Adams calls for permanent parking ban at Pt. Lobos

By CHRIS COUNTS

FIFTH DISTRICT Monterey County Supervisor Mary Adams and others are pushing for a permanent parking ban along the east side of Highway 1 across from Point Lobos State Reserve, but first, the California Coastal Commission will have to sign off on it.

Adams called the daily buildup of vehicles along the inland side of the road a public safety risk. "It's a very dangerous and hazardous situation," warned Adams, who told The Pine Cone that she has been working behind the scenes to resolve the Point Lobos parking dilemma since taking office.

In June, temporary "No Parking" signs were posted along the east side of Highway 1 "1,800 feet to the north and south of the entrance" to Point Lobos after firefighters warned that congestion from the Rio Road construction project could block them from responding to an emergency.

Looking out for visitors

The signs are set to come down when the climbing lane project is done, which is expected to happen in the next couple of weeks. In response, Adams and others are urging the coastal commission to make the ban permanent — which is no sure thing, because one of the commission's chief purposes is to protect visitor access to the coast.

"The coastal commission has made it very clear the signs need to come down when the climbing lane project is com-

Council OKs $2M contract with Mozingo

■ Mayor says, 'We're getting a bargain'

By MARY SCHLEY

AT A hearing that had some members of the public upset not just with the terms of a new five-year contract for city legal services, but with how the meeting was run, the city council voted 4-1 Monday night to approve a new contract with city attorney Glen Mozingo, assistant city attorney Jon Giffen and deputy city attorney Gerard Rose.

"Mr. Mozingo, from my point of view, is doing a great job, and I wish the public would recognize that," said councilwoman Carrie Theis, citing Mozingo's efforts to crack down on illegal short-term rentals, collect back taxes from legal rentals, and draft a new section of the municipal code that allows the city to fine violators.

The agreement with the attorneys is retroactive to July 1 and provides $30,000 per month, based on 154 hours of work at an hourly rate of $195, in exchange for an extensive list of legal services, such as providing advice to the council, preparing ordinances, consulting with the city administrator and making sure the city complies with the Brown Act and other laws.

In addition, the city will pay the attorneys $275 per hour for any work they do beyond 154 hours a month and for "extraordinary legal services," such as appearing in court, labor negotiations and "preparation of complex legal opinions."

Four-fifths vote to terminate

The contract, which can be terminated by either party with 90 days' notice, also allows for up to $5,000 per month in legal expenses, such as court and notary fees, travel and payments to outside investigators, and provides for an hourly rate of $65 for "non-attorney legal support services." It would take a four-fifths vote of the city council to terminate the contract.

When the proposed agreement came up for discussion at the end of the council meeting, councilwoman Carolyn Hardy, who was on the subcommittee that negotiated the contract, addressed the audience about what was an obvious level of discontent.

"The city attorney does not work for the public," Hardy told the crowd. "The city attorney works for the city council, and his client is the city, and with that in mind, the city council has to determine what best meets our needs and our exposures and what work needs to be done."

Decision on desal plant next week, PUC says

By KELLY NIX

AFTER more than 20 years of controversy and debate, the state agency in charge of permits for Cal Am's proposed desal plant will announce its "proposed decision" on the project next week, with a final decision due Sept. 13, a spokeswoman with the California Public Utilities Commission told The Pine Cone Monday.

The desal plant, which is the most important component of what Cal Am calls the Monterey Peninsula Water Supply Project, would allow Cal Am to stop pumping most of its water from the Carmel River — a step ordered by state water authorities in 1995.

"The proposed decision will be issued by August 13, and will appear on the PUC's Sept. 13, 2018, agenda," PUC spokeswoman Terrie Prosper said. Before a final decision is issued, a PUC administrative law judge will hear oral arguments at an Aug. 22 hearing in San Francisco from Cal Am and groups that support and oppose the water supply project.

Still compliant?

The State Water Resources Control Board — which issued the 1995 order requiring that most of the Monterey Peninsula's pumping from the Carmel River be halted — gave Cal Am until the end of September to obtain a permit for a new water project to replace water from the river. Noncompliance could mean steep fines that would be passed on to water customers.

Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Stedman said if PUC commissioners issue their decision next month, the company will be compliant with the order.

NOV. ELECTION BALLOT SET

By MARY SCHLEY

THE REMAINING mayoral and city council candidates in the Nov. 6 election have turned in their signatures and had them verified by the Monterey County Registrar of Voters, which means that, unless somebody dives into the race before the Aug. 10, 5 p.m. deadline, the ballot for Carmel mayor and city council is complete.

Steve Dallas, for mayor, and Carolyn Hardy, for city council, qualified earlier. This week, four more candidates made "PARTS UNKNOWN" is often an appropriate forwarding address when Matt Pendergast packs up his video equipment and leaves California.

The Carmel High graduate (Class of 2000) is a San Francisco-based freelance filmmaker and documentarian whose career has been a perpetual quest to satisfy his wanderlust in places like remote areas of Indonesia, Bangladesh, Nepal and Mongolia.

In June 2017, the 36-year-old Pendergast and fellow cameraman Luis Costa joined 30 female soccer players from 24 countries — professionals and retired pros, ages 16 to 52 — and a crew of 350 porters on a trek to the summit of Mount Kilimanjaro, the highest peak in Africa at 19,308 feet above sea level.

For the women, members of an organization called Equal Playing Field, the point was to bring attention to worldwide disparities for females in professional soccer, like poor pay or limited opportunity, by setting a Guinness

Book world record: They played a 90-minute, 11-on-11 soccer match inside the crater of Kilimanjaro. The match was sanctioned by FIFA and was officiated by FIFA referees. Pendergast chronicled the entire trip in an hour-long documentary (also called "Equal Playing Field"), which can be found online at www.beinsports.com.

"When 'Equal Playing Field' started to take shape, I reached out to Matt," said the organization's co-founder, and Pendergast's longtime friend, Erin Blankenship, a soccer player who competed in the high-altitude match. "I trusted his lens, enthusiasm, years of working in international development, understanding of social impact and passion to help us tell our story, to understand what we meant even if we fumbled over our own words."

Playing soccer inside a volcanic crater was a monumental feat, but getting to the playing field was an equally daunting challenge, Pendergast said.

"It's not a technical climb, but it is a long, arduous

EVERY TIME she got her daughters a dog, she did it knowing that the dogs would eventually be hers – but not because she loved the little things more than the girls did. She simply understood that they would grow up and go off to school and leave her in her empty nest, comforted by canines.

Beau came first, a birthday present in the form of a 10-week-old husky-malamute mix. It was love at first sight for the family, who brought Beau home, despite the breeder's belief that this pack animal really would do better around other dogs.

"We promised to become his pack, to love him to death," his person said, from her home in Seaside. "Wouldn't that be enough?"

Beau's family invested a lot of time in him, particularly at the beach, where he was content to play near them in the surf – until he figured out that he was faster and stronger than his family, and he began to run off. That's when he learned about leashes.

A year after Beau was born, Sadie showed up. Another daughter had decided she also deserved a dog, particularly after she spied the 7-week-old Chihuahua-dachshund mix, affectionately known as a Chi-weenie, on Craigslist.

"The cute factor won us over," her person said.

A bit of an odd couple, Beau, now 12, and Sadie, 11, turned out to be a good pairing. It may have something to do with the attraction of opposites, their person says. She's bolder because of Beau, and he's softer because of Sadie.

"As expected, my girls have moved on, but the dogs have each other, and I have them," their person said. "While they are 99.9 percent mine, they will always be considered the girls' dogs."

Commission puts kibosh on 7D hours

By MARY SCHLEY

WORRIED THAT people living near the Seventh & Dolores Steakhouse might lose sleep if the restaurant stayed open an hour later, the planning commission voted 4-1 to deny restaurateur Greg Ahn's request to extend the steakhouse's hours. The restaurant serves until 10 p.m., and Ahn had hoped to keep it open until 11:30. In his report for the commission Aug. 8, planning director Marc Wiener suggested a compromise of 11 p.m.

"The city's municipal code does not prescribe a standard restaurant closing time," Wiener said. "There are several restaurants in the city that are permitted to stay open until 11 p.m.," so Ahn's request was "reasonable and consistent with what has been granted to other restaurants in the city."

But several neighbors objected, saying they already have a difficult time with noise from the restaurant — bottles being dumped in recycling bins at night, trash pickup early in the morning, the exhaust fan running until midnight, customers chatting on their way out, and employees talking as they leave.

Carolyn Davi, who lives across the street, complained about employees from nearby restaurants taking up all the parking near her home, which prevents her from being able to unload her groceries and forces her to go grocery shopping after 10.

'Getting five hours'

Longtime resident and electrician Mike Cate said he has lived across the street for 15 years and longs for a past when the town went quiet at 9 p.m.

"Already, as a neighbor, I experience guests leaving the restaurant well past 11 and 11:30 p.m., standing on the sidewalk and talking loudly, oblivious to the fact that there are people who live across the street," he said.

Kristi Reimers, who occupies an apartment in the Stonehouse Terrace complex owned by her family that backs onto the restaurant's parking area, said employees are still cleaning up — and making noise — two hours after closing.

"I'm worried that if it changes to 11 p.m., it will extend it," she said. "And then there's trash pickup at 6 in the morning. I'm getting five hours of sleep."

Reimers owns a sound meter and told commissioners the restaurant's exhaust fan regularly measures as high as 70 dB from outside her apartment.

In letters, former councilwoman Barbara Livingston and former Mayor Sue McCloud also asked the commission not to extend the hours.

"Any such increase in hours of operation is a further step changing the character of our village as a tranquil place to visit set among spectacular natural surroundings," McCloud said.

Striking a balance

In a letter and at the hearing, Ahn asked the commission to help strike a balance between business and residential interests, and said he has already addressed some of their complaints. Employees are asked to empty bottles inside at night and not discard them until after 8:30 the next morning, he constantly reminds staff and patrons that they need to be quiet when leaving, vendors are required to deliver after 8 a.m., landscape workers are instructed not to use equipment until after 8 a.m., and he's looking for ways to dampen the exhaust fan's noise.

But the restaurant can't dictate when GreenWaste picks up the trash, when the city streetsweeper runs, and what happens with parking on the street.

"I would hope that in a commercial district of a city, we would encourage places to eat and socialize for those of us who work and sleep later hours," he said, as well as for people who attend shows at Sunset Center and the Golden Bough.

Verdicts, pleas and sentencings announced by Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo

June 6 — Former Salinas resident Francisco Javier Navarro, 39, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter and other charges in the killing of his brother-in-law during a family Christmas Eve party in 2012.

On December 24, 2012, after an argument with his wife, Navarro shot and killed the victim, 30-year-old Salvador Garcia Jr. Following the shooting, Navarro fled to Mexico, where he lived under an alias for 3 and 1/2 years. Navarro was detained and arrested while attempting to cross the United States-Mexico border on April 10, 2016.

Navarro pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter, two counts of assault with a semi-automatic firearm, and carrying a concealed firearm. He also pleaded guilty to mayhem, assault with force likely to cause great bodily injury, and battery arising out of multiple fights in the Monterey County Jail while he awaited trial. He will be sentenced to 30 years and 4 months in prison.

June 7 — Nicanor De Jesus Sanchez, 23, of Greenfield, pled guilty to gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated, driving under the influence of alcohol causing injury and he admitted causing great bodily injury to multiple victims. The defendant will be sentenced August 21 by Judge Julie R. Culver and faces a possible sentence of 16 years in the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation.

On February 11, 2017, the defendant was driving with a blood alcohol content of .23 and crashed his car through a road closure gate located at the Elm Avenue bridge east of the City of Greenfield. The defendant's Honda Accord spun out of control after crashing through the steel gate and collided with three pedestrians. The pedestrians were crushed between the defendant's car and a steel guard rail and violently thrown into the Salinas River.

Due to an abnormally wet winter, the Salinas River was flowing very rapidly and had breached its banks, flooding farmlands and roadways throughout the county. Despite extensive wounds, two of the victims were able to struggle their way to the riverbank. The third victim was carried downstream and his body has not been recovered despite multiple attempts by search and rescue teams as well as friends and family.

