big Sur International Marathon each November, donated $68,675 to 45 local nonprofit, charitable and youth organizations.

The money was raised during last year's race, and it has been distributed to local Boy Scout troops and school athletic teams, to social service organizations like Community Partnership for Youth, Juvenile Impact, the Pacific Grove Music Boosters, and to others who have supported the run by providing volunteers.

The half marathon draws participants from all 50 states and more than a dozen foreign countries, and features a coastal course through Monterey and Pacific Grove.

Foundation debuts new tech lab

■ Ribbon cutting May 18

By MARY SCHLEY

THANKS TO an anonymous $100,000 gift, The Carmel Foundation has overhauled its technology lab, bringing in new computers and other devices, furniture, carpeting and paint. There, foundation members, who have to be at least 55 years old to join, can learn any number of technological skills and tricks, from how to make movies and run the new Windows 10 operating system, to understanding the basics of iPads, iPhones and Samsung devices. A ribbon cutting is set for Wednesday, May 18.

After hearing news last fall that the foundation might receive $100,000 from an anonymous donor, administrators were asked how they would use the money if they did get it, foundation president Jill Sheffield told The Pine Cone.

“We said we always wanted to update our tech center. And, lo and behold, we got the check,” she said. “For us, this was perfect: We’ve wanted to do it for a really long time, but it’s not something you can easily find the extra funds for.”

The foundation opened its learning center in 1995, and while the computers had been replaced with newer donated machines over the years, overall, it was quite shopworn, according to Sheffield. The donation provided for new carpet, paint, electrical, lighting, window coverings, updated infrastructure like WiFi, tables and chairs, a wall-mounted smart TV that can connect with any computer in the room or students’ phones and tablets, 10 new Hewlett Packard PCs with 23-inch touchscreens, two new iMacs, an iPad and a Samsung tablet, wireless keyboards and mice, a multi-functional printer, high-speed internet, and updated software.

“She wanted to see the money used and not get caught up in a lot of red tape,” Sheffield said of the unnamed donor. “And we’ve let her representative know that we’re finished.”

Beth Bates, who oversees the computer program and is the finance director, said she worked with vendors to get the best prices on equipment and software.

See FOUNDATION page 23A

Police, Fire & Sheriff's Log

At least the crooks shopped local

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Schley.

TUESDAY, APRIL 26

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Local restaurant employees reported a female had a seizure inside their business. Upon arrival, the female refused all medical services and elected to walk home. Approximately 20 minutes later, the victim had fallen on private property at Lincoln and 12th, and sustained injury. The victim was obviously intoxicated and was transported to the hospital.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject reported the loss of his passport on or around Jan. 15. The loss was recently discovered and may have occurred during a recent move from the Perry Newberry and Fourth location.

Pacific Grove: Bayview resident reported a male adult rummaged through her unlocked vehicle and stole a bag of miscellaneous paperwork. Suspect is believed to be the same as subject arrested for multiple vehicle thefts in the area.

Pacific Grove: Officers were dispatched to a call of a suspicious man trying to open car doors on Bayview at 0800 hours. The female said she witnessed the man try to open multiple car doors. The man then walked to her carport and tried to open her car before leaving the area.

Pacific Grove: Multiple reports of a male adult looking through unlocked vehicles. A subject was found by the PD rummaging through a parked vehicle. The subject attempted to escape. He was placed under arrest after a brief struggle. Subject was in possession of stolen property, as well as two baggies of prescription pills. Subject had a felony no-bail warrant. The 18-year-old male was booked and taken to Monterey County Jail.

Pacific Grove: Property belonging to a victim of a vehicle theft that had not yet been reported was found in the pocket of a subject who was arrested for multiple vehicle thefts. Owner on Jewell Avenue was contacted, and the property was returned.

Pacific Grove: Unknown person stole property from within the victim's unlocked vehicle on Jewell Avenue.

Pacific Grove: Non-injury accident in the 1000 block of Forest Avenue.

Pacific Grove: Thief entered an unlocked vehicle on Jewell Avenue and stole the owner's personal property.

Pebble Beach: Female on Forest Lake Road reported being the victim of identity theft.

Carmel area: Oliver Road resident stated she had lost several pieces of jewelry at the beginning of the month.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A 53-year-old female who is known to have a suspended license was seen driving on Rio Road at 0108 hours. Subject stopped and cited, and her vehicle was impounded for 30 days.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: An unwanted person was reported on Dolores Street. Subject was a member of a Bible study group but had become progressively more disruptive. He was told to leave. He refused, but eventually left when the study group was cancelled. The reporting party was instructed to call police next time the individual returns.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A county resident found a loose dog on Dolores Street and brought it to her home. Officer assisted with scanning the dog for a microchip. No chip found; however, the officer made contact with a resident believed to be the owner. The dog was returned with a warning.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a battery on Santa Lucia Avenue. Victim requested no prosecution and no further action.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person at Ocean and Monte Verde reported losing a cell phone.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fall on city property at Lincoln and Seventh; subject transported to CHOMP.

Pacific Grove: A debit card was lost at a business on Lighthouse Avenue and appropriated by an unknown person who later made over $100 in purchases in neighboring cities.

Pacific Grove: A handicap placard was stolen from a vehicle on Sea Palm.

Pacific Grove: On April 15, Seaside PD requested assistance in storing a vehicle that needed to be processed for evidence. On April 27, PGPD received a call and an email from a Seaside commander authorizing the release of the vehicle to the DA's office. Vehicle was released to a DA's office representative and towed by California Tow.

Public meetings on roundabout set

By KELLY NIX

IF YOU have questions about the roundabout that will soon be built at Highways 1 and 68, you may want to attend one of three meetings starting next week in Carmel and Pacific Grove.

On Monday, May 16, the Transportation Agency for Monterey County will host the first forum at the Pacific Grove Community Center to address questions and concerns and provide information.

"We will talk about the project and why we are doing it, and about the construction and what people can expect," Ariana Green, associate transportation planner for TAMC, told The Pine Cone Tuesday morning.

The roundabout will replace the existing traffic signal at Holman Highway 68 and Highway 1 ramps near the entrance to Pebble Beach.

A simulation of how the roundabout will work will be presented at the meetings, and representatives will field questions and outline detours to be expected while construction is underway.

While workers were expected to begin construction at the end of May, Green said that won't happen until next month. Construction was originally supposed to commence in Fall 2015.

"The latest update from the construction team is that we will have the work schedule by the end of the month and start construction in June," she said

Detours and heavy traffic

TAMC and the City of Monterey — which is leading the $8.8 million roundabout project — say it will help alleviate traffic congestion once it's open for use in December. In the meantime, though, residents should expect detours and heavy traffic in the Lighthouse Avenue and Del Monte Boulevard corridor and other areas while crews are doing the work.

Green and Monterey traffic engineer Rich Deal will host next week's meetings, which Green said would also let people know how they can get the latest information on the Park officials look into crystal ball

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHAT WILL Carmel area state parks look like in 15 or 20 years? Offering a glimpse into the future, a general plan for the parks will be unveiled Wednesday, June 1, at the Rancho Cañada Golf Club in Carmel Valley. Also available will be an environmental impact report for the plan.

While state park officials aren't commenting on the details of the general plan in advance of the meeting, they are saying that the overall idea is to create a "combination state park to include, generally speaking, Monastery Beach, Carmel River and Point Lobos, as well as an eastward expansion."

Access, too

In addition to a possible merger of existing parks, the general plan will include details about how the public will be able to access 1,300-acre Point Lobos Ranch. The land was acquired for $13 million in a series of transactions that ended in 2006, but has never been open to the public because it doesn't have a parking lot. Park officials acknowledge the problems associated with so many motorists already parking their cars along Highway 1 to get into Point Lobos State Reserve.

Besides the previously mentioned sites, the plan will include details about the future of state parks' Hatton Canyon property.

Last July, a public workshop on the general plan offered residents a chance to comment on a wide variety of proposals to make "improvements" to Carmel area state parks, such adding a zip line, parking lots and a campground. But attendees were critical of many of the ideas.

Because officials wouldn't comment on the details of the general plan, it's unknown if any of the proposals were included in it. But they said the public's comments were taken into consideration by the state park planning team, which "reviewed all feedback in depth" and crafted a plan "with your comments and concerns in mind."

State parks official Steve Bachman told The Pine Cone that the June 1 meeting will

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE OFFICIALS work to create an ordinance that will regulate, while also allowing, short term rentals in the coastal areas of Monterey County, it's unclear what they will do in Big Sur, where opposition to the practice is stronger than elsewhere, and a local land use plan imposes some of the toughest restrictions on development in the country.

Will short term rentals even be permitted along the highly scenic coastline? And if they are, will they be allowed on private and gated roads — where most homes are located? These are two questions that officials hope to answer in the coming months.

What is the BSLUP?

Following a lengthy and contentious battle over the proposed federalization of the Big Sur coast in the late 1970s and early 1980s, the Big Sur Land Use Plan was developed because many believed Big Sur's scenic qualities were so important that they needed extra protection from development. The plan was certified by the California Coastal Commission in 1986 and approved by Monterey County in 1988. It was guided by the California Coastal Act, which passed in 1976 and was famously hostile to development, but also sought to strike a balance between preserving Big Sur's "rural and wilderness character" while making it "accessible to as many as can be accommodated."

The plan places particularly tough standards on new subdivisions and requires that almost all new development be built outside the viewshed of Highway 1.

Because nobody in the 1980s could have anticipated the existence or success of AirBnB and other websites that advertise short term rentals, the plan says nothing about them. But both proponents and opponents suggest the plan supports their views.

Why they should be permitted

Proponents say the plan endorses vacation rentals by encouraging more visitation. "Without compromising its character or depleting its resources, the area should be accessible to as many as can be accommodated," a sentence reads.

"The plan has two primary missions — one is resource protection, and the other is visitor access," said resident Lloyd Jones, who doesn't offer short term rentals on his property, but believes the practice should be

'The Other Place' opens at the Circle Theatre, kicks off season

By CHRIS COUNTS

A SUCCESSFUL neurologist struggles to understand why her life is falling apart in a PacRep production of playwright Sharr White's "The Other Place," which opens Saturday, May 14, at the Circle Theatre.

Directed by Ken Kelleher, "The Other Place" stars Julie Hughett as neurologist Juliana Smithton, whose behavior is increasing becoming erratic, although the cause of her trouble is not immediately apparent. The cast also includes Jackson Davis, Maryssa Wanlans and Garland Thompson.

PacRep's executive director Stephen Moorer called the play "a fantastic vehicle" for Hughett's talents.

"She's perhaps the most accomplished actress on the Monterey Peninsula," Moorer told The Pine Cone. "She's such an exciting actress. She has a tremendous local following."

The play continues Thursdays through Sundays until May 29. Thursday, Friday, Saturday performances start at 7:30 p.m., while Sunday matinees begin at 2 p.m..

Tickets are $20 to $42 with discounts available for seniors, students, teachers and active military. The Circle Theatre is located on Casanova between Eight and Ninth. Call (831) 622-0100.

"The Other Place" is the first of eight plays, musicals and concerts featured in PacRep's 2016 professional theater season. The schedule also includes a musical version of "Mary Poppins" (June 16 to July 24 at the Golden Bough); the "Buddy + Co. British Invasion Tribute Concert" (Aug. 11 to Sept. 4 at the Golden Bough); "The Wizard of Oz" (Aug. 18 to Sept. 25 at the Outdoor Forest Theater); William Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" (Sept. 29 to Oct. 16 at the Outdoor Forest Theater); Shakespeare's "King Lear" (Oct. 20 to Nov. 6 at the Circle Theater); a musical version of "The Sister Act" (Nov. 17 to Dec. 18 at the Golden Bough); and the "Rockin' Wonderland Tribute Concert" (Dec. 29 to Jan. 7 at the Golden Bough).

Preparation for life masquerading as preparation for the ball — and it works

By ELAINE HESSER

LEARNING GOOD manners isn't just about behaving properly in case you're ever invited to Buckingham Palace. In fact, the social skills needed for a bash with the royals aren't too different from those needed to nail a job interview. They involve respect and understanding the culture where you're going.

