Man arrested after driving Bentley on beach

By MARY SCHLEY

LOCALS OUT for leisurely evening walks and drives around Carmel Point Friday were entertained by the unfolding scene at River Beach, where somebody drove a car onto the beach and got stuck in the sand. And the car was a $230,000 Bentley Bentayga SUV — a vehicle the manufacturer describes as the “fastest SUV ever built.”

Resident Antony Tersol said he saw the stranded Bentley while taking his mother for a drive about 6 p.m. Aug. 18. “Two park rangers were going through belongings in the trunk, wearing latex gloves,” Tersol said.

From what he could gather from the tire tracks, it appeared the Bentley had been driven straight through the parking lot, over the barrier rocks at the edge, and onto the sand, where the driver finally turned — or tried to.

“The tracks indicated the car started toward Point Lobos, cranked the wheel toward the valley, and kept turning until the car was facing northwest, a 270-degree turn,” he said. “It was surprising the car made it as far as it did. It looked stuck.”

In the parking lot, Tersol asked an officer what had happened. “I said to the ranger, ‘Stolen car?’, and he answered, ‘No, drunk driver,’” he recalled.

While Tersol didn’t see any sign of the driver, locals Linda Perry and her husband, Don, did. They were taking a walk along the shoreline that evening and paused on Scenic Road above the beach lot to gaze at the spectacle of the car and its driver, who by then was being questioned by police. Another couple out for a stroll stopped to watch, too.

“There were three officers,” Linda Perry said.

City’s second street dance set for Sept. 9

By MARY SCHLEY

ALMOST A year after the city’s centennial celebration and its successful street dance on Dolores, officials are preparing for a second gathering they hope will become a regular occurrence downtown. The City of Carmel’s 2nd Street Dance will take place Saturday, Sept. 9, from 5 to 8 p.m.

This time around, the party will be held in the street on Mission Street at Sixth Avenue, adjacent to Devendorf Park. Victory Lane, a classic rock cover band, will provide the tunes.

“Dancing in public is highly encouraged,” city officials said in the event announcement.

To perhaps help people get in the proper frame of mind, the nonprofit Forest Theater Guild will be selling beer and wine in a fenced-off area nearby. Of course, anyone entering the corralled space must be 21 or older and provide ID. All proceeds from the alcohol sales will go directly to the guild, which stages performances at the Forest Theater.

The dance is the result of several discussions by the community activities and cultural commission, and the city council, following the event spearheaded by former council-

Wright house rock walls to get needed facelift

By MARY SCHLEY

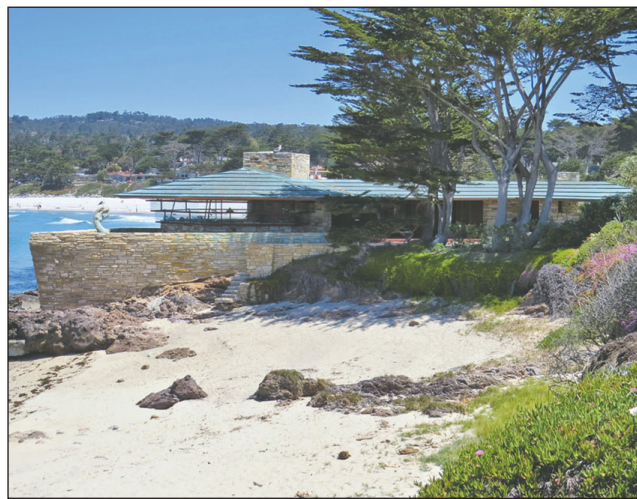

CONSIDERING ITS prominent location, striking appearance, and historic status, the Frank Lloyd Wright-designed house at the south end of Carmel Beach attracts interest whenever any work is done there, no matter how minimal or routine. This week marks the start of a two-month project to replace some of the stone and supports in the “ship’s prow” — the pointed terrace that faces the sea.

“We’re just getting started with some of the stone removal later this week,” said Chuck Henderson, whose great-grandmother had the home, also called the Mrs. Clinton Walker House or the Cabin-on-the-Rocks, constructed in 1952. “What we do in that house tends to get a lot of attention.”

Faced with Carmel Stone and attached to the house with carbon steel rods, the walls and patio — where the home’s eye-catching mermaid statue stands — are showing significant signs of wear. “Over the past 65 years, it’s held up against the elements here, but it’s eroded quite a bit, and some of the stones are starting to crack open and be highly at

Relocation of power pole riles councilwoman

By MARY SCHLEY

CITY COUNCIL member Jan Reimers and her husband, Niels, are fighting to have PG&E move a power pole the company installed near their house at Camino Real and Ninth last year. They want the pole moved because it mars the beautiful coastal view they have long enjoyed.

But they’re also wondering how a neighbor who paid to have the pole relocated could do so without the utility company getting permission from the city or notifying the neighbors.

“This pole went up, and I went to Chip and I said, ‘There’s this funny pole in front of our house,’” Jan Reimers said, recalling a conversation with city administrator Chip Rerig last November. She called planning director Marc Wiener, who referred her to then-public works director Rob Mullane, who put her in contact with someone from PG&E.

Through her research, Reimers discovered that Dion Campisi, who owns a home on Carmelo Street to the northwest of theirs, paid PG&E to move the pole. A senior vice president at Colliers in San Jose, Campisi told her in an email that he paid PG&E a little more than $25,000 to relocate it, while another neighbor, Bob Kavner, chipped in $7,000. Campisi did not, however, want to comment for this story.

Panetta says Afghan war should be ‘very targeted’

By KELLY NIX

PRESIDENT DONALD Trump’s new plan for the 16-year war in Afghanistan was met with doubt this week by Congressman Jimmy Panetta, who criticized the president — like other Democrats have — for offering little detail about the strategy.

On Monday, Trump announced his new Afghanistan policy, which includes deploying more troops, keeping them there until real progress has been made, pressuring Pakistan to stop offering sanctuary for the Taliban, and maximizing financial sanctions against terror networks.

“We must address the reality of the world as it exists right now, the threats we face, and the confronting of all of the problems of today, and extremely predictable consequences of a hasty withdrawal,” Trump said during a speech to outline the policy.

But Panetta — a veteran of the war in Afghanistan — said Trump left out how many more troops he would send to the country, and how diplomacy would be used to gain stability in the region.

Devoted to Danny Boy

SOME PEOPLE say he's part Lhasa Apso. But his person, who had one before, says absolutely not. Others say he might be part spitz. His person says, maybe. He does have a lot of thick, white, spitz-like fur, which makes him seem bigger and bolder than his 17-pound self.

He's actually very sweet.

She found him when he was 2 years old at the Monterey County animal shelter in Salinas, and chose him because he seemed friendly. When asked by the staff at the shelter what she planned to name the dog they were calling Gaylord, she responded without hesitation, "Danny Boy." She still isn't sure why. It just came to her like an old song.

Danny, now 11, is still the sweetest, friendliest dog she's ever had. He seems to love kids, grownups, other dogs – pretty much everyone.

"When I walk Danny through our Carmel Knolls neighborhood," said his person, "if there are workers or others outside, Danny stops and waits, expecting to be petted. Most people oblige. When they don't, I have to usher a dejected Danny along."

The pair also frequent the paved path along Scenic Road, overlooking Carmel Beach. Danny loves to walk out in the fresh sea air, but he's never been crazy about the beach. Too much sand. And neither he nor his person likes to navigate the stairway it takes to get there.

Early each morning, Danny and his person head out to Carmel Valley Athletic Club, so she can get in her daily swim, while he waits in the car, windows slightly open.

"Danny prefers to be near me," she said. "If I'm packing to go on a trip, he follows me around as if he knows I'm about to abandon him, and on those rare occasions when I can't take him with me, I say, 'I'll be right back.' I think he understands."

MANY MORE ROUNDABOUTS PLANNED FOR HIGHWAY 68

By KELLY NIX

A PLAN to install nearly a dozen roundabouts and make other improvements on Highway 68 from Monterey to Salinas to alleviate traffic and improve safety on the heavily traveled 14-mile corridor received its first major approval this week.

On Wednesday, the Transportation Agency for Monterey County board of directors approved a conceptual plan to convert as many as 11 intersections to roundabouts and restrict left turns out of side streets and driveways. The project is estimated to cost $48.2 million and will be paid for by revenue from Measure X, a 3/8-cent sales tax county voters approved in November 2016.

The OK was the initial step in the planning process.

“We are going to work with Caltrans on much more detailed environmental and design work, and more detailed alternatives,” TAMC transportation planner Grant Leonard told The Pine Cone. “We do anticipate a rigorous environmental review process, and that’s a chance for everyone to comment” on the plan.

The board — which includes representatives from local cities and the members of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors — also OK’d a wildlife “connectivity plan,” which would entail enlarging drainage pipes so animals such as deer and mountain lions can travel from one side of the road to another without the risk of being struck by motorists.

That element is expected to cost $21.4 million in additional taxpayer funds.

“We came up with 10 locations to improve the under-crossings” on Highway 68, Leonard said.

Highway 68 at Pasadera Drive is considered a “roadkill hot spot,” for the large number of animals killed by motorists.

Verdicts, pleas and sentencings announced by Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo

June 21 — Veronica Lopez pled no contest to a felony grand theft charge stemming from her use of a phony rental advertisement on the internet site Craigslist which lured 2 people into paying her a rental "deposit."

The criminal case began on July 12, 2016, when the Salinas Police Department began receiving calls from multiple persons reporting that someone was posing as the owner of a Salinas property and advertising the home "for rent" on Craigslist. Two of the reporting parties claimed that, after reading the advertisement, they had called the advertising party — later identified as Ms. Lopez. They each reported that Ms. Lopez later met with them and represented that the Salinas property could be rented for $1,500 per month, but that she would require an up-front "deposit." One party paid $1,000 to Ms. Lopez. After later becoming suspicious, each of the parties independently verified that Ms. Lopez did not own the property in question and that the property was not for rent. At that point, they contacted the Salinas Police Department.

Veronica Lopez will be sentenced on September 19.

The case was handled by Deputy District Attorney John Hubanks from the District Attorney's Real Estate Fraud Unit, along with District Attorney Investigator Alicia Cox.

June 21 — Timothy Allen Murray, age 45, was sentenced to a total term of two years in the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation by Monterey Superior Court Judge Carrie M. Panetta.

On May 10, a Sand City police officer observed Murray's vehicle as it made an illegal left turn. The officer conducted a traffic stop on the vehicle and contacted Murray in the front passenger seat. Murray, who was too intoxicated to drive, had his unlicensed friend drive his vehicle for him. Due to the license status of Murray's friend, the officer had both men exit the vehicle in order to tow it. During an inventory search of the vehicle, the officer located a revolver on the passenger seat, where Murray has been seated. Murray is prohibited from owning or possessing a firearm due to a prior felony conviction.

