Bounty of stolen property found in wanted SUV

■ Driver arrested, faces multiple charges

By MARY SCHLEY

THE SILVER Nissan Pathfinder was believed to be connected to the recent rash of vehicle burglaries in the Monterey Peninsula, and when a Monterey County Sheriff's Deputy spotted it at the Mid-Valley shopping center Saturday evening, she also found the man who may be responsible for many of those break-ins.

Authorities are now working to determine the rightful owners of the piles of stolen property officers found inside the SUV.

Reynaldo Gomez, 54, remained in Monterey County Jail this week on charges of possession of burglary tools, possession of stolen property, and felony burglary, with bail set at

Are our schools safe enough?

■ Administrators, teachers reassessing open campuses, unlocked gates

By MARY SCHLEY and KELLY NIX

IN THE wake of the Parkland, Fla., school shooting that left 17 people dead, administrators at Monterey Peninsula campuses are updating their safety plans, meeting with law enforcement, and reassuring parents and students their facilities are safe.

But, while the National Center for Education Statistics reports that in the 2013/2014 school year, "93 percent of public schools reported that they controlled access to school buildings by locking or monitoring doors during school hours," most campuses here rely on fencing, along with signs directing visitors to sign in at the front office.

That means most Monterey Peninsula school campuses, public and private, can be easily accessed by strangers, while other facilities, including small claims and traffic divisions of Monterey County Superior Court, are more secure.

'Safety is No. 1'

Shortly after last month's shooting, Carmel Unified School District Superintendent Barb Dill-Varga sent a message to district parents assuring them that "safety is our No. 1 priority."

But she also acknowledged that "most educators across the nation are examining current protocols and wondering if enough has been done" — and that includes Carmel Unified.

The district updates the safety plans for each of its campuses annually and conducts routine drills for earthquakes, fires and hostile intruders, according to Dill-Varga. Given that many shootings are committed by disaffected, distraught or mentally ill people, school officials "have intentionally been working to make sure that our students feel included, feel valued, and know that we will not tolerate bullying and harassment of any kind."

The schools also try to "proactively identify any signs of student emotional or mental distress that in some of these tragic national events have gone unattended and are the early warning signs of violence," she added.

Paul Behan, CUSD public information officer, added that each classroom contains a manual for dealing with emergencies. In the case of gunfire, teachers and kids are advised to "find safe cover, physical barrier, or, using best judgment, run away from the disturbance or noise." The protocol also call for "locking down" classrooms.

"Our schools have already done at least one lockdown or

Salinas 'Dreamer' will plead guilty to smuggling

By KELLY NIX

THE MAN law enforcement officials say was caught Jan. 29 attempting to smuggle four would-be immigrants across the southern border will plead guilty to a federal misdemeanor charge, according to documents filed this week in a federal court in Arizona.

In January, United States Border Patrol agents arrested Saul Rodea-Castro, 26, and another man for a human smuggling operation near Yuma, Ariz. Rodea-Castro, prosecutors say, drove a Ford F-150 truck to carry four illegal immigrants across the border into the United States in exchange for thousands of dollars.

Aiding and abetting

The Salinas man is a recipient of the Deferred Action on Childhood Arrivals, an Obama-era program that has permitted children who were brought to the United States illegally by their parents to stay in this country, and even hold jobs, without fear of being deported.

Rodea-Castro — who had worked for an agricultural company but who has been held in detention in Eloy, Ariz., since his arrest — will now plead to a federal charge of aiding and abetting "an alien to elude the examination and inspection of immigration officers of the United States," according to documents filed Tuesday in United States District Court, District of Arizona.

The misdemeanor is punishable by a maximum fine of $5,000, six months in prison, or both. But according to his plea deal, Rodea-Castro will avoid a more serious felony crime related to the smuggling effort. The plea stipulates that Rodea-Castro will spend 90 days in prison, and be given credit for time already served.

A Feb. 27 indictment by a Yuma, Ariz., grand jury said Rodea-Castro "knowingly and in reckless disregard" transported the four illegal immigrants in violation of the law.

However, the plea agreement document — which is supposed to contain a statement of guilt by Rodea-Castro — erroneously contains co-defendant Ramiro Ramirez-Betancourt's plea and admission. The document was signed by Rodea-Castro's court-appointed attorney, Ana Castillo. Federal prosecutors did not respond to messages from The Pine

Feisty crowd packs hearing on rentals

By CHRIS COUNTS

AS THE county continues its slow march toward adopting an ordinance regulating short-term rentals, a Carmel Valley Land Use Advisory Committee hearing on the topic March 20 laid bare the contention that exists between supporters and opponents of the vacation rental industry.

More than 100 people packed the sanctuary at St. Philips Lutheran Church for the hearing, including many from Pacific Grove and Carmel Highlands, two other places where vacation stays have led to conflicts between neighbors.

After county official Melanie Beretti provided a progress report on the ordinance, more than two dozen residents gave their views on the topic. The crowd appeared split between

Three-day 'Comic-Con for Doris' kicks off March 29

By CHRIS COUNTS

CARMEL VALLEY resident Doris Day turns 96 on April 3, and to mark the occasion, local and faraway fans of the singer and actress will gather for three days of music, film and festivities.

Besides commemorating the birthday of the woman who was called "America's Sweetheart," the event coincides with two landmarks in her remarkable career — the 50th anniversaries of the premiere of "The Doris Day Show," and the release of her final movie, "With Six You Get Eggnoll."

The celebration kicks off March 29 when the Cypress Inn, which she co-owns with Denny LeVett, presents an evening of Doris Day-themed bingo. Actress Jackie Joseph — who co-starred in "The Doris Day Show" and "With Six You Get Eggnoll" — will serve as host.

"All the clues on the bingo cards will have to do with Doris's life or career," singer and event organizer Scott Dreier explained.

The event starts at 8 p.m. The cost is $20 for 14 games, and all proceeds will be donated to the Doris Day Animal Foundation, which she founded in 1978 to help rescue animals on the Monterey Peninsula.

The next evening — March 30, at 7:30 p.m. — the party moves over to the Carmel High School Performing Arts Center, where birthday cake will be served, and Dreier and a quartet of jazz musicians will perform Day's music. Clips from "The Doris Day Show" will follow, along with a panel with Joseph and actors Bernie Koppel and Philip Brown, who starred on the show.

Charities benefit

The celebration wraps up March 31 at 7 p.m. at Carmel High with a screening of "With Six You Get Eggnoll." The film will be followed by a panel talk with Joseph and actors John Findlater and Jimmy Bracken, who starred in the movie.

Both nights will include fundraising raffles, and Friday's proceeds will benefit the SPCA for Monterey County, while Saturday's proceeds will be donated to the Animal Friends Rescue Project.

Tickets are $200 and will get you into Friday's and Saturday's events.

Canine crusader

SHE REALLY didn't think she could call the little Yorkshire terrier by his name, but he was already a year old and responded to it. She tried to think of something similar to ease the transition, but she couldn't think of anything that rhymed with Batman.

The purebred Yorkie had been a gift to a 7-year-old boy, a surprise from his mother. She'd bought the dog back east and had him flown in, at 8 weeks. Her son, thrilled, noticed how the dog's little ears poked up like Batman's, which inspired his name. Yet, when Dad came home and saw Batman, he ordered his wife to get rid of him.

A young woman, who knew the family, fell in love with the dog on sight, and took him in. Yet, once she learned she was expecting her own child, Batman went to live with her parents. And 10 years later, it's clear — there's no way they'll ever give him up.

"Batman's little ears still prick up, and one stays up," his person said. "Yet he never changes his expression, whether he's happy or sad. He's just so adorable and still looks like a puppy."

Although Batman has begun to slow down, he still loves to go to the beach — Carmel or Del Monte, which is not far from his Monterey home. When he was younger, he'd run like lightning down the sand, his person says, and she could never catch him. It used to be that he didn't listen well. Now, he can't hear well.

When Batman was a puppy, his family found him so beautiful they thought they might breed him, so they delayed having him "fixed." In those days, he'd escape from his yard all the time; the whole neighborhood knew him.

One time, Batman went in through a neighbor's doggie door and ate their dog food. He's just a little canine crusader.

Man shot with beanbags may have been attempting ‘suicide by cop’

By MARY SCHLEY

A MAN on Rio Road who may have been trying to commit suicide by provoking police to shoot him was hospitalized with minor injuries and placed on a mental-health hold early last Thursday morning after an officer hit him with two “less lethal” shotgun rounds, according to Carmel police.

Salinas resident Charles Mejia, 74, was refusing to stop reaching into his car — where officers later found a crossbow and two darts — when Cmdr. Luke Powell fired the shots, Chief Paul Tomasi said.

At around 6:25 a.m. March 15, the Monterey County Sheriff’s Office received a report of a person in a yellow raincoat holding a gun near a maroon Honda by the Carmel Mission Inn. Because the sheriff’s office only had one deputy in the area, Carmel P.D. was asked to help, and sent three officers.

The first to arrive quickly found the Honda parked between the Chevron station and the hotel, with a man sitting inside. Because the caller mentioned a gun, he “immediately began giving Mejia verbal commands to step out of the vehicle and to put his hands above his head,” Tomasi said.

Mejia got out but refused to put his hands up, according to Tomasi, and after the other two Carmel officers arrived, the three of them took turns giving commands in English and Spanish for another five minutes, but Mejia continued to ignore them while smoking a cigarette he’d been puffing since the beginning.

Refusing to comply

The sheriff’s deputy arrived at that point, and a few minutes later, “Mejia discarded his cigarette, turned toward his open car door and began to reach into the vehicle with his right hand,” Tomasi continued. Officers and the deputy yelled at him to get back out of the car, an order he also ignored.

“Fearing Mejia was going for a weapon, Commander Powell deployed two ‘less lethal’ shotgun rounds through the passenger window of Mejia’s vehicle, striking Mejia in the lower torso and upper leg,” Tomasi said. “Mejia immediately fell back, out of the car and onto the ground.”

The officers detained him and called for an ambulance to check for injuries, none of Police believe the man they subdued by shooting him with two “less lethal” rounds was reaching for this crossbow in the passenger seat of his car at the time.

Verdicts, pleas and sentencings announced by Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo

Dec. 14 — Salinas resident Alexis Aguilar, 21, entered a plea of no contest to residential burglary. Aguilar also admitted an enhancement for the victim being home during the crime. This conviction represents a violent felony and a strike offense under California's Three Strikes Law.