The defendant entered his plea during the third day of jury trial in this case. A Monterey County Jury had been sworn, opening statements had been given and evidence was being presented when the defendant elected to enter his plea to all of the charges alleged.

June 15 — Marveil Williams, 38, was sentenced to 15 years in the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation for the August 2016 sexual assault which occurred to two women riding a MST bus to Northridge Mall in Salinas. The defendant pleaded no contest to the crimes of attempted forcible oral copulation and assault with the intent to commit a sex crime.

On August 23, 2016, the defendant boarded a public MST bus on north Main Street in Salinas and sat next to a 45-year-old woman. During a conversation with the woman, the defendant began to grab at her chest area. The woman alerted the bus driver who intervened and told the man to sit elsewhere. The bus came to a stop at the Northridge Mall. The driver of the bus stepped out of the vehicle and the man approached the woman with his pants at his knees, penis exposed and attempted to push her head down towards his pelvic area. Hearing the woman's scream, a man seated at the front of the bus pulled the defendant off the woman and yelled for the bus driver. Before the bus driver could call Salinas Police Department, the defendant grabbed the buttocks of another woman as she disembarked the bus.

Williams, a transient, was convicted in 2009 in Santa Monica, California of attempted carjacking. That prior conviction constitutes a "strike" and doubled the seven-year term for the forcible oral copulation and assault to commit a sex crime in the current case. Because of an additional year for a prison commitment served on the prior attempted carjacking, Judge Carrie Panetta sentenced the defendant to a total term of 15 years in state prison.

Traffic tickets up in Del Monte Forest

By KELLY NIX

IF YOU don't always drive carefully in Del Monte Forest, you might want to start.

That's because the California Highway Patrol during the 12-month period from July 2017 to June 2018 issued nearly 200 more tickets to motorists in Pebble Beach than it did the years before, the deputy general manager of the agency that contracts with the law enforcement agency told The Pine Cone this week. That's a 45 percent increase.

In 2005, the Pebble Beach Community Services District began paying for supplemental law enforcement in the forest in response to a community survey in which more than 50 percent of residents identified speeding and reckless driving as major neighborhood problems.

"The CHP service has been going very well," Suha Kilic, deputy general manager for the Pebble Beach Community Services District, told The Pine Cone.

So well, that during the 12 months that ended in June, CHP officers patrolling Del Monte Forest issued 635 tickets, 285 of them for speeding. Compare that to the same period in 2016/2017 when only 440 citations were issued — 245 for speeding — and in the 12 months before that, when 439 tickets were given, of which 212 were for unsafe speed.

More people traveling

Kilic said he's not sure why there was an increase in citations — considering the CHP has only one full-time officer assigned to the forest, like it's had in previous years — but it appears there are more people traveling in the forest.

"There are more vehicles on the road; the number of tourists is high," he said.

The PBSCD also used radar speed monitors — digital signs that not only tell drivers how fast they're traveling, but record the speeds of each passing vehicle. The PBCSD routinely downloads the data from the signs, which don't take photographs, to identify speeding trends.

"We have four of them, and we rotate them," Kilic said. "They log the speeds, and if there are any particular locations where speeds are out of normal," the CHP may increase enforcement in that area.

The PBCSD also issues quarterly reports with the data and gives them to the agency's board of directors.

Of the tens of thousands of people who drive through Del Monte Forest annually, though, Kilic said a relatively small number of them violate traffic laws, and the monitors have not indicated an overall increase in vehicle speed.

Assists, too

The CHP also stops drivers for non-speeding violations, including expired registrations, reckless driving, running stop signs, and for more serious offenses, such as drunken driving. Kilic said the CHP gives 600 to 800 verbal warnings per year, and often assists motorists.

"Sometimes drivers need help, have a question or get lost," He said.

The CHP's 2018/2019 annual contract with PBSCD is $245,000 for one full-time officer, who works 40 hours per week, and a sergeant who works about 10 hours per month on administrative duties. While costs for CHP service increased $9,000, or 3.8 percent, this year, the amount of service is the same, and there are no additional officers patrolling the forest.

The PBCSD keeps in close contact with the CHP about areas of the forest that may

Police station remodel inches forward

By MARY SCHLEY

A SKELETON crew city council on Tuesday made several minor changes to the proposed remodel and expansion of the police station — as suggested by the planning commission and forest and beach commission to soften its look and add more greenery — and sent the plans back to the commissions for one more pass.

Under discussion since last year, the $1.9 million project that the council has supported calls for expanding the 60-year-old building to the west and to the south by a total 2,554 square feet to accommodate new property and evidence rooms, an emergency operations center, an upgraded dispatch area, and three new offices. ADA upgrades will have to be made to the entire building, including adding an accessible bathroom. Design is underway, with Kasavan Architects signed on to move to the next phase of technical drawings.

With Mayor Steve Dallas recused because the CPD property falls just inside the 500-foot radius around his home, and councilwoman Jan Reimers disqualified because she discussed the project with a planning commissioner when she shouldn't have, council members Carrie Theis, Carolyn Hardy and Bobby Richards remained at the dais Aug. 7.

A slower approach?

While Theis and Hardy have consistently backed the plans in the works, Richards has always favored a less expensive option and wants a full-scale needs assessment conducted and master plan created for the entire police department-public works complex at Junipero and Fourth before deciding how to improve the station and address its deficiencies.

Like Richards, several speakers wanted to take the slower, more comprehensive route before embarking on any remodel or expansion, but ultimately, they accepted the council majority's feeling that work needs to proceed sooner rather than later.

"I think we're whistling Dixie to ask for a needs assessment for the block," resident Barbara Livingston said. "Piece-mealing seems to be a very expensive way to do a project. I don't see our concerns being met about a needs assessment and a master plan."

Therefore, she advised the council to ensure the building is made as attractive as possible through landscaping and minor changes.

"Take that project and tweak it to try to make it much better than it is today," Melanie Billig said. "It's not just an ordinary building — it's where the public safety is located in this community, and that is our first and foremost interest and function."

'15th meeting'

Because he thinks the building is ugly, Rich Pepe said, "Without remodeling the entire building, I'm highly against this project."

Resident Mike Brown wanted a public forum for more input before any additional work is done.

But public works director Bob Harary, who is overseeing the project and has worked on similar ones — including the recently completed Monterey Conference Center — for more than 30 years, objected.

"I'm not sure how you can say this has not had public input," he said. "This is the 15th meeting on this."

Because it would be really expensive and take a long time, demolishing the police station and starting from scratch isn't an option, he added.

As far as needs go, Chief Paul Tomasi said he started assessing those as soon as he walked through the door 10 years ago, took a look at the dispatch center, "and thought, 'You've got to be kidding me.'" The dispatch area's equipment and configuration have been blamed for injuries sustained by the people working in it.

The property room was an office — "That's unacceptable," he said — and the evidence

Middle school could grow by 8 acres

By CHRIS COUNTS

BRINGING ATTENTION to a proposal by the Carmel Unified School District to buy an 8-acre parcel adjacent to Carmel Middle School for $1.5 million and add it to the school's athletic fields, the Monterey County Planning Commission voted unanimously Aug. 8 to endorse the deal.

The highly visible property is on Carmel Valley Road between the middle school and Carmel Rancho, and has been for sale on and off for years. It is zoned for residential development.

"So far, the school board has paid $75,000 for an option to purchase the property, which gives us an opportunity to do our due diligence and see if it is useful for us," the school district's spokesman, Paul Behan, told The Pine Cone.

Behan said the availability of the property comes at a good time.

"We're going through a massive facilities planning process," he explained. "Having the possibility of buying this parcel next door gives us some flexibility. The board has some time to decide whether and how to go through with the process, but we didn't want to miss an opportunity for some potential playing fields."

Located immediately west of the school and south of Carmel Valley Road, the land is "open and flat, with minimal vegetation concentrated along the property lines," reads a report by county planning staff on the acquisition. It's bordered on the west by the Cottages of Carmel retirement community.

It's too early to say precisely how the property will be used. The school district "does not have a site plan at this time for how or what kinds of fields would be developed, if there would be night-time lighting, or whether there would be grandstands or other structures," the report adds.

According to county planning staff, the land lies outside the flood plain.

Cachagua soccer field inches forward

By CHRIS COUNTS

A PROJECT to create a state-of-the-art athletic field at Cachagua Community Park is scheduled to break ground in October, but the cost of the materials has increased, so volunteers are making a big push to raise about $17,000.

The effort has been in the works for more than two decades.

For now, local kids play soccer and other sports on a very unforgiving surface that's "dusty, uneven and riddled with gopher holes," volunteer Tess Arthur told The Pine Cone.

"I just ran a free 2-week camp program for kids," Arthur reported this week. "Every day, the kids played on the field. It's so hard and rocky — when they fall, they are constantly hurting themselves. These kids deserve to have a playable field."

Not only will a better playing surface reduce injuries, but it would dramatically improve the quality of play.

"If we have a playable field, the YMCA will run teams out of Cachagua," Arthur explained. "That would be huge. Right now, kids have to travel, and that's why so many don't play on teams."

The effort to build the field marks a collaboration between two local nonprofits — Cachagua Community Park and the Friends of Cachagua Children's Center — and the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, which owns the park.

Too hot for turf

Because there isn't enough water to irrigate the field — and it's too hot in the summer for artificial turf — it will be made of a material similar what's used for baseball infields. Much of the material has been donated by Don Chapin Company and Stabilizer Solutions.

P.G.'s Hotel Durell gets big overhaul ahead of council consideration

By KELLY NIX

A HOTEL proposed for downtown Pacific Grove that has a lot of support on the city council and among residents — but which has also been criticized for its size, appearance and other features — has been heavily redesigned to include a smaller footprint, new vehicular entrance, new aesthetics and other tweaks.

On Wednesday, Pacific Grove community and economic development director Mark Brodeur revealed Hotel Durell's revisions, which architect RRM Design Group made following recommendations made by the council at its July 11 meeting.

"All in all, a much better design," Brodeur told The Pine Cone.

Council members will consider the new changes at its Aug. 15 meeting. If it's happy with the redesign, the panel could vote to OK the hotel's environmental review. In May, the planning commission approved the hotel, which is proposed by developer Nader Agha.

The changes include moving the entrance from Central Avenue to Fountain Avenue, a 6,000-square-foot reduction in size, elimination of four rooms (from 120 to 116) and a new design. Public amenities, such as seating, trees and fountains were also added.

Vehicles will now enter the hotel on Fountain after the council and citizens complained that having the entrance on Central Avenue, across the street from the library, would cause congestion and conflict with the Monday farmers market.

Just 60 rooms?

While Agha initially proposed 120 rooms, some residents suggested the number should be much lower — as few as 60.

Some criticized the hotel's Victorian appearance, which has also been changed to a Spanish Mediterranean style design to better match the architecture of the nearby museum and library.

Hotel Durell would require the demolition of an existing 17,500-square-foot, single-story building occupied by a Mexican restaurant, martial arts studio, Animal Friends Rescue Project adoption center and shops.

The hotel is largely seen by city officials, business-minded residents, shopkeepers and restaurateurs to be an economic asset because it will provide an estimated $500,000 in hotel tax to the city and mean greater foot traffic downtown.

But some residents are against any major changes downtown, and have voiced opposition not only to Hotel Durrell, but to the mixed use building recently OK'd by the city council to replace Goodie's.

Proposed Hotel Durell has been redesigned in a Spanish Mediterranean style to replace a former Victorian design, which didn't fit as well with city's library and museum. The entrance to the hotel was changed from Central Avenue to Fountain Avenue.

Jim Nantz named 'Ambassador of Golf'

By MARY SCHLEY

"I'M AT that age now where people start giving you awards," Pebble Beach resident and CBS sportscaster Jim Nantz said this week. "It feels like I just got out of college, but I've been broadcasting for 33 years."

It's that career, along with his philanthropic efforts and sheer love of the game, that earned Nantz the 2018 Ambassador of Golf Award, presented at the World Golf Championships Bridgestone Invitational in Akron, Ohio, last week.

Nantz, who covers the tournament for CBS, has had the chance to present the award to several recipients and always does a special segment on it during his broadcast.