On May 23, Murray entered a plea of no contest to a felony count of unlawful possession of a concealed firearm in a vehicle.

June 21 — Noe Chavez, age 20, entered pleas of no contest to two counts of attempted murder. Chavez also admitted two enhancements for the personal use of a firearm and two enhancements for personally inflicting great bodily injury.

On February 15, Chavez was seen approaching an unknown male outside of a tent encampment in Chinatown. Chavez exchanged some words with the male and then pulled a gun out of his sweatshirt and began shooting at the male and other transients in the area. Multiple people in the area were struck by bullets and suffered traumatic injuries, though none were fatal.

Chavez was located in Chinatown on February 24 and was taken into custody.

Chavez will receive a sentence of 15 years, to be served in the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation. He is scheduled to be sentenced on September 6 before Monterey County Superior Court Judge Andrew Liu.

P.G. woman arrested for fighting

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A 28-YEAR-OLD Pacific Grove woman was arrested outside Barmel at San Carlos and Seventh shortly after 1:30 a.m. Aug. 12 for punching two men, according to Carmel Police Sgt. Chris Johnson.

According to a witness — who would later become an alleged victim — Michelle Adrian was talking to a man in the patio in front of the bar when all of a sudden, the conversation became heated.

The witness “observed her yelling,” Johnson said. Adrian then grabbed the guy “with both of her hands around his neck,” and scratched and punched the man.

When Adrian attempted to leave, the witness who had seen the fight tried to stop her. “She looked right at him and punched him in the face,” Johnson said of the second man.

Johnson doesn’t know what instigated the fight, but the report indicates all three of them work for banks — though not the same one.

While it could have been a rivalry, he said, “It doesn’t look like there’s any real reasoning behind it.”

“She just decided to go after them,” he said. All had been drinking.

“Her sober husband came and picked her up,” Johnson said.

Adrian faces a charge of misdemeanor battery.

Transient jailed for pulling beard

By MARY SCHLEY

A HOMELESS woman who’s often seen sleeping in various spots around town — and who has been arrested multiple times over the past year-and-a-half for trespassing and resisting arrest — was taken to Monterey County Jail again Aug. 9 after she took someone’s wallet and attacked a bartender, according to Carmel Police Sgt. Chris Johnson.

Linda McIver, 62, had left a jacket at Mulligan Public House on Dolores Street during an earlier visit, according to Johnson, but by the time she came back for it, the coat was gone.

“She accused the bar staff of stealing her jacket, so she stole somebody’s wallet,” he said. “She stole it, and they got it back — and then she attacked the bartender.”

McIver “grabbed hold of his beard and would not let go,” Johnson said.

Even after Cpl. Jeff Watkins and officer Ricardo Mendoza arrived at the bar, she refused to loosen her grip on Robert Christie’s facial hair.

“It wasn’t until she was threatened with being tased that she let go,” Johnson said, adding that Christie should be commended for not fighting with McIver or hitting her back.

“I know it hurt, so he was showing extreme restraint to not take care of it on his own,” he said. “He was a solid dude to not use any force to get her off him.”

After officers had McIver in custody, they conducted a search and found someone else’s credit card in her possession, according to Johnson.

“She said she found it on the street,” he said.

Police took McIver to Monterey County Jail on charges of obstructing an officer, battery, taking lost property, and violating the terms of her probation on earlier charges.

According to police records, McIver was arrested and taken to county jail by Carmel officers on April 20, 2016, for trespassing and resisting arrest; on April 23, 2016, for trespassing; on May 25, 2016, for having an outstanding warrant and camping in public; on March 1, on an arrest warrant for the trespassing charge, and on April 3, for trespassing and violating probation.

She remained in jail this week.

Bird infected with West Nile virus found, but humans don't need to worry much

By KELLY NIX

FOR THE first time in four years, the deadly West Nile virus has been discovered in a bird in Monterey County, and while the risk of humans being infected is slim, officials are warning residents to take precautions to try to avoid being bitten by mosquitos.

Trump's ag chief to visit Salinas Valley next month

By KELLY NIX

THE SECRETARY of Agriculture — who was nominated by President Donald Trump and confirmed by the U.S. Senate in April — will take a tour of Salinas Valley farms in September, Congressman Jimmy Panetta told The Pine Cone.

On Sept. 15, former Georgia Gov. Sonny Perdue, a Republican, who now heads the nation's agriculture department, will spend several hours visiting farm areas, and Panetta, a democrat, will accompany him. Panetta spoke favorably of the ag secretary this week.

"When he testified at the [House Agriculture Committee], he was very knowledgeable about a number of topics with regard to our agriculture, and showed a desire to understand and express the concern that many people in ag have for immigration and immigration concerns," Panetta told The Pine Cone.

Panetta is on the House Agriculture Committee and is a member of the Agricultural Research Caucus.

The itinerary is being set by officials in Perdue's office, and Panetta said he wasn't sure where they would visit, other than the tour would include various Salinas Valley-area farms.

The news that Perdue would be visiting Monterey County comes on the heels of a visit to the Salinas Valley from Sanford Bishop, a Democratic congressman from Georgia.

The House Agriculture Committee is working on crafting the 2018 Farm Bill, and Bishop's tour gave him a chance to see firsthand Monterey County's $4.5 billion industry. Many programs that the ag industry relies on require funding from the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture — of which Bishop is a ranking member.

The Monterey County Health Department said Monday that the virus was detected in a bird found in the 93908 zip code, an area that includes parts of Salinas, San Benancio, Corral de Tierra, Toro Park and Las Palmas.

"Detection of West Nile virus in the bird population means that mosquitos in the same area may be more likely to carry West Nile virus," according to the Monterey County Health Department. "People living, working, and recreating in that area may also have a greater chance of being bitten by a mosquito carrying West Nile virus."

However, the risk to humans in Monterey County remains low. In 2016, 19 California residents died from West Nile infections. Many more people die from the flu in California every year. Only a few people have been infected in Monterey County in 11 years, and none of them died.

"Since 2006, we've had three human cases of West Nile virus infection: in 2009, 2012, and 2016," county health department spokeswoman Karen Smith told The Pine Cone.

West Nile cycles between birds and mosquitos and lives and multiplies in birds. Birds are infected the same way humans are — from mosquitos that are infected with the disease. The virus can be carried on when a mosquito bites an infected bird then bites people, horses or other mammals.

However, humans and other mammals infected with the virus cannot pass it on since they don't develop high levels of the virus in their bloodstream.

Despite the minimal risk to people, Monterey County Health Officer Edward Moreno said West Nile can be particularly serious for elderly people and those with certain medical conditions such as cancer, diabetes and kidney disease. Symptoms include fever, headache, joint pain, weakness and body aches. Vision loss, seizures and paralysis can occur in severe cases.

Northern Salinas Valley Mosquito Abatement District biologist Ken Klemme urged the public to take preventative measures to avoid attracting mosquitos, including eliminating standing water around their property. Other obvious ways to minimize the risk of being bitten is to use mosquito repellent, wear longer clothing, and make sure windows and doors have screens.

For more information, go to the district's website at www.montereycountymosquito.com.

County officials are warning residents to take precaution against being bitten by mosquitos in light of a bird found with the deadly West Nile virus. This type of mosquito, of the genus Culex, can carry the virus.

What ended up on the tow truck during Concours Week?

By MARY SCHLEY

ABOUT A dozen cars were towed by Carmel police during Concours Week for being parked on streets that were closed for various events — a significant drop from last year, according to Carmel Police Chief Paul Tomasi.

According to law, signs advising of temporary tow-away zones must be posted 24 hours in advance, and Carmel typically puts them up 48 hours ahead, providing plenty of notice to motorists. For the Concours on the Avenue Tuesday, 10 cars that were left on the closed streets by their drivers were towed. No vehicles had to be towed to make way for the new Prancing Ponies show on two blocks of Dolores Street Wednesday, but for the Pebble Beach Tour d'Elegance on Thursday, three were towed.

“Our numbers for vehicles being towed were down from previous years, as we have previously had 20 to 25,” Tomasi said. “I credit staff for working to contact violators prior to towing, more use of the shuttles and parking, and better signage during the events.”

Once a vehicle is towed, the owner has to pay the police department $119 to get it released.

On top of that is the bill from Carmel Towing, the city's chosen tow company that also happens to be located across the street from the police station. Owner Andy Hill said the rates, which are approved by the state according to the official tow service agreement, are $200 per hour for towing and $75 per day for storage, which means a minimum of $275 to get a car out of hock.

He also noted the numbers were down from last year and said police do a good job of trying to contact owners of illegally parked cars to give them every chance to move them before they call for a tow truck.

On Tuesday morning, for instance, the owner of a Ferrari escaped the tow and fees by getting back to the Cypress Inn just in time to remove his car before the truck arrived, according to police radio traffic.

And the owner of a rare Jaguar XJ220 — an early 1990s supercar that was the fastest production car available, at 212 mph, when it debuted, and which sells on the secondary market for well over a half-million dollars — was also spared Tuesday after the owner “snuck into” Doug Freedman's show.

“It was a Jaguar racecar that we didn't feel comfortable towing,” Hill explained. “Doug had words with the person, and everything was worked out.” Word is, the owner ended up making a generous donation to The Carmel Foundation, the beneficiary of the Concours on the Avenue, and moved the car.

Regarding the cars he did have to tow, Hill said, “All but one person were cool about it.”

“I got a nasty letter yesterday,” he said Tuesday. The complaint came from someone who felt entitled to a price break due to being a local, according to Hill. But, he explained, if he cuts his rates for one person, the state will consider that lower amount his new rate, since he can't play favorites.

Pfeiffer Canyon bridge takes shape, but opening pushed back to early October

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE PFEIFFER Creek bridge project in Big Sur took a leap forward this week as the first of its massive girders was moved into place. It also took a step backward when Caltrans officials announced the project's completion date has been extended "two or three weeks."

"Wow, what an impressive engineering feat," Colin Jones of Caltrans posted on Twitter as the bridge began to take shape.

The installation of the girders began Aug. 21. "We're using pulleys and cables to pull the girders across the canyon from north to south," Caltrans spokesperson Susana Cruz told The Pine Cone.

Because the work requires so much precision, and because the girders are so large — each measures 62 feet long — the work is "very slow and methodical."

"They can only move the girders 18 inches at a time," Cruz explained. "They measure and they assess to make sure everything is in place before doing it again."

Once the girders are in place and bolted together — five lengthwise and three deep — they will create the support for a single-span, 310-foot bridge.