On November 22, 2017, at 5 a.m., Aguilar broke into the victim's home through a back window. The victim was asleep but woke up to the sounds of Aguilar ransacking the living room. The victim saw Aguilar standing in the living room holding a screwdriver. The victim, who was pregnant, grabbed her other young child and escaped out of her bedroom window. The victim ran down the street and alerted a Good Samaritan who called the police.

The victim was also able to contact a family member, who responded to the house and detained Aguilar until the police arrived. Aguilar was found to be in possession of pliers and screwdrivers, which are commonly used to burglarize homes.

Aguilar will receive a sentence of two years, to be served in the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation.

Dec. 19 — Larry Moses Rodriguez, 51, a resident of Salinas, pled no contest to four counts of felony charges, including making criminal threats to his wife, and illegally possessing firearms and ammunition as a felon. In 2007, Rodriguez assaulted his wife by beating her repeatedly during an argument. Specifically, Rodriguez strangled, kicked and stabbed his wife several times with a pocketknife, causing her to suffer multiple lacerations, contusions, and blunt force trauma to her head and body. Rodriguez subsequently pled guilty to domestic violence causing great bodily injury, a strike offense, for which he served 8 years in state prison.

Following his release from prison, Rodriquez reunited with his wife. However, his wife, the victim in this case, moved out of their shared residence in August 2017 after Rodriguez began to threaten her and blame her for problems with his children. In September and November 2017, Rodriguez sent several messages to the victim posing with a semiautomatic firearm and telling her that he is going to "wreck her life." Rodriguez warned the victim that he was going to put her "in so much pain" that she would be "begging" for him to kill her. Rodriguez further told the victim that he knew where she lived and that "everything was set up" for the victim "to meet her maker." The victim was in fear of her life after she received the threatening messages from Rodriguez. The evidence shows that Rodriguez further intended to shoot the victim and then kill as many police officers as he could before being shot by the police.

Rodriguez is facing 11 years in state prison.

Dec. 22 — Juan Manuel Leon, 44, a resident of Gonzales, pled guilty to three counts of child molestation.

The victim, Jane Doe, reported that Leon, her family member, repeatedly sexually molested her over multiple years. Leon pled guilty to sexually molesting Jane Doe when she was 11 and 12 years old. Jane Doe stated that some of the sexual assaults occurred when her mother was not around and Leon was watching over her, while other assaults occurred when her other family members were asleep. Jane Doe felt scared and did not disclose the sexual assaults until she was 13 years old.

Leon will be sentenced to a maximum sentence of 10 years to be served in state prison. The charges Leon pled to are considered "strikes" under California's Three Strikes law and are also violent felonies so Leon will have to serve 85 percent of his sentence before being released. Additionally, Leon will be required to register as a sexual offender.

Council to consider bike shop's plan to offer rentals

By MARY SCHLEY

AFTER THE owners of a new bike shop called Mad Dogs & Englishmen were shot down by the planning commission last week in their bid to offer bicycles for rent, Mayor Steve Dallas and Mayor Pro Tem Carrie Theis asked that their application be brought to the city council for a vote.

Pebble Beach residents Jennifer Blevins and Martin Watson's shop is located in Red Eagle Alley near the city's designated bike route on San Carlos Street, and they plan to carry several premium American and European brands and styles ranging in price from $500 to $8,000, along with related clothing and gear. Mad Dogs would be open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. in the summer season, with shorter hours in the winter.

While most of the business would focus on sales and servicing bikes, Blevins and Watson proposed renting out up to 20 bicycles. Several other area shops, though none in Carmel-by-the-Sea, rent bikes to visitors, and at the March 14 hearing, senior planner Marnie Waffle recommended commissioners approve the business, including the rentals.

Chair Michael LePage and commissioner Julie Wendt agreed with Waffle. But the two other commissioners, Gail Lehman and Stephanie Locke, said they feel the city is too dangerous for bicycle rentals, with its narrow, crowded streets, pedestrians and pets. Lehman said she didn't feel cycling should be allowed in the city at all, while Locke worried about tourists unfamiliar with the roads and unmindful of the rules endangering themselves and others.

As a result, LePage's motion to approve the bike shop and rentals received a 2-2 vote, which is the same as a denial.

Did it on their own

While Blevins and Watson could have filed paperwork and paid a fee to have the council hear their proposal and decide their fate, Dallas and Theis decided to call it up on their own. Dallas' request came to city administrator Chip Rerig around 11:45 the morning after the hearing, while Theis sent hers Friday shortly after 11 a.m. According to the Carmel Municipal Code, "Upon the written request of two members of the city council, as individuals, the city council shall review any decision of a city board, commission, or committee," as long as the requests are received within 10 working days.

Rerig told them the Mad Dogs & Englishmen hearing will take place at the April 3 council meeting.

Feds fine city for filing W-2s six months late

By MARY SCHLEY

THE IRS imposed a $12,100 penalty on the city last December for failing to send its W-2s and other paperwork for the 2015 tax year in on time, assistant city administrator Maxine Gullo confirmed last week. The payment appeared in the check register ratified by the city council at its February meeting but was not discussed.

"The penalty received by the Department of Treasury, Internal Revenue Service was for the failure to timely file information returns," she said.

As an employer, the city is required to send all employees copies of their W-2s by Jan. 31 of each year, and it must send that information to the IRS by that deadline, as well. But the forms for the 2015 tax year were sent in more than six months late, according to Gullo.

"Although our new finance manager has requested an official breakdown of the penalty by the IRS, it is our assessment the city is being penalized $100 per return for being submitted after August 1, 2016," she said. "We are conducting an internal investigation to identify how our internal process failed."

But Gullo implied the failure was the result of having an unqualified person in charge of the task.

"As you are aware, one of the city administrator's objectives is to ensure that we have the right staff in the right seats to preclude this situation from happening again," she said.

Gullo also noted that new finance manager Robin Scattini has asked the IRS to refund the fine, "as the city has always been in good standing, and we are committed to submitting the required documents on time and by the deadline."

The paperwork for the 2017 tax year was submitted to and accepted by the IRS before the deadline, Gullo said.

Mozingo defends his office against detractors

By MARY SCHLEY

AFTER MAYOR Steve Dallas read his public apology — the text of which was published in last week’s Pine Cone — at a city council meeting Wednesday night, city attorney Glen Mozingo also read a statement responding to criticism.

In light of the investigation into harassment claims against Dallas and the publicizing of its conclusions earlier this month, he thanked the city council and the administration for supporting him in his role as city attorney, along with his assistant and deputy city attorneys, Jon Giffen and Gerard Rose.

“While any transition to a new administration is expected to encounter resistance from some, it has come to our attention that there is an element in the community, supported by bloggers, Facebook aficionados, and other social media that object to the enforcement practices, procedures and administration of the city attorney’s office,” he said.

And in efforts to discredit him and his fellow lawyers, “these individuals have chosen to attack the city attorney’s office and its members both professionally and personally,” Mozingo said.

But, other than preparing the statement he read at the March 21 meeting, he said he and the others won’t rise to the bait, even though the attacks “will certainly continue.”

“I want to assure the community that no taxpayer funds will be expended to respond to these attacks, nor will it divert us from our commitment to the duties and obligations of the office,” he said. “The community can rest assured that all members of the community will be treated with equality before the city council, boards or commissions.”

Mozingo said he and the others look forward to helping the city council meet its objectives and contend with the challenges of governing the city.

“The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea is a unique community that is entitled to the dedicated and committed efforts of all that have been entrusted to protect it,” he said. “The city attorney’s office will meet that commitment.”

Similarly, Mozingo has downplayed several threats made against him, including two phone calls from people who threatened to kill him. While one was too profanity-laden to quote directly, he told The Pine Cone, the other caller simply stated, “If Dallas walks, you die.” While the threats have given him a heightened awareness of his surroundings, he said, “I’m not wearing armor or hiding in the closet, or anything.”

Cal Am calls water group's claims 'false' and 'deceptive'

■ Asks customers to withdraw signatures from petition

By KELLY NIX

CALIFORNIA AMERICAN Water is pushing back against an effort by a water activist group to have the government take over the water company, calling the activists' claims of "lower water rates" false and misleading. Cal Am also says customers' water bills would be higher under public ownership.

Public Water Now has been circulating a petition to put a measure on the November 2018 ballot asking voters to approve public acquisition of Cal Am, if a study shows that doing so would be "economically feasible."

A government-run water system, Public Water Now claims, would mean lower water rates.

But in a mailer sent to its customers last week, California American Water challenged Public Water Now's claims, including that Monterey Peninsula ratepayers would pay less on their monthly water bills under public ownership.

"While circulating its petition, Public Water Now has made deceptive claims about water in Monterey County in order to secure signatures," according to the water company's flier. "You may have signed this petition under false pretenses."

The Cal Am mailer — which the takeover group called "disinformation and flat out lies" — informs customers that they can withdraw their signatures from the petition by sending a preprinted form with the ratepayer's name on it to the county registrar.

Among Public Water Now's erroneous claims — Cal Am says — is that the company's Monterey customers have the highest water rates in the country. Public Water Now bases the claim on a study by the Washington D.C.-based Food & Water Watch — an organization that lobbies for publicly owned water systems.

"This statement is false," the company's mailer says. "Public Water Now uses unrealistic usage numbers to skew the data."

Specifically, Cal Am spokesman Kevin Tilden told The Pine Cone that the Food & Water Watch study used extraordinarily high consumption levels for its study, which showed Cal Am's rates as the highest. The company said its rates are the second highest in the country behind Felton, a city whose voters decided to publicly take over its water system from Cal Am about 10 years ago.

No guarantees

In response to Cal Am's mailer, and in trying to make its case that Cal Am's rates are the nation's highest, Public Water Now spokeswoman Melodie Chrislock said Felton customers pay $101 per month for 5,400 gallons of water, while Cal Am customers pay $115 for the same amount.

But Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Stedman disputed Public Water Now's figures, saying that Cal Am customers actually pay $105.88 for 5,400 gallons of water, not $115. Felton customers also pay $37 in monthly property taxes to fund the takeover effort of their water utility, which was finalized in 2008.

Rates in Felton "went up significantly" after the public takeover, "despite claims to voters that costs would be less," Stedman added.

Although Public Water Now's mantra is that water rates would be "affordable" under public ownership of Cal Am's system, Chrislock softened the claim this week.

