Come along with us to Rancho Sparkle Pony ...

By MICHAEL TROUTMAN

IN THE heat and dust of the Black Rock Desert in Nevada last week an ephemeral city arose, drawing participants from around the world — including the Monterey Bay area — for the annual celebration of life, love and art known as Burning Man.

Almost impossible to describe, Black Rock City is most easily understood as a temporary civilization with its own culture, ethos and way of life that draws upon the creativity of its citizens and is guided by 10 principles that inform and steer the society. Among the many 70,000 inspired citizens at the nine-day event was Celsius Maximus, a personal trainer from Pacific Grove.

A core member of camp Rancho Sparkle Pony (one of thousands of theme camps, small and large, in Black Rock City), Maximus not only directs and creates fire spinning performances, but also regularly brings his pet dinosaur/art car, “StegaTron,” to not only Burning Man but also the Feast of Lanterns and Holiday Parade of Lights in Pacific Grove.

“When I go to Black Rock each year, the spirit and creativity of Burning Man becomes more permanent in my life in the ‘default’ world,” said Maximus. “Ultimately, I hope to inspire others to release the intense creativity in their everyday lives that may be lying dormant in their souls.”

Another regular participant here is Darlene von Maschmeier, a member of the fire spinning troupe

Panetta says he won't bargain DACA for wall

■ Press conference set for Hartnell College Saturday

By KELLY NIX

STRIKING A deal with House Republicans that would provide some funding for President Donald Trump's border wall in exchange for allowing “Dreamers” legal status is a nonstarter, said Congressman Jimmy Panetta, joining other Democrat leaders in rejecting the proposal.

Although the White House's announcement Tuesday to revoke President Barack Obama's 2013 Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program was seen by GOP leaders as a catalyst for compromise on immigration reform, Panetta said any plan that would include helping pay for the roughly 2,000-mile wall is not an option he would entertain.

“I would not agree to bargaining the lives of these students who have come here, not on their own volition, and are contributing to our society,” Panetta told The Pine Cone Wednesday. DACA was “the right thing to do” he said, “so why do we need to leverage to do the right thing?”

Obama instituted the executive order, which gave protection from deportation and work permits to young people who were brought into the country illegally by their parents. Of the estimated 800,000 DACA recipients in the country, about 20,000 Dreamers reside in Monterey County, Panetta said.

In a statement Tuesday supporting his decision, which gives Congress until March to work out a replacement for

Teacher housing at tiny Big Sur school is in bad shape

By CHRIS COUNTS

ONE OF California's smallest school districts is facing a big challenge housing its teachers.

Stretching for 35 miles along Big Sur's South Coast, the Big Sur Unified School District may be large, geographically speaking. But it has just one school — the Pacific Valley School — and only 11 students, ranging from kindergarten to high school.

It also has six teachers, but since housing is virtually nonexistent on the south Monterey County coast, the school relies on three aging trailers to provide a place to live. One is a camping trailer with a hitch, while the other two are “very old and non-functional” RVs, superintendent and principal Gordon Piffero told The Pine Cone.

A camper with a hitch and two ‘very old and non-functional RVs’

When asked how bad a shape the trailers are in, Piffero didn't mince words. “I wouldn't live in them,” he said. He lives on the school site in what he described as a “mini home” built for him after a local fundraiser.

No similar campaign is yet under way to raise money to replace the trailers — in part because district officials are still trying to figure out how to do it. The district also needs to replace trailers that house its administration and pantry/shop, so five buildings are needed in all.

The options being considered include some combination of new trailers, used trailers and even tiny houses. The principal estimates that at least $100,000 will be needed.

The school's district's fundraising options are limited. Piffero said passing a bond measure “would be virtually impossible” in a district where most of the land is owned by the government. Meanwhile, one of the school's biggest sources of financial support, the Big Sur Jade Festival, was canceled last year due to the Soberanes Fire and the storm damage to Highway 1 that followed. The school provides a site for the festival.

It's uncertain if this year's jade festival — set for Oct. 5-7 — will happen because the scenic route will need to be open from Carmel all the way to Pacific Valley. For now, the site can only be reached by taking a very arduous route along Nacimiento-Fergusson Road.

Piffero said two others issues make it difficult to build anything at the school: The property is owned by the United States Forest Service and contains an archaeological site.

“If we do any digging here, somebody has to be here watching,” Piffero added.

It's difficult to imagine that there's a school district in California with just 11 students, but Big Sur Unified doesn't have the smallest student body in the state, which has seven school districts with fewer than 10 students — according to the California Department of Education.

At its peak enrollment, Pacific Valley School had 57 students, but that number has plummeted as skyrocketing housing costs and a limited job market have deterred young families from moving to the area. Last year's graduating class had just three students, including one, Fiona Harlan-Buzzard, who is now attending UCLA.

Kayaker captures ‘whale party’ off Pt. Lobos

By CHRIS COUNTS

RIDING IN a kayak that he launched from Carmel River State Beach, Carmel resident Mark Campbell captured a very close encounter he had with humpback whales near Point Lobos State Reserve Sept. 2.

“It was like a party at sea,” Campbell told The Pine Cone as he described the scene. “The whales were feeding very actively. There were hundreds of sea lions shoulder to shoulder in the water, and birds flying above the whales. It was a magnificent experience — I had never seen anything like it before, and I get out into nature a lot.”

Three or four other kayakers were in the ocean at the time, but “I was the one with really good zoom lens,” noted Campbell, who was traveling with a friend at the time.

Because he was carrying a powerful camera, Campbell was able to get great images without getting too close to the massive mammals. The National Marine Fisheries Service urges people

HOW HOT WAS IT? VERY!

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE THERMOMETERS up and down the coast told the story, last weekend's heat wave could also be measured by the number of people who put on their swim suits and sunscreen and headed for the ocean.

“I've never seen Carmel Beach so crowded,” Mayor Steve Dallas told The Pine Cone.

Often covered by a cool blanket of fog in late summer, the Monterey Peninsula sizzled last weekend as a record-breaking heat wave swept across the state.

Tiny twosome

THEY COULD have gone out to dinner, maybe seen a movie, or found a place to go dancing. But they didn't. They stayed home on that Saturday night and turned on the television, which changed everything. What came up on the screen was an SPCA telethon, and they didn't change the channel.

There he was, a 7-week-old Pomeranian-Chihuahua mix the shelter was calling "Nash," whose face said, "Come get me." They were at the SPCA first thing the next morning to collect the sleek little thing they renamed "Rico Suave."

"We see no Pomeranian in Rico, except maybe his reddish-brown color," said his person. "He has a strong stance, like he might be part miniature pinscher, but he has the big Chihuahua ears."

Whatever he is, at 3, Rico's turned into a loving protector of his people.

The couple didn't stop at Rico. Deciding he needed a playmate, they picked up Casey, a 3-pound they-don't-know-what and renamed her Mili Graham. Fully grown at 6 pounds, she has a bit of a miniature schnauzer face and maybe some Chihuahua mixed in, but they really don't know.

"Raising two puppies is like raising twins," their person said. "If one listens to us and the other doesn't, they both get a treat. It's just easier. Mili's the sassy one, and Rico's a little shy, so he usually complies, and yet she scores the treat."

Although they live in Salinas, both dogs like to go to the beach. Their people settle into the sand, and they stay nearby, digging to their hearts' content.

"We keep them on a leash," said their person, "since we're not sure they'd come when we call. One time, a big puppy came running up and rolled Rico. It was all in play, but an 11-pound dog just doesn't stand a chance against a 60-pound puppy. We have to be able to pick them up, fast."

GOATS CHEW UP FIRE-PRONE BRUSH, GO EASY ON COUNTY COFFERS

By CHRIS COUNTS

WIDELY KNOWN for their indiscriminating appetites, goats will eat just about anything — including, thankfully, the dense, fire-prone vegetation that surrounds homes throughout Monterey County.

County officials rented about 300 goats in May and June to clear 26 acres of open space within the the Oak Hills neighborhood in north Monterey County. While the animals are a common site in Del Monte Forest, this marked the first time the county has used goats for fire clearance. Not only did the work create spectacle, it saved county taxpayers a significant chunk of a change.

Several years ago, the same open space was mowed at a cost of more than $1,000 per acre. This summer, the goats were able to do the work for less than $500 an acre.

“They did a better job than any human crew could do,” said Bryan Flores, who works for the county managing projects within its special districts. “They ate the poison oak to the ground, and they brought the canopy of the oak trees up so that fire can’t jump from the ground, to the trees, and to homes.”

The goats were supplied to the county by Goats R Us, an Orinda-based company that uses them to reduce or eradicate vegetation. Placed within a small fenced-in area, the goats devour brush and weeds until the site is cleared, and then the enclosure is moved — along with the goats.

When the goats needed to be moved across roads within the neighborhood, residents turned out to help them make their way across the pavement.

The goats devoured a variety of noxious or invasive plants, including genista, Italian thistle and even hemlock. “They mowed through that stuff like butter,” Flores said of the latter.

Because they eat everything in sight, the goats also don’t have to be fed. “They work for food,” county spokesperson Maia Carroll joked.

But they need lots of water. Over the course of the 25-day Oak Hills project, they consumed about 5,000 gallons of water.

Unlike the human alternative, the goats make little noise when they work.

“The only thing you can hear is them chewing,” explained Flores, who compared the sound to that of a swarm of bees.

And as an added bonus, the goats removed much of the trash in the area as well. “I even saw one chewing on a tin can lid,” Flores reported.

The goats did such a good job in the Oak Hills neighborhood, the county plans to rent them again for other weed control projects.

“The feedback was so great, we’re looking at using them in county parks and at Nacimiento Lake,” Flores said.

Verdicts, pleas and sentencings announced by Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo

July 11 — Brandon Rashad Beaver, 36, of Sacramento, was sentenced to four years and four months in state prison for beating his pregnant girlfriend and assaulting her with a semi-automatic firearm.

On January 8, Beaver's live-in girlfriend went to Marina Police Department with two black eyes, visible facial bruising, and blood in her eyeball. She was six months pregnant with Beaver's child. The victim said that two days earlier, Beaver had accused her of cheating on him, grabbed her by the neck, and threw her down onto their bed. Beaver struck her in the face approximately 10 times until she bled from her nose.