Cruz said Caltrans and contractors are putting in long hours to complete the bridge. "They're working 10 to 12 hours a day, seven days a week," she said.

While much progress has been made toward completing the bridge, Caltrans announced this week that it likely won't be ready to welcome motorists by late September. According to Cruz, the completion date has been pushed back a few weeks. "It's a more realistic schedule," she said.

Originally, Caltrans had planned on opening just one lane of the bridge in late September — and have traffic controlled at the site. But now the plan is to have both lanes ready for traffic in early October. "We want to have two-way traffic when it opens," Cruz added.

Located just south of Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park, the bridge was demolished in March after cracks were discovered in it the previous month. The project to replace it will cost about $24 million.

Need a house torn down? Invite your local fire department to help.

By MARY SCHLEY

MORE THAN two dozen firefighters chopped at, sawed through and climbed all over a house at Camino Real and 15th last Thursday and throughout the weekend, after the owner invited them to do with it whatever they wanted. Fire crews from Cal Fire's Cypress, Carmel Highlands and Pebble Beach stations were grateful for the rare opportunity to practice their critical rescue and firefighting skills on a real house, Cal Fire Battalion Chief Buddy Bloxham told The Pine Cone.

Before the house was torn down this week, Roman Kristl of Kristl Konstruction offered to let local firefighters use it for training, so they practiced cutting holes for ventilation as they do when buildings are on fire, and rescuing fellow firefighters and civilians trapped inside, according to Bloxham. With the high price of real estate and the infrequency of demolitions, such offers are unusual.

"Training is the foundation of what we do in the fire service, and it is fundamental to doing our job safely," Bloxham explained.

The first exercise Aug. 17 involved four different crews, for a total of 13 firefighters. The first to arrive at the house determined the location and extent of the (theoretical) fire, and decided how to put it out, recounted Bloxham. While they were forcing entry through the front door, the second group of firefighters got there and hooked up the hose to a nearby fire hydrant, and then "assumed the role of a backup team that could support or rescue the firefighters who went into the house." The third crew climbed a ladder to reach the roof, where they used a chainsaw to cut a hole directly over the fire to let out smoke and super-heated air, creating "a more survivable atmosphere for any victims that might be in the burning house." Finally, two firefighters arrived on a rescue vehicle and helped move hoses and equipment.

Lease for Beach House restaurant in P.G. goes up for sale for $2.3 million

■ Sale won't affect the restaurant operations, owner says

By KELLY NIX

THE DANVILLE commercial real estate developer who reopened the Lighthouse Cinema in 2008 and owns other property in Pacific Grove is selling the leasehold interest for the Beach House at Lovers Point.

But the owner of the popular restaurant — which is not for sale — said a transfer of the leasehold won't affect operations.

An online real estate listing shows that Robert Enea is asking $2.3 million for the leasehold interest, which runs for 37 more years. The City of Pacific Grove owns the property and building, which was renovated in 2013, and leases it to Enea, who rents it to the owners of the Beach House restaurant.

The buyer of the leasehold interest will get control of 5,235 square feet of rentable space, according to the listing, which touts the location's "irreplaceable oceanfront property" and its "highly qualified tenant" as selling points.

The Pacific Grove City Council in 2008 approved the Beach House restaurant plan.

Major remodel

The previous restaurant, the Old Bath House, shut down in November 2005 after the city decided not to renew the lease with its longtime operator, who got behind about $30,000 in rent.

The Lovers Point Beach Café operates on the first floor of the building.

Beach house co-owner Kevin Phillips said that the sale of the leasehold won't mean any changes for the Beach House, which celebrated its fourth anniversary in June. The restaurant is managed by Phillips' son, Jeremy Phillips.

"We really appreciate Robert [Enea]; he's been a great guy to work with," Phillips told The Pine Cone Thursday. "It wouldn't have been a project without him."

Phillips said in the last few weeks, possibly because of the leasehold listing, he said several people have asked him if the Beach House is for sale, which it is not.

"We just started our fifth year and are very happy to be there," he said.

Eclipse festival draws crowds — including many from Big Sur

By MICHAEL TROUTMAN

IN CENTRAL Oregon, 30,000 people gathered last weekend for the Oregon Eclipse Festival, which brought participants and artists from countries around the planet and turned out to be somewhat of a cross between Burning Man, Lightning in a Bottle and any other number of transformational gatherings, but with the added intention of witnessing, experiencing and honoring the eclipse.

A good number of Peninsula locals attended, including a sizeable contingent from Big Sur.

Michael Handy, organizer/founder of Big Surreal, was the stage manager at Silk Road, one of many music and art installations on the expansive festival grounds, which were set alongside a lake sheltered by ponderosa pines.

Like so many others who went, Handy was overwhelmed by the power of not just the eclipse but the totality of the entire week-long event.

Kevin Dayspring also made the long trek up from Big Sur to experience this natural phenomenon first-hand, and which left him stunned. "The eclipse ... wow, just wow!" said Dayspring. "It far exceeded my expectations on all levels, and having the Big Sur family here made the experience that much better. I'm leaving more inspired than I have been in a long time."

And, indeed, this writer-photographer was powerfully inspired, too. I was told beforehand that the difference between a partial and total eclipse is literally "night and day," and while that's accurate, those words don't

See ECLIPSE page 15A

In the days leading up to the eclipse, people attending the Oregon festival were able to participate in some inspiring activities — including meditating to the accompaniment of harmonic gongs, shakers and Tibetan bowls.

'Every faith and trust'

Dear Editor,

I worked 40 years in the plumbing and heating wholesale business in Sand City before retirement in 2014. In that capacity, I came to know almost every person and business in those respective trades locally. I gathered an extensive awareness of the character and work quality of these people and businesses as a result of this exposure. And this awareness was the basis of my respect and friendship towards many fine tradesmen on the Monterey Peninsula.

Therefore, it was with much dismay that I read the Pine Cone article (Aug. 18) about what appears to be a concerted and malignant attack through various online venues on one such person and his company. I have dealt with Rob Carswell for pretty much all of my career, remain a good friend today, and never found his character and workmanship to be anything other than of the highest caliber. I have dealt with three generations of this family, including Rob's fine sons who work with him today in their business, Carswell Heating and Sheet Metal. I can assure Peninsula residents they can have every faith and trust in every regard relating to Carswell Heating and Sheet Metal.

Dear Editor,

With interest and sadness, I read the article in The Pine Cone last week on the demolition of the buildings at Fifth and Dolores. As the architect for Del Dono Court in the 1960s, I remember working closely with the Carmel planning and building departments on replacing a dilapidated residence on the site. I fully understand that change is a requirement for a vibrant city. My disappointment was that a photograph of the building was taken at the rear and not the façade that faces Dolores Street.

Please print my photo taken from Dolores Street shortly after the building's completion. The Spanish explorer Del Dono sculpture that adorns the façade was created by the late Earl Bosley.

risk of falling," he said. "And, given that people are on the beach, it's not a safe situation."

The steel rods have rusted away, so the plans approved by the city in February call for replacing them with new stainless steel rods encased in three below-ground concrete beams, and removing, repairing and replacing the stone fascia.

"The old quarry where the stone came from is no longer accessible, so we've matched it as closely as we can with Santa Maria stone," Henderson said. "We'll be reusing as much of the Carmel Stone as we can, to keep the same colors and textures, and then using the Santa Maria stone to fill in."

Epoxy and fiberglass anchors will adhere the rock to the concrete sub-wall to "resolve the ongoing failure and loss of the stone vener," according to the plans.

"We're using modern technologies in an architecturally sensitive way, to quote the Bionic Man, to make them 'better, stronger, faster,'" Henderson said.

Historical consultant Kent Seavey will monitor the work to ensure it keeps with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties, and contractor Andy Rennoe is handling the project, which is expected to take six to eight weeks to complete.

"It's a necessary maintenance item that will hopefully result in no visible changes and a house that will continue to withstand the elements and keep it there for future generations to enjoy," Henderson said. "The ship's prow has been standing against the Pacific Ocean for over 65 years, and with this repair, we hope it will stand longer than that ... and be in a better condition to face the challenges of sea-level rise."

The Walker House is listed on the National Register of Historic Properties.

even begin to describe the effect on one's soul while standing in the umbra. The land grew darker, people were howling and praying, and at last we saw the shadow racing towards us. Then, at last, totality, darkness, a noticeable temperature drop, stars and planets emerging in the sky, and, for many, inner revelations of mystical, personal truth and timelessness — if only for a few moments.

Suddenly the “diamond ring” burst forth, everyone cheered, screamed; there was light, such beautiful, exquisite, beams of light like nothing most of us have ever seen before.

What has been called the “greatest show in nature” truly is, and for many that experience it, even more.

Steelhead group bemoans bureaucracy, wants to rescue fish again

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE PRESIDENT of the Carmel River Steelhead Association concedes that his group doesn't have permits to rescue steelhead from the drying tributaries of the Carmel River, but he insists his group has gone to lengths to get those permits — and they're getting fed up with the delays.

Brian LeNeve told The Pine Cone that the nonprofit has spent thousands of dollars and invested hundreds of volunteer hours in the effort to procure the necessary permits from federal and state agencies, but the permits remain elusive.

"We're getting the bureaucratic runaround," LeNeve said. "It's not that we're not putting in the effort. But we have limited funds, and we don't get paid."

Thousands of young steelhead are rescued each summer from the Carmel River and its tributaries when the water level drops and they become isolated in pools that will soon dry up. The CRSA helped rescue these fish until 2013, when they were told by government officials they needed permits.

Since 2013, all rescues along the river have been done by staff from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, which has the permits. The agency has rescued 7,258 steelhead over a three-year span ending in 2016.

LeNeve said the district's work has been focused on the main stem of the river and its lower tributaries. But he said nobody is rescuing fish along a pair of tributaries located upriver, Finch and Cachagua creeks.

The Carmel River Steelhead Association has rescued thousands of steelhead along Finch and Cachagua creeks — and its members want to revive that effort.

LeNeve accused government officials of making the permit process unnecessarily difficult. "Fish are dying because they don't want to work with volunteers," he insisted.

In response, California Fish and Wildlife environmental scientist Dennis Michnuk said the CRSA needs a scientific collection permit to rescue and relocate fish, and he said he's never seen an application from the nonprofit.

To get the permit — which Michnuk said could take "a month or two" to process — the applicant will need to pay a $105 application fee and a $315 annual fee. They will also need to estimate how many fish will die in the process of being rescued and relocated.

Jim Milbury of the National Marine Fisheries Service said as long as the nonprofit's members are only catching and relocating steelhead, and they have a state permit, they would not need a federal permit.