"We are not guaranteeing anything," she said. "We are looking at the data across the country. Consider the fact that 87 percent of the people in this country get their water from a public water agency for less cost. Look at the fact that Cal Am takes $19 million annually in profit and taxes. Both these considerations make it very likely that our water would be more affordable without Cal Am."

Stedman pointed to the group's campaign signs, which say "Want Affordable Water?"

Rio Park path on the outs as council considers projects for next year

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CITY council got its first look at a list of nearly two dozen capital projects proposed for the 2018/2019 fiscal year Wednesday night, along with some that public works director Bob Harary recommended abandoning. Among the latter is the Rio Park/Larson Field bike and pedestrian path that city officials have been working on since 2014, at a cost of more than $170,000 to taxpayers in planning alone.

At the March 21 meeting, Harary advised the council to ditch the pathway — because of the numerous and costly hurdles that would have to be overcome to build it — in favor of more pressing needs, like street repaving, sidewalk repairs, drainage work, new vehicles, work in Mission Trail park and at the beach, and the remodel of the police station.

Harary also suggested canceling a plan to offer free WiFi downtown. “We have such a great tree canopy cover, which is wonderful for beauty,” he said. “But it doesn’t really work for wireless, so we’re suggesting we cancel the project at this point.” That would return $32,000 to the pot.

Still on the list

In addition to several items undertaken in the fiscal year ending June 30 that are not yet completed, Harary listed 26 new projects and equipment purchases at a total cost of $3,943,650, but then suggested deferring eight of them, dropping the amount to $2,848,650.

The single biggest-ticket item on the remaining list is the renovation and expansion of the police station at Junipero and Fourth, at $1.5 million. This year, the council voted to spend $250,000 on architectural design, which is almost done. Some council members expressed interest in putting off the project, especially in light of rising retirement costs. The council is set to receive an update on the remodel at its April 3 meeting, city administrator Chip Rerig said.

Work in Mission Trail park would focus on removing invasive plants and trees, and restoration work will continue in the North Dunes area of Carmel Beach, according to Harary’s list. Sunset Center needs a new rigging system for the stage and a new boiler, since the one there was installed in the 1970s. He also recommended buying a new paint striper to avoid more of the famously wiggly center lines like those painted along San Carlos Street last year.

The building maintenance department should have a new truck, because its 1994 pickup is “a shelf and a wall,” since it’s parked in the garage with stuff piled up on it and leaning against it. And the police department wants to replace its BMW motorcycle with an electric one.

As Wednesday’s meeting was meant only as a first look at possible projects and funding for the coming fiscal year that starts June 30, the council didn’t make any decisions, but listened to members of the public who supported various projects, and provided some feedback themselves.

Council members will review a more detailed list of projects and costs next month.

“Once we decide what we definitely want to commit to, then we need a bottom-line amount of money,” Mayor Pro Tem Carrie Theis said. “And then Sharon [Friedrichsen, budgets and contracts director] can help us work through the shell game.”

Poll finds most P.G. voters want to increase taxes on hotels, vacation rentals

■ But housing is No. 1 issue

By KELLY NIX

PACIFIC GROVE residents feel that the lack of affordable housing is the “most important problem” facing the city, closely followed by short-term rentals and the city’s water supply, while an overwhelming majority believe the city should raise occupancy taxes for hotels, inns and vacation rentals, according to the results of a survey the city released this week.

The survey also showed that 41 percent of the 375 likely voters surveyed on the phone and online believe that the city has done a “poor” job of managing the city’s vacation rentals, while 28 percent gave the same grade for the way the city manages its pension obligations. Similarly, 22 percent said P.G. is doing poorly managing its finances.

If there’s a shining star, 47 percent of those polled said that “things in Pacific Grove are generally going in the right direction.” But 30 percent said “things have gotten pretty seriously off on the wrong track.”

The survey, conducted between Feb. 28 and March 8, was done by Oakland-based EMC Research, which the city paid $25,000.

The results are intended to show residents’ opinions about a ballot measure to raise city revenue, including increasing the transient occupancy tax for guests who stay in local inns and vacation rentals. The tax is collected by hoteliers.

The response from voters was decisive when the pollsters asked whether they would vote for a ballot measure to increase the TOT from 10 to 12 percent and 15 percent for vacation rentals. The increases would provide $1.37 million in additional revenue.

“The initial 2018 results indicated that there was 76 percent support for the measure, and 70 percent after hearing opposition statements,” the city said. “The initial support for the 2018 measure resulted in a rating that was two percentage points higher than” the results of a 2016 rating.”

Chamber of Commerce president Moe Ammar, who has been outspoken in his opposition to an increase in the TOT and wants to keep the tax at 10 percent, called it “normal” for residents to suggest that someone else pays for their services.

“The only difference this time is that Pacific Grove is the only city that is allowing short-term rentals” which have hit “traditional lodging establishments hard,” Ammar said.

Other “most important problems” in Pacific Grove identified by voters were lack of sustainable revenue stream, development and growth and budget/wasteful spending, conditions of roads and pensions, and “maintaining small-town character.”

Environment ... not so much

Only 2 percent identified “protecting the environment” as Pacific Grove’s biggest problem. Fifty-four percent of those polled said they were Democrats, 22 percent said they were Republicans, while the remainder did not state their political affiliation.

Ten percent of residents said they have a “strongly favorable” opinion of the Pacific Grove City Council, while 40 percent feel “somewhat favorable” about council members.

“The ratings for the council are 50 percent ‘favorable and somewhat favorable’ versus 31 percent unfavorable,” Councilman Rudy Fischer told The Pine Cone in response. “That’s probably about the ratio in most cities. That tracks with the finding that 47 per-

P.G. history ‘nerd’ honored by DAR for teaching

By ELAINE HESSER

THE DAUGHTERS of the American Revolution are passionate about history. Not without good reason — each and every one of the group’s members has to trace her genealogy to someone directly involved in the war for American independence.

So, when members of the Commodore Sloat Chapter in Monterey nominated P.G. Middle-School history teacher Brice Gamble for the DAR’s annual award as California’s Outstanding Teacher of American History, they weren’t messing around. For his part, Gamble said he was so sure he wasn’t going to win that he procrastinated sending in information about his teaching philosophy and his letters of recommendation. If he didn’t enter, he reasoned, he couldn’t lose.

He entered, and he was honored March 15 at the DAR’s state conference in Irvine, beating out 149 other chapters’ nominees.

Gamble, a self-described “nerd,” teaches eighth-graders about American history from colonization to about 1900. “History was the only subject I was ever good at,” he said, adding that his father was also a history buff. “We watched the Ken Burns Civil War series several times,” he said. “My dad was such a nerd he’d argue with the TV sometimes.”

His father’s influence was such that in Gamble’s own high school career, he ended up taking on a history teacher, just as his dad took on public television. He said the teacher was going on about World War I, and Gamble was talking to another student in the back of the room. The teacher asked, “Would you like to share what you’re talking about?” and Gamble said, “How you’re incorrectly teaching World War I.”

Oops. But rather than being kicked out of class, Gamble was invited up front to take over. He explained that the soldiers in the photo the teacher had been showing were British, and not German, as the instructor had been saying, based on the weapons they were holding.

The next year, his teacher asked him to share what he knew about World War II, and an education career was launched — sort of. After graduating from P.G. High in 1996, Gamble went to Chico State and majored in instructional technology, planning to become part of the boom in Silicon Valley — just in time for the dot-com bust.

Working the almonds

He decided to go back to school — this time at Fresno State — working his way through on a relative’s almond farm. Gamble said the first time they let him use a harvester — which shakes the dickens out of a tree — he overdid it and almost tore the tree out of the ground. “I was the only one on the farm who wasn’t farming after that,” he laughed.

After graduating with a degree in history and a teaching certificate, he came home and started teaching middle school. He enjoys teaching them in memorable ways.

For example, when discussing Pickett’s charge on the final day of the Battle of Gettysburg, he takes students outside and shows them the slope of Forest Avenue from Pine to the beach, which is about the same as the hill the Confederate soldiers charged up. He said some of his students have come back from a trip to Gettysburg and told him he had gotten it right.

Now that he’s won at the state level, he’s in the running for the national prize, where he’ll be competing with winners from the other 49 states. Meanwhile, his achievement was also celebrated at the Commodore Sloat DAR’s chapter meeting on March 20.

RONALD NORMAN VEITENGRUBER

May 5, 1940 to March 6, 2018

A talented designer who eschewed the spotlight, even as he worked for celebrities — and who always had a mischievous glint in his eye — Ron Veitengruber passed away at Community Hospital March 6, 2018. He was 77.

Born in Bay City, Mich., to Regina and Elmer Veitengruber, Ron attended high school there and was subsequently studying art history at Central Michigan University, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and Mensa, when a conversation with a friend led to a career he would pursue for decades. Although Ron was planning to be a teacher, friend Alden Dow asked for his input on the interior design and architecture of the now historic Alden B. Dow Home and Studio in Midland, Mich. After hearing Ron’s thoughts, Alden told him he should drop everything and become a designer.

So he did, going to work for W & J Sloan’s in San Francisco for several years, and at one time opening an antiques shop in an old railway station back home in Michigan. In a display of generosity that was characteristic of Ron, he ultimately handed the keys to the shop, along with all its contents, to a close friend who’d lost her husband.

Ron first visited the Monterey Peninsula when he accompanied friends to Big Sur and ended up at Nepenthe. At that moment, he knew this was where he wanted to be.

He left Michigan to move to Sausalito in 1968, the year he met Marcey McClure, when she asked for his help finding an office in the building where he worked. They married in 1974.

In the intervening years, Ron and Marcey lived in several areas of California as he did design work for a grandson of John D. Rockefeller, the Crown Prince of Saudi Arabia (whom he met when the former asked him for a cigarette), and George Lucas, among many others. All appreciated his open mind, unassuming manner and welcoming nature. When Jack and Eileen Feather, founders of the Cambridge Diet, asked him to design their offices in Monterey and to work on their homes in Pebble Beach, so began a 42-year working relationship and friendship that took him and his family to England — where he spent more than a year restoring a 14th century manor home for the couple in 1988. By then, son Michael was 7, and daughter Letty was 4.

The family traveled often to Europe and the East Coast, visiting auction houses — with kids in tow — as Ron shared his love of adventure with them.

