BACKBURNS JUMP LINE, THREATEN NEIGHBORHOODS

By CHRIS COUNTS

WITH HIGH winds anticipated later in the week, firefighters intentionally set fire to a wide swath of vegetation between Chews Ridge and the front of the Soberanes Fire Sept. 19 in an effort to protect nearby homes. But a pair of spot fires broke out on the wrong side of fire lines, causing alarm among residents.

A fire official conceded the burning operation didn't go exactly as planned, but she insisted it hasn't put any residents at risk. "Two spot fires from wind-driven embers came up from the burnout operations and went over the line," Soberanes Fire public information officer Elayne Briggs told

The Pine Cone.

Briggs insisted the firing operations paid off.

"While there's always some risk to tactics like these, it's a good thing we did it," she said. "What people need to know is that if we didn't do burnout operation, there was nothing to hold the fire as it pushes to the east."

But some residents were skeptical, including Cachagua General Store owner Michael Jones.

"I know you will be shocked — shocked! — to hear that the completely unnecessary Chews Ridge back burn has jumped the road," Jones posted on Facebook.

Brazil Ranch — up for sale again?

By CHRIS COUNTS

MORE THAN a year after turning down a proposal by Grammy Award-winning musician and composer Philip Glass to establish a performing arts and environmental education center at Brazil Ranch in Big Sur, the 1,200-acre property still sits virtually empty aside from its buildings — and it's unclear if its owner, the United States Forest Service, even wants to keep it. And U.S. Rep. Sam Farr, who urged the acquisitions in the first place, said he might be OK with a sale, if the property is protected.

Glass, meanwhile, who plays a sold-out concert at Sunset Center Friday, is still looking for a site for his center.

Six years ago, Glass kicked off his annual Days and Nights Festival by suggesting that the Brazil Ranch would be an ideal location for a performing arts and environmental education center. At the time, a Forest Service official called the proposal "legitimate" and vowed to consider it. Carmel architect Mary Ann Schicketanz even drew up plans for the center.

Will the feds sell the ranch?

But last year, Forest Service officials notified Glass that they were declining his proposal — in part, because the agency doesn't have enough employees to provide the oversight required for such an ambitious project. And in a letter he was sent, officials acknowledged they were considering getting rid of the property, which was acquired by the Forest Service in 2002 for $23 million of taxpayers' money. "Since the [Los Padres National Forest] does not have the resources to maintain the Brazil Ranch facilities, we are reviewing options of facility removal and/or conveyance as possible long-term solutions," wrote Forest Service official Robert

Pig owners fined $8K for keeping him

By KELLY NIX

THE CITY of Pacific Grove Monday sent the owners of a pet pig a hefty bill for not complying with a July order to remove the animal from their property, and the bill continues to climb at whopping $500 per day.

On Sept. 19, P.G. code compliance officer Terri Schaeffer told Lisa and Mark Hanes, the owners of Bruiser, a potbelly pig, that they must pay $7,667.50 in penalties and fees for failing to relocate the animal from their Ransford Avenue house.

"Thank you for your prompt remittance," the city's invoice says at the bottom.

The costs include $700 for the 14 days the Haneses were being charged $50 per day for not removing the pig starting Aug. 23, and $6,500 since Sept. 6, when the fines increased

Monning defends Panetta's qualifications

By KELLY NIX

ONE OF the politicians who 20th Congressional District candidate Casey Lucius claimed got "pushed aside" to allow Democratic rival Jimmy Panetta to run commented this week on his decision not to pursue the seat and defended Panetta's qualifications for the office.

State Sen. Bill Monning had long been mentioned as a possible successor to U.S. Rep. Sam Farr before deciding not to seek the seat. This week, Monning acknowledged that Panetta's name boosted his candidacy, but he also pointed to his achievements.

"Certainly, the Panetta name carries strong positives in the 20th Congressional District," Monning told The Pine Cone Wednesday. "That said, Jimmy Panetta has his own strong record of public service as a deputy district attorney, as a vet-

Council OKs preservation deals for historic homes, encourages others to sign up

By MARY SCHLEY

A LIMIT imposed to keep the city from losing too much revenue when it grants tax breaks to people with historic homes was significantly increased by the Carmel City Council last week. At the same meeting, council members also approved Mills Act contracts with the owners of four historic houses and said they hope more people will take advantage of the program.

"This Mills Act allows us to reinvest in our town," commented council member Carrie Theis. "It's nice to have four owners who are willing to reinvest in Carmel."

"This is fantastic that we will have four houses that will be staying the same," added councilwoman Jan Reimers after the group unanimously approved the contracts at the Sept. 13 meeting.

The Mills Act — which obligates homeowners to a minimum 10-year contract (with renewal provisions) for the restoration and maintenance of their houses and grants them a 40-to-60 percent break in property taxes in return — was enacted by the state in 1972, but jurisdictions are not required to offer it. The city added it to its books in 2004 when it adopted its Local Coastal Program, but that version was so

Dog drool and all

WHAT SHE wanted was a companion. The kind that would be gentle with the children she hoped to adopt but would also protect her while she hiked in the foothills around Los Angeles.

People advised her to look into the mastiff – one of the most ancient and enormous breeds. Some 5,000 years ago, it was a breed of ferocious war dogs, but today, mastiffs are as loving as they are large, making them wonderful companions for anyone who can handle their size and their drool.

Born among the “B” litter to a breeder in Sacramento, Bianca is an Italian mastiff. Also called a Cane Corso or “coursing canine,” the breed is known for exceptional athleticism and agility, speed and sense of adventure. Weighing in at 80 pounds – some females reach 100 – Bianca is both imposing and cuddly.

“Bianca came in handy a couple of times while hiking,” said her person, who has since moved from the L.A. area to Carmel Valley. “We never had any incidents with wild animals, but she scared off a couple of people. She stood in front of me and got very big. She didn’t bark or growl, just puffed out her chest, which was good enough.”

If she reacts strongly to someone, says her person, something is going on because Bianca, now 10, loves everybody.

“She’s extremely gentle and affectionate and very intuitive,” her person said. “When I adopted my son, he was scared to death of dogs. She would follow him around almost on tiptoe, then sit next to him really quietly until she gained his trust. He was like her baby; she just took to him. Once he relaxed, they were bonded.”

Even Grandma, who does not like dogs, absolutely loves Bianca.

“If she were not so sweet and lovable, the drool would drive us crazy,” her person said. “But there she is, looking so lovingly at us with this drool hanging down.”

Cop fired for 'fabricating' stabbing files lawsuit, claims story was true

By KELLY NIX

A 2014 lawsuit alleging civil rights violations and defamation filed by a former Seaside Police officer — who in 2012 claimed to have been stabbed at his Pacific Grove home, was later fired for “fabricating” the story, but still insists it’s true — is slowly making its way through the legal system.

On June 24, 2014, Justin Gill filed a lawsuit against the Seaside and Pacific Grove police departments, former Seaside and P.G. police Chief Vicki Myers, and the Monterey County District Attorney’s Office after his 2013 termination from the Seaside department.

Gill had alleged that in the early morning hours of July 31, 2012, a Hispanic man with a shaved head stabbed him in the chest as he opened the back door of his Forest Avenue home, where officers later searched his house for evidence. Police and the district attorney’s office, however, later concluded Gill made up the story.

Dispute over search

Though filed more than two years ago in United States District Court, Northern District, Gill’s lawsuit is still only in the discovery phase, in which attorneys for both sides exchange information, including evidence, before a trial.

Gill maintains in the complaint that while he gave Pacific Grove police officers “limited consent” so they could “look around the back patio area of his home” where the stabbing occurred, he did not consent to have other areas of the house searched.

“Mr. Gill did not give PGPD or any other law enforcement official consent to search inside of his home,” according to the lawsuit.

But Pacific Grove attorney Dave Laredo told The Pine Cone last week that Gill consented to his entire home being searched, and he denied the allegations as they pertain to the Pacific Grove police.

“Although Gill contends his house was searched without consent, he in fact consented to the search, which was also necessary due to the alleged presence of an armed intruder,” Laredo said.

Gill contends that while the search warrant the officers presented at the time “did not authorize seizure of firearms or ammunition,” they took about 10 firearms, including an AR-15-type rifle, two Glock 40-caliber handguns, and numerous ammunition magazines. Officers also seized a knife, electronic equipment and carpet samples from Gill’s bedroom.

Hasn’t returned guns

The confiscation of the property, Gill maintains, violated his rights under the Fourth and 14th amendments, and therefore, he maintains he is entitled to monetary damages.

Gill also accuses the district attorney’s office of, in effect, stealing the weapons and other items because it has not returned them.

On June 27, 2013, about a year after Gill was stabbed, the Seaside Police Department, under the leadership of Myers, who is also named as a defendant in the complaint, fired Gill, because the agency and the district attorney’s office “felt” Gill had fabricated the story, the suit says.

“Further, Mr. Gill was terminated because Seaside Police Department believed he was addicted to and/or abused prescription medications,” the lawsuit.

The day of the incident, Gill said he was watching TV when he heard a noise outside. When he opened the door to his porch to investigate, he said he was stabbed. The attacker ran away before racing off in a silver Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle towed from Junipero and Eighth for violation of a California Vehicle Code section (unlicensed driver).

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Police responded to the report of an unknown subject illegally dumping used paint cans into their commercial-sized dumpster in front of their home on Dolores north of Second that is under construction. Citizen advised she only wanted the incident documented.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: An outside agency requested an interview and a statement from a possible hit-and-run driver. Person reported a hit-and-run incident on Holman Highway which involved a verbal altercation and the suspect brandishing a knife. Suspect was contacted at his home, where he provided his information and a statement. This report was forwarded to the requesting agency, Monterey P.D.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Adult female called to request police assistance with an ongoing dispute with her live-in caretaker on Dolores south of 13th. Units responded to her home and contacted the female. She explained her adult male caretaker is not completing tasks she has paid him to complete. She also described him as having a temper with her and saying hurtful things about her. Officers were unable to establish if elder abuse had taken place. The female had fired the caretaker and wished for him to not be allowed back in the house when he returned. She was advised of his rights as a tenant and to contact the sheriff's department if she desired to pursue an eviction.

Pacific Grove: Subjects on Ocean View Boulevard were engaged in a sexual act in a vehicle at 0036 hours, and an odor of marijuana was detected. Vehicle search yielded 28.5g of marijuana. One of the subjects lied about his name. The other was found to have a suspended driver's license. Both subjects were issued citations.

Pacific Grove: Missing juvenile was located on Sunset Drive at 0145 hours and found to be under the influence and in possession of a controlled substance. Parent of juvenile was unable to pick him up. Juvenile was medically cleared and released to Child Protective Services.

Pacific Grove: Officers were dispatched to Bayview Avenue on a report of a male who threatened to hit a contractor with a pipe. Upon officers' arrival, both parties were separated. Suspect was an elderly male who suffered from dementia. Victim did not want to press charges.

Pacific Grove: Theft of personal property from inside a vehicle on Lighthouse Avenue. No suspect information.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9

Pacific Grove: An unknown suspect reentered a leased vehicle on Del Monte Boulevard and fled the scene.

INDICTMENT ALLEGES WINE BUSINESSMAN DEFRAUDED BASKETBALL STAR

By KELLY NIX

THE WINE tycoon sued by former Coastal Luxury Management partner Rob Weakley in late 2014 for allegedly failing to pay $250,000 for the purchase of his share of the event company has been indicted by a federal grand jury in Texas, which has accused him of defrauding a former NBA star out of millions of dollars.

Management, the company behind the Pebble Beach Food & Wine. Weakley, who was also embroiled in a legal battle with former CLM partner David Bernahl, departed the company in July 2015 and settled the suits with Bernahl and Banks.

CUSD board hopes to have new supe in place by February

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CARMEL Unified School District board of trustees last week voted on a timeline for finding a new superintendent to replace Scott Laurence, who went out on medical leave after six months on the job and subsequently left the position in June. While some teachers and parents wanted the board to appoint interim superintendent Karen Hendricks to the permanent post, trustees instead decided to have the search firm that found Laurence try again.

On Sept. 8, Charles Banks, 48, was indicted on two counts of wire fraud for defrauding retired San Antonio Spurs forward Tim Duncan, U.S. prosecutors in Texas said, according to a Reuters article. Banks was head of a Colorado-based business called Gameday Entertainment and also owns a collection of wineries.

Banks, Bernahl said Thursday, is "one of many minority investors in a CLM-related company."

The indictment identified Duncan, 40, only by his initials, but his lawyer confirmed that it referred to the five-time NBA champion and that the amount misappropriated by Banks through a series of financial schemes totaled $7.5 million to $13 million, the Sept. 9 Reuters article said.

As to Banks' criminal indictment — which does not involve CLM in any way — Banks' attorney Johnny Sutton said in a statement that his client "is innocent of these charges and confident that when all the facts and circumstances are brought to light, he will be exonerated of any wrongdoing," Reuters said.

In his December 2014 lawsuit against Banks, Weakley alleged the businessman and his company, Hammer Holdings LLC, failed to pay him the $250,000 balance on the $450,000 purchase price for Weakley's share of Coastal Luxury

The indictment alleges Banks encouraged Duncan to lend $7.5 million to Gameday in 2012. Banks was also accused of asking Duncan to guarantee $6 million in debt for Gameday. Banks made an appearance in a San Antonio court Sept. 9 but was released on bond and has since entered a not guilty plea.

"Charles is a stand-up guy," Bernahl told The Pine Cone. "And I know this will get resolved for him in the end."

Last week, they selected a timeline for the search and approved an updated contract with the company, Leadership Associates.

According to the schedule unanimously approved by the board Sept. 14, consultants will begin identifying candidates in October, advertising for the job in November — with an application deadline of Dec. 5 at 5 p.m. — and conducting its research and background checks on the candidates through the end of the year.

Board members will meet with the consultants to review applications and interview candidates Jan. 4, 2017, with finalists being interviewed Jan. 13 and 14. Trustees would then visit the community of their top choice the week of Jan. 23, and the person could start work as early as February.

"The date shown on the schedule is the earliest potential date," board president Mark Stilwell clarified. "But that date could also be as late as July 1."

He said a few parents at the meeting wanted a more drawn-out process to maximize the pool of applicants, while "one CUSD staffer wanted a more expedited schedule,

County puts kibosh on outdoor pot growing — at least for now

By CHRIS COUNTS

WORRIED ABOUT increasing the workload of local law enforcement, the Monterey County Supervisors voted unanimously Sept. 13 to restrict marijuana cultivation to indoor growing.

But they left open the door to permitting outdoor growing in the future — once the county gains experience dealing with the industry.

The decision came just two months before California voters will decide if they want to legalize marijuana for recreational purposes.

Representing the Monterey County Sheriff's Office, Cmdr. Matt Luther repeated the agency's position that it is opposed to outdoor growing.

"No agency has adequate personnel to deal with the issues that are going to come up," Luther warned. "I've rarely been in a marijuana garden where somebody didn't run or have a gun. It's a very dangerous business, and when you invite people to come in, you invite problems. We should be cautious until we get a grip."

But several residents urged supervisors to allow existing outdoor growers to operate — and warned that by restricting growing to existing greenhouses, the county is inviting "big money" growers from outside the area to take over the business.

Daniel Sosa told planning commissioners he has been growing outdoors "legally and responsibly" in the Lockwood area since 2013.

"We should regulate outdoor cultivation and add economic growth to the county," Sosa said. "If so many are willing to apply legally, why not give them opportunity to apply? I believe the concerns are valid, but the most responsible way to address them is through a strict regulatory framework."

Supervisor Dave Potter agreed that the county needs to move forward cautiously and learn more about the industry.

He also suggested that outdoor growing might be more palatable in the future. "This discussion isn't over, but we have to look at what we've bitten off and digest it," he said.

Simon Salinas agreed with Potter's stance. "We don't have the enforcement staff," Salinas said. "We need to take it slow."

While supervisor Jane Parker supported the motion, she expressed concern that existing outdoor growers won't be treated fairly, and she's worried about "larger, well-heeled business interests who can afford indoor grow space over smaller outdoor operations."

At the next county board of supervisors meeting Sept. 27, Potter, Parker and others will consider a resolution to establish fees for commercial and personal cannabis growing permits.

The hearing in Salinas is set for 10:30 a.m.

Traffic stop for obscured window leads to DUI, drug arrests

By MARY SCHLEY

A REGISTERED sex offender who is suspected of driving while intoxicated, possession of narcotics and drug paraphernalia — and of violating the conditions of his release from jail — was arrested downtown around 11:30 a.m. Sept. 12. According to Carmel Police Cmdr. Paul Tomasi, 53-year-old Monterey resident Douglas Guyot was driving with a black plastic bag covering the window of his Honda Accord as he headed northbound on Junipero near Ocean Avenue, which caught the eye of officer Mike Bruno.