She was unable to get off of the bed because Beaver was lying on top of her.

Beaver then got off of the victim, retrieved a semiautomatic handgun, and pointed the gun in her face. He told her, "You'd better admit it, or else." He threatened to strike the victim with the handgun before hitting her three to four more times with his closed fist.

When Beaver was arrested, he was found in possession of a methamphetamine pipe, and a box of ammunition was also found in his bedroom. Beaver was prohibited by law from owning or possessing firearms or ammunition based on multiple prior felony convictions, including a 2013 felony domestic violence charge out of Sacramento, where he was still on probation for inflicting injury on a different girlfriend.

Beaver pleaded guilty to one count of inflicting corporal injury on a cohabitant, with an enhancement that he had previously been convicted of a domestic violence offense, and one count of assault with a semiautomatic firearm. He was sentenced by Judge Carrie M. Panetta.

July 13 — Monica Isaura Longoria, 38, of Salinas, was sentenced to two years and eight months in prison for breaking a family friend's arm with a chair and falsely imprisoning her during an argument.

On October 26, 2016, Longoria was on a day pass from a residential treatment program when she went to her family residence and got into an argument with a 60-year-old family friend who was staying there. Longoria threw a chair at the woman, which struck her in the arm and fractured her ulna. Longoria then forced the victim facedown onto the couch, got on the woman's back, and punched her multiple times in the head. A relative of Longoria's observed the altercation and called police.

Judge Carrie M. Panetta sentenced Longoria to two years and eight months in prison following her guilty pleas to battery causing serious bodily injury and false imprisonment by violence.

July 18 — Salinas resident Iroenia Pacheco-Mandujano entered a guilty plea to felony welfare fraud before Judge Carrie Panetta. The defendant defrauded $22,321.00 from the Monterey County Department of Social Services.

Between 2011 and 2014 the defendant received community benefits from MCDSS for her and her three minor children. When Ms. Pacheco-Mandujano initially applied for aid, she declared under oath that the father of her children was not living in the home and only making small child support contributions. An anonymous complaint was made on the Monterey County's District Attorney's Office Welfare Fraud Tip Line that alleged that Ms. Pacheco-Mandujano's husband was in the home and was employed and that she was operating a beauty salon and not reporting that income to MCDSS. The Monterey County District Attorney's Office Welfare Fraud unit launched an investigation and confirmed the anonymous tip. The defendant's husband, father to her three children, had always lived in the home and was employed the entire time defendant reported him absent. Investigators also confirmed that defendant owned a beauty salon that she never reported.

Ms. Pacheco-Mandujano will be sentenced on August 24 by Judge Carrie Panetta. It is expected that Ms. Pacheco-Mandujano will receive a grant of formal probation for three years and will be required to pay restitution in full. She faces up to 364 days in county jail if placed on probation.

It is illegal to use benefits belonging to another or benefits obtained using misrepresentations. Monterey County Department of Social Services along with Monterey County District Attorney's Office has a Welfare Fraud tip line. If you have information regarding welfare fraud you can leave an anonymous tip at (831)755-3224.

BIG SUR HOMEOWNER SAYS FIRE CAUSED BY SOMEONE WHO BROKE IN

By CHRIS COUNTS

A FIRE that threatened a Big Sur neighborhood last week is under investigation, and the homeowner suggested it was started by someone who burglarized his home.

“There was a break-in, and someone started a fire,” reported John Kraszneczewicz, who was out of town when the incident happened. “It burned down one of the original structures I built 30 years ago.”

The fire started Aug. 30 at about 1:30 a.m. A quick response by the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade and others stopped the blaze from spreading after it scorched about half of an acre. It was extinguished before sunrise — and many locals didn’t realize it had happened until much later in the day.

“They did an amazing job,” said Kraszneczewicz said of the effort to put out the fire.

Now, the homeowner would like to see the culprit caught.

“Whoever did this put a major section of Big Sur at risk,” he explained. “It was an irresponsible and reckless act.”

The neighborhood where the fire started, near Pfeiffer Beach, is one of the few in Big Sur that hasn’t burned in recent years. As a result, the fire could have been disastrous since structures along Pfeiffer Point are located just a short distance away, as is Rancho Rico and the Post Ranch Inn.

Big Sur fire chief Martha Karstens credited neighbor Celia Sandborn with alerting firefighters. Both Karstens and Sandborn lost their homes in the 2013 Pfeiffer Fire.

The Aug. 30 fire wasn’t the only incident last week that reminded locals that the threat of fire is just a spark away. Despite countless signs informing the public where camping — and particularly, campfires — are not allowed, the practice of both continues in Big Sur, where 57 homes were burned down during last summer’s Soberanes Fire.

A Palo Colorado area resident spotted an illegal campfire last week along Dowd Creek not far from Garrapata Beach. Later, two abandoned campfires were found nearby, including one that was set up dangerously close to vegetation.

Also last week, someone started an illegal campfire just inches from a pile of flammable redwood duff near the Big Sur Grange Hall in the heart of Big Sur Valley.

Golf tournament yields $1M for vets

A GOLF tournament hosted by the Naval Postgraduate School Foundation and held in Pebble Beach in August raised $1.25 million for wounded veterans, a spokeswoman for the foundation told The Pine Cone.

The 12th annual America’s Heroes Charity Golf Tournament at the Dunes and Shores courses of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club. The golf scramble drew players from around the country.

Among the organizations benefitting were the foundation that supports the Naval Postgraduate School, the Injured Marine Semper Fi Fund, and the Navy Seal Foundation, which supports the Naval Special Warfare community and its families.

The event kicked off Aug. 15 with a golf clinic by pro-golfer Amy Alcott and a keynote speech from former Navy Admiral Jonathon Greenert, talk by Blaine Scott, who recounted his injuries sustained in an IED blast in Iraq and his subsequent recovery.

A live auction attended by nearly 300 guests, and a “Fund-A-Cause” fundraiser, helped bring in more than $1.25 million for wounded veterans and their families.

Shopkeeper's Old Glory becomes target second time in four years

By KELLY NIX

SOMEONE KEEPS vandalizing a Carmel store owner's Stars and Stripes and she's understandably annoyed.

Linens & Such owner Meredith Crowell said that someone made a "serious attempt" to steal the American flag over Labor Day weekend. If that wasn't bad enough, Crowell said it's the second time the red, white and blue at her store has been a target.

"My flag was stolen on Labor Day 2013," Crowell told The Pine Cone. "In that theft, the flagpole was actually broken off."

In the most recent incident, it appears the vandal grabbed onto the flagpole and used his weight to pull down on it. The plate and bracket that mount the pole to building were bent, leaving the flag — which was still on the pole — hanging about 3 feet lower where it's supposed to.

"It's bizarre that it would happen twice," Crowell said. "I think they wanted the flag to take it to the beach."

After the flag was taken four years ago, she hired a retired welder to strengthen the pole and hardware, including the mount plate, so it would be hard to steal. He also used extra long screws to attach the plate to the building.

Those efforts succeeded, but it didn't prevent the flagpole from being damaged.

Crowell reported the incident to the Carmel Police Department. However, because there are no surveillance cameras positioned nearby, it's unlikely the perpetrator will be caught.

On Wednesday, before Crowell had a chance to repair it, she said someone used string to tie the flag back toward the building — presumably so it would no longer wave in the faces of those walking by.

Crowell's affection for the flag — which she has flown at the various area storefronts she's occupied since starting her business in 1996 — stems from her youth.

"I grew up with the flag flying at my house," said Crowell makes custom bed, bath and dining linens. "My dad was in the service and he just loved the flag."

Linens & Such owner Meredith Crowell gestures to the American flag she hangs outside her store, the pole of which was vandalized last weekend.

Officers recognized for using antidote to save life

By KELLY NIX

JUST A few days after Pacific Grove Police officers were given the OK to start carrying the drug that counteracts the effects of opioid drug overdoses, Sgt. Jeff Fenton and Officer Billy Hawkins used it to save someone's life.

On July 31, Fenton and Hawkins responded to a call for a possible drug overdose of a man on Lighthouse Avenue. Remarkably, officers only started carrying Narcan — a medication in a nasal spray form that's used to quickly reverse effects of an opioid overdose — four days prior.

"As I was responding, it was already going through my head to use [Narcan] if what was dispatched was true," Fenton told The Pine Cone Wednesday afternoon. "When I arrived, I recognized the subject as someone I have responded to previously for overdose calls."

The 30-year-old man was unresponsive. And while the officers weren't certain what drugs he had taken — and Narcan is only effective on opioids, such as morphine, codeine and Vicodin — Fenton decided they should give it a try.

"I opened the package and prepped it as my partner checked the man's condition, Fenton said. Hawkins "then administered one spray. No change. A second dose was given. No change. As the medics were bringing a gurney down, [the man] reacted to the Narcan and regained consciousness."

Fenton said that a friend of the man said he had used heroin, which the victim himself confirmed when he regained consciousness. "He was alert and totally aware when placed in the ambulance," Fenton said.

The man has since made a full recovery "due to the actions of our officers," according to a statement from the city.

At Wednesday night's Pacific Grove City Council meeting, Police Chief Amy Christey presented Hawkins and Fenton with an award of merit for their efforts in administering Narcan to the man.

Fenton, who could not be at the ceremony, told The Pine Cone Thursday morning that officers in the department "do great work every day for the community of Pacific Grove."

"To be honored in this way with my co-workers will be a highlight of my career," he said.

Fenton explained that the Narcan training officers underwent was designed for incidents involving with fentanyl, a highly potent opioid pain medication.

Pacific Grove Police Cmdr. Rory Lakind said Narcan costs about $37 per dose and has a shelf life of two years.

"It's another tool in our toolbox," Lakind told The Pine Cone.

Monterey County Emergency Medical Services approved Pacific Grove Police Department's 19 officers to use the medication.

A 2015 Centers for Disease Control and Prevention study claimed the drug had saved 27,000 lives since it was introduced.

This nasal spray can save lives, and it was put to use by P.G. Police officers in July on a person who overdosed on heroin.

Forest Friends hold tree walks

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE FRIENDS of Carmel Forest have organized two Carmel Tree Walks for Saturday, Sept. 9, from 10 to 11:30 a.m., and 1 to 2:30 p.m.