His wit was sharp, and his humor sarcastic. He drove a convertible VW Bug in what was the world capital for American Cars in the 1960s. He bought a 1960 Morris Minor as a project for his children. He loved cars not because they were machines, but for their design and appearance. Ron had an eye for anything that was neat or quirky, and he craved information. He was caring, a mentor, carefree, nonjudgmental, and ridiculously honest. He advised people to find out what they love, and make it pay. Ron had a solid group of friends, and for years was part of the core group of artists and thinkers who gathered at Il Fornaio in Carmel, sharing coffee and stories with Hank Ketcham, Bill Bates, Eldon Dedini and other characters. Anyone who knew Ron quickly recognized he had a uniform: blue Oxford shirts, khaki pants and Cole Hahn shoes.

His French bulldog, Dieter, is part of the family and was one of the loves of his life.

Ron is survived by wife Marcey; son Michael and daughter-in-law Jennifer; daughter Letty; and siblings June Weiler, Michael Veitengruber, Cherie Brown, Richard Veitengruber, and Randy Veitengruber.

A celebration of Ron’s life will be held May 5. Visit the Virtual Memorials website, virtual-memorials.com, to share memories in his honor.

Memorial contributions in Ron’s name may be sent to Animal Friends Rescue Project, 160 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove, CA 93950.

Garland park site of Wildlife Day events

CALIFORNIA CELEBRATES Wildlife Day March 24 — and to mark the occasion, Garland Ranch Regional Park in Carmel Valley will be the site of an event with some very special guests.

Besides a few dignitaries, an assortment of wildlife — including an owl, a falcon, a red-tailed hawk and even a few bats — will be in attendance. Other highlights include a nature hike, an opportunity to explore the exciting world of water bugs, and a chance to sketch wildlife with a pair of artists, Paola Berthoin and Anne Greene.

Also, there will be interactive booths, arts and crafts projects for kids, and Green Pedal Couriers will serve bicycle-powered smoothies.

State Sen. Bill Monning and Assemblyman Mark Stone are scheduled to attend the event, along with 5th District Supervisor Mary Adams and other community leaders.

Co-hosted by the Carmel River Watershed Conservancy and Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, the event starts at 10 a.m. Participants will meet at Garland Park's visitor center, which is located just steps from a large parking area alongside Carmel Valley Road. The park is located about nine miles east of Highway 1 at 700 W. Carmel Valley Road.

Paul R. De Lay

*Pebble Beach
November 12, 1919 — March 15, 2018*

Paul R. De Lay, a retired attorney and naval officer, died March 15, 2018, at home in Pebble Beach. His two careers spanned 70 years with 20 years as a navy line officer and judge advocate and the remainder as a lawyer in Monterey County. He served 15 years in the district attorney and county counsel offices and then entered private practice in Carmel with David Laredo and Anne McGowan, specializing in public agency and education law. He represented Monterey County colleges and school districts, as well as other colleges and districts in the tri-county area. He reduced his law practice in 2010 but continued to maintain an office and partnership with David Laredo in Pacific Grove until his death.

Paul was born on November 12, 1919, in Beresford, South Dakota, the son of Jerome De Lay and Margaret Ruddy De Lay, a banker and teacher, respectively. With World War II impending, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy ten days after graduating from the University of Notre Dame in June 1941. After one year in enlisted service, he was commissioned as an officer and received extensive training at Harvard College as a communications officer. Two tours of duty in the amphibious forces in the southwest Pacific followed, beginning in the Solomon Islands and ending in the occupation of Japan in the fall of 1945. His assignments included adjunct duty with the 1st Marine Division on Guadalcanal and the U.S. Army First Cavalry Division in New Guinea.

While attending Georgetown Law School after WWII, he was employed by the Library of Congress where he met Anna-Lou McDaniel, a library editor, of Alexandria, Virginia, his wife of 63 years. Anna-Lou preceded him in death on July 4, 2010. He was recalled for service in the Korean War and remained on active duty until 1965, when he retired as a commander, after serving in the Navy Judge Advocate General Corps in the Western Pacific, Illinois, and California. While on duty in the western Pacific, he served as a trial judge in the civil courts of the Mariana Islands and as counsel for military tribunals prosecuting violators of United States territorial water restrictions in the Mariana and Bonin Islands (Iwo Jima) east of Japan.

He was admitted to the bars of the District of Columbia, State of California, and federal courts. During his last years of practice, he devoted most of his time to pro-bono service as legal counsel and advisor for charitable, non-profit, and educational organizations, including academic institutions establishing public schools in Central and South America and Tibet. He and Anna-Lou attended the Santa Fe and San Francisco Operas for years, as well as the San Francisco Symphony as season subscribers. He was a long-time member of the Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club and enjoyed racing on Monterey Bay. He and his wife were charter members of the Spanish Bay Club and the Monterey Bay Aquarium. His local community service included 22 years on the Del Monte Forest Land Use Advisory Committee, serving as chairman for 18 years, and over 45 years as a pastoral and finance council member, at St. Angela Merici Catholic Church, Pacific Grove.

In December 2013, Paul was honored by Pope Francis with the Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice medal, the highest papal award given laypersons for service to the Church. The honor was bestowed by The Most Reverend Richard J. Garcia, DD, Bishop of Monterey.

In May, 2016, he was honored by the Supreme Court, State of California, for 50 years of service as an active member of the California State Bar.

Paul is survived by three sons, Paul, Jr., M.D. (Karen), of Alexandria, Virginia, Fred (Susan) of Carmel Valley, and William (Sandra) of Sacramento, California, and granddaughter, Casey Ann De Lay, of Fresno, California.

Paul was the youngest of six brothers who served in WWII, five of whom served overseas at the same time. He credited his mother, Margaret De Lay, as the family hero in WWII. She lived alone, volunteering for the Red Cross, anticipating, each day, news from her sons serving in the European and southwest Pacific theaters.

He was preceded in death by his brothers and their wives, namely, Harold and Mary Elizabeth of St. Paul, Minnesota, Bernard and Frances of Norfolk, Nebraska, John and Irene of Castle Rock, Colorado, Jay and Pauline of Ann Arbor, Michigan, and Eugene and Josephine of Oakland, California.

The family of Paul De Lay would like to thank Father Seamus O'Brien, Father Jerry McCormack, Father Paul Murphy, and the Hospice of the Central Coast, especially Tammy, Anna, Matthew, and Margarita. Thank you also to Dr. Gary Grant, Candy Grant, and to Kevin Sezen.

A private Funeral Mass has taken place at St. Angela Merici Church, celebrated by Father Seamus O'Brien, preceded by burial at El Carmelo Cemetery, Pacific Grove. A Celebration of Life will be held on April 14th, between 1:00PM to 3:00PM at St. Angela Merici Church, 362 Lighthouse Ave, Pacific Grove, CA 93950. In lieu of flowers, please consider donations to St. Angela Merici Church, the SPCA for Monterey County, PO Box 3058, Monterey, CA, 93940 or your favorite charity. Please visit www.thepaulmortality.com to sign Paul's guest book and leave messages for his family.

“To try and backtrack now and say they aren’t making any guarantee of savings is very telling,” Stedman said.

The group this week said that lower water bills are “possible” under public ownership.

The Cal Am fier tells customers that no condemnation “of a water system has ever resulted in lower bills.”

But Public Water Now points to Missoula, Mont., which publicly acquired a private water system in June 2017.

Missoula’s “recent public takeover through eminent domain has resulted in lower water bills,” Chrislock said. “Not only are their bills lower, but they are also able to set aside money annually for needed repairs to their system. Missoula is a comparable system to ours in size.”

Missoula has 25,000 connections, while Cal Am’s Monterey system has about 41,000. Missoula’s website said the city “adopted the same rate structure as the one used” by the previous utility. The rates have been the same since before 2011.

Missoula Water superintendent Dennis Bowman said that while he has not heard any complaints about the cost of water, the “central aim of public ownership of the water utility was not to immediately lower the rates. The immediate need was to provide better care” for the water infrastructure.

If Public Water Now’s measure gets on the ballot and voters pass it, “it will legally demand that the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District initiate the process of purchasing Cal Am” via a takeover.

State law requires a feasibility analysis to determine if there would be a cost savings and public benefit of a government-run water system.

If that study shows that the community would save money on water under public ownership, only then would the water district start the process of purchasing Cal Am’s local assets, Chrislock said.

ESPINOZA.
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by FRANCISCO ESPINOZA in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.
The Petition for Probate requests that FRANCISCO ESPINOZA be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:
Date: June 13, 2018
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept.: 13
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.
If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

SCHOOLS

shelter-in-place drill this year, most recently at Carmel High," Behan said.

At this month's drill, the Monterey County Sheriff's Office observed and provided feedback.

District officials use a notification system to send mass phone calls, texts and emails to parents and some students, and to post the notices on the district website that can be translated into multiple languages.

As far as physical security goes, Behan said, the school board recently signed a contract for new surveillance systems and upgraded public address systems, and the schools have at least some barricades against hostile intruders, though they are not impervious.

"At Carmelo Childcare Center, River School and Tularcitos School, we have fencing around the sites with lockable gates at the entries. Carmel Middle School and Carmel High School have perimeter fencing along the back and sides," Behan explained.

"Carmel High also has three campus supervisors who patrol the parking lot and grounds."

Behan said the district is working on a master facilities plan that might address security issues.

"We also plan to form a specific safety task force to address the topic in depth," he said. "In addition, we engage a safety consultant to help us refine our plans each year."

At Junipero Serra, the only school within Carmel's city limits, principal Bruce Stewart said the campus is bordered by a metal fence with locking gates, and has security cameras throughout. But a walkway between the Carmel Mission and the campus is only blocked with a rope, which may discourage people who are simply lost or curious, but couldn't hold back a person who wanted to do harm.

"The parish has been discussing different ways we might be able to make sure the separation of the school and the courtyard is better defined, but they haven't done anything," Stewart said.

The school does not conduct drills for intruders, however, because that could "create fear" in the younger kids.

"We train the teachers and review the procedures, so teachers know what to do in a Code Red lockdown, if an intruder is on campus or very nearby," he said. "They'll lock the doors and then instruct the students what to do, which could be to shelter in place."

'You go in immediately'

Carmel Police Cmdr. Luke Powell said officers do active-shooter training with the sheriff's office every other year, and have upgraded their equipment and procedures to be better prepared for a shooting here. While Junipero Serra is the only campus in the city, Carmel High, Carmel Middle, River School and Stevenson's lower school are all close enough that Carmel police would go there, too.

"We would send units immediately," he said. "Any incident involving kids, we're going to send units."

While the deputy in Parkland took cover outside after hearing gunfire, Powell said Carmel police are trained to "go immediately to the threat."