Driving with obscured vision is a violation of state law, so Bruno pulled Guyot and his passenger, Jamie Hinton, over.

“Upon contact with Guyot, officer Bruno believed Guyot to be under the influence of a controlled substance,” Tomasi said. He also learned Guyot was on PRCS, or post-release community supervision, so he searched the vehicle, finding .25 grams of methamphetamine hidden in the center console, along with two glass pipes used for smoking the drug.

Hinton, a 39-year-old unemployed Sand City resident and Guyot’s girlfriend, said the drugs were hers and was cited, according to Tomasi. Guyot, whose arrest booking sheet identified him as a “weekly paper” employee, admitted to smoking methamphetamine earlier in the day and subsequently failed the field sobriety tests Bruno administered.

“Guyot was transported to Monterey County Jail, where he was housed for driving under the influence of a controlled substance,” Tomasi said, as well as for possession of drug paraphernalia and felony violation of his post-release community supervision.

AB 109 fallout

Tomasi said Guyot, who was not incarcerated thanks to the 2011 Assembly Bill designed to relieve overcrowding in state prisons, is an example of the outcome of those changes.

“This case demonstrates an interesting change in our legal system over the past few years,” he said. A man convicted of producing child pornography, committing lewd or lascivious acts with a child under the age of 14, and oral copulation with a minor under the age of 18, according to online records identifying registered sex offenders, Guyot was among those convicted of “non-serious, non-violent, or non-high-risk sex offenses” who are now supervised by county probation departments but were formerly under the supervision of state parole. The same law also eliminated the possibility of prison for certain types of lower-level offenders who now serve their time in county jail or under mandatory supervision.

Hinton, meanwhile, was simply cited for possession of the meth and released, because a law passed by voters in 2014 reduced many felony drug offenses to misdemeanors.

“Both AB 109 and Proposition 47 were aimed at reducing the overcrowding of prisons and jails in California,” Tomasi said, the result of which is having more criminals like Guyot on the street.

NO MORE LEFT TURNS FROM CARMEL HILLS CENTER ONTO HIGHWAY 68

By KELLY NIX

THE COMMUNITY Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula's main concern with the Highway 68 roundabout — a ban on left turns from nearby Carmel Hills Professional Center — was implemented late last week.

In February, community hospital officials expressed concern that because of a left-turn prohibition on to Highway 68 east due to the roundabout, drivers exiting the business area hoping to go that way would be forced to make a U-turn at the hospital and potentially impede emergency access.

The left-turn ban from the area took effect Sept. 16, and Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula spokeswoman, Brenda Moore, said there has been an increase in traffic volume at the hospital entrance.

"As far as impacts of the no left turn — we've experienced some minor delays at heavy traffic times such as shift changes," Moore told The Pine Cone Thursday morning.

CHOMP alone has about 275 employees working in offices at the Carmel Hills Professional Center, which also has other doctors' offices and the Carmel Hills Care Center, a skilled nursing facility.

No conflict?

TAMC has said that it doesn't believe that vehicles making a U-turn at community hospital will conflict with emergency vehicle access either during construction or when the roundabout is complete. And in a Sept. 16 email message, the agency encourages drivers to use CHOMP as a turnaround to reconvene on eastbound 68. All other access into the Carmel

Hill Professional Center remains the same, including the left turn from Holman Highway 68 into the center.

So far, apart from some nighttime closures of 68, traffic through the intersection has moved fairly smoothly since construction began in the middle of August. A right-turn arrow for traffic coming off of Highway 1 south going west-bound on Highway 68 has been installed to move vehicles through that area more quickly.

The $10 million roundabout, designed to alleviate congestion and improve access to the hospital, Pacific Grove and Pebble Beach, is a partnership between the City of Monterey, City of Pacific Grove, Pebble Beach Co., the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District, Monterey County, Caltrans and TAMC. It is scheduled for completion next summer.

Fire shuts down this year's River Run

By CHRIS COUNTS

BECAUSE FIREFIGHTERS are still using Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park as a base camp for their operations — and the Soberanes Fire continues to burn — the 36th annual Big Sur River Run has been cancelled for this year. The event had been set for Saturday, Oct. 22.

Refunds are being offered to runners who have registered, but race organizers are hoping that at least some of the participants will reroute the money they have paid to the victims of the fire, which has burned 123,000 acres and destroyed 57 homes.

The blaze was started July 22 by an illegal camper.

“While the event organizers would appreciate pre-registered participants donating their registration fees to the event so that they can be distributed to the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade and the Big Sur Health Center, refund requests will be accommodated,” reads a letter that went out to runners.

Featuring 10k and 5k races, the Big Sur River Run was founded in 1981, in part to raise money for the fire brigade and health center. Over the past four decades, the event has raised more than $1 million for the two nonprofits, which provide essential emergency and medical services to residents down the coast.

Besides its fundraising component, the Big Sur River Run is popular with runners, who enjoy a course that winds alongside the Big Sur River and past towering redwoods. An eclectic array of musicians serenade the runners, who receive a free massage and commemorative t-shirt designed by Carmel artist Shell Fisher when they cross the finish line.

Race organizers are already looking forward to the 2017 event. “It will be back next year, and bigger and better than ever,” a Facebook post announced this week.

BirchBARK 911 Festival Sunday

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

BIRCHBARK FOUNDATION, the local nonprofit that helps cover medical costs for pets when their owners can't, will host its 3rd Annual BirchBARK 911 Festival at Carmel Middle School on Carmel Valley Road Sunday, Sept. 25, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

BirchBark Foundation provides financial aid and pet health education, and seeks to relieve people of the agony of losing a pet because they cannot afford catastrophic veterinary care.

Since 2013, the foundation has helped save the lives of 119 animals.

The free festival will include demonstrations by K9 Units, Monterey Bay

Search Dogs, Salinas-Monterey Agility Training and other animal-related entertainment and activities, and vendors will be there with pet-related health, fitness and medical information. The festival will also include a herding demo, games and prizes, photo booth, a silent auction, and food from Spice it Up, Zameen and Green Pedal Organic Smoothies.

The Carmel Fire Department will provide pet first-aid items, and BirchBark member veterinary hospitals will be there.

New this year, the festival will offer agility instruction for dogs and their humans.

For more information about the festival or the foundation, visit www.birchbark-foundation.org.

Doc Etienne, 92, called 'magnificent individual and a hell of a lawyer'

By ELAINE HESSER

‘WE ALWAYS knew if Doc was there, we were going to have a good time.’

That's what Tim Jackson, artistic director of the Monterey Jazz Festival, had to say about Monterey attorney Doc Etienne, who died Sept. 10 at the age of 92. Etienne was one of the founders of the festival and had served on its board since 1959. Jackson remembered him as having a "great sense of humor," and said he really knew how to lighten a moment during times of stress or conflict.

Jackson recalled one of his early years as artistic director, when he introduced some music that was, in his words, "a little more avant garde" than what had been done in the past. After the performance, he said, "Doc came up and said, 'Well, I don't really understand this music, but I'm glad it's here.'" Jackson said that was his way of saying he was supportive of it, even if it wasn't exactly his thing.

Former Monterey Mayor Dan Albert also remembered Etienne's support of the festival, particularly where the sister city program with Nanao, Japan, was concerned.

"There were a lot of people that were involved in that," he said, but noted that Etienne's concern for it was particularly strong. "One part he was very interested in was the Junior Wings program," an exchange program for middle school children between Monterey and Nanao, Albert said.

Jim Slaten, general manager of California Rodeo Salinas, talked about Etienne's cowboy side as a member of the Rodeo's board of directors. He said Etienne not only rode, but every year for at least 45 he joined hundreds of other men for the 60-mile Rancheros Visitadores ride in the Santa Ynez mountains.

"He loved the western way of life," Slaten said.

Etienne also had a lifelong concern for animals, according to Slaten, and was a founding member and first president of the Animal Welfare Council, an organization that advocates for "responsible and humane use" of animals in activities like rodeos and circuses.

Etienne's interest in preserving the Old West was also evidenced by his work as a founding board member of the Friends of Historic San Antonio Mission, where he served for about 20 years. The organization's president, Howard Strohn, said Etienne believed in the importance of the Mission's continuing existence and attended quarterly meetings regularly.

"He was busy all the time," recalled Strohn. "We always had our meetings on a Saturday, but one time we decided to experiment and see if Sunday was a better day for everybody. Doc said he couldn't do that. He said, 'My wife says I have to at least have Sundays at home.'"

'Very high standards'

Somehow, in the midst of all that charitable activity and more, Etienne found time to practice law as a partner in one of the Peninsula's oldest firms, which still bears his name: Noland, Hamerly, Etienne and Hoss. Christine Kemp, a partner in the firm, said he was "an extraordinary man" who "set very high standards for professionalism."

She that not only was he "a brilliant attorney," but that he set a tone of collegiality that made the firm a great place to work. Kemp said that many people had been there for decades, thanks in no small part to the way Etienne conducted himself. "He was always the consummate gentleman, even with opposing counsel or parties."

Restaurateur Dominic Mercurio of Café Fina, a longtime Etienne client, agreed, calling him "a stand-up guy."

Mercurio said he once arranged for Etienne to meet sportscaster John Madden — who is an old friend — and that Etienne was so tickled that he brought it up every time they got together afterward.

Fellow lawyer Anthony Lombardo remembered Etienne as "a wonderful role model and teacher of the law." Lombardo said he worked for Noland Hamerly for 10-11 years after finishing law school, and that Etienne was a "magnificent individual who was also a hell of a lawyer." He described him as "very intelligent and very pragmatic."

By all accounts, the community has lost one of those rare people — a truly cheerful giver whose work left its mark on thousands of lives.

FIRE

Briggs said the spot fires actually jumped a bulldozer line in two places that bisect Tassajara Road near the Oliver Observing Station. She said neither blaze poses an immediate threat to residents, and ground and air crews are keeping them contained.

Blaze now the priciest ever

While the burnout operations generated local controversy, another aspect of the fire made national headlines this week — its cost. It was widely reported that the bill for fighting the fire has risen to more than $200 million, making it the most expensive firefighting effort in the history of the United States. The blaze, which was started by illegal campers July 22, has burned more than 125,000 acres and destroyed 57 homes. More than 400 homes are still at risk.

In comparison, the Basin Complex Fire in 2008 scorched 162,000 acres and cost about $120 million to put out.

Much larger fires have occurred throughout the Western United States in the recent past, but Big Sur's steep terrain and dense brush literally create a perfect storm for a fire, making the job of being a firefighter here very challenging — and ultimately, expensive for taxpayers.

While Briggs didn't comment on the news that the fire is the priciest ever, she said it is difficult to say why one fire will cost more than another to extinguish.

"Every fire is different," she added. "There are a lot of factors that go into the cost of fighting one."

Missionaries to the rescue

The residents whose homes were burned in Palo Colorado Canyon now face the heartbreaking task of clearing their properties of debris. Thankfully, they are receiving help from an unexpected source, volunteers from the nonprofit Christian Aid Ministries.

"Local residents, with the help of Christian missionaries, are removing the debris from the burned homesites," reported resident Heidi Hybl. "Everything is brought down to the bottom of Green Ridge [which is 2.5 miles up Palo Colorado Road], then scooped up by [resident] Norm [Cotton] and deposited into giant dumpsters.

Hybl lives near the staging area for the effort.

"There's always a pile of charred sadness at the bottom of my property," she reported. "The dumpsters are paid for by the donations from all of the benefits that were held. It's quite a sight."

Mid-Coast Volunteer Fire Brigade Chief Cheryl Goetz said Christian Aid Ministries came highly recommended by the Coast Property Owners Association, whose members were impressed by the work its volunteers did helping residents after the Pfeiffer Fire in 2013.

Goetz said volunteers from Christian Aid Ministries have been working in the canyon for the past two weekends.

"A lot of people can't haul stuff out on their own," she added. "Having those folks here is wonderful for everybody."

eran who served in Afghanistan, and as a local resident who has served on a number of community-based and nonprofit organizations."

Monning also pointed to his enlistment of Panetta and former Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett to help with the final fundraising effort for the California Central Coast Veterans Cemetery at Fort Ord.

"Their help was instrumental to our success," Monning said.

Lucius, a Republican, claimed in an interview with The Pine Cone last week that Panetta's popularity among voters is not based on his qualifications but rather his connections to his father, Leon Panetta, the former CIA director, secretary of defense and congressman. Panetta received 70.8 percent of the electorate to Lucius' 19.8 percent in the June Primary. The general election is Nov. 8.

Lucius also said that the Panettas or the local Democratic Party likely "paved the way" for Panetta to run for Farr's seat by pushing aside potential candidates Monning, Assemblyman Luis Alejo, and former Assemblywoman Anna Caballero, all democrats.

Monning, expanding on what he said in December 2015 when he announced he would run for reelection instead of pursuing the congressional seat, said he considered vying for the job after Farr announced in fall of that year that he would retire in 2017, but decided that he wanted to continue his role as senator for District 17.

"I reached the conclusion that I could achieve more as the Majority Leader in the California State Senate than I could as a member of the minority party in Washington D.C.," Monning said. "I am proud of what I have been able to accomplish for constituents in the 17th Senate District, and believe I can do more for those I represent as a leader in the California State Senate."

Caballero and Alejo couldn't be reached for comment.

■ Panetta releases tax return

Meanwhile, Panetta released his 2015 tax return this week, after Lucius released hers and called on Panetta to do the same. According to the document Panetta and his wife, Carrie Panetta, a Monterey County Superior Court judge, earned a total of $308,221, reported $72,541 in deductions, and paid $91,083 in federal, state and local taxes. The Panettas made $3,239 in charitable contributions.

In contrast, Lucius and her husband, Bob, earned $178,307, according to their 2015 tax return, and gave $2,400 to charity.

"Transparency is important when running for public office and I'm more than happy to provide my tax returns," Panetta told The Pine Cone this week.

Run in the forest marks 20 years

STEVENSON SCHOOL'S 20th annual Run in the Forest will take place Saturday, Oct. 1, offering runners and walkers the opportunity to make their way through beautiful Del Monte Forest along roads that pass by the rugged coast and climb hills to offer stunning views. Both the 5k run/walk and the 10k run begin and end at the Pebble Beach campus and are followed by a generous buffet breakfast in the school cafeteria.

The races cost $35 per person (kids under 12 are $20) until Sept. 23, after which the prices increase by $5. To sign up, go to www.stevensonsschool.org.

RANCH

Baird.

This week, Andrew Madsen of the Forest Service said little has changed since the letter was written. Addressing the possibility that the agency will sell the land, Madsen didn't get into details, but said it hasn't changed its stance.

"The letter still stands," he confirmed. "It's the latest position the Forest Service has taken on the issue."

Madsen said matters are complicated by the fact that the ranch's infrastructure needs lots of work. "The buildings are in varying states of disrepair," he said. "There's issues with the wells, and the maintenance of the water facility continues to be a big problem."

Too much land, not enough staff

The Brazil Ranch faces an uncertain future, Madsen said. "There are a number of potential outcomes for the Brazil Ranch," he suggested. "There's been a lot of proposals that have been bandied about."

One of biggest challenges facing the Forest Service, Madsen said, is a shortage of workers, which is a direct result of the agency's dwindling budget.

As a result, Madsen said there isn't enough manpower to move forward with a Brazil Ranch project because the agency's local office in King City is busy working on another labor-intensive endeavor, the Strategic Community Fuelbreak Improvement Project, which involves reestablishing and maintaining more than 24 miles of historically used fuelbreaks in the Big Sur backcountry.

That project, understandably, has been set aside for now as most of the local Forest Service staff have their hands full dealing with the Soberanes Fire.

"We only have the capacity to pick up one large ticket item at a time," Madsen conceded. "We are very eager to focus our efforts on that."

One of the chief reasons the Forest Service bought the ranch was to prevent development from happening there, after Las Vegas speculator Brian Sweeney bought the land from the family of Alan Funt and announced he would sell its 9 lots separately.

When the federal government bought the land from Sweeney for $25 million in 2002, the deal generated considerable controversy.

Congressman Sam Farr, who urged the federal government to buy the property, told The Pine Cone this week he's OK with selling off at least some of the land.

"The Brazil Ranch was a controversial purchase, done to avoid mansion development," Farr explained. "It has been awkward and difficult for the Forest Service to operate it as income property. I support a lease or conditioned sale of the developed parcels for acceptable uses as long as the open space remains in public ownership. The Forest Service has many options, though they are subject to restrictions imposed by the local government and the Coastal Act. I hope something can be worked out to everyone's satisfaction."