"I had always considered it to be one of the most important awards in golf," he said. "I never imagined that I would be on the receiving end of the phone call."

Nantz was driving to Southern California after covering the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am in February when PGA Tour Commissioner Jay Monahan called to break the news.

"I told him I had to pull over by the side of the road to make sure I was hearing it right," he said. Nantz said he was honored "to be in the company of so many remarkable achievers," all of whom exhibit "love and passion for golf," which is "a central part of their life." Past recipients include former presidents Gerald Ford (1985) and George H.W. Bush (1994); golf legends like Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Ken Venturi, Sam Snead and Ben Hogan; entertainers like Bing Crosby and Bob Hope; and "people whose lives are committed to philanthropy, like Barbara Nicklaus."

"It's one of the most distinguished lists I've ever seen for any award in any sport," he said.

Nantz' wife and children flew to Ohio for the Aug. 1 presentation. "When you win an award, the best thing about it is it gives you a good forum to stand up and tell people how much you love them," he said. "I got to tell my CBS family, and I got to tell my family."

Jim Nantz

The Langley

This year is a big one for Nantz, as he'll receive another important honor Aug. 20, the day after the final round of the U.S. Amateur Golf Tournament at Pebble Beach. Named for the late Jim Langley, the longtime pro who served in the Marines, played on the PGA Tour and taught at Cypress Point for more than three decades, the award is given annually by the Northern California PGA to two recipients: a PGA player and a local honoree.

"Anything that has the great Jim Langley's name on it means a tremendous amount to me," Nantz said. "He was a wonderful friend — one of the kindest, warmest, sweetest human beings."

When Langley died in 2013, Nantz delivered the eulogy at his funeral at the Carmel Mission.

"In my community, to have my name linked with Jim Langley's is a wonderful honor," he said.

According to the NCPGA, Nantz has long been slated to receive the award but has always been unavailable due to scheduling conflicts. Nantz will finally receive the Langley at a gala at Spanish Bay.

$81 million rail project breaks ground

■ Commuter service planned from Salinas to points north

By KELLY NIX

THE TRACKS are already there, but officials say a lot of improvements, especially to surrounding infrastructure, are needed before commuter train service can resume between Monterey County, Santa Clara County and the San Francisco Bay area.

This week, the county transportation agency announced the start of construction of an $81 million project to help get the trains running again between Salinas and Gilroy.

When finished, the Transportation Agency for Monterey County's Rail Extension project will carry passengers between these cities, with long-term plans for service between Salinas, San Jose and San Francisco.

The Salinas-to-Gilroy line "will provide an alternative to traffic congestion, thereby reducing commuter stress and increasing productivity," TAMC said. "The extension will provide access to jobs, healthcare, education and shopping, and expand transportation options for the young, elderly and disabled."

Before a groundbreaking ceremony Thursday for the first phase, TAMC planner Christina Watson said the initial work — funded by state taxpayers — will be to help cars reach the Salinas train station by extending a roadway, installing a traffic signal, and making parking improvements.

"That segment of the project will complete demolition work this fall, followed by utility relocation and construction," Watson told The Pine Cone Wednesday. "We expect construction to be completed in 2020."

Crews will also expand a train layover facility in Salinas and make track improvements in Gilroy, both of which are 75 percent designed and "environmentally cleared," Watson said.

Phase 2 involves building a Pajaro/Watsonville station at a cost of $29 million, and Phase 3 is a $26 million Castroville station — both of which will begin when funding is available.

The only passenger rail service available now to Monterey County residents is Amtrak's Coast Starlight, which operates one

WOMAN'S LAWSUIT CHALLENGES DUI ARREST, LICENSE SUSPENSION

By KELLY NIX

A WOMAN who police say refused to submit to a drunk-driving test — and subsequently had her license suspended for two years — has filed a lawsuit against the head of the DMV, arguing she should get her license back because the police officer didn't warn her about the penalties of not taking the test.

At 11 p.m. on Aug. 13, 2017, a Seaside Police officer arrested Melissa Gomez on suspicion of driving under the influence of alcohol. Gomez, police said, would not take a breathalyzer or chemical test to determine her blood alcohol content.

But in a lawsuit filed Aug. 2 against Department of Motor Vehicles Director Jean Shiomoto, Gomez claims that the police officer, identified only as Officer Moore, failed to inform her of the penalties for refusing the alcohol tests — something her lawsuit contends is required by law.

"Officer Moore never advised [Gomez] that her driver's license would be suspended or revoked if she refused to submit to a test," according to the lawsuit, filed in Monterey County Superior Court for Gomez by Anaheim Hills attorney Chad R. Maddox.

The suit contends that the Seaside officer also didn't tell Gomez that "if she refused to submit to a test it may be used against her in court," and that she had an option to submit to either a breath or blood test. She also said the officer incorrectly listed in paperwork that she was on "DUI probation."

While California law states that those who refuse a DUI test can face fines, a license suspension and time in jail, it also requires police officers to inform suspects of the penalties for refusing to submit to the tests before they're arrested, the lawsuit says.

'Arbitrary and capricious'

During a July 20 DMV hearing in Salinas to determine if Gomez would be able to keep her license, Moore conceded that he did not inform Gomez she would face the consequences for not submitting to the test. Five days after the hearing, though, the DMV revoked Gomez's license, which prohibits her from driving until Aug. 2, 2020.

"The weight of the evidence at the [hearing] did not support the DMV's conclusion that [Gomez] had refused, or failed to complete, a breath or blood test after being properly requested to do so by a peace officer," the suit alleges.

Furthermore, Gomez contends the DMV's suspension of her license was "arbitrary and capricious" and violated her right to due process. She wants a judge to set aside the DMV's order.

Prior to the July hearing, the DMV administrative judge assigned to the case recommended setting aside the proposal to revoke Gomez's license because Moore failed to show up to two prior hearings, but his supervisors overruled the decision.

A Pine Cone reporter contacted the DMV for comment, and a spokeswoman said they were looking into the inquiry, but the agency did not respond by The Pine Cone's Thursday afternoon deadline.

And the winner is ... Bixby!

THE MONTEREY Bay Aquarium announced on Monday, Aug. 6, that Bixby was the winning moniker from its online poll to name its newest penguin. More than 19,000 people voted online for one of four names. The other three options were Beck (short for Steinbeck), Watson (short for Watsonville) and Cypress. Born on July 7, the female chick — like any curious toddler — recently started to explore her surroundings. According to Aquarium spokesman Emerson Brown, that meant it was time for her to go behind the scenes for a while, until she's big and strong enough to hang out with the grownups in the exhibit.

When she's ready, she'll be back to greet her adoring public.

COLDWELL BANKER
GLOBAL LUXURY

Council likes idea of having someone move in and fix Flanders

By MARY SCHLEY

AFTER HEARING a brief history of the legal battles over the fate of Flanders Mansion — the historic Tudor-style house in Mission Trail park that taxpayers have owned since 1972 but have never been able to use and have tried on more than one occasion to sell — the majority of the city council on Tuesday voiced support for having a curator move in and renovate it.

Councilwoman Jan Reimers, however, said she still wants to know what it would take to sell the mansion and lease out the land, which would put money in the bank for the city while not saddling it with the challenges associated with selling parkland. It might, however, still require an expensive environmental impact report.

Les Albiol has long advocated for a curatorship where he and his wife, Trish, would move into Flanders and restore it according to the Secretary of the Interior's standards for renovating historic buildings while living there rent-free for a long, assured amount of time. At the Aug. 7 meeting, he again encouraged the council to move in that direction, and she suggested soliciting proposals.

Carmel Residents Association board member Mary Condry, CRA President Barbara Livingston, Melanie Billig of the Flanders Foundation that sued the city twice over the mansion, and resident Mike Brown also called for a curatorship, as did longtime neighbor Bertie Elliott.

"I think curatorship is an exciting idea, and I think it could reasonably make the various groups happy," Elliott said. "I think it would make the neighborhood happy to have a family living there and working on it and not disturbing the neighborhood."

Mayoral candidate Gene Hughes said the mansion "is a unique asset" that should in some way be accessible to the public, though residents in the Hatton Road neighborhood have always loudly protested any proposed public use of Flanders.

Resident Richard Kreitman reminded the council of the 66 percent of voters in 2009 who told the city to get rid of the mansion, which he said is "a liability to the city," not an asset.

"I admire this council's willingness to take it on again," he said. "I hope you resolve it."

'Don't spend more money'

In general, the council opposed spending any more money on the mansion than necessary.

"We've spent enough, and this council really needs to make a decision so the property is not being a detriment to the city but is actually being improved," This said. "We don't want to spend any more money on legal fees or reports."

Councilwoman Carolyn Hardy described curatorship as "the path of least resistance and least cost to the city," since that arrangement is unlikely to get the city sued again.

She also said people shouldn't mention the 2009 election because the appeals court invalidated the vote when it ruled against the city and for the Flanders Foundation regarding a small part of the environmental impact report on the proposed sale.

"So, it's as if it didn't even happen," she said.

"I don't want to spend a lot of money, either, but at the same time, I want to take a long-range look at what is the best use of the property," Reimers said.

"If we could sell the house and retain the property as park land, we would have money, now. And whether or not the court decided we didn't vote, well, I was there, and we did," she added.

Mayor Steve Dallas also envisions the house being occupied by a family but was unsure what the best arrangement would be.

"I just want to know the options and what protects the city in the long term," he said.

Council members couldn't make official decisions or even give direction to city staff, though, because the agenda listed the Flanders item simply as an "update." As a result, the issue will return next month.

Will someone move into the aging Flanders Mansion and restore it? The city council is leaning toward that scenario as the best option.

BOGNER

— IN MEMORY OF WILLIAM G. SHREVE —

Carmel, CA – It is with much sorrow that we announce the passing of our dear friend William G. Shreve, who passed away peacefully on July 7th, 2018, at Carmel Hospital of Monterey Peninsula.

Born in Oakland, CA on March 3rd, 1934 to Harmon and Ruby Shreve, Bill was a California resident his entire life, living in Oakland until he attended his Alma Mater, Saint Mary's College in Moraga. In his early life, Bill worked at Oak Dell Creamery in Oakland, owned by his family for generations, before moving to Clearlake Highlands for almost 2 years to run a facility his family had purchased. Upon returning to the Bay Area, he met the love of his life, Irene Abel, who he married in 1963 and shared 46 blissfully happy years of marriage with. The couple owned multiple beautiful homes, including their first home in Piedmont Pines in Oakland, a large home in Rossmoor, a vacation home in Konocti Bay, and the 12th floor condominium with a 360 degree view in Oakland's Bellvue-Staton, in which they threw elegant parties for their many friends.

Bill joined Birr Wilson Securities firm in 1967 and then Sutro & Company Securities in 1979 (which became RBC Wealth Management in 2002). In 1993, the desire to be near the ocean spurred the couple to move to Carmel, CA, where Bill became very involved in playing Bridge, frequently playing 4 to 5 times a week and in the evenings with his friends. In 2009, he retired to help his beloved wife with her rare blood disease.

Bill was an accomplished chef and loved to entertain, frequently throwing lavish dinner parties with his wife, Irene, before her passing. Bill's love of the culinary arts was so great, that he taught cooking classes while living in Rossmoor. Bill had a true zest for life and focused on making each moment count. Bill was known for his eloquence and ability to apply insight in blazing flashes of oratory, which made him a charming raconteur. Due to his natural warmth, emotional centeredness, and willingness to help others, Bill was also a natural mentor and a popular friend to many. As well as being an exceptional friend and impacting those in his personal life, Bill also influenced his colleagues in his professional life, conducting himself with grace and humor.

Bill is survived by his cousins, Robert and Gloria Egan, Pat and John Andrews, and Bobette Peterson, as well as his step daughter Suzanne Starjash and his step granddaughter, Damiana Potts.

In lieu of services, Bill requested that donations be made in his memory to St. Mary's College, Community Hospital Foundation, Carmel Foundation, or SPCA of Monterey.

'Dream Drive' marks reopening of Highway 1 with classic car caravan

By CHRIS COUNTS

A CARAVAN of cars representing the years from 1934 to 2018 snaked along Highway 1 in Big Sur Thursday to commemorate the reopening of Highway 1 at Mud Creek.