"You don't wait for backup," he said. "You go in immediately and engage the threat."

He also said training for teachers has evolved. While they used to focus on lockdowns, they now follow a protocol: "Alert, Lockdown, Inform, Counter and Evacuate."

 "There are more options than just lockdown," he said. "You may have to take other action to preserve your life."
 Officers now carry rifles in their cars, and have active-shooter kits with ballistic vests and helmets. They can also use a ballistic shield to protect more than one person from gunfire.
 Powell said CPD is set to meet with Serra School officials to review the safety plan, which was updated a few years ago, and the department is careful to maintain its partnership with the school district and the sheriff's office, "because we're not going to be successful if we're not unified."

■ Pacific Grove, Monterey and Stevenson

Monterey Peninsula Unified School District spokeswoman Marci McFadden said that revenue from a 2010 school bond measure allowed the district to install security fencing at its schools. The work was completed over the last few summers.
 Still, some Peninsula schools have unlocked gates that allow anyone to enter while school is in session. MPUSD and Pacific Grove Unified School District told The Pine Cone they require only visitors to check in at the front desk — but that only affects people who comply.
 Schools in those districts don't even have locked doors that would allow visitors to be buzzed in. Stevenson School spokeswoman Elena Mueller said the private school has visitor check-in at both campuses.

 PGUSD has security cameras monitoring its doors, and the district is assessing its practices of locking classroom doors and utilizing locking devices that would enable students and teachers — in the event of a lockdown — to close doors "in a swift and effective manner."
 "Our school board will consider additional safety measures recommended by site administrators and PGPD at an upcoming meeting, which will include upgrading our surveillance systems and providing ongoing professional development to all district staff in school safety protocols," PGUSD director of student safety Barbara Martinez told The Pine Cone.
 Like Carmel Unified, MPUSD follows the "Alert, Lockdown, Inform, Counter and Evacuate" protocol, which McFadden said provides students and staff the skills, "to make the best decisions for survival should they ever experience a life-threatening emergency — in school or in life."
 "We continue to work on ensuring that all schools are in compliance with those protocols and other requirements," she explained.
 Similarly, PGUSD in 2015 started training its administrators and teachers in a safety program called "The Big Five — School Emergency Guidelines," which is supposed to increase "chances of survival" in the event of an immediate threat.
 "Changing the practices of traditional school safety measures, where once students sat quietly in a corner, now our staff and students are learning how to barricade doors, and if possible, escape the building safely," PGUSD superintendent Ralph Porras told parents in an email.

 In 2016, all of Pacific Grove Unified school sites underwent a threat assessment, while MPUSD the same year had an independent consultant assess its safety protocols.
 Stevenson, also in 2016, hired a "preeminent" consultant to perform an extensive safety review of its upper and lower school campuses.
 For physical security, Pacific Grove schools have a school resource police officer who splits 160 hours a month among the district's campuses, while MPUSD said it "partners with local law enforcement for school resource officer support."
 Stevenson, which has an upper school in Pebble Beach and an elementary school in Carmel, has 24-hour security where its boarding students live, Mueller said.
 Mueller said Stevenson also recently hired former Seaside Police Chief Tony Sollecito — who has more than 40 years of law enforcement experience — to be the school's first full-time director of campus safety and security. Given Sollecito's experience, coupled with the 2016 safety audit, Stevenson plans on making "incremental improvements."
 McFadden said MPUSD "regularly assesses its safety protocols."
 "The Parkland incident reminds all schools that consistent practice and readiness are important components to maintaining a safe school environment," Martinez said. We will certainly review recommendations that come from the [Parkland] incident and apply those to our plan as appropriate."

Cone about the clerical error.

In any case, Ramirez-Betancourt implicates Rodea-Castro in a “statement of facts” about the case, which he signed in late February.

“The aliens had entered the United States at a time and place other than as designated by immigration officers, and Rodea-Castro and I helped them elude [the officers],” the statement says.

Prosecutors alleged that Rodea-Castro and Ramirez-Betancourt profited from trying to bring the four Mexican nationals across the border. Three of the immigrants told authorities they each paid $8,000 to be taken across the border, while the fourth paid $4,000.

Ramirez-Betancourt acted as “bait” to distract U.S. Border Patrol Agents as Rodea-Castro picked up the immigrants in a white F-150 truck, which agents seized after his arrest.

Attorney Blanca Zarazua, who represented Rodea-Castro during an unsuccessful bond hearing, said he has no prior criminal convictions. He has a 3-year-old daughter and a girlfriend here, but faces deportation to Mexico, his home country, after he finishes serving time in federal custody, if a judge orders that as part of his sentence.

Dreier told The Pine Cone that Day has many fans making the trip to Carmel, including some from distant places. Each is a testament to her enduring star power and “girl next door” charm.

“People are coming from as far away as Germany and England,” the singer said. “This is like the Comic-Con for Doris. Even though she is one of our biggest motion picture stars, we all feel connected to her, like she is a friend.”

which appeared to be life threatening, according to Tomasi.

As they waited for the ambulance, "Mejia stated the 'Devil' was trying to kill him, and his train of thought was disconnected from reality," according to police.

Meanwhile, in the front seat of the car, officers reportedly found the crossbow and two darts.

"It is believed this is what Mejia was reaching for prior to the 'less lethal' deployment," Tomasi said.

At Community Hospital, medical staff determined Mejia "sustained only superficial injuries" from being hit with what are essentially small bean bags fired from a 12-gauge shotgun. Powell said Carmel officers carry two types of less lethal ammunition, and he chose the one that had more range, because he was standing more than 40 feet away, and the round had to break the passenger window of Mejia's car to reach him.

The deputy continued to search for a man with a gun, in case that call was legitimate, but found no one. Tomasi said police believe Mejia made the call himself in order to get them to respond. CHOMP held him for a mental-health evaluation for several hours but eventually released him.

"This is a great example of officers using their experience and training to diffuse a potentially deadly situation with the least amount of force possible," Tomasi said.

Powell said he believes Mejia was attempting suicide by cop.

"I think that is exactly what this subject wanted to happen, and fortunately we had the tools, training and personnel available to use less lethal means to get him the mental health help he needed," he said.

Because Powell used his shotgun to subdue Mejia, the incident is considered an officer-involved shooting, but Tomasi opted not to have the Monterey County District Attorney's Office conduct an investigation, since his injuries amounted to little more than bruises.

"It is up to the [law enforcement] agency whether or not to request a DA investigation in such a situation," confirmed Monterey County Chief Assistant District Attorney Berkley Brannon. "The agency has discretion whether or not to request a DA investigation when baton rounds or bean bags are fired."

Israeli chamber group, local prize winner returns to Sunset Center

TWELVE YEARS after winning a second-place prize in the Carmel Music Society Instrumental Competition, clarinetist Tibi Cziger returns to Sunset Center with The Israeli Chamber Project Sunday, March 25.

back in 2006.

“He was still college when he came with us, and he went on to help found The Israeli Chamber Project,” Ann Thorp of the Carmel Music Society told The Pine Cone.

The ensemble, which made its Sunset Center debut in 2012, performs chamber masterworks and newly commissioned work by Israeli composers. In 2011, the Israeli Ministry of Culture gave the group its Outstanding Ensemble Award.

“They’re incredible players — all of the them,” Thorp said. “They have very strong backgrounds, and they play an unusual mix of instruments. We’re looking forward to an exciting performance.”

At Sunset Center, the group will perform an arrangement of four scenes from Igor Stravinsky’s Petrushka; Gilad Cohen’s Firefly Elegy; Elliott Carter’s Espirit Rude, Espirit Doux; Maurice Ravel’s Introduction and Allegro; and Robert Schumann’s Piano Quintet in E flat Major, Op. 44.

The concert starts at 3 p.m. Tickets are $45 to $60. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 626-8254 or visit www.carmelmusic.org.

SLO-MO FILMMAKER OFFERS TRIP TO BIG SUR — INSIDE MONTEREY AIRPORT

A PIONEER in time-lapsed cinematography, Louie Schwartzberg recently unveiled his latest project at Monterey Regional Airport — a 17-minute slow-motion short film about Big Sur.

The clip will play continuously in the ticketing area, offering travelers something to help fill the time while making flight arrangements or checking bags.

Like much of Schwartzberg's work, the film calls attention to the beauty of nature — and in particular, the world-famous scenic charms of Big Sur.

"I hope my films inspire and open people's hearts," said the award-winning filmmaker. "Beauty is nature's tool for survival — we protect what we love."

Airport officials worked with the artist to assemble the clips that make up the film. They hope the film "will attract and engage people," and "entice them to visit these beautiful locations."

The airport's executive director, Mike La Pier, said projects like Schwartzberg's "enhance this region's reputation locally, nationally and around the world."

The airport is located at 200 Fred Kane Drive. www.montereyairport.com

■ Pioneer remembered

New at the Monterey Museum of Art next week will be an exhibit of art by one of California's most important female painters, the late E. Charlton Fortune.

According to museum officials, Fortune "came of age during a time when women began to challenge the status quo and redefine their expected roles in society."

A survivor of the 1906 San Francisco earthquake, Fortune achieved fame for her impressionist and modernist landscapes in the early 20th century. After moving to Carmel in 1927, her focus shifted to religious art. She formed a group of artists to paint Roman Catholic churches, and she was later honored

Smuin Ballet back at Sunset, Sinatra piece to close the show

By CHRIS COUNTS

CONTINUING ITS journey along the cutting edge of dance — and reinventing an art form that has been around since the Renaissance — the always inventive Smuin Ballet returns Friday and Saturday, March 23-24, to Sunset Center.

Titled "Dance Series 1," the program will open with "Serenade for Strings" by choreographer Garrett Ammon, which is set to music by Tchaikovsky.

"We did this piece a couple of years ago, and I'm glad have chance to revisit it," Smuin Ballet's artistic director, Celia Fushille, told The Pine Cone. "It's an engaging opener."

Next up is "Requiem for a Rose" by Annabelle Lopez Ocho, which will be performed

PAIRING MUSIC AND BUBBLY, CHAT WITH A WINEMAKER, AND BREWS FOR BOOKS

THE FIFTH annual GourmetFest Carmel brought its usual high level of talent to town for four days of food, wine, socializing and discussion over the weekend, and with it, interesting insight into the world of Champagne.

usual concept of pairing: putting music, not food, with Champagne. A researcher at Oxford University, Krug said, discovered that music activates an area of the brain to change perceptions of taste. He invited guests Sunday morning to sip their Champagnes — which included rare vintages, grande cuvées and rosés — and then close their eyes, hear whichever musical selection he chose, and sip again.