What comes next?

Ultimately, Congress will need to sign off on any sale of the property. If the Forest Service keeps it, the California Coastal Commission will need to approve what happens there. The state watchdog agency had once expressed concerns about the lack of public access offered by the ranch, but in 2011, with little fanfare, two hiking routes on the land were opened to the public.

Despite getting turned down by the Forest Service, Glass' dream of creating an education and arts center is still alive, said Jim Woodard, the producer of the Days and Nights Festival, which returns this weekend for the sixth year, although it will be limited to a single concert because the fire has made it difficult to stage events in Carmel Valley and Big Sur.

Salinas Airshow hosts volunteer firefighter in Thunderbird flight

By MARY SCHLEY

BRIAN GORRELL, a surfer and Palo Colorado Canyon resident who works as a volunteer firefighter with the Mid-Coast Fire Brigade, will get the flight of his life during the California International Airshow in Salinas Sept. 24-25, when he gets a free ride in a U.S. Air Force Thunderbird. Gorrell, who is also a surfer and lifeguard, and who headed his volunteer fire department's efforts to set up a water-rescue program, was selected as the airshow's 2016 Hometown Hero.

"Brian has successfully combined his passion for family, community, surfing and the ocean in a way of life that makes the Central Coast a better place," airshow officials said after their announcement last week, when they surprised him with the honor.

It was particularly timely, too, considering Mid-Coast's enduring efforts during the still-burning Soberanes Fire, which started in Garrapata State Park due to an illegal campfire July 22 and destroyed 57 homes in the Palo Colorado area.

For his dedication to the community, Gorrell will get to ride with the headlining act at this year's airshow, the USAF Thunderbirds — also known as "America's Ambassadors in Blue" — who will demonstrate the force and might of their F-16As in a series of fast passes and intricate aerobatic maneuvers.

Also on the schedule for this year's show are longtime favorite aerobatic pilot Mike Goulian, Mark Peterson in his Alpha Jet, the U.S. Army Golden Knights Precision Sky Dive Demo Team, aerobatic pilot Anna Serbinenko, Mulisha Extreme MotoX, the Liberty Jump Team, monster trucks (including Bounty Hunter's tribute to American Sniper Chris Kyle), a children's carnival, and an extensive static display of commercial aircraft, warbirds, personal planes and other aircraft. A wide range of vendors offer great food and treats, aircraft-related items and other products.

Tickets, which begin at $20 for general admission and rise for luxury boxes with access to a special tent with a catered lunch and drinks, can be purchased at the airshow office at 30 Mortensen Ave. at the Salinas Airport, all Central Coast Federal Credit Union branches, Monterey County Carl's Jr. locations, Costco locations in Sand City and Salinas, or online at www.salinas-airshow.com. Kids 12 and under can attend for free, and show hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

During its nearly 40 years in existence, the airshow has distributed more than $8 million to local charities.

Young Carmel Valley entrepreneur receives national award

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

IT'S ALMOST getting to be routine. Beekeeper Jake Reisdorf, the 14-year-old owner of Carmel Honey Company has just won another accolade, this time from the Service Corps of Retired Executives, better known as SCORE.

Reisdorff was recognized as the Outstanding Young Entrepreneur in the nation on September 14 in Washington, D.C.

According to the SCORE website, its awards recognize "outstanding examples of successful, innovative SCORE clients."

Reisdorf consulted a local mentor, Larry Horan, as he was building his business, and the award's website quotes Reisdorf as saying of Horan, "He's someone who we can lean on, who we can call for advice and have a perspective from outside the business."

Reisdorf started the business after a school project he completed in fifth grade, and frequently gives educational and public presentations about honeybees to adults and schoolchildren. His long-term goals include supporting a non-profit pollination center to provide information about bees, butterflies, hummingbirds and other pollinators.

to $500 per day. The city also demands $476.50 in “administrative costs.” (The city’s invoice, which should amount to $7,676.50 per the penalties and fees, appears to contain a slight accounting error of $9 in the Haneses’ favor.)

The Haneses began incurring the penalties after not complying with a July 21 order by city-hired administrative hearing officer Kim Murdock that the pig must be relocated from the city after repeated complaints by their neighbor, Ray Magsalay, that Bruiser’s excrement made his yard and house smell bad. After the complaints and a public hearing, Murdock declared the pig a public nuisance.

“The underlying administrative order remains in effect; the city sent an invoice that accurately reflects actual balances owed by the [Haneses] in accord with the administrative decision,” deputy city attorney Michael Laredo told The Pine Cone.

Bruiser had been moved to a property in Monterey where the owner has a pig of her own. However, Bruiser wasn’t compatible with the woman’s other animals and he had to be brought back home. Before that, a property lined up in Carmel Valley fell through.

“They have tried five times to place him in another home, but so far it hasn’t worked out,” their attorney, Michael Lykken told The Pine Cone this week.

Hoping all goes well

However, on Wednesday, Lisa Hanes uploaded a video on Facebook of Bruiser roaming around his yard. She told viewers that they may have identified a new, temporary place for him to live and will visit the property on the weekend.

“We are hoping that goes well,” she said.

The city’s invoice is the latest in the Bruiser saga, which has taken many turns, including a Sept. 6 cease and desist order from Laredo compelling Lykken and the Haneses to stop “harassing” and “cyberbullying” Murdock through online posts on the city’s Facebook page. Lykken and the Haneses denied the allegations and the city has not provided examples.

This week, many of the posts were suddenly gone from the Facebook page, but Lykken said they did not remove them. He figured the city took them down.

DOC ETIENNE ESQ.

MAY 19, 1924 ❖ SEPTEMBER 10, 2016

CARMEL VALLEY, CALIFORNIA

DOC ETIENNE departed this earth last Saturday surrounded by his loving family and listening to the music he adored. His legacy and contribution to the community in which he lived and beyond were formidable and grand in scope. In the short time since his passing, the tremendous outpouring of love and respect from those he knew and guided in so many capacities has been like the rising tide of the sea. Among his many remarkable qualities, the one that truly stood out was his unshakable optimism. His perseverance and diligence in the midst of life’s many challenges extended as a beacon to those who encountered him. This quality was rooted deeply in his vocation and personal affairs; a keystone to those he counseled and to those he loved.

Myron Edward Etienne Jr. was born in Pasadena California, in the spring of 1924. The middle child of three brothers, his early childhood was happy and easy, among a family of great prestige and wealth. In 1929 the family was ruptured by the onset of the Great Depression and the silver spoons were sold for bread. His experience as a poor kid with two siblings, raised by a single mother in a ghetto of depression era Los Angeles served as the first chisel that cut his mold and formed the foundation of his character. At the age of eight, for eight hours, he would sweep the stalls of the local farmers market or peel russet potatoes for the grand total of $1 a day. He would bring his earnings home to his mother to help with household expenses; never a thought of keeping it for himself.

However, in testament to his optimism he would recount fond memories from these hard times. Tears would come to his eyes when he would tell the story of one Christmas where his mother had somehow managed to purchase second hand bikes for him and his brothers. After the exuberant yells and bear hugs they gave her; they quickly tore off down the street and up into the hills. They ate sandwiches that day on top of the iconic Hollywood sign which at that time was just ten years old.

On May 27, 1943, 18 years old and 15 days out of high school, he enlisted in the Merchant Marine. At that time and not advertised to the eager young cadets, the Merchant Marine was suffering the highest casualty rates of any branch in the military. Because they were losing ships at such an extraordinary rate he was presented with the opportunity to enroll as an officer. While the world raged at war he circumnavigated the globe more than a few times at fourteen knots an hour. In his precise words, “not very fast.”

The Second World War and the roles he held during his service in the Merchant Marine were what informed the principles he demonstrated throughout his life. He would always carry an extra bottle of aspirin which he would freely share with his mates, earning him the moniker that he assumed for the rest of his life: “Doc”.

After an honorable discharge, he went to Cal Berkeley and then to Hastings College of the Law in San Francisco. He went on to become one of the most competent and respected attorneys in his community and beyond for a career that spanned more than 50 years.

Before commemorating Doc’s many accomplishments in his professional life, a very special mention of his involvement in the Rancho Vistadores must be noted. This organization and it’s annual meeting was truly one of the highlights of his life. He was one the few selected as a Rancho honorary member; an extreme distinction to those in that circle. The friends he made there were among those dearest to his heart. He was a member of the Los Bustardos camp and held numerous positions within the outfit. Without ever missing a year; from 1969 until 2013 at the age of 89, Doc would travel south to take part in their week long trek through the Santa Ynez Valley. The lore, legend, and era of the West were an integral part of Doc’s soul.

Doc devoted his entire non-professional life to raising money and working pro-bono for various civic organizations throughout Monterey County. For example, as a 59-year member and Past President of the Monterey Jazz Festival (MJF) Board of Directors, Doc’s leadership, guidance, foresight, and vision were paramount in the creation and funding of its music education programs. As a result of his leadership efforts, the MJF teaches and inspires young people in eight middle and thirteen high schools throughout the county. Doc believed that making such educational experiences accessible helps all young people to become better citizens, hopefully inspiring them to give back to their communities as adults. This conviction continually drove his persistent civic involvement to make such opportunities available.

Doc frequently provided pro-bono legal counsel for county seniors, indigent individuals and to other worthy public charities such as: Hidden Valley Music Seminars, Monterey Film Festival, Monterey Jazz Festival and the Mee Memorial Hospital, Public Recreation Limited, Friends of the San Antonio Mission, the Monterey County Fair, and the Monterey County Aids Project, to name a few. He was Past President (three terms), Member of the Board of Directors and General Counsel to the California Rodeo; Member, Board of Trustees, Medical Center Foundation of Monterey County; Member, Legal Services for Seniors Pro-Bono Referral Panel; Chairman, Humane Advisory Committee, Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association; Pro Bono Counsel to Salinas River Channel Coalition; President, Monterey Horse Park; Member and Board of Directors of the Friends of Historic San Antonio Mission. In addition, Doc served as a Past President or Past Member of the Board of Directors for such organizations as: Joe Gheen Foundation of Salinas (cancer and multiple sclerosis research); Salinas Valley Fair, King City (1968 - 1991); Center City Authority of Salinas; Moss Landing Harbor District (1957 - 1964); Rodeo Information Foundation (1966 - 1970); Hastings College of Law. He also chaired fund raising campaigns for the United Way, Alisal High School Bond Drive, Lion’s Club and the Salvation Army.

Doc was honored for some of his past services. He was the Outstanding Young Man of the Year, Salinas Junior Chamber of Commerce; Alumnus of the Year Award, Hastings College of Law (1982); Chief Justice Phil Gibson Award for Outstanding Achievements in Community Service, Monterey County 1989; Standard of the West Award, 1991 (Outstanding Rodeo Committeeman); Honorary Member 1989, Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association; Inducted into the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Hall of Fame, August 2001; Citizen of the Year, Salinas Chamber of Commerce, 2002. In 2005 he was awarded the National Jefferson Award for Outstanding Community Service.

Doc Etienne will be honored and remembered at a private memorial on Sunday, the 18th of September and will continue to be honored at events and by organizations that he was essential to in so many ways. He is survived by his wife Charlene of 40 years, two sons, Victor and Dirk, and six grandchildren: Justin, Michael, Evan, Amanda, Vincent and soon to be born, Isaac. His was a lifetime of achievement and accolade; a luminary who portrayed the heights of what an individual can aspire to be.

All are invited to visit the website of Struve & Laporte at www.struveandlaporte.com to view Doc’s obituary and sign the guestbook. In lieu of flowers the family would request a donation to the any of the following charities: Mary S. Easton Center for Alzheimer’s Disease Research at UCLA, Public Recreation Unlimited (Non profit arm of the Salinas Rodeo) or the Monterey Jazz Festival All Star Band. He will be dearly missed.

Kinship Center's annual fundraiser

THE WHITE Party, the annual fundraiser for Kinship Center will be Sat., Sept. 24, at Pebble Beach with Dina Ruiz Eastwood as emcee. The party is so named because guests are strongly encouraged to wear all white.

The evening will feature a dinner prepared by chefs Tony Baker of Montrio, Cy Yontz of the Rio Grill and Todd Fisher of Tarp's, live and silent auctions and music and dancing.

According to the organization's website, Kinship Center is "a California nonprofit agency that creates and supports permanent families for children through adoption, relative caregiving or other guardianship." It advocates for long-term solutions, working with children who come from abusive or neglectful homes and providing training to adoptive parents before and after adoptions are final.

The silent auction will be conducted via smartphone — gone are the days of writing on clipboards and hovering nearby. Shoppers will get a text if they're outbid.

Tickets are $175 per person or $350 a couple and registration closes Fri., Sept. 23. For more information, visit kinship-center.org.

Paula Weber

Paula Marie Jones Weber of Carmel and recently Fair Oaks, CA passed away peacefully after receiving The Last Rites on 8/18/2016 at the age of 95 with her daughters Terry Varon and Laurel Whorf at her side. Paula was born on 9/3/1920 in The Post Costa Brick Works near the town of Martinez. She was raised and educated in San Francisco. It was in September of 1939 that she met her future husband, Walter Antony Weber, Jr. They were married June 4th 1941 at Saint Ann's Basilica. They celebrated 64 years of marriage until Walter's death in 2005.

Paula dedicated most of her life to volunteer work while raising her daughters in Palo Alto. Her home in Palo Alto was the residence of a number of exchange students studying at Stanford University, many of whom became life-long friends. Special friendships were also made at the Palo Alto YMCA and later at the Monterey Sports Center where Paula exercised regularly. She overcame her fear of flying and traveled extensively with Walt and a group of women called "The Swiss Misses", hiking every year in Switzerland. Paula enjoyed playing bridge and was involved with the duplicate bridge group at Fort Ord, playing into her 90's. Paula and Walt loved entertaining family and friends at their homes in Palo Alto, Pajaro Dunes and Carmel, Paula preparing gourmet meals and Walt concocting fabulous cocktails.

Paula is survived by her daughters: Terry Varon (Rocklin, CA) Alana Weber (Campbell, CA) and Laurel Whorf (Lincoln, CA), her grandchildren: Hilary & Randall Gove and Paul & Lily Varon and her great grandchildren: Grace Gove, Tiana, Gabriel, Christian and Isabelle Varon. Paula will be greatly missed by her devoted family and her many friends. Paula was sincerely grateful to the wonderful, loving and compassionate staff at Sunrise, Fair Oaks for making the last years of her life comfortable and fulfilling.

A memorial Mass will be celebrated at 5:15 p.m. on February 5, 2017 at Saints Peter and Paul Church at 4450 Granite Road, Rocklin, CA.

Contributions may be made to "Autism Speaks."

December 11, 1932 – August 17, 2016
Carmel, CA

It is with great sadness that the family announces the passing of Patricia Burgess on August 17, 2016. Born in San Juan Bautista, Pat grew up in the Carmel-Monterey area and then married her lifelong love, Bob Burgess, on August 12, 1951. Pat's very favorite thing in her whole life was her family. She is survived by her husband of 65 years, Bob; brother, Patrick Buckman; four children, Gary, Lynn, Diane and Karen; six grandchildren, five great-grandchildren and two great-great grandchildren who brought her joy each and every day.

Pat was laid to rest at the El Carmelo Cemetery in Pacific Grove after a small gathering at the Little Chapel-by-the-Sea. A memorial service to celebrate Pat's life will be held on October 8, 2016, from 3:00 to 5:00pm, at the San Jose Christian Reformed Church, 5150 Camden Ave, San Jose, CA. All are welcome to come and join the family in this music filled tribute.

Next to family, Pat's great love was music, having been a lifelong musician, performer, piano teacher and for the last 44 years, one of the leaders of a very special non-profit choir, the Zingers. In lieu of flowers, Pat would have loved to have any donations be sent to the Zingers in support of their valuable service to the community: Zingers c/o Karen Carter, 746 Widget Drive, San Jose, CA 95117.

Rex Robert Raymond

Rex Robert Raymond, born on October 1, 1953, passed away August 18, 2016 at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula from complications of a knee surgery.

Top 10 Facts About This Amazing Man

10. Rex grew up in Costa Mesa with his younger brother Rick and his parents Margie and Robert. Some of his best childhood memories were spent in the donut shop his parents owned.

9. Rex had his first job packaging wheel chairs at a wheelchair factory... He also always ended up with the same fortune from the fortune cookie 'Help! I'm trapped in a Fortune Cookie Factory.'

8. Rex met his future wife, Debora, in high school back when he had only one hair on his chest. It was love at first sight.