Traveling 132 miles from Laguna Seca Raceway to Morro Bay, the "Dream Drive" was organized by three tourism groups, Visit California, Monterey County Convention & Visitors Bureau and SLO CAL of San Luis Obispo.

"Driving Highway 1 is a bucket-list experience many travelers dream about, and its closure made headlines around the world," said Caroline Beteta of Visit California. "Many communities along this stretch have suffered while the road has been closed. We're proud to announce to the world today that Highway 1 is open and better than ever."

The caravan began with a kick-off event at Laguna Seca Raceway, which included brief remarks by Fifth District Supervisor Mary Adams and others, and a ceremonial lap around the track. From there, it made its way along Highway 68, Laureles Grade and Carmel Valley Road before reaching Highway 1 and turning south down the coast.

A wide range of vehicles were represented in the caravan, from "classic vintage, to sleek and modern, to hydrogen-fueled and electric models." They were led by the California Highway Patrol.

DALE HOWARD SPECK

A LIFE FULLY LIVED

"The Lord bless you and keep you." — Numbers 6:24

On July 30 at home in Carmel, Dale closed the book on his long life while embraced in the arms of his beloved wife Flo Snyder-Speck.

Born in Minnesota and raised in North Dakota, Dale's lengthy career was a meteoric rise in law enforcement and the legal profession. He began as a young policeman with the Los Angeles Police Department and rose rapidly through the ranks, reaching the position of Assistant Chief to then head of LAPD Ed Davis. He often mused that during those years he held every job at LAPD except policewoman.

In 1972, California Attorney General Evelle Younger recruited Dale to lead the Division of Law Enforcement in the Department of Justice, where he ended his career as Deputy Attorney General. Upon leaving Justice, he relocated to Palm Desert and began a private law practice.

It was during his time in Sacramento that Dale met Flo who also worked for the Department of Justice. After just one dinner date they knew they were in love and destined to be together. That was the good news. The bad news was that both were strong personalities and over achievers, which in between professions of undying love, led to frequent bickering. They parted vowing never to see each other again.

Years later while in Palm Desert, Dale saw a Los Angeles Times story featuring Flo and her book about the Los Angeles Dodgers, "Lady In The Locker Room." He tracked her down in Carmel where their relationship resumed as though they'd never separated. (They also resumed their bickering, but now with far less intensity.) Soon after, Dale began experiencing health problems. He credited Flo with saving his life by marrying him on June 1, 2012 — nearly 40 years later than they should have.

They enjoyed their life in Carmel with many friends and where Dale became so acclimated he even learned to love the fog. He especially appreciated the excellent care received from Doctors Richard King and Jon Kitaji along with their staffs, who were especially helpful.

In his 25-year career at LAPD, Dale progressed by taking every promotion exam for which he qualified and never failed to score at the very top. In 1962 he took the Captain's exam and at the young age of 36 was assigned Captain at LAPD's Communications Division at Parker Center. Continuing advancement led to his appointment as Deputy Chief, followed by promotion as one of three Assistant Chiefs to Ed Davis. The two contemporaries he served with were George Beck (father of recently retired Chief Charlie Beck) and the late Daryl Gates.

A note of special thanks to Bermudez Family for the firm's assistance in carrying out Dale's final wishes.

ARTHUR VALLEAU PRICE

October 25, 1931 ❖ August 2, 2018

Arthur Valleau Price, 86, a long time resident of Carmel Valley, California, passed away peacefully in his sleep, surrounded by family and friends.

Val, as he was known to most, was born in Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, to Arthur Valleau Price Sr. and Mildred Anne Von Drozkowsky. He received his undergraduate degree from Cornell University in Ithaca, NY, and his medical degree from the University of Toronto Faculty of Medicine. After practicing pediatrics in the San Francisco Bay Area for 33 years, he retired with his wife Mildred to Carmel Valley, California in 1990.

Val was an avid cyclist, adventurer, world traveler, and accomplished sailor. One of his proudest achievements was his work on a project that produced the book "Donde Hay No Doctor" ("Where There Is No Doctor") by David Werner. Val spent countless hours providing medical expertise for the book, now translated into more than 80 languages.

He is survived by his wife, Mildred, his three children, John V. Price and wife Pearl, David Lee Price and Laura Ann Price, his stepchildren, Laurant S. Yorita, Michael J. Yorita, granddaughters Janeka and Tahnee, and his brother John T.A. Price. He was preceded in death by his parents Arthur V. Price and Mildred A. Price and his sister Patricia Price Leavitt.

vent crime, and what to do if you can't.

According to the chamber, CPD officers will share the details of past cases and discuss "how the reaction of the victim can significantly impact the outcome of the event, both positively and negatively."

One likely example is the November 2013 armed robbery of La Renaissance jewelry store on Dolores Street in which one of the employees managed to free himself after the robbers fled and helped obtain identifying information that led to their arrest on Highway 1 in Marina soon after. All three were gang members who ended up pleading guilty to numerous felonies in 2016.

The seminar is open to all. Carpenter Hall is located on Mission Street near Ninth Avenue.

Julia M. Givens Leaken-Frederick

Passed away on August 4, 2018 at Casa Dorinda in Montecito of congestive heart failure.

Born in Hanson, Kentucky in 1921, the family relocated to Alhambra, California, in 1922. Julia was a swimsuit model at Mrs. Snively's modeling agency at the Ambassador Hotel alongside her friend, Norma Jean Dougherty, later known as Marilyn Monroe. After living in Japan and Europe throughout the 1950s with her husband, Army Major Richard M. Leaken, she moved on the Monterey Peninsula in 1959 and became a very successful real estate agent for Tri-City Real Estate and continued her passion for painting. The family relocated to Santa Barbara in 1966 where Julie continued her successful real estate career and studied under the celebrated painter, Andre Andreoli. Her paintings were displayed and sold at several Ray Ramsey Galleries in Carmel over the years.

She is survived by her only child, Linda Leaken Nakamura and son-in-law, Jolson Nakamura along with two nieces. Julia was married to Richard M. Leaken from 1948 until his death in 1984. Julia enjoyed a very happy second marriage with Mr. Walter Frederick, marrying him in Carmel in 1998. Mr. Frederick passed away in 2002.

Julia came from the Givens Family, who were descendants of an old Kentucky family and on his mother's side by Colonel Clarence Valentine Walker and Mary Elise Walker of Atlanta, GA. Her siblings included Ann, Mary, Harry, Bob, Joyce, and Jerry all of whom had a happy life thanks to their mother, Ruth. Arrangements entrusted to Welch-Ryce-Haider, 15 East Sola Street, Santa Barbara, CA, 805-965-5145.

Lilli Rose Selvig

June 27, 1920 – July 31, 2018

Lilli was born in Slagelse, Denmark. She was accepted into the Royal Danish Ballet School in Copenhagen at the age of 6, where she received her entire education and later joined the Company. She rose to the highest level in the Company as a soloist and danced until the end of WWII. This was a difficult time for her as Denmark was occupied by the Germans from 1939 to 1945.

In 1947 on a trip from Denmark to Hawaii, to see "paradise" she met her future husband, George Selvig. They were married in Old Lyme, CT, August 27, 1948. As a couple they lived in New York City, where Lilli studied with George Balanchine, Pierre Vladimiroff and Muriel Stuart at the School of American Ballet. Later she danced with Edward Caton at the Metropolitan Opera.

The family, now to include young son Conrad, made their way west, driving their tiny MG TC, to Santa Monica, CA to care for George's aging father, a retired U.S. Congressman from Minnesota.

Lilli had been introduced to Carmel Valley while visiting a Danish friend on her earlier trip to Hawaii.

Ever since then, the Valley beckoned her so the family moved to Robles del Rio in 1954. George taught at Tularcitos School and her son Dirck was born.

The family moved to Big Sur in the early sixties, when George was offered a teaching job at Captain Cooper School and was later promoted to the position of Principal. Lilli loved the community of Big Sur, taught ballet, produced children's shows and choreographed the Big Sur Review along with Eve Miller at the Grange Hall. For a number of years, Lilli would drive from Big Sur to The Beach Club and later to the Lodge in Pebble Beach, where she taught many of the young people of the Peninsula at the Cotillion.

The family moved to Carmel in 1971. Lilli operated her popular Ballet Studio at Sunset Center for 18 years where she met and made so many friends.

After retiring she spent a number of years volunteering for the City of Monterey with the "Garden Group," making so many new friends.

Lilli was preceded in death by her husband, George, in 1974. She is survived by her two sons, Conrad (Ellen), Dirck (Robin), both of Carmel, and her two grandsons, Dylan and Brenden.

A private cremation has been held. There will be a private gathering at a later time. The Paul Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

Honoring Lilli's wish, the family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the S.P.C.A., P.O. Box 3058, Monterey, CA 93942, or to the donor's favorite charity.

room doesn't have necessary ventilation. The emergency operations center shouldn't be downstairs.

"We've looked at this," he said. "This is something we actually do need."

And so, with the mindset of "doing the best we can with what we have," as councilwoman Carolyn Hardy put it, the architect developed the plans, and the commissions offered suggestions for making them more attractive.

The council voted in favor of most of those changes — getting rid of an enclosed patio that would have meant a longer wall along Junipero, building planters at stepped levels to accommodate more landscaping, and others — but opted not to push the wall on the west side farther east, or to put stone on the building, since both of those options would add considerably to the cost.

City administrator Chip Rerig is already concerned about the project's costs and said the landscape plan should be more of a Buick than a Ferrari.

"We are all interested in trying to keep the costs down," Hardy said before she made the motion to have the architect revise the drawings based on the council's feedback and then run them past the commissions again.

"We're implementing their recommendations — I can't imagine they would have a problem with the changes they recommended, with cost in mind," she said. "We're not starting over, and we're not changing architects."

DESAL

"There is more to come in terms of permitting and approvals before we start construction in 2019," Stedman told The Pine Cone. "But the schedule announced by the CPUC keeps us on track and marks considerable progress."

Cal Am proposed the Monterey Peninsula Water Supply Project in April 2012. After numerous delays, a final environmental review released in March identified Cal Am's 6.4-million-gallon-per-day desal plant combined with the 3,500-acre-foot-per-year reclaimed water project as the best way to supply water to Monterey Peninsula.

The desal project involves the installation of a seawater intake system from wells in the Marina dunes. Water from the wells would be conveyed to the new desal facility on Charles Benson Road, northeast of Marina.

From there, a new pipeline would deliver the water to customers throughout the Monterey Peninsula, while also making it possible for excess water from wet months to be stored underground.

Other projects have problems

There are alternatives to Cal Am's desal plant, including two projects in Moss Landing, but the EIR for the Cal Am project found that they "would result in impingement and entrainment of marine organisms, resulting in significant long-term direct and indirect effects on marine biological resources within" the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary.

Stedman credited the CPUC for engaging in a "lengthy, robust and transparent process."

"Many stakeholders and members of the public contributed to this process and helped get us to where we are today."

Activists opposed to Cal Am's proposal will likely challenge approval of the water project in court, which would mean further delays.

need attention during certain times of the year. Officers also tap into Pebble Beach security's communication lines and can assist them when necessary.

The law enforcement presence, Kilic said, has also had peripheral benefits, including a reduction in crime in the forest.

"The presence of a black and white patrol vehicle has been very effective and has almost eliminated vandalism," he explained.

The public agency, which is funded from property taxes, also provides fire protection, medical services, wastewater collection and treatment, recycled water distribution, garbage collection and disposal and undergrounds overhead utilities.

the final list:

■ Dave Potter (mayor)

A former 5th District Monterey County Supervisor, Potter also served on the California Coastal Commission, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, and the Monterey Planning Commission and city council. Potter — who lives around the corner from city hall — is challenging incumbent Mayor Steve Dallas and newcomer Gene Hughes for the seat at the head of the dais. The mayor serves for two years.