At least, that's according to Doug and Megan Mayer — or Dr. and Mrs. Mayer, as they're known to their students. They teach etiquette to young folks through their business, Carmel Cotillions, and are having some teen and young adult seminars on June 12 and 19 at the Beach and Tennis Club at Pebble Beach.

Mrs. Mayer said the goal is to teach etiquette to help young people succeed in job interviews and at work, under the guise of teaching them party skills in a fun environment. Her husband's a retired medical doctor, and she's a retired attorney with experience as an executive at Arco, so they understand a little about business.

They also consult regularly with employers and teachers to find out what social skills young adults lack. While technology and cultural shifts mean that specific expectations are constantly evolving, Mayer said the root of etiquette can be summed up in one word: respect.

Students can range in age from 3 to 26, and have come from everywhere from Chualar to San Jose. And while they do learn dance steps and how to tackle a formal table setting for a multi-course meal in cotillion classes, they also learn how to shake hands and initiate conversation, and how to introduce their friends to their parents.

The kids dress up for classes, and interns and participants in Carmel Cotillions' leadership program help teach. Mayer said they also work with students at Cal State Monterey Bay to help them prepare for job searches.

With older students, Mayer said she's much more open about why they're learning how to interact respectfully in all situations. She tells them, "If you're meeting with a college athletic recruiter, even though he's in sweats and you just finished a game, don't kid yourself. That's an interview."

Before she moved back to Monterey County last year, the Pebble Beach native and her husband put their money where their mouths were. Their two older children went through cotillion classes near their home in Orange County, and Mayer worked with the organization that

BIG SUR WOMAN REMEMBERED FOR HER GENEROUS AND ADVENTUROUS SPIRIT

By CHRIS COUNTS

MORE THAN 150 people gathered last week on Pfeiffer Ridge to honor the late Helen Morgenrath, who had lived in Big Sur longer than anybody else when she passed away in March at 90.

Born in New York City, Helen came to Big Sur in 1949 when she was 24. About five years earlier, she had met Selig Morgenrath, a Polish immigrant, at a camp in New England for conscientious objectors. Helen was visiting the camp on a school trip, while Selig was confined to it because he had refused to serve in the armed forces during World War II.

Selig was in his early 30s, while Helen was a student at Smith College. But the two stayed in touch, and they married after the war. After a brief stay in New York City, the couple embarked on an adventure that would lead to a little-known place called Big Sur.

They took a Greyhound bus to Southern California, where they visited Helen's cousin, Mary. From her, they learned about a place up the coast that piqued their interest. "Mary said, 'check out this lonely coast,'" Helen's daughter, Tara Evans, told The Pine Cone.

The couple drove north along Highway 1, and by the time they reached the southern end of the Big Sur coast, they were struck by the solitude. "They didn't see another car until they reached Anderson Creek," Tara said.

In 1949, Anderson Creek was the site of a cluster of shacks that once had been used to house convicts who built Highway 1. In one of them lived artist Emil White, who later founded the Henry Miller Library. Helen and Selig struck up a conversation with White, "and he talked them into staying," Tara explained.

Far from civilization

Since they had planned to live somewhere far from civilization, the couple came prepared for life off the grid. Among their belongings were a hand-powered grinder for making flour and a hand-powered sewing machine.

Helen and Selig lived at Anderson Creek for three years before moving to Livermore Ledge just south of the Big Sur Hot Springs resort. They were living there when the resort became the Esalen Institute. Selig, in fact, played a key role in creating the now world-famous retreat center. "He was instrumental in building Esalen and developing the work scholar program," Tara said of her father, who died in 1977.

A free spirit, Helen fit right in with the many artists, writers and dancers who settled in Big Sur after World War II.

"She didn't like to be categorized, but she was one of those early Bohemian types," Tara explained. "She was interested in eastern philosophy and studied East Indian dance. She was such a graceful and lovely person, but she was also a rebel."

At Livermore Ledge, Helen became the mother of two girls, Tara and Celia, and two boys, Helmuth and Jali. Tara looks back fondly on their unconventional childhood, which lacked among other things, a telephone, a radio or a television.

"We made candles and root beer," Tara recalled. "I learned to swim at the hot springs."

The kids also learned how to be self-sufficient.

"If you didn't know how to do something, you learned it," Tara recalled. "If you couldn't buy something, you made it."

In 1968, Helen and a friend bought 15 acres on Pfeiffer Ridge. Keeping five acres each, they sold the other five acres. Helmuth and Jali later bought neighboring parcels. But before a single home was built, a swimming pool was installed at Helen's place. "It was too hot up there to work on the house unless you had a swimming pool," Tara

PHYLLIS J. CROCKETT

A CELEBRATION OF LIFE for PHYLLIS J. CROCKETT will take place on Sunday, May 22nd, at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center Park on Ford Road in Carmel Valley, CA from 2:00-5:00 pm.

The celebration will begin at 2:00 pm to be followed by a bar-b-que and an afternoon of swimming at the Pool she helped create in 1964.

Phyllis's greatest joy was bringing family and friends together in a joyful environment. We invite all who knew and loved Phyllis to come celebrate and share memories of this remarkable woman and to play at her dolphin "pod". And in keeping with this atmosphere the family requests you wear bright colors or Hawaiian attire in Phyllis' honor. Her favorite colors were purples, teals, blues and dusty rose.

Any donations in her honor can be made to the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center at PO Box 124, Carmel Valley, CA 93924. For further information please contact us at phylliscrockettcelebration@gmail.com

PATRICIA RUTH YOUNG

JANUARY 10, 1942 – APRIL 15, 2016

On April 15th our precious Mother lost her courageous fight against cancer, or rather she won. Her strength and determination will forever be an example to us all. We miss her loving presence and will be at a loss without her. Mom was born to Audis Sydney and Golda Dean (Brown) Neeley in Casa, Arkansas. As a young girl the family moved to Orosi, California. Pat grew up in an ideal area for her love of having animals and her lifelong love of riding horses. She moved to Carmel in 1987 to be with her children and live out her dream of being in paradise. Mom loved art and painted many beautiful things which we are grateful to have in remembrance of her gift. She also loved playing golf, walking with special friends in Carmel, travel and most of all her family.

Pat is survived by her children, Cyndi (Jon) Adams and Randall S. Young. She is also survived by her sister Laverne Johnson, niece Janey (Denise) and nephew Steve (Diane) Johnson and their daughter Ashley. Pat is also survived by her precious puppy Ginger. She was preceded in death by her parents. Pat leaves behind many loving and longtime friends. Thank you to all of her friends, we know how much fun you had together! We truly appreciate your support, strength, walks and love through her long fight and during these sad times.

Beautiful lady you are loved and life will not be the same without you. We will miss your grace, sass and spirit forever. You will always be the light of our lives and the rock we cling to. Although you have left us, you are still in our hearts and that will never fade.

Mom chose to be cremated and there will be no services per her request. We will scatter her ashes in the future in a private ceremony. Instead of flowers, please make a donation in her name to your favorite charity and if that charity is you and yours Cheers!

Gabriele "Gabi" Graham

Gabriele Lux Graham (Myers) of Pacific Grove died April 28, 2016 after a long and mostly successful battle with cancer. She was surrounded by her family and friends.

She is survived by her husband of 24 years, Craig Myers. She was widowed in 1989 by the late Don Graham. She has three step-children, Corinne Bonyge, Jennifer Mason, and David Neubert. She is "Omi" to six grandchildren. She will be greatly missed by her countless German and American dear friends.

She was born on September 2nd, 1945 in war ravaged Berlin, Germany. Gabi never met her father, who was killed in an American air raid before her birth. She was raised by her late mother, Charlotte Lux, in the American sector of post-war Berlin. They survived many hardships together and always remained close.

After training and working as a dental hygienist in Germany, Gabriele moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1968. She worked at various places around the Monterey Peninsula including The Highlands Inn, Pacific Grove Travel, and The Shutters Restaurant. She spent the last 40 years doing home healthcare and as a massage therapist. Many of her dear, often elderly, clients became beloved friends. Her clients have described her as a mental, emotional and physical healer.

She remained in close contact with her many friends in the local German community and throughout Europe. While loyal to America, she refused to give up her German citizenship. She deeply loved America, and would remind Americans who dared to complain, that they are lucky to be born in the freest and kindest nation on Earth.

Throughout her life she had many hobbies and activities including water skiing, shopping in second hand stores, and taking care of her many dogs. But her greatest passion was always travel.

She identified as truly lucky person. She felt blessed by each and every day of her whole life. She is known for her joy, strength and energy, and she loved to generously share those qualities with friends and family.

Gabi and her family are forever grateful for the skilled and compassionate care given by the Pacific Oncology Center, Dr. Rubin, and the staff in Terrace West of the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

At Gabi's emphatic request there will be no formal services.

Found in her notes in is the following quote that describes her well.:

"There are those whose lives affect all others around them. Quietly touching one heart, who in turn touches another. Reaching out to ends further than they would ever know. Leaving all of us a little richer than we were before."

A MINISTRY OF THE DIOCESE OF MONTEREY

Council sidelines Seventh and Dolores market

By MARY SCHLEY

DECIDING THERE were too many unknowns in how a market would operate in the event space at Seventh and Dolores, and questioning the logic of issuing a permit that would expire in six months, as suggested by the planning department, the Carmel City Council last week voted to put off discussion of Jay and Chloe Dolata's proposal to sell gourmet food, wine and beer there.

The Dolatas, who own the popular Carmel Belle restaurant in the Doud Arcade around the corner from the event center, want to offer baked goods and prepared foods to go, with nothing made to order, as well as fresh produce, coffee drinks, cheese, charcuterie, houseware and pantry items, and other goods, similar to upscale markets like

New York's Dean + DeLuca. People could eat their to-go food onsite or take it with them, and could do the same with wine.

"We'll also have a robust schedule of special events and community engagement activities," Jay Dolata told the council at the May 3 meeting, as well as catering.

"We want it to be modern, polished and clean, with somewhere for people to sit and enjoy their baguette and salami," he said. "It will be a casual space, but it will also offer a high level of service."

Because the city's zoning would permit either a market or a sit-down restaurant in that space, but not a market with tables and chairs for onsite consumption, acting planning director Marc Wiener suggested the Dolatas get a six-month permit to see how the use would work and how it might be added into the code.

"It sounds great, like a fun, interesting concept," commented councilman Bobby Richards.

"Fast Food Nation" author Eric Schlosser, a regular Carmel Belle customer, said the city should back the Dolatas' efforts. "I've heard there's some resistance to this plan from an old guard, but I think there's also got to be a way to bring this plan into fruition while respecting tradition," he said.

But most of the public wasn't so enthusiastic. Resident Roberta Miller said the use doesn't fit in the code, so allowing it would amount to spot zoning. Darlene Mosley said the concept "seemed like Jello that hadn't gelled," and restaurateur Gabe Georis said he thought the market would put a strain on restaurant operators in town, since pre-made food to go can be offered so much more cheaply.

Dave Mosley called it "the camel's nose under the tent" for allowing fast food and said it would be a "touristy environment" and "not what we want for Carmel."

But chamber of commerce CEO Monta Potter said the council should at least consider it. "I'm just saying I hope you'll open your minds to it," she said.

Too many questions existed for the council, though. Councilwoman Carrie Theis said she, too, had a difficult time understanding the concept, and she wanted the restaurant community more involved in how such businesses could operate in town.

Richards said he liked the idea of "something great happening in that building," but that the proposal left too many questions, and the council voted to table the idea, as well as a proposal to build a mezzanine for additional seating.

“That is why I believe that finding a path for immigrants to succeed is fundamental to who we are as a community and nation,” he told The Pine Cone.

For the roughly 11 million illegal immigrants in the country, lawmakers, Panetta said, should pursue a “tough but fair” road to legal standing — including the potential for citizenship — that includes the requirement that immigrants pay taxes, maintain employment and abide by laws.

“We must update the legal visa system for the 21st century so that it is less onerous for both employees and employers,” he said.

Solutions to bolstering the Mexico/U.S. border include additional Border Patrol stations and agents, more fencing, mobile and air surveillance, and distress beacons in dangerous parts of the border, Panetta said.

