Forest Theater finally ready for its debut

■ Indoor theater to be open in June

By MARY SCHLEY

THE $2 million renovation of the historic Forest Theater, which opened in 1910 and was closed for health and safety reasons in April 2014, has been completed. City building official Joe Headley signed off on his final inspection Tuesday night, when he tested the lighting.

“Everything went well, and I issued the certificate of occupancy,” he told The Pine Cone Wednesday. “The Outdoor Forest Theater is ready to go.”

The architecture firm of Cody Anderson Wasney handled the redesign, which sought to preserve the rustic aspects of the theater while updating the lighting, stage and other infrastructure. Otto Construction did the work, which included new grading and paving, stone veneer walls, integrated handrail lighting, additional light towers, structural supports at the proscenium walls, and new stage flooring. Hazardous materials, including asbestos, were removed, too.

To accommodate disabled patrons, the redo required the removal of two rows of benches to make the seating areas accessible, and the bare ground between the benches was replaced with colored concrete. New parking and pathways were built, too.

The old phone booth was reclaimed for potential use as a prop in future plays.

The process was not without its drama, as the city council held numerous meetings about the retrofit, and various parties sparred over the placement of pathways, handicap parking and other features of the outdoor theater.

The indoor theater, meanwhile, has been the subject of debate, as well, with Pacific Repertory Theatre’s School of Dramatic Arts program pitted against other theater groups that also want access to the space. Ultimately, the city council decided to grant the school of dramatic arts exclusive use of the indoor theater for its youth theater programs

Former Speaker disavows Adams’ attack on Potter

■ Bass: He wasn’t ‘removed’ from coastal commission because of voting record

By KELLY NIX

AS FIFTH District Monterey County supervisor candidate Mary Adams this week stood by her claim that a website she set up to discredit incumbent supervisor Dave Potter was based on “verified facts,” a key point on the site was disavowed Thursday afternoon by a former Speaker of the California State Assembly.

On the internet site potterfacts.com, which Adams launched last week, the former United Way Monterey County

Editorial: Mary Adams’ website attacking Dave Potter has now been so thoroughly discredited, it’s time for her to take the thing down — See page 28A.

CEO accuses Potter of being responsible for a host of bad decisions and misdeeds on the subjects of the environment, water and development.

One of the most prominent claims on the site is that “Dave Potter was replaced on the California Coastal Commission for consistently voting to overdevelop our coast and for being too close to developers.”

But the statement is patently untrue.

According to Democratic Congresswoman Karen Bass, who was the California State Assembly speaker in 2009 when she decided not to reappoint Potter to the coastal commission, Potter’s voting record on the commission was never a factor in her decision.

Reached at her office in Washington, D.C., Thursday afternoon, Bass issued a statement that said she “didn’t examine Mr. Potter’s record when making the appointment to the commission.”

“It’s not uncommon for Assembly speakers to make their own appointments to boards and commissions as terms become open,” she explained.

Bass chose then-Santa Cruz County Supervisor Mark Stone for the coastal commission seat Potter had held for 12 years, but she never publicly explained why she didn’t reappoint Potter, who has long said the speaker didn’t interview him before she announced the move. Potter said this week he

PANETTA GETS RINGING ENDORSEMENT FROM CLINTON

By ELAINE HESSER

AMID A who’s who of Democrats from Monterey County, presidential candidate and party frontrunner Hillary Clinton gave congressional candidate Jimmy Panetta’s campaign her stamp of approval on May 25 in Salinas.

“This is not a pro forma endorsement,” said Clinton to cheers in Hartnell College’s gym. The party love fest, which included an opening speech by outgoing assembly member Luis Alejo, reached a fever pitch with Panetta’s introduction of Clinton, in which he said, “After a lifetime of fighting for all of us, she continues to fight ... for me, my wife and two daughters, and the future of the U.S.A.”

He also pledged to work with Clinton on immigration “reform,” which she said would be one of her highest priorities if she is elected president.

In her endorsement and throughout her speech, Clinton referred to her experiences working with Panetta’s father, Leon, first as chief of the Office of Management and Budget

Mayor, council have 11 to choose from as they fill vacant seat

By MARY SCHLEY

FIVE MORE residents — Jeff Baron, Dixie Dixon, Carolyn Hardy, David Staub and LaNette Zimmerman — applied by Friday’s deadline for appointment to the council seat that opened up when Steve Dallas was elected mayor last month, bringing the total number of eligible candidates to 11. Interviews with Dallas, Vice Mayor Carrie Theis and the candidates were held this week, and the council is set to vote on the appointment at a special meeting Wednesday, June 1, at 4:30 p.m. in Carmel City Hall.

■ Jeff Baron

Baron has been a member of the forest and beach commission since 2014 and is also a volunteer at Harrison Memorial Library, and he bought a home here in 2005, moving to Carmel full-time in 2011. The CTO of a social-media startup from 2012 to 2015, Baron said the fact he does not have any business interests downtown makes him the ideal fifth member for the council.

Faithful friend

LULU IS a 5-year-old Black Russian terrier, whose grand size and glossy black coat give her an air of authority. Indeed, her breed was carefully cultivated for such countenance. Developed in Russia the late 1940s and early '50s to serve as a military working dog, the Black Russian is not a terrier at all, but believed to be a blend of some 17 breeds, among them, the Airedale, giant schnauzer, rottweiler and Newfoundland.

By the late 1950s, second and third generations of the breed had become available to the public, where they served as police and seeing-eye dogs, as well as fiercely loyal companion dogs, ideal for protecting the family.

Born to a breeder in Grass Valley, Lulu, who lives in Pacific Grove, was named as a nod to her predecessor, Louis, who favored Louis XIV of France, a king with equally wooly black hair.

Lulu's person is a priest, who is retired after serving 44 years in the Catholic Church. During his years at the altar, he always brought his dogs to mass, where they would pray alongside him. In his retirement years, Lulu has been sleeping in on Sundays.

"Throughout 35 years, most of my dogs were Catholic and did the mass with me. Some may have been of different faith, and that's okay; there's only one God. Lulu is a lax Catholic," her person said. "But she has spirit."

Lulu is particularly spirited at the beach, where she runs with abandon, stopping only to meet other dogs or people.

"Sometimes I don't feel like going to the beach," her person said, "but Lulu is religious about it, so we go, and it's always good for me, too. She's so welcoming and friendly to everyone, no matter who they are. I imagine she must have had really good parents."

Driver arrested, traffic snarled after 18-wheeler crashes in Big Sur

By CHRIS COUNTS

A SOUTHBOUND big rig truck carrying three men and 30,000 pounds of strawberries veered off Highway 1 near Soberanes Point in Big Sur May 19, landing just above a beach. Remarkably, all three survived.

“A witness said the big rig hit a tree and drove off the cliff,” reported California Highway Patrol spokesman Oscar Loza. “The driver said his tire blew out and his vehicle veered off the road.”

The vehicle came to rest about 200 to 300 feet from the pavement.

The incident happened at about 9:30 p.m. Loza said the 18-wheel Kenworth collided with a guard rail on the west side of Highway 1, continued along the guard rail for approximately 150 feet, and left the pavement when the guard rail ended.

The vehicle came to rest approximately 200-300 feet from the road.

Fire chief Cheryl Goetz told The Pine Cone that members of the Mid-Coast Volunteer Fire Brigade quickly arrived on scene, and were soon followed by a slew of agencies, including the CHP, Cal Fire, Carmel Highlands Fire, Pebble Beach Fire, and the sheriff’s search and rescue team.

“Everybody worked together,” Goetz reported. “They did an awesome job.”

After drugs were found in the truck, the driver, 59-year-old Robert Lane of Hesperia, was arrested for driving under the influence and causing bodily harm to a passenger.

All three men were taken to Natividad Medical Center in Salinas. The driver complained of neck pain. Front-seat passenger Terry Lane was treated for abrasions and complained of pain. Back-seat passenger

Yansouni back as head of Bach Fest board

THE CURRENT president of the Carmel Bach Festival Foundation, Cyril Yansouni will take over as president of the Bach Festival's board of directors. The two-year term starts Oct. 1.

Yansouni replaces Carlotta Mellon, who served on the Bach Festival's board for 10 years, the last two as president. The role will be a familiar one — Yansouni served as the festival's board president from 2006 to 2008.

A one-time vice president for Hewlett-Packard, Yansouni is a Pebble Beach resident. He's also a past president of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club's board of directors.