7. Rex loved theme parties and to this day those parties are still talked about! Hawaiian, Pirate, Western, Toga... All with elaborate costumes, hand made decorations and fully functioning props.

6. His love and passion for creating is responsible for Halloween memories that everyone who Trick Or Treated in Mission Fields has... His Haunted House was a three day prep and an all out spectacle!

5. Santa DOES exist and every year Rex would dress up as the Jolly One and bring happiness and joy to his family and so many other families.

4. Rex was the ultimate family man, and his family extended to his job sites where the guys he worked with are more than co-workers and partners. They are his Best Friends.

3. Rex had a sense of humor and personality that made him larger than life. He had the ability to tell a story and capture the attention of everyone in the room.

2. His love for his wife, two daughters, and 4 grandchildren is truly his greatest legacy.

1. Rex had always talked about wanting a Viking Burial and that is exactly how we will say Goodbye to the man who gave us all his heart and soul. A true Viking Celebration of Life will be held Saturday October 1st (location to be announced at a later date). Viking garb optional.

Rex is survived by his wife, Debora, two daughters, Brandalyn Raymond (Dave) and Stacey Sarenity. He was Popcorn to Chloe, Madison, Hannah and Talen. He is also survived by his brother Rick (Jo) and several nieces and nephews.

Special Thank You to Bruce (Angie) Loomam, best friend of 36 years, and Arthur Lockwood, the son he never wanted. If you two are a testament to the man Rex was, then he was the most amazing man that has ever lived.

Guess what... Chicken Butt.

Celebration of Life will be held at 1 p.m. on Saturday October 1st at 27640 Schulte Road, Carmel. Park at the church on Carmel Valley Road. Please bring a potluck item to share with family and friends.

restrictive that barely anyone qualified, so the council loosened the requirements in 2010. Council members worried, however, that the estimated revenue loss of $1,020 per house per year would be too great of a burden if a lot of them were approved, so they set a limit of three per year. They also said the Mills Act should be reviewed after five years to determine the cost to the city and whether the contracts should continue to be offered.

Marc Wiener, who has been serving as interim planning director but was recently appointed to the permanent post by city administrator Chip Rerig, said the city has approved four Mills Act contracts since 2010, and each property owner has submitted documentation on an annual basis that details the work done in accordance with their plans for rehabilitation and maintenance. He recommended the council increase the cap from three per year to 15 over a three-year period, and noted that while the planning department has provided information about the program, it hasn't marketed it.

Wiener also revised the estimated loss in tax dollars to the city. Based on a typical house value of $1.7 million — which would generate $1,820 in property taxes for the city — and assuming the owner would get a 50 percent tax break in exchange for committing to a Mills Act contract, he said each contract would cost the city $910 per year.

"I think the Mills Act is a wonderful opportunity for us to preserve our houses," Reimers said before making a motion to update the rules as Wiener had recommended, and councilman Bobby Richards seconded the motion, which passed unanimously.

Four new contracts approved

After raising the cap, the council went on to approve Mills Act contracts for four properties:

■ the Gertrude S. Eells House, designed and built on the northwest corner of Santa Lucia Avenue and San Carlos Street by noted Carmel builder M.J. Murphy in the Spanish Eclectic style in 1928;

■ the Ross E. Bonham House, a Storybook-style/Tudor Revival residence on the southwest corner of San Carlos and 12th that was designed by George Mark Whitcomb in 1926;

■ the Craftsman-style Francis Whitaker Cottage on Vista northwest of Mission that was built in 1928; and

■ the Lloyd C. Miller Cottage on the northeast corner of Dolores and 12th that was constructed in 1929 and 1930 by notable designer/builder Frederick Bigland.

Contract planner Matthew Sundt described the basic contracts for each house, detailing items like structural beam replacement, drainage and foundation work, window and door restoration, re-roofing, upgrading electrical and plumbing systems, seismic retrofitting, painting, repairing chimneys and decks, painting, and repairing walls and floors damaged by drainage problems.

The historic resources board that advises the council unanimously recommended all four contracts be approved, since the homes are on the historic register and the improvements would comply with the Secretary of the Interior's standards for the rehabilitation of historic properties. The owners also agreed to not make any significant changes to the houses, to not increase floor area by more than 15 percent of the original size, to not add second stories, and to meet all zoning standards.

In addition, the council was required to determine that the contracts would "represent an equitable balance of public and private interests and will not result in substantial adverse financial impacts on the city."

The owner of the fourth home, Scott Lonergan, said he is new to town and is "very much looking forward to improving this house in the historical context."

"We like old houses, we like the character that they bring, and it was our opportunity to get in there and get it," he said of the historic designation that some see as a drawback rather than a benefit, since it limits what can be done to a residence, and can therefore undermine its value.

He told the council he and his wife, Robin, had a small home in Palo Alto that will probably "get scraped."

"So we really applaud the preservation efforts," he said, including the Mills Act.

Pebble Beach Authors & IDEAS Festival celebrates 10th anniversary

BY JERRY GERVAISE

WHAT DO you do to make the tenth annual Pebble Beach Authors & IDEAS Festival something special?

Apparently, one thing you do is capitalize all the letters in IDEAS to emphasize that all the festival presenters are brilliant people and great speakers who may not have written a book.

The entire festival staff still consists of Jim and Cindy McGillen, the founders of the popular event that brings together award winning authors and speakers to meet with attendees in intimate settings. These settings provide creative interactions between the artists and guests. The 2016 festival runs this weekend, September 23 – 25 at Stevenson School in Pebble Beach.

But once they got through with the name, the McGillens decided not to make and significant changes to the festival's format for its tenth anniversary.

"Our aim is not to screw it up," Jim McGillen said. "The quality of the presenters we have every year makes each festival a big deal. We thought about bringing back some of the more popular speakers, but that's not what we did the first nine years. Different speakers bring fresh ideas and freshness is what keeps the public coming back year after year."

The McGillens' festival philosophy has been to downplay headliners. They do not want attendees to buy a ticket because of one or two big names.

"We want people to come for the whole weekend," he said. "Our main criterion for inviting speakers is their ability to hold an audience's attention. It's often the lesser-known presenters who generate the most buzz."

No matter how well known an author is, the McGillens ask prospective speakers to send them videos from their last three speaking engagements.

"We've learned that there are many best selling authors whose writing can keep you glued to the page. Yet, often they cannot convey their ideas in an interesting manner when they speak to an audience."

When asked if putting on the festival has gotten easier after ten years McGillen said that it's a matter of degrees. He reminisced about wondering if the festival would continue after the first year. That one almost sent Cynthia and him to the poor house.

"We paid top dollar for marquee presenters," he said. "And we provided them with first class airfare, hotels, meals — everything was the best. We wanted to do it right the first time, rather than have the festival build slowly."

After that, the McGillens decided that the festival was going to stand on its own. They were no longer going to pay for marquee names. It was a risk that worked.

"No one returned my phone calls that first year. Then for the second festival I was suddenly everyone's best friend. Agents and publishers were calling us wanting their authors to be invited to speak," McGillen said.

Like past festivals, the 2016 program features an array of stellar presenters guaranteed to disseminate ideas that will provoke thoughtful discussions during and following the festival. The presenters include a former Secretary of Defense, a former NASA astronaut, an Egyptologist, an astronomer, a Sports Illustrated columnist, a funny economist, an expert on earthquakes, a former Secretary of State for Political Affairs, an expert on U.S.-Iran relations, and Mark Twain (Taelen Thomas), who will keep things moving throughout the weekend.

Once again the McGillens made the festival speakers available to schoolchildren. More than 2,000 Monterey County students participated in a two-day program at Santa Catalina School. This group included more than 150 immigrant students who participated in Migrants Education Region XVI's annual Speech and Debate Tournament.

GINNA GORDON'S FIRST NOVEL IS JUST THE START OF HER 10-BOOK SERIES

By ELAINE HESSER

BLAME IT on Bach. Or at least on Dene and Hazel. It was 2012 and Ginna and David Gordon were on their way to a cabin in Yosemite for two weeks. David — who savvy Pine Cone readers know is the Bach Festival's dramaturge — was knee-deep in research for his book, "Carmel Impresarios," an authoritative work on the lives of Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous, who founded the festival.

Ginna was recuperating from an illness and was wondering how she'd occupy her time while David slogged through his work. She remembered that they'd just purchased a piece of publishing software called Scrivener, which she was planning to use to self-publish her cookbooks and memoirs.

She decided that was the perfect time to learn to use the new software. "It makes writing so uncomplicated!" she said. She soon finished outlining "Looking for John Steinbeck," the first novel in what will eventually be the 10-novel "Lavendula" series about a family who live on a lavender farm in Carmel Valley.

The Gordons live in Jacksonville, Oregon, now, but they lived for more than two decades in Carmel Valley, first on Schulte Road and then near All Saints Day School, so it's an area with which both are very familiar. And of course, they're still frequent visitors here.

'A piece of me in every one'

Gordon's descriptions of Sweet Farm, the 10-acre Wyman family ranch on Schulte Road, with its multiple buildings and waves of lavender, will be immediately familiar to anyone from the area. It's tempting to try to match it to a real-life ranch, but Gordon insists it only exists in her head, along with all of her characters.

"There is a piece of me in every one of those people," she said, but added that that's the extent of their connection to reality. She's included a list of the characters and their ages in 1960, when the saga begins, along with diagrams and pictures of all the buildings on the ranch. Sprinkled throughout the book are "tiny paintings" by Dai Thomas that illustrate vignettes from the story.

The book has numerous Steinbeck references. "I'm a Steinbeck junkie," Gordon laughed. When she lived here, she liked to show visitors where all the scenes in his various books took place. She keeps a picture of the late author on her desk and said it motivates her to keep going. It seems to be working. She said book two should be out by the end of the year followed by the third one in the spring.

She also will have a line of greeting cards with Thomas' paintings and is planning a line of lavender products themed to the books.

There is laughter and there are tears as the multi-generational family of fiercely individualistic people learns to stick together in the face of adversity and changing times. It's a charming work that will remind readers of Fannie Flagg or Garrison Keillor — but it's definitely at home here, in Steinbeck country.

Glass Festival reduced to single show; big names come to Golden State

BECAUSE THE Soberanes Fire is making it difficult to stage events in Carmel Valley and Big Sur, this weekend's Days and Nights Festival has been scaled back to a single concert Friday, Sept. 23, by avant garde musicians Philip Glass and Laurie Anderson at Sunset Center. The show, which is sold out, was originally scheduled at the Henry Miller Library.

Besides the concert at Sunset Center, Glass and Anderson plan to attend a fundraising after-party at Vesuvio restaurant. Tickets are $150, and proceeds benefit victims of the Soberanes Fire.

"We were planning a five-day series of events when this little fire happened," said festival producer Jim Woodard, whose Palo Colorado Canyon home barely escaped the blaze.

While this year's festival might seem like a whimper, Woodward said planning is in the works to make next year's event a bang. "We decided to take all programming and move it to a much bigger festival in 2017," Woodward explained, adding that Glass turns 80 next year and wants to do something really special to mark the milestone.

Glass was in town this week preparing for the concert, Woodward said, but flew back to Washington D.C. Wednesday, where

Studio tour gets 'bigger and better,' more than 100 artists sign up

IF YOU'VE ever wondered what the life of an artist is really like, prepare to have your curiosity satisfied over the next two weekends when a Carmel nonprofit, Arts Habitat, takes over the task of presenting the 26th annual Monterey County Artists Studio Tour. "Artists Equity put on the tour for its first 24 years," explained Shermaine Jones of Arts Habitat. "But last year, they decided to disband."

After taking over the tour, Arts Habitat decided to make it larger. "We wanted to expand the tour into Salinas, North County and South County," said Jones.

Also, a second weekend was added to make it easier for the public to visit different parts of the county. This weekend, Sept. 24-25, the tour focuses on artists along the coast, while next weekend, Oct. 1-2, those who live the inland areas of the county will be highlighted.

More than 100 artists are participating in the tour, including Paola Berthoin, Maria Boisvert, Rich Brimer, Cheryl Kampe, Elizabeth Murray, Alan Masoaka, Kim Weston and many others. Ten nonprofits have also joined the tour, including the Carmel Art Association, the Central Coast Art Association and Open Ground Studios in Seaside. Even restaurants like Portabella, Epsilon and Peppers are getting in on the action.

Not every artist has a studio that is easily accessible to the public, so the Carl Cherry Center, Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley and the Oldemeyer Center in Seaside are each hosting a half dozen artists.

Besides the actual tour, the Pacific Grove Art Center and the Hartnell College Gallery in Salinas are displaying exhibits that showcase participating artists. The P.G. art center will present a Tour Gala Friday, Sept. 23, from 7 to 9 p.m., while Hartnell College will do the same Friday, Sept. 30.

■ Mick, Mary Chapin visit

While the Glass and Anderson concert is sold out, there are still tickets available for two other big name acts who are in town. The drummer and co-founder of Fleetwood Mac, Mick Fleetwood plays Sept. 25 at the Golden State Theatre in Monterey, and singer-songwriter Mary Chapin Carpenter performs on the same stage Thursday, Sept. 29.

When Fleetwood Mac first played, they were a blues band, so it's no surprise that their drummer would return to his musical roots. At Golden State, he'll be backed by a blues band featuring singer and guitarist Rick Vito, who once toured with Fleetwood Mac.

Showtime is 8 p.m. Tickets are $44 to $97.

A five-time Grammy Award winner, Carpenter sold millions of records in the early 1990s, when her smart blend of country and pop earned her crossover success. She landed nine Top 10 singles on the country charts, including “Passionate Kisses,” “I Feel Lucky” and her only No. 1 hit, “Shut Up and Kiss Me.”

The music starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $33 to $60. The theater is located at 417 Alvarado St. Call (831) 649-1070.

■ Back together again in Big Sur

Twenty-five years after they first played together on the lawn at the Henry Miller Library in Big Sur, singer-songwriter Alisa Fineman and the acoustic trio, City Folk, will do it again Sunday.

“It’s been a difficult fire season, and our hope is to bring some joy through the music and offer some medicine to lift spirits,” Fineman told The Pine Cone. “We’re so happy to come down and play this weekend. We’ve postponed this concert a couple times because of the fire. It’s going to be a real treat for us to come together. We’ve known each other for so long.”

Before big name musical acts like the Red Hot Chili Peppers and the Fleet Foxes discovered the library’s charms as a live performance venue, Fineman and the members of City Folk — Keith Greeninger, Kimball Hurd and Roger Feuer — earned a devoted local following.

The August 1991 concert by Fineman and City Folk only attracted about 100 people, but it kicked off a tradition of live music at the library that continues to this day.

Fineman actually got her start playing music in Big Sur, and she dedicated the first song on her first record, “Cup of Kindness,” to Emil While, an old friend of Miller’s who founded the library in 1980. She sang the song at White’s memorial service when he passed away in 1989. Like many of Big Sur’s residents today, she once lost her home to a fire down the coast.

City Folk often shared the stage with Fineman in the early 1990s, and one of the trio’s members, Hurd, has been touring with her as a duo ever since.

The concert starts at 2 p.m. Tickets are $25. The library is located on Highway 1 28 miles south of Carmel. Call (831) 667-2574.

■ ‘Slightly edgy’ Celtic music in P.G.

Striking a balance between Celtic music and influences that range from classical to rock, McKasson, Cotter and Alexander take the stage Sunday at St. Mary’s By-The-Sea in Pacific Grove.

The trio — which features Ryan McCasson, Elias Alexander and Colin Cotter — formed after jamming together last year at a music festival in California. “Their slightly edgy Scottish virtuosity takes the core of Celtic to new creative heights,” Jackie Pierce of St. Mary’s said.

The music begins at 3 p.m. Tickets are $20 for adults and $8 for kids. The church is located at 12th and Central in Pacific Grove.

What to do with a steer, a Mezcal dinner, and drinking pink for breast cancer

MOST RESTAURANTS purchase beef and other meats by the cut and by the pound, according to what's needed in their kitchens. But chef Brandon Miller, the creative culinary force behind Mundaka and Barmel in Carmel, decided to see what he could do with a whole steer.

The 1,200-pound animal he purchased from Mindful Meats up in the Sonoma area was one of two organic, non-GMO steers the farm had available for sale "on the hoof;" and he's making it last, ensuring none will go to waste. After Miller committed to the purchase, the farm processed the steer, hanging some of the more choice cuts for dry aging and parceling out the rest as Miller requests. This week, the first dish made from his pasture-raised steer appeared on the menu at Mundaka: short-rib ravioli.

"The first thing you get is the bones, because they go bad first, so I made a really nice traditional veal stock Español with red wine," he said. "Then, this week, I got the short ribs, the shanks, the heart and the liver, and the marrow bones. The first dish I'm doing is the short ribs and the beef shank, braised overnight, with the stock, and it's going in the ravioli."