President Barack Obama’s 2012 policy that allows some child illegal immigrants to be exempt from deportation, and another policy being considered by U.S. Supreme Court justices that would indefinitely delay some parents’ deportation, are “imperfect” solutions, Panetta said. However, the ideas should be used as starting points “to keep families together and keep our local agriculture and tourism economy strong.”

The policies “would bring more than 5 million people out of the shadows and offer temporary relief from deportation, and grant work permits,” he said. “Their labor will grow the gross domestic product by $230 billion over 10 years.”

‘Immigrants are hounded’

Peace & Freedom Party candidate Joe Williams, of Santa Cruz, has a vastly different perspective on the border and immigration, contending the United States should do nothing to secure its borders and, in fact, should open them up to anyone who wants to enter.

Apart from open borders, the Peace & Freedom party “demands” an end to deportation of immigrants and “full political, social and economic rights for resident noncitizens.” Immigrants are “hounded by government authorities, worked and housed in substandard conditions by unscrupulous bosses, and blamed by Republican and Democratic demagogues for society’s problems,” Williams said.

Williams likes the AFL-CIO approach to amnesty, which is to “assist as many eligible workers as possible to gain rights on the job” by applying for Obama’s immigration programs for children and their parents, “to encourage qualified legal permanent residents” to become U.S. citizens. “It moves us in the right direction,” Williams said.

Independent candidate Jack Digby said the United States must increase the number of Border Patrol and immigration agents to stem the flow of those crossing the border unlawfully.

“Increasing the number of agricultural visas and ending sanctuary city status will make us more secure,” Digby said.

Digby does not favor amnesty for illegal immigrants, and goes a step farther by urging punitive measures for those who have. “Those who have broken the law and entered this country illegally must pay a consequence,” he said. “I know people with family in Mexico who are patiently waiting and following the law. The path to a visa for those who respect our border should be a priority.”

Another independent in the race, Barbara Honegger, believes the United States needs to secure all its borders.

“Nations are legally defined by their geographical borders, and all countries defend those borders as a matter of sovereignty in international law,” said Honegger, of Carmel Valley.

The long-term solution, she said, is for the United States to work with Mexico to “significantly increase economic opportunities and security for its citizens at home.”

Mexico should control, too

Besides the United States’ own border control measures, Honegger said the country should encourage Mexico to significantly enhance border controls on its own side.

Honegger supports a path to citizenship for “law-abiding illegal immigrants.” She also wants the resurrection of the bipartisan bill in 2013 passed by the U.S. Senate that would have created a citizenship path for 11 million undocumented immigrants living in the United States while also greatly increasing the number of border agents. The bill was blocked in the Republican-led House of Representatives.

“The United States is a nation of immigrants, and I support comprehensive immigration reform with a path to citizenship for all law-abiding immigrants in this country,” she said.

lons per minute.

Cal Am's goal was to draw water that was at least 95 percent seawater from the test wells, to minimize impacts on the Salinas Valley Aquifer. Stedman said the test well has so far achieved a 91 percent salinity level. The operation is located in northern Marina on property owned by a Mexican-owned cement producer, Cemex.

From the start, the well exceeded expectations, but it also wasn't without hitches. Cal Am had to shut off the well in June 2015 when the groundwater level in a nearby monitoring well dropped a foot. It resumed operating in October of that year after it was determined that the dip was mostly due to seasonal agricultural pumping, not the test operation. And in March, the well had to be shut down after a storm surge damaged a discharge pipe. The company repaired the pipe and resumed the operation last week.

The declaration of the success of the test well comes two months after the PUC announced that the environmental review for the desal plant wouldn't be finished until November 2017 — about one year after the EIR was supposed to be completed. The setback is also expected to delay the completion of the desal plant by more than a year.

While Cal Am is working on getting the review released sooner, it has also petitioned the PUC to expedite approval of the Pure Water Monterey project, a wastewater-recycling project by Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency.

Cal Am and the Monterey Peninsula mayors also recently asked for a five-year extension of the Dec. 31 deadline for pumping cutbacks from the Carmel River.

CONCOURS

know the economic impact and you're balancing the policy that council put in place and then trying to make exceptions," councilwoman Carrie Theis commented. "It's been hard for any council to actually apply it."

COTA to pay $11,400

Since Doug and Genie Freedman started the Concours on the Avenue in 2007, attendance has grown from 7,500 to more than 11,000, and it has generated nearly $290,000 for the Carmel Foundation. The Freedmans intended the event to draw people to town for an underused day during Concours Week to see cars exhibited on five blocks of Ocean Avenue and side streets. They also use Devendorf Park, and the show is free and open to the public.

While the Freedmans used to pay a small fee to the city for their event, in recent years, the costs have significantly increased, including more police overtime, portable restrooms and dumpsters, and higher rental fees. For the 2016 event, community activities director Janet Bombard estimated the total at $30,089, including $5,475 for closing 15 blocks, $8,801 for using the park, and $8,430 for city employees working overtime — including $7,000 for police. For the 2016 event, the Freedmans suggested they pay $9,000 and that the city cover the rest.

According to the council's policy on fee waivers, the Freedmans would have to pay all the fees, because their event has already received waivers for three years. Further, it also caps individual waivers at $5,000. In her report, Bombard said the council could decide to subsidize the event at an amount it deemed appropriate, it could apply the policy and deny the request, or it could give them $5,000. At the most, Bombard said, the council should waive no more than half the $22,205 in "eligible" fees, which includes items like the block closures and park rental, but not overtime.

Representing the Concours on the Avenue, Carmel Foundation President Jill Sheffield said the city should support it not just for the money it's generated for the nonprofit, but for the hotel and sales taxes it's helped raise.

"All of these dollars stay right here in the 93921 zip code," she said, adding that the Concours on the Avenue has also received worldwide news coverage. "And as a resident, this event is just plain fun."

There is no downside, she said, to waiving the rental fees and other charges that don't reflect actual costs to the city.

In a letter to the council, the Freedmans noted hotel occupancy has increased to at least 90 percent on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of Concours Week since they started the Concours on the Avenue, and it has accomplished their goal of bringing more business to town and generating more money and publicity for the foundation, which is the city's primary provider of low-cost housing for seniors.

"The message that has been sent around the world about Carmel-by-the-Sea has come from our own personal efforts to not make it about us — instead, to make it about everything and everyone else," they said. "We have given in every way."

Indeed, the endeavor lost money every year through 2011, according to a statement of net losses provided by the accounting firm Robinowich & Associates in Atlanta, Ga. Its greatest net loss was in 2008, at $1,017,066. The report did not say where that money came from.

"Car guy" John Hagstrom called the event "a five-star art show" and said it's a "jewel" and it "makes money for us, it brings people in, and it's free."

While it doesn't tend to generate business for his art gallery, resident Richard Kreitman said the show attracts "the right kind of people to town," and restaurateur Gabe Georis said it makes the city a key destination and participant during Concours Week.

Potter said officials should be grateful to Freedman, not treat him like he's trying to take advantage of the city. "He does this great thing for the city out of his own fortune, his heart and his passion for this," she said.

Councilwoman Jan Reimers said COTA could be paid for out of the marketing budget, since it gets so much positive press. "And it's free to the public," she said. "I think that is the most important part of it."

"It's a very city-minded event, and I'm in full support of it," added councilman Bobby Richards.

Theis acknowledged what COTA provides but said, "It would be nice if people could come to the middle," with the Freedmans agreeing to cover more of the city's fees.

Mayor Steve Dallas wasn't as enthusiastic. He criticized the event's $228,040 estimated costs, including $5,000 for a survey, $5,000 for airline tickets and rental cars, and $25,000 for the event team's hotel rooms, conference space, and food and beverage.

"It's tough for me to grant more than what our regular policy states now," he said. "If it's not going to be a profitable event, then they need to figure out how to make it profitable."

Rerig suggested using the figure of $15,435, which included overtime, as well as items like no-parking signs and barricades, but that was still too high for Reimers and Richards, who suggested the Freedmans be charged $11,367, and the motion for the fees and allowing the street closures passed 3-1, with Dallas dissenting.

Tour gets $5K

The Tour d'Elegance — the Thursday drive of about 100 cars participating in the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance the following Sunday — will be held for the 19th year in a row, and will include a few-hour stop downtown, where spectators can check out the automobiles up close while their drivers and passengers enjoy a catered private lunch in Devendorf Park. The tour draws about 5,000 spectators.

Bombard estimated $16,974 in fees for the Tour d'Elegance, and organizers requested a waiver of $5,000. They haven't asked for one in the past.

No representatives of the Pebble Beach event attended the meeting.

The motion to authorize the street closures and use of the park passed 3-1, with Richards dissenting, because he felt the financial information provided by Concours organizers was inadequate.

Chinn, who was raised in Long Island and has worked in the arts for more than three decades, including holding executive positions with Maryland's state theater, California Shakespeare Theater, Shakespeare Theater of New Jersey and the San Francisco Symphony, said the need for the Bach Festival to engage the community was very apparent.

"Just because we've been around for 80 years doesn't mean we'll still be around," she said. "We have to earn it, and the community is what supports us."

When she arrived four years ago, the festival had declining ticket sales and an audience with an average age of 80, not to mention an enterprise that had two-and-a-half weeks of energy and vitality every July, followed by 50 weeks of silence — hardly a successful business model. "What if you had a restaurant that was only open two weeks a year?" she asked. "People would forget about it and go somewhere else."

Concerned that the festival started by pioneer Carmel women Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous in 1935 might fade into obsolescence, she knew she had to get to work helping to turn it around.

She concluded the best way to expand the festival's influence and audience was to ensure it had a year-round presence, rather than just making token appearances.

Debbie Chinn

At the Rancho Cielo Youth Campus in Salinas, for instance, the festival's youth chorus would perform once a year to an audience that didn't understand classical and had no connection with it — and the teens sometimes got in trouble for losing interest and not paying attention.

She wondered what would happen if the musicians made more frequent visits to Rancho Cielo, and now, they perform there regularly from January to June, allowing the teens to build relationships with the musicians and classical music.

That success made Chinn want to do more, and she went on to expand the once-a-year concert at Oldmeyer Center in Seaside to multiple appearances at the St. Francis Xavier Church that drew hundreds of people — three quarters of whom had never attended a Bach Fest event.

Musicians have also begun participating in courses at Seaside High School, further embedding the festival and its music in the community.

"You can only learn when you're out and about, engaging in the community," Chinn said. "I hope I'm honoring Dene and Hazel, because I'm just doing exactly what they did, many years later."

As a result of all those efforts, including concerts in Salinas and C.V., the average age of the audience at the Bach Festival is now 67, and local attendance has skyrocketed.

"I firmly believe in community engagement and audience enrichment and strengthening the community through the arts," Chinn said. "I'm sort of evangelical about this."

But she also said she's ready for a new challenge. "I've got a big appetite, and I'm eager to put myself in an organization that has big thinkers and courage and conviction — and my energy level has to match that," she said, adding that she knew the end of her time here was coming when she began feeling like "a thoroughbred attached to a plow."

She also gave her board of directors ample notice of her impending departure, because she knows finding the right leader can be difficult.

Mellon said that act was just further evidence of her professionalism. "We'll be taking stock of where we are, where we need to be, and then what are the characteristics of a leader that we want," she said. "We're grateful that she'll be here through this year's festival."

Mellon praised Chinn's energy, creativity, vision and strategic thinking. "We're very appreciative of what Debbie has done for the festival," she said. "She's got a lot to be proud of."

Quail Motorcycle show names a new legend, celebrates a century of bikes

By MARY SCHLEY

WHEN A couple thousand enthusiasts from all over the world gather on the lawn to examine the unparalleled collection of two-wheeled machines that will be assembled for the Quail Motorcycle Gathering Saturday, May 14, they'll also be treated to tales from the edge as told by the men who have been there.

More than a judged concours and show of 300 of the most unusual and most significant motorcycles in the sport's century-plus-long history, the event showcases some of its key contributors.

Among them is longtime racer Reg Pridmore, who is being named a Legend of the Sport at the Quail. A Londoner who sold everything he owned to come to the United States in his 20s, Pridmore is remembered for becoming the very first AMA Superbike Champion 40 years ago. He followed his victory on a BMW in 1976 with back-to-back championships in 1977 and 1978, when he also became the first rider to win a race on a Japanese-made motorcycle — a mainstay of racing nationally and worldwide these days.