Henry Kenneth White

June 20, 1924 ❖ August 6, 2017

CARMEL - Henry Kenneth White, age 93, died at home on Sunday, August 6. Ken was born in Wakefield, England on June 20, 1924 to Cyril Balmer White and Bessie Doreen Richards White. Ken attended boarding school and college in England and served in the Royal Air Force during World War II. He credited these experiences to his commitment to disciplined routines and his longevity.

Ken came to the U.S. and was hosted at Princeton in Architecture under the Fulbright Foreign Student Program in 1951. He was a practicing architect in Denver, Colorado where he met his beloved wife Jean Hazlett White. They were married in Evergreen, Colorado in 1960. In 1964, Ken was invited to the University of Virginia to teach architecture, a position which lasted 25 years until his retirement in 1989 as Professor Emeritus. Ken and Jean thoroughly enjoyed entertaining the students at their home in Charlottesville, Virginia and joining them on their class field trips.

Summers on Martha's Vineyard Island and, later, in Castine, Maine were always a very special event and pleasure for both Jean and Ken. A joint interest in pre-Columbian art and architecture took them to most of the archeological sites in Central and South America. Since retiring, they lived in Naples, Florida; Sedona, Arizona and Carmel. Jean and Ken especially enjoyed cruising with their itinerary taking them from Alaska to South America as well as Baltic and Mediterranean ports.

Ken was predeceased by Jean on February 16, 2008. Ken leaves his nephews, Butch Hazlett of Palo Alto and David Hazlett of Denver; his niece, Karen Snyder of Aspen, Colorado; a niece in England and his beloved dog Shiloh.

Ken will be laid to rest with Jean at The University of Virginia Columbarium where Ken said Jean and he will enjoy the festive crowds attending the nearby football games, concerts and happenings at Scott Stadium on the UVA Grounds.

A memorial service will be held on Friday, September 1 at 4:00 p.m. at the Church in the Forest in Pebble Beach. Charitable gifts in Ken's name may be made to The SPCA for Monterey County, P.O. Box 3058, Monterey, CA 93942.

HELP

Moments later, the rescue drill began with a mayday call from inside the house alerting everyone that the crew within was trapped by fire. "Immediately, orders were barked to firefighters outside, and a rescue hole was cut through the wall of the house with a chainsaw," according to Bloxham. "The trapped firefighters were safely extracted, and the training drill was over."

Afterward, the firefighters who took part in the training debriefed, packed up their equipment, and headed back to their stations. Others were set to undertake similar exercises over the weekend, and the house was razed this week. By Thursday morning, the lot was strewn with rubble, with only the brick chimney still standing, as construction crews moved the debris to make way for future construction on the property.

Keeping skills sharp

Being able to train on real structures is critical for firefighters to keep their skills sharp for when they have to deal with the real thing, according to Bloxham, and they're always grateful for the chance to practice. In late June, some 30 Cal Fire firefighters from the same stations cut ventilation holes in a house on 17 Mile Drive in Pebble Beach that was also slated for demolition. The contractor on that project extended the invitation.

Daniel Silverie, whose Stillwater construction company is handling the substantial building project at Dolores and Fifth, said he would have liked to invite firefighters to train on that building, considering its multiple levels and spaces, underground parking, interior courtyard and other facets that would have made it useful. Unfortunately, the timeline for demolition and construction didn't allow enough time for those exercises to take place.

"I know how valuable that is," he told The Pine Cone last week.

She is survived by her brother Paul (Suzanne) Paulikas and was fondly known as "Auntie Dee Dee" to Robert (Linda) Roscoe, Rich Roscoe, Rosanne (Jeff) Grigoletti, Ron (Mary) Roscoe, Stephen (Cynthia) Paulikas, Daniel Paulikas, Deborah Paulikas, Andrew (Barbara) Paulikas, and Deanna (Glenn) Gustafson.

DONALD JOSEPH MAYOL

March 25, 1933 — August 9, 2017

Donald Joseph Mayol passed away peacefully after a short illness at the age of 84 on August 9, 2017. Don was born in New Orleans, Louisiana on March 25, 1933, the son of Joseph John Mayol and Myrtle Lee McCloskey and sister to Carol Lee Mayol (Andersen). He spent his youth in Chicago, Illinois and Oakland, California. Always, with an eye towards business, he set bowling pins in Chicago, parked cars, sold men's clothes, delivered dry cleaning and milk growing up in Oakland.

He graduated in 1954 from Armstrong Business College in Berkeley, California. It was there he met Lois Myrle Amerine of Martinez, California. Upon meeting her he immediately knew and proclaimed that he would marry that girl, which he did in 1953 after a whirlwind 9 month courtship. Don and Lois celebrated their 64th anniversary on June 14, 2017.

Don joined the United States Navy reserve in 1951 and was drafted into the United States Army in 1954, continuing in the Army Reserve until being honorably discharged in 1956. He was stationed in Hioshi, Japan. While in the Far East, he was initiated in to the "Mystic Order of the Golden Dragon." Among other honors, he and his fellow brigade members were officially recognized as "chit signers, squaw men, smokers, ice men, Sad Sacks, Foam Blowers, Gold Bricks and all-around Landlubbers."

Don was drafted when his first son, John Wesley, was just 6 weeks old. Lois held down the fort with the help of Don's parents and her own parents, Hugh and Vivienne Amerine. Their family grew with the birth of a second son, James Donald in 1957 and, in 1959, the daughter they always wanted, Jennifer Lee was born.

Soon Don began his venture into the packaging business where he quickly rose in sales and management positions for various companies. The family moved to Modesto in 1959, where he was the youngest General Manager in the Weyerhaeuser company. In Modesto, Don was charged with building the Weyerhaeuser plant, which was instrumental in converting much of the agricultural packaging in the valley from wooden to corrugated containers. In 1973, being honored with a promotion to corporate executive and a mandatory move to the east coast, he rejected the corporate life and founded Pacific Southwest Container (PSC) with his former partner Roger Houck. What started with a second mortgage, a couple of loans and promises of business from best friends and the labor of a small and grossly underpaid teenage workforce, the smallest of businesses rapidly expanded into one of the largest privately held packaging business in the United States.

In 1999, Don was awarded Entrepreneur of the Year by Cal State Stanislaus. He also was a founder of Pacific Valley National Bank, Chairman Emeritus of the Modesto Division of the Salvation Army and Chairman Emeritus of PSC and founder of TriCorr, Inc. Don and Lois implemented the Donald and Lois Mayol Scholarship Fund which provides annual college scholarships to children of PSC employees.

After successfully transitioning the ownership of PSC to the next generation, Don retired in 2001 and he and Lois settled in Carmel, California. In Carmel, Don and Lois joined many Modesto friends and also made many new acquaintances through their various philanthropic and social activities, including the Carmel Bach Festival, SPCA for Monterey and as founding members of Youth Orchestra Salinas. In 2017, Don and Lois were honored as Philanthropists of the year by the Monterey Arts Council.

Don was a member of the Old Capital Club in Monterey, where he often mowed through dominos opponents, pocketing several dollars from good friends! He greatly enjoyed golfing with his friends was a former member of Del Rio Country Club, Carmel Valley Ranch, MPCC and Quail Lodge Golf Club. He also was a keen fly fisherman, having spent years fishing near their cabins in Bumblebee in the Stanislaus National Forest, Northstar, and Alpine Meadows, as well as traveling to Canada, Alaska and even the Italian Alps to pursue whatever fish was willing.

Don is survived by his wife Lois, and faithful canine companion Brie, son John and his wife Tami (Modesto), granddaughter Taylor (San Francisco) and grandson Trenton (Los Angeles), son Jim and his wife Birgitt (Escalon), grandson Joseph (Portland, Oregon) and granddaughter Jacqueline (Eugene, Oregon) and daughter Jennifer and her significant other Michael Grossman (Novato).

The family is grateful for and thanks all of the friends and caregivers who helped Don and the family through his transition to a better place; including Dr. Kubica, Cheryl, Denessa, the Brendas, Sinead, Leslie, Lucie, Marissa, Esme, Elainie, Mary, Elizabeth, Donna, Hector, Victor, Lyndall, Anthony and Patricia, Esmerelda and Chris.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that donations be made in honor of Don to SPCA for Monterey County 1002 Monterey Salinas Hwy Salinas, CA 93908 or the Carmel Bach Festival P.O. Box 575 Carmel, CA 93921. To sign Don's guest book and leave messages for his family, please visit www.thepaulmortuary.com.

On August 26, 2017 from noon to 3 pm, an Open House Celebration of Don's Life will be held at their residence at 7082 Valley Greens Circle, in Carmel. Please join the family as the "Saints Go Marching In!"

woman Barbara Livingston for the city's 100th birthday celebration last year.

While city council members in their discussions leaned more toward holding public dances a few times a year, perhaps at a different location each time, the CACC suggested hosting it once annually in September.

Last November, commissioners discussed the idea of making the street dance an ongoing event, and recommended the city hold it in Devendorf Park and a couple of adjacent streets on a Saturday in September from 5 to 8 p.m.

They also suggested a nonprofit be able to sell wine, and keep the proceeds. (For the centennial dance, the group had to give the money to the city, which made finding an organization to do the work a bit of a challenge.)

See how it goes

A month later, the council considered their suggestions and then voted to send the topic back to them with a request for more ideas. That feedback didn't mean much, in the end.

"The recommendations we made at the last meeting were well thought out," commission chair Judy Refuerzo commented at the Jan. 10 meeting. Specifically, she noted at the time, the park and adjacent street would best accommodate the crowds, the band, and the separate area for alcohol sales, and the September date would avoid conflicts with other events but would likely still have good weather.

"I thought we had done a good job of thinking through all these things," she said at that meeting, and ultimately, commissioners decided to see how the first dance goes.

Against the law?

While city officials have on occasion suggested the city's codes be updated to reflect current times, a ban on booze and dancing remains on the books.

According to the Carmel Municipal Code, "It is unlawful for any person to conduct or maintain or permit to be conducted or maintained public dances or any form of entertainment in or on any premises where alcoholic beverages are sold and served to the public within a period of time starting four hours before the commencement of such dance or entertainment, and ending at 2 a.m. of the next day following the commencement of such dance or entertainment."

An exemption exists for private and public events held on private property, but it doesn't address public events held on public property.

During the city's centennial celebration last October, Dolores Street was packed with revelers grooving to the tunes of The Money Band. The dance was such a success that the city decided to hold them regularly. The next is set for Sept. 9.

During the subsequent months, Jan Reimers communicated back and forth with PG&E representative Joe Foster, who said he was working on solutions. PG&E officials offered a few options, including moving the equipment to other poles in the area, undertaking the costly and lengthy process of burying it, or putting it back where it was before — which would cost the couple $50,000, they said.