At the Spanish restaurant, Miller's "ravioli" involves light crepes layered with three cheeses — fresh mozzarella, homemade ricotta and Manchego — an egg, and now, the short-rib reduction.

That special dish should be on the menu until the middle of the week, depending on how well it sells.

"Then I'll get the chuck and all those things, and end up doing a slider or a version of my old burger on the menu," he said of the cuts that do best freshly ground and turned into burgers or cubed for stew. He'll probably prepare the tongue and cheek (get it?) together with the bone marrow, and will dry cure the eye of round, "because it dry cures really well."

"Each week I'll be getting something," he said. "And eventually I'll be getting the aged meat, too." Mindful Meats is aging the prime cuts, like New York steaks, prime rib and T-bones, at its dry-aging facility in Marin, a process that will take at least three weeks.

All told, Miller's steer will probably stretch out over six weeks of specials at the restaurant. "And he might end up in the tacos and maybe a full-size burger over there in the bar," he added.

Mundaka and Barmel are located next to each other on San Carlos Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues in Carmel, and are open nightly, with lunch also available at Mundaka on weekends.

■ Cultura's El Destilado Dinner

The new Cultura restaurant in Su Vecino Court off Dolores between Fifth and Sixth avenues is hosting a special evening featuring El Destilado Oaxaca Thursday, Sept. 29, starting with a Mezcal tasting from 4 to 5 p.m., followed by a five-course dinner.

The tasting will cost $20 per person, while dinner will be $85 per person, with beverage pairings available for an additional $45 per person.

For reservations, call (831) 250-7005.

■ 'Thrive Dining'

People who are older or suffer from ailments like Alzheimer's or dementia often lose weight, energy and strength because their appetites falter and eating is no longer enjoyable. So chefs working for the retirement community that runs Cottages of Carmel and several other properties have developed a new style of cooking that appeals to such diners, and are inviting the public to come check it out for themselves during free tastings once a month. The next at Cottages of Carmel is set for Sept. 29 from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m., and a similar event will be held on the last Thursday in October, too.

Watermark Retirement Communities executive chefs John Luzader and Pat Caffrey developed Thrive Dining “for individuals with cognitive, neuromuscular or physical challenges,” according to publicist Brian Watson. With 1 in 9 people in America afflicted with Parkinson’s, and many others who have had strokes, physical injuries or dementia, a significant number of older people “have difficulty using a knife and fork, causing mealtimes to become less enjoyable, independent and healthful.”

soup to nuts

By MARY SCHLEY

But, using an innovative method of grinding and binding ingredients, Watermark chefs take the well balanced, classic dishes people often crave and transform them into fresh, one- and two-bite hors d’oeuvre-style meals that are intended to be eaten by hand. Watson said serving such dishes helps restore “the dignity, nutrition and enjoyment of mealtime” for people who have a difficult time with traditional meal service.

An August tasting at the Cottages of Carmel featured the original dish and the small bites side by side, so people could compare them, and the lineup included Beef Wellington (made into turnovers), panko-encrusted tilapia with rice and vegetables (served as rounds), Chicken Marsala (in a crepe), Denver Omelet with hash browns (ham and green pepper casserole with cheese hash-brown bites), and Chef’s Salad (made into bites). The September preview will include French toast and sausage casserole with cheesy hash browns, shrimp scampi crepes, turkey orzo torte, Cobb Salad bites, and Boeuf Bourguignon in puff pastry.

The free lunches will include a presentation by Cottages chef Abel Guzman and a demonstration of how the food is made. The Cottages is located at 26245 Carmel Rancho Blvd. RSVP to (831) 250-6692.

■ Drink pink

Hyatt Regency Monterey Hotel and Spa on Old Golf Course Road is donating $1 from every special pink drink sold during the month of October to the Breast Cancer Assistance Group of Monterey County in honor of National Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

The featured rose-hued cocktail is the Monterey Squeeze, with Tanqueray 10 Gin, elderflower liqueur, hand-squeezed grapefruit juice, and a float of Prosecco served in a flute. The cocktail costs $15, $1 of which will be given to the nonprofit that helps women with breast cancer and their families.

■ Harvest Celebration in C.V.

The Carmel Valley Wine Experience will host its 2nd annual Harvest Celebration at Carmel Valley Ranch Saturday, Oct. 1, from 1 to 4 p.m., to showcase the restaurants and wine producers of the valley.

A dozen local wineries and restaurants, as well as farms, purveyors of artisan foods, and musicians will come together for the event, which includes not just food and wine, but demonstrations and exhibits, too.

Wineries set to pour during the Harvest Celebration include Bernardus, Big Sur Vineyards, Chesebro, Cima Collina, Holman Ranch, Joulilian, Joyce, Mercy, Parsonage, Swing and Talbott, while restaurants signed on to serve small bites are Anton & Michel, Cachagua General Store, Jerome’s Village Market, Roux, Valley Kitchen (Carmel Valley Ranch) and Will’s Fargo.

Attendees must be at least 21 years old, and tickets are $85 per person. Carmel Valley Ranch is located at 1 Old Ranch Road, just east of Mid-Valley Center. The event will be held at the Vineyard Lawn, with shuttles available from the River Course parking lot.

■ Oktoberfest at fairgrounds

The 5th annual Monterey Bay Oktoberfest will be held at the Monterey Fairgrounds Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 1-2, in celebration of all things German. Saturday’s fest will run from noon to 7 p.m., while Sunday — “family day” — will be noon to 6 p.m. and will include events for kids, jump houses and games.

Admission in advance is $20 on Saturday, $15 on Sunday, or $30 for both days, while admission at the gate is $25 on Saturday and $20 on Sunday. Kids under 12 are free.

A ticket includes access to all beer gardens, plus full bar service and more than 50 craft vendors throughout the fairgrounds, and live music and dancing, with The Alpine Band and The Hazelnuss Das Music.

amount of money to renovate the theater (to comply with ADA requirements), nothing was done to improve the women's restroom except for a coat of paint. I attended an excellent performance of PacRep's 'Wizard of Oz' on September 15 and found out that the women's restroom was not working. (A nearby blue porta-potty doesn't solve the problem.) Imagine visitors attending for the first time and being impressed with the seating and layout of the theater only to find out that the women's restroom is not functioning. Does the city of Carmel have no pride in this historic theater?

Shirley Loomis, Pebble Beach

No more plastic

Dear Editor,

We here in Carmel care about the ocean, right? We don't want to see it polluted with garbage, oil or plastic bags. Then why does the city make available plastic bags for dog poop? Petroleum-based plastic never fully degrades, it only breaks into smaller and smaller particles that fish, birds and other wildlife can mistake for food, eat, and die of starvation because they think they are full.

According to the UN, humans have created 500 dead zones in the oceans — places where no marine life can survive. The UN Environment Program estimates that every square mile of ocean contains 46,000 pieces of floating plastic. Something like a dumptruck load a minute is depositing plastic waste.

In about 30 years if we keep going at the rate we are now, there will be more plastic in the ocean than there are fish, according to the World Economic Forum.

We don't want dog poop (or any other kind for that matter) on the streets or walks of our city. How about making plant-based bags available? I buy them at the market and use them all the time, (for my dog, that is!) And I bring them home in a cloth, reuseable bag.

Lynda Sayre, Carmel

Hopes they will reconsider

Dear Editor,

The Pebble Beach Company owes the people in this area an apology, not an apartment complex in Area D. Back in 1986, the company promised it would remain undeveloped in exchange for the Congress Road extension that was constructed before the proper permits were in place and the Supervisors were very clear that they wanted no development along this new road because of traffic concerns. PBC managed to delay a hearing on the issue for 20 years but it doesn't change the history and the fact that this matter should have had a public hearing.

Putting inclusionary housing in Pebble Beach is not a good idea. None of the services necessary for working families are available there. One suggestion at the hearing was redevelopment of an apartment complex and additional distressed homes that were for sale nearby instead of new construction. That wouldn't involve any additional water credits or traffic problems and would provide better housing than the 24 small apartments proposed, which are not comparable to the market homes being built as is required under inclusionary housing regs. This change would be a win-win for everyone.

Input from the City of PG and residents was ignored and the Board didn't hesitate before voting in favor of this proposal without one change. Each supervisor spent a lot of time at the conclusion of the hearing congratulating PBC on this wonderful plan, but only allowed one minute each for comments from citizens.

It is only a question of when, not if, an accident involving trucks/autos/pedestrians happens or some injury or fire occurs as a result of a poorly located development. There will be a lawsuit and plaintiffs will be looking for the "big pockets" to sue. Those pockets will be the Pebble Beach Company and the County of Monterey for approving a development that is not only environmentally the worst choice of the alternatives, but also not the best choice for inclusionary housing and the people who will live there.

No trees have been cut yet. There is still time for PBC and the County to work out a better solution for inclusionary housing that will benefit everyone. I hope that they will reconsider this matter.

Michelle Raine, Pacific Grove

'Negative campaign'

Dear Editor,

Casey Lucius, please keep the nasty negative campaigning out of our local politics. It's bad enough that we have been bombarded with Trump's nastiness, now I have to turn on the news and see yours? That is a playbook you really don't want to take notes from. Why don't you tell us what you believe and what you stand for instead of trying to tear down someone else? Disgraceful.

Though Gill said he was armed, he said he didn't shoot because he didn't have a "safe line of fire."

The former officer, who has been unable to find a job in law enforcement, alleges that the Seaside Police Department, Myers and the district attorney's office defamed him. The

Point well taken

LAST WEEK Congressional candidate Casey Lucius caused a tempest when she accused her front-running opponent, Jimmy Panetta, of being “unqualified” for the seat and claimed that Panetta’s in the lead — and even that he got the Democratic Party nomination — solely because he has a famous and politically well connected father.

“This election cannot be about political connections and dynasties,” Lucius said in a campaign commercial.

A congressional seat, she went on, should not be treated “like a family heirloom.”

Panetta’s reaction — saying Lucius only made the accusations because she’s “desperate” after finishing so far behind him in the June primary — was understandable. But we think he should concede that she’s making a perfectly valid point.

Jimmy Panetta, of course, is the son of Leon Panetta, who is not only a former Congressman from the Monterey Peninsula, but who also served as White House Chief of Staff and U.S. Secretary of Defense, and was director of the Central Intelligence Agency when the mastermind of 9/11, Osama bin Laden, was tracked down and covertly killed in Pakistan. Truly, Leon Panetta is not only the most famous local politician by a long shot, he’s one of the most respected American politicians of his era.

Over the last few years, as word spread that Sam Farr was getting close to retirement, speculation about who might try to succeed him focused on names like John Laird, Luis Alejo, Mark Stone, Jason Burnett and Bill Monning. Since Congressional seats turn over so infrequently, the possibility of an open seat surely had them, and numerous other local political figures, excitedly contemplating the possibility of moving to Washington D.C.

But then, in November 2015, the race was upended when Jimmy Panetta — who had hardly even been mentioned as a possible successor to Farr — suddenly announced he would be a candidate in the Democratic Party primary for the seat. Quicker than you can say, “Donald Trump has funny hair,” all the other local Democrats dropped out of the race, leaving Lucius as his sole legitimate challenger.

Indisputably, and obviously, it was Panetta’s last name that put him in the lead. Without that, he would never have even come close to capturing the Democratic nomination for the seat, much less winning it, which he seems almost certain to do come Nov. 8. Since everybody knows it was his relationship with Leon Panetta that made his rapid political success possible, Jimmy Panetta might as well acknowledge it.

And we say that not only because it’s the truth, but because Panetta can turn it to his advantage as he contemplates taking office in January.

Voters, you see, appreciate a little humility in their political leaders, who are supposed to be their servants. And Jimmy Panetta, for all his accomplishments in the military and as a deputy district attorney, is a political rookie, which means he has even more reasons than usual to admit he has something to prove.

Instead of reacting defensively to Lucius’ accusations, we think Panetta should take them as an opportunity to thank the voters for being willing to put so much faith in him, and promising to strive every day while he’s in office not to let them down.

Letters to the Editor

Wood fires prevent access

Dear Editor,
With the new beach fire plan, Mayor Steve Dallas continues his game of smoke and mirrors. As reported in The Pine Cone, he said at his beach gathering on September 7 that there is now a “compromise” to allow fires, and that the locals at that celebration represented the community. But Dallas refuses to discuss the health hazards of smoke, and he crafted a policy that prevents people’s access to our public beach. He ignored those who testified before the city council and the coastal commission that the smoke prevents them from enjoying a walk on the beach to share what we all love, the sunset.

Those who could use propane in the evenings to avoid smoke, cannot do that because fire smoke is blowing all over the beach. Dallas’ compromise is only that he will reduce the amount of smoke you’re inhaling — that doesn’t work with people with breathing problems.

The coastal commission voted against wood-burning fires because it prevents access, and they will likely do it again.

Dear Editor:
This week the Soberanes fire grew dramatically, and the air quality in Carmel Valley, Carmel, Big Sur and even as far north as San Jose, has been seriously impacted. Schools have had to keep children indoors, and health centers are seeing a significant increase in patients seeking help for pulmonary-related illnesses. The September 9 issue of The Pine Cone shows a photo of Mayor Dallas and his friends partying on the beach with boxes of wood for a fire to celebrate the lifting of bans on beach fires by the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District. This seemed incredibly short-sighted, given the enormity of the fire that was burning just a few miles away. The mayor also appeared insensitive to the victims of a fire that was started by an illegal campfire, and he certainly doesn’t seem in tune (the quote: “let them eat cake” comes to mind) with how these fires change rapidly, and the enormous impact they can have on air quality and safety. I think the photo will come back to haunt him, if he ever decides to try for re-election.

Making memories and recharging batteries, one fish at a time

By DENNIS TAYLOR

THE WORLD of Geoff Malloway never feels quite right when it's inside four walls and a ceiling. And, no question, it is incomplete unless a river runs through it.

Malloway, of Carmel Valley, is a fly fisherman, born and reared to chase the big ones in all the best waters, educated and self-programmed to think like a fish, and passionately driven to teach anybody else, young or old, to do the same.

He had a fishing shop once — Central Coast Fly Fishing — on Carmel Valley Road, where he sold the finest equipment and more than 1,000 hand-tied flies. It was also the way most people connected with him for fly fishing lessons, or to sign up for the exotic trips he's taken — six a year, at one point — to places like Montana, the Bahamas, the Amazon, and an angler's paradise he still visits every August, the Copper River in Alaska.

"Then Sept. 11 hit and fewer people were willing to deal with TSA at airports. And then the Great Recession hit, and fewer people could afford the trips," he said. "And as a small businessman I was competing with the big box stores and the internet. And I went through a divorce."

An unbridled passion

So, Malloway closed his shop and moved to Montana to start over, but didn't find what he was looking for, stayed only a few months, and came home.

Malloway, 56, was born in Carmel, when the town still had a hospital. He graduated from Monterey High (Class of '78). He got a degree from Cal Poly San Luis Obispo (Natural Resource Management, emphasis on Fisheries and Wildlife) in 1984, with a still-unrequited dream of becoming a game warden.

He learned to fish alongside his dad, Robert, who wasn't necessarily a great teacher, Malloway said, but who had an unbridled passion for the outdoors and took great joy in watching his youngest son catch fish.

Fly fishing is largely about detective work, analysis, figuring out what the fish wants and why, Malloway explained. It's about choosing the right fly, spotting the fish, reading the currents, casting to the perfect spot.

"It turned out to be something I had a gift for, and a deep love for," Malloway said. "For Dad and me, it was a salve, a way to recharge our batteries. We spent a lot of time hunting and fishing together, making some very fond memories."

Fly fishing and personal relationships often tend to be a good mix. There's time to talk, and think, and breathe.

Malloway says he gets as much pleasure teaching newbies how to catch fish as he does reeling them in himself, which is why he loves giving lessons and thoroughly enjoys taking novice anglers along on the trips he arranges and guides.

He says Alaska, a destination since 1997, is a once-in-a-lifetime kind of adventure that some clients do again and again, despite its lofty price tag ($5,200 for seven days).

The Copper River is Alaska's most renowned trout stream — a catch-and-release venue where 25-30-inch rainbows are waiting to bite. Temperatures there in August typically range from 55 degrees to the mid-70s.

GROWING UP PROTECTED FROM THE STORMS OF A TURBULENT DECADE

AS MEMBERS of Carmel High's Class of 1966 were maturing from children to teenagers, teenagers to adults, their sheltered little town by the sea and the world around it were evolving as well.