Signers on Potter's nomination papers include beach advocate Kathy Bang, former city council members Victoria Beach and Michael Cunningham, former forest and beach commissioner Karen Ferlito and husband Hugo, former Mayor Sue McCloud and sister Sarah Berling, former Mayor Ken White, insurance agency owner Matt Little, Graeme and Chris Robertson, "Fast Food Nation" author Eric Schlosser, former Carmel Foundation CEO Jill Sheffield, Carl and Paige Roetter, Gail and Bill Scearce, longtime Grasing's bartender Ira Comello, JD Coates, builder Chris Tescher and wife Anne, photographer Randy Tunnell, and Potter's wife, Portola Hotel general manager Janine Chicourrat.

■ Gene Hughes (mayor)

Hughes, a nuclear engineer who owns a consulting company, has had home on Carmelo Street with his wife since 1992, and the couple moved here full-time last year. He is also challenging Dallas for the mayor's seat.

Signers of his petition include him and his wife, Michael Mason, Keita Marnell, George and Trish Cox, Stuart Allen, Ken and Susan Madsen, K.F. Mills, Deborah Davis (who sings at the Cypress Inn), longtime fixture Sam Salerno, Peter Realmuto, C.W. Sharp, Linda Schenk, Kiang Zee, Christian Pepe (son of Rich Pepe), Emile Wilkinson, Keith Decker, Susanne Kreiser, Sandra Ashby, Thomas Papas, Michael Restifo, and Linda and Frank Southers.

■ Carrie Theis (council)

A member of the city council since 2012, when she was appointed to finish the term vacated by Jason Burnett when he became mayor, Theis was elected to a full term in 2014 and wants to serve another four years.

Carmel-by-the-Sea voters who signed her nomination paper include longtime locals Merv Sutton and Clyde Sturges, former council members Mike Brown and Karen Sharp, McCloud, White, Tescher, Bang and husband Gary, Flanders Mansion preservationist Melanie Billig and husband Harvey, Carmel Residents Association board members Dick Stiles and Tom Parks, Classic Hotels VP Mary Crowe, Mary Liskin, Carolina Bayne, planning commissioner Michael LePage, Neal Kruse, cultural commissioner Judy Refuerzo and forest and beach commissioner David Refuerzo, historic resources board member Kathryn Gualtieri, Copies-by-the-Sea owner Barbara Podoloff, and Theis' husband, Kevan Urquhart, and mother, Doris Theis.

The Theis family has owned and run the Hofsas House hotel on San Carlos Street for more than 70 years.

■ Jeff Baron (council)

Baron has lived in town full-time since 2011, when he and husband Kevin D'Angelo moved here from Santa Clara after D'Angelo sold his tech company. By then, Baron had built their house on Camino Real on a lot they bought in 2005. He served on the forest and beach commission for two years and has been an active participant at meetings in city hall.

Like Hughes, Baron signed his own nomination paper, and his husband signed, too, along with White, Liskin, Carmel Residents Association President Barbara Livingston, former forest and beach commissioner Kathleen Coss, Sandhya Kolar, past council candidate and art gallery owner Richard Kreitman, CRA board member Mary Condry and husband Robert, former planning commissioner Ian Martin, both Ferlitos, former planning commissioner Don Goodhue and wife Esther, Malcom and Judith Weintraub, and Chris Mack.

BAN

us to make this a permanent solution," she said.

The coastal commission's public information officer was contacted for this story, but didn't offer a response.

California State Parks District Superintendent Brent Marshall, who oversees Carmel and Big Sur state parks, also chimed in on the topic, and while he didn't outright endorse the permanent parking ban, he also didn't object to it.

Marshall said his agency supports "a healthy management of our natural and cultural resources," and "without managed access, we are going to see a degradation of those resources."

Since parking was temporarily banned along the east side of the highway about six weeks ago, Marshall said the congestion in the area and inside the park has been reduced.

"Over the last few weeks, we've seen real improvement in the park's operation," he reported. "Visitation is at a reasonable level — we've seen a lot less people off the trail and a lot less wildlife disturbance."

As locals have observed on numerous occasions, when people park along the east side of the highway, it means they have to walk across the busy road to enter the park. No crosswalk or signal light exists. The visitors often cross the pavement with children in tow, and some even push baby strollers.

Besides the big risk parking along the east side of the highway poses for pedestrians crossing the road, the practice has been criticized by firefighters and residents who worry about access during an emergency.

Last week, a Cal Fire captain told The Pine Cone a fire engine and its crew were unable to turn around because both shoulders were filled with vehicles. A resident, meanwhile, reported that a potential disaster was narrowly averted recently after a power pole caught fire. The local credited the temporary "No Parking" signs with keeping the inland shoulder open so vehicles could pull over and allow firefighters reach the pole.

hike — 10 days, up and down,” he said. “The air near the top is extremely thin, so we took medics, oxygen tanks ... the works.”

Ascending on the final day from either of two base camps (15,000 or 16,000 feet) to the 19,308-foot summit carries with it a risk of developing not only the usual symptoms of breathing air without much oxygen, but a blood clot due to low air pressure.

“Almost all of us were on high-altitude prophylactic medication, and most people took a high-altitude steroid on the day of the final ascent,” he said. “We started hiking that day at 2 a.m., when the temperature was below freezing, because you have to get up and down before the sun sets.”

Difficult just to stand

He said he woke up that morning with a “massive headache, like the worst hangover I’ve ever had, and nausea, which are signs of altitude sickness. If it hadn’t gone away, I probably wouldn’t have been allowed to ascend. Fortunately, it did.”

The difficulty of playing soccer in such conditions was exacerbated by a playing surface of deep volcanic sand inside the crater, but when the opening whistle blew, all pre-game promises about “taking it slow” were abandoned, Pendergast said.

“When I looked at the footage later, I heard myself exclaiming in awe, ‘My God ... they’re running!’ And whenever they’d kick the ball, a big poof of sand went up,” he added. “The conditions were difficult for me, and I was just standing around with my camera.”

The privilege of being a storyteller in seldom-visited places is what drives Pendergast, who was born in Belgium and traveled extensively through Europe with his family for the first 12 years of his life.

“Both of my parents are academics. My father, William, is an educator, and my mother, Carol, is an art historian by training. We spent almost every weekend driving to Austria, or Italy or France,” he said. “I have a lot of memories of being dragged around famous museums. My mom would be explaining why each painting was important, and I’d be wondering where I could find a hamburger.”

When William Pendergast was hired as dean of the business school at Monterey Institute of International Studies, the family (including Matthew’s older sisters, Sarah and Jennifer) moved to Carmel.

Pendergast’s artistic sparks were ignited by an interest in music, photography and drama. He majored in history and minored in East Asian studies at UC Santa Cruz, but gravitated toward journalism, working for Reuters News Agency in Beijing, China, after college, and then a small newspaper in San Luis Obispo.

His introduction to filmmaking began with a job at the Asia Foundation, a non-governmental organization in San Francisco that created an in-house video department to publicize its work in Asia.

“I fell in love with it immediately. It was a dream job, going to far-flung places to tell the stories of people who were trying to improve their communities,” he said. “For me, it checked all the boxes: It was interesting, it was creative, I was working with developing technology, there was a lot of travel, and I was getting paid to do it.”

A pivotal moment for Pendergast was when he made a financially risky decision to leave the Asia Foundation and pursue a career as a freelance videographer, a move that has paid dividends ever since.

An ‘amazing’ extended family

“A large part of any success I’ve had came from being part of a very creative community in the San Francisco Bay area, a large portion of which is from Carmel High School,” he said. “There is an amazing number of young, creative people from Carmel who are making careers in film, music, television, movies, photography... it’s a pretty amazing extended family.”

Pendergast credits the artistic, bohemian atmosphere of Carmel-by-the-Sea and the dynamic art options at Carmel High for the phenomenon.

“There’s just something magical about it that is engrained in the fabric and the beauty of the place,” he said. “It has a quaint kind of uniqueness, and it celebrates its quirkiness.”

Pendergast’s most recent project was another exotic trip — this one in April, to the Dead Sea in Jordan, where the athletes from Equal Playing Field set another Guinness world record by playing a FIFA-sanctioned soccer match at minus 1,200 feet in elevation. He is editing footage from that adventure into a full-length documentary.

roundtrip per day with a stop in Salinas on its way between Los Angeles and Seattle.

The new rail extension project will triple the existing level of service, starting with two roundtrips per day, increasing to six or more as demand warrants, TAMC said

TAMC expects the line to serve about 95,000 riders per year while there are two round trips, increasing to 475,000 riders per year in 25 years and 779,000 riders in 50 years.

Ticket prices have not been set, and costs depend “on the fare structure” of the operator — which has not been “confirmed,” Watson said.

Riders won’t pay the freight

How ever the deal is structured, TAMC expects the train service to operate at a deficit, estimating it will cost about $4.8 million per year to operate two daily roundtrip trains, while fare revenue will generate just $3.2 million annually. The project will need about $1.6 million in taxpayer subsidies each year, the agency said.

But the train project will provide benefits that make the subsidy worthwhile, according to TAMC, by creating 825 new jobs, reducing traffic, saving $2.2 million “in avoidance of highway accidents” every year, cutting carbon monoxide in the atmosphere by 40 tons and carbon dioxide by 34 tons annually, and promoting economic development around rail stations.

LEGAL

Hardy said she and council member Jan Reimers conferred with other city attorneys and took much of the language for the Mozingo contract from the City of Pacific Grove's agreement with its attorney, David Laredo. Laredo's firm also receives a $30,000 monthly retainer, and many of the two contracts' other provisions are similar, if not identical.

And she said the five-year term locks in "a reduced hourly rate that saves the city money in the long term."

Not mollified

But the eight residents who spoke at the hearing were not satisfied, as they took issue with the contract being initially listed on the meeting's consent agenda, the hearing being held at the end of the meeting, an amended resolution and staff report being made available only at the start of the meeting, and the provisions of the contract itself. They also argued the council shouldn't commit to retaining Mozingo until resolution of a lawsuit filed by a former editor of the Monterey County Herald over the disclosure of documents supporting Mozingo's job qualifications.

"The City of Monterey has a full-time city attorney for under $250,000 per year," Hugo Ferlito claimed. "The city council should go in search of a full-time city attorney." (Monterey, with a population of more than 28,000, has a city attorney, an assistant city attorney and a deputy city attorney on its payroll. Their combined pay and benefits last year totaled $531,390, according to Transparent California.)

"Go back and do the right thing," Ferlito said. "This is not the right thing."

Council candidate Jeff Baron said the legal services contract is "harmful to this village." He also objected to the five-year term because it would "bind the hands" of future councils and said the contract "seems vague."

"Hire a city attorney and put him on staff," he added.

"There are other people who were here to speak on this issue and had to go home," Karen Ferlito said. "To turn around and put it at the end of the meeting is, frankly, insulting."

Resident Chris Mack said the council should heed the people's concerns.

"The CRA board members were very concerned this was placed on consent," resident Barbara Livingston commented. "This is a multimillion-dollar contract, and it really does deserve a public hearing."

Former Mayor Sue McCloud said she was surprised at the number of people who called her about it.

"There is a lot of feeling about this, and I share the thought that we really should step back on this," she said. "I'd like to see a one-year contract. I do object to having a vote on it tonight."

"I haven't heard anyone in support of this contract," CRA board member Georgina Armstrong observed, and resident Richard Kreitman pointed out that taxpayers fund it.

"This is taxpayer money," he said. "I pay this money. We all do."

Council's logic

Councilman Bobby Richards agreed with some of the dissenters, and called for putting a full-time city attorney on the payroll.

"Mr. Mozingo has done some great work over the past year. He should be commended for his dedication and expertise," he said. "When I take into consideration the apparent needs of the city, the backlog of work and the current litigation as well as the unknown, I am convinced we need a full-time attorney."

He suggested that even with retirement contributions, benefits and other costs associated with a full-time employee, it would be more fiscally prudent.

Hardy countered that getting attorneys to commit to hourly rates of $195 to $275 for five years would save money in the end.

"I don't know why people are so appalled at this contract, because it's what other city attorneys have — it's nothing unusual," They commented. "I will apologize that we put it on consent, but we're still having a public hearing."

As for Mozingo's qualifications, she said, "We have seen his backup documents, we are not deliberating that he has been a lawyer for 37 years or has a law degree."

"He has not given us bad legal advice," she continued, calling Mozingo, "an honorable gentleman."

"I'm having a hard time understanding all this negativity, because we're much better off than we were a year ago," she said.