"The Carmel Bach Festival is fortunate to have Cyril Yansouni as its next president," Mellon said. "Cyril knows the festival, its patrons, board, and musicians very well and cares deeply about it. His experience, knowledge, energy and relationships will be great assets."

Yansouni said he looks forward to being back in his role as the festival board's president. "I am very excited to continue my involvement with the Carmel Bach Festival," he said. "We are blessed with an outstanding artistic leadership team, great musicians, soloists and chorale members, an excellent board of directors and dedicated staff members. I am especially thankful to the many festival patrons who support our programs and efforts."

Mellon isn't the only member of the Bach Festival's leadership team to step down. Earlier this month, Bach Festival executive director Debbie Chinn announced she is leaving in September.

This year's Bach Festival — the 79th since it debuted in 1935 — opens July 16.

Improper construction led to transmission tower collapse

By KELLY NIX

THE COLLAPSE of a PG&E transmission tower in Moss Landing last fall that caused tens of thousands of Monterey Peninsula residents to be without electricity was a result of faulty construction, inadequate training, outdated drawings and other failures, according to the results of a report released this week.

The state's Public Utilities Commission Monday released a report commissioned by PG&E to investigate the October 18, 2015, collapse of the 124-foot steel tower at the Moss Landing power plant. The accident didn't injure anyone but was a big headache for about 56,000 PG&E customers who were left without power as a result.

The analysis, by Oakland-based Exponent Failure Analysis Associates, essentially determined that workers incorrectly interpreted 1960s-era drawings and did not build the tower according to plans, which led to its collapse.

Based on Exponent's structural and metallurgical failure analysis, the transmission tower, which was installed in September 2015, collapsed because its steel and concrete footings were not tilted correctly to match the angle of the tower's legs.

"When the bolts were tightened to bring these components together," the report says, "the out-of-alignment configuration produced bending which exceeded stress limits."

While metallurgical testing showed that the type of steel used for the supports met appropriate standards at the time it was purchased, "subsequent testing indicates that this steel is more brittle than desirable for the subject tower application," the report says, adding that the tower would have not col-

See COLLAPSE page 12A

This PG&E transmission tower at the Moss Landing power plant fell over during calm weather last fall, leaving more than 50,000 people without power. The cause, according to the results of an investigation this week, was largely blamed on poor construction due to human error.

Carmel Foundation talk explores medical marijuana

By CHRIS COUNTS

BRINGING UP a subject that's bound to raise a few eyebrows, the Carmel Foundation offers a free talk Wednesday, June 1, on the "Wonders of Cannabis: Healing Your Body Naturally."

The talk on medical marijuana will be presented by a Karen Mankins, a nurse, and Valentia Piccinini, a patient and philanthropist.

The event is part of the foundation's Wednesday program series, which tackles a wide range of topics of interest to seniors, including some that are informative ("Take Control of Your Driving Future"), and others that are simply interesting or entertaining ("Ethiopia, Land of the Mystic Lion of Judah").

So how did such a hot button topic end up at the Carmel Foundation, which offers a wide range of programs and services for local seniors — but nothing particularly controversial?

"I was very nervous about it early on," foundation president Jill Sheffield conceded. "I'm pretty conservative, and we're a pretty conservative organization."

A year ago, the foundation agreed to host a workshop on the subject of medical marijuana, but only its members could attend. "It was very popular," Sheffield told The Pine Cone.

In contrast, Wednesday's event is open to the public.

While the two women who will give Wednesday's talk are advocates for using marijuana for medical purposes, Sheffield said the foundation is staying neutral on the subject. "We are in no way taking a stand," she said.

Mankins told The Pine Cone she became familiar with medical marijuana while working as a nurse in a residential facility for seniors.

"A daughter wanted to get her mother off the narcotics she was taking," Mankins explained. "She was in excruciating pain. She was completely miserable."

But after the bedridden mother switched from traditional painkillers to cannabis, her condition improved by leaps and bounds, Mankins said.

"Little by little, she got off the narcotics," the nurse explained. "She was up and walking around, and coming to meals. Her quality of life changed immensely — it was amazing."

Mankins was so impressed by what she saw that now she gives cannabis to her dog, who suffers from arthritis. "She could barely walk and she's running now," she added.

Piccinini, who suffers from multiple sclerosis, said she has learned first-hand how effective cannabis can be for treating a medical condition.

"I wear a cannabis patch, which eliminates inflammation and pain," Piccinini explained. "I can move around now and exercise. I don't need a walker anymore. The quality of my life has been improved dramatically."

While Piccinini is an outspoken advocate for medical marijuana, she recommends against smoking it because she said the process destroys the valuable medicinal properties of the plant. Piccinini also said cannabis can be very effective in surprisingly small doses.

"This is not about getting high," she added. "This is about wellness. We use it to manage pain, sleep, anxiety and depression."

The talk starts at 2:30 p.m. The Carmel Foundation is located at Eighth and Lincoln. Call (831) 624-1588.

Student-golfers earn scholarships

THREE MONTEREY County high school students — Hayley Yukihiro, Derrick Ow and Pedro Ortiz — have been named scholarship awards winners by the Men's Golf Association at Quail Lodge Golf Club in Carmel Valley.

More than $60,000 has been awarded over the past eight years to students "who have achieved high academic performance, demonstrated a financial need, displayed a strong commitment to community service and golfing accomplishments."

The scholarships are funded by donations from Men's Golf Association members and proceeds from the annual Scholars Cup Golf Tournament.

Jean Grace, who followed Eastwood as mayor, dies at 80

By CHRIS COUNTS

A TWO-TERM mayor who played key roles for an impressive number of local nonprofits, Jean Grace died May 25 at a senior care facility near Half Moon Bay.

Born in Los Angeles to an English-born mother and German-born father, Grace was raised in the Hollywood Hills. She graduated from Hollywood High School, and later earned a master's degree in geology from the University of Hawaii.

Grace's adventurous spirit was evident early in her life — as a teenager, she was hired as a cook aboard a 110-foot schooner that sailed for more than 6,000 miles through the Pacific Ocean on a mollusk-hunting venture.

Thirty years after falling in love with Carmel as a 12-year-old during a family vacation, Grace moved here in 1978. Ten years later, she entered the race for mayor when Clint Eastwood's term ended. Endorsed by Eastwood, she easily outdistanced her five challengers — "Carmel says, 'Grace!'" read The Pine Cone headline that week — and she was reelected for another term in 1990.

Ken White, who served on the city council when Grace was mayor, and succeeded her as mayor, described her as a strong leader.

"We used to talk quite a bit about issues in Carmel, and she helped me greatly as a mayor," he said. "She knew what the goals were, and she went right at them."

Besides her two terms as mayor — and the many city and county boards and committees she was a part of — Grace worked for the Harrison Memorial Library and the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District. She also taught geology and geography at Monterey Peninsula College. "I'm still bowled over by the all the stuff she did," her daughter, Trina Chapman, told The Pine Cone.

Grace was also involved with numerous nonprofits. She served as an employee, advisor and trustee for the Big Sur Land Trust; a board member for the Henry Miller Library; a director of the Point Lobos Natural History Association; and a trustee for the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation. She was also an active volunteer docent at Point Lobos for many years. "She loved sharing her knowledge with visitors and friends, especially regarding the geologic formations," recalled her friend, Cindy Lloyd.

In addition to her varied interests, Grace was a self-reliant woman. "She was so capable and bright," Chapman said.

Somehow, Grace also found time to travel. Lloyd said the former mayor was always "ready for an adventure." "Jean was an avid chronicler of her expeditions, saving mementos to fill pages in individual photo scrapbooks," Lloyd added. "She didn't miss a detail."

Grace leaves behind an important local legacy, said former city administrator Doug Schmitz. He said she accomplished much as the chair of the town's beach task force, and as mayor, the city acquired several important properties.

"She was quite instrumental in how the community looks today," he said.

Silicon Valley expat brings a little bit of Old Havana to Peninsula

By DENNIS TAYLOR

CIGAR AFICIONADOS dwell in a world that is largely unappreciated by others — personal, private, perhaps a bit haughty at times. They have camaraderie rooted in mutual understanding, like a shared secret.

“Maybe it’s like becoming one with the cigar,” theorized Raul Julia, the actor. “You lose yourself in it; everything fades away: your worries, your problems, your thoughts. They fade into the smoke, and the cigar and you are at peace.”