And decades later, he's in charge of one of the most highly regarded motorcycle schools in the country, instructing people how to become better riders by teaching them on the track, where he remains a faster rider than most of his students.

"It means an awful lot — I feel honored to be placed with the people who are my heroes," Pridmore told The Pine Cone, naming other champions like Kenny Roberts, Eddie Lawson, Wayne Rainey (a Monterey Peninsula local) and Gene Romero.

Gordon McCall, who founded the event and its automotive equivalent, the Quail Motorsports Gathering in August, said he had wanted to bestow the honor on Pridmore — who tends to downplay his accomplishments with humor — for a long time.

"Not only did he win the first championship, BMW hasn't done it since. And he won the first three," McCall said. "I just think he is beyond worthy."

McCall recalled being just a year out of high school and seeing Pridmore race at Laguna Seca in 1976. "It was a big deal for him and a big deal for me," he said.

Interestingly, McCall recently found Pridmore's winning BMW in pieces in a hangar in Texas, and it's being restored. "What an unsuspecting bike to have ignited road racing in the course of American history," he said.

Pridmore said he was gratified BMW was willing to take the risk 40 years ago to venture into the sport in the United States, and he recalled the bike being beautiful but difficult to ride. "It was probably built for a 6-4 German," he said, adding that the historic machine is also set to be shown at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance in August and will probably end up in a museum.

In fact, BMW is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year, as well as nearly as many years building motorcycles, so McCall said it made perfect sense to have the German marque as a special class at the show.

"And with Reg, why not get a whole group of BMW bikes there?" he asked.

McCall also acknowledged the contributions Pridmore continues to make today — "the fact that he's 76 years old and is still out there teaching people to be fast and safe," he said.

At the Quail, Pridmore will meet fans and colleagues, share stories and sign copies of his book, "Smooth Riding the Pridmore Way," with co-author Geoff Drake.

"It's tied in with the nicest and most elevated motorcycle people in the country," he said of the event.

And everything else

McCall also talked about the categories he came up with for this year's Quail M/C. "I couldn't help but acknowledge the pre-1916 bikes," he said. All told, some 300 bikes will be shown in Antique, American, British, Italian, Other European, Japanese, Competition On/Off Road, Custom/Modified, Scooter and Chopper classes, as well as the aforementioned BMW Classics and Pre-1916 Motorcycles, Extraordinary Bicycles, and the 40th Anniversary of Superbike.

"There's going to be stuff there that people didn't know existed," McCall predicted. "There will be a lot of personalities, too. Keanu Reeves asked if he could come back — he's kind of become a good friend."

The actor has his own motorcycle company, called Arch, which debuted at last year's Quail Motorcycle Gathering. "He's a very kind and generous person — and the bikes push his buttons," McCall said.

Actor Ryan Reynolds, most recently in "Deadpool," may appear, too. McCall said the head of 20th Century Fox contacted Quail judge Somer Hooker to talk about buying Reynolds a motorcycle. The decision was a one-off Vincent race bike, McCall said. "They bought it for him and gave it to him as a gift," he said. "I hope he'll come up."

Another special guest, former racer Don Emde, will present and sign copies of his new book, "Finding Cannon Ball's Trail." Both Emde and Pridmore are in the American Motorcyclist Association Hall of Fame.

Vendors will be there with their wares, live music will be played, and a Southwestern barbecue will be offered. Parking and gear valet service will be available for attendees riding motorcycles. Tickets are $75 for the general public, $60 for military and students, and $15 for kids, and can be purchased at www.quaillodgetickets.com.

SCRAMP says eyewitnesses will disprove motorcyclist's claims

By KELLY NIX

THE ORGANIZATION that operates Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca says it has evidence refuting claims by a San Francisco inventor that his serious motorcycle accident at the track in March 2015 was caused when he ran into sandbags just off the course.

In a lawsuit filed April 27, Daniel Kim alleged he crashed his Ducati after plowing into a row of sandbags in a runoff area while trying to avoid a slower rider during an open track day. He is suing Sports Car Racing Association of the Monterey Peninsula, and several other parties for an undisclosed amount in damages.

But in a September 2015 letter to Kim's San Francisco lawyer, SCRAMP attorney Andy Swartz refuted key points of Kim's version of the events, including his contention that he struck sandbags and was trying to avoid another rider when he crashed.

"Eyewitnesses confirm that Mr. Kim was not near the sandbags and there was no other motorcycle involved in the incident," Swartz wrote to Kim's lawyer, Sarah London.

Kim, who had multiple fractures and other major injuries from the crash, alleges his Ducati fell on top of him after he was thrown from the motorcycle while taking Turn 5. SCRAMP takes issue with that allegation, too.

"There are eyewitnesses who will state that the motorcycle" — described by Kim as weighing 357 pounds — "did not land on Mr. Kim," Swartz wrote to London.

Kim — who owns Lit Motors, a company that is developing a "self stabilizing" two-wheeled vehicle — filed the lawsuit after Monterey County rejected his claim for damages last year. The county owns the Laguna Seca property, which is next to Highway 68 between Monterey and Salinas.

SCRAMP also points to the release of liability waivers that Kim signed. The waivers state there are "inherent risks of motorcycle riding," and that the signer is participating in track events at his own risk.

"These agreements are not complicated and not confusing," Swartz said. "They are fully enforceable in California. Among other things, Mr. Kim agreed to indemnify SCRAMP — the track operator."

BOY MEETS GIRL, BOY AND GIRL FALL IN LOVE, FORM FILM SCHOOL FOR KIDS

By DENNIS TAYLOR

THEY SHARED a goal — finding success in the film industry — when their separate journeys brought them to Los Angeles, where they both got roles in Shakespeare Santa Monica's stage production of "Love's Labour Lost."

Brittney Kalmbach, a Pennsylvania native, was a princess. Michael Buffo, of Monterey, played a clown.

Between scenes, they discovered they had much in common: Both remained passionate about filmmaking but had fading enthusiasm for the Hollywood hustle. And, there was this ...

"I'd been with this amazing theater company, 'The Unusual Suspects,' that works on weekends with kids in detention centers and foster-care facilities," she said. "I started telling Mike about my adventures with the program, and how much I loved teaching young people."

Buffo quickly realized he'd met his soulmate. His own evolving dream was to return to the Monterey Peninsula and share what he'd learned about filmmaking (both as an actor and behind the camera) with high school kids — an advantage he'd enjoyed, himself, as a student at the Performing Arts Conservatory of Carmel.

Within a week, they were talking marriage. Three months later, he was back in Monterey, building a foundation for what he called the HARA (Heart. Aligned. Response. Acting.) Motion Picture Conservatory, a nonprofit youth filmmakers school, for kids 14-19 years old, based at the Carmel Youth Center.

"HARA was born when we fell in love and started talking about the kind of lives we wanted to lead," said Buffo, a CSU San Francisco alumnus. "We decided we wanted to teach, we wanted to create, and we wanted to live here."

"I thought the school was a brilliant idea, because as actors, we have to go out and audition all the time," said Brittney, who got part of her education at Oxford University in England.

The idea was that HARA would not only teach young people the various skills that can lead to jobs in the film industry, but show them the way to become directors and producers. In other words, to be in charge.

"For young people, it's empowering to know that you can create your own work — you don't always have to wait to be cast," Brittney added. "You can do it yourself, build your own team of people."

The journey begins

In early 2010, she followed him to Carmel, and they launched HARA that winter, making a film with a cast of 11 students. He proposed right afterward, and they were married a few months later.

"I've never felt as happy as I feel right now, doing this work, being a mentor to young people," said Buffo, who also is CEO of his own Monterey film production company, House of 8 Media. "It's what I live for — to love this process, to create and pass on."

This spring, HARA Conservatory has a roster of 24 students from seven high schools taking an eight-week course in which they'll learn acting, directing, camera work, lighting and sound from a faculty of industry professionals. Hollywood insiders who have been guest instructors this season have included Hollywood actor Gil Birmingham, of "Twilight" fame, and veteran actor and producer Linda Bisesti.

The HARA season has been dubbed, "Filmmaker's Lifestyle Youth Mentorship Program." Students spend the first half of the course learning filmmaking during weekend classes at Carmel Youth Center, and then, after school is out for the summer, they come on weekdays.

"It's definitely different from school, where you sit down with your books, and somebody tells you to read this or write that down," said Jeanette Carrera-Valezquez, 16, one of 11 students from Everett Alvarez High who travel from Salinas to participate. "At HARA everything is hands-on. It's all about learning as you go."

A fence works

THE FUTURE of people who illegally immigrated to the United States over the last 30 years promises to be one of the hottest topics in the upcoming presidential election, with Hillary Clinton supporting Barack Obama's executive actions to give legal status to many of the immigrants, and Donald Trump promising to reverse them. Those candidates may sound certain about what they intend to do, but the issue has so many facets, we think no honest person can claim to have a ready answer.

Every immigrant's situation is different, and so are the ways to deal with them. The difficulty of dealing with illegal immigration helps explain why Washington never has.

However, history shows that when a problem like that presents itself, one of the best ways to approach it is for people on the various sides to find common ground wherever they can, act on that, and then try to proceed to other mutually agreeable steps, building consensus as they go.

Thus, it was probably inevitable that when we asked the five candidates in our upcoming congressional election for their positions on illegal immigration, they were all pretty vague about what should be done with immigrants already here. However, they were all quite specific about what should be done at the border with respect to illegal immigration in the future. The Peace & Freedom Party candidate said the border should be wide open for anyone to cross whenever they want to, and the other four said it must be controlled. So let's start with the border, shall we?

The Peace & Freedom guy can go ahead and make his case to the voters, and good luck with getting them to agree. Meanwhile, we have a message for the other four who say our borders must be secure to help them get started on figuring out how to do that: A fence works. Claims to the contrary — such as the one from former Texas Gov. Rick Perry, who said, "If you build a 30-foot wall, the 35-foot ladder business gets real good" — are utter nonsense.

Thirty years, ago, much of our border with Mexico, even in very populated areas, was not even marked, much less fenced. And almost every night, in popular areas such as Otay Mesa just east of San Ysidro and at Smugglers Gulch near the Pacific Ocean, hundreds of people crossed, with only the feeble efforts of a few border patrol agents in off-road vehicles standing in their way. Crossings such as Otay Mesa and the one near the ocean were the routes millions of Mexicans took to El Norte in the 1980s and 1990s. But no longer.

Today, multiple fences, tall and stout, topped with night-vision security cameras and bordered by paved patrol roads, have been erected in many of those locations, and illegal immigration through them has been virtually eliminated. We say "virtually," because a few immigrants still manage to climb over or cut their way through the high-tech fences, but their numbers are negligible. Where the fences have been constructed, the border is secure.