The walks, which start at Piccadilly Park on Dolores Street south of Ocean Avenue, will be led by Sairus Patel, a board member of Pacific Horticulture and former board member of Canopy, a nonprofit founded to protect the urban forest in Palo Alto.

A guest lecturer at Stanford University,

Patel has led tree walks for various programs.

He's a "lifelong tree enthusiast and a passionate gardener," according to organizers, who said Patel has described the diversity of trees on Carmel's streets as "remarkable, blending iconic native species now known worldwide with exotics that seem to thrive locally."

Admission is free for Friends of Carmel Forest members, and $20 for nonmembers. To reserve a space, RSVP to treewalk@carmelforest.org.

Monterey bar owner to open brewpub

By KELLY NIX

THERE HAS long been talk about opening a brewpub in downtown Pacific Grove and it appears that's finally going to happen.

After 17th Street Grille — which operated on Lighthouse and 17th Avenue for at least a dozen years — suddenly closed a couple of weeks ago, an application to sell alcohol indicates that its replacement will be the Monarch Pub and Restaurant.

The Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control notice lists Paul Francis Whitecross, who co-owns Britannia Arms Pub and Restaurant in Monterey, as the applicant.

Before the ABC sign was conspicuously placed on the building, Pacific Grove Chamber of Commerce president Moe Ammar and the city's community and economic development director, Mark Brodeur, told The Pine Cone they were bound by secrecy and couldn't reveal the name of the new business.

Now that the word is out, Ammar said this week that he's "happy that the last dry town in California will have a pub."

"Over the years, the P.G. Chamber has conducted surveys of residents asking for the type of businesses that we need in town," Ammar explained. "A pub has always been in the top two," the other being a car wash.

"We are grateful that the property owner and manager were willing to consider a change at the site."

The property has an outdoor patio with seating, which would seem to lend itself to a pub. The interior of the older building will need renovating before the new business opens, though, and a fresh coat of paint wouldn't hurt.

Brodeur said a pub "will begin to enliven" downtown Pacific Grove. The new business doesn't need a use permit from the city because the property is permitted for beer and wine and food, he said.

"We are certainly hopeful that we will see [the pub's owners] in our department soon to make some building or site improvements, but nothing has come in yet," Brodeur told The Pine Cone Wednesday.

Ammar said that Pacific Grove Downtown Business Improvement District chairman Tom McMahon helped encourage Whitecross to consider Pacific Grove for the business. He said Whitecross has a "great reputation" and is "respected by all."

"The tourist centers in P.G. will be able to recommend a local pub instead of referring visitors" to bars outside the city, Ammar said. "The name Monarch is very creative. It alludes to the British monarchy as well P.G. monarch butterflies. Paul will do very well in P.G."

Shot hawk is improving, SPCA says

By KELLY NIX

THE HAWK found in south Monterey County Aug. 7 with numerous pellet shots, a broken wing and badly lacerated leg is eating and showing a lot of improvement after having surgery two weeks ago, SPCA for Monterey County spokeswoman Beth Brookhouser told The Pine Cone.

The fate of the red-tailed hawk, which could not fly when it was discovered in King City, has been touch-and-go. Brookhouser reported Aug. 23 that the bird wasn't eating on its own and that its leg was not healing and was getting worse, troubling signs. But after surgery to remove some of the pellets and fix other injuries, the bird, over time, has improved. He's now eating on his own.

"Thankfully, the hawk's wound is closing well," Brookhouser said Tuesday. "We moved him into a small outdoor aviary for fresh air and reduced stress. We are doing laser therapy on the wound to help it heal."

Because of his sensitive medical condition, SPCA officials had not been able to take a new photograph of the hawk.

Employees with the SPCA's Wildlife Rescue and Rehabilitation Center had been force feeding the hawk into its crop, with the hope that he would eventually eat on his own. The bird has also been given pain medication and antibiotics.

A citizen on Aug. 7 found the bird of prey in a King City intersection, before the animal was taken to the SPCA for recovery. The animal welfare organization is offering a $1,000 reward leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the bird's injuries, that include a pellet shot to his head.

Call the SPCA at (831) 373-2631 with information. Calls are kept confidential.

Commission turns down bid to rezone site for home

By CHRIS COUNTS

AFTER LISTENING to a handful of neighbors, the Monterey County Planning Commission denied a request by a Carmel Highlands property owner to rezone 2 acres of a 30-acre parcel to make it possible to build a home.

Both Carmel area planning commissioners, Martha Diehl and Keith Vandevere, voted against rezoning the land.

Located at 83 Mount Devon Road, the site is about a third of a mile west of the Highlands Inn.

James G. Collins wants to construct a 2,397-square-foot, three-level single family dwelling an attached garage. But the property is zoned for resource conservation, where allowed uses don't include building a home. Complicating matters is the fact that the house would be built on slopes steeper than 30 percent.

The parcel was once part of a larger property belonging to the Behavioral Studies Institute. Architect Rob Carver said the Collins home would be the last one built on it — and he said the original plan called for twice as many houses.

Representing the homeowner, attorney Michael Harrington insisted the California Coastal Commission identified the property as one suitable for a home.

"This is not a greedy landowner trying to make a quick buck," Harrington said. "We're not proposing a strip mall here."

Seven speakers, mostly neighbors, followed Harrington and spoke out against the zoning change, with several suggesting that the intent of the conservation easement was to keep the land from being developed. One man said that "to approve the change in zoning and ask for a variance" would set a precedent, while another man insisted the issues are more complicated than some realize. "You're stepping into 50 years of history," he warned.

After public testimony, Diehl made a motion to deny the request to rezone the property.

"I move that we adopt denial," she said. "Based on the evidence in the record, the intent was preservation of the property. There's no overwhelming public interest in changing the zoning."

in the water to stay at least 100 yards from a whale.

"You have to respect the animals and give them distance," explained the man, who described himself as a "semi-pro" photographer. "For safety reasons, you shouldn't be any closer."

Sightings of humpback whales have been common in recent weeks along Monterey County's coastline. They can be up to 52 feet long and weigh nearly 80,000 pounds.

"We're getting a lot of humpbacks near the shore," reported Nancy Black, a marine biologist who owns Monterey Bay Whale Watch. "They've been following the anchovies. There have been some really good sightings."

On a Sept. 6 whale watching trip in Monterey Bay, 20 humpbacks were sighted. Black estimates that there are "easily over 100" humpbacks now residing in the bay.

Black said sightings of blue whales have been common a little farther out to sea. The massive mammals can measure up to 100 feet long, and weigh as much as 300,000 pounds.

"It's been a great year for blue whales, which are the largest animal on Earth," she said. "They can be found over the edge of the canyon where the krill concentrate."

Black said whale watching conditions are rarely better than they are now.

"It's a great time to see whales — not just because of the great weather, but because it's been so calm," she added.

This humpback whale was photographed by a kayaker near Point Lobos last weekend. It is believed that more than 100 humpbacks are in Monterey Bay.

DACA

DACA, at which point the Dreamers would lose their work permits and be eligible for deportation, Trump said it's his "duty to defend the American people and the Constitution."

"At the same time, I do not favor punishing children, most of whom are now adults, for the actions of their parents," Trump said. "But we must also recognize that we are nation of opportunity because we are a nation of laws."

Panetta said he would be open to compromise with Republicans about what he called "smart border security," a "change in the visa process" and a "pathway to citizenship." On Thursday, the freshman congressman made a roughly 1-minute speech in support of DACA and its recipients on the House floor.

"Their mothers and fathers came to the Central Coast to work hard and contribute to the economies and communities in the Salad Bowl of the World, in the most scenic place in the world, so that their children could have the opportunity to live the American dream," Panetta said — a dream DACA would provide them "the opportunity to come out of the shadows and fulfill."

'Pass it soon'

He also called on his colleagues on Capitol Hill to pass the Dream Act, introduced in 2001 by Democratic Sen. Dick Durbin and Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch, but which for 16 years has failed to gain any traction.

"We need to pass the Act as soon as possible," Panetta said. "If the Dream Act was put on the floor of the House of Representatives, it would pass. And if it was put before the Senate, it would pass."

In breaking news Thursday, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi announced to the press that Trump told her that he'd sign the Dream Act if it passed Congress.

The announcement to rescind DACA, made by United States Attorney General Jeff Sessions, sparked emotional outrage among many on the left, including Dublin Democratic Rep. Eric Swalwell, who said it was "racist," and Pennsylvania Sen. Bob Casey, Jr., who called revocation of DACA "immoral." Panetta wouldn't go that far, but used another adjective to describe the move.

"Look, I just think that this type of decision is compassionless, and is basically pulling the rug out from these young men and women," Panetta said.

Concerning the legality of DACA, which Republicans have long questioned, Sessions called it unconstitutional and said it was a way for the executive branch "to achieve what the legislative branch specifically refused to authorize on multiple occasions."

Even Sen. Dianne Feinstein expressed doubt as to its legality this week, saying DACA is on shaky ground.

Panetta, an attorney, is also not sure of the program's Constitutionality. "I think the courts will make that decision," he said.

Asked why he opposes Trump's wall, which Republicans say would not only prevent more people from entering the country illegally, but would also reduce injuries and deaths related to such crossings, Panetta had this to say: "I think Democrats and Republicans are for border security, and of course we want border security, but we want it in a smart way and a technologically advanced way that protects the border and keeps people safe. But we want immigration reform, too, and all we've heard from the administration is 'build a wall and Mexico is going to pay for it.'"

Meanwhile, on Sept. 9 at 10 a.m., Panetta will hold a press conference at Hartnell College in Salinas to discuss the decision to phase out DACA. Panetta will be joined by other DACA recipients enrolled at the college. Hartnell has 800 such students.

BURNING

BiG SuRCuS, based in Big Sur. Darlene made the long trek a couple of weeks ago to the Oregon Eclipse Festival to be with Big Sur friends and family, and then migrated straight from the dusty prairie there to the dusty lake bed of Burning Man.

"I feel it's really special to have this freedom where we can engage in paradigm shifts," she said. "To come from the experience of totality in Oregon and to witness the raw beauty of international collaboration at both of these gatherings. We are bringing that understanding back home with us."