David Wilcox, a 56-year-old Silicon Valley expatriate, fell in love with cigars during a memorable vacation, evolved into a tobacconist after the high-tech boom evaporated, and, in 2002, moved to Carmel to become proprietor of The Humidor, a high-end cigar shop at the Crossroads shopping center.

“But we made a little bit too much smoke for that environment and finally decided it was time to move,” said Wilcox, who relocated the business six years later to 791 Foam Street in Monterey, where for $9.95 to $45.95, a tobacco leaf lover can purchase a premium smoke, sink into comfortable furniture, and enjoy a private sanctuary with like-minded people.

Early this summer, Wilcox will move The Humidor to yet another location, just a block away at 765 Wave Street, above The Whaling Station restaurant, where the premises will include a much larger public cigar lounge, plus The Peninsula Club, a more exclusive space (one-time $2,000 initiation fee, $150 a month dues) for smokers.

“The feel of our VIP Lounge will be Old Havana — that’s what we’re looking for in terms of color scheme, furniture, and mood, to pay tribute to the cigar capital of the world,” Wilcox said. “Havana speaks to the cigar culture, and that’s the feeling we’ll be going for in terms of the walls, the ceilings, the decor.

“I have a definite vision, but it will also be fairly organic,” he said. “Whatever the

Carmel Belle can stay in Doud Arcade despite eviction efforts, judge says

By KELLY NIX

THE OWNERS of Carmel Belle restaurant have again prevailed against their landlord's effort to evict them after claiming the restaurant violated its lease.

On April 14, Monterey County Superior Court Judge Thomas W. Wills ruled in favor of Carmel Belle owners Jay and Chloe Dolata over claims by landlord John Plastini that the restaurant impeded access to an ADA bathroom that was intended for the tenants and customers of the Doud Arcade, where the restaurant is located.

"There have been two attempts by the owners of the Doud Arcade to evict Carmel Belle, and both have failed," Andy Swartz, the Dolatas' attorney, told The Pine Cone.

In the most recent judgment, Wills found that, while the main access to the bathroom was blocked, an alternative access provided by Carmel Belle was sufficient.

The April court ruling is the second involving a lease dispute between Carmel Belle's owners and Plastini. Plastini initially tried to evict the Dolatas by contending they were in breach of the lease by closing before 7 p.m. on three occasions. On Dec. 14, 2015, though, Superior Court Judge Susan J. Matcham denied the eviction request.

"The court determined that the lease permitted Carmel Belle to close before 7 p.m. by [paying Plastini] $10 per hour," Swartz said. "That decision is final."

The court has yet to hear arguments in another legal dispute involving the two parties. In July 2015, about a week before Plastini filed suit against the Dolatas for closing early, the couple sued Plastini for "falsely" accusing them of defaulting on their lease and other allegations, including "hounding, spying upon" and "obsessively focusing his attention" on Carmel Belle. Plastini has denied the allegations.

Tour of MoCo available by rail, and you don't even have to leave Salinas

By ELAINE HESSER

THERE'S A GROUP of (mostly) guys that doesn't just like trains, they love them. Model trains, vintage trains, modern trains — they can't help themselves around them. One even said he owns a full-size steam locomotive that he takes to private track events — don't ask how he gets it to them — and rides around. Who knew "private track events" for privately owned trains were a thing?

Their most impressive accomplishment is a mini version of Monterey County in the 1950s, when railroads were in their heyday. Also, they have model train displays that they'll bring to you. Well, not you personally, but according to Mark Dorman, superintendent of the Monterey and Salinas Valley Railroad Museum, part of their mission is to share the history of Monterey County railroads with people in other communities. To that end, they sometimes come out to the American Tin Cannery and give talks and demonstrations with the model trails — and he wants people to know that they'll go other places, too.

The museum, next door to Salinas' Amtrak station near Oldtown, is, to put it mildly, a work in progress. It's not at all stuffy and a lot of it's at kids' eye level. You can even press a button outside and operate a crossing guard signal and barricade with a satisfyingly loud bell.

Also next to the museum are a full-size steam locomotive engine — also with a nice, loud bell and whistle, a refrigerator car, postal car and caboose. That last car in the train dou-

Ninety miles of Monterey County's railways from the 1950s are recreated in one room at the Monterey and Salinas Valley Railroad Museum in Salinas. City crews have been working to update the indoor theater, including cleaning it up, painting the walls and taking care of other maintenance issues. Public works director Rob Mullane said it should be wrapped up by June 1, the same date as a mixer to be hosted by the Carmel Chamber of Commerce and Forest Theater Guild to celebrate the reopening of the Outdoor Forest Theater. The mixer, which costs $10 for members and $20 for nonmembers, will run from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., followed by a showing of the film, "Mamma Mia." The first live production to be staged there will be "The Borrowers," which opens June 23.

GERRY DEVERSECY

January 6, 1924 - May 12, 2016

Gerry Deversecy was born January 6, 1924 in Santa Monica, California and passed away May 12, 2016 in Monterey, California. She has been a resident of Carmel for the past 40 years.

Gerry attended Pasadena City College and the University of Southern California. She was a member of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority, Scottish Society and was a Panhellenic member.

She was signed as a contract actress by the Eagle Lion Studios and was also a member of the Screen Actors Guild. She appeared in Tony Curtis' first film, "City across the River." She also played a role in "Bad Boy" with Audie Murphy and played in many TV roles. She was known as Gerry Pattison.

when she was First Lady, then as chief of Bill Clinton's staff and later as director of the CIA, saying that "the apple doesn't fall from the tree," and citing the younger Panetta's military and community service as evidence that he was ready to serve.

Trump mentioned, but not Sanders

The remainder of Clinton's speech returned to familiar themes, touting her experience, attacking Donald Trump's divisive brand of politics and not even mentioning fellow Democratic candidate Bernie Sanders by name — although she did seem to be reaching out to his followers with promises of the biggest infrastructure program since the Eisenhower highway system, and "free" college education.

She also didn't comment about the state department inspector general's report issued yesterday that heavily criticized her use of a private email server while she was Secretary of State.

Panetta's mother, Sylvia, and his wife and daughters were in the audience. Sylvia said she thought Clinton was "articulate and bright, and would be a great president." Also present was former Salinas Mayor Anna Caballero, fresh from a turn in Sacramento leading the Department of Business, Consumer Affairs and Housing Services. Caballero is running for Alejo's seat in the assembly — where he succeeded her at the end of her first term as an assembly member. Alejo's running for a spot on the Board of Supes.

In many ways, the rally vividly illustrated the revolving-door, insider politics which Sanders and Trump reject — but the crowd of almost 600, many of whom stood in long lines and waited hours to hear Clinton speak, didn't seem to care. Not one bit.

lapsed if the supports and lower legs had been aligned properly.

PG&E spokeswoman Nicole Liebelt told The Pine Cone that the utility "immediately" retained Exponent after the tower collapse to find out why it happened.

She said the utility has since developed a corrective action plan that includes Exponent's recommendations for additional training of PG&E workers. PG&E's own recommendations exceed Exponent's, and include updating tower design standards and requiring that a "less brittle and stronger steel" be used.

"There is no formal training that provides the construction crew with information on what drawings to review and how to interpret these drawings," Exponent concluded.

PG&E also didn't have the proper steps in place to catch human error, the company said.

The utility didn't fire any workers as a result of the accident.

"We are addressing the issues with the construction of the tower with the crew that performed the installation," Liebelt said.

After the accident, PG&E also inspected 58 other recently constructed towers spread throughout the service area and found they were installed correctly, with no steel deformation or cracking, Liebelt said.

Meanwhile, the PUC's Safety and Enforcement Division is investigating the incident and has directed PG&E to submit to the PUC a plan for ensuring that the company's other transmission towers are built correctly. The PUC said in a press release it's finalizing its investigation and "may take enforcement action, which could include fines and penalties," once the report is complete.

already found difficulty in dealing with matters concerning the business district, both in the way that the business district manages itself and is managed by the city government and the city's municipal code, and in the way that the business district coexists with the residents," he said in his letter to the mayor and council. "I believe that this issue appears in two guises, both of major importance: recusals based on the time-honored method of proximity, and appearance of conflicts based on business interests."

Baron went on to point out how those factors affected council discussions on the proposed rebuild of the Carmel Sands lodge and the plans to have a marketplace, which he called "a fast food court," in the event center at Dolores and Seventh, and then addressed the broader issue of "managing growth" downtown.