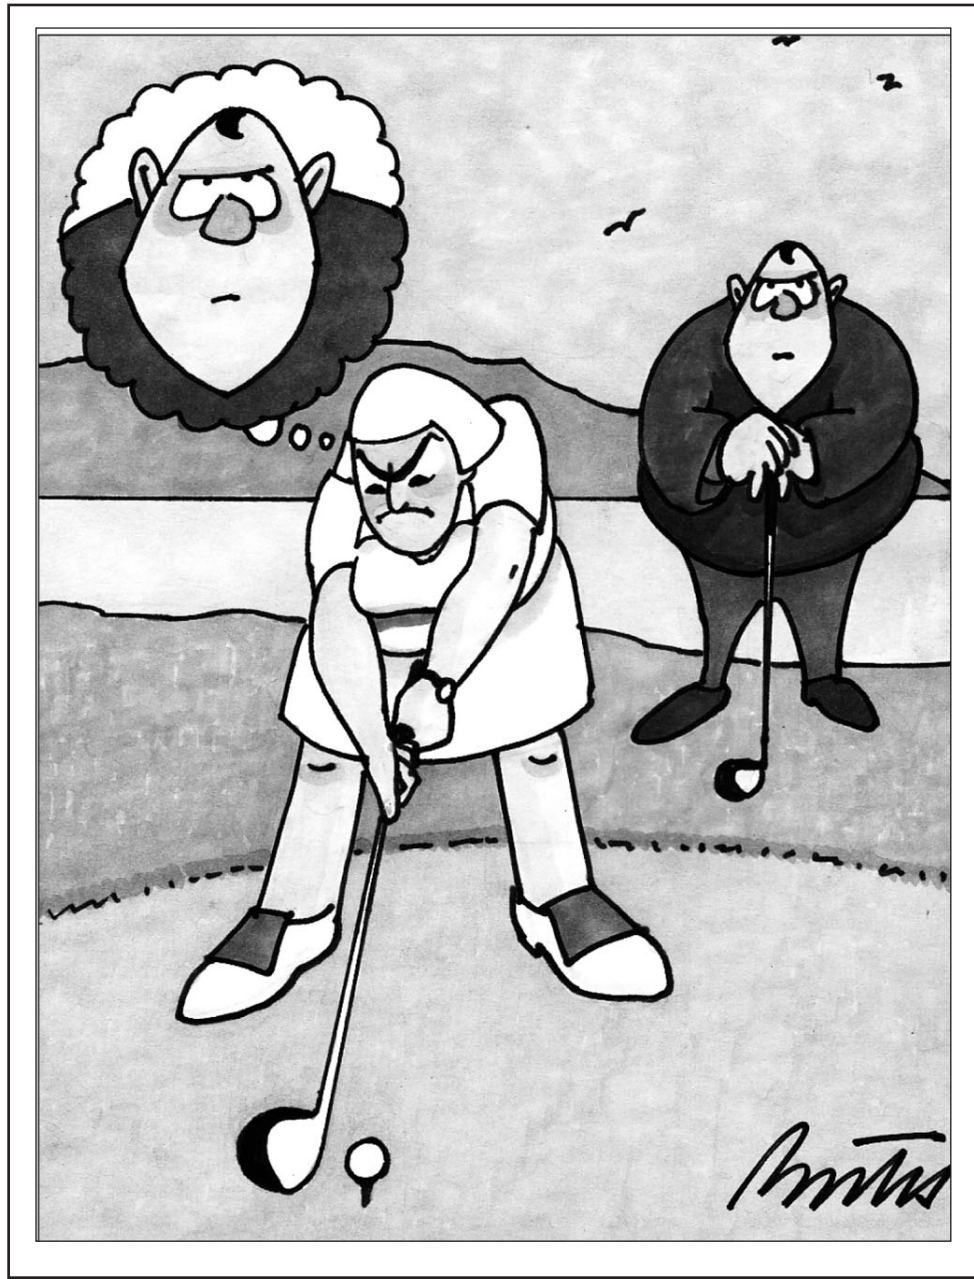

Which is not to say that a modern fence should necessarily be built along the entire U.S.-Mexico border. Doing that would be very expensive, and may not be warranted through terrain that is already difficult to cross. A credible case can also be made that, even in some locations that aren't difficult to get to, cameras and stepped-up patrols might work. But one thing is indisputable: If the fence is built, it will do the job.

Don't believe us? Just go see for yourself. Head down I-5 to the last exit before the border and follow the road toward the west until you come to the end. Leave your car at the parking lot at Border Field State Park and walk about a mile. There's a pleasant beach, a picnic area, and just off to the left, a bull ring that marks the beginning of the teeming city of Tijuana. In between you and the city, a fence worthy of Fort Knox has been built since 2001.

Once you see it, you'll probably love it or hate it, but you'll have no doubt about its effectiveness.

Which proves how easy it can be, even where very complicated issues are concerned, to find something to agree on. Now, about Step 2

Letters to the Editor

Potter's experience

Dear Editor,

Over the last number of years, Big Sur and Carmel Valley have had more than their share of natural disasters. As our communities have been overwhelmed by the Basin Complex Fire, the more recent Cachagua/Tassajara and Pfeiffer Fires — leading to mudslides, extended road flooding and closures, loss of vital telephone and electrical power services — Dave Potter and his staff have been right there to assure that the support and needed emergency services were on the job, to get the communities up and running, quickly and safely.

Dave has been instrumental in getting a dedicated ambulance service for Big Sur, seeing to the creation of a Community Wildlife Protection Plan and the position of countywide fire warden. The Big Sur Land Use Plan, nationally noted for its stringent restrictions on development in the Coastal Zone, continues its vital protection of coastal resources, thanks in large part to Dave's dedicated years of work as a California Coastal Commissioner and as our 5th District Supervisor.

When it comes to knowledge, experience, talent and know-how in the 5th District, and especially in Big Sur and Carmel Valley, I can't imagine anyone but Supervisor Dave Potter to be more able and effective to get the job done.

Alan Perlmutter, Big Sur

Will miss Rancho Cañada

Dear Editor,

I'm shocked and saddened! My beloved Rancho Cañada is closing. Without prior notice of the decision or opportunity for community input, the golf course was sold out from under us and will be turned into wilderness for hikers and campers. As a longtime mini member of the golf course, I wonder what is going to happen to the Rancho Cañada staff — golf pros, grounds keepers, restaurant workers, etc.? What about the Don members who invested big chunks of money for lifetime golf privileges? Rancho Cañada is one of the most affordable golf courses on the Peninsula for senior citizens like me who can't afford or are not allowed to play many of the other courses. Some of the negative results of this action will be increased traffic and congestion, floods of tourists from outside our Peninsula area, left behind refuse from visitors who don't hold the ownership value that we do. Golf at Rancho Cañada is open to the public. The golf course hosts activities for youth groups, schools and community groups and offers a wide selection of golf instructions for those wanting to improve their game.

I know water is part of the issue, but how about some alternatives?

Welcome to the most historic park around that you know nothing about BILL MCCRONE wants you to visit Lower Presidio Historic Park. If your first thought was, “Where the heck is that?”, you’re not alone. McCrone, who is secretary of the Old Monterey Foundation, aims to remedy that and get more people to come see what he believes one day could be a national monument, just off Pacific Avenue near the Lighthouse Avenue exit.

“Its history dates back to 1602,” he said, referring to the year that the explorer Sebastian Vizcaino came ashore during his expedition up the California coast. In fact, it’s even home to “pre-historic archaeological remains of indigenous tribes,” according to the foundation’s website.

Why is McCrone so passionate about this little piece of land and its past? He’ll tell you it’s because of its natural beauty and historical significance. But it most likely runs deeper than that, with roots in patriotism and an ongoing need to build things and fix them up.

McCrone is the son of an Army officer who was stationed at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. McCrone was born five years after the beginning of World War II, and one of his father’s later assignments was working with military cemeteries in Europe where U.S. war dead were buried, so McCrone traveled with him to Normandy and other historic sites.

After graduating from high school in Arlington, Va., McCrone attended West Point, where he became a combat engineer. After completing the U.S. Army’s Ranger school, he was first assigned to the Panama Canal Zone, and then, in 1970, to Vietnam. During his tour there, he also did his first community service project — building an orphanage for a Christian missionary.

In early 1971, he was assigned to open a road to Laos for the South Vietnamese to use for an offensive — and it needed to be done the next day. He led a surprise nighttime assault and finished the mission ahead of schedule. For his actions, he was awarded a Bronze Star for valor — one of several decorations he brought back from that conflict.

McCrone moved to the Monterey Peninsula after the Army sent him to law school at the University of Virginia. He asked to be stationed at Fort Ord as a member of the Judge Advocate General’s Corps because he heard it was an interesting place where he could learn more about litigation. When he left the Army, he moved to Carmel, and he and two friends opened a law firm at the mouth of the valley.

He married Carol, who he’s been with for 34 years, and they raised two sons and a daughter while McCrone managed the law firm he founded with his friends. He was on the board of directors for the Family Resource Center and was its president in 1989, and volunteered in the Boy Scouts and numerous other activities while his children were growing up.

He’s particularly proud of his service on Monterey’s Parks and Recreation Commission. During his tenure, the Sports Center was built and opened, as was San Carlos Beach Park, and construction started on the skateboard park behind Dennis the Menace Park — for which he was a strong advocate — just as his time on the commission was up.

McCrone also served on Monterey’s planning commission, and it was during that time he learned about Lower Presidio Historic Park. He came across a master plan for the area written by historians. The park is home to the Father Serra Statue that was erected by the Stanford family in 1891, the Sloat Monument given by the Daughters of the American Revolution and Native Sons of the Golden West and dedicated in 1910, and Fort Mervine, the first Army post built on the West Coast in 1846.

The City of Monterey leased the land from the Army in 1986, with the understanding that the city would maintain it, but by 2004, not much had been done. The Old Monterey Foundation Board got involved and fundraising began. Now, they have raised $750,000 of the $850,000 needed to begin the first phase of fixing the park up

Early Carmel businesses —

The Secret Chamber of Commerce

To celebrate the city’s centennial, the Carmel Chamber of Commerce is highlighting some of the city’s earliest businesses which are still serving the community.

IT’S A mystery that was solved a few years ago by researching old issues of The Pine Cone. It started with a logo that said “Founded 1928,” then a written history that said the Carmel Business Association was founded in 1931. As it turned out, the founding was 1922.

Any way you look at it, the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, previously called the Carmel Business Association, has a rich history.

In 1922, the formation of a group of businessmen called the Carmel Chamber of Commerce was noted in an article in The Carmel Pine Cone. They formed for the purpose of participating in meetings of the “Peninsula commercial bodies” and to be eligible for funding from Monterey County. Early participants included William Overstreet, the founder and editor of The Carmel Pine Cone, John B. Jordan of the Pine Inn, Ray C. DeYoe of the Carmel Realty Company and others representing “every business concern.” R.G. Leidig was another familiar name.

The meetings were to be held monthly but somehow were very low key to the point that in April 1931 the next editor of The Pine Cone, Perry Newberry, published a “scoop” that there was a Carmel Chamber of Commerce after all, after having denied such for many years. When brought to light that there was, in fact, “a secret Chamber of Commerce,” there was much opposition to the idea. After numerous meetings, the organization called itself the Carmel Businessmen’s Association, met great objection from the town’s many female business owners, and finally named itself the Carmel Business Association.

Some notable dates:

1931 — The Carmel Business

Association, which grew out of the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, was established. Its first President was Robert Parrott, a realtor. Annual dues were $5.

1933 — The CBA developed and issued Carmel Dollars “to stimulate worker-relief and purchasing in town” during the Depression. The “dollars” were designed by artist Jo Mora and Catherine Seideneck, the sister of Hugh Comstock, a well-known builder.

1938 — The initiative to protect Carmel Beach from commercial encroachment was proposed and drawn up by the Carmel Business Association. The ordinance’s purpose was to “protect forever the beach from erection of any structures which might mar the simple beauty of the shore of Carmel Bay”.

1961 — The first woman President of the Carmel Business Association was the owner of a dress shop on Ocean Avenue, Gladys McCloud, who is the mother of former Mayor Sue McCloud. Other early Presidents included Harold Nielsen (1941) and his son-in-law, Merv Sutton (1972), both of Nielsen Bros Market and Howard Brunn (1963) of Mark Fenwick.

1975 — The Board of Directors of the CBA made a first attempt to change the name back to the Chamber of Commerce.

1994 — The Carmel Art Festival was founded by the Carmel Gallery Alliance, a standing committee of the Carmel Business Association. The Festival subsequently became a separate organization as it grew in popularity. The city was a co-sponsor early on.

2003 — The Carmel Business Association officially changed its name to the Carmel Chamber of Commerce.

The Carmel Chamber of Commerce is thriving, with 515 members from the Carmel area. Through the years, it has always been the goal of the CBA/CCC to promote but protect and enhance this unique village that never wanted to be like any other.

legal in Big Sur. “Vacation rentals support both,” Jones explained, because staying in an existing home “is better for resource protection than building a hotel room.” He also refuted the idea that short-term rentals eliminate workforce housing by pointing out that the plan calls for most workforce housing to be provided by businesses, which are located in commercial zones, not residential ones.

Why they should be prohibited

But resident Ken Wright said he believes the plan does prohibit short term rentals. He said short term rentals are replacing long term rentals in residential neighborhoods, reducing the number of affordable homes available to those who work in Big Sur.

“The county shall protect existing affordable housing in the Big Sur coastal area from loss due to deterioration, conversion or any other reason,” the plan reads.

The plan also seems to support the idea that visitor serving accommodations should be limited to specific areas along Highway 1.