Paraglider, BASE jumper and aerialist Cyn Currie from Monterey was at Rancho Sparkle Pony too. "Camping with my regional Monterey crew at Burning Man really helps create the sense of community and togetherness," Currie said. "Spending a week camping in the desert does make me appreciate the beauty of our stunning Monterey coast. I'm looking forward to paragliding back on the dunes next week!"

Experiencing 'powerful creativity'

Carly LaFontaine, a Monterey DJ, was part of a fire spinning performance with Celsius, StegaTron and crew in "Kidsville," a small neighborhood at Burning Man composed entirely of families with their children.

"It meant the world to me to come out with my Monterey Burner crew that I met at our local regional and all support each other with music and performance art. It was truly beautiful," said LaFontaine.

Alicia Tao, organizer of the MPYRE regional Burning Man on Del Monte Beach, helped arrange the event in Kidsville.

"I love the opportunity for my kids to experience the powerful creativity, extreme climate and the pure magic that happens when the community comes together for a week and becomes a family," Tao said. "It is much more difficult to create this spirit in the default world at home. Being here is challenging, intense and beautiful."

Monterey native Deja Solis summed it up this way: "Burning Man is a place to reunite with your inner being, tap into your inspiration through expression and self-discovery, and make true connections with the eyes and hearts of an open and gracious community. By letting go of previous expectations of identity, we can really be present with this gift of life!"

Tragically, participants at the end of this year's event experienced death as well. Aaron Joel Mitchell, a first-time "burner," died Sunday morning after running through security perimeters and into the conflagration consuming the Man. Mitchell was airlifted to UC Davis Firefighters Burn Institute Regional Burn Center after being pulled from the flames by fire crew personnel.

"We're aware this incident has affected not only those who responded immediately on the scene, but also those who witnessed it, and our Black Rock City community more broadly," was part of the statement released by the Burning Man organization the following morning. "Now is a time for closeness, contact and community."

Andrew Johnstone, architect of the Man, expressed his feelings in this way: "I usually leave the desert with great stories and wonderful images to share but I am devastated beyond words by the tragedy of a man ending his own life by entering the fire. As the designer, I know I speak for the whole crew of builders as we pour out our love and sorrow for his family and friends. Heartbroken."

An impressive sculpture called "The Man" (left) was housed for the first time in a temple-like pagoda at this year's Burning Man in the Nevada desert. When the sculpture and the pagoda were ceremonially burned on the last night, one of the onlookers inexplicably ran into the blaze, later dying of his injuries.

Street dance Saturday

GET OUT your dancing shoes and bring along your exuberance, because the City of Carmel's second annual Street Dance is happening this weekend.

On Saturday, Sept. 9, from 5 to 8 p.m., dozens of locals and visitors are expected to converge at Mission Street at Sixth Avenue, adjacent to Devendorf Park, to dance the night away, or at least for a few hours. Victory Lane, a classic rock cover band, will provide the music.

The city introduced the street dance as part of its centennial celebration in 2016.

"Dancing in public is highly encouraged," city officials said in announcing the event

The nonprofit Forest Theater Guild will sell beer and wine in a fenced-off area nearby for those 21 and over with ID. All proceeds from the alcohol sales will go directly to the guild, which stages performances at the Forest Theater.

fewer Americans consider climate change a 'serious problem.'" Please reference exactly where you obtained this ludicrous poll. I Googled multiple Washington Post related articles for your perusal. March 15 by Chelsea Harvey: "Public concern about climate change in the U.S. is at an all-time high according to a new Gallup survey. Forty-five percent of the poll's respondents say they worry about global warming 'a great deal,' while 62 percent believe its effects are already occurring. These findings are up from a previous high in 2007 that found 41 percent worried greatly about climate change." June 2, by Amber Phillips, speaking of Trump pulling out of the Paris Accord: "He's in the minority of the rest of the world and the business community."

These Washington Post articles completely debunk your one-sided opinion of the concern of so many of us Peninsulans, let alone majority America. What's next, an editorial espousing "clean" coal?

How to show we care

Dear Editor,

I will believe the Monterey Peninsula is concerned about climate change, and how it affects us all, when "Car Week"

becomes "Car Day" — or better yet, "Bicycle Week."

Kate Novoa, Big Sur (aka, bigsurkate)

100-degree days are proof

Dear Editor,

I think that after the multiple record 100-plus degree temperatures last weekend, no one in California would question global warming.

It is impossible to predict all the aberrations in weather that would occur due to climate change, because the change does not occur uniformly, as the depletion of the ozone layer and other atmospheric changes do not occur uniformly, by intensity or geographic region.

What scientists look for are aberrations and the rate of acceleration of these aberrations, i.e., 100-plus degree days, drought, fires, associated torrential rain and mudslides, i.e., are the record temps higher and lasting longer every year?

These are red flags and not only the presence of these events but how often they occur and with what rapidity.

One hundred-plus degree days are occurring more often and lasting longer. Is 100-plus the new normal, and will 115-plus or more in the near future be the normal? At what point can we no longer provide the means to deal with these temps with air conditioning, etc.

I believe that the top 1 percent and other elites, already have multiple homes in different climates and time zones to account for this, and can move to them accordingly, as necessary. But all of us cannot move to New Zealand or South Africa.

California is the third largest producer of carbon fuel, i.e., oil, in the United States. Financially, it is not in the producers' best interest to talk about climate change.

However, it is a big issue for the Democrats, so I am confused that you feel that California citizens don't seem to care about it. (I am not a Dem, but do care also).

I think, for some, the future negative effects are so overwhelming and irreversible that it is easier to ignore them. (I do believe that some effects are already irreversible and I don't care to postulate what the resulting next big event might be.)

As one individual, I am already considering what my Plan B should be, when it becomes too hot to go outdoors except in my climatized bubble suit.

Judith Mrozak, Carmel

Labor unions 'entitled'

Dear Editor,

In honor of Labor Day and in recognition of all that working people and unionized labor have done for this country (the 40-hour week, child labor laws, health benefits, job security, better wages and safer working conditions, to name just a few) I'd like to offer a different perspective than the one Jerry Gervase provided as he looked back on a job he held briefly as a young man. His personal desire to save as much money as possible for his tuition was irrelevant. The union at his job was absolutely entitled to require him to join as a condition of continuing his employment at the company. The wages and benefits he enjoyed on his temporary job were due to the efforts of the union through complicated collective bargaining and perhaps the sacrifices of other employees who earlier may have had to strike and go without income in order to ensure that a fair settlement was reached for workers there.

As to his characterization of the union representative as a "goon," I've known them as union reps, bargaining agents, and shop stewards. A hand on his shoulder hardly makes for a goon. As to the union caving in due to his father's influence, I don't know if the union rep did so out of fear of Mr. Gervase's father's connections in the community, or fear of violence, or simply out of friendship between the two, but it was wrong. Fairness dictates equal treatment regardless of connections and personal history. I strongly support collective bargaining agreements.

RICHARD M. 'BUD' GILBERT

June 2, 1926 – August 18, 2017

Richard M. "Bud" Gilbert passed away peacefully in the early morning hours of Friday, August 18, 2017 after a serious bout with pneumonia. Bud was born in Whittier, CA. on June 2, 1926 to Orie and Marvin Gilbert. He was the second to the youngest of 6 children and is survived by his oldest sister Virginia Gow of Whittier, CA., his brother-in-law Rick Ulrich of Colorado, and his four children and spouses, Randy Gilbert & Olga of Coleville, CA., LuAnn Gilbert of San Jose, CA., Bobbi (Gilbert) Allen & Ron of Laguna Woods, CA., Becky (Gilbert) Bainer and Chuck of Aliso Viejo, CA., and stepdaughter's Nancy Meston & David and Ellen Pua of Colorado. He has 6 grandchildren; Nathan, Jennifer, Rusti, Rebecca, Jennifer, Alison and 7 great grandchildren; Noah, Jordyn, Maverick, Sadee, Selah, Azuria and Zoe all residing in California and Nevada.

Bud was in the U.S. Army from 1944-1946 finishing his tour with the rank of Sergeant. He worked in his father's home building business in Whittier until he acquired his own California Contractors license in 1960. He was married to Betty Thompson of Whittier, CA. from 1949-1973. Bud moved to Carmel from Whittier in 1975 and married Elizabeth "Liz" Mason in 1977 and was widowed in 2001.

As a second generation carpenter, he loved doing his craft one way – "the right way." He also belonged to the Sheet Metals Local 104 since 1991 and enjoyed learning a new craft, he was excellent at both. Bud enjoyed golf (which is what brought him to the Monterey area), and had a wonderful hobby of making bird houses of which his friends and family still treasure today.

After his wife Liz passed away, he was lucky enough to find a wonderful companion in Terry Layne of Carmel, CA who passed away in 2011. His companions in these recent years have been his buddies, Stephanie Ruskell and Adrienne Otis along with John & Katy Ruskell and Paul Ruskell. They kept him company at his favorite restaurants the "Little Swiss" and the "Baja Cantina" and passed along his wood working skills on some wonderful projects they were able to complete together.

He was a very loyal man to all he called friend. The family is grateful for all the kindness shown by his friends and neighbors. We will miss him every day. Per Bud's wishes, no memorial service is planned.

JAMES LEO LEFHOLZ

February 20, 1921 ♦ August 23, 2017

James Leo Lefholz, age 96, passed away on August 23, 2017 with his eldest daughter Susan by his side. James was better known to his family and friends as Leo or "Lefty". Leo was born to Herman and Myra Lefholz at their family farm in Oak Grove, Missouri on February 20, 1921. Leo's mother died three days after giving birth to Leo's youngest brother Keith, her ninth child. Dealing with the difficult task of raising nine children Leo's father nonetheless kept the family together with the help of the older daughters.

As a child Leo watched airplanes fly over the farm and dreamed of being a pilot. Just before the start of WWII he took college classes in math and aviation and was then inducted into the U.S. Navy Air Corps at the age of twenty. He did his flight training in Pensacola, Florida. During WWII he flew a PB4Y Catalina in Northern Africa. The PB4Y was an amphibious aircraft used for reconnaissance during this period. He particularly liked to recall his days stationed in Casablanca and looking for German U-boats.

After the war, and still in the Navy as USNR, he flew several additional naval aircraft at the Great Lakes Naval Station near Chicago including B26 Marauders. He was soon introduced to his future wife Mary Jean Johnson or "Molly" by her brother Jimmy Johnson, one of Leo's flying mates.