They were sophomores in November of 1963, headed to their 10:30 classes, when commotion and confusion began to buzz through the campus. When John Anzini

"Conrad drove us to Cannery Row, then I drove back," she recounted. "I was a nervous kind of person anyway, and when I pulled into the lot at Carmel High I immediately noticed that the flag was at half-mast. It was at that moment that I realized President Kennedy was dead, and I drove the car right into a little brick wall."

Each generation experiences its own anxieties, but the kids of the mid-1960s felt their innocence slipping away in unusually painful bites. Kennedy's successor, President Lyndon Johnson, sent 180,000 U.S. troops to Vietnam the following summer, then boosted the number to 250,000 as the Class of '66ers entered their senior year.

As teenagers were drafted and sent to Indochina in droves, rebellion sprouted.

"We saw the numbers coming in on TV — all of the people who were being killed or wounded in Vietnam. There were people from the classes above ours who went over there and didn't come back, which was very sad for people in a small town," said Anzini. "It definitely made us do some thinking."

More domestic horrors: The Beatles had arrived in the San Francisco Bay area, and teenaged girls were losing their minds.

"I got to see the Beatles at the Cow Palace (on Aug. 31, 1965), and it was insane. It seemed like more people in one place than I'd ever seen in my life," said Natalie (Filatiev) Rodda. "I absolutely worshipped them, but was never a screamer myself, so I remember being annoyed because I couldn't hear them at all."

With the Beatles came longer hair on the boys. With the Rolling Stones and the Kinks came new fashion trends. Then came the rule enforcers.

Stood his ground

"As a senior, I was sitting on the lawn and some of my classmates walked up and said, 'You better have your hair cut by Monday, or we're going to cut it for you,'" Anzini remembered. "My response to them was,

'Dream on.'"

The following Monday, when the same group approached with scissors and clippers, Anzini stood his ground, daring any in the mob to try him one-on-one. There were no takers, and he left with his locks intact. Dave Erickson, who, as a sophomore, became the only Carmel High student with a beard, says he ran into similar mob enforcement.

"And remember Carlin Arriola (Class of '64), the son of Gus Arriola? The administraarrived at woodshop class, he found classmates sitting outside, listening to bulletins on their transistors. Dave Erickson remembers English teacher Ray Gere postponing his lesson to give the somber news. Salli (Holbrook) Hebert had just slid into a chair in her typing class when she heard what had happened.

Into a brick wall

Sue (Kramer) Erickson was waiting for study hall to begin when she and Conrad Lewis were beckoned aside by their driver's education teacher, Alan Aldwell.

"We got pulled out of study hall that day to drive, but before we left I heard our study hall teacher say, 'Does anybody have a radio? The president has been shot.'"

Erickson (then Kramer), who had never driven a car in her life, remembers opting for the back seat when the driving class began.

FISH

"A rank beginner should be able to land a dozen to two dozen fish in a day," he said. "My friend Trevor Knable, a great angler and a bona fide fishaholic, landed 154 one day. And anybody can get to that point if they put in the time."

The adult son of Anthony Knable — Malloway's fisheries professor at Cal Poly — calls Malloway the best he's ever fished with, an angler with textbook technique, as well as a masterful instructor of the art.

"As a teacher, he's incredibly patient, and he wants people to get it right — not for him, but so they can become successful," Knable said. "That first day up in Alaska, he basically spends the entire day with the newer people, helping them spot fish and line up casts. Meanwhile, he's pointing things out, making sure they realize they're in a unique place."

Unique watershed

Bald eagles circle overhead. Grizzly bears, wolves and caribou wander nearby.

"We see the bears on a fairly regular basis — usually about three a day," Malloway said. "We did an overnight trip several years ago where we saw 34 in a day and a half."

"And the scenery is amazing," he said. "We go to a unique watershed, with pools, and ripples, and runs, where the water is clear — not that milky, turquoise-green color you get from a glacial snowmelt. It's everything you want to see in a river."

The locals, said Malloway, tend to have "a different kind of mindset." Many enjoy living off the grid.

"One thing about Alaskans: They know they're free, and they have freedoms up there that we don't have here anymore," he said.

The trips are inevitably enlivened by practical jokes. One day Knable discovered that his wading boots had been screwed to the deck of the cabin. He returned from this year's trip and found a one-pound pack of bear poop in his luggage. One morning he awoke to find his rod and reel encased in plaster of Paris. "I spend a lot of time up there looking over my shoulder, trying to keep track of where Geoff is and what he's up to," he said.

Misses it

Malloway misses that era when he'd often guide six excursions a year, taking groups wherever they wanted to go, whether it was California, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, or somewhere more exotic. He also doesn't have as many fly fishing students since closing his shop.

But he's still willing and available, he says. In fact, he's seriously considering reopening Central Coast Fly Fishing as a brick-and-mortar destination.

"I miss the shop a lot, and I miss working for myself," said Malloway, who currently works two jobs, including part-time duty helping the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District with steelhead trout rescues. "There's a large core of fly fishers in the area and very few small shops to serve them. They have to buy their equipment somewhere. They have to take their classes somewhere. And people want to learn."

Anyone interested in organizing a fly fishing trip, or learning the art, can contact Malloway at (831) 596-7583 or centralcoastflyfishing@gmail.com.

the tour to unfold. "We have spent a good 14 months planning this so we can make it bigger and better than before," she added.

The event is free. Tour maps are available at www.artshabitat.org.

■ From Russia with light

Russian painter Ludmila Pawlowska will be the guest of honor Sunday, Sept. 25, when All Saints Episcopal Church presents an ambitious display of her religious-themed abstract-expressionist work, which includes paintings, sculptures, frescos and tapestry weavings — some over 8-feet tall.

Like so many other artists, Pawlowska is fascinated by light.

"To create and capture a light has always been the most difficult and greatest challenge to artists through the centuries," she explains on her website. "My recent exhibitions are my attempt to capture it in my own way."

To welcome Pawlowska and her art, the church is hosting an Opening Gala fundraiser from 5 to 8 p.m.

With Pawlowska's artwork providing a stunning backdrop, the church is also presenting a four-week painting workshop, a four-part speaker series and three concerts while the show is on display.

Tickets are $50. The church is located at Dolores and Ninth. The exhibit continues through Nov. 20. For tickets, call (831) 624-3883 or visit www.allsaintscarmel.org.

tion ordered him to cut his hair," Rodda recalled. "If I remember, it was all headed to a legal battle until he got himself a wig — this nondescript, Beatle-looking thing. He'd tuck his long hair into that wig every day before school, then yank it off the minute he stepped off school grounds."

Females also came under fire. Rodda says classmates were summoned to the office of vice principal Dorothy Wright and ordered to kneel on her office floor.

"If your skirt touched the floor when you knelt, it was long enough," Rodda said. "If not, she sent you home to change."

But Carmel had an unusually liberal social climate, thanks largely to the artisan community that set the tone. Anzini and Dave Erickson remember getting picked up hitchhiking by Joan Baez, the legendary folk singer who lived in town.

"I was completely in awe and tongue-tied the day somebody introduced me to her," Rodda recalled. "I finally managed to say, 'Oh, I just love your earrings!' And she took them off and handed them to me."

Burton and Taylor

Celebrity sightings were commonplace. Future Carmel mayor Clint Eastwood frequently zipped by on his motorcycle. Stars playing golf in the Crosby Clambake paused to sign autographs outside La Playa Hotel. Kids gawked at Sandra Dee and Troy Donohue during the filming of "A Summer Place." Beverly (Bray) Sigourney got her picture taken with Ray Bolger, who played the Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz."

And Rodda savors a memorable moment in 1964, when a black limousine rolled to a stop in front of Mediterranean Market.

"Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton got out, went inside for sandwiches and other stuff, then got back in and drove away," she said. "They were filming 'The Sandpiper' just down the coast."

The Ericksons — Dave and Sue — were just dating when they snuck into the Golden Bough Theater to see the movie.

"You had to be 18 to see that movie, and we were only 17, so Dave got some man to buy the tickets," Sue recounted. "Right in the middle of the movie, the usher came over and kicked us out."

Sneaking into a movie qualified as juvenile delinquency for a teen in Carmel. Kids were mostly pretty tame.

Tough but kind

Rodda recalls watching her younger brother, Mike, hurl a shaving cream pie at a friend at a town festival. The friend ducked, and Chief Klaumann caught it square in the face.

"What do you think we should do with him?" the chief asked her.

"Just lock him up for a while, make him scared ... but please don't call Mom and Dad," Rodda begged.

"Oh, I won't," Klaumann assured.

"Clyde was such a kind man," she said. "But he managed to scare the heck out of my brother for a while."

Klaumann and his police force were mostly kid-friendly. Indeed, the entire town let Carmel youth have an idyllic, relatively unrestrained kind of fun. Kids camped overnight at a swimming hole at the mouth of the Carmel River. They partied on mountaintops. They smooched at the hideaway known as Top of the World.

"Kip's Market would actually stay open on Halloween night so they could give us things to throw at each other," said Sigourney. "We'd pelt each other with fruit, or eggs, or whatever, and then the fire department would roll down the street and wash off the streets."

Whatever rage the world was feeling as the Class of '66 came of age was beyond city limits. Life was good for teens in Carmel-By-The-Sea.

"I think we were still naïve enough at the time to not be connected with all of the problems," Sue Erickson said. "Carmel was a very sheltered place."

"I LIKE THE HIGH LEVEL OF SUPPORT I RECEIVE."

Client Alana Puryear of Carmel Valley (right) confers with Bella Lofaso over a sewing project at Bella's Studio in Monterey.

Whether making a blanket or stitching up family memories, here's how to make it Bella

By DENNIS TAYLOR

GRANDMOTHERS HAD sewing machines when Bella Lofaso was a little girl, and one of her earliest and most comforting memories is of rocking back and forth on the treadle as a toddler.

She also recalled exploring a dresser overstuffed with skirts, dresses, shirts and other garments her grandma had sewn over the years for her eight children, and 29 other grandchildren, picking things out of the drawers and exclaiming, "Oooo! Look at this!"

"When I was 5 or 6, my grandma gave me bits of blue-plaid fabric. I couldn't tell you how I did it, but I used those pieces to make myself a little outfit," she reminisced. "I put it on one day when my dad and I were going to walk to this little hot dog stand in downtown L.A., and I remember distinctly that he looked at me and said, 'Are you going to wear that?'"

Heck yeah, she was going to wear it! When they got there, her father sat little Bella on the counter. People made a fuss. "Oh! Well, that's quite an outfit!" exclaimed the lady taking their order.

"Yes," Bella's father said with a wink. "She made it herself."

"Everybody gave me all this praise ... and, of course, who knows what in the world it looked like. I'm sure it was ridiculous."

Lofaso, 64, never had children of her own, but kids — some as young as 5 or 6 — are among more than 150 clients (the oldest is 99) who wander in and out of Bella's Studio, where six days a week she helps them create whatever their minds can imagine.

The young ones favor "stuffies" — little stuffed animals, superheroes, sock puppets, toys, etc. Teens and adults create quilts, pillows, hats, Halloween costumes, cute outfits for their pets, gifts for friends — even prom dresses.

The studio is equipped anything and everything they might need to embroider and sew — state-of-the-art sewing machines, scissors, threads and needles, accessories, patterns and instruction books — and especially hands-on guidance and instruction from Bella, herself.

Upholstery to wedding gowns

Lofaso is an expert seamstress who, after she was lovingly mentored by her grandma, was formally educated at Bassist College in Portland, Oregon (now Art Institute International), where she earned a degree in Fashion Design.

She worked in the industry, making everything from upholstery to elaborate wedding gowns, then became a teacher — 12 and 1/2 years at Carmel High and nearly 20 at Carmel Adult School, where she established warm relationships with two generations of students.

They became her core clientele when she decided to open her studio, a second-floor space above the Crown & Anchor restaurant with wrap-around windows overlooking Old Monterey.

The natural light and colorful décor contribute to a perpetually upbeat atmosphere, ideal not only for creating art, but also for socializing. In addition to being a place for private and group lessons, Bella's has become a destination for sewing circles, baby and bridal showers, birthday parties, girls' nights out, home-school classes, and, of course, personal project time.

"I searched for this space for about a year," said Lofaso,

HOW ONE MOM STOPPED WORRYING AND CHANGED HER DAUGHTER'S LIFE

By ELAINE HESSER

WHEN YOUR own mom changes from a worrywart to a calm, easygoing person practically overnight, it's pretty hard to ignore it. That's exactly what happened to Lindsay Dyson in 1972.

The worrying took the form of long letters Dyson's mother sent to her regularly. "I was on the West Coast and she was on the East Coast, and I'd get these letters that said, 'You move around too much. You have no direction.' I would sigh whenever I opened one."

That was, until the day she opened a missive from her mom that didn't read like any of the rest. "It was short, pleasant and loving, and signed 'Love, Mom.'" Dyson re-read it a few times and, startled, thought to herself, "This is who my mother really is." Then she saw the postscript: "This weekend I learned Transcendental Meditation."

That P.S. was the seed of Dyson's nearly 40-year vocation as a teacher of the form of meditation made popular internationally by the late Maharishi Mahesh Yogi. She flew home to Philadelphia to visit with her mom and said, "We got along very well. Sometimes she would be tired and discouraged, but then she'd go upstairs and meditate. When she came back downstairs, she had none of that. I put two and two together."

Results were instant

Dyson, who was 22 at the time, described herself then as "hyper inside." She was working as a commissioned portrait painter, and when she learned that Transcendental Meditation was said to "increase your creative intelligence," she signed up for the training. Her results were instant. "The day I learned TM, that internal speediness was gone."

"I wanted to teach teens and pre-

Making Connections for Good

■ Circuitous career path leads to happy California ending

By LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

GIN WEATHERS knew exactly what she was going to be when she grew up, but not what she wanted to be. Having been placed on the path at birth by the educators in her family who came before her, she became a teacher. And then she left herself open to every opportunity that came her way, following a circuitous path through business, energy, journalism, development and event management, until she finally found her way home among the realtors of the Monterey Peninsula.

Weathers doesn't see her job as "selling houses." She prefers to think of it as "connecting you to the place you'll call home." She has worked in real estate in the Monterey Peninsula since 2004, and she established the Weathers Group, an affiliate of Sotheby's International Realty, in 2009.

"The Weathers Group is a collaboration of three partners — Charlotte Gannaway, Ben Zoller and myself — who, in our 30s, 40s and 60s, represent a broad range of client perspectives," she said.

Born and raised in South Carolina, Weathers graduated from Winthrop University in Rock Hill, S.C., with a degree in elementary education, and went on to teach children with special needs and emotional disturbances.

Weathers got the teaching job first, and then got a specialized credential through a University of South Carolina extension program. "Once I had the credential," she said, "I figured I might as well go on to earn my master's in education with a concentration in

She's a three-year veteran of the business world — and she's only 22

By ELAINE HESSER

IT'S HARD enough running a small business in California these days, even for an experienced entrepreneur like Kim Keefer, who was one of the executives of Carmel Tile and Marble for 10 years. Just imagine what it would be like for a 19-year-old fresh out of high school and beauty school.

Olivia Keefer is just 22 year olds, but has her own salon, Hair Apparent, on San Carlos Street. The shop not only has a clever name, it has a very sharp owner — especially for her age.

Well, Kim could, but when her daughter, Olivia was graduating from beauty school and a family friend offered to sell her established salon, C.C. by the Sea, to her family, it just seemed like a logical fit.

The salon, located on San Carlos between Seventh and Eighth, has been rechristened "Hair Apparent," and got a complete makeover from its new owner, who started working with the previous owner, C.C. Pak, in 2013 to learn the ropes, and took over full-time in early 2014.

"It was one of those opportunities we couldn't really pass up," said the younger Keefer. "My mom thought it was a great idea." Olivia graduated a semester early from Monterey High, finishing up in December 2012, and enrolled in beauty school shortly afterward, graduating and getting her license in summer of 2013.

The inside of the salon has been redone to look "as cottage-y as possible," in Kim's words. Olivia painted all the walls to create a finish that mimics Jerusalem stone, a kind of limestone popular with decorators. She used her hands instead of a brush or roller to apply the paint and get the look she wanted. She also designed the business' logo. Kim said the name is a play on words because of the generations of families that have lived around here.

Learning to market

Although Olivia is well-practiced at cuts and coloring — she's been cutting her own hair and her sisters' since she was 14 — the intricacies of things like accounting software have been a bit more challenging. Fortunately, Kim is an accountant and has been teaching Olivia the business end of running the salon.

From her experience at Carmel Marble and Tile, for example, Kim knew that having products no one else around here carried was one key to success. She secured an exclusive local agreement with Eufora, a high-end brand of hair care products, as well as with Faerie organic cosmetics.