"I believe that an individual without downtown interests would be a huge boon to these efforts," he said, adding that his two years on the forest and beach commission have also given him a better understanding of "the unique physical place that is Carmel," as well as of its governmental processes, good and bad.

■ Dixie Dixon

Dixon served on the community activities and cultural commission for eight years and has been a resident of the city for 26, and she said in her cover letter that she would be a good fit because she is familiar with the inner workings of the city and has worked with the council on several occasions.

"I participate in many local projects and enjoy serving the public and representing them in many capacities," she wrote.

Dixon is a systems analyst and administrative specialist for Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, where she has worked since 1999, and she's active with the Carl Cherry Foundation, ImageMakers Fine Art Photography and the Monterey Cowboy Poetry & Music Festival. She has also owned three businesses: a restaurant, a wedding reception center and a travel agency.

■ Carolyn Hardy

A 30-year resident who served on the cultural commission and assisted in the investigation of contracts issued by former city administrator Jason Stilwell, Hardy said those experiences and others not only gave her a solid understanding of how city hall operates, but enabled her to build working relationships with many of its employees.

"If you were to inquire, I believe you will find strong support among them for my appointment to the city council based on my work ethic, respectful collective approach and dedication to Carmel," she said in her cover letter.

As a councilwoman, Hardy said she would "not get bogged down in minutiae," and would be "a good listener; fair and open-minded to all viewpoints expressed; respectful of the views of others; one who values an inclusive and deliberative process; a clear-thinker — pragmatic, analytical and reasoned; one who applies common sense to difficult issues; and detail-oriented, hard-working and thorough."

Hardy said her interest in serving on the council is "purely altruistic," driven by the fact she cares about the issues the city faces and wants to have a positive impact on the lives of residents and businesspeople, and that she has "no other agenda."

"Over my years in Carmel, I have committed to public service in a variety of capacities, have extensive experience with city government and knowledge of Carmel's issues, and have a proven track record of working effectively with others," she said.

■ David Spaur

Spaur, the director of economic development for Monterey County since 2012 and a resident of Carmel for three years, said he applied for appointment to the city council because he's interested in bringing various constituents together.

"I am a very concerned citizen about how Carmel residents, visitors and business owners interact with one another to resolve challenges rather than create new challenges," he wrote in his letter to the mayor and council. "My goal is to help foster and create a productive environment that promotes a unified and friendly village. I care about the character of each and every neighborhood, and how each neighborhood relates to one another, the beach, Ocean Avenue, the school, trails and the relationship between our residents and our visitors.”

Spaur pointed to his three decades of experience in municipal management, urban planning, real estate development and public finance for government and nonprofit organizations, including the Town of Los Gatos, the cities of Gilroy and Sacramento, and the counties of Fresno, Merced, Placer and San Luis Obispo.

“I have been told that I have a gift for fostering a collaborative workplace and working closely with elected officials,” he wrote. “I am passionate about local government, community engagement and working on new opportunities.”

■ LaNette Zimmerman

Zimmerman regularly attends council meetings and occasionally comments on the issues at hand, and has lived in town for “four years and one month,” according to her application. She’s active with The Carmel Foundation, the Carmel Heritage Society and the Carmel Residents Association.

With more than 25 years of management experience in human resources, Zimmerman said she offers a “unique combination of results-oriented leadership, proactive business-focused strategic planning, organization and management development acumen, collaborative team building and creative problem solving.”

Zimmerman also said she is willing to listen and learn, to delve into details and hear opposing views, to consult and collaborate with everyone involved, and to encourage participation on multiple levels.

“There is much to be done to guide the city forward, even as we continue to cherish and protect important elements from our past,” she wrote in her letter. “Balancing these two, sometimes opposing, interests becomes the hardest work of city government. The passion of citizens on both sides of many current questions before the council deserves a respectful hearing and careful consideration as council decisions are made.”

■ Other candidates

Other candidates for appointment include builder Chris Tescher, gallery owner Richard Kreitman and resident Dave Mosley (both of whom ran for council in the April 12 race), Mitzi Daly, Bob Profeta and Donna Jett.

Dallas said this week the interviews were going well, and he and Theis are set to make their recommendation to the council at the special meeting Wednesday.

Among the first orders of the business of the full council in June will be adoption of the budget and appointment of new commissioners and board members to fill several vacancies, including the spot left on the planning commission by Jan Reimers’ election to council and the seat on the community activities and cultural commission vacated by Bobby Richards when he was also elected.

The city received 20 applications, including Hardy’s request to be placed on the planning commission, Daly’s application for appointment to the cultural commission or the library board, Dave Mosley’s request to be considered for the forest and beach commission or the Harrison Memorial Library board of trustees, and wife Darlene Mosley’s application to be on the planning commission. All told, 13 people applied for the vacancy on the planning commission.

JUNE ALREADY!

Jeanie Summers
2016 Board Chair

We are just beginning the second half of our year, or as some may call it 'our season'. Which means travelers from all over the world are starting to begin their vacations. High school graduates are getting ready to spread their wings and students from Monterey Peninsula and Hartnell Colleges, and California State University Monterey Bay are going home for the summer. We also have students that are very interested in this beautiful area that we call home who will be working through the summer as an intern to discover what makes the Monterey Peninsula so magical. We live in a beautiful destination that has 'world class' written all over it. From the places to eat, things to do and where to stay, to our award-winning wineries that have become the wine region of North America. We are so lucky to have so much to offer in such a small village.

There is a lot going on with our members too. Let's not forget how important it is to support our member ribbon cuttings, such as Andre's Bouchee Bistro and our member mixer/grand opening at the Outdoor Forest Theater on June 1. It's a great way to reconnect and, of course to support their success. If their businesses are successful, so are yours.

Please don't forget the Launch Party at the Carmel Visitor Center on June 3 where we introduce our new Guide to Carmel. Won't you come and join us to celebrate?

I hope you can also join us for the Annual Membership Luncheon on Friday, June 10. We are going to celebrate milestones of our members at Folktale Winery and Vineyards. A huge thank you to our Presenting Sponsor Carmel Realty Company.

I hope you know how much we appreciate your participation.

Dwayne Lane — who was sleeping at the time of the crash — was conscious and speaking when emergency workers arrived on the scene, but lost consciousness while he was being transported, and it was later determined he suffered a collapsed lung.

It is unknown if the men are related, although it seems likely.

The driver and his passengers were fortunate the accident happened along a section of the highway that isn't next to a steep cliff — unlike much of the coast, where such a mishap certainly would be fatal.

It is unclear why the driver took Highway 1, since his intended destination was Los Angeles, and other routes are far more efficient.

Motorists encountered lengthy delays Friday as a tow crew worked to remove the truck. Highway 1 was closed completely from about 6 to 7:30 p.m., Goetz said.

Some residents wondered why it is legal for a big rig to even travel along the narrow and winding scenic highway through Big Sur. In response, Loza confirmed it is legal to do so, but not recommended.

The cause of the accident is still under investigation.

CIGARS

members want, that's what we'll grow it into."

An old-fashioned cigar-store Indian, "The Chief," stands stoically outside the current building, where Wilcox's small, friendly dog, Jasmine, has the run of the place, cavorting with an ever-changing gaggle of cigar smokers. Clientele move easily in and out of the shop, stretching out, socializing and glancing at the big-screen TV on the north wall. The familiar scent of cigar smoke is ever-present.

A vertical display case holds ornate pipes of all types, some of which are probably too rare and valuable to be smoked. The asking price on one — an estate pipe (owned and smoked before), carved by Danish pipe-making icon Teddy Knudsen — is $7,500.

"If you wanted Teddy to make you a new one, it would probably cost you $15,000-$18,000, if you could even get it," Wilcox said.

'Sometimes a little voice says ...'

The cigars — two dozen brands, hundreds of varieties in all price ranges — are displayed floor to ceiling in a walk-in humidor. Wilcox can speak with authority, all day long, with passion, about anything in the shop.

"I don't have a single favorite. I usually say the best cigar in the world is the one I'm currently smoking," he said. "Sometimes a little voice just says, 'I think a Don Carlos No. 2 right now ...' Sometimes a specific cigar just calls out to you."

Wilcox believe there's a correlation between quality and price, but says the differences can be subtle.