After discharge from the Navy with the rank of Lieutenant Commander, Leo and Molly moved to Southern California where Leo worked for some time as a pilot with TWA. Shortly thereafter he learned the skills to become a general building contractor and built his first family home in Palos Verdes Estates. One day Molly made a trip north to Palo Alto and fell in love with the area, so they soon moved to Palo Alto and eventually Menlo Park, CA.

In 1972 they made another move to Carmel, CA. Many of the buildings and homes Leo built were designed by his loving and talented wife Molly, a trained artist. Numerous homes at Quail Lodge Golf and Country Club were designed and built by the couple.

Leo and Molly are survived by their four children: Susan Howe of Aptos, CA, Eric Lefholz of Portola Valley, CA, Lisa Fortino of Fountain Hills, Arizona and Lance Lefholz of Carmel Valley, CA and their two beloved granddaughters, Tejah Fortino and Molly Rose Lefholz. Leo was preceded in death by his wife Molly on September 26, 2001.

The family would like to give special thanks to the owners and the staff of Flanders Court of Carmel and the VNA Hospice of Monterey.

here to say to whoever is responsible for the Carmel River State Beach: What were you thinking?

Never in my life did I ever think a day could implode so badly. There must have been at least 200 to 300 people on this beach. All spread out with families, food, laughter, trash, etc.

And guess what?

They closed the bathrooms, Oh, yeah! Families with children, adults had nowhere to go. The bathrooms were roped off and locked. Trash abounded everywhere. Why? Because there was only one small garbage container available.

Why didn't the state system have porta-potties?? Why not a dumpster so people could bring in all of their trash? Who was in charge and dropped the ball?

No bathrooms! Are you insane?

Last Sunday morning, as we put out our tables at 7 a.m., a state worker had his truck in the parking lot picking up trash which was everywhere. At one point, I almost walked over to help him. It was a disaster and a mess that could have been avoided. And this was before Sunday! The biggest day of the year.

I would be more than happy to assist with coordinating assistance for this beach in the near future.

Plan ahead. Be organized. Anticipate.

And keep the bathrooms open!

"We had a big ridge of high pressure from 5,000 to 10,000 feet up that affected our weather," said National Weather Service meteorologist Brian Mejia.

At its Carmel Valley Village station, the National Weather Service temperature gauge rose to an unbearable 111 degrees Sept. 2. By Sept. 4, the high temperature was down to 88.

Further south, in Big Sur Valley, the weather service reported highs of 87 degrees Aug. 31, 106 degrees Sept. 2 and 82 degrees Sept. 4.

And at the Monterey Airport, the temperature gauge rose from a high of 66 Aug. 31 to a peak of 102 the following day. By Sept. 4, the high was back to just 80 degrees.

Mejia noted that during a heat wave, temperatures can vary dramatically within a geographical area. "There can be drastic spikes within just a few miles," he said.

None of temperatures recorded at the three sites officially qualified as "record-breaking" — but only because 30 years of readings are required at a site before a record is set.

At Salinas Municipal Airport, where temperatures have been measured for 30 years, a reading of 109 degrees on Sept. 2 set an official record.

Besides heat, Peninsula residents experienced something their neighbors to the east are quite familiar with — smog. The air quality here is rated among the best in the country.

"The smoke from fires in the Sierra Nevada was blown in our direction and made the air a little hazy," Mejia explained. "As the humidity rose, the smoke and haze increased."

CAROL ANN JARICK

Carol Ann Jarick, 70, passed away August 24, 2017 at Monterey, CA. A long time resident of the Monterey Peninsula, she came to Pacific Grove, CA in 1965. She worked at Crocker Bank in Pacific Grove for several years and then worked as a paralegal for Perry, Freeman, Hawley & Burligh in Carmel for several years and retired at age 62. Her late brother, Ron Zeise was a Fireman in Pacific Grove and then Fire Chief at Mid Valley Fire Dept., in Carmel Valley, CA then for Salinas, CA Rural Fire District.

She is survived by her companion of 37 years, Pat DuVal, "The Singing Sheriff" and siblings, Larry (Sabrina) Zeise, Linda (Jack) Arnesen, June (Jim) Braith, Michael (Debra) Zeise and Jeanne Ewy, her Mother Mildred Zeise and several nieces & nephews.

Memorial Services will be at a later Date in Delano, MN. In Lieu of flower donation in her memory to your favorite charity are preferred.

ARNE K. KINGSHAVEN

August 4th, 1932 • January 23rd, 2017

Mr. Arne K. Kingshaven, 84, a longtime Carmel resident, passed away January 23rd, 2017.

Born in Bergen, Norway on August 4th, 1932, Arne was a kind and extraordinarily patient soul. During his childhood, he often was given the role of taking care of younger family members at family gatherings. He gained an early appreciation for nature from experiencing the beauty of the countryside and the fjords of his birth country. For much of his boyhood (age 8-13), he lived under the German occupation of his country during World War II. As a young man, he served in his country's military. Arne was an active and outdoorsy person, serving as a skiing instructor, gymnastics instructor, and tour guide. He was later employed with the Norwegian American Steamship Company in Bergen. Here, he met Gretha Olson, whom he married in 1956. The couple would remain married 55 years, until Gretha's passing.

Arne immigrated with his wife to Southern California's San Fernando Valley in the early 1960s. The couple purchased a home in Studio City, California where they remained for the next 20 years. Daughter, Tina, was born in 1968, and son, Troy was born in 1972.

In addition to his accounting career and running his own business providing tax preparation services, Arne was a Norwegian language instructor at the local community college. His classes were popular among Los Angeles-area Scandinavian-Americans wishing to share their fondness for the culture. Arne and Gretha were also members of the Sons of Norway Lodge, as well as the Scandinavian Ski Club, composed of friends with whom they shared many camping, skiing and boating trips in sunny California during the '60s-'80s.

Arne held positions in Accounting and Internal Audit at The Colwell Company and at California Federal. He was appreciated for his trustworthiness and strong work ethic, as well as the insight and expertise which he provided to these organizations during the course of his career.

Arne was also an avid do-it-yourself homeowner who enjoyed gardening and all types of home projects, as well as maintaining a rental property in addition to the main family residence.

Arne was a devoted father and an enthusiastic supporter of his children's extra-curricular activities, including sports and music. Beyond attending all events, he also volunteered in various official capacities at many competitive swimming events. Encouraging not just his own, but all children and youth, held great meaning for him.

On holiday weekends and beyond, Arne loaded his close-knit family of four into his '74 Yosemite Yellow pop-top VW campmobile to escape the heat and enjoy camping and beach visits along the Southern and Central California coast. He instilled an enduring appreciation for the pure fun of road trips along Highway 101.

In 1985, Arne and Gretha purchased a new home and relocated the family to Carmel, CA. Maintaining his employment in Los Angeles, Arne drove to Carmel each weekend to be with his family. In 1997, Arne retired and enjoyed photographing and painting the beauty of the Monterey Peninsula, attending watercolor classes with his wife, playing with his beloved canine companions, and visiting with his now-grown children. He eventually became a devoted at-home caregiver to his wife, who suffered an extended illness until her passing in 2011.

During his later years, Arne experienced a new round of family life, when son Troy and his family relocated to the Carmel home. Spending time with his grandson and four granddaughters put Arne's wonderful way with children back into focus, and brought him much joy.

Extraordinarily patient, young-at heart, and always downplaying any difficulties in his life, Arne kept his quiet sense of humor and modest demeanor to the very end. He felt fortunate to have enjoyed good health well into his later years. He was a person who by his very nature put the well-being of others ahead of his own.

Arne loved the ocean and cherished the natural beauty of many favorite spots in the Monterey Peninsula. He is survived by daughter Tina and son Troy and their spouses, five grandchildren, and a great granddaughter born in January. A private memorial gathering was held at sea for immediate family members.

Arne will be dearly missed by all who have heartwarming memories of his kind and gentle spirit and presence. We wish to say to Arne, "Ha det bra" literally translated "Have it good," a sentiment we always shared upon our goodbyes in life, and one we continue to send with our dear father and friend, now in a better place. May he be free and at peace.

That best portion of a good man's life,
His little nameless, unremembered acts,
Of kindness and of love.

- William Wordsworth

PETER MURRAY

April 6, 1939 - August 30, 2017

Peter Murray a resident of Carmel for 20 years, passed away Wednesday, August 30, 2017 following a long fight against cancer

He is survived by his wife Gisela and son Chris.

Born in London England, Peter moved with his parents to Australia when he was 15 and graduated from Sydney University.

Peter moved to the USA in 1967 and he and his family had several work assignments overseas including Paris and Tokyo.

His family visited Carmel in the early '80s when they lived in Los Gatos, and this experience lead them to move to Carmel in 1997 when they returned from the overseas assignment in Japan.

Peter loved Carmel, the beaches and scenery and the quaint and charming houses, and the interesting people from all over the world. He jogged along the beach, then rode on a bicycle and then walked and never tired of the natural beauty of the Carmel coastline.

All through his fight with cancer he remained positive and in good humor and made the most of life

For Peter the "bottle of life" was always half-full.

He will be very much missed by his family and friends.

A Celebration of Life will be held at a later date.

Condolences may be written to the family at www.bermudezfamilyfunerals.com years ago to study at San Jose State University, Esposito is best known for starring in a PBS special on the life of the famous Italian tenor Enrico Caruso.

Since 2011, Esposito has performed each year at the mission without the aid of an amplifier. He’s also a familiar face at the Italian Festival, where he plans to sing a mix of opera arias, Neapolitan songs, original compositions and even some music from Broadway. He takes the stage in Custom House Plaza Saturday at 2:15 and 4:45 p.m., and Sunday at 12:30 and 4:30 p.m.

“I’ve been coming to the festival for seven years,” Esposito told The Pine Cone. “It’s one of the only festivals I do in the country. It’s so rare to see people get together around a square like they do in Italy.”

Esposito, like just about everybody, loves coming to Monterey.

“It’s a magic place,” he added. “It reminds a lot of the coast in Italy. It’s a very special for me every time I go there — it feels like I’m coming home.”