“The significance of the residential areas for planning purposes is that they have the capacity, to some extent, to accommodate additional residential demand,” the plan reads. But “unlike the larger properties or commercial centers, they are not well suited for commercial agriculture, commercial, or visitor uses; use of these areas, to the extent consistent with resource protection, should continue to be for residential purposes.”

Balancing resource protection with accommodating visitors seems like no easy task, but the plan appears to offer a remedy in case there is a dispute between the two — and it might not bode well for short term rentals. “Where there are conflicts, protection of these natural resources is the primary objective with definite precedence over land use development,” the plan states.

What comes next?

It’s unclear what impact the Big Sur Land Plan will have on the process to craft a countywide ordinance regulating vacation rentals along the coast. County official Melanie Beretti said it’s too early to say if the ordinance will treat Big Sur differently than other sections of the county’s coastline, but she did say that “it’s possible that certain areas need to be handled differently.”

She also conceded that “we can’t adopt a policy that is counter to existing land use plans.”

For now, Beretti is working on setting up two public workshops on the subject, and she’s hoping to get the first one on the county planning commission’s agenda sometime in June.

The hearing would “bring forward all the complicated factors and lay them out in an intelligible manner,” and offer the public “an opportunity to weigh in.” The planning commission would also have a chance to “give staff direction in moving forward with a draft ordinance.”

A second public workshop would present a chance to fine-tune the draft ordinance, and if all goes according to plan, the draft would go before the planning commission for review. Eventually, the supervisors would vote on it, but it’s too early to say when, Beretti said.

“We want to move the process forward as quickly as we can,” she added. “But we don’t want to rush it and leave no room for public comment.”

‘Hotel California’ in Arabic?

IF YOU can get to the Defense Language Institute’s Language Day on May 13 by 10:10 a.m., you’ll be able to hear students perform the Eagles megahit, “Hotel California,” in a language even older than Don Henley. From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Presidio of Monterey, there will be dozens of other performances, including a Sudanese wedding dance, Spanish flamenco music and dance, and a Chinese dragon dance.

Mini-classes where you can learn to exchange pleasantries in another language and indulge your curiosity about other world cultures are also scheduled.

The fun continues through the weekend with the City of Monterey’s Language Capital of the World cultural festival on Custom House Plaza, in which DLI participates along with other local organizations. In addition to musical performances, there will be crafts and plenty of international food. Both events are free. More information is at dliflc.edu and lcowfest.com.

Correction

Last week’s front-page story, “P.B. housing project goes to planning commission,” incorrectly stated the date and time of a meeting regarding the Pebble Beach affordable housing project. No date for a public hearing on the plan has been finalized.

"Everyone goes in and turns around and drives right out because they think they're on the Presidio and their car's going to be searched," he said. "It seems like such a wasted opportunity. It should be the jewel of the city's park system."

There are beautiful views of Fisherman's Wharf and the harbor from the hilltop, and the overall plans include adding signage to increase traffic in the park, replacing an old cyclone fence with one that's more historically accurate, and adding walking trails to parts of the park that aren't easily accessible. Historical buildings and stables will also receive some TLC.

McCrone envisions people eating lunch on benches, enjoying the view, and learning more about the park's rich history. He's been stopping more to smell the roses himself for the last seven years, since he had a heart transplant. He'd already had six bypasses for heart problems he attributes to exposure to Agent Orange, and his heart was just about done.

The transplant didn't go smoothly, but after more than 10 hours on the table, McCrone said, "The finger of God reached down and touched my heart and got it started."

"Every day since then has been a blessing," he said. "I greet each day as though it were a gift."

One of Helen's most distinctive traits was her sense of adventure, which she passed on to her children. "Every day is fresh and uncharted territory," said Tara of her mom's philosophy.

According to Tara, Helen shunned commercialism and embraced recycling before it became fashionable. "She was the original low carbon footprint person," she said.

Helen was also a gracious and generous host. "She opened her home to people in need," Tara recalled.

"Even though we had this tremendous gift, we were very diligent in pricing," she said.

"We didn't spend the entire sum, by any stretch, and are keeping a reserve for upgrades and updates," Sheffield said.

Bates said having a fund reserve in the nonprofit world is "a luxury."

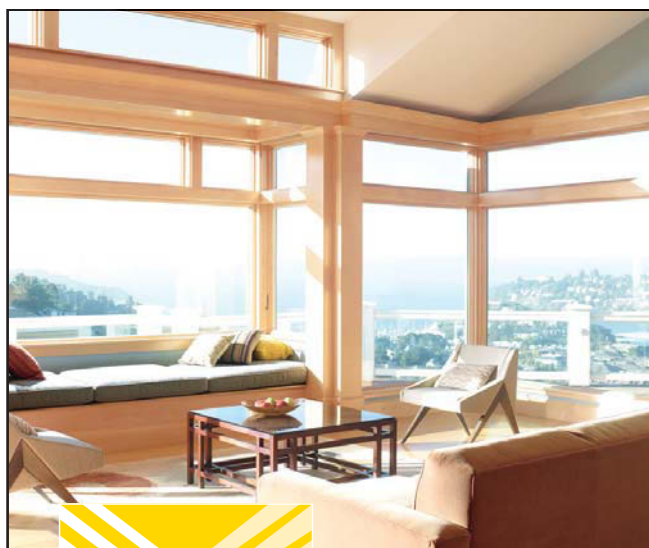

And the nearly dozen volunteer instructors who have been idle during the renovation are ready to go, according to Bates. The youngest instructors are in their 30s, she estimated, and the oldest is in his 80s. Some are foundation members, but not all.

"We start off with two new classes on Monday," she said. "We already have a wait list for Windows 10."

That class will be handled by Roy Hilts, an 89-year-old foundation member who has been teaching computer classes there for more than a decade.

"It keeps me off the streets and out of the bars," said Hilts, a retired executive from Crown Zellerbach Corp.

A ribbon cutting has been organized by the Carmel Chamber of Commerce to celebrate the new technology center. It will take place Wednesday, May 18, from 4 to 5:30 p.m. and is open to all, while a members-only preview will take place May 13.

Ludwig van Beethoven composed six major piano trios, and three talented musicians will play three of them Sunday, May 15, at Sunset Center.

When they visit Sunset, cellist David Finckel, pianist Wu Han and violinist Phillip Setzer will perform Beethoven's Trio in E-flat major, Op. 1 No.1; his Trio in C minor, Op.1 No. 3; and his Trio in D major, Op. 7 No.1.

Besides being married, Finckel and Han have established themselves as one of America's most respected piano-cello duos. Next year, Finckel, Han and Cellist David Finckel and pianist Wu Han (above) join violinist Phillip Setzer Sunday at Sunset Center. The one-time frontman for the Modern Lovers, Jonathan Richman (right) plays Wednesday in Big Sur.

Setzer plan to return and perform Beethoven's other three piano trios.

Presented by the Carmel Music Society, the concert begins at 3 p.m. Tickets are $45 to $60. Call (831) 625-9938 or visit carmel-music.org.

■ Woodstock revisited

Offering a musical tribute to Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young, Almost Cut My Hair rocks The Barnyard shopping center Saturday, May 14.

The band is led by singer Gary Burr, a former member of the Pure Prairie League and a gifted songwriter who was written an impressive number of hits for country music artists, including Juice Newton, Conway Twitty, Garth Brooks and Wynona Judd.

Almost Cut My Hair meticulously recreates a performance by CSN&Y — no small challenge given the distinctive quality of their voices. "The vocal harmonies and the musicianship are spot on," said Marc Paulhus, who is helping to organize the show.

The music starts at 8 p.m., and tickets are $20. Proceeds benefit the Carmel Valley Rotary Club. www.eventbrite.com

Cultura chef named, Craft Beer Week fun, and the Olive Growers Fest

THE EXODUS from Sierra Mar at the Post Ranch Inn continues. Executive chef John Cox is hitting the road in early June, and not long after, chef Michelle Estigoy will leave to become executive chef at Cultura, the restaurant Sarah Kabat-Marcy — another Sierra Mar fixture, on the wine side — is set to open in the former Jack London's space in downtown Carmel.

■ Craft Beer Week

Peter B's Brewpub is celebrating American Craft Beer Week May 16-22 with special prices (50 percent off "growler" refills, 50 percent off Peter B's bottled beers, and a daily featured beer for $4 pints and $6 mugs all day), giveaways and other deals, as well as a four-course Brewers Dinner with executive chef Jason Giles Tuesday, May 17, at 6 p.m. for $45 per person, plus tax and tip.

The dinner will focus on pairing Peter B's beers with Giles' culinary creations, highlighting the best aspects of both. The feast will take place in the private barrel room and will include a first course of Foie Gras Two Ways (torchon and seared) and raspberry aspic paired with Pacific Street Raspberry Wheat beer, a second course of duck confit grilled cheese with duck fat fries paired with Inclusion Amber Ale, and a third course of coffee-cured duck breast over a white asparagus and potato hash served with Dancing Goat Russian Imperial Stout.

The fourth course will pair a dessert of berry trifle with a glass of Barrel-Aged Sour Ale.

Later in the week, Beer Education Night will be offered on Friday at 5 and 7 p.m., when guests can learn about craft beer with food pairings for $15 per person, plus tax and tip, and on Saturday, live music will be played in the patio from 3 to 6 p.m.

Call Peter B's Brewpub at (831) 649-7874 for more information about American Craft Beer Week events or to reserve a seat for the May 17 dinner. It's located behind the Portola Hotel & Spa at the foot of Alvarado Street in downtown Monterey. www.peterbs-brewpub.com

■ Podero Sapaio dinner at La Balena

Restaurant owner Anna Bartolini said she's excited to welcome back winemaker Massimo Piccin of Podere Sapaio in Bolgheri, Italy, to La Balena restaurant on Junipero north of Sixth Avenue in Carmel for a vertical tasting of Sapaio Bolgheri wines Sunday, May 22, at 6:30 p.m.

Dinner will feature four courses prepared by chef Brad Briske, focusing on a whole Fogline Farms pig, paired with Volpolo 2013 and Sapaio 2008, 2009 and 2010 vintages.

The cost is $130 per person, including tax and tip, and those interested in attending should call (831) 250-6295 or email info@labalenacarmel.com for reservations.

■ Anton & Michel features Tudor wines

Anton & Michel Restaurant on Mission Street has begun offering tastes of Dan Tudor's wines, by the flight as well as paired with various dishes on the menu.

"Michelle and I first started talking about Cultura when I asked her about her travels in Oaxaca," Kabat-Marcy said. "I worked with Michelle for several years at Post Ranch Inn, where she was executive sous chef, and I was always impressed by her passion, personality, culinary techniques and management style."

The two have traveled together, including a recent trip to Cuba, and Kabat-Marcy said she's "a natural fit" for the new venture, which will have a Latin American feel, "because not only is she an amazing chef, she grew up in a household where her grandmother and mom would spend time together making big pots of Chile Colorado and dozens of tamales."

Estigoy's grandmother had a restaurant in Mexico, so cooking is in her blood, and "the local flavors have always been close to her heart," Kabat-Marcy said.

Estigoy will remain at Post Ranch until next month, and the two women plan on working closely together over the next couple of months to develop the new restaurant's menus and nail down the details prior to opening.

Looking for a bit of summertime in a glass? Step up to the bar at Tarp's and try one of these new concoctions: The Passionfruit Margarita (left) with reposado tequila, Cointreau, passionfruit purée, and sweet and sour, or The First Word (right), containing Bourbon, yellow Chartreuse and fresh lemon.

"We have launched an exciting new program at Anton & Michel," said owner Tony Salameh. "The restaurant now offers tasting flights of Tudor Wines in the Court of the Fountains, paired with lunch menu items, small plates, as well as dinner."

For example, the 2009 Tondré Vineyard Pinot pairs well with the restaurant's Duo of Grilled Lamb Chops or Black Angus Steak Wrap, according to Salameh, and the 2011 Tudor Santa Lucia Highlands Pinot Noir goes nicely with Blackened Salmon Caesar, Grilled Lamb Sliders or Herb-Potato Gnocchi.