"There are a whole lot of wonderful cigars that just cost $10," he said. "Something like that probably won't be my celebration cigar, but if I'm going after some weeds in the garden, or have a project in the garage, that's a cigar I'm very happy to puff on."

Wilcox is the son of a physics professor, John Wilcox, who taught at both UC Berkeley and Stanford. His mother, Pauline, was a first-generation Chinese immigrant whose parents spoke no English. Five of her siblings went into the medical field.

"There was a definite focus on education in my home, and you never thought anything of it: You were going to a four-year university," said Wilcox, who attended Cal, then worked for IBM and Sun Microsystems before gravitating toward tobacco, after the computer industry took a dive.

"I was visiting my tobacconist of choice, Billy Cater at Hemingway's Tobacco in Palo Alto, who had just purchased a new watch from a jeweler in Carmel," he said. "He told me, 'I love the demographics down there. If I had a brother, I'd set him up in the cigar business in Carmel.' That conversation led me to acquire The Humidor in the Crossroads 14 years ago, and that's how I got my start."

Wilcox says he's been living his dream ever since, selling a product he loves, and spending each workday surrounded by people who share the passion, many of whom have become close friends. The Humidor is a hangout for cigar lovers, and Wilcox believes his new location will expand that experience.

"I envision a great new community of guys, but it remains to be seen how it will develop, and how people will embrace it," said Wilcox, who says his clients are about 90 percent male. "Our new hours will be 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. (versus 11 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. now), which will give people more time to settle in and relax at the end of their business day."

More information about The Humidor can be obtained online at www.thehumidorlounge.com, or by calling (831) 375-7833.

TRAINS

bled as living quarters for the train crew. Dorman took The Pine Cone on a tour not long ago, noting that attendance was on the rise, as they completed more of the diorama.

Dorman is a font of information about all things railroad. He sat in the caboose at a table where the crew would have eaten, near bunks that folded down from the wall, and talked about life on a train.

He laughed as he showed off the “bathroom” — a chamber pot in a closet — and a little pot-belly coal stove. In the postal car, which is still being restored, he talked about how the train crew could pull a mailbag off a post with a long-handled hook while the train was moving.

The museum itself is housed in the old Railway Express Agency building, next door to the Amtrak station, just off West Market Street. The Railway Express Agency was the UPS of its day, and the building is slowly being restored to its 1940s glory by an all-volunteer group.

Inside the museum, there’s a little display of china and menus from the days when fine dining was all part of the trip.

There are posters and other memorabilia as well, but the real star of the museum is the model railroad display. The diorama of the railroad, starting north of Elkhorn Slough and ending at Camp Roberts, is an ambitious undertaking.

Multiple tracks snake around the display, which re-creates Monterey County in the 1950s. It occupies two-thirds of the building and had to be built on two levels to accommodate the length of the route. The bottom level starts north of Watsonville, where the tiny trains pull into miniature packing sheds to pick up apples. They go past Elkhorn Slough, and the power plant at Moss Landing before heading inland to Salinas.

At Salinas, they stop in yards around produce sheds, and also at a fascinating refrigeration operation that involves loading ice onto a conveyor belt and dropping it into the cars. The trains chugged around the tracks, their headlights on and whistles sounding.

They passed billboards, and towns and cities in the Salinas Valley (the Monterey portion of the line is still in the works). Along the walls around the diorama, you sometimes encounter photos taped up and patched together to show what different areas looked like “back in the day.”

The line ends at Camp Roberts, which looks a darned sight prettier in the diorama than it does in real life. There’s even a wedding party outside the chapel, making their way beneath an arch of crossed sabers.

The setup isn’t slick, but it’s being painted and decorated with love by people who know and care about trains and their history.

The museum is open the first Friday, Saturday or Sunday of each month, including Friday, June 3 from 5-8 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday, June 4 and 5, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is free, but donations are gratefully accepted.

SWINGIN' STUDENT-MUSICIANS STEP OUT ON THE BIG STAGE, JAM WITH THE PROS

A PAIR of musically talented Monterey High School students, trumpeter Akili Bradley and saxophonist Marina Panzetta, will join keyboardist Gary Meek, bassist

Billy Bosch and drummer David Morwood when they play Friday, May 27, at the Hyatt Regency Monterey.

Morwood recently challenged the girls to learn 15 jazz tunes that they could play before a live audience. He said the girls have made "huge strides" as musicians, and they're ready to play with the pros.

"It has been very rewarding over the years to hear them progress and practice and get to the point where they really swing," said the musician, who serves as the resort's "jazz director" and "drummer-in-residence."

Morwood said the Hyatt has a close working relationship with the annual Monterey Jazz Festival — which offers music education programs year-round for local youth — and the resort has long provided a stage for local student-musicians with an affection for jazz.

The music begins at 7 p.m. The Hyatt, which offers live jazz every weekend, is located at 1 Old Golf Course Road. Call (831) 372-1234.

■ Playing the Wild Card

Bringing together the talents of three local musical acts, Wild Card plays Friday, May 27, at Flanagan's Irish Pub in the Barnyard shopping center.

The new band features singer Jon Gorman and keyboardist John Tindel of Red Beans and Rice, drummer Michael Kobrinsky and bass player Michael Chatfield of The Money Band, and guitarist Scott Dickson of Sons of Twang.

"The band lays shimmering four-part harmonies atop a bed of solid, highly danceable, finely crafted musicianship," Chatfield said. "It'll be a great way to kick off the Memorial Day weekend."

The music starts at 9 p.m. Call (831) 625-5500.

■ New acoustic trio visits P.G.

the stage Sunday, May 29, at St. Mary's By-The Sea in Pacific Grove.

The ensemble features John Weed, a Carmel Valley fiddler and member of the Celtic music trio, Molly's Revenge; cellist Aria DiSalvio; and guitarist William Coulter. The latter won a Grammy Award for his role on the album, "Pink Guitar," which paid tribute to the music of composer Henry Mancini. Joining the trio in Pacific Grove will be mandolinist Ashley Broder.

The church is located at 12th and Central. Tickets are $20 for adults and $10 for kids 12 and under. Call (831) 224-3819.

C.V. Market's blossoming, dining with Five Marys, and celebrating a b-day

IN THE nearly three months since former Will's Fargo chef Jerome Viel and wife Jessica Kent bought the Carmel Valley Market in the Village, they have spruced up some of the displays, brought in favorite wines and other products, expanded catering capabilities and made plans for a new kitchen that will allow them to provide far more readymade food to go, as well as feasts Valley to go shopping." As a result, the couple has been slowly bulking up and changing the inventory since they took over, like bringing in a new selection of French cheeses, and more local and foreign wines.

They've also made some cosmetic changes that better showcase the butcher's fresh cuts and the produce.

"We gave it more of a personal touch," Kent said.

Viel said he's trying to support local producers of wine, cheese, olive oil, honey and other items as much as possible, and he said out-of-town visitors who discover the market appreciate being able to pick up local goods for their picnics or to take home.

Locals, of course, also appreciate being able to buy delicious foods and wines that happen to be made by their neighbors.

"The community has been so nice and so supportive," Kent said. "It's been heartwarming, because we couldn't do this without all the customers who've been coming to the store."

Next on their plate is to build a new kitchen along one side of the store, so they can make more hot items for people to take with them, as well as accept more catering for parties and other gatherings.

Considering the couple has lived in the valley for 15 years, and Kent routinely shopped for the family, which includes two young daughters, at the market for many of those, they knew what they were getting into — mostly.

"This is where we went to do our shopping, so we had a sense of what we bought here, and what we didn't, and what we wished we could buy here," Kent said this week. "I have two jobs and two children, and that means I don't have time to go to a bunch of different stores, and I also don't really want to go all the way to the Mouth of the jobs with broader menus.

"The goal is to make people's lives a little more easier and quicker," Kent added. "Our lives are so fast, and people don't always have time to go to the store and make dinner, so it's nice to be able to come and get some good food for their families."

■ Five Marys Farm dinner

A "pasture-to-plate whole beast dinner" with the owners of Five Marys Farm will be held on the Redwood Deck at Restaurant 1833 in Monterey Saturday, May 28. Executive Chef Jason Franey will host "the ultimate Ranch-to-Table dining experience" with farmers Brian and Mary Heffernan, who will discuss the philosophies that guide their farming and ranching.