The musical lineup also features performances by The Joe Sharino Band (pop and rock, Friday and Saturday at 6:30 p.m.); The Operation Rock Youth Band (Saturday at 11:15 a.m.); singers Dave Marzetti and Erasmus Aiello accompanied by Mike Marotta, Dave Dally and The

Besides music, the festival showcases a wide range of Italian art and food. www.festaitaliamonterey.org

Artist takes on bullying, unveils ambitious installation and new show

AN ARTIST who formed a nonprofit art group to confront bullying will unveil an ambitious installation Friday, Sept. 8, at Open Grounds Studios in Seaside.

Titled "Pieced Together" and featuring an anti-bullying message, the installation was co-designed by Paul

Richmond, who helped start the You Will Rise Project, which "provides a multimedia showcase for people of all ages who have been bullied to share their stories through the arts."

An estimated 30,000 puzzle pieces will make up the installation — many of them hand-painted by amateur artists at Sand City's West End Celebration last month.

"It's like a massive mural," said Richmond, who was aided in the endeavor by artist Aaron Anderson and Open Grounds Studios founder and director Denese Sanders. "The subjects are three different people from the community with different backgrounds."

Like many others, Richmond was bullied as a youngster.

"In middle school, I began to experience a lot of bullying," the artist conceded. "I didn't fit in."

Thankfully, art provided a safe space for Richmond to pursue his creative impulses — and communicate how he was feeling.

"It was an inspiration for me to put my feelings on a canvas," he recalled. "It was a way for me to express things that I couldn't put into words. It was a powerful tool for communication."

An exhibit of Richmond's paintings, titled "Face to Face," also goes on display Friday at Open Ground Studios. The artist describes his latest work as "an investigation of identity, mythology, and human nature."

Open Ground Studios is located 1330 Fremont Blvd. Call (831) 241-6919. For more about Richmond's nonprofit, visit youwillriseproject.blogspot.com.

BROPHY'S SWEETENS THE DEALS, YOUTH CENTER CELEBRATES, AND DOGS WIN AT BIG FISH

THE FOLKS at Brophy's Tavern are continuing their efforts to bring locals together at the pub at San Carlos and Fourth by offering game-time specials and giving members of their mug club extra love.

Until mid-September, members of the pub's mug club who order a beer will get a Reuben calzone — which is delicious but an important part of marketing.

"With the last promo, it was more word-of-mouth," he added.

He also wants the servers and mug club members to get to know each other better.

"Making people feel special — it's something we really care about," he said.

Also this fall, Brophy's will not only be showing NFL games, but Pac-12 college games, too.

"We didn't have it last year and decided to purchase the package to offer college football and basketball," he said.

For National Football League games specifically, the tavern will have drink specials, and will also open for breakfast on Sundays at 9 a.m. The idea is to make it "The Best Place in Town to Catch the Game," and raffle prizes will be given away, too.

Drink specials will be Coors Light (Silver Bullet Can) for $3 on Saturdays; a bucket of isn't a hot seller — for free. It's an amazing and tasty deal that shouldn't be passed up, and Bastiaan De Winter, food and beverage director for the tavern, Hotel Carmel and La Playa, said all club members need to do is bring in a copy of the email they receive about the deal.

"We want people to be reading the emails," he explained, and seeing if people even receive the messages in the first place is five beers for $20, Mimosas and Bloody Marys for $8 apiece, and 16-oz. draft beers for $5 on Sundays; a bottle of Bud Light for $3 or a Monterey Mule for $8 on Mondays; and $5 well drinks and $4 bottles of import beer on Thursdays. Special bites include five habañero chicken wings served with baby carrots and blue cheese dressing for $5 (or 10 for $10), and a California hot dog with avocado, tomato, onion and pickle for $7.

To go with all those drinks, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Sundays, Brophy's will serve four of its chef's breakfast specials: the breakfast burrito with Spanish chorizo, fingerling potatoes, eggs, mixed cheese and salsa ($12), the broken-egg breakfast sandwich on a French roll with egg, ham, Jack and Swiss cheeses, and oven-roasted potatoes ($12), the Breakfast Burger of beef with cheddar, bacon, sautéed onions, a broken egg and fries ($14), and chicken hash with potatoes, carrots, celery, onions, thyme, butter and poached eggs, dressed with Hollandaise ($14).

Finally, the pub is also embarking on a "Brophy's Loves..." campaign, starting with locals. Anyone who presents a driver's license showing a Carmel address will get a free appetizer with the purchase of any cocktail, glass of wine, or beer. Each month, Brophy's will "love" a different group of people, whether grandparents, Texans or some other lucky bunch.

"I think a lot of people don't really know about Brophy's," De Winter said. "We are here, and this is a special place, and I don't think anyone else really does what we do."

Brophy's is located at San Carlos and Fourth. To learn more, visit www.brophystavern.com.

during those early games. The season kickoff doubleheader on Monday, Sept. 11, will have the New Orleans Saints at the Minnesota Vikings at 4:10 p.m., and the Los Angeles Chargers at the Denver Broncos at 7:20 p.m. The deals and celebration will run through both games.

■ Reminder about The Event

The Event — the new fundraiser for the Carmel Youth Center created by the organization's new and galvanized board of directors — takes place Sunday, Sept. 10, at Sunset Center. The Event promises "a fantastic evening of music, drinks and food," featuring several local restaurants, wineries and breweries.

"Come and fill your complimentary wine glass with your favorite beverage and dance the night away while sampling the best of our local chefs," including Flaherty's Oyster Bar, where guests can learn the art of shucking, organizers say.

Photos, caricatures, an impressive auction and other elements are coming together to ensure the nonprofit can fulfill its mission to "positively impact local youth in a safe and supportive environment."

Music will be provided by Jesse DeCarlo and the Rough Jazz Collective, featuring Lisa Taylor.

The celebration will take place from 3 to 7 p.m. at the center at San Carlos and Ninth. Tickets are $65 until Sept. 9, when they increase to $85, and can be found online at www.carmelyouth.com. For more information, email info@carmelyouth.com or call (831) 624-3285.

■ It's time for chili

The Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce is staging its 24th Annual Chili Cook-off Wednesday, Sept. 20, from 5 to 8 p.m., when competitors in professional and amateur categories will vie each other for the title of best chili, as selected by a panel of judges (who will taste the entries blind) and those attending, who will cast votes for their favorites. The battle will take place at The River Ranch at Carmel Valley Ranch, as it has for the past couple of years, and will also include a Margarita competition among professional bartenders.

Advance tickets are $30 for chamber members and $35 for community members, while all tickets are $40 the day of the event. Visit www.carmelvalleychamber.com to learn more.

■ Dog fundraiser at Big Fish

The Big Fish Grill on Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey will host its inaugural fundraiser for the nonprofit Peace of Mind Dog Rescue, which helps find homes for older dogs and takes on pets whose owners are too elderly or infirm to care for them, on Sunday, Sept. 10, from 1 to 3 p.m.

For $40 each, supporters will have their pick from the locals' menu, accompanied by wines from Twisted Roots. They'll meet adoptable dogs and hear their stories, and a parade of pups will take place at 2 p.m. In addition, a $10-per-ticket raffle will offer a hotel stay, gift certificates and gift baskets.

Reservations are required. Call POMDR at (831) 718-9122. Dogs welcome.

■ Are you ready for some football?

Knuckles Sports Bar at the Hyatt Regency Monterey will again present its great Taps, Apps & Touchdowns specials this NFL season.

Every Monday night during the 2017 football season, Knuckles will be pouring five selected draft beers and Canvas wines for only $5 each, starting at 4 p.m., and will also serve five special appetizers selected by the chef for $5 apiece.

The $5 drinks and $5 apps are available throughout the entire game, no matter how much overtime the teams burn.

While the "bar" part of Knuckles is for the grownups, the crew there realizes some of the sport's biggest fans aren't quite old enough to drink — and that many of them are up-and-coming athletes themselves. Those kids can get a free meal from the Junior Menu when they wear their favorite team jerseys. They have to be accompanied by an adult who will pay, of course, and families and groups are eligible for one free dinner per one adult meal that's purchased.

Knuckles will also open at 11:30 a.m. Saturday and at 9 a.m. Sunday during football season, offering select breakfast items

CAA welcomes new shows

Four new shows open Saturday at the Carmel Art Association, including two that take viewers on journeys to some of California's less traveled places.

Painter Jan Wagstaff presents a new series of oils inspired by the long walks she takes in nature. Titled "The Garden," the show focuses on the "shapes, layers and density of foliage and leaves."

In his latest exhibit, "Landscapes," painter Richard Tette looks at California's "off-the-beaten-path ranch land, pastures and meadows." His work seeks "to convey a sense of quiet and serenity."

Also opening Saturday at the CAA are displays by painters Barbara Johnson and Stan Robbins, who will unveil abstract pieces that mark a departure from their previous work.

Located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, the nonprofit art center will host a reception from 5 to 7 p.m. The shows continue through Oct. 3. Call (831) 624-6176 or visit www.carmelart.org.

'See You, See Me' at Exposed

A new show by photographer Rachael Short, "See You, See Me," opens Sept. 8 at Exposed Gallery.

Short's latest images explore the female form, "captured moments in time," and the relationship between humans and nature.

The gallery, which will be the site of a reception from 5 to 8 p.m., is located in Carmel Square at Seventh and San Carlos. Call (831) 238-0127.

Monterey art museum seeks docents

A six-week training program for docents begins Wednesday, Sept. 13, at the Monterey Museum of Art.

The museum is seeking "friendly, articulate, and flexible" people to serve as volunteers and "to share their enthusiasm for art" with visitors.

Applicants are asked to make a two-year commitment, which includes attending a monthly meeting and working four hours per month.

For more details, send an email to: education@montereyart.org.

Artist Paul Richmond, who unveils a show of his art Sept. 8 in Seaside, is the co-founder of a nonprofit that encourages young people to use art to share stories about being bullied.

With top scorers gone, first-year water polo coach stresses 'creative' offense

HAVING A plan is great until that plan doesn't work. Then what?

That's the question that drives the philosophy of first-year varsity boys water polo coach Graham Evans, who believes in trusting the instincts of his athletes to create an aggressive, free-wheeling offense at Carmel High.