Some of the pieces were rhythmic, while others were orchestral. One featured solo violin. Each evoked something different, perhaps even for skeptics.

To share that experience with Krug fans across the globe, the company created an app for mobile phones in which the user enters a special Krug ID number linked to whatever bubbly that person happens to be drinking, and gets not only all the information even the geekiest wine geek would hope to obtain, but music pairings, too.

Krug's rare 2003 Clos du Mesnil, for instance, is unusual because it's made from a single vineyard in a single year, while many Champagnes combine fruit from multiple properties and multiple years. The 2003 vintage experienced an early spring followed by two crippling frosts, and then a deadly heat-wave that had the grapes picked in August, the earliest harvest in the Champagne region since 1822. The resulting sparkling wine is expressive, pure and balanced, with a distinctive brightness.

And so, Krug suggests an equally expressive and precise music pairing from Thelonious Monk. "He is a composer who came from off-track ways, very direct, very sharp, very precise. He manages to bring you in, draw you into the music, and stays long in your mind," according to Krug.

The concept is intriguing, and the research is compelling. The Krug app kept crashing, so

Meet Silvestri's winemaker

Winemaker Frank Melicia will make an appearance at the Silvestri Vineyards tasting room to talk about some of his favorites, new releases and other winery news Friday, March 23, from 4 to 6 p.m.

Owned by renowned film composer Alan Silvestri and wife Sandra, Silvestri Vineyards is located in Carmel Valley, and all of the wines Melicia makes are produced from the grapes they grow. Silvestri offers Chardonnays and Pinot Noirs, as well as Barbera, Syrah, Pinot Gris, Pinot Blanc, rosé of Pinot Noir, and a red blend called Eugenia that contains Syrah, Barbera and Pinot Noir.

Fans and newcomers should stop by for the rare opportunity to chat with Melicia in the tasting room, which is located on Seventh Avenue between Dolores and San Carlos streets. For more information, visit www.silvestrivineyards.com.

Beach ball fundraiser

The Junior League of Monterey County will raise funds to further its efforts to support female leadership and strengthen the community by hosting the Beach Ball Fundraiser March 24 at the Monterey Beach House at 285 Figueroa St. in Monterey. The Junior League promotes voluntarism, provides leadership training, and operates a program aimed at reducing childhood obesity throughout Monterey by helping to plant veggie gardens at school campuses.

The ball will begin at 6:30 p.m. with cocktails and a silent auction, followed by a "strolling dinner," in which guests visit various food stations. A live auction and raffle will raise more funds for the group, and the evening will wrap up with s'mores on the beach.

Tickets are $60 per person, while VIP tickets — which include early entry at 6 p.m., a drink ticket and a swag bag — are $75. They can be purchased through Eventbrite.com.

Village Corner and Flaherty's host mixer

Flaherty's and the Village Corner, located in the area of Dolores and Sixth, practically across the street from each other, are teaming up for a Carmel Chamber of Commerce business mixer Thursday, March 29, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. The two restaurants are linked in that Ken Spilfogel, who runs Flaherty's, is also a partner with chef Soerke Peters and Amy Stouffer in the Village Corner. During the mixer, both venues will share their menus while providing small bites and wine. The cost is $10 per person for chamber members and $20 for everyone else. Visit www.carmel-chamber.org for more information.

Tricycle Pizza online

Fans of Tricycle Pizza in New Monterey can now order their pies online and pick them up during regular business hours from 3 to 8 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, and noon to 8 p.m. Saturday.

Tricycle's pies are all "personal size"

— 10 inches with eight slices — and run from $11 to $13. More traditional offerings like cheese, pepperoni, sausage, and combos thereof, are complemented by chicken pesto, wood-fired mushrooms and fennel sausage, vegetarian with and without cheese, and pepperoni jalapeño. This week's special is The Lasagna Pizza, with a base of ricotta cheese topped with Parmesan, oregano, fresh mozzarella, ground beef with tomato sauce, basil and shaved Asiago. A couple of salads and desserts are offered, too.

Tricycle is located at 899 Lighthouse Ave., and the website is www.tricyclepizza.com.

Alvarado Street Brewery continues its support of Monterey Public Library with Brews for Books. On the last Wednesday of each month, 10 percent of guests' checks, including beer, will be donated to the library when customers present a bookmark or flier from the library, or a library card. The next Brews for Books will be March 28.

The brewery, restaurant and beer garden are located at 426 Alvarado St. For more information, visit www.alvaradostreetbrewery.com or call (831) 655-2337.

Thursdays = prime rib

The Beach House at Lovers Point now offers smoked prime rib on Thursdays.

"Chef Mathew Farmer bought himself a smoker!" said the restaurant's owner, Kevin Phillips.

Farmer takes a whole prime rib roast and smokes it over pecan wood, after which it's sliced to order and served with smashed Yukon gold potatoes, sautéed spinach, crisp fried onions, jus, horseradish cream and freshly grated horseradish.

The dish sells for $29.

"We have served it three times, and it sold out every time," he said.

The Beach House is located at 620 Ocean View Blvd. in Pacific Grove.

Message from Basil owner

Denis Boaro, who took over ownership of Basil Seasonal Dining at San Carlos and Seventh from chef Soerke Peters, wanted to advise fans and customers of the restaurant that Italian chef Andrea Palmieri "is putting together the final details to bring himself and his family here from Italy to Carmel to showcase his amazing culinary creations at Basil."

Wine flies free

Alaska Airlines' popular Wine Flies Free program, in which mileage-plus members can check up to a case of wine without paying a baggage fee, expanded to airports in 29 cities last month — including Monterey.

Launched in 2007, the program was intended to support wineries in the airline's destination areas while helping customers, who can become mileage-plus members for free, bring home the wines they most enjoyed during their travels. "Oftentimes, wineries are unable to ship cases of wine directly, or consumers are faced with costly shipping fees to transport wine," an airline representative explained. The free program addresses those problems while supporting local wineries, too, since customers have more reason to buy their favorite finds.

For details on how to prepare wine for flight, visit <https://blog.alaskaair.com/travel-tips/how-to-check-a-case-of-wine-for-free>.

New Lucky store touts local angles

The former Albertson's/Lucky/SaveMart store at the mouth of the valley reopened late last month as the second new Lucky California store, which aims to tap into the "thriving food culture" of Northern California by featuring "locally grown foods, unique cuisine and diverse cultures from throughout the region." It also contains a coffee bar operated by Peet's.

In homage to the local theme, the store will have two large murals "celebrating the food culture of the region" painted by students from Carmel High School. In return, the company will donate $2,000 to the school's art program. Lucky also partnered with the Doris Day Animal Foundation, since Day is local, and contributed $2,500 to the foundation's annual birthday celebration, which is taking place March 30-31 this year. People who use the word, "local," when buying tickets at ddaf.org or by calling (831) 620-7455 will receive half off a second ticket when buying one at full price.

"I've been a fan of Annabelle's work for a number of years," Fushille explained. "When I had a chance to meet her in New York, I inquired if we could use her piece."

The choreographer said yes. "The company enjoyed working with her — she was able to pull things out of the dancers," Fushille continued. "It was remarkable."

The show's finale will be a performance of "Fly Me to the Moon," a ballet written by the dance company's late funder Michael Smuin and set to the music of Frank Sinatra.

When they're not on the field, these athletes also shine in the classroom

BRIGHT IS better than dim in almost every sport, but Carmel coach Mark Abrahams believes brains are especially useful in lacrosse.

And the intelligence level of the players on the Padres' squad might explain, at least in part, why they haven't lost a game in the Mission Trail Athletic League in more than three years, and why Abrahams, in his second making his team tough to defend. And when it comes to protecting the Carmel goal, Abrahams says he usually can depend on his defenders to be in the right place, with good body position — fundamentals that make life difficult for opposing teams trying to score.

"We've got kids on this year's team who are planning to become doctors, and engineers, and astrophysicists, and that makes a difference," he said. "Athleticism and intelligence are a really good fit in lacrosse."

Last year's team went 11-0 in league, and 14-3 overall, but only seven players return from that roster. Most notable among that group are midfielder Kenshi Husted (who made the All-MTAL team), defender Joe Johnsson, and two attackers, Logan Vandembroucke and Luke Melcher. All are co-captains this season.

"Joe and Logan are probably our emotional leaders on the field. Luke has been the league's top scorer so far this season. And Kenshi is a kid who never takes a play off — not in a game, not in practice. He plays extremely hard, he listens in every huddle, and he exemplifies hard work and smart play," Abrahams said.

After four games this year (all victories), Melcher, a junior, has 16 goals, plus six assists, but he's not the only weapon. Husted (8 goals, 3 assists), Jared Bethea (5 goals), and Johnsson (4 goals) also have had an early impact. And senior Aaron McCluskey, a first-year starter at an attacker position, has the team's hardest, fastest shot. Ben Bouhaja, a junior, Christian Arnold, a varsity veteran, Elias Herro, a face-off specialist, and 6-3, 200-pound Jake Kasper are also expected to evolve into impact players for the Padres.

Making it easier

Johnsson, who plays long stick middle, is the rock of a young defense that also includes first-year starters Mason Abrahams (son of the coach) and Benjamin Lund — both juniors — and freshman Grant Galloway.

Their job is to make life easier for senior goalkeeper David Huh, who stepped into a starting role this season.

The 14-team MTAL has been divided this season into "A" and "B" divisions, placing 2017's top seven teams together. That leaves the Padres to contend with arch-rival Scotts Valley, Aptos, Stevenson, Pacific Grove, San Benito, and Salinas. The new arrangement should result in a more balanced league, but Carmel isn't setting its sights any lower. Monday's 15-3 victory over Pacific Grove was the Padres 44th in a row in regular-season MTAL games, dating back to April 23, 2014.

Alumni Watch

Professional golfer Skyler Finnell, a Carmel native and Stevenson School product (class of 2012), tied for second place on March 18 in the Guatemala Stella Artois Open, the opening tournament of the 2018 season on the PGA's Latino America Tour.

Finnell, 24, finished the tournament with a four-round score of 272, tied with Auburn alumnus Matt Gilchrest of Greenwich, Conn. They were four strokes off the pace of winner Ben Pollard of St. Paul, Minn.

Two other Monterey County golfers, Matt Pinizzotto, a Palma High alumnus who played at UCLA, and Luke Vivolo, a Carmel High product and former UC Davis golfer, missed the cut. A total of 144 golfers participated.