Dinner, which costs $200 per person, including tax and tip, will begin with welcome cocktails, such as the Bourbon Sidecar sion. But I suppose the Pine Cone is correct, he never stood up and said, "I support removal of the last Monterey Pine forests on the Peninsula." The Pine Cone also insists Potter is not responsible for bringing the Monterey Downs project here, as Adams says. I think there is more than ample evidence of his machinations on behalf of the project's developer. But I guess The Pine Cone has a point, Potter never stood up and proclaimed, "I am doing everything I can to bring the Monterey Downs project here." Adams has presented a studied, thoroughly researched and convincing critique of her opponent's record. I'm voting for Adams.

Irwin Speizer, Pacific Grove

'Look at your own candidate'

Dear Editor,

I feel compelled to respond to Neil Shapiro's article in last week's Pine Cone entitled "Campaign complaint insulted electorate's intelligence."

He referenced how "nasty" elections have become at the national level, and claimed that the deputy sheriffs complaint (expressing concerns that Mary Adams signs imply that she is already a supervisor, which would be against the Elections Code) amounted to "nasty" politics. What I found most entertaining about this is that it came on the heels of Mary Adams campaign turning completely "nasty." This past couple weeks we have seen hit pieces mailed to our mailboxes, and now she has gone as far as putting up a website that even The Pine Cone said was "full of distortions, innuendo and out-and-out lies."

julienned vegetables and apple crisp with crème Chantilly, and will cost $35 per person. To reserve a spot, visit www.carmelvalleywomensclub.org or call event coordinator Penny Wood at (831) 659-0934.

■ New Peter B's brewer

Justin Rivard, an industry veteran who has worked at Grizzly Peak Brewing Co. and was head brewer at Arbor Brewery Co., both in Michigan, has been hired as head brewer for Peter B's Brewpub at the Portola Hotel in Monterey. Former brewmaster Kevin Clark, who took the brewpub to new heights with his creations over the years, left to run his own brewery out of the area.

The hotel's food and beverage director, Brian Hein, said Rivard "hopes to expand beyond the brews that have become so popular at Peter B's and to push the envelope while maintaining the existing flagship styles."

His first day on the job will be June 1. For more information about Peter B's, visit www.peterbsbrewpub.com.

As President of the Deputy Sheriffs Association, I want to see fair and clean campaigning, and I have real concerns about Adams' tactics. The Elections Code states "assumes, pretends, or implies, by his or her statements, conduct, or campaign materials, that he or she is the incumbent of a public office when that is not the case" and, in my opinion, her signs and bumper stickers stating, "A Supervisor On Your Side," do just that. But my concerns didn't start there. I was concerned when her first financial report was filed late, that the United Way logo appears prominently on the front of her mailer, that she doesn't have the proper disclaimer on the nasty website that she put up, and now the truly nasty hit pieces and website full of false allegations.

Mr. Shapiro, were you unaware of what your candidate was doing while you wrote the article so offended by my quiet complaint that expressed genuine concern with following election law? If you want to write about insulting the electorate, I think you should look at your candidate's behavior. In The Pine Cone's own words, shame on Mary Adams.

Daniel Mitchell, MCDSA

Bob Profeta for council

Dear Editor,

Why would voters want a scholarly electrical engineer with a nuclear power plant background who became manager of General Electric's Instrumentation & Controls Training working on solutions for Carmel's little problems?

How about appreciation for the scientific method that comes for free with Bob Profeta, along with his 20 years of Carmel experience as a business entrepreneur/owner of the Forge in the Forest restaurant and Alain Pinel Realty?

Considering our town's infamous problems of late, the honesty inherent in even a little science might actually help. Not everyone running can claim a lifetime involved in the high-octane academic approach to problem solving and its penchant for working through the difficult details.

Because we know it isn't every day that small town governments get the chance to take advantage of large minds, we just thought someone ought to let the council, and the voters, know who Bob Profeta is.

Paul & Sonya Larisey, Pebble Beach

Kreitman earned it

Dear Editor,

Richard Kreitman won 405 votes in last month's election by mounting an honorable and informative campaign. No one disputes that he came in third. This result, coupled with his well known qualifications and his appreciation of Carmel-by-the-Sea, make him the right person to fill the vacancy on city council. Therefore, I respectfully urge our elected officials to appoint him. He earned this, and he can do the job well.

Ian Martin, Carmel

Save Odello Ranch and Carmel River Beach

Dear Editor,

If California State Parks has its way, a visitor center, 165-car parking lot with concession stands for bicycling and boating, guided tours, 'Special Events,' areas for group meetings, bathrooms, picnic areas, trails and science camps will take over what is now Odello Ranch and Carmel River State Beach.

If you believe it's irresponsible to degrade a setting of such natural beauty — not to mention outrageous and tone deaf — by dramatically intensifying traffic and overuse on Highway 1, please come to the state parks meeting June 1, 6 p.m., at Rancho Cañada and make your voice heard!

County sets vacation rental workshop

THE DEBATE over short term rentals and a possible county ordinance regulating — but not banning — them will continue when the Monterey County Planning Commission hosts a public workshop on the subject Wednesday, June 8, at the county building in Salinas.

reception from 5 to 8:30 p.m. The event also celebrates the nonprofit's third anniversary.

More than 20 artists are participating in the display. Represented are painters, printmakers, photographers, metal workers, hand-made bookmakers and video artists. While some are professionals, others are new to the business.

"Almost 50 percent are people who have never shown their work before," explained Denese Sanders, who founded the venture in 2013.

Curating the show is Jamie Dagdigian, chair of the Monterey Peninsula College Art Department, and Mel Barrett of the Carmel Art Association.

The exhibit calls attention to the group's mission to create a shared and affordable workspace for a wide range of creative pursuits. The workspace includes computers, a darkroom, a framing room, a printmaking studio and a gallery. The artists pay from $15 to $170 per month each to use the facilities. "It's an art oasis for creative adults and professional artists," Sanders said.

Photographer Richard Murai explores the world's religious and spiritual traditions and sites in a show, "Signs of Life: Worlds Apart," that's now on display at Weston Gallery. The gallery will host a reception for Murai Saturday, May 28, from 4 to 6 p.m.

"Our exhibition is now up and getting rave reviews," Davi Weston said. "His work is really unique and the reception will be a great event for Carmel."

The assistant director of the Center for Photographic Art, Murai has traveled extensively over the past 35 years.

"These photographs are selections from my travels in Asia that reveal visual artifacts and rituals from a golden age as people seek to reconcile and preserve ancient traditions amidst conflicting modern values," the photographer explained. "The images offer an

Soft shells at Christopher's

Christopher Caul last week announced the arrival of this season's soft shell crabs, which he prepares each year as a special appetizer.

"I am known to add a California twist to an East Coast favorite," he said.

The small crabs are fried crispy and served on top of a jicama slaw, topped with black bean and avocado salsa — or served more classically with a lemon butter caper sauce."

The restaurant, located on the east side of Lincoln Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues in downtown Carmel, is open nightly for dinner. See www.christophersrestaurant-carmel.com for more information.

Chamberlin to be honored

Meals On Wheels annual luncheon for the Women Who Care campaign will honor chef and author Mary Chamberlin, creator of "The Traveling Soup Pot" and key force behind the local chapter of the American Institute of Wine & Food Sunday, June 5, at noon in Ferrante's atop the Monterey Marriott at 350 Calle Principal.

Her "work embodies a lifetime passion for the world's finest foods," according to organizers.

Chamberlin specialized in restaurant management and catering in college, and then studied at Le Cordon Bleu and La Varenne. She owned and ran the Mission Gourmet Cooking School in Fremont, where she had chefs from all over the world come teach students their individual styles, and now offers private cooking classes. In addition to "The Traveling Soup Pot," Chamberlin has written two other books on cooking and is now working on a memoir, "On the Wings of Challenge," involving the life of her late husband, pilot Roy Chamberlin. She has many affiliations, including the James Beard Foundation and the Disciples d'Escoffier, and is on the advisory board of the new Auguste Escoffier School of Culinary Arts.

"Her flamboyant theme dinners are legendary, and many local charities and organizations have benefited from her generous donations of these dinners as fundraisers," MOW representatives went on to say. "She also volunteers for Meals On Wheels and has served on numerous committees, raising funds for scholarships and other worthy causes."

Women Who Care, operating under Meals on Wheels, is a network of philanthropic women whose fundraising efforts help to underwrite the nonprofit's services for seniors and their caregivers. This year, the campaign will support MOW's Senior Nutrition Services program, which seeks to ensure that every homebound adult receives healthy food every day.