In February, Niels Reimers filed a formal complaint with the California Public Utilities Commission. He received no response.

Mayra Tostado with PG&E corporate relations confirmed Campisi requested and funded the relocation of the power pole, which is allowed under PUC rules. A customer “can pay PG&E its total estimated cost to relocate its facilities to a new location in its rights of way that allows the safe operation of existing electric infrastructure,” she said.

No permit required

When the utility company receives such a request, a representative works with the applicant to choose the best spot in PG&E’s right of way for the equipment. “In this case, the old pole was in conflict with the customer’s water utilities and their driveway,” Tostado said. “The pole was relocated to an acceptable location that would allow the safe operation of our system in the area.”

Reimers doubted that was the reason behind Campisi’s decision to pay to have the pole moved. And if it were, she asked, why would Kavner, who lives on Camino Real, agree to foot part of the bill?

While some cities require permits for this type of work, Carmel does not, in most cases, according to an agreement between the city and PG&E. “The city only requires a permit when there is potential for the pole to impact a tree,” Wiener said. “There has been some internal discussion about potentially drafting a new agreement at some time in the future, but at this point, it is not in the city council’s work plan.”

“It might be legal for them to do it, but is it the right thing?” Reimers wondered. “I don’t think PG&E should be doing work like this without at least having a neighborhood conversation about it.”

But so far, nothing has changed. After four months of silence between February and June, while the city resolved its lawsuit with PG&E over the explosion of a house, discussion resumed.

Tostado said she was aware that “some neighbors are displeased with the new location.” “PG&E is working with the customer and residents in the area to find a resolution that will accommodate their needs and allow PG&E to continue providing safe and reliable service to its customers,” she said.

Reimers said she won’t be turning to her neighbor for help. In an email to her, Campisi complained about the city planting a cypress tree in front of his house and said he has no intention of spending any more money on the pole, which had “been in the center of our home for more than 50 years.”

“We don’t feel we are obligated or responsible to pay for the power pole to be moved twice,” he wrote.

The last Reimers heard from anyone was in July, when PG&E officials talked to management at La Playa Hotel, which could also be affected. “We would like to have a solution without involving legal counsel,” she said.

Jan Reimers was shocked last November to see this power pole being installed below her house, and more shocked to learn it was moved at the request of a neighbor.

SAND CITY CELEBRATION FEATURES '60S HEADLINERS

A PAIR of musical acts that helped define the San Francisco sound of the late 1960s, It's a Beautiful Day and Big Brother & the Holding Company, will headline the West End Celebration in Sand City this weekend (Aug. 25-27).

The two bands will appropriately serve as bookends for the 16th annual festival, which pays tribute to the 50th anniversary of the Summer of Love.

It's A Beautiful Day will perform Friday at the festival's kick-off party at Carmel Stone Imports.

Best known for the song, "White Bird," the band stood apart from the many blues-rockers that populated San Francisco's Haight-Asbury in the late 1960s, serving up an ethereal mix of jazz, folk and classical influences. Today the group is led by two founding members, singer and violinist David LaFlamme and drummer Val Fuentes.

"I know their bass player, Toby Gray," explained event coordinator Steve Vagnini, who puts together the musical lineup each year. "It was a perfect opportunity to have them open up the festival."

Carmel Stone Imports is located at 1725 Contra Costa, showtime is 7 p.m., and tickets are $25.

Big Brother will play Sunday at 4 p.m. on the Independent Stage, one of two music sites at the West End Celebration. Along with all other shows Saturday and Sunday, the music is free.

Best known as the late singer Janis Joplin's first band, Big Brother helped pioneer psychedelic blues rock. The group shared the stage with the Joplin during her electrifying performance at the

FOOD & WINE

Olivier gourmet shop gets OK, Trio wine pairings, and art you can eat

OLIVIER-BY-THE-SEA, A shop peddling dipping oils, sauces and other treats, received a warm welcome from the Carmel Planning Commission Wednesday afternoon, when commissioners unanimously approved Erich Klein and Kevin Buchholz's application to open on Ocean Avenue in the storefront formerly occupied by the Jewelry Atelier store.

The men founded Olivier Napa Valley in 1993 and still run their thriving business in St. Helena, but they plan to make their Carmel business distinctive — an important factor in a town that tries to keep chain restaurants and food stores.

In the written description they provided to the city, the men said their downtown store will include "a specific product line that has Carmel at its heart, and is only offered on Ocean Avenue."

"We welcome your input for products and know as we get to know our new home, more and more ideas will hatch into delicious and extraordinary wares and lines," they wrote.

Their list of goodies they plan to sell includes tapenades, mustards, French classic sauces, olive oils and dipping oils (a term they say they coined) and bruschetta topping, not to mention caramels, chocolates and dessert sauces and cremes.

Non-edible items would include kitchen wares, pottery, linens, soaps and bath salts, gift baskets, cards and books.

Commissioner Michael LePage said the store would be "a nice addition to the character of Ocean Avenue," and commissioner Julie Wendt agreed, attesting to the quality of the caramel sauce.

"It's a class act and a boon to Carmel," chair Don Goodhue said, and with that, commissioners unanimously approved the permit.

■ Pairing seminar at Trio

Trio Carmel's wine seminar series will continue Friday, Aug. 25, from 6 to 7 p.m., when chef Dyon Foster, founder of Chef's Palette Spice Rubs Co., visits the downtown store to discuss how to pair wine and food — the most commonly asked question in the tasting room, according to owner Karl Empey.

Foster will prepare some common dishes to help people learn how their palates perceive acidity, sweetness, fat, spiciness and other flavors. Trio's wine pro, Tom Farmer, will guide them through the pairing process to see what works and what doesn't.

"The goal of this seminar is to enhance the appreciation and enjoyment of wine with food by experiencing the transformation these foods have on your taste buds while tasting wine," Empey said.

Tickets are $30 per person ($20 for Trio Club Members and guests), and can be purchased online at triocarmel.com/events or by (Aubergine) and Ron Mendoza (Revival Ice Cream) will have their annual reunion at Lilify in Monterey for a fundraising dinner benefiting the Youth Arts Collective Sunday, Aug. 27, at 7 p.m. The Edible Art Dinner and Dessert will raise money to support art programs for kids and teens, who create and show their works in a gallery on Calle Principal. The evening includes passed hors d'oeuvres with specialty cocktails, a seated three-course meal with wines from Pierce Ranch Vineyards, and dessert inspired by YACster art. Coffee will be provided by Bright Coffee, which has a small shop inside the home goods store. Tickets are $150 per person, and the event usually sells out. Call (831) 207-1380 to reserve. Lilify is located at 281 Lighthouse Ave. in Monterey.

Trio Carmel on Dolores Street ensures learning is also fun during its occasional seminars. On Aug. 25, guest chef Dyon Foster will be there to provide insight on pairing food and wine.

■ Carmel Honey Co. ribbon cutting

Jake Reisdorf, the 14-year-old whose Carmel Honey Co. has been a rousing success, opened a shop in Carmel Plaza Aug. 1. This latest chapter in his business — which includes managing and relocating hives, harvesting and packaging honey and honeycomb, public speaking, educating people about bees, and other facets — will be celebrated with a ribbon cutting by the chamber of commerce Sept. 1.

The grand opening is set for 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the new store on the lower level of the Plaza, with the ribbon set to be cut at 6. The event will include “honey-inspired nibbles” and drinks.

Jake’s father, Jeff, is a general contractor who took on the interior remodel of the small space, while his mom, Becky, is in charge of day-to-day operations. Jake’s little sister, Brooke, is helping with displays and choosing products to carry, including hive-related merchandise like apparel, gifts, bath and body products, and gourmet foods.

Visitors can sample honeys from all over the country, and learn about beekeeping practices throughout the world and the importance of pollinators to the ecosystem. The Reisdorfs are also planning to travel to the East Coast and Turkey to check out beekeeping and honey production there.

Those journeys will help Reisdorf follow the slogan he developed for his fledgling business when he was 11: “Carmel Honey Company, Bringing You the Best Honey in the World.”

The store is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sundays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. www.CarmelHoneyCompany.com

■ Bocce to benefit MOW

Members of the Pacheco Club in downtown Monterey will hold a bocce tournament to generate support for Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula — a nonprofit that provides healthful meals to shut-ins and others in need — Sept. 2 from 4 to 9 p.m. While membership in the club is limited to men, the tournament will be open to all. Accompanying it will be an Italian dinner prepared by Meals on Wheels’ new chef, Uwe Grobecker. Mike Marotta will provide the tunes, and raffle prizes will be offered throughout the evening. Awards will go to the first, second and third-place finishers.

Tickets are $65 per person, and are available at the Sally Griffin Active Center at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove until the day of the event, when they will be sold at the club. The Pacheco Club is located at 602 Abrego St. in Monterey.

■ What’s Miller up to?

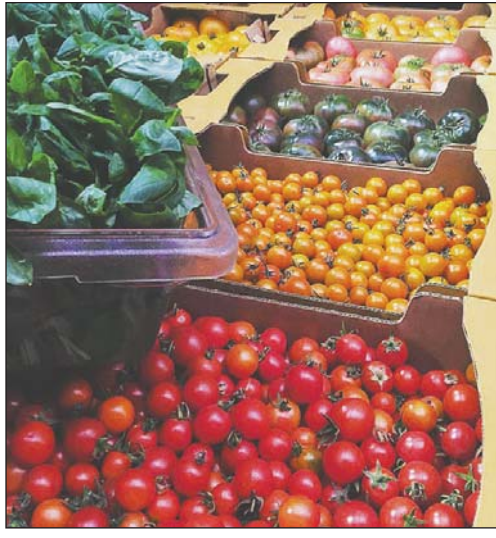

Executive chef Brandon Miller is settling in at Alvarado Street Brewery, where he’s overhauling the menu and experimenting with several new dishes. The brewery, grill and beer garden are always bustling, and Miller said this week he’s working on ways to streamline operations and developing items.

Now on the menu is one of his signature dishes — cauliflower gratin with horseradish and Gruyere cheese — as well as pizza baked in the stone oven with Sicilian beer sausage Miller made, tomato conserve, mozzarella and broccoli rabe, which adds a nice depth and earthiness to the pie. He’s also introduced a warm three-cheese dip with corn and roasted peppers, served with tortilla chips, and has refined the street tacos a bit.

More is sure to come, as he incorporates the brewery’s impressive and diverse beers into the cuisine, like he did with the carrots glazed in ASB coffee stout with caraway and brown sugar.