"My philosophy is that when we script too many plays for our players, they tend to become robots," said Evans (Carmel High Class of '90), a Carmel firefighter who spent the previous 14 years as an assistant coach for the Padres. "If a play doesn't work, then half the time the kids don't know what to do next — they don't know how to adjust. What we'll do instead is establish different offensive sets, different styles we want to run, then let the kids go out there and do their thing. I want them to figure out how to be more creative in the water."

It's a bold experiment for Evans, who takes the coaching reins from Aaron Gaily, who won Monterey Bay League Coach of the Year honors three times (2010, 2012 and 2014) in eight seasons with the Padres, bringing CHS the first three league titles in school history.

"We had a lot of set plays in previous years, and a lot of times they worked," Evans said. "But there also were times when a team would catch on to what we were doing and shut us down. When that happened, our players often didn't know what to do next because it wasn't scripted. So putting in different offensive styles and letting the kids play within those styles is how we're going to do it this year. When something goes wrong, I think they'll be able to find a solution and hopefully score a goal, or stop one."

The 2016 Padres were runners-up to in the MBL's rugged Gabilan Division, compiling a 10-2 record by sweeping five of their six opponents. Both losses were to tradition-rich Soquel, which went 12-0 en route to its 21st league crown since 1995-96.

Gone from that Carmel team are leading scorers Kevin Auger (46 goals), Parker Fisher (32), and Alejandro Gonzales-Smith (15), around whom the Padres' offense was built.

Evans' offensive philosophy might be a great fit with the personnel the Padres will have in the pool this year — an ensemble cast devoid of any superstar scorers.

Four experienced seniors will be counted upon for leadership, beginning with co-captains Max House, the team's third-leading scorer with 16 goals a year ago, and Preston Milaw, a 2-meter defenseman.

The other two veterans are Carson Coppinger and West Whittaker, both of whom will play the driver (perimeter) position.

Evans also likes the work ethic of junior Aidan Rice, who has the size and potential to eventually play the important hold set position, and Drew Aber, the team's only sophomore, who will fit into a utility role.

Peninsula Sports

By DENNIS TAYLOR

"We're always a defense-minded team, and I expect that to be a strength again," Evans said, singling out Jack Johnston, an exceptional defender, as a key player in those plans. "I also think we're going to be good at moving without the ball. We have a lot of guys who recognize when to move, which will be important to an offense that's designed around not having set plays."

Evans expects Santa Cruz, with a strong returning cast, to emerge as the team to beat in the MBL-G this year, but respects the chances of Soquel, reloading after heavy graduation losses.

The Padres host Santa Cruz on Thursday with a 7 p.m. varsity start.

■ Padres football hot and cold

Carmel football built a 21-0 halftime lead on Gilroy on Saturday, but couldn't hold off the Mustangs, who rallied for a 30-21 victory at Carmel High.

The Padres got rushing touchdowns from Luke Melcher and Nick Krueger, and sophomore quarterback Kai Lee connected with wide receiver Dylan Houpt for the third TD.

With a start time of 2 p.m., the game at Carmel High was played in 93-degree heat, but Coach Golden Anderson said, while the hot weather was a different experience, it wasn't a significant factor.

"Two years ago, we played a game at Scotts Valley, where the temperature at kickoff was 96, but that one was on grass. Playing on artificial turf (the surface at Carmel High) adds 5-8 degrees with the sun radiating off the carpet," he said. "I thought our conditioning looked pretty good. We had nobody cramping, no heat-related issues at all."

Anderson credited the Padres' training staff for keeping

Editorial

Sacrifice, but opportunity, too

WHEN THERMOMETERS around the Monterey Peninsula crept towards triple digits last weekend, local residents were outraged. Isn't it practically in the Constitution that they're supposed to be exempt from such things?

After all, this is the land where a temperature of 75 degrees is a rare phenomenon. Before last weekend, when was the last time you didn't bundle up before going to the beach? Or saw a dog lying in the shade? Or couldn't tell the difference between the tourists and the locals on Ocean Avenue?

Why, we even heard of a few residents who said they wished they had air conditioning — or at least knew where the sunblock was.

Usually, during the summer months, every time the State of California is sweltering through a heat wave, people who live around here are still turning their furnaces on every morning.

The cause of our cool weather, of course, is the chilly ocean, which acts like a giant heat sink for anybody who's near the shore. But the effect doesn't reach very far inland — which explains why it barely shows up on national weather maps. So insignificant is our microclimate, most people around the world don't even know about it. And thanks to the surfing movies of the 1950s, and hackneyed 1980s TV shows like Baywatch, they think we're all splashing in the surf all day and then wandering around town in our bathing suits or sipping smoothies at outdoor cafes while watching a parade of scantily clad beauties stroll by.

Meanwhile, we picked last Friday to run an editorial pointing out that mutually exclusive predictions about the consequences of climate change — “drought is the new normal” vs. “major storms will be a lot more frequent” — make it hard for most people to take the idea of a warming planet seriously. At least, most people don't seem to be making any significant changes in their own lives that would indicate they're listening to a word Al Gore says.

And didn't we feel silly about that editorial when it got to be 98 degrees in Pebble Beach

Of course, it's still true that if you believed in an onrushing climate catastrophe, you would immediately cut your own energy use as much as possible — meaning no vacations more than a few miles from home, no driving your car with fewer than 3 people in it, and no eating any imported food.

Instead, almost everyone you know regularly does all these things, along with dozens of other examples of fossil fuels being thoughtlessly used for non-essential purposes.

But maybe that's about to change. In Texas and Florida, they're wrestling with the effects of major hurricanes everybody says were worse because of global warming. And here, just the other day, temperatures reached previously unthinkable heights.

It's time to start believing, people, which means we all have to start making sacrifices. But there are also going to be some wonderful new opportunities for money to be made. For starters, you can sell all your stock in Texas oil wells, and start cornering the market in bikinis at Point Lobos.

Give up coffee makers and washing machines?

Dear Editor,

I appreciate your acknowledgement that “there is no doubt that human activity warms the environment” and that “it is impossible to link any single weather phenomenon to a global trend.” That is why, rather than trusting an opinion poll, I put my trust in climate scientists who have made it their lives' work to make much more than “a slightly informed guess” as to the causes and impacts of climate change. As for your suggestion that “environmental diehards” should disconnect their Keurigs, I don't know a single environmentalist who even owns one. And regarding the suggestion that we should wash our clothes by hand, of course we don't do that. We do use energy-efficient appliances, as do many Peninsula residents who do that and more to conserve energy. The truth is, scientists are already doing the measured analysis of climate change that your editorial calls for, and we need to stop pretending that they aren't.

Nicole Chupka, Carmel Highlands

'Misleading readership'

Dear Editor,

I seriously doubt that you'll print this, but nevertheless

I read your editorial writings every week, and agree with them at least 60-70 percent of the time, but your Sept. 1 editorial, “Stop pretending,” was misleading, erroneous, and insulting to the intelligence of many people within our communities.

You wrote, “We doubt that a large percentage of Peninsula residents spend a lot of time worrying about climate change.” You are definitely pulling your “imagined figures” out of thin (and increasingly dirty) air. The vast majority of residents are conscious of our beautiful Peninsula and want to keep it that way. How ironic and fitting that our record-breaking heat wave hit us shortly after your short-sighted article. Since this county voted heavily Democratic in the presidential election, that, in itself, throws your baseless “guess” out of the window. The vast majority of Democrats nationwide, let alone a much higher percentage in California, believe in the reality of climate change and its dire consequences for their children and grandchildren and future generations.

Thereafter you write, “according to polls reported by the Washington Post, fewer and

EARNING FREEDOM AND A BETTER FUTURE FOR HIS CHILDREN

IT HAS been said that “entertaining” calls attention to the host — impressing guests with finery and fancy food — while “hospitality” focuses on the people being served and making them welcome. Not that the two are mutually exclusive, but the best restaurants are usually the ones where the owners say, “I love feeding people.”

That describes Artemis Turkish Kitchen on Ocean Avenue, and its owner Erkan Demir, who ties on an apron each night and helps serve dishes to his guests — with a heaping helping of genuine friendliness and warmth.

The gregarious 48-year-old P.G. resident said he was a boot designer and a salesman back in Istanbul. He had good businesses there, running retail stores and selling his boots. Still, he sometimes regretted having to drop out of college to work. He wanted better educations and opportunities for his sons, and some conversations with a visiting tourist from Stanford University confirmed his belief that he could find them in America.

Heading west

“Come to California,” the man told him. After further discussions and some research, in 2008, Demir decided to apply for an E-2 visa, which admits immigrants willing to invest in a business in the U.S.

After getting approved, the family found a temporary place to live in Pacific Grove, where they’d heard the school system was excellent. Demir decided that San Juan Bautista would be a good spot for his first store, because space was relatively affordable. He opened a little gift shop, and the family began looking for more long-term housing.

By the time their original lease was up, however, an unexpected obstacle was beginning to vex them: They had no credit history or rating, which most landlords want to see. So they moved into a motel.

His sons, who were about 7 and 14 at the time, had already started school in Pacific Grove. The educational system and teachers were everything Demir had expected. “They loved my kids. They really cared about them,” he said, his voice breaking a little.

But the schools required proof of residence — a PG&E bill or such — and the family was running out of time to provide it.

Great Lives

By ELAINE HESSER

In desperation, the four of them set out on foot, on a street-by-street search of America’s Last Hometown, looking for a rental.

After several hours, they were tired and frustrated and stopped for lunch. “I was about to give up and go back to Turkey,” he said. Then his younger son impulsively grabbed one of the many free newspapers off of a nearby rack and began flipping through it. Demir didn’t realize the papers were free and yelled at him for stealing, but the precocious lad persisted, showing him an ad for a rental.

Deciding to give it one last try, they all went to the house. A woman answered the door, and Demir explained his predicament, saying, “I need a house today.” He offered her six months’ rent up front, but she responded, “No, you’ll pay me by the month. Here’s the key.”

They had no furniture and camped out on the wall-to-wall carpeting the first few nights, with sheets and bedding hastily purchased from Target.

Demir continued to pay rent on the shop in San Juan Bautista, but it wasn’t doing well. Many times, he said, it seemed like they were reaching the end of what they could reasonably expect to live on and stay in business.