For more information on the luncheon and tickets, see www.mowmp.org.

Editorial

Time to take the site down, Mary

HOW COULD someone who thinks she's qualified to be a county supervisor get things so wrong?

Either Mary Adams is hopelessly incompetent, or she has no scruples.

Either way, it's time for her to stop defending the website she launched to attack Dave Potter, take the thing down, fire everybody who worked on it for her, and make a heartfelt apology to Dave.

Last week, as you may recall, we proved that one of her attempts to smear Potter was so hopeless, it not only wasn't true, it couldn't be true.

"In 2002, according to the Associated Press, Potter supported removal of the region's last Monterey pine forests in Monterey County, in order to build a golf course," Adams claimed on her website. When we pointed out in last week's edition that the claim was a lie, she quietly changed it to something a bit closer to the truth, all the while refusing to admit it was ever wrong, criticizing us for focusing on "verbiage" and insisting that everything on the site was based on "verified facts."

Meanwhile, she ignored it when we pointed out that another prominent claim on her website wasn't true. That one turned out to be worse.

Right there on the front page of the anti-Potter website, under the headline, "An Environmental Disaster," was this statement:

"Dave Potter was replaced on the California Coastal Commission for consistently voting to overdevelop our coast and for being too close to developers."

We knew the statement wasn't true, because we covered Potter's tenure on the coastal commission very closely, and it was familiar to us that in 2009 Mark Stone was appointed to the coastal commission, replacing Dave Potter at the end of his third four-year term, because the Speaker of the California Assembly, Karen Bass, who made the appointment, thought it was time for a change.

Sure, some environmental wacknuts wanted Potter gone because he didn't always kowtow to their extremist causes, but others with unquestioned environmental credentials, including current supervisor Jane Parker, supported Potter. It certainly wasn't true that Potter "consistently voted to overdevelop the coast," and it also wasn't true that his voting record on the commission was the reason Bass didn't reappoint him. At least, she never said so at the time.

To be certain, we contacted Bass, who is now a U.S. Congressman. Her answer was unequivocal. Not only didn't she decline to reappoint Potter for that reason, she "didn't examine Potter's record when making the appointment to the commission," she told us.

A statement like that is like a Steph Curry three pointer that doesn't even touch the rim. A no doubter.

How will Adams react to this revelation? Unfortunately, she'll probably pretend it's not there, or insist it's just "verbiage," the way she did when we called her on her "last pine forests" claim last week.

Adams served well as head of the United Way — so well that she thought she could leverage her role at the charity into a lucrative job on the board of supervisors. Unfortunately, the way she's trying to do it is ruining her good name.

It's obviously too late to salvage her campaign for supervisor. The steps we recommended above — take the anti-Potter site down, fire everybody who worked on it, and apologize to Dave — aren't to help make it possible for her still to be elected. They're to keep her from being a laughingstock.

Letters to the Editor

'Officials need to meet high standards'

Dear Editor:

I want to respond to The Pine Cone's coverage of the web site www.potterfacts.com. If voters are to make a truly informed decision about who deserves their vote, Dave Potter's ethical and leadership problems cannot be ignored. Someone has to tell it like it is. Mary Adams has had the courage to do just that.

Contrary to what appeared in The Pine Cone editorial, the website is factual and extremely accurate. I suggest you read it with a skeptical eye. Follow the citations, read the links, and decide for yourself. The media has repeatedly questioned how Mary Adams would differ from Supervisor Potter. Her website is the clearest case I've seen for change.

Supervisor Potter has made his experience the cornerstone of his campaign for reelection. Now he is uncomfortable with his record being held up for public judgment. He should remember that anyone who runs for office must anticipate that their actions and character will be subject to scrutiny. People who serve in public office need to meet high standards. Dave Potter clearly does not.

Vote for Mary Adams on June 7!
Susie Franklin, Carmel Valley

'Our lifestyles and our livelihoods'

Dear Editor,

Everybody has an ox they don't want gored. Everybody has a little "NIMBY" in them. I'm a long-time resident of the Monterey Bay Area; a 25 year resident of Carmel Valley. I've watched Dave Potter do a great job of balancing the multitude of opposing interests in our area. He's protected our lifestyles and our livelihoods at the same time. With his level headed attitude, combined with his experience, he has a "big picture" approach. His opponent, Mary Adams, seems to have too narrow, and too negative, an agenda for our beautiful, complex community. I continue to wholeheartedly support Dave Potter.

Jim Dunn, Carmel Valley

'Thoroughly researched and convincing'

Dear Editor,

I was amused to read that The Pine Cone was shocked by supervisorial candidate Mary Adams' criticism of her opponent's record via her website, www.potterfacts.com. I happen to think the site is a brilliant expose of Potter's record. The Pine Cone says Potter never supported removal of the last Monterey Pine forests on the Peninsula, as Adams said on the site. Well, Potter supported the Pebble Beach development plan to remove 15,000 trees in one of the last Monterey Pine forests so a golf course could be built, and even voted for the plan as a member of the coastal commis-figured Bass replaced him as a way to geographically diversify the commission.

The bombshell admission by Bass, a Representative for the 37th Congressional District, which includes the city of Los Angeles, casts even more doubt on other statements on Adams' site, some of which The Pine Cone questioned in an article last week.

But Adams doubled down early this week, contending the site is "merely a history of the kind of leadership and decision making Dave uses in key areas of importance to our district and our county."

"This is not about campaign spin, nor an attempt to demonize my opponent or mislead voters," Adams said about the website Tuesday.

But she also corrected a statement on the site attributed to two old Sacramento Bee articles — a statement a Pine Cone editorial noted last week not only wasn't true, it could not be true.

Specifically, Adams claimed Potter "supported removal of the region's last Monterey pine forests."

This week, that line on the site was changed (with new links to two articles) to say Potter supported "removal of one of the region's last Monterey pine forests." While those words do appear in one of the stories, the story does not associate them with Potter.

While Adams didn't say whether the original omission of the two words — which completely changed the meaning of the sentence and made it more disparaging to Potter — was an accident or intentional, she defended the line.

"I am sorry that The Pine Cone is taking issue with specific verbiage, which perhaps comes with the territory in a campaign, but is phrased in a way that implies that underlying issues, which are widely reported and known in the community, somehow don't matter," according to Adams, who told The Pine Cone in September 2015 she was going to run a "positive" campaign.

Potter, who has been in office 20 years, responded to the attacks saying Adams' website and a new sensational mailer she sent out this week blasting him are part of a "defamation campaign."

"To put up something that is full of innuendos and lies is dirty politics," Potter told The Pine Cone early Thursday. "I expected a lot better of Mary based on her experience at United Way."

Potter said he's not seen a political race in Monterey County this "nasty," and said he's used to local campaigns that are "issue focused" and help educate voters on the facts.

Former Carmel High softball ace named to All-American team

THREE YEARS after graduating from Carmel High School, softball pitcher Brittany File has earned All-American honors.

Now a junior at Emory University in Georgia, File was named to the 2016 NCAA Division III All-America Team.

File's statistics this season were eye-popping.

She struck out 330 batters in 222 innings — both school records. She was second among all Div. III pitchers in strikeouts, and finished the season with a 35-4 won-loss record and a 1.23 ERA.

File saved her best effort for a Feb. 13 game against Huntingdon College, tossing a no-hitter and striking out 14 batters. Later in the season, she held opponents scoreless for 41 straight innings.

Besides being named to the All-American team, File was honored as the University Athletic Association's Player of the Year.

A lifetime of loving and craving movement

AT 72, Richard Cohen carries himself with a strength and agility more common among much younger men. But there is more to it than youthful vigor. His hand gestures, the way he turns his head and the way he lifts from his core when he walks all suggest a certain kind of choreography that moves him through his day.

Cohen is, among many things, a retired professional dancer and Olympic coach, who has dedicated his life's pursuits to movement — the body's capability for strong, flexible, gracious, lyrical, exuberant movement — across a stage, an ice rink, a track, a padded floor, or the paths of daily life.

Had the Carmel Highlands resident followed the footsteps of his family, Cohen would have become a doctor. Born in Eastern Pennsylvania, he grew up in the shadow of his father, a professor of medicine at Temple University Medical School, and his grandfather, who was a pulmonologist. While he didn't become a doctor, Cohen did inherit an innate interest in the health and well being of the body, but his focus has always been on how it moves.