Olivia's been catching on to the business and, according to Kim, takes care of all of the day-to-day functions, like deposits, reconciliations and inventory. "I was surprised at how much effort I have to put in," Olivia said. She also manages the salon's Facebook and Twitter presence and is learning about marketing, which she said is probably the place she has the most room for growth.

Olivia isn't exactly shy, but she said she's better one-on-one than in a big group. "I'm not a social butterfly. I'm not the kind of person who's going to just walk up to other people and hand out my business card," she said. But she's been overcoming some of that reticence in order to build up her clientele.

"I have to learn to market and socialize," she said.

She's also set up an online booking service through her web site, for clients' convenience. Hair Apparent offers a full range of hair and nail care services and although Olivia's not an esthetician, she can assist clients with makeup application to look their best for an evening out or special occasion.

A good listener

If you book an appointment, you can be sure that you'll get plenty of personal attention. "I will try my best to do what the client wants," she said, "I make sure I have plenty of time." She said she's a good listener who will do a thorough consultation to understand a client's needs and wants, and offer advice when necessary to make sure they get the best possible results.

According to Monta Potter at the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, although the Chamber doesn't ask business owners' ages, Olivia's "one of the younger ones" who's joined.

For Olivia's part, she said that she hasn't encountered any hesitation from prospective clients because of her age — quite the opposite, in fact. "They say, 'Oh you're so young to have your own business!'"

And she seems to be growing into it beautifully.

Dancer choreographs her causes and what matters most

FRAN SPECTOR Atkins was running along Scenic Road, paying more attention to the rush of waves on the sand than the road before her, when it hit her. The idea, that is.

Passing Tor House to the east and a view of Point Lobos to the south, she focused on the beauty of the setting and began to choreograph, "Ocean ... Rock ... Bird ... Sky," a performance inspired by the natural beauty of the Monterey Peninsula and the poetry of Robinson Jeffers. She imagined her dancers moving to the rhythm of waves as they express Jeffers' eternal view of man as a creature with "tides in our veins."

Ten years later, the dancer-choreographer has returned to the sea with "Ocean Trilogy," a multidisciplinary performance she designed to highlight cutting-edge research and innovations in ocean science.

Working with the Monterey Bay Aquarium Research Institute, Atkins is exploring how dance and science can collaborate to create awareness, encourage conversation and inspire stewardship of our oceans.

"Science, like dance, has to come up with a concept and then experiment and explore it, going to places you didn't imagine going, which gets you to those 'aha' moments," said Atkins. "That humans can explore and express is uplifting and exciting. Through art and science, we can solve problems."

Atkins said she didn't dance professionally until she was 20. As a child, she danced in the forest by herself, enjoying the freedom of movement and expression children often leave behind as they exit the woods and enter the jungle of adulthood.

She took a few classes as a child, but said her parents didn't support her desire to become a dancer. But, she said it was "with good reason. It is an impossible profession. I had to come into it on my own, which is one of the reasons for my teens and save them from the angst I went through,” she said. She was delighted to learn that TM worked for people of all ages, and in 1977 she completed the training to become an instructor. Since then, she’s taught the technique consistently either part- or full-time, and estimated that she’s had hundreds of students from all over the country.

She said she’s traveled wherever there was an opportunity to teach, including Philadelphia; the San Juan Islands off of Washington state; Washington, D.C.; Chicago and Rhode Island, to name only a few. In between she worked at various retail and gallery jobs to make ends meet, but her main mission in life is to make TM available to as many people as possible.

Two years ago, she opened the Transcendental Meditation Center of Carmel, which is part of a network of 180 centers within the U.S. arm of the non-profit Transcendental Meditation organization, which has divisions in more than 70 countries worldwide.

The technique is licensed and instructors must be certified. According to the TM web site, “The TM technique is easy to learn, but requires personalized interactive guidance. For this reason, it’s taught only through one-on-one instruction by a certified TM teacher.”

Dyson said the organization’s mission, like hers, is to teach the technique to as many people as possible. And contrary to a common misconception, Dyson said, “TM does not involve any belief. It’s a mental technique. You can be 100 percent skeptical and it will work. Believing in it doesn’t affect the practice. People of all religions practice the TM technique.”

She said it’s also easy and quick to learn — it’s taught in four classes on four consecutive days, starting with a personalized one-on-one session, followed by three days of small group practice. Each session is from one to two hours long. Dyson said that unlike other forms of meditation, it doesn’t require any ability to focus or concentrate, and has even been taught successfully to children with attention deficit disorder.

One group of people Dyson’s been focused on is veterans. As The Pine Cone reported last December, she worked with the Veterans Transition Center at Fort Ord to train 16 veterans and some staff members in the technique to help them to cope with the stress and trauma caused by combat. Dyson told The Pine Cone that a “generous contribution” to the center’s scholarship fund, earmarked specifically to aid veterans, helped to fund the project.

Dyson is passionate about teaching TM. Although learning can be pricey — adults pay more than $900 for the four training sessions — there are payment plans, a sliding scale for people with lower incomes, and the center’s scholarship fund.

Once a client completes the training, they receive a one-hour follow-up session about 10 days later and “lifetime support,” including consultations with certified instructors and group meditation sessions.

Dyson said she’s planning a fundraiser on Nov. 12 for the scholarship fund. More details will be announced soon.

special education.”

Armed with her advanced education, Weathers decided it was time to explore another realm. She accepted a position with the state Department of Education — in the new era of mainstreaming students with learning differences into the conventional classroom — to train teachers how to teach special education.

While attending a White House Conference for Children and Youth, Weathers ran into the former governor of South Carolina, James Edwards, who was then the newly appointed the Secretary of Energy in the Reagan administration. He offered her a job performing a study on reducing the cost of publication distribution for the energy department.

She said, “Secretary Edwards and I had a conversation, during which I shared my background with him. I guessed it impressed him, at least enough for an assignment at the Dept. of Energy. Or maybe it was just our South Carolina connection.”

Curious and flattered, she took the job.

“Well it was quite an honor,” said Weathers, “but it was awfully boring. Once the study was finished, I interviewed with the American Petroleum Institute in Washington, D.C., for a position as a writer. My interest in writing had already led me to begin a master’s program in journalism, so I decided to take the job.”

The other USC

Then, in 1983, Weathers fell in love, and followed her heart from Washington, D.C., to Los Angeles.

“I was susceptible to the allure of the place and the person. “I wasn’t so sure about a job, and the romance didn’t last, but love got me there,” Weathers said, explaining how she ended up in California.

Through personal connections, Weathers became director of special events for that other “USC,” the University of Southern California, which was hosting the track and swimming events for the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

From there, Weathers went to work for Ahmanson Commercial Development Co. in Los Angeles during the development of a 24-story commercial building. As project who opened in the spring of 2010. “I had this vision of a New York urban loft-kind of atmosphere, and it was in pretty bad shape when I found it, but I had a dream.

“I didn’t want to open with folding tables, I wanted it to look substantial,” she said. “I designed it myself, and a friend (former Carmel High dad and contractor Keith Fogg) put it all together for me and made it look beautiful.”

Her top-of-the-line sewing machines are so easy to use, especially after her hands-on instruction, that she doesn’t hesitate to teach her youngest students. “My first question to the young ones is always, ‘Now, is this a tool or a toy?’” Lofaso said.

Children, especially, tend to be enchanted by the variety of decorative stitches they can make with the machine. Bella watches over them while they experiment, allowing them to create what they want.

“Many people come here with a specific project in mind, but if they don’t, I let them choose,” she said. “When I took sewing in high school, we had to make a shirt, and we had to make a dirndl skirt, and I can remember thinking, ‘Ugh ... who would wear that?’

“If you’re choosing your own project, it’s a different story. You tend to stay engaged and finish what you started.”

The fidget blanket

Alana Puryear, a Carmel Valley resident, was just 18 when she met Lofaso, and now brings her 11-year-old daughter to Bella’s Studio to work on projects.

“My mother has Alzheimer’s disease, so today we’re here to make her a fidget blanket. Alzheimer’s patients often have a difficult time figuring out what to do with their hands, and these blankets are comforting because they have buttons they can fasten, zippers, and other things they can fidget with,” Puryear explained.

Her daughter, now a sixth grader, already has made a teddy bear, a pin cushion, a sock-puppet cat and a travel pouch with Lofaso’s help.

“As a teacher, Bella is very meticulous, patient, helpful and encouraging. She loves what she does,” Puryear said. “I think whenever somebody loves what they do, it makes a difference in how they share it.”

The key to sewing, said Lofaso, is preparation: Planning, measuring and cutting precisely usually make the rest of the project easy.

“I’ve always believed that I would have been an engineer in a different life. I’ve always loved the challenge of making things fit together precisely,” she said. “Sewing is all about mathematics, formulating everything to fit, even if it’s just four squares.”

A growing craft

Lofaso offered two revelations about sewing that some might find surprising:

First, although people rarely sew for economy anymore, she said the craft is actually growing, not dying. A search of the internet reveals a vibrant and exploding population of hobbyists who have fallen in love with the art.

Secondly, sewing is rapidly gaining momentum among men.

“I actually have quite a few male clients,” she said. “I also have a lot of little boys who started sewing with me in kindergarten, and come her every year for summer camp. Last summer they all made themselves great little backpacks.”

Bella’s Studio also is, she said, the only locally owned place in Monterey where people can purchase many of the supplies they need for sewing (i.e., a spool of thread).

Clients also may purchase models of any of the sewing machines in her studio from Lofaso, who has a working relationship with Eddie’s Quilting Bee in Sunnyvale.

“Once in awhile somebody will email me a photo of their child’s bed, which is covered with things they’ve made themselves — pillows, stuffies, toys, sock puppets. A little girl this summer made herself a dress on her own sewing machine,” Lofaso said. “I always tell parents, ‘You have to be a part of it, because this will be a shared experience between you and your child.’ It can be a great, lifelong thing between parent and child.”

Additional information about Bella’s Studio can be obtained by calling (831) 920-2272, emailing her at

manager, she marketed the new building, while also coordinating "Art in Public Places," one of many cultural projects the company supported.

In 1995, Weathers came here on a holiday weekend and fell for a man she met at Mission Ranch, and later married. "I like to say we started our courtship the old-fashioned way," she said, "in a bar."

Upon moving to Carmel, Weathers took a job with the American Cancer Society as regional director of the tri-county area.

"Once again, I didn't have direct experience, but I had learned, throughout my career, to listen, identify needs, and develop a good, solid staff," said Weathers. "It's about getting out there and building connections in the community, which has become my focus in life."

In 2004, when Weathers' husband was planning to retire, she suggested he go into real estate. She even offered to get her license and work with him, which she did for about two months before he retired for good. More than a decade later, Weathers has created yet another and perhaps her most enduring career; this time, in making a house a home.

A manageable space

Weathers particularly enjoys helping newcomers to the area and senior citizens who are making the transition from their home of many years to a place where they can downsize to a more manageable space.

"If the house I'm selling is to become a home," she said, "I often need to help clients connect with services. Maybe they need help packing or relocating, turning on electricity or finding a contractor."

Weathers' desire to touch other people's lives extends beyond her clients, from those who are buying a house to those who can't afford to. One of her biggest commitments to the community is her work with Gathering for Women.

Started by the Fund for Homeless Women, the Monterey-based nonprofit organization is a refuge for "unsheltered" women on the Peninsula.

"My career is about finding homes for people," Weathers said. "So when I hear someone is homeless, I know I've got to do something about it. Through Gathering for Women, homeless women can have a hot meal and find the resources they need to help them deal with their circumstances. Once again, it's about making connections — making connections for good."

Last fall, Weathers came up with the idea of hosting a "Concert for Humanity" at the Museum of Monterey on the Wharf, on behalf of homeless women. She brought together local reggae band "Jonah and the Whalewatchers" with a neighborhood taco truck, and gathered a whole lot of people who liked to eat and dance, and to contribute to their community. During the evening of good food and fun, the event raised money for homeless women.

Weathers, a former trustee for the Monterey Museum of Art and Carmel Chamber of Commerce, also serves on the board of Carmel Heritage Society and is an active volunteer for Middlebury Institute and Church of the Wayfarer.

THE DANCE CENTER

The Dance Center (TDC), founded by its owners Tia Brown and Laura Jeselnick, is a recently expanded 5-studio, 5,500 sq. ft. performing arts facility located in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. Tia and Laura have created a tour de force on the peninsula as a premiere pre-professional and recreational training school for dance and musical theater students. Dancers (2 yrs.-adult) are welcomed into a student-centered environment and encouraged to express individuality while meeting their potential. TDC was awarded "Business of the Year in Personal Services" by the Carmel Chamber and selected by Monterey Herald Readers as "Best Dance Studio". Over 100 hours of weekly classes are offered in ballet, pointe, tap, jazz, musical theater, hip-hop, acrobatics (acro), and contemporary. An exceptional faculty instructs group classes, offers private training, and mentors 10 competition teams and 4 musical theater performance companies.

Girls Inc. recruits mentors to support the women of tomorrow

By MARY SCHLEY

A NONPROFIT that seeks “to inspire all girls to be strong, smart and bold, and to respect themselves and the world around them,” Girls Inc. of the Central Coast, is holding a fundraiser at San Juan Oaks Golf Club Friday, Sept. 23. The group, which serves girls in Monterey, San Benito and Santa Cruz counties, is also looking for volunteer mentors to work with students in local schools.

According to executive director Patty Fernandez, Girls Inc. reached nearly 1,400 girls during the 2015/2016 fiscal year at 32 school sites in nine cities throughout Monterey County, and managed to keep 85 percent of them in the program all year. The nonprofit also expanded programs into Santa Cruz and San Benito counties, and reported that 213 girls and their moms participated in the Growing Together Program, 77 girls in elementary schools attended a two-week day camp that taught them about positive body image and engaged them “in nontraditional activities and adventures, including hands-on science activities,” 245 girls from eight high schools participated in a yearlong leadership/mentoring program, 520 students in fourth and fifth grades took part in a drug-abuse-prevention pro-passion as a teacher.”

Atkins went to Boston University, where she earned a bachelor of science degree in occupational therapy. But more importantly, she also happened into a dance studio where choreographer Twyla Tharp was holding auditions. She took a two-week workshop with Tharp, and has followed her heart across the dance floor ever since.

She first moved to New York, where she spent “an exciting eight years” dancing and teaching at the Zena Rommett School, before moving to California to work with Richard Gibson at the Pacific Dance Center in Palo Alto. Three years later, the two traveled to Paris to continue their work, but soon parted company. Atkins remained abroad, where she guest-taught dance for two years before returning to the United States.

By the late 1970s, Atkins had begun to choreograph her own pieces, working through various dance companies. Among them was her own SpectorDance, which she established in her native Cleveland, Ohio, and where, for three years, she choreographed, taught and produced a dynamic style of dance.

“I am trained as a teacher and dancer of classical ballet,” she said, “but I am very interested in the influences and needs of the contemporary dancer. I work from a classical base with a contemporary design. The name SpectorDance suggests this is my own style of dance, but it’s always with a great respect for tradition, for the history of dance.”

Great Lives

By LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

In 1988, Atkins moved to the Monterey Peninsula. For six years, she directed the dance program at Carmel Valley’s Hidden Valley Music Seminars Institute of the Arts. By 1995, she had begun to direct her career toward university-level dance and choreography, for which she earned a master of fine arts degree from Mills College in Berkeley.

“Every major move in my life has been associated with a relationship beginning or ending,” she said. “I’m not sure gram that approaches it as a peer issue, and 234 eight-graders attended workshops on communication, healthy relationships, avoiding risky situations, and teen health.

“Girls Inc. delivers life-changing experiences to girls across the Central Coast,” Fernandez said. “We are passionate about serving more girls with impact.”

Over the summer, Girls Inc. of the Central Coast trained its incoming women volunteer mentors and youth leaders for programs in the county’s middle schools and high schools. Each will be working with 25 or 30 girls, answering questions, opening doors, navigating setbacks alongside them, providing college and career advice, and offering a nonjudgmental listening ear when needed.

Denise Kaku, a seven-year volunteer in Seaside, noted, “It is important for the girls to see successful role models: professional, college-trained women who are living productive, successful lives. You just never know what a girl might remember from a conversation or discussion that could have a profound impact at a critical moment in her life.”

that's a good thing, but my life and my dance have taken me a lot of places. When I came here, I had traveled the world with my work, had made my life around dance and creative growth. I was 38, and what I really wanted was to have a studio, to build a business, and get married and have a family.

"I wanted the whole package. I really felt if I put my roots down somewhere, I could have it. This Peninsula is small, but it has grown. And we have a lot of excellent young dancers here."