Jazz fest to the rescue

Sometimes he got discouraged, but then things would abruptly take a positive turn, like the time he took a vendor stand at the Monterey Jazz Festival and ended up selling almost $20,000 worth of boots. He’s not religious, but he says he believes you get back what you give out — and he always tries to give out generosity and grace.

He realized he needed to relocate his business if he was to make any headway financially. Strangely, he was barely aware of Carmel’s existence, until someone suggested he look here for a new spot to sell his high-end wares.

After seeing the “beautiful galleries, no traffic lights, and no fast food signs,” Demir went down to the beach and meditated by the ocean. Once more, he knew what he wanted. It was just a matter of getting it.

After some astute networking, he was able to rent a space in Doud Arcade, more or less on his word and a handshake, and opened his custom boot business. That’s when things really took off

The carpets aren’t magic, but sometimes Erkan Demir’s life has seemed to be.

Docked boat launches art career

STAN ROBBINS’ dad was a plumber who worked the swing shift at Universal Studios, where on occasion he’d be summoned to some backlot to help create a water effect for a film.

Robbins has an old photo of an actress, surrounded by boulders, fishing in a creek. In the background stands his father, holding a fire hose, blasting water down the hill to create the creek.

In another film, actor Robert Mitchum portrays a naval officer being slammed by waves aboard a ship.

“When we saw that movie, my dad said, ‘That was me, standing on a ladder, pouring water on him with a five-gallon bucket,’” Robbins recollected. “In the movies it always looks like they’re suffering terribly, but the water my dad was pouring on Robert Mitchum was 90 degrees. It was in his contract.”

As a child, Robbins wasn’t allowed to watch a movie being filmed, but he occasionally visited his dad after hours, when the studio was quiet.

“It was one of the things that started my interest in art,” he said. “We walked onto one soundstage, dad flipped on these gigantic, bright lights, and I was staring at a painted backdrop of the Tetons. I got closer and realized it had been done with six-inch wide house-painting brushes. It was just an abstract painting, but if you stood back 80 feet it looked like Wyoming.”

A different perspective

The Carmel Art Association says he wasn’t yet 10 years old when he figured out that a painting that is abstract up close can look representational from a distance, which is exactly how he paints today, at age 75.

“If you stand back, this one almost has a photographic look,” he said, pointing at a moody oceanscape on his living room wall. “When you get up close, you see that it’s just brushstrokes. I like that.”

Robbins was a third-grader when a painting he did of cherry trees was singled out for display on the classroom wall. A watercolor he painted as a fifth-grader — a boat docked outside a warehouse — wound up in the school’s display case, next to the main entrance.

“My dad knew a set painter who came over on the weekends to help paint our house,” he said. “We went to his home one day for dinner and I found myself staring at the beautiful paintings on his wall — his own work — especially one of a Native American girl in a deerskin jacket. He had the light hitting her cheekbones, her shoulders, and her jacket just right. The highlights were perfect and it just popped.”

“I was 10 or 11, but I looked at that painting until I figured out that he created the effect by keeping the value low on most of the painting, then hitting spots he wanted to highlight with bright colors.”

Robbins’ childhood heroes were painters. He became enamored with Thomas Moran, an explorer who did early renderings of the Western U.S., then took them back East to show people what the rest of their country looked like. Edgar Payne (a Carmel Art Association member), had lived nearby in Pasadena, where he painted the San Gabriel mountains.

Two of his Robbins’ friends at Van Nuys High were artists, another was a writer, and Robbins, himself, was hired as a teenager to paint cars for the cover of Drag News magazine.

“I got $5 apiece for painting those magazine covers, which doesn’t seem like a lot,

Sure, it looks like he’s in his home studio, but with Stan Robbins’ background and approach to art, for all we know, that’s just one big painting behind him!

Carmel High product Andrew Franks was released Sunday by the Miami Dolphins after two seasons as the team's kicker. Franks was given his pink slip after the Dolphins signed Cody Parkey, who had been released by the Cleveland Browns.

Franks made 29 of 37 field goal attempts (including a 55-yarder) with the Dolphins, and was 74 of 78 on extra points. He is a 2011 CHS graduate who played collegiately at Rensselaer. He was earning $615,000 per season with the Dolphins.

but I remember doing one in about 30 minutes during my lunch break at school, while I ate a sandwich," he said.

Robbins enrolled at Brigham Young University, where he studied math, statistics and psychology, and met his wife, Mary Jane ("a delight to be around," he said), to whom he's been married for 52 years.

He also had an artistic breakthrough.

"During my second year they announced that they were going to have a student art show. I wasn't an art major, but asked if I could enter," he said. "An art major won, but I beat all of the other art students and got second place ... and the university bought my painting."

After earning a bachelor of arts degree from BYU and a master's from UCLA, Robbins worked 32 years for Hewlett Packard and Agilent as an industrial psychologist.

"I studied attitudes and deficiencies, trying to determine what makes a workplace productive and fun," he said. "I loved the job."

He created art on the side, first for Erickson's Gallery in Half Moon Bay (owned at the time by Teresa Brown, current executive director of the Pacific Grove Art Association), then for galleries in Sonoma, Menlo Park and Monterey.

Robbins finally became a full-time artist after retiring in 2002. He moved with his wife to Pacific Grove in 2007, and was juried into the Carmel Art Association the following year.

"It was a huge thrill to become a member. Our youngest son and daughter-in-law came to see my paintings and were very impressed that I was in such a nice gallery, which was a great experience for me," he said. "A nice man offered to take our picture on the patio, and it turned out to be Miguel Dominguez, who said, 'I love your work. It's really great.' I about fell over, getting a compliment like that from one of the best-selling artists in Carmel."

The work of Robbins, Barbara Johnson, Jan Wagstaff and Richard Tette will be featured throughout September at Carmel Art Association (Dolores Street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues), beginning with a public reception on Saturday, Sept. 9, from 5 to 7 p.m.

— he sold $750 worth of boots while still setting the store up. "And then my life started," he said.

It sure did. That endeavor was followed by a successful carpet-selling venture that opened in 2010, a leather shop in 2014, and the restaurant in 2017. That last foray grew out of one of his business' grand openings. He served up some food a chef-friend of his had prepared, and then-Mayor Jason Burnett suggested, "You should open a restaurant."

He radiates passion for quality and personal service. He truly wants each guest to have a good time.

Demir doesn't even mind the occasional negative reviews he finds online. Instead, he sits down with the chef or wait staff to figure out how to do things better. After all, he said, listening to a small minority of differing views is what democracy is all about.

"This country is my heart right now. I would do anything for this country," he said. It's given me friends, love, respect — everything. Every penny of tax I pay to my country, I am happy. This is my home. I have peace of mind and my kids have a great future."

"Freedom is not free," he added. "You have to work for it." To suggest someone for this column, email elaine@carmelpinecone.com.

In there pitching: confessions of a former advertising man

A NEW York Times article about how companies carefully choose their celebrity speakers when marketing to older Americans reminded me that I fall into that aging marketing demographic. It also triggered memories of being an advertising man. My first job out of college was writing advertising copy for adding machines, copy paper and typewriter ribbons.

Our ribbons make a lasting impression!

OK, you come up with something better to say about a product as mundane as a typewriter ribbon.

That was followed by a stint at a small Detroit ad agency doing promotional materials for the Ford Motor Company. We produced all the written material you see in an automobile dealership — brochures, signs, and even the fact-sheet comparisons between Ford and the two other major competitive car companies. Yes, two. A half-century ago, Civics were government courses you took in school. An Accord meant you reached an agreement, and Honda meant you misspelled John Wayne's name in a popular western.

The Times article mentioned how Alex Trebek, host of the quiz show, "Jeopardy," is highly trusted by seniors. "He's the man with the answers," is a comment older Americans make when his name is mentioned to endorse a product.

Tom Selleck is another celebrity older Americans deem trustworthy, which is why a company called the American Advisory Group selected him to pitch reverse mortgages on television.

The criteria of trust, believability and likability are required of anyone representing a product. Also, there has to be the right fit between the celebrity and the product. You probably wouldn't have LeBron James making a pitch for Maybelline or Rachel McAdams all greased up under a car changing oil.

Never has a celebrity influenced me to buy a product. My mother remains the power behind my purchases. I still use many of the household products she used. Both her cupboard and mine were stocked with the same mustard, ketchup, saltines, peanut butter, mayonnaise, vinegar, soup, and Duz. (If they still made it, I would be washing laundry and glassware with it, because Duz does everything.)

Celebrities are effective marketers. People idolize them and are more likely to buy products they endorse. People want to live the life of their favorite celebrity, meaning they want to use the same products.

My feeling about that is that the celebrity is being paid big bucks to say they use a product. Would they use it if they weren't being paid? Does LeBron James really drive a KIA? The only vehicle that would comfortably accommodate his 37-inch inseam is a stretch limo.

Nothing perplexes me more than companies selecting annoying characters to represent them on television. Car dealerships are notorious for doing this. They invariably choose a pitchman you'd avoid like rush hour on the 405 Freeway. It isn't only that the pitchman is annoying, he introduces an element of shoddiness to the product that might not be there. But it must work, or they wouldn't keep doing it.

Many companies shy away from professional actors in their commercials. It saves money spent on "talent." They must think that presenting their products themselves adds an element of sincerity or believability to the ad. The "pillow guy" is a good example. I usually want to put a pillow over his face before he can shake his stuffing at me.

Sometimes advertisers make no sense when marketing to older Americans. We are constantly pitched products that remind us of our infirmities — including everything from shortness of breath to sore backs, sagging skin, joint disorders and irregularity — or even how the Grim Reaper is just around the corner, but before meeting him we should stock up on gold and silver, and make some long-term investments.

And oh, while we're swallowing those medications that warn us not to drive, the insufferable Flo and a salamander constantly tell us how to save money on car insurance.

Please don't think I am anti-advertising. The ads I prefer are the ones you see all around this column. I like newspaper ads because they are not intrusive. You can read them when you want. They are not popping up and marching across your field of vision the way internet ads do, which I think makes newspaper ads all the more effective. You can make them part of your reading while enjoying the paper.

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVAISE

I mentioned that no celebrity has ever influenced me to buy a product. The reason for that is that no one has ever hired Sophia Loren. Would I buy a product she was pitching? Probably. Why? Well, as the folks at Alka-Seltzer used to say: Mama mia, that's a one spicy meatball.