Mayor Steve Dallas said the agreement is available for all to see. "It's pretty frustrating to hear you say we don't have transparency," he said. "We're getting a bargain."

The council voted 4-1, with Richards dissenting, to approve the legal services contract.

party scene," he said. "We do not have live music, DJs or dancing. Our price point attracts a high-end consumer who is not looking to get drunk."

Ahn also assured commissioners the activity would be inside the restaurant, not in the al fresco dining area set to open in the next week or so.

Siding with neighbors

"There seem to be a lot of neighbor objections," observed Chris Bolton, when it came time for the commission to deliberate.

"I hate to see people living on five hours of sleep because we want to let people stay a little longer," commissioner Gail Lehman said, speculating that anyone remaining in the restaurant after 10 p.m. is probably drinking more than eating, and therefore "getting louder and louder."

Commissioner Julie Wendt noted that the building used to be a bank — a very quiet business.

"I can't support extending the hours," she said. "You've already got a situation that isn't working for surrounding neighbors."

Chair Michael LePage said later hours would mean more noise issues for neighbors, and he encouraged Ahn to work to fix the problems that already exist.

Only commissioner Stephanie Locke favored Wiener's recommendation, observing that several other restaurants with closing hours of 11 p.m. or later are located closer to residential areas than 7D.

"My feeling is an 11 p.m. closing time is in keeping with other restaurants in the areas that I've mentioned," she said. "And my experience, as someone who dines out regularly in town, is that most of them don't stay open all that time," when business is slow.

Commissioners voted 4-1 to deny Ahn's request, with Locke dissenting.

Editorial

The big day at last

NEXT WEEK, one of the head honchos at the California Public Utilities Commission will announce his decision on whether the Monterey Peninsula should get a permit for a desal plant.

To say this decision has been long in coming would be a ridiculous understatement. We've been waiting for it since 1995.

To say the decision will be momentous for the future of Carmel and its neighbors would be also be a major understatement. Life itself depends on having a supply of fresh water, and with state regulators breathing down our necks about putting an end to pumping from the Carmel River, with a possibility of a severe drought ever present, and with all other possible sources of water having been foreclosed by a thicket of state and federal regulations, for us, it's desal or nothing.

Meanwhile, it would be a silly exaggeration to say there's any drama in the announcement. Of course, the decision will be to approve our desal plant. The CPUC doesn't have any choice in the matter, and they know it. Even in California, no matter the environmental pretext, the government can't say, "No water for you," to a community of 100,000 people — and millions of tourists.

The environmentalists who engineered the water shortage in the first place accomplished their purpose: They put a halt to almost all new development in an area that stretches from the Highlands in the south, to Carmel Valley Village in the east, to Carmel and Pebble Beach in the west, and to Pacific Grove and Monterey in the north. When people say, "So much has changed in the Monterey Peninsula," and you ask what they're talking about, they always end up mentioning Seaside Highlands or Fort Ord. For the rest of us, when it comes to new buildings or population growth, time has stood still since the 1990s. In Carmel-by-the-Sea, the population has even gone down every year.

That's exactly what the Sierra Club, LandWatch and other groups wanted, of course, and if you think the only alternative was "massive development," "L.A.-style development," or any of the other scary, enviro catchphrases that have been used over the years, you're probably happy they won the battle.

But out-of-control development wasn't the only alternative to the nearly complete development ban that's been in effect since 1995. The point of the water shortage was to take control over building permits away from city councils, the board of supervisors, and even the coastal commission, and substitute what's known as an "infrastructure shortage" (i.e., no water), so nothing could be approved, no matter how worthy it is. But are elected officials so corrupt or incompetent that they can't be trusted to make decisions about what's good for the people who elected them? If they are, it means democracy itself should be replaced with something else.

To which we say, "Go jump in a lake."

Here in Carmel, we don't believe the city council will ever approve five-story apartments buildings up and down Ocean Avenue, an office tower at Carmel Plaza, or a 500-room hotel at Sunset Center. Sure, there may be arguments from time to time over whether 1,800 square feet is a bit too much development on a 4,000-square-foot lot, or whether clad windows are acceptable on a cottage, and people may act like those disputes are matters of life and death. But they're not. On the big stuff, everybody agrees. And the same thing is true in all the communities surrounding Carmel. Nobody wants to turn them into San Jose.

But should we be without water for simple things like adding a guest bathroom? Expanding a restaurant by a few seats? Building on a vacant lot? And always being at risk of running out of water when then the skies are dry for two or three winters in a row? All that, just to stop something from happening that nobody wants in the first place? Again, no.

We look forward to the PUC's decision next week, and we look forward even more to the day — one we hope is not far off — when our dreadful water shortage at last comes to an end, and when a city council can issue a permit for something to be built, and it actually will be.

Wants Hatton Canyon freeway back

Dear Editor,

It's time to dust off the plans for Hatton Canyon highway. Traffic jams on Highway 1 in are now a way of life. People sit through 5 to 10 traffic-light cycles before getting past Ocean Avenue, and even on a green light they sometimes can't advance because traffic is backed up from the light at Carmel Valley road. Generally, the situation is the same on the northbound lanes.

Since the 1950's engineers knew the solution to future growth in Carmel Valley was a bypass down Hatton Canyon. Caltrans owned the canyon and preserved it, but when implementation time came, all hell broke loose. Endangered Hickman's onion (abundant on Fort Ord) was found growing in the canyon, endangered red legged frog was spotted (never seen again), and pitch canker was destroying the Monterey pine forest, making tree removal for a road a travesty. The runoff in rain would end up in Carmel river and kill endangered steelhead trout, as if runoff doesn't now. The canyon was described as a noise amplifier, as if echoes were louder than the source of the noise. A rich man's foundation in Pacific Grove claimed the highway in the canyon would encourage development in the valley, and declared the "lifeboat" was already full. The vice-chair of the Carmel Valley trail committee took a few people for a stroll in the canyon, and reported he heard birds chirp there. After political manipulation like all of this, Hatton Canyon, owned by Caltrans and for decades intended for the highway extension and traffic solution, was sold to state parks, which didn't want it.

So, stuck in traffic, smile. The time you are wasting saved a forest (never was in danger), the red legged frog (never was there), the Hickman's onion (abundant 10 miles away), added nothing to run-off into Carmel river, and amplified no noise. Why?

Return Hatton Canyon to Caltrans and get them to build that road.

Hafidi Jonsson,
Carmel

Just for the record, some of us tourists actually come here for the cool weather. We have owned a timeshare here for almost 20 years. We specifically chose this time of year to escape the heat and humidity of the southeast.

P.S. Feel free to visit Virginia Beach if you get tired of your cool weather.

A $10 photo sale and a trip to Afghanistan launch a career

HOW DO you follow a successful life behind the movie camera? Behind a still camera, of course. Will Furman is one of those people who's produced a large body of work that didn't come with credits. As owner of Furman Films in San Francisco for many years, he's shot commercials for clients as diverse as California Raisins, PG&E and Kaiser Aluminum. And he's won dozens of awards from national and international film groups.

Long before that, however, Furman was born in the Washington, D.C., area, where his father was a lawyer. He said his parents were both musicians, but he wasn't encouraged to make a career of music.

"I wouldn't be able to make money at it," he remembered thinking.

His father later worked as a real estate appraiser, and Furman helped him paste photos of properties together to make panoramic views. He sold his first photo at 14. His parents had sent him to summer camp in Colorado, where Furman also took a class in photo processing.

Musical talents

One day, counselors decided to take the campers to see a uranium mine. "That was a big deal at the time," he explained of the search for the radioactive resource. Furman had his camera, and when a stretch limo full of business executives arrived to size up the operation, one of them said "Hey kid, take some pictures for us." He did, and the execs bought them for $10.

He decided to go into film and earned his master's and bachelor's degrees in television and motion pictures at San Francisco State. In the mid-1960s, Furman said he used a small inheritance to travel with a college roommate through Europe and the Middle East, to the roommate's home in Afghanistan. While there, he filmed "The Stones of Eden," a story of everyday life, for his master's thesis. It garnered not only a diploma, but an amateur cinema award.

Furman went into business for himself, and ultimately produced more than 300 TV commercials including some for the nation's largest advertising firms. In addition, Apple Computer, Black and Decker, Seagram Vintners and myriad other companies hired Furman to produce, direct and photograph public relations and marketing films.

One of the projects Furman is most proud of is a 1999 one-hour television special called "Beyond Courage — Surviving Vietnam as a P.O.W." The show aired in Europe, and received a ringing endorsement from Colin Powell, who called it a "gripping story of the power of the human spirit to endure and triumph." Although he was not featured in the film, in a publicity piece, Sen. John McCain referred to it as "one of the most realistic portrayals to date of the struggles we endured as prisoners of the North Vietnamese."

Great Lives

By ELAINE HESSER

Furman inherited his parents' musical abilities and continues to sing (and play a little guitar) for his neighbors at Carmel Valley Manor, among others. There's even a credit from the TV series, "Northern Exposure," where he appeared as a member of a barber-shop quartet.

The Giants, Padres and Dodgers have all heard him sing the national anthem at their games, too.

He also recorded music for 1973's "American Graffiti" — though it didn't quite make it into the final cut. Here's what happened:

The iconic coming-of-age film was produced by Francis Ford Coppola and directed by George Lucas. It portrayed one night at the end of summer in Modesto, and included a bunch of young, then relatively unknown actors like Ron Howard, Richard Dreyfuss, Harrison Ford, Suzanne Somers and Cindy Williams.

Lucas thought outside the normal Hollywood box — instead of hiring an orchestra and singers to record music he wanted, he decided to use existing versions of popular songs. It's something we take for granted in big movies today, but was a new concept in "American Graffiti."

Back to nature

Furman explained that the musicians' union was opposed to Lucas' approach, so the director agreed to hire some professionals to make original recordings for a few scenes.

Since Furman was familiar with the Hollywood community from his own ventures, and since his friends knew about his musical ability, his name came up and he was invited to produce some tunes. With other singers and musicians, he recorded the station breaks and commercials for Wolfman Jack's radio show, which figured prominently in the movie's plot.

However, Lucas later had a change of heart and Furman's recordings ended up on the cutting room floor. "When George wants something, it's that way. Not a little more, not

When is a painting finished? Ask him.

THE RAIN falling on Carmel Valley was so cold and dreary that day that Thomas Hawley remembers being the only hiker in Garland Ranch Regional Park when he came upon a scene dripping with timeless romance.

"The only other person I saw all day was this lone, dramatic, figure — a guy standing in the rain, painting," Hawley remembered of his chance meeting with a solitary plein air

Carmel Art Association artists Dick Crispo, Gerard Martin, and Mac McWilliams, painting with Carmel Valley artist Tehila Eisenstat, and workshops with German expressionist Guido Frick, who now stays at Hawley's home whenever he visits the Monterey Peninsula to teach.

Inspirations include Carmel Art Association legends, including S.C. Yuan (who was briefly his law client), William Ritschel, E. Charlton Fortune, Joseph Raphael, Charles Rollo Peters and Armin Hansen.

Nowadays, he works quickly. Hawley typically finishes five or six paintings a week — an 8-by-10 work often takes just 45 minutes to an hour — a rate that enables him to stock five local galleries: Carmel Valley Art Association, Monterey Peninsula Art Association, Cheryl's Pottery on Cannery Row, Crackpot Gallery in Pacific Grove, and Artisans Gallery in Santa Cruz.

His success as an artist isn't something he could have predicted. Hawley painted as a boy in Los Altos Hills, but insists he was devoid of any discernible talent and became so frustrated that he moved on to other interests.

Trapped in law school

"We were apricot farmers and lived on a hilltop where, on a still day, I could hear the roar of the crowd from Stanford Stadium. John Brody [quarterback at Stanford, and later the 49ers] was my hero then. I had his picture pasted all over my walls," said Hawley, who aspired to become either a pro quarterback or an opera singer.

Instead, he took after his father, two grandfathers and a great-grandfather, and studied law, first at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., then at Stanford.

"I always saw myself as the last person on earth who should become a lawyer, so I probably figured I'd take that first year of law school, just to round out parts of my otherwise-deficient character, and move on to something else," he said. "But I sort of got trapped in law school. It turned out to be really interesting, with great teachers, and I stayed with it."