Atkins met her husband, Jim Atkins, and his four young children, soon after she arrived on the Monterey Peninsula. Together, they raised the family and, in 2002, they founded SpectorDance in Marina.

"It's not easy to create a place for dance," she said. "But I am passionate about my work. This is my dream. My husband and I built this together; there would have been no other way for me." She called creating the studio a "leap of faith," and that it was challenging emotionally, physically and creatively to maintain it.

There was a time when Atkins could never have imagined her life without dancing. But, after she was sidelined by an injury, she focused her passion on choreography.

"Surprisingly, the shift was seamless," she said. "I was very complete with dance. Yet, in life it seems to me, you try to work at your growing edge; what it is that really challenges you and allows you to grow. I don't think you can always do the same thing. There are times in life when the door closes and another opens. I'd gotten from dancing what I needed. The highest calling is creative work in whatever form that takes."

Blended imagery

For more than a dozen years, Atkins has had her sights set on social and environmental consciousness. She started by focusing on literary masters — Henry Miller, Jeffers, John Steinbeck. Her choreography blended the written or spoken word and visual imagery with music and dance.

"My last piece was 'The Grapes of Wrath,' such an amazing book" she said. "I didn't focus on the story but on universal themes, like man's capacity to surmount obstacles, and the need for man to have meaningful work. That was the bridge that led me to current issues with migrant farmworkers today, as compared and contrasted with those of the 1930s."

In addition to her choreography, Atkins also devotes her attention to the dance classes she offers at SpectorDance, and to getting classes to students who don't have the chance to get to her studio, among them Rancho Cielo, Chartwell School and the Veteran's Transition Center.

Today, the master teacher, award-winning choreographer, and international guest artist is most grateful for her reach into the world and the impact she creates through dance.

"I am so lucky to have a beautiful studio and performing venue where I can bring something to Monterey that no one else is doing," she said. "In addition to my choreography, this phase in my life is moving me to mentorship. At 66, I really want to nurture other artists."

A work-in-progress performance of her Ocean Trilogy was presented at the Oceans 16 Conference at the Monterey Bay Aquarium on September 21. It will be presented to the public at the Monterey Museum of Art La Mirada on October 1. Tickets are available at spectordance.org.

September 23 - 29, 2016

Everyday Pacific Grove Getaway

A "getaway" that is perfect for everyday living with views of the rich blue Monterey Bay that accent this lovely home. Completely remodeled, this three bedroom, two bathroom home is turnkey and features tasteful and modern renovations throughout while embracing its historic character, warmth and charm. The home's high-coffered ceilings framed with crown molding are elegantly restored and enhanced with recessed lighting and timeless high-end fixtures. Other stylish and quality updates include the hand-scraped oak wood floors, quartz countertops, new appliances, and painting throughout along with other behind the scenes improvements such as reconstructed windows and new electrical and plumbing. Conveniently and centrally located to both historic downtown Pacific Grove and Cannery Row, it's a short walk to experience the bountiful amenities of living on the Monterey Peninsula.

FOUR FABULOUS TEACHERS ON THE ROAD TO A LIFETIME OF LEARNING

DON'T LOOK for me at any coffeehouses, shopping malls, movie theaters or sporting events this weekend. I won't be there. I'll be rooted in that great garden of inspirational brainstorming — the Pebble Beach Authors & Ideas festival at Stevenson School. This will be my 10th festival, a perfect record of attendance.

One of the elements that make the Pebble Beach Authors & Ideas Festival so alluring is intimacy. There is an Aspen Ideas Festival in Colorado, which offers 350 presenters at 200 different sessions with 3,000 attendees. Obviously one cannot hear them all so choices must be made and stratagems planned. Not so at the Pebble Beach festival. You hear everybody on the program. Your only dilemma is whose breakout session to attend.

The setting itself is scholarly. For adults, Stevenson school is a return to those glorious days of yesteryear when men were men and women were co-eds. It is like stalking a memory on its own ground, a dream-like return to khakis, saddle shoes, cardigans and Pendleton skirts.

The festival speakers cover a broad range of disciplines and encourage their relatively small audiences to engage in deep and inquisitive discussions of the ideas and issues that shape our lives and challenge our times. The festival invariably makes me reflect on the people who influenced my own interest in the ideas presented each year.

Of all the teachers I had during my school days, four stand out as memorable. They stand out not only for what they taught me but because I can remember so many things about them 50 to 75 years later.

Sister Agnes Marie. First grade, first schoolteacher. She was a member of the Sisters of St. Joseph at the Cathedral School in Buffalo, N.Y. She must have just graduated from the University of Nunship. Even as a six year old I knew she was younger and prettier than the other nuns in the school. It was difficult to reconcile learning not to make false idols while idolizing the good sister. Her smile fell on me like fine golden dust through sunshine. If Disney had drawn her, it would be with musical notes emanating from her mouth instead of ordinary words. She made the dull flatness of Dick, Jane, Baby Sally, Spot the dog and Puff the cat jump off the page and come alive. And then there was $2 + 2 = 4$. My goodness, how could anyone so beautiful devise such a precise numerical discipline? Oh, she had many tricks up the wide sleeves of that flowing black habit.

Same school, fourth grade. Mrs. Catherine Doucher, the only lay teacher among the nuns. Our predecessors warned us to be aware of the "ouch" in Doucher. They thought she was a hard taskmaster, but she wasn't. She understood that

POLICE LOG

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ring reported lost during Car Week downtown.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Police responded to a business owner on Lincoln north of Sixth inquiring about a credit card transaction that didn't go through to her bank account. The customer was claiming the charge was fraudulent, but the business owner had proof of the transaction. The owner and the customer had a signed contract. Police assisted the business owner with information regarding the civil issue.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male reported his laptop was left at a play area on Rio Road. By the time he went back, the laptop was gone. Contact information was left if the laptop is turned in.

Carmel Valley: Person on Valley Greens

Circle reported missing property.

Carmel Valley: Female on East Carmel Valley Road stated she was sexually assaulted by a neighbor.

Carmel Valley: A hand grenade was located in a storage unit on Southbank Road during a cleaning out. The bomb squad rendered the grenade safe.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 10

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A 48-year-old prep cook from Seaside was contacted after it was reported he was asleep on a city bench at San Carlos and Seventh at 1217 hours. The male was found to be intoxicated to the point where he could not care for himself. He was arrested and transported to county jail.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person found a bangle-type bracelet in the business district at San Carlos and Ocean, and turned it over to Carmel Police for safekeeping.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Officer responded to a barking-dog complaint on San Carlos north of Third. The officer observed a dog on a balcony intermittently barking on arrival. A second dog at the residence was also heard. After the officer observed for a while, the dog owner returned home. Contact was made, and information and a warning were discussed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a lost money clip with cash in the area of Ocean and Del Mar, in the event the property is turned in for safekeeping. Owner was located, and arrangements were made to have the property returned.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Citizen found a dog at Dolores and First, and turned it in to the station. Dog returned to owner.

Pacific Grove: During a vehicle check on Ocean View Boulevard at 0012 hours, a subject was found to be in possession of alcohol and under the age of 21. Subject was cited and released.

Pacific Grove: Person came into the station to inform the animal control officer about a local business on 17th Street that brings dogs into an open space where dogs are not allowed. Letter sent to business owner.

Pacific Grove: A male violated a restraining order by texting his parents.

Carmel area: A violation of a restraining order occurred on Atherton Place involving a 48-year-old male suspect and a 71-year-old female victim.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 11

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female on Carmelo south of Fourth reported a civil issue where an ex-boyfriend was refusing to return her property. The male half was contacted and denied possessing her property. Assisted with the civil standby.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Fall on city property at Ocean and San Carlos. Victim transported to CHOMP.

Pacific Grove: Theft of golf clubs on Ocean View Boulevard. No suspect info.

Pacific Grove: Male on Ninth Street reported that he and his wife have both received messages online from his disgruntled daughter. Daughter is upset over his new marriage. His ex-wife also messaged the man's new wife via online. He and his wife wanted this documented in case the daughter and wife continue harassing them via online and landline. He is concerned that the situation might escalate in the future. He requested that police not contact his daughter and reiterated that he only wanted police documentation.

Pacific Grove: Vehicle stopped on Forest Avenue at 2050 hours for a mechanical violation, and the 24-year-old male driver was found to have an expired driver's license.

Pacific Grove: Police officers were dispatched to a possible intoxicated subject lying on the ground on Lighthouse Avenue. Found a female who was unable to stand or say her name. Ambulance arrived on scene and trans-what she was teaching would have to last us all our lives. She drummed those times tables into us with such energy that 70 years later I can still rattle off all 12 of them. And geography! We traveled the Lincoln Highway that wound from Chicago to LA, more than 2,000 miles all the way. What she taught did stay with me all my life.

High school freshman English. Eight a.m. every Monday morning. The Rev. Robert Cromey, OMI. What great sin did this gentle Shakespearean scholar, this erudite literary intellectual and well read academic commit to be saddled with thirty slang-encrusted pre- and post-pubescent teenagers?

In looks, intellect, and ability to communicate, Fr. Bob Cromey could have doubled for the cultured James Lipton on "Inside the Actors Studio" television show. He made us submit an original piece of writing every Monday morning. He imposed no limitations on genre, nor restrictions on style. A short story, fine. A memory, OK. An off-color limerick, have at it, kid. Then you were selected at random to read aloud your masterwork.

We also read "Macbeth," "The Merchant of Venice" and "Julius Caesar," and had to memorize a soliloquy of our choice — a piece of cake for me because my fourth memorable teacher had already schooled me in Shakespeare.

Her title was Mom. She had a high school education and made our home a school before there was home schooling. I didn't know who Mother Goose was, but I was on intimate terms with Lady Macbeth. She took me to movies at least once a week. I'm sure I was the only kid in second grade who knew that Tom Conway and George Sanders were brothers and Joan Fontaine and Olivia de Havilland were sisters.

I memorized Marc Antony's "Friends, Romans and Countrymen" speech and knew the quality of mercy is not strained but drop-peth as the gentle rain from heaven, before I was out of corduroy knickers.

None of these four amazing people who influenced my life was an author. Yet all of them had big ideas and knew how to imbed them in untrained minds. More importantly, they did it in such a way that made learning interesting, stimulating, and lasting. Each would have loved to attend an event like the Pebble Beach Authors & Ideas Festival. Part of each of them will be with me at Stevenson this weekend.

ported the female to CHOMP for evaluation. Husband was notified.

Pebble Beach: A 50-year-old female entered another person's house on Crest Road, slept in his bed, wore his clothing, and was cooking bacon when she was contacted. The owner of the house, a 73-year-old male, does not know the suspect.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 12

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a non-injury accident between a vehicle and a parked vehicle on Ladera Drive.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Driver and passenger of a vehicle were arrested on Sixth west of Junipero at 1128 hours. Driver, a 53-year-old male Monterey resident who is also a registered sex offender, was arrested for DUI and possession of a controlled substance and paraphernalia. The driver was transported to county jail. The passenger, a 38-year-old female from Sand City, was arrested for possession of a controlled substance and paraphernalia, and released on a citation to appear.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: An employee of the Cypress Inn at Lincoln and Seventh found an unattended passport in one of their hotel rooms. The guests had already checked out, so the passport was brought to the station for safekeeping. No contact information was found for the owner of the passport. The passport was placed into safekeeping pending contact with the owner.

CALLS

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Contacted a resident who had problems with skunks in a residential area on Seventh east of Forest. Another resident had questions about possible poisoning of rats.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Resident on Torres south of Ninth requested advice regarding a civil problem involving a cleaning service that caused damage at his residence and was not returning his phone calls.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Gas line was punctured at a construction site on Dolores north of Santa Lucia Avenue. Utility company responded and fixed the leak.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of an intoxicated subject walking in the middle of the roadway at Mission and Eighth at 2215 hours. The 59-year-old male, who lives on Rio Road, was contacted and was found to be intoxicated and unable to care for himself. He was also found to be on probation with a no-alcohol clause, and was arrested and transported to county jail.

Pacific Grove: Male, age 18, was contacted during a vehicle check on Ocean View Boulevard at 0050 hours. He was in possession of marijuana without a prescription and was cited and released from the scene.

Pacific Grove: Runaway juvenile was located in the 1200 block of Ocean View Boulevard at 0107 hours. Juvenile's guardian was contacted by Seaside P.D. and picked up the juvenile at the station.

Pacific Grove: A 52-year-old female who lives on 19th Street was cited for having a dog at large after it killed a deer at 0130 hours.

Pacific Grove: Subjects were contacted after midnight in a turnout on Ocean View Boulevard. One subject was found to be a runaway out of Seaside, and his guardian picked him up at station. Seaside P.D. picked up the female, as her parents could not come and get her. Seaside P.D. was requested to remove the juvenile from the missing persons database.

Pacific Grove: A female, age 20, was cited on Sunset Drive at 0300 hours for driving without a license.

Pacific Grove: Driver was traveling east-bound on Sunset when a deer jumped out in front of his vehicle. Driver was unable to stop in time, and the deer impacted his windshield and the roof of his cab directly above the driver's seat. The windshield shattered and broke off the interior rear view mirror. Driver flagged down the officer to report this incident and requested a tow for the vehicle. Photographs were taken of the damage to the vehicle, and the deer was last seen running southbound through the forest.

Pacific Grove: Monarch Lane resident wanted to report harassing phone calls from an old acquaintance. Male subject followed the person to the police department. Male subject was advised to leave the resident alone and leave. Male complied.

Carmel area: Report of trespasser on Dolores Street, regarding a possibly mentally unstable subject.

rosary to the station that was found at the beach at Del Mar yesterday.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject reported the loss of a cosmetic-style bag containing U.S. currency while patronizing shops in the commercial district on Ocean Avenue.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Intoxicated subject fell on city property at Sixth and Junipero at 2354 hours. She was transported to CHOMP by ambulance.

Pacific Grove: Three juveniles were found to be under the influence of marijuana while at Pacific Grove High School.

Pacific Grove: An unknown suspect used a local resident's Visa debit card number to purchase fuel in New York. The owner of the card, who lives on 17 Mile Drive, did not authorize the purchase, and his grandson is the primary cardholder. The grandson was unaware of the unauthorized purchase and was still in possession of the debit card.

Carmel Valley: Verbal domestic dispute between a male and a female on Schulte Road.

Carmel Valley: Female wanted to report the loss of her driver's license and debit card at Mid-Valley Center.

Carmel area: Thirteen pairs of sunglasses were stolen from a store in the Crossroads shopping center.

Carmel area: Female reported her mother-in-law and father-in-law got lost near Highway 1 and Rio Road while driving their recreational vehicle.

T.S. No.: 9462-2568 TSG Order No.: 150230413-CA-VOI A.P.N.: 103-091-016-000 NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE YOU ARE IN DEFAULT UNDER A DEED OF TRUST DATED 06/28/2004. UNLESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER. NBS Default Services, LLC, as the duly appointed Trustee, under and pursuant to the power of sale contained in that certain Deed of Trust Recorded 07/02/2004 as Document No.: 0N04069761, of Official Records in the office of the Recorder of Monterey County, California, executed by LINN IKEOKA, AN UNMARRIED WOMAN, as Trustor, WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION TO THE HIGHEST BIDDER FOR CASH (payable in full at time of sale by cash, a cashier's check drawn by a state or national bank, a check drawn by a state or federal credit union, or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, savings association, or savings bank specified in section 5102 of the Financial Code and authorized to do business in this state). All right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by it under said Deed of Trust in the property situated in said County and state, and as more fully described in the attached legal description. Sale Date & Time: 10/03/2016 at 10:00 AM Sale Location: At the main entrance to the County Administration Building at 168 W. Alisal Street, Salinas, CA. The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 548 AGUAJITO ROAD, CARMEL AREA, CA 93923 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any inaccuracy of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. Said sale will be made in an "AS IS" condition, but without covenant or warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by said Deed of Trust, with interest thereon, as provided in said note(s), advances, if any, under the terms of the Deed of Trust, estimated fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust, to-wit: $2,277,786.78 (Estimated). Accrued interest and additional advances, if any, will increase this figure prior to sale. It is possible that at the time of sale the opening bid may be less than the total indebtedness due. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call, 916-939-0772 for information regarding the trustee's sale or visit this Internet Web site, www.nationwideposting.com, for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case, T.S.# 9462-2568. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF HENNING JUHL LARSEN
Case Number 16PR000338

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of HENNING JUHL LARSEN.
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by INGER PENNER in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.
The Petition for Probate requests that INGER PENNER be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:
Date: October 12, 2016
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept.: 13
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Agujito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