Alvarado Street Brewery is located in downtown Monterey. www.alvaradostreetbrewery.com

Cal Stamenov, executive chef of Lucia Restaurant at Bernardus Lodge in Carmel Valley, will work his magic with the season’s most tasty tomatoes during one of the lodge’s most popular events: the annual Heirloom Tomato Lunch on Sept. 2.

Monterey Pop Festival in 1967, and backed the singer on the landmark “Cheap Thrills” album, which catapulted her to fame in 1968.

Two members who played with Joplin at the Monterey Pop Festival, bassist Peter Albin and drummer Dave Getz, are still with the band. Darby Gould, who once replaced Grace Slick in the Jefferson Starship, is the lead singer.

“It was just fortuitous that we could book them,” Vagnini explained. “They were in Southern California, and they were on their way back up north.”

The festival’s lineup features 22 musical acts, including Roy Rogers & The Delta Kings (Saturday at 4 p.m. on the Independent Stage), and Jason Fann and the Rhythm Liberation Project (Sunday at 4 p.m. on the Real to Reel Stage). Besides music, the festival showcases local stage performers, artists and restaurants.

Vagnini called the festival “a true community event” with “a really good vibe to it.” Plus, he said it’s full of surprises.

“Ninety-five percent of the people at West End are locals,” Vagnini added. “A lot of work goes into getting the different nonprofit groups involved. It’s a really creative crowd that comes out — we always try to keep it fresh.”

Shelby, who shares a Sand City studio with her brother, creates colorful glass art that she describes as “functional and fun.”

“I’m always impressed by what’s she’s making,” Greg said of his daughter’s work. “She’s moving forward by leaps and bounds. Her pieces sell about as fast as she can make them.”

As a child growing up in Big Sur and surrounded by her father’s art, there was never any question that Shelby would become an artist — she simply assumed she was one.

Taylor Hawthorne, whose art will be featured at this weekend’s West End Celebration, works on a sculpture in Sand City.

“From a young age, I was always encouraged to be creative,” Shelby explained. “I saw what my dad was doing, and I said, ‘I want to do that.’ As soon as I was old enough to hold a brush, I was painting.”

Taylor meanwhile, has gravitated to another of his father’s passions — working with metal.

“He’s a very talented sculptor,” said Greg, who serves on the city council for Sand City. “He fabricates many of my sculptures.”

Shelby, meanwhile, described her brother as a “total perfectionist” with “such a creative mind.” “He makes such beautiful work,” she chimed in. “It’s so well crafted and thoughtful.”

Besides Shelby and Taylor’s work, Greg’s art can be seen this weekend in Sand City — along with his six other members of the family including two of his siblings, their spouses, and three of Shelby and Taylor’s cousins.

While there are no doubt many families that share a love of art, Greg suggested his holds a unique distinction. “We’re probably the only family in the United States where each sibling is an artist, each married an artist, and each is still married,” he added.

Greg’s studio at 430 Ortiz Avenue will feature pieces by each family member, except Shelby, who will have a table set up on Ortiz Avenue about a block away.

The festival will shine a spotlight on dozens of local artists. For a complete list, visit www.westend-celebration.com.

■ ‘Art Oasis’ returns to West End

While the West End Celebration is highlighting many artists and arts-related nonprofits, none will likely take a more interactive approach than Open Ground Studios, which is bringing its three-ring circus of creativity to Sand City Saturday and Sunday.

Besides hosting demonstrations by three artists — Paul Richmond, Alyssa Endo and Renata Amba — the Seaside-based nonprofit is inviting folks of all ages to help create an ambitious group art installation conceived by Richmond. Thousands of puzzle pieces will make up the final piece, and the nonprofit is inviting the public to paint some of them.

“We’re asking people at West End to decorate a puzzle piece that describes their own uniqueness,” founder and director Denese Sanders explained. “They will be used to create a very interesting installation inside the Open Ground Studios classroom space.”

The theme of the installation will be diversity, and final piece — measuring 10 feet by 14 feet — will be unveiled at Open Ground Studios in two weeks.

To help raise money for its many programs and classes, the nonprofit is selling t-shirts and tote bags, and offering the public a chance to paint one.

To find Open Ground Studios at the festival, look for the “Art Oasis” sign. For more about the nonprofit, visit www.opengroundstudios.com.

■ Sculptors showcased Sunday

At three downtown sites, a trio of gifted sculptors — Steven Whyte, Terry Bennett and Moses Nyanhongo — will show the public how it’s done Aug. 27 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Whyte will present a demonstration of his sculpting technique in his gallery on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, while Bennett will do the same at his gallery at San Carlos and Sixth.

Nyanhongo, meanwhile, will offer his demonstration in Devendorf Park at Ocean and Junipero. Born in Zimbabwe, he comes from a famous family of stone sculptors.

His visit to Carmel coincides with the opening a new display of work by he and his sister, Anges Nyanhongo, at Gallery Sur, which is located on Sixth between Dolores and Lincoln.

■ CPA offers free talk

Taking on a perplexing topic that requires mixing creativity with business, the Center for Photographic Art will host a free talk, “Surviving and Thriving as a Photographer,” Tuesday, Aug. 29.

Moderating the talk will be Brian Taylor, the executive director of the CPA, and the participants include photographer and gallery owner Rachael Short, author and photographer Elizabeth Murray, digital artist and marketing consultant Jody Royee, and photographer William Giles.

Co-presented by the nonprofit Arts Habitat, the talk starts at 6 p.m. The CPA is located in Sunset Center at San Carlos and Ninth. www.photography.org.

As Padre football squad gets ready for opening night, nerves are part of the fun

IMAGINE THE tingle you'd feel right now if you were a Carmel Padre, a member of the varsity football squad, which opens the 2017 season under the Friday night lights at Monterey Peninsula College with a 7:30 p.m. kickoff against a Willow Glen team frothing to avenge last year's 41-7 beat down.

Whether they are seniors or freshmen, few experiences in their lifetimes will match for the seventh time in the eight-year reign of head coach Golden Anderson (Carmel High Class of '97).

That's a heavy legacy to carry if you're a player tasked with filling the shoes of battering-ram running back Covossay Windham (now at Hartnell College), who ran for 4,100 yards and 55 touchdowns in three years at Carmel High, or quarterback Daniel Higman, who threw for 1,820 yards, ran for 1,001, and accounted for 33 touchdowns (12 rushing, 21 passing) last season. What if you're the receiver who is expected to replace Hayden Stachelek (48 catches for nearly 700 yards, and seven TDs)?

Anderson, whose offense scored 471 points last year, addresses all of that with a calm shrug.

"We always have high expectations, even though we're putting different players in some spots," the coach said. "We basically look at every season the same way: Wherever we're at, we're just always trying to get better. We have a good system in place. We have a bunch of hard-working guys. Everybody loses players each year, and you never really know what that means."

Windham's tailback spot is expected to be

'Tough to tackle'

His experience as a receiver figures to make him a pass-catching weapon out of the backfield, and he's also a threat as a kick-return man.

"Luke is a short and stocky, with great change-of-direction skills," Anderson said. "He's tough to tackle, he doesn't take big hits, and he also blocks really well, which is something we really like in our system."

Having a running back who can block will be important to the player stepping in for Higman at quarterback, sophomore Kai Lee, who won the starting job largely because of his cerebral approach to the position.

"He's a good decision-maker — a very cool, calm customer," the coach said. "He's not a real rah-rah guy — just very even-keel, which, in a lot of ways, is a good thing."

Lee also is a good athlete who made the varsity basketball team last year as a freshman.

Rashaan Ward returns as a starting receiver and return man, and the Padres also will benefit from an incoming transfer student, Dakota Mornhinweg, who caught 36 passes for 553 yards and scored four touchdowns as a freshman at Stevenson High last fall.

Two returning starters, Jackson Williams (6-4, 235 pounds) and Dalton Quilty (5-11, 240) bring leadership to the offensive line.

The Padres defense will benefit from the return of three linemen, All-MTAL choice Christian Stapleton (6-3, 245), Robert Brown (6-1, 250), and Connor Houlihan (6-0, 190), plus all-league linebacker Zach Rossi, who was the league's best kicker and punter in 2016. Zach DeZee, a returning safety, will bring stability to the secondary.

A Stevenson transfer

Opening-night opponent Willow Glen returns 17 veterans from last year's 2-8 team, including senior quarterback Joseph Cruz, who completed 13 of 22 passes against the Padres in last year's opener.

"We try to pick non-league opponents that are good enough to beat us, and teams that play different styles," Anderson said. "Willow Glen is a team that can throw the ball well. Gilroy (2 p.m. Sept. 2 at Carmel High) was a CCS playoff team last year with a Wing-T offense that's heavily focused on the run. Christopher (2 p.m. Sept. 9, Carmel High) is another throwing team. the butterflies they'll feel before an opening-night kickoff, in a stadium populated with screaming parents, students, and community members, many of them wearing the red and grey.

The pressure of opening night is the fun part — and there's plenty of pressure. Half of this year's roster of 42 players were on a 2016 varsity that went 10-0 during the regular season before falling 46-26 to Sacred Heart Prep in the opening round of the Central Coast Section playoffs.

The dickens you say

IF THERE'S one thing every American knows by now, it's that you can't look at a solar eclipse without using special glasses. They're also now fully informed, whether they ever wanted to be or not, that those glasses can't be knock-offs ... they have to be certified.

We all know these very useful things because warnings about looking directly at the sun were repeated endlessly in the run-up to Monday's total eclipse — not only by every news outlet from Boston to San Diego (including this one), but also on every radio station, talk show and website known to man. If FDR were still around, he would surely have mentioned them in his fireside chats, too. After all, who wants the whole nation to go blind?

However, like most of the warnings thrown at us everywhere we look these days, this one wasn't quite right. While you can't look at a partial eclipse with your naked eyes, it's perfectly fine to look at a total eclipse without even as much as a pair of sunglasses. You can even use binoculars or a zoom lens to look at the sun during totality. In fact, you definitely should. The sight of the black disc of the moon surrounded by the blazing solar atmosphere is amazing, but it's also quite dim, and if you look at it through eclipse glasses, you'll completely miss the best part of the show.

Even news outlets which are usually quite authoritative left this last (and very important) part out of their solar eclipse viewing instructions, possibly because they just didn't know, but more likely because they were afraid of being sued if somebody misunderstood and then staggered away from a partial eclipse with damaged retinas. But should the news media treat their readers/listeners/viewers like simpletons who can't be expected to comprehend simple English words?

Well, why not? Such idiotic warnings are all around us. One of our favorites was very clearly printed on the side of the box of Wheat Chex we had for breakfast this morning: "Contains wheat ingredients."