He relocated to the Monterey Peninsula right after graduating, working for Fenton & Keller for 47 years. Hawley said a colleague, artist. "I walked over and said, 'You know, someday I want to be the only guy out here, painting in the rain.'"

That moment awakened a wistfulness that had been dormant since Hawley's childhood — a phase when he had been interested in art.

"After that day in Garland park, whenever I'd get over-served at a cocktail party, I would tell people how I wanted to become an artist," he said with a laugh. "And one Christmas my wife [Marijke] bought me an easel, a palette, brushes and canvases, and said, 'Look, either start painting or shut up!'"

That was 15 years ago, when most of Hawley's time was devoted to his practice as an estate-planning attorney for Fenton & Keller, where he worked from 1969 until 2016, until he retired at age 72.

"I gave up golf for art and basically started throwing paintbrushes instead of golf clubs," he joked. "For the first five or 10 years, I probably scraped off nine out of every 10 paintings I started. And nothing is more depressing than scraping off a painting. It's a feeling of total defeat."

That rarely happens anymore. His breakthrough, about five years ago, came when his impressionist style became looser. Hawley says he got better at recognizing when a painting is at its peak and it's time for the artist to stop applying paint and sign it.

"It's a hard thing to learn. At times it almost takes somebody standing behind you to grab the brushes out of your hand and say, 'Stop!'" he said. "Every painting has an arc — and a point at which it's not going to get any better, no matter what you do. In fact, it will only get worse."

Hawley's belated journey into art began with lessons at Carmel Adult School from

He didn't become an opera singer or a football player, but award-winning Carmel Valley painter Thomas Hawley, 74, was a retired estate-planning attorney who turned to art 15 years ago. He also farms a small vineyard and produces Blue Heron wine.

Sheriff's office saves day

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

INSTEAD OF saving a life, the Monterey County Sheriff's Dive Team saved someone's underwater adventure last month.

A woman named Kelly — no last name given — had driven with friends from the San Francisco Bay area to Point Lobos for an afternoon of scuba diving.

"Upon arriving, Kelly soon realized she had forgotten her dive belt and weights," the sheriff's office reported. "She asked the other drivers, but none had any spares. She gave up and started eating lunch. That is when she saw our dive team getting out of the water."

The sheriff's divers, who had just finished training, always carry extra gear. When they heard about her plight, they loaned Kelly what she needed so the day was not a total loss, a deputy said. The woman ended up diving with her friends, and afterward, she gave the MCSO divers a big shout-out.

"Thanks for the rescue, Monterey County Sheriff's Dive Team — I really, really, really appreciated it," she said.

The sheriff's office, meanwhile appreciated the compliment. "Every call for service we receive is an opportunity for us to help someone in need," the county law enforcement agency added.

a little less, just that way," Furman said philosophically.

A little more than 10 years ago, Furman took his still camera and began focusing on nature. Whether it's a cute otter, a stunning seascape or haunting desert scene, Furman has captured colors, light and shadow in a way that makes each photo come alive.

His latest effort, a series he's calling FotoReflections, is a group of images he made by taking pictures of buildings and vehicles through windows which also reflect the outside world. Although some look like they may have made from multiple shots, each photo was a single exposure.

A 'huge improvement'

The technique is showcased in his 2017 book, "Bodie: Good Times and Bad," a study of the ghost town in the eastern Sierra, with author Nicholas Clapp. His work was recently shown in an exhibit at Carmel Valley Manor and is also displayed in the Stanley Mosk Library and Courts Building, the Sacramento home of the state Supreme Court.

State Librarian Greg Lucas recently wrote to Furman that California Supreme Court Chief Justice Tani Cantil-Sakauye "went out of her way to tell me how much she enjoys seeing the images when she comes to work in Sacramento and what a huge improvement it's made in that part of what she calls 'her' building."

Furman is a frequent guest lecturer on photography at local organizations, and more of his work can be seen on his website at willfurmanphotography.com.

HAWLEY

Charlie Page, warned him that his first two years there would be the worst of his life.

"And he was absolutely right. It was really tough being a young lawyer in a very good firm," he said. "But it got better when I got into estate planning, which was wonderful. You're helping people accomplish things that will make their lives better."

He authored the 2004 book, "The Artful Dodger's Guide to Planning Your Estate," and has lectured on that topic.

The best thrill

Hawley retired with some reluctance, he said, but quickly embraced his newfound freedom to enjoy life on his own terms. He farms a small vineyard and operates a winery that produces Blue Heron wine in Carmel Valley, travels frequently with his wife and creates his art nearly every day of the week.

"I often ponder what makes me happy," he said. "Well, I've got a fabulous marriage (he met Marijke, his former dental hygienist, in 1994, and married her in 2005), and I live in a wonderful place.

"But the cheapest and best thrill is this sense of creation," Hawley added. "It's so rewarding when you can look at something you've made and say, 'Wow, I think that's actually pretty good!' It doesn't happen all the time, but when it does, it's a warm feeling, an inner joy. It's exhilarating."

Hawley's art has earned 17 awards and honors since 2007, including first-place awards at the Central Coast Art Association show (2012 and 2018) and the Monterey County Fair (2017).

Police tracking leads in burglaries

By MARY SCHLEY

THE THIEVES who broke into a garage and rifled through a car on Pico Street ended up with keys to a couple of offices in a Lighthouse Avenue building, Pacific Grove Police Cmdr. Rory Lakind told The Pine Cone Thursday, where they made off with laptops, cash and other possessions. Those three break-ins and four others were all reported July 25, with an eighth July 26 and a ninth July 28.

In general, Lakind said, the thieves were opportunistic — looking for and finding unlocked cars and garages, for instance — and ended up not getting much of value. But for any of the victims, just the experience of such an intrusion is traumatic.

Not sure when it happened

The reports started coming in at 8:15 a.m. July 25, when a 19th Street resident reported someone took cash from an unlocked car, followed by the reported break-ins at the offices on Lighthouse. An unlocked garage on Spazier was ransacked, but nothing appeared to be missing, Lakind said, and another unlocked garage was entered overnight. The thief stole a bicycle.

The Pico thefts were reported shortly after 10 a.m., and a Cypress Avenue resident said that afternoon that someone had been in his house but hadn't taken anything.

On July 26, police found pry marks where a thief entered a home on Lighthouse, but again, nothing was missing, and on July 28, a Gate Street resident reported being burglarized.

"They were gone for a while, so they don't know when it happened," Lakind said. The victim reported the thieves stole a laptop, cash and tools from the unlocked house and garage.

"Not everybody lives in every house all the time, so sometimes people don't know exactly when things happened," he said. "If you're renting it out or it's your second home, you might not notice for a few days that your garage was burglarized."

Lakind speculated that some of the burglaries could be connected — particularly, the one on Pico that yielded the keys to the Lighthouse Avenue offices — and said they were probably perpetrated mostly by the "regulars" who cycle in and out of jail on various property and drug crimes.

"Statistically, I think we're about the same as last year," he said. "A lot of it depends on who is in jail. I think you have a couple guys committing a bunch of them."

He does not believe groups of gang members from Seaside or Salinas are responsible.

"I don't see this huge pattern that suggests we have organized crime working in town by any means, but we do have people coming to town looking for easy money and unlocked doors."

Fortunately, he noted, P.G. is relatively free of the violent crimes that plague other cities.

"We're very blessed that we don't have the same violence issues as other communities," he said.

After the athletic field is installed, future plans for the park include installing restrooms, a drinking fountain, a shade structure and a BBQ area, along with about 200 square feet of grass.

The park district acquired the park in the mid-1980s, and its board of directors approved a park development plan in 1996.

After a wet winter triggered one of the largest slides in California history in May 2017 — and dumped more than 5 million cubic yards of rock, dirt and debris on the pavement — the highway was closed for repairs at Mud Creek for more than a year.

The highway reopened July 20 with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at Ragged Point, and three weeks later, the "Dream Dive" was put together to draw attention to the news.

Contenders new and old vie with Padres for domination on the courts

THE GABILAN Division of the brand-new Pacific Coast Athletic League will be mostly peaches and cream this season in girls tennis, and the fun will be watching the cream rise to the top.

The PCAL's toughest division will be and won the league's postseason tournament. She played on Coach Wendy Grover's title team with Taylure Craven, Emily Gu, Lola Wilcox, Jazzy Chang, Linda Zhang, Shreya Kamra, and Emily Oh, all of whom are expected back.

"This team is very balanced and our players are very supportive of one another," Grover said. "We also have an incoming freshman who will add tremendous talent and depth to our lineup."

That could be a bit of an understatement. The newcomer is Tomi Main, currently ranked No. 14 in the nation (No. 7 in California) among junior tennis players from the Class of 2022 (incoming freshmen). Main's overall record in USTA play is 72-14.

"They always get a lot of good tennis players at Stevenson," Haase said with a laugh. "Last year, they got a walk-on player (Speder) they had never seen before, and she wound up playing No. 1 singles for them."

No predictions

One of the Pirates' five non-league losses in 2017 was a 5-2 setback against Salinas, a team whose top two singles players, Makayla Chassion and Camryn Moore, are expected back. Both were unbeaten in the MBL-Gabilan last year.

Those two teams will have targets on their backs for the Carmel Padres, who aren't conceding anything in advance.

The Padres graduated their No. 1 singles player, Jessica Hwang, but returning from their second-place team will be Shannon Schroeder (No. 2 singles), who reached the semifinal round of the league tournament, Dillan Chiewpanich (who played No. 3 and No. 4 singles), and Chelsea Olvera. Chiewpanich tried her hand at doubles play in the league tournament, teaming with Olvera to reach the MTAL finals.

Other experienced Padres will include Dana Donaldson, a singles player, Bella Allen, who played both singles and doubles, plus Naomi Jun, Sherille Tupino, Hanna Shin, stacked with the five best tennis schools from the former Mission Trail Athletic League — Stevenson, Carmel, Santa Catalina, Pacific Grove and York — plus Salinas and Monterey from the old Monterey Bay League. Expect some tooth-and-nail competition.

'Much tougher'

Preseason favorites are likely to be Salinas, which went undefeated in the rugged MBL Gabilan in 2017 (and 20-2 overall), and Stevenson, which captured the MTAL with a perfect 12-0 record, and went 12-5 overall.

"Our league will be much tougher than before, which is actually quite exciting," said Carmel High coach Lauren Haase, whose team was last year's MTAL runner-up with a 9-3 record, and went 13-6 overall. "Everybody is going to be very competitive, and it's going to be a lot of fun to play more experienced teams."

The Stevenson Pirates, a traditional rival, tend to reload every fall, and 2018 won't be an exception. Leading the list of returning players in Pebble Beach will be senior Eszter Speder, who went undefeated in the MTAL Eszter Speder (above) of Stevenson is one of the top-notch opponents who challenge the CHS tennis team this year. But the Padres, including Shannon Schroeder (right), are no slouches either.

Come and get it: Badfinger and bacon headline Monterey festival

NEARLY 50 years after Paul McCartney gave the band its first hit song, Badfinger headlines the Monterey Baconfest Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 11-12 at the Monterey Fairgrounds.

Formerly known as the Iveys, the group was the first to be signed to the Beatles' new Apple Records label in 1968. But after the members of the Iveys failed to come up with a hit single, McCartney offered them one of his own songs, "Come and Get It." The group was also given a Beatlesque name, "Badfinger," which referred to either a stripper the Beatles knew or an injury John Lennon suffered while playing the piano.

"Come and Get It" became a Top 10 hit on both sides of the Atlantic, along with two songs that followed it, "No Matter What," and their highest charting single, "Day After Day," which peaked at No. 3. More recently, the band's profile got a big boost when another of its songs, "Baby Blue," was used in the final scene of the hit TV series, "Breaking Bad."

Today, Badfinger is led by its last surviving original member, singer and guitarist Joey Molland. He'll be joined at the fairgrounds by singer and bassist Mark Healey, singer and keyboardist Steve Wozny and drummer Mike Ricciardi.