Finnell's four-day scores on the par-72 course were 68, 68, 67 and 69, for a tournament total of 16 strokes under par. He earned $15,400 for his runner-up finish.

Finnell was recruited out of high school by Southern Methodist, UC Berkeley, Stanford, UCLA and Michigan before settling on the University of San Diego.

Last year, Finnell's first as a touring pro, he earned $1,190 on the Mackenzie Canada Tour — with a season-best finish of 50th season as head coach, is optimistic about winning the league title again despite graduating 14 seniors from his 2017 squad.

"Our whole roster is full of 4.0 students, and all of our long-pole defenders are at 4.0 or better," the coach said. "Lacrosse has a different IQ component than most other sports, especially on defense, and when you look at the All-MTAL lists at the end of every year, our kids always have higher grade-point averages than any of the other schools."

Intellect and focus are secret weapons enabling Abrahams to deploy seven different formations and run more than 50 plays,

Why health care and education cost so much

THE ORIGINAL San Francisco Bay Bridge was finished in 1936 at a cost of $77 million.

By 2013, inflation had driven prices up about 16 times in this country, according to the U.S. Department of Labor, which means a replacement bridge should have been doable for a little more than $1.2 billion.

But the new San Francisco Bay Bridge, of course, had to conform to more modern standards of sturdiness and safety. Assuming the new one needed to be twice as good as the old one, even with modern standards for earthquakes and so forth, you might think a new bridge between San Francisco and Oakland could have been built for about $2.4 billion.

But you'd be wrong — way wrong. The San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, which opened in 2013, cost $6.4 billion to build — almost six times the cost of the old one (in adjusted dollars).

Meanwhile, all sorts of goods produced by the private sector have gone down in price since the 1930s. In those days, for example, a simple tabletop radio cost $70 — far more than the adjusted price of very nice color television today. A refrigerator cost $500 in the 1930s, which is 10 times more expensive than a high-tech refrigerator now. And despite all the talk about the price of gasoline being high, the current price of about $3 per gallon is less than the inflation-adjusted price in 1935.

The private sector does a very good job of controlling costs, but when the government is in charge of building anything, the price seems to go up exponentially. Examples of this can be found in the news almost every day. And its cause is well known: Tax money is often spent cavalierly, because it doesn't belong to the people spending it.

But there's another important factor that distorts prices when the government spends money — not only on its own projects, but when it decides to make something "affordable" by subsidizing spending by private citizens.

To see this at work, just take a look at the cost of health care. According to CNBC, from 1976 until 2014, the Consumer Price Index (a rough measure of inflation) was up about 150 percent. But health care increased a whopping 350 percent, and the tuition and fees at universities increased more than 200 percent. And those are parts of the economy where the government not only buys a lot of services for itself, it pays the bills for millions of private citizens who are in school or getting medical care.

Meanwhile, during that same time frame, the food and beverage and housing sectors (where the government is heavily involved, though not as much as health care and education) were up about 140 percent. But when it came to clothing, the price increase was only about 40 percent, much less than inflation. And consumer electronic goods, such as televisions and computers actually went down. And those are things where government spending is the least of all.

The bottom line is that whether it's a government-owned-and-built project, or a segment of the private economy where government spending is a major influence, prices start going through the roof — not only because the government cares little about getting bang for its buck, but because institutions and businesses that become flush with government cash start feeling "rich," and spend accordingly — which explains why so many hospital CEOs and university presidents make huge salaries.

If your family's budget isn't padded with government grants and subsidies, and especially if you work for a private business where money comes in only if it's earned, there's a good chance you know all about spending wisely. But the government acts like it will never run out of money. And as long as you keep working and paying taxes, it never will.

Run Steve run

Dear Editor,

After reading Mayor Steve Dallas' apology, I hope we are finally ready to move forward. Dallas says he has learned a painful, personal and professional lesson, and I take him at his word.

As to the unsatisfied voices still yapping, I say, "Shame on you."

In my opinion, this entire fiasco was manufactured by a small group wanting to remove Dallas from office and return to preferential politics of another time.

My concern is that Mayor Dallas will be so affected by what this fiasco has done to his family that he will decide not to run in November.

Dallas has been an effective and energetic mayor, and my family and I want him to know that we fully support him and hope he runs for re-election in November.

'He has tried very hard'

Dear Editor,

Having read and accepted the apology from Steve Dallas, I'm ready to support him in the upcoming election. He has tried very hard to improve our little village.

Who needs a robot?

Dear Editor,

As a Carmel native, I am rather perplexed to hear that tourists need a robot to greet, direct and inform people about happenings and locations in our beautiful village.

Why not spend the $25,000 required to purchase "Pepper" to give a courteous, informed, polylingual, dare I say charming person a job?

Tourists flock to this village, as they have for decades, to enjoy its Old World charm and experience a unique and lovely place devoid of theme park cuteness.

This idea of having a robot smacks of Disneyland and creates a precedent for even more tech-y gimmicks as we slide down the slope to join the world of uniform, canned and generic life so prevalent in much of our world.

A search for compassionate care for his grandma — and yours

JOHN O'BRIEN and his wife Susan raised their three children in Pacific Grove the old-fashioned way, with reverence for family and dedication to community service.

The couple met in third grade at Monte Vista Elementary in Monterey, and escorted one another through school, all the way to UC Santa Cruz, as the best of friends. It is that enduring friendship, O'Brien said, that keeps them together even today.

O'Brien, who graduated from UCSC with dual degrees in psychology and psychobiology, imagined he might go on to medical school, with a focus on geriatric psychiatry, or maybe a graduate degree in neuropsychology. Yet, before he got to grad school, his grandmother's descent into dementia captivated his interest.

Hoping to find better ways to deal with what he saw happening to her, he went to work for a local organization that provided case management for mentally ill adults in a long-term residential treatment program. And that became his life's work.

"Anybody who's cared for an aging parent or grandparent knows it's not a simple journey," O'Brien said. "Along the way, you encounter the primary care doctor, specialists, the hospital, transition to a nursing home, money issues, family dynamics, nosy neighbors, grief, loss and death."

He also noted that insurance and government programs often dictate what options are available to patients.

After spending two decades in senior

The service his company provides is analogous to getting off a plane in a new place and meeting the cousin who will show you around, who knows what roads to take. In O'Brien's case, his company helps people find their way through the unexpected twists and turns of the health care journey.

"We've been down this road with Alzheimer's, dementia, Parkinson's and diabetes, to name a few, all from a client-centered point of view. We don't base our care on the diagnosis. We address what the client needs."

For example, when a patient has serious breathing difficulties and can no longer walk his dog, he may get depressed, stop eating and even stop taking his meds, O'Brien said. So, a caregiver from Central Coast Senior Services would sit him down by the window and take the dog out to walk and play where he can see it.

'Always a champion'

When O'Brien is not on the job, he turns his attention to other organizations dedicated to senior well-being — including the Alzheimer's Association, Ombudsman for Long-Term Care, RotaCare Clinic of Monterey Peninsula, and Meals on Wheels, where he served as president and oversaw a $2 million capital campaign.

"I have known John O'Brien for more than 30 years, and he has always been a champion for seniors and their families in our community," said Viveca Lohr, executive director for Meals on Wheels for the Monterey Peninsula. "He has dedicated himself to learning what resources are available and how to successfully 'age in place.' John has been a stellar and engaged member of our board, and he's my go-to person when I have a question or need some wisdom."

O'Brien considers the organizations he supports his off-hours hobby, something he enjoys and wants to do when not on the job. Since wife Susan works in human resources for the company, the marriage of working together and volunteering is something the long-term couple has figured out, O'Brien said.

"Volunteering in the community is a way to be part of something bigger than any individual or organization," he said. "I can't do it all by myself, so it's great to join organizations that can. This has been a great place for my kids to do community service, and it continues to be a great place for me, as well."

way the city manages its finances, called the survey "invalid" because pollsters "failed to inform" those polled that the city was "drowning" in financial reserves.

"Kampe and Fischer note that the City of Pacific Grove has about $11 million in 'reserves,' so clearly there is no need for any new taxes," Moore said in an email to the council and members of the press.

Fischer conceded that the city has built up the surplus "by not doing the work we should have been doing" on the city's roads, streetlights and other infrastructure projects.

healthcare at a variety of organizations, in 1996, O'Brien established Central Coast Senior Services in Monterey, for which he continues to serve as CEO.

The company's stated mission is to provide "care management and non-medical assisted living services for individuals who, due to illness, injury or aging, need help with bathing, dressing, grooming, cooking or transportation and management of the home."

"In short, we change people's lives," O'Brien said.

cent of residents surveyed feel the city is on the right track against 30 percent who think it is on the wrong track.

Fischer said he was a bit surprised that 77 percent of those surveyed said they felt the city has a "great need" or "some need" for more revenue, considering the city has "underspent our income every year for the past 10 years — and has $10.4 million in surplus on hand."

Resident John Moore, a frequent critic of the

'No, really ... what do you want to do?'

THOSE WHO believe we are largely the sum of our life experiences might appreciate the story of Joaquin Turner, who reaches back more than 30 years to pinpoint the moment when he decided he was destined to become an artist — a day he spent with his family at an art museum in Europe.

"I was probably 10 years old, and I remember noticing a woman who was staring at a

It's a cozy space where he showcases his own paintings and others he's collected, all reflecting the influences he absorbed as a child in Europe, then blended with concepts and techniques he borrowed from the early California artists after his family returned to live in Pacific Grove in 1991.

His obsession with art made him "a bit of an outcast" at Pacific Grove High (class of '93), where his friends were more likely to choose skateboarding over a day at a museum. Some of his teachers also tried to alter his trajectory.

"They'd ask me, 'What do you want to do for a living?'" he said.

"I always told them I wanted to paint, and I'd get a blank stare, and then they'd say, 'No, really ... what do you want to do?'"

As a 16-year-old, during his first visit to the Monterey Museum of Art, he discovered the work of the early Monterey artists — Charles Rollo Peters, Percy Gray, Francis McComas, and others — and immediately flashed back to what he had seen in Europe.

Worlds collide

"Their paintings reminded me of that European romanticism, and you could see the influence of the old masters, but they were painting the local landscape. That's when my two worlds seemed to collide," he said. "They were painting our landscape in a style that later was called tonalism, which also became known as the Monterey style."