And then there are those ubiquitous Prop 65 warnings, which pretty much warn you never to leave your house. They even have them now at medical marijuana outlets.

Topping them all, of course, are the warnings compiled in the hilarious 2007 book by Robert Jones, "Remove Child Before Folding," listing the Top 100 ridiculous warning labels put on what the author calls "perfectly good products," starting with the label on a baby stroller for which the book is named, and including such classics as, "Do not drive with sun shield in place," "Do not eat toner," "Never iron clothes while they are being worn," "Do not use snow thrower on roof," and "Not intended for highway use."

That last one was on a wheelbarrow.

We felt sad when we talked to people who were planning to travel to Oregon or Tennessee for the once-in-a-lifetime chance to see a total solar eclipse, and didn't know they could look at the fully eclipsed sun with just their eyes.

But, hey, maybe we all actually need to be reminded not to let our children play in the dishwasher.

River flood project Dear Editor,

As reported in your Aug. 18 article, "Big Sur Land Trust wrangles with sewage plant over flood control," BSLT appreciates the Carmel Valley Association's support of the Carmel River Floodplain Restoration and Environmental Enhancement project. The project aims to better protect the community from flooding by connecting and restoring the natural systems of the river and the lagoon. A FEMA analysis of the project identified a 3:1 benefits-to-cost ratio to the community, and once it is constructed, Carmel River FREE may reduce flood insurance premiums for property owners at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Although we appreciate CAWD's concerns about potential impacts to their sewer main and outfall pipes over the lagoon, readers should know that this infrastructure is nearly 50 years old and is already at high risk from a major storm event carrying debris from the river's main channel. Aware of these risks since 2012, CAWD prepared conceptual engineering plans in 2014 to put the pipelines underground. By design, Carmel River FREE will help reduce the existing flood risks to CAWD's pipes and at their treatment plant.

We share the Carmel Valley Association's sense of urgency to resolve any delays on the project. Carmel River FREE is solely funded by federal and state grants with many funding deadlines approaching in 2018. The fact remains both projects are needed to protect public health, safety and property. The Big Sur Land Trust is committed to supporting our public agency partners in the pursuit of necessary funding for the completion of both projects.

As proved by our efforts to help CAWD obtain additional funding for its pipeline project, our goal is to work cooperatively with CAWD and its technical consultants to ensure our mutual success. Since CAWD raised their concerns during the last year, we've been advocating for collaboration and ongoing coordination between the two projects. We are eager to move forward. Turning disorder into beauty without missing a beat

WHEN YOU talk with soft-spoken plastic surgeon and jazz drummer David Morwood, you'll find he peppers his descriptions with words like "blessed" and "lucky." The grandson of immigrants from Europe and the Middle East, the Carmel Point resident grew up in Winooski, Vt., a small town on the Winooski River, east of Burlington.

The name of the town was derived from a Native American word — winoskitegw — which means, "land of the wild onion." Indeed, Morwood said, he was sandwiched between Burlington and "farm country."

He was one of eight children, the son of a medical surgical charge nurse and a lawyer. His father never went to law school, but instead learned the profession by clerking with another attorney for four years and then taking the bar exam.

Morwood said his first summer job was picking strawberries at age 5 — a job anybody was allowed to do "if they were strong enough to get onto the back of the truck when it came by." He got a nickel for each small basket he filled.

After strawberries, kids graduated to bushels of corn (25 cents), cucumbers (50 cents), and at the pinnacle, bushels of tomatoes, which fetched $1 a basket.

Fortunately for Morwood, he became a musician and broke free of the bushel-basket

He left the academy and went back to Vermont to take pre-med courses and then attended med school, with the notion of becoming a pediatrician. However, his first time in an office with crying, frightened kids changed his mind. Then he considered internal medicine, but that wasn't the right fit either.

"I got to surgery and that was fun. I couldn't wait to get to the operating room," he said. Then, he continued, "During my plastic surgery rotation, a light bulb went on." He observed a plastic surgeon working on a cleft lip. "In the middle of the operation, everything looked disorderly, but then this beauty came from that disorder."

That's when he decided he wanted to do cosmetic and reconstructive surgery. After graduation, he practiced in big cities in the U.S. and Europe, including New York, L.A., London and Paris, continuing his training and playing music on the side.

He also ran marathons, and when he came to Big Sur, he knew he wanted to live here one day — and that day came a little more than 20 years ago.

"It has the beauty of New England, but cycle. He started with the violin at age 4, but he really wanted to be a drummer. His first drum kit started with some bongos his parents bought at a church bazaar, followed by a snare drum, a cymbal and then a bass drum. By age 13, he was part of a band with gigs that paid him as much as $50 to $100 a night. That's a lot of tomatoes.

"Music has always been woven into the fabric of my life," he said. When he attended the Naval Academy, he played in the drum and bugle corps, including a performance during a nationally televised NFL game.

'Strong role models'

Morwood said he went to Annapolis because he wanted to fly jets. To this day, he enjoys attending the air show in Salinas — especially when the Blue Angels participate. But somewhere along the way, he got interested in medicine, in no small part because of his mother.

"I was around very strong women who've been role models. I grew up believing that women could do anything," he said.

better weather," he said.

Since then, the guy who didn't want to be with all those kids in the pediatrician's office has fixed children's and babies' cleft lips and palates all over the world.

A life-changing kiss

Morwood said that in addition to his Monterey practice, he's made 22 trips abroad, courtesy of the Monterey Rotary, to places including China, Vietnam, Africa and South and Central America. Mostly he works on youngsters — as many as 100 in two weeks — but he said that occasionally adults come by as well.

In Colombia, Morwood said, he operated on a 58-year-old man to repair his cleft lip. Up until then, "He had never kissed his wife," he said. "It was life-changing."

He hasn't neglected his love of music, either. He's a working jazz musician and the house drummer at the Monterey Hyatt.

That's where you can find him most

His success? Credit luck — and his wife

JOE TANOUS shrugs off his accomplishments as partly the result of luck. He's been "a follower," he claims, tagging along after his wife, Louise ("the brain of our relationship"), who inspired him to get an advanced education (he holds a Master's degree from UC Davis and a BFA from California College of Arts & Crafts) and then led him to many exotic venues on the other side of the world.

No doubt, his wife of 63 years is a marvel — a Ph.D. with a distinguished career as a linguist and cultural anthropologist — but the humble Tanous has also led an accomplished life.

At 92, he is the oldest active artist on the membership rolls of the Carmel Art among the original homesteaders who founded Hettinger, N.D., a town near Bismarck with fewer than 1,000 residents.

Neither parent had been educated past the age of 9, but Tanous was one of nine siblings who went to college and became doctors, teachers, and business professionals.

His brother Henry, 16 years older, became an artist who attended Minneapolis Art Institute, then worked as a Disney animator for 18 years.

"I started drawing and painting as a child, copying my brother's paintings," he said. "I did artistic things throughout my school years and might have been the only kid in our little town who did."

In June 1943, after graduating from high school, Tanous followed his siblings to Sunnyvale, but was drafted into the U.S. Army two months later.

"I got lucky," he said, repeating a common theme in his life. "They put me first into the Army's camouflage unit. When they disbanded that, some of our guys went into the infantry, but I was reassigned to the engineers. They sent me to Guam, where we built airstrips out of coral for our B-29 bombers."

From combat to cartoons

From Guam, Tanous was sent to Okinawa, where he survived a typhoon with winds that hit 180 mph before the island's wind-measuring devices broke.

"It blew planes all over the airfield. It tipped over our trucks. It blew our house away. The Quonset hut with all of our mail was torn apart and our letters wound up all over the island," Tanous recalled. "We spent the night in caves, where we sat on Japanese bombs beside these big, clay pots that were filled with the bones of dead Okinawans."

After his discharge, Tanous worked briefly at Warner Brothers, helping with animation of Daffy Duck, Tweety Bird and the Roadrunner, but didn't enjoy the job and quit.

Association, still painting regularly in the studio of the stone cottage he and Louise have owned since 1963, two minutes up the hill from the Carmel Mission.

The house was built in 1925 (the same year Tanous was born) by former Carmel mayor/writer/actor Perry Newberry out of decomposing granite boulders from Carmel's old rock quarry. Its interior is a work of art, beautifully adorned with Tanous' own paintings and sculptures and the work of many other fellow artists, as well as treasures he's collected over more than six decades from garage sales and travels. One room is devoted to Native American artifacts. A wall in a hallway is covered with masks from Africa, Mexico, Japan and China. Another section is devoted to an enormous collection of copper. An umbrella holder contains his collection of canes and walking sticks. There are swords from Ghana and Samoa.

A thinking artist

Tanous' sculptures and paintings have been exhibited in one-man shows at American University in Beirut, Lebanon (where he was an assistant professor), San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, UC Davis (where he taught Fine Arts for two years), University of Pacific, Stanford University, and other venues.

"I've probably gone through too many phases with my art," he said. "That's one of the problems with my whole career: I haven't painted consistently and developed a recognizable style. I jumped from realism to surrealism to abstract expressionism to abstractions ... and I did it without any forethought. It just happened. I guess I was a thinking artist more than a painting artist."

Tanous was one of 11 children born to parents who immigrated from Lebanon in the late 1800s and were toward an opening at an advertising agency, where he worked in the print-production department. That's when he met Louise, a Bostonian with a genius IQ who was working as a coffee shop waitress, hoping to attend UC Berkeley.

"She was part of the beatnik crowd, and she fit in better than I did, but that became our crowd, too. We met Maya Angelou and Odetta, who was performing at the Tin Angel," Tanous said. "Those were good times."

He and Louise married in 1954, and raised a son (Mark) and two daughters (Laura and Holly), who gave them seven grandchildren and a great grandchild.

Tanous remembers selling artwork as early as the mid-1960s (when he was an instructor at UC Davis), but says his career took off in 1971 after he was juried into the Carmel Art Association. At the time, he also was beginning a 20-year teaching stint at Monterey Peninsula College. He became a full-time artist in 1990, after retiring from MPC.

"I've led a lucky life, and I've kind of stumbled through it. I had no goals. Louise was the leader, and I mostly followed," he says of his wife, who taught at the University of Beirut, at UC Davis, and at Carmel High. "Fortunately, she knew where she was going."

Fisherman dies after being swept into sea

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE SEARCH for a fisherman who was swept off the rocks near Soberanes Point in Big Sur Aug. 20 has been called off. The man, whose name was not released, is presumed dead.

"We watched through yesterday," Jonathan Thornburg of the Monterey County Sheriff's Office told The Pine Cone Aug. 24. "Search operations have been suspended."

The latest in a long line of fishing-related deaths along the north Big Sur coast, incident happened in the late afternoon at Garrapata State Park, near Soberanes Point.