The flights include 2011 Tudor Santa Lucia Highlands Pinot Noir, 2007 Balo Vineyard Anderson Valley Pinot Noir, 2009 Tondré Vineyard SLH Pinot Noir and 2013 Tondré Vineyard Nacina Riesling. Tasting flights are $20 and include a 2-oz. pour of each wine.

Salameh said restaurant guests can order more than a half-dozen different Tudor Wines by the glass or the bottle for onsite consumption, or can pay retail to take a bottle home.

The restaurant is located at the Court of the Fountains on Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues in Carmel. Call (831) 624-2406 or visit www.antonandmichel.com for more information.

■ Summer sipping at Tarp's

Just in time for sunshine and long days, Tarp's Roadhouse at Highway 68 and Canyon del Rey in Monterey has introduced a new lineup of seasonal cocktails, like the Passionfruit Margarita with Avion Reposado Tequila, Cointreau, passionfruit purée, sweet and sour mix, and a cayenne pepper-sugar rim.

The Princess Aviator features Bummer & Lazarus Gin (made in a distillery on Treasure Island in San Francisco Bay, and named after two famous stray dogs from the 1800s), Crème de Violette and fresh lemon.

The Royal Plantation, meanwhile, contains Grand Reserve Plantation Rum, Royal Combier (a liqueur based on a recipe Jean-Baptiste Combier created while he was serving time in prison in the French village of Nantes in 1860), fresh lemon and a sugar rim. It's described as the restaurant's "twist on the famous Sidecar."

The First Word contains Russell's Reserve Bourbon, yellow Chartreuse and fresh lemon. (In case anyone is wondering, the more famous Last Word was created in the 1920s and features gin, green Chartreuse, Maraschino liqueur and fresh lime juice.)

Meanwhile, the traditional whiskey sour also gets an update at Tarp's with the Bourbon Sour, containing Four Roses Bourbon, fresh lemon juice and egg white, and housemade Luxardo cherry simple syrup.

Stop by Tarp's to check out any (or all, if there's time). The restaurant is open daily. www.tarps.com.

■ Alvarado Street Brewery is 2

Just in time for its second birthday, Alvarado Street Brewery in downtown Monterey has opened its brand-new beer garden behind the brewery and grill, and is opening its production facility and tasting room in Salinas.

Starting Friday, May 13, and running through Saturday, May 21, the brewery's celebration will include the release of the Triple Cone Triple IPA on Friday and the special Anniversary Ale release on Saturday. The Anniversary Ale is Imperial Stout aged in Bourbon barrels and will be sold in bottle and on draft.

Out in the beer garden on Sunday, the chef will break out some of his special smoked brisket and ribs.

Then, on Thursday, May 19, the brewpub will host Cellarmaker Brewing and Sante Adairius Rustick Ales, showcasing their beers, and Friday will mark the grand opening of the new production brewery and tasting room at 1315 Dayton St., Ste. E, in Salinas, with the party running from 6 to 10 p.m.

Sky Country and El Camino Sutra will perform, and Real Smoked Barbecue will cater the event, which has a cover charge of $20 per person.

A Silent Disco in the Beer Garden on May 21 from 8 to 11 p.m. will wrap up the festivities.

For more information, visit www.alvaradostreetbrewery.com.

■ More Fifi's tastings

Fifi's Café owner Calvin Wilkes and resident wine expert Jacques Melac will host a two-part tasting of Chardonnay and Pinot Noir this month. The first will be held May 15, while the second will take place May 29. Both will run from 3 to 5 p.m. and cost $25 per person.

The first tasting will include chardonnays 2012 Château Montelena, 2014 Far Niente 2012 Franciscan Cuvée Sauvage and 2014 Rombauer, and Pinots 2012 Domaine Anderson, 2012 Domaine de la Côte, 2011 Donum Estate, 2010 Miura Silacci Vineyard and 2010 Pelerin Excelsis.

Part Two's chardonnays will be 2013 Domaine Serene Dundee Hills Evenstad Reserve, 2013 Landmark Overlook, 2013 Sandhi and 2013 Vie di Romans, while the Pinots will include 2014 Belle Glos Las Alturas, 2012 Domaine Serene Evenstad Reserve, 2013 Far Niente EnRoute Les Pommiers, 2012 Kevin Olsen and 2013 Three Sticks Gaps Crown.

Reservations are recommended but not required. Fifi's is located at 1188 Forest Ave. in Pacific Grove. www.fifiscafe.com or (831) 372-5325

■ Kids in the kitchen

Happy Girl Kitchen in Pacific Grove is offering a summer camp for kids who might like to learn how to make healthy meals from local produce, to cook and bake, to be safe in the kitchen, and to make good choices about what they eat. The July 11-15 summer camp will also include two days on an organic farm in Watsonville and a visit to the local farmers market, as well as trips to check out tide pools and picnic on the beach, arts and crafts, and special guests.

“We will adventure in the Happy Girl Kitchen and around Pacific Grove to learn about food and community! You do not have to pack any food, as the children will be making and eating morning snacks, lunch and snacks and even taking home something every day!” said owners Todd and Jordan Champagne. “By the end of the week, your child will be ready to help out in the kitchen and may have more skills than you do!”

Camps are offered for kids ages 8 to 12 and ages 12 to 15, and the fun runs from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., with after care available until 5 p.m. for an additional $7 per hour. The total cost of the camp is $395 per child, with discounts for siblings. Internships are available, too.

Happy Girl Kitchen is located at 173 Central Ave. in Pacific Grove. Visit www.happygirlkitchen.com.

■ Second annual Olive Growers Festival

The Quail and Olive will hold the 2nd Annual Olive Growers Festival from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 21, at its store at 3 Pilot Road in Carmel Valley Village.

The free festival gives olive oil aficionados the opportunity to taste the 2015 harvest from local California growers. Longtime local chef John Pisto will judge a cooking contest focusing on small bites at noon, and a discussion will take place at 1 p.m. on the Controversy of Imported Oils. At 2, cardiologist and Quail & Olive owner Stephen Brabeck will talk about the health benefits of a Mediterranean diet, and at 3, grower Dean Griggs will share stories about his Tres Osos EVOO grown and made in Carmel Valley.

Chapparal Gardens will be on hand to offer tastings of its fruit and balsamic vinegars, and guests can sample Robert Kirkland’s Monterey Bay Salt Co. salts and Chef Andre Averseng’s olive jams and tapenades.

For more information, contact (831) 659-4288 or visit www.QuailandOlive.com.

■ Art & Wine kick-off mixer

The Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce will hold its inaugural Art & Wine Celebration kick-off mixer Wednesday, May 18, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at Patricia Qualls Studio, at 15 W. Carmel Valley Road in Carmel Valley Village. Valley Hills Deli & BBQ will provide the food, and Holman Ranch will bring the wine. The cost to attend is $10 per person.

The mixer will kick off the chamber’s 12th Annual Art & Wine Celebration, which features artists of all types and showcases local wines on June 18. The annual art and wine is free and open to the public, with more than 60 booths, and live performances by Along Came Betty, the Franklin Street Voices, Joseph Lucido and others. Wine tasting costs $30 in advance or $40 at the gate, and a new VIP ticket ($60) includes food, shade, a lounge area and a PopShot from Pocketful of Plans.

For more information, visit www.carmelvalleychamber.com.

Twilight cyclers to welcome Amgen racers

TWILIGHT CYCLING at Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca, when riders of all ages and skills are invited to ride around the track for as many or as few laps as they can muster over a couple of hours in the early evening, will take place shortly after the pros finish their race on the 2.238-mile circuit the end of Stage 4 of the Amgen Tour of California Friday.

“Mazda Raceway Laguna Seca provides many opportunities for race car and motorcycle enthusiasts to test their skills on the same track as their professional heroes,” organizers explained. “Road cycling enthusiasts will have the same opportunity May 18 to follow in the narrow tire tracks of their professional racing heroes during the monthly Twilight Cycling ride.”

The Amgen Tour riders are expected to reach the track at the end of their 133.6-mile ride from Morro Bay at around 3:45 p.m., and Twilight Cycling will begin around 5:30 p.m.

Bay Bikes hosts the monthly evening ride and all that’s required to participate are a bicycle, a helmet and $10. The store will have demo bikes and helmets, can help with minor maintenance, and will hold a coasting race on the track, host a BBQ, and have goody bags for the first 50 riders who register. Bay Bikes will also conduct an in-store promotion to win an autographed Amgen Tour of California rider jersey.

ART FESTIVAL TURNS 23, PLEIN AIR PAINTERS COMPETE FOR MAYOR'S PRIZE

OFFERING AN unparalleled setting for a plein air contest, the Carmel Art Festival returns Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 13-15 for its 23rd year.

At the heart of the festival is its juried plein air contest, which brings together more than 60 painters from Monterey County and beyond. Competing for the "Mayor's Choice" award and other prizes, the contestants are required to finish their paintings by Friday at sundown — just two days after

The completed — and, in some cases, still wet — paintings will be displayed along Mission Street next to Devendorf Park. A silent auction of the paintings continues through Saturday at 6 p.m., and a live auction immediately follows.

"The contest is much shorter than any of the others I've been in," said painter Rich Brimer, who owns the Carmel Visual Arts gallery in the Barnyard shopping center. "It's very difficult to create a successful painting in just 48 hours. It's challenging, but it's exhilarating. Everybody is painting under the same circumstances, so at least it's an even playing field."

In addition to the plein air contest, the festival features a celebration of art and music Saturday and Sunday in the park. Proceeds from the event benefit the local arts programs for kids. Visit carmelartfestivalcalifornia.com.

■ Cypress serves as muse

Combining traditional Chinese artistic techniques with those he learned in the United States, painter Lucas H. Wong pays tribute to Carmel and its distinctive trees in his new book, "The Poetic Cypress of Carmel 100." The Carmel Bay Company will host a reception for the artist Saturday, May 14, from 2 to 4 p.m.

A native of China, Wong moved to San Jose as a young adult and later established art gallery in San Jose. Since then, he has been a regular visitor to the Monterey Peninsula, participating in the past two Carmel Art Festivals.

The Carmel Bay Company is located at Ocean and Lincoln. Call (831) 624-3868.

■ Meet Mark at the CAA

Noted for his exquisite local landscapes and seascapes, painter Mark Farina greets the public Saturday, May 14, from 1 to 3 p.m., at the Carmel Art Association. The event is the latest in the CAA's "Meet the Artist" series.

A familiar sight along the coast — where he can often be seen working on his latest canvas — Farina will demonstrate how he creates a small plein air study on site, and brings it into his studio, where he transforms it into a large-scale oil painting. An exhibit of Farina's work is on display this month at the CAA, which is located on Dolores between Eighth and Ninth. Call (831) 624-6176.

■ Light looks at social issues

A social documentary photographer whose work has captured death row inmates, farm workers and coal miners, Ken Light presents a talk Wednesday, May 18, at the Center for Photographic Art in Sunset Center.

The curator of the Center for Photography at UC Berkeley's Graduate School of Journalism, Light has had his images published in nine books, as well as countless magazines and newspapers.

The talk starts at 6:30 p.m. The event is free for CPA members and $10 for non-members. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 625-5181.

■ A man of many talents

When he's not playing Irish music, multi-instrumentalist Patrick Karnahan can often be found at his easel with a brush in his hand.

The founder of the Black Irish Band, Karnahan displays a collection of his paintings, "The Romantic Age of the Steam Train," Saturday and Sunday, May 14-15, at Gallerie Amsterdam. A bona fide train historian, he has created more than 500 paintings of locomotives. Besides showcasing his work as a painter and his enthusiasm for trains, Karnahan will play music during Sunday's reception, and he'll be joined by members of the Black Irish Band.

The gallery is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. Call (831) 624-4355.

Monterey County introduces its Local Emerging Artists Program.

The Carmel-based group is seeking painters, sculptors, photographers and other artists — "in the early stages of their careers" — who can demonstrate that a grant will make a big impact "on their work and on our community."

"When you are just starting out in your arts career, a little help along the way can make the difference," said Big Sur painter Erin Gaffill, who was named a Champion of the Arts by the arts council in 2009.

Long recognized for its support of local arts education programs, the arts council is expanding its mission. "We are thrilled to finally have this opportunity to support individual artists," executive director Paulette Lynch added.