A stellar athlete in high school and college, excelling in running, swimming, cycling, wrestling, soccer and martial arts, Cohen was dedicated to athletic form and movement well before he went to New York to become a professional dancer. He also spent two years at Oberlin College in Ohio, followed by two years at Temple University, from which he graduated with a bachelor's degree in English.

"During school, I was always interested in drama," said Cohen. "As an athlete, I saw dance as a combination of drama and sport, and that's what drew me to it. It was the opportunity to combine stage performance with athleticism."

Once he got to New York, Cohen trained with an international lineup of principals, working with the New York City Ballet, The Martha Graham School of Contemporary Dance, Luigi's Jazz Coutre, and the Mary Anthony Studio, among others, studying jazz, ballet and primarily modern dance.

"What I've always loved about dance is that it is such a powerful physical discipline, as much of a workout as any sport I ever did," Cohen said. "In those days, I worked out all day long. I spent three hours a day just stretching. Some people love and crave movement, and I am one of them."

Cohen's focus and athleticism led him, within six months of moving to New York, to join the Lar Lubovitch Dance Company, one of the world's foremost modern dance companies. He went on to dance with Gruppe Motion Berlin — now Group Motion — a chamber dance company in Philadelphia, evolving from the Mary Wigman School of Dance. He later danced with Carmel Dancers of Israel, long before he ever heard of Carmel, California.

While dancing in Philadelphia, Cohen founded Bridgehead Dance Theater, a multimedia company, which enabled him to "do his own thing." Yet, within two years, he moved to Canada to become a professor of dance at York University in Toronto. There, he established Vortex Intermedia, another multimedia dance company, dedicated to creating films, television productions, musical compositions and dance, which he considers a precursor to Cirque du Soleil.

Cohen concurrently achieved his master's degree from York, in Interdisciplinary Movement, focusing his thesis on how to extend what he learned about movement into the rest of one's life.

"If you learn how to be fluid and resilient and flexible and expressive in movement," he said, "you can learn how to extend that into a way of being. Kinesthesia is a way toward wholeness in being."

By the early 1970s, Cohen's teaching and training at York had expanded from their dance program to include gymnastics, and track and field. He was asked by the federal government to train the Canadian Olympic gymnastics and figure skating teams. And, he was honored to choreograph a production for the Opening Ceremonies for the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

"I didn't teach specific movement. I taught athletes how to be centered and fluid, and to understand where their strength is coming from, how to be expressive, how to breathe and how to move." And all of it, he spent many years working with private clients as a movement educator, to release muscles, restore fluidity and increase the flow of energy to enhance movement.

"Whether you are a dancer, a runner, a dentist or a lawyer, if you have blocked energy," said Cohen, "it is going to interfere with your performance. It starts there."

said, was based on his background in different forms of movement.

Cohen went on to investigate body therapies to gain further insight into how the body moves. He studied, among others, the Alexander Technique, Feldenkrais, Rolfing, and Shiatsu, the Japanese acupressure system, which focuses on the flow of energy.

"My desire to teach technique based on how the body actually moves and how it functions led me to my next phase," he said, "where I began to understand our ability for a conscious control of the flow of movement. We can control it."

After spending a summer in California, Cohen became enamored of the scenery, the climate, the consciousness — and the Esalen Institute. He and his wife, Jan McCool, eventually moved to the Carmel area, where he

WE'RE ASKING FOR YOUR "CARMEL LEGENDS"

For almost two decades we have been publishing Al Smith's "CARMEL LEGENDS" in this space. All of these legends have been previously published in The Pine Cone and we felt that there was a great value to the community in giving them an encore presentation and sharing them with our readers. We always considered these 'legends' to be an important part of the fabric of the Carmel by the Sea we love. To that end we have decided to invite you, The Pine Cone readers, to share your 'legends' with our citizenry. We are asking that you submit your own stories, new or old, your observations, and, if you will, your 'Legends. This is our invitation to you to share with others those little-known family-yarns that have so beautifully woven the fabric of our tiny sea-side village. So, whether it was the time your uncle Jack release twenty pigeons at the River Inn in Big Sur and somehow they found their way home to Dolores and 11th, or the time when the couple up the street bought a house and after escrow closed found that they had bought the house next door instead, we would love to hear from you. We plan on running our present-day homage to "CARMEL LEGENDS" once a month over the next year so please submit your best Carmel memories. We will peruse them thoroughly trying to select those special 'legends', the ones you will love and remember as being representative of Carmel by the Sea.

Please submit your legends to Tim Allen, P.O. Box 350, Carmel, CA 93921.

Heroes, known and unknown to the world, we remember on Memorial Day

“Do not walk through time without leaving worthy evidence of your passage” – John XXIII

THE HOLIDAY we celebrate this weekend was called Decoration Day when I was a kid. It became Memorial Day in 1967. It is a day set aside to honor members of our military who died serving our country, by decorating their graves with flowers.

Pope John probably didn't have members of the armed forces in mind with the above quotation. Yet, who has left worthier evidence of their walk on this earth than those who gave the last full measure of their devotion? We call them heroes. We recognize them with medals and memorials. Our country bestows the Medal of Honor on those who have displayed courage far beyond anything we can imagine. There have been more than 3,500 recipients of that medal dating back to March 23, 1863, when Jacob Wilson Parrott received his medal for his role in “The Great Locomotive Race,” during which he and 21 others commandeered a train that they drove from Atlanta to Chattanooga, destroying whatever they could of the South's Western & Atlantic Railroad. They were pursued by Confederate troops, in a separate train, throughout the 87-mile journey.

The second most visited gravesite in Arlington National Cemetery is Audie Murphy's. John Kennedy's is first. Many of us remember Murphy as a journeyman actor in western films, perhaps most notably in his own bio-pic, “To Hell and Back.” Mostly though, he is relegated to the back of the bunkhouse as far as western movie heroes go. Yet, the description of the action in World War II for which he was decorated is far beyond what any Hollywood screenwriter could create. You would read the screenplay and pass it off as fantasy. Here is a part of his citation: “... he continued to hold his position and wiped out a squad which was trying to creep up unnoticed on his right flank. Germans reached as close as 10 yards, only to be mowed down by his fire. He received a leg wound, but ignored it and continued the single-handed fight until his ammunition was exhausted.”

You've probably never been to Pueblo, Colo. Years ago, I happened to pass through the town. There is a Medal of Honor Memorial at the Pueblo Convention Center, called

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

Heroes Plaza, to honor Pueblo's four Medal of Honor recipients – one from WWII, two from the Korean War, and one from Vietnam. Four! From a town of about 150,000 people. Their citations are filled with terms such as: without orders and on his own initiative; in the face of intense fire; for conspicuous gallantry at risk of life above and beyond the call of duty; painfully wounded; refusing evacuation.

When presenting the Medal of Honor to Pueblo's Raymond J. Murphy for action during the Korean War, President Eisenhower remarked, “What is it, something in the water out there in Pueblo? All you guys turn out to be heroes.”

Not all heroes are in the military or receive a medal. In all of our lives there are extraordinary people who receive little or no recognition for the lives they live with inconspicuous gallantry.

Ralph Waldo Emerson said that a hero is no braver than an ordinary man, but he is brave five minutes longer. Apply that definition to parents, teachers, good friends, clergy, healers, policemen and firefighters, and your list of heroes will be a long one.

Memorial Day is not a day to recognize only those who died serving our country. We remember, too, family and friends who touched our lives in such a manner that memories of them are ever gentle on our minds.

Perhaps, like me, you've been lucky enough to have an older sibling who is bigger than life to you. Mine was my oldest brother, John. He was not a knock-off — there was no one quite like him. He taught me how to tie my shoes, throw a baseball, ride a bike, tie a Windsor knot, use a camera and drive a car; in short, he jumpstarted me down the road of life. When others were standing in confusion, he could analyze a situation and know exactly what to do. When we played the game Monopoly, he rolled the dice, moved my shoe, read the “Chance” cards, had hotels on all the best properties, took all my money and made me feel good about it. There I was at age 10, living with Donald Trump and I didn't know it. He served four years in the Navy and raised 13 children, all of whom are upstanding citizens. Not a druggie, nor a felon in the bunch. He left us on April 9.

If you are mourning the loss of someone who left worthy evidence of their passage, you have my condolences, and I hope, memories as good as mine.