After a large wave swept the man into the sea, a search was launched by lifeguards and helicopter crews.

Besides the sheriff's office, the United States Coast Guard, California Highway Patrol, Cal Fire and the Mid-Coast Volunteer Fire Brigade were on scene.

Lifeguards reported difficult and dangerous conditions in the water, with poor visibility and strong currents. "It was really rough," Mid-Coast fire chief Cheryl Goetz reported.

Goetz urged the public to be careful along the coastline, where sadly, a number of fisherman have died in recent years.

"Anybody who gets near the water needs to watch the waves," she said. "Be ready for that sneaker wave, and know what your escape route will be. This is not the first time it's happened there."

The Mission Trail Athletic League also has a vastly different look than a year ago, having been split into two divisions after realignment with the now-disbanded Santa Cruz Coast Athletic League.

Gonzales, Greenfield, and Marina, who combined for a 3-18 record in 2016, have been moved to the new Mission Trail Coastal Division with Harbor, Santa Cruz, Soquel and St. Francis.

Carmel, Stevenson (4-3), Pacific Grove (5-5), Soledad (10-3), and King City (5-5) will be joined by former Santa Cruz League schools Scotts Valley and San Lorenzo Valley (combined record: 18-10-1).

"The realignment means every league game is going to be a battle," Anderson said. "We'll be in a game every week that will be worth seeing, a game that could go either way."

That means a tingle every week, and a season worth

Morwood said that he's also had fun playing at the annual Festa Italia and Monterey's birthday party, La Merienda. He said he's especially enjoyed playing with longtime accordion player Mike Marotta.

Some of the most fun he's had has been in late-night sessions at the Hyatt during the Monterey Jazz Festival. "A lot of the performers stay there," he said, and he's been up until 2 a.m. playing drums with the likes of Wynton Marsalis and George Benson.

In his spare time, he's a self-described "elliptical strider addict" and hosts a program on local TV channel AMP called "The Doctor is In," where he and other medical professionals talk about "all kinds of topics." ROUNDAABOUTS

The “Concept 1” plan was favored over alternatives, including a $300 million bypass through Fort Ord, and a $100 million plan to fully widen Highway 68. About 30,000 motorists use Highway 68 — officially called State Route 68 — between Salinas and Monterey every day.

TAMC figures that traffic along the highway will increase by about 10 percent over the next 25 years, but that the “net effect on performance will be a 70 percent increase in delay, meaning that SR 68 is at a tipping point, and each new [vehicle] trip along the corridor exacerbates existing traffic congestion exponentially,” according to the executive summary in the SR 68 Scenic Highway Plan.

“With the exception of Supervisor John Phillips, everyone voted to approve the concept plan and direct staff to work with Caltrans on the next stages of development and analysis,” Leonard said of the 16-1 vote.

Phillips “felt that a little too much focus was given on roundabouts,” he said. “He also commented that there should have been a more detailed analysis on [traffic] signals and widening” of the road.

Reduced congestion

The other board members were encouraged by the success of the new roundabout at highways 68 and 1 in Monterey which has drastically reduced congestion in the area.

“I believe several members commented on that, including [5th District] Supervisor Mary Adams,” Leonard said. “It’s good to have a marquee project to show that roundabouts alleviate traffic delays.”

In an Aug. 22 letter, land-use group LandWatch Monterey County urged the TAMC board to approve the plan, saying it would mean better traffic flow, improve public safety, cut down on air pollution, reduce greenhouse gas emissions and energy demand, and reduce wildlife fatality and vehicle-related accidents.

PANETTA

“I agree that we should not have a rapid exit from a country like Afghanistan, especially based on what we have done there for the past 16 years,” Panetta told The Pine Cone Wednesday afternoon. “But I was disappointed that there was not more detail provided by the president as to his actual strategy.”

Panetta said Trump told the American people what is already being done in Afghanistan, but he didn’t outline specifics, including what method the president would use to measure U.S. military success in the country.

“There needs to be more of a strategic outlook” said Panetta, who said Trump has also failed to release a National Security Strategy — a document from the executive branch that articulates the country’s interests abroad, its goals, and its security objectives.

4,000 more troops

Trump did not say Monday how many troops he would send to Afghanistan, and has said he would not disclose specific strategies, in order to prevent the enemy from preparing a response. But senior officials have said he has approved 4,000 troops in addition to the more than 8,000 already there.

Panetta, who served in Afghanistan with a special operations task force and is a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said he’s seen close-up the challenges the United States faces in meeting its objectives in its longest war. He suggested the military should concentrate on focused operations such as eliminating high value Taliban targets.

“I saw that when you have very targeted, very focused, very intelligence-driven operations, things can get done,” said Panetta, who received a Bronze Star for meritorious service in a combat zone. “I saw it succeed when I was there in 2007 and 2008, and we have heard about these kinds of successes in the Middle East” with the same types of operations.

Trump said Monday that he was frustrated by a foreign policy that has “spent too much time, energy, money and most importantly, lives, trying to rebuild countries in our own image instead of pursuing our security interests above all other considerations.”

While Trump has long called for an American withdrawal from Afghanistan, he conceded that the consequences of a “rapid exit are both predictable and unacceptable.”

BENTLEY

She couldn’t hear what they were saying, but it appeared they were “trying to be nice” to the driver as they talked to him.

“Then they did the line test,” she said, referring to one of the field sobriety tests for drunken drivers. “He failed.” He didn’t fall over but was clearly wobbly as he attempted to walk a straight line in heel-to-toe steps, according to Perry.

At that point, she said, he seemed to become belligerent. “Then they had him put his hands behind his back, and they handcuffed him,” she said. “He kept talking the whole time.”

“By then, we were all laughing so hard,” she said.

The Bentley had manufacturer’s plates, according to Tersol, and had to be towed with a flatbed truck.

Carmel Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff’s Office have no records of the incident or the arrest. The local offices of the California Highway Patrol and California State Parks did not answer repeated requests for information, so the driver’s name is unknown, but a CHP officer told The Pine Cone he heard the driver was cited and released.

Being a tour guide during the chaos and congestion of Concours Week

THE TEXT message came from my Florida cousin three weeks ago:

“We’re visiting San Francisco and Napa for our 50th anniversary. Then driving to Monterey on August 17.”

“Uh oh,” I thought. “Not only are they coming in the middle of Car Week, they’re coming on one of the busiest days.” I was thinking, of course, of the day when the Tour d’Elegance wends its 70-mile route through the Peninsula, including a stop on Ocean Avenue.

Subsequent conversations with cousin Christina indicated they were completely unaware of the Concours when they were planning their trip.

“How did you even get a room?” I asked. She replied that it was difficult, but they did find something. “I thought it was kind of pricey,” she told me. “But I figured it was just because this is such a popular tourist area.”

I didn’t have the heart to tell her they probably paid a triple rate. As it turned out, I was wrong. They paid a quadruple rate for a room that was smaller than Burt Lancaster’s in “Bird Man of Alcatraz.”

I love having out-of-state company who have never visited our scenic Peninsula. But during Concours week? How would we even get a restaurant reservation? How would I conduct my standard tour — Carmel, Scenic Drive, the Lodge at Pebble Beach and photographing the famous 18th Hole? And, of course, the Lone Cypress and Big Sur.

I had seen Christina 10 years ago at a family reunion, but the last time I saw her husband, Ron, was at their wedding a half century ago.

Hey wait! They’re coming to see me. The wonders of our area are adjunct attractions. But then, as an attraction, I have a shelf life of about 20 minutes. Not trying to show them the splendor we live amidst was not an option. Ron had been stationed at Vandenberg Air Force Base before they were married. He remembered how he loved driving here on weekends. He had extolled the beauty of the Monterey Peninsula to his bride, and now wanted sharing that beauty with her to be an integral part of their anniversary trip.

So, what’s a poor tour guide to do? My motto became: Damn the traffic — half speed ahead. I was going to make their 50th anniversary celebration trip an affair to remember. And why the Butterfly House, and stop to spend time at Paul and Marcia Shortt’s memorial bench with the mailbox with journals under it. We lingered on the bench while Christina wrote something in one of the journals. We were the only ones there. I felt like Rod Serling, traveling through another dimension, a dimension not only of sight and sound, but of mind.

Next, we cut back though Carmel to enter Pebble Beach through the Carmel Gate. I expected throngs at the Lone Cypress but there was only one tour bus and a half-dozen cars. We were able to descend the stairs to the viewing platform and having a private viewing of that iconic landmark.

Back to the Lodge. We parked about a block away. Hardly anyone was inside. Attendants scurried to open doors for us. We went out on the terrace where my cousins took pictures of the famous 18th Hole. A few BMWs obscured part of the view of the green, but we worked around them.

Minutes later we were on Highway 1 South, headed for Rocky Point. Once again, the parking lot was almost empty. Any table in the restaurant was ours for the taking. Since it was too hot to sit outside, we chose a table by a window. There, we were able to linger awhile, enjoying the scenery and talking about old times without worrying about a dozen others waiting for our table.

Had my cousins not visited, I would have hunkered down at home subsisting on Spam, Jolt Cola and microwave popcorn, fearing to venture out into the dark, forbidding space known as the Concours Zone. It was great seeing them. I hope they return soon.

I might even be able to persuade them to come back during the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am.

not? Folks often tell me I remind them of Cary Grant.

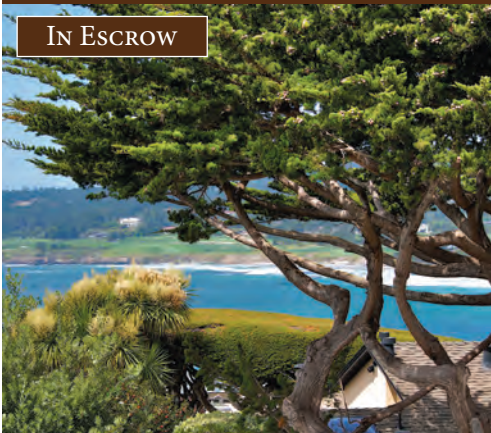

A hearty breakfast at the Wild Plum in Monterey prepared us for whatever lay ahead. We piled into my 20-year-old Toyota d’Inelegance and headed south on Highway 1. I could see a backup forming south of Carpenter Street, so I veered off, taking the truck route into Carmel. There were surprisingly few other cars going that way.

Ocean Avenue was blocked off, as were the cross streets at Sixth, but I was able to cruise down Sixth to Monte Verde, across Ocean and down Eighth to Scenic Road. We parked so they could take some pictures. Yes, we parked! There were dozens of spaces.

Then I drove slowly down Scenic without anyone behind me trying to rush me along. We were able to see Tor House,