What Turner noticed in their paintings — and strove to emulate — was an aura of mystery and romance he sees in the way sunlight filters through the moisture in Monterey's atmosphere, best captured in the early morning or late afternoon hours.

"Those early artists viewed this area as a mystical place, and that's also what attracts me," he said.

Turner and his wife of 13 years, Amelia Ward (a York School product), worked with start-up companies in San Francisco after graduating from college. But Turner grew weary of long hours staring at a computer screen as a graphic designer and began to wonder if he'd look back in regret if he didn't pursue his lifelong dream of creating fine art.

"So, with my first child on the way (a daughter, now 6 years old), I took a big leap of faith, quit my job, and we moved back to Monterey," he said. "I began to paint full-time, sold my work from my home studio, and after a couple of years I got to a point where I started thinking I could afford to open a gallery in Monterey or Carmel."

In 2015 he rented in a small space in Pantiles Court, behind Gallerie Amsterdam (across the street from his painting with tears running down her face. It had a huge impact on me, because I suddenly began to understand, even at that age, the power that art can have," said Turner. His father, Joaquin Sr., was a military man stationed in Germany, who had also done a stint at Fort Ord.

A typical weekend for the Turner family involved a road trip into France, Italy, Austria or Holland to visit museums and admire works by the old masters. Young Joaquin was smitten.

"I told my parents I wanted to learn to paint with oils, because that's what the old masters used," he said. "Of course, they figured it was probably a passing phase, but when I was still bugging them three years later, they got me lessons from a teacher in Germany, who showed me the fundamentals. Since then, I've essentially been self-taught."

At 43, Turner has his own Carmel gallery, which officially opened March 19 in its new location between Fifth and Sixth avenues on the west side of Dolores Street, in the Su Vecino Court.

The mood in the room was tense. One proponent noted "an uncomfortable sense of hostility," while another supporter suggested that "it's very scary being up here." Some expressed concerns and offered suggestions, and others made angry accusations. One man even tried pulling the race card, which elicited a collective groan from the audience.

Carmel Valley resident Margaret Robbins told Beretti and LUAC members that she's concerned short-term rentals will only increase traffic in a place that's already overwhelmed by it, making it even harder for ambulances to reach Community Hospital. She shared a personal story about an ambulance that got stuck in traffic along Highway 1.

The president of the Carmel Valley Association, Pris Walton, warned county officials against creating an ordinance that is too complex. The association has pushed for a complete ban on vacation stays.

"If it's not simple, direct and enforceable, it's not going to work," Walton said.

While some speakers blamed short-term rentals for what they see as a recent increase in traffic, Joy Colangelo suggested everyone plays a role in making the Monterey Peninsula a busier place.

"We all impact where we go," said Colangelo, who lives in Pacific Grove and owns a home that she rents out for short-term stays.

Opponents said the industry makes it difficult for long-term renters to stay in the area, but several supporters said they turned to offering vacation stays after having bad experiences with long-term tenants.

"I've been subjected to some awful long-term neighbors," said Lori Kempt of Big Sur. "Who hasn't in their lifetimes?"

Beretti said the ordinance will likely be ready to go before the planning commission sometime in the spring, and could reach the board of supervisors during the summer. She also said another land use advisory committee hearing in Carmel Valley would be scheduled.

Big Sur is up next

Next week, the debate moves down the coast when two Big Sur land use advisory committees come together to host a hearing on short-term rentals Tuesday, March 27, at the Big Sur Multi-Agency Facility.

The hearing starts at 9:30 a.m. The site is located on Highway 1 just south of Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park.

"Right now, I'd say 70 to 80 percent of my sales are to repeat customers, which makes me feel very good," Turner said. "I've not only developed business relationships, but real friendships as well. I always like knowing that my paintings are going to good homes. They are my babies, you know?"

Officials offer scoop on flood control

TO HELP residents learn more about an ambitious project that would provide flood protection at the mouth of Carmel Valley, county officials will hold two public meetings March 26 at Rancho Cañada.

Also known as the Carmel River Free Project, the work would open up the levees on the south side of Carmel River and create a causeway for floodwaters to flow under Highway 1.

Co-hosted by the Big Sur Land Trust, the meetings start at 1:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. The Rancho Cañada Conference Room is located at 4860 Carmel Valley Road.

$50,000. Gomez pleaded not guilty in a Salinas courtroom Wednesday, and a preliminary hearing to determine if he should be put on trial is set for March 29.

Piles of loot

Deputy Reanna Lilga saw the Pathfinder — which had a stolen rear license plate — at about 6 p.m. in the gas station at Mid-Valley shopping center, “and quickly apprehended the suspect, Reynaldo Gomez, inside the vehicle,” according to the sheriff’s office.

Cameras and lenses, bags, tripods and gadgets were just some of the stolen items found piled inside a Nissan Pathfinder at a Carmel Valley shopping center Saturday.

Inside the Pathfinder, Lilga found a tool used to break car windows, along with purses, credit cards, passports, jewelry, computers, and other valuables that appeared to have been stolen from numerous victims. While still parked at the gas station, deputies laid out the piles of items, which included several cameras and numerous lenses, tripods, laptops, an iPad, briefcases, backpacks, purses, tools, papers, and all sorts of other small objects.

According to the sheriff’s office, three victims were quickly identified and were able to pick up their property at the scene, but deputies are “working hard with other local law enforcement agencies to identify the rightful owners of the recovered stolen property.”

Although car break-ins have recently occurred in Carmel, as they have elsewhere, Carmel Police Cmdr. Luke Powell said none of the stolen items from Gomez’ vehicle appear to have any connection to the incidents in the city.

“We crosschecked all the recovered property from the suspect’s vehicle with our recent stolen property reports and found no matches,” he said.

Lilga said she has connected Gomez with car burglaries in Monterey, Santa Clara and Alameda counties so far, with nine victims on just one day. Considering the break-ins appear to go back months, she said, “I’d say the number could very well be more.”

The sheriff’s office is asking people who have been the victims of recent car burglaries in the Peninsula to call (831) 755-3700 and reference case No. FG1801557 to see if any of the items found in Gomez’ possession belong to them.

IN SPRINGTIME'S RECURRING MUSICAL, 'PLAY BALL!' IS THE BEST LYRIC

ALL THE contentious political talk and the surplus of disturbing news that fills the airways will be swept away next week when umpires in 15 cities yell "Play Ball!" — and March 29 will be the first time since 2011 all 30 major league teams will be in action on Opening Day.

I have been smitten with the summer game ever since seeing the Buffalo Bisons beat the Syracuse Chiefs in 1945 in Offermann Stadium, a little slice of heaven on Buffalo's east side. The timelessness of the game — where no quarterback can take a knee, and no point guard can dribble out the clock — separates it from sports that always seem to be in a hurry to end. Baseball says, "Slow down, America," put away your cell phone, and have a nine-inning conversation with the person seated next to you.

Only the true baseball fan understands that just when nothing seems to be happening, so much can begin to happen — such as when a pitcher standing motionless on the mound leans forward to get the sign from the catcher. At that moment, though nothing seems to have changed, everything is actually different. Seven fielders shift from neutral to drive. Four umpires crouch at the ready. And the batter steels his nerves and finely tunes his eyesight to pick up the spin of a sphere moving toward him at more than 90 miles an hour.

Scenic Views

By JERRY GERVASE

The baseball I played was not the organized, sanitized Little League of today. Now, kids play on manicured fields, wearing colorful uniforms swinging at pure white baseballs with $200 aluminum bats and catching balls with $100 leather gloves. We played on asphalt streets and empty sand lots. Bases were discarded license plates, pieces of roofing shingles, bricks or someone's little brother. Baseballs were mainly bound with black electrical tape making them more ellipsoid than round, so that when thrown they had the unpredictable craziness of a Hoyt Wilhelm knuckle ball.

Back during those endless childhood summers, the game really was timeless — lasting all day, except for interruptions to eat lunch or hit newspaper delivery paper routes, and only ended when they were called on account of darkness.

Years later, living in the Detroit area, in the era before free agency, we knew that Al Kaline would be in right field on Opening Day, Cash at first, Willie Horton in left, Mickey Stanley in center, and Freehan catching Lolich and McLain — the same line-up that took the field the year before. It didn't matter if they won or lost, we were going down to Michigan and Trumbull to see them play ball.

If there is a more fervent fan than myself, it is my son, Tony, who was born two months before the start of the 1968 World Series, when our Detroit Tigers went up against the formidable St. Louis Cardinals, a franchise that was the darling of the national media. It was the spirit of St. Louis vs. the rust belt survivors of the 1967 riots. In game one the Tigers were thoroughly embarrassed by striking out 17 times against baffling Bob Gibson. I watched each game on television, holding Tony in my arms, while delivering a play-by-play description of the games to his bewildered, innocent ears.

Then, with the Tigers down 3 games to 1, I told Tony it would take a miracle for our beloved Tigers to win.

And the miracle happened. Curt Flood misplayed a Jim Northrup easy out into a triple, McLain and Lolich pitched victories on only two days rest. Then a perfect throw from left field by Willie Horton caught the speedy Lou Brock, who unbelievably went into home plate standing up instead of sliding, and was tagged out by Bill Freehan. It was a transitional moment that lifted Detroit's hopes when things looked hopeless. In Game 7, the doughnut eating Lolich outdueled the previously unbeaten Gibson, the first time the Cardinals had lost a deciding seventh game. At the age of two months, Tony was indoctrinated into our national pastime.

Yet neither playing or watching this great game of baseball approaches those sublime moments when my son tossed my old battered mitt at me and said: "Hey, Dad, how about a game of catch?"

That's what it looked like to passers-by — a casual game of catch, Tony and me tossing a scruffy old ball, hearing it thwock into the pockets of our soft leather gloves. There were pop-ups, grounders, short-hops, pegs to second, around the horn, and the heater.

And there was time spent sharing a pleasure so simple, that poets and philosophers have struck out trying to measure it, as if a gift from God needs explaining.

It was a spiritual connection between two generations savoring one of life's sweet spots. It was an endless giving and receiving, love and happiness pitched and caught, tossed back, caught once more, again and again, back and forth, across the yard, across the field, across the years until each thwock is a memory nesting in the deep, deep webbing of my heart.

Batter up. Play ball!

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF GARY DOUGLAS PAROLA Case Number 18PR00079
To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of GARY DOUGLAS PAROLA.
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by GAY CHALBERG in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.
The Petition for Probate requests that GAY CHALBERG be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:
Date: May 9, 2018
Time: 9:00 a.m.
Dept.: 13
Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.
If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