The arts council is accepting applications for grants

■ Nancy welcomes trio

With several of its artists in town for the annual plein aire contest, the Nancy Dodds Gallery will host an Open House Saturday, May 14.

Three artists — Paul Kratter, Wayne Mckenzie and Larry Cannon — will be offering painting demonstrations through the day, illuminating their work and making friends with visitors.

“Wayne and Larry will be bouncing back and forth from the festival to the gallery all day,” Dodds said. “Wayne is really fun, too, as he has that quick Australian wit. And Paul is a riot.”

The gallery is located on Seventh just west of San Carlos. Call (831) 624-0346.

■ Wild and whimsical

Calling attention to a local multi-media artist whose work offers “a childlike look at our history,” Cheryl Watts Pottery & Gallery in Monterey unveils “The Wild Whimsical World of Katie Crawford,” Saturday, May 14.

The gallery, which has been known by other names, also celebrates its 25th birthday.

Fascinated by the passage of time, Crawford finds inspiration in memories and childhood curiosity. “I always begin my work with a flash of inspiration, and end it when I believe I have captured the fleeting idea so it can be experienced again and again,” she explained.

A reception starts at 4 p.m. Call (831) 655-0303.

Bakery serves up portrait show

An exhibit that calls attention to Sand City’s emergence as a hub for artists is on display this month at Sweet Elena’s Bakery.

Captured by photographer Kayhan Ghodsi, the images focus on the many creative individuals who work in Sand City. Included are portraits of more than 30 painters, sculptors, photographers and mixed media artists.

The show continues through May 25. The bakery is located at 465 Olympia Ave. Call (831) 393-2063.

A serious train enthusiast, painter Patrick Karnahan presents a show of his work this weekend at Gallerie Amsterdam. He’ll also play Irish music.

FILM SCHOOL

The season will culminate with a 21-day shoot of an original film, a modernized and Americanized version of a British movie, 2011's "War of the Buttons" (to be re-titled "War of the Limelight"), based on a French novel. Twenty students will be cast in the film with a half-dozen community actors who will audition for the adult roles. All 24 students will participate behind the camera as crew.

The HARA Conservatory will enter "War of the Limelight" at international film festivals, and the Buffos are hopeful that it will be premiered in October at the Carmel Film Festival.

The movie will be co-directed by Michael Buffo and HARA alumnus Eric Hinwood, who is about to graduate from Whittier College.

"Eric is a prodigy in the video production industry," Buffo said. "He's a real hard worker, comes from a poor background, and always worked for his tuition at HARA."

The school offers a sliding tuition scale, based on need.

"You pay what you can, in a way," Buffo explained. "Some students could pay everything, some couldn't. Eric worked it off."

"HARA is unique. I was there for the very first season, when it was just a way for actors to see what it was like to work in film, and have their work put on a reel — something to put on a resume," Hinman said. "After that, it expanded into the more technical side of film. I've worked on plenty of sets as a grip, or an assistant camera operator, thanks to the experience I got through HARA."

Some HARA students were eyeing filmmaking as a career before they arrived. Others simply came for the experience.

"I want to learn how to make films that tell stories in the most elegant and intriguing way possible," said David Desotelle, 15, from Harbor High in Santa Cruz. "But I've learned a ton of things about people skills, about camera work, and I've learned a lot about sound."

How to audition

Tina Marie Grubb, 15, makes a six-hour trip with her mom from Simi Valley, near Los Angeles, to participate every weekend.

"I really want to become an actress," she said. "What I'm learning is how to walk through that door, and down the hallway, and up those steps (to an audition), and become something I want for my future."

To help support its work, HARA will hold a $250-a-plate black-tie fundraiser later this month in Pebble Beach, with live music from recording artists Kris Angelis and Austin Shaw, comedian Shelby Bond, Hollywood insiders, and the student filmmakers. (Purchase tickets at <https://goo.gl/k4WPLW> or call Michael Buffo at (323) 945-3979.)

"We're hoping to have people there who are willing to give more," Mike Buffo said. "Our goal that night is to raise at least $50,000 toward our budget."

Additional information about the HARA Motion Picture Conservatory can be found at www.haramotionpictures.com, or by contacting Michael Buffo at mike@haramotionpictures.com.

taught them. When the youngest tried to get out of it, the two older siblings told their mom that the training was too valuable to skip. He went.

Mayer said creating Carmel Cotillions to give more kids a leg up was the right thing to do. She didn't like that people who didn't have the opportunities she did while growing up weren't able to learn the rules of the social and professional game — what she called the "elitist element" of understanding etiquette. "I wanted it to be more egalitarian," she explained.

In addition to cotillion classes, which meet more or less monthly during the school year, there are shorter courses to prepare children for specific events, like birthday parties, a trip to an amusement park or an afternoon at the movies.

Mayer likened etiquette to her experience with the law, saying that law school is about learning all the rules, but an attorney only really gets a grasp on the profession when applying them to specific cases. That's why she emphasizes the general principle of respect for others so heavily. From her experience in the petroleum industry, she draws the understanding that when someone else's culture is significantly different from yours, you have to be able to adapt.

However, even she has moments when polite behavior collides with her own beliefs. For example, although Mayer's a self-described feminist, her husband insists that her sons open the door for her. She described the conundrum gentlemen face nowadays — do they open the door and risk hearing, "I can do that myself," or not open it and risk offending a woman who expects it?

Sometimes, you just can't win.

CHRISTIE'S
INTERNATIONAL REAL ESTATE

Can anyone out there find me a job? Retirement is exhausting!

YOU MAY think that anyone who has been retired as long as I have wouldn't think of looking for work. Wrong! I need to go back to work. Retirement is wearing me out. These golden years can be busier than a Chicago voter on Election Day. I don't seem to have any time to relax. I don't even have time for tai chi, which means that my white crane is no longer spreading its wings. You see, retirement means no days off — not even holidays. I can't leave work early, and I can't call in sick.

Statistics indicate that many people have stopped looking for work in this difficult economy. I am not one of them. I need gainful employment. I need a break from retirement.

I'm longing for the good old days when I could waste a half hour around the water cooler talking about "Cheers" and "The Golden Girls." I want to sit in my office cubbyhole and daydream while looking out the window at ... at, well, at nothing. I want to run the office football pool — always good for blowing off a couple of hours during the workday.

So does anyone need a slightly used writer/salesman/stock boy/delivery man/cashier/greeter/steelworker/paperboy? The aforementioned positions show up on my résumé, which has more pages in it than a lease for an Ocean Avenue storefront. (Should I omit football pool organizer?)

I would like to go back to being a regional manager for a large, multi-hundred dollar corporation. Now that was a job! Minutes after I walked into the office, a cup of steaming hot coffee magically appeared on my desk along with a copy of the Wall Street Journal, and a list of calls to return already divided into "before you read the WSJ" and "after you read the WSJ."

Then write a couple of reports that nobody ever read, before heading off to the gym for a quick workout. Then time for a leisurely lunch in the Marina. No, not the city of Marina, but Marina Del Rey, near L.A. Lots of great restaurant choices there. It was fun to just get a hot dog and a Coke and watch the steroid studs at Muscle Beach preen and strut while taking quick looks over their shoulders to see who was watching them.

Of course, it wasn't all fun and games. There were those long plane rides to Hawaii, the westernmost part of my sales region, with lobster dinners in Honolulu while looking out at Diamond Head. And I can't forget those boring company meetings in Puerto Vallarta and Bermuda. Once I had to endure a week at Spanish Bay.

The momentous decisions I made as an executive now pale in comparison to deciding where to go for coffee in the morning. I like coffee al fresco. The Carmel Coffee and Cocoa Bar in the Carmel Plaza is a great choice, unless there's a bunch of tour buses lined up on Junipero between Ocean and Seventh. The Plaza is their first stop, so the place can be overrun with tourists. Several Starbucks offer outdoor seating, which is great, except at some venues cars almost park in your lap and you get Venti gas fumes with your Grande Mocha.

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

Then I'm off to Costco to eat my way around the food stations before settling down with a $1.50 Polish dog with free drink refill. Finally, home for a soak in the hot tub to alleviate the aches and pains from a strenuous day and think about the TV shows I need to record for the coming week. See? Constant decisions and a steady work flow.

I know finding a job in this market won't be easy. I don't seem to fit into any of the government labor figures. There are 35 categories in the Labor Force Statistics from the

POLICE LOG

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A non-injury traffic

THURSDAY, APRIL 28

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A Mission Street resident came into the police station to report a fraudulent credit card transaction was processed on their bank account.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Caller reported damage that was discovered while returning the vehicle to the rental company. The damage occurred a few days prior at an unknown location in the City of Carmel.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Caller reported a lost wallet somewhere near Monte Verde and Fourth.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a DUI driver in the area of Sixth and Lincoln at 2339 hours. The 26-year-old male Monterey resident was contacted and found to be DUI.

Pacific Grove: An unknown person called a resident on Cedar Street and claimed she was with the IRS. The caller told the resident she owed money to the IRS and they would proceed with a lawsuit if she failed to make a payment. The resident knew this was a scam and hung up on the caller.

Carmel area: Several unlocked vehicles were entered overnight on Rio Road, and items were stolen from them.

Carmel area: Resident on Rio Road received several harassing text messages.

Carmel Valley: Peace disturbance between a resident and a maintenance worker at a senior care facility on Carmel Valley Road.

FRIDAY, APRIL 29

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Two male juveniles, one female juvenile and one adult female were contacted during a vehicle stop at Scenic and Oceanview at 0154 hours for a mechanical violation. The smell of marijuana was detected in the vehicle. A search of the vehicle was conducted which produced two glass bongs, a marijuana pipe, marijuana and two packs of cigarettes. The various items were claimed by the three juveniles, who were cited accordingly. All three juveniles were transported to their respective homes. Their parents were contacted and informed about the citations. The adult female left the scene in her vehicle.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Credit card found at Mission and Seventh.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Non-injury traffic collision on San Carlos Street.

Pacific Grove: Two Israeli citizens reported that they lost their passports somewhere in the City of Pacific Grove. They advised that they have retraced their steps to attempt to recover their property, but have been unable to do so. Officer documented the loss of their passports to facilitate their trip back home to Israel. They provided their son's info in case the passports are turned in as found property. Information only.

Pacific Grove: Officer was dispatched to a neighbor dispute over a pig on Ransford. The resident wanted it documented that the neighbor refuses to pick up after the pig. The resident believes the pig is not being contained within his enclosure as his permit requires.

Pacific Grove: Officer dispatched to a harassment call on David Avenue via telephone. Prior friend continuously sends text messages to a citizen.

to their parked vehicle on Dolores Street.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: An international driver's license was turned in for safekeeping pending owner notification.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Wallet found on Highway 1 down near Big Sur and brought to the station. Owner's mother was contacted and sent a social media message to her son, who is camping down there, to pick it up.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a disturbance at a hotel at Junipero and Fifth at 2338 hours. Upon contact, two female subjects were found to be on probation, and their vehicle was searched. Methamphetamine was located in the vehicle, and cocaine and meth pipes were found on the females. The 26-year-old transient and the 22-year-old Marina resident were lodged at county jail.

Pacific Grove: Officers were dispatched at 0424 hours regarding a battery that occurred in the rear of a residence involving a subject's family. Subject fought police. Taser deployed. Subject possibly took prescription meds with alcohol. He stated he wanted to harm himself. He was placed on a committal. Forward to DA for various charges.

current population survey. None describes my situation, although "Discouraged Workers" and "Marginally Attached to the Labor Force" come close.

I am not naïve enough to think that things haven't changed in the workplace. Daydreaming football pool experts don't survive in the frenetic world of dot.com millennials who have replaced water coolers with 5-Hour Energy Drinks. All that will make my job search more difficult. Nonetheless, I've laid out some demanding requisites from which I'll not deviate.

I'm holding out for a job that combines the best parts of working and being retired. It must be high-paying, cushy and non-discriminatory towards seniors. It has to have outstanding benefits and perks, with little accountability. I want a large staff to do my bidding, a plush office, lengthy vacations, a hefty expense account and when I retire again, I want to keep my benefits and salary.

Perhaps I'm kidding myself. Jobs like that are impossible to find. But you know what? To get one I just may have to run for Congress.