Badfinger takes the stage Saturday at 3 p.m. The Baconfest's musical lineup also includes Alarma ("world dance rock," Saturday at 11:15 a.m.); Tom Ayres & the Shortcomings (rock, Saturday at 1 p.m.); singer-songwriter Jim Lauderdale (Sunday at 1 p.m.); and Illusion (Fleetwood Mac tribute, Sunday at 3 p.m.).

Motorworks food revs up, winemakers collaborate, and vinegar gets chocolatey

EVER SINCE Gordon McCall transformed his party at the airport during Concours Week from a private shindig to a public event more than a decade ago, he and wife Molly — the organizing force behind it — have worked not just to get a great lineup of aircraft and automobiles for guests to ogle, but to bring in plenty of talented chefs and quality libations to ensure the eating and drinking are on par with the machinery.

Event coordinator Tiffani Munsey has “been working overtime on creating incredible culinary experiences for the event,” Molly McCall said, including pairing chefs with particular wineries so the dishes complement what’s being poured, and vice versa.

“We’ve been focusing on this evolution of the food and beverage offerings,” Munsey told The Pine Cone this week, with guests being treated to flutes of sparkling wine as they walk onto the tarmac, where they’ll find California Caviar and passed hors d’oeuvres. Inside the hangar, along with more cars, motorcycles and other finery, they’ll find more food, wine and signature cocktails.

“We have paired each chef with a winery and have worked with them to craft a mini composed plate that complements the wine,” she said, rather than simply serving food and wine alongside each other.

Carmel Valley chef Jerome Viel, who owns the C.V. Market and caters a lot of local events, “is bringing back his very popular paella,” which he’ll pair with Altamura wines from the Napa area. Viel prepares the iconic Spanish saffron-infused rice dish in huge pans over open flame, creating a signature dish that’s as visually compelling as it is wonderful to eat.

“And then we also have Paul Corsentino from The Sur House at Ventana bringing a really beautiful roasted duck breast with grain salad that will be paired with Silver Oak cabernet sauvignon,” Munsey said.

Chef Matthew Beaudin from the Monterey Bay Aquarium and chef Luis Osorio from Affina in Carmel will be there, too, as will chef Joshua Schwartz from Del Dotto Vineyards in the Napa Valley.

“They are all fantastic, so it’s been a great experience working with each and every one of them,” she said.

All told, a half-dozen wineries will pour — including long-time supporters Bernardus in Carmel Valley and Roederer Estate — and several liquor producers, like El Jefe Tequila (owned by Surf N Sand proprietor Ryan Sanchez), Bulleit, Tanqueray and Ketel One. Chandon and Veuve Clicquot will provide bubbly, too, and Guinness will cover the beer.

“Overall, there will be 14 bars,” Munsey said.

With that lineup, she is certain McCall’s Motorworks Revival will be “an experience for all the senses.”

For more information about the Aug. 22 event, which runs from 5 to 10 p.m. at the Monterey Jet Center, visit www.mccallevents.com. Tickets run $425 to $575, which includes early entry and valet parking.

■ BaconFest

With its roots in a music festival, BaconFest, which grew to two days this year, Aug. 11-12, will still feature a half-dozen bands on the Garden Stage at the Monterey Fairgrounds, but the headliner will be smoky pork products.

From 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days, vendors will offer every possible kind of bacon-themed, bacon-flavored or bacon-centric food and drink. The BaconBar, for instance, will serve ba-

While admission to the festival runs $15 per person, with discounts for seniors, military, families and kids, a more extravagant and spendy option is available on Saturday for the most devoted bacon lovers. Staged in the Seaside Room from noon to 4 p.m., the Ultimate Bacon Experience will feature a dozen local chefs serving up their best bacon dishes to be washed down with unlimited supplies of beer and bourbon.

Portola Hotel executive chef Danny Abbruzzese got creative with his dessert for a recent produce marketing conference, creating a strawberry patch that even contained edible "dirt," made from chocolate cake, graham crackers and Oreos.

Slated to cook are PigWizard (Jonathan Roberts), who will prepare a whole pig, Matt Beaudin from the Aquarium, Emanuele Bartolini from La Balena, Justin Robarge from Cannery Row Brewing Company, Paul Blackerby from TusCA at the Hyatt Regency Monterey, Eduardo Colonel from the Rio Grill, Terry Teplitzky from Boardwalk Subs, Colin Moody, Crystal Birkemeier from Rancho Cielo Youth Campus, Tom Snyder from the soon-to-open Cella at the Cooper-Molera Adobe, and Mark Guerra from Lily's. Open to guests 21 and over, the Ultimate Bacon Experience costs $80 per person at the gate and includes admission to the rest of the fest.

Guests are encouraged to bring their own chairs or blankets for kicking back and listening to the music.

Online ticket sales — with lower prices — are available until Friday night. For more information and details, go to www.baconfest.com.

■ Sostener pinot project

Two Monterey County winemaker/grape growers — Steve McIntyre of McIntyre Vineyards and Michael Thomas of Wrath — collaborated on a pinot noir they named "Sostener," for the Spanish word for "to sustain." The name "not only evokes the local heritage of the Salinas Valley, but also symbolizes a dedication to sustainable viticulture and winemaking."

They hired Eric Laumann, a professional winemaker for more than three decades, to produce it, and his first vintage was 2012. Laumann has held posts at Zaca Mesa in the Santa Ynez area, Kendall Jackson, Edna Valley, Bonny Doon — and Bronco Wine Co., one of the nation's largest producers that's best known for Charles Shaw wines, aka, Two Buck Chuck. He is also owner and winemaker of Cambiata and Laumann Family Estate Wines.

Laumann's philosophy for Sostener focuses on using high-quality, sustainably farmed grapes from an estate vineyard in the Santa Lucia Highlands. He prefers fruit that's picked with a slightly lower sugar content to produce wine with an alcohol level below 14 percent, and judicious use of new oak barrels, which impart distinctive characteristics to the wine and are also expensive. The owners want Sostener to taste and smell like pinot noir (as opposed to over-ripe, heavier iterations), and want it to pair well with food.

On the environmental front, its lightweight glass bottle means a reduced carbon footprint when shipping, the cork is renewable, and the vineyard is less than 20 miles from the winery, so the truck trips between the two are relatively short.

The 2015 vintage of Sostener is medium-bodied, drinkable, and affordable, with a retail price under $20. It's being sold in California, of course, as well as New York, New Jersey and Texas. Look for it at the Cheese Shop in Carmel Plaza, Bruno's Market at Junipero and Sixth, the Big Sur Deli, Troia's Market in Monterey and Grove Market in Pacific Grove.

■ Ruccello Olive Oil now has vinegar

Monterey resident RoseAnne Ruccello-Fischer, who owns Ruccello Olive Oil and imports high-quality oils she selects for their flavor, consistency, aroma, color, piquancy and other traits, has added four vinegars to her shelves: Dark Chocolate Balsamic Reserve, Honey Balsamic Reserve, Cask 5 Organic Balsamic, and Cask 25 Balsamic. All were made in Modena, Italy — the home of balsamic vinegar — and are free of additives, artificial flavors, thickening agents and caramel coloring.

Ruccello-Fischer recommends using the first as a glaze for meat or drizzled on fruit or pastries, while the second, which contains Italian honey and was reduced over an open fire, is What better way to celebrate the end of the workday than by sipping more than a dozen sparkling wines? On Thursday, Aug. 16, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., Zeph's One Stop in Salinas will share 15 to 20 different bubbly from all parts of the globe, whether domestic wines made in the methode champenoise, cremant from the Loire Valley in France, traditional French Champagne, Cava from Spain or Prosecco from Italy.

The cost is $20 per person and includes light bites. Zeph's is located at 1366 South Main St.

BUDDHISM MEETS ART AT CHERRY, PHOTOGRAPHER EYES SEASIDE'S BOBCCATS

BRINGING TOGETHER contemporary art and ancient philosophy, an exhibit of paintings and photographs that illustrate Buddhist koans opens Friday, Aug. 10, at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts.

A koan is essentially a short statement that conveys an important lesson in Buddhism.

Art Roundup

By CHRIS COUNTS

"A koan is typically part of a poem or a verse," Cherry Center executive director Robert Reese told The Pine Cone. "They are essentially dialogues that came out of Seventh-century China — concise and sometimes funny statements that convey Buddhist texts."

Examples would be, "Out of nowhere the mind comes forth," and "Two hands clap and there is a sound. What is the sound of one hand?"

Titled "The Crow Flies Backwards," the show includes work by Deanna Forbes, Leonard Han, Judith Foosaner, Sam Tschakalain, Allison Atwill and others.

A reception will be held Aug. 10 from 5 to 7 p.m. The display continues through Sept. 15. The Cherry Center is located Guadalupe and Fourth. Call (831) 624-7491 or visit www.carlcherrycenter.org.

The mint, berries and madeines were the obviously comestible parts of Abbruzzese's 200-pound, 4-foot-square "Edible Strawberry Patch," but the soil and ladybugs were edible, too. The chef created the dessert's "dirt" from crumbled chocolate cake, Oreo cookies and graham crackers, and formed the bugs from fondant. The "bushel of berries" was strawberry shortcake. His creation served 125 people.

■ Heirloom tomatoes and Labor Day at Bernardus

Executive chef Cal Stamenov at Bernardus Lodge in Carmel Valley presents his annual Heirloom Tomato Lunch Saturday, Sept. 2, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., celebrating all forms of the late-summer fruit, from Bloody Marys to gazpacho. Dick and Bonnie Swank, owners of Swank Farms in Hollister, grow many of the area's organic heirloom tomatoes and will be at the lunch to talk about the crop's numerous varieties. In Lucia Restaurant, a "garden-inspired" lunch buffet will include tomato ratatouille, gazpacho, roasted free-range Sonoma chicken and natural prime beef, among other dishes. The cost is $115 per person, plus tax and tip, and reservations are required.

A few days later, guests won't need to work during the lodge's Labor Day celebration from noon to 2:30 p.m., also in Lucia Restaurant. Live music, fall cuisine and inspired cocktails will be available.

For more information and reservations, visit www.bernarduslodge.com. The hotel and restaurant are located at 415 W. Carmel Valley Road.

In her work, Lynn seeks to capture a contemplative mood and a sense of serenity.

"I find the challenge of conveying water — whether it be fog, mist, clouds, the stillness of a wetland, river, or the 'calm before the storm' on the ocean — to be a joyful and grounding experience," the artist explained.

A Pacific Grove resident, Lynn plans to donate 10 percent of her proceeds to the Monterey County Food Bank.

The gallery, which will be the site of a reception Aug. 11 from 4 to 6 p.m., is located at 260 Alvarado St. The show will be on display through Aug. 31. Call (831) 372-6279 or visit www.venturegallery.com.

Also in Monterey this weekend, the city's Alvarado Gallery welcomes a display of paintings by Julie Foudy Aug. 10. A Carmel resident and a member of the Central Coast Art Asso-

The gallery, which will host a reception from 5:30 to 7 p.m., is located in the Monterey Conference Center at 1 Portola Plaza.

Frandeen's photographs focus on one of the Monterey Peninsula's more elusive residents, the bobcat. The photographer frequently visits Fort Ord National Monument.

"They seem to mirror my own disposition," Frandeen said of her subjects. "They're relaxed, independent and inquisitive."

tery Baconfest a year later.

Besides live music, the festival features a classic car show and more ways to eat bacon than you ever dreamt were possible.

“We try to be more than just a food festival,” founder and Pacific Grove city councilman Dan Miller told The Pine Cone. “We try to strike a balance between bacon and music, and we try to improve upon each of them. Badfinger does just that — they had a lot of hits, they’re playing strong, and we thought it would be a wonderful thing to bring them to Monterey.”

Tickets are $15 for general admission, and $10 for seniors, active military and children 6 and over. Family passes are available for $40, and kids 5 and under get in free. www.montereybaconfestival.com

The last words written about you should be the best ones

OBITUARIES ARE high on my reading list — and not just because of that old joke, “To make sure I’m not listed there.” I read them, whether or not I knew the deceased, to learn about the accomplishments of lives well lived. More often than not, I am amazed at the extraordinary lives people had and left wondering where all my wasted years went.

The experience reminds me of the family Christmas letters I would receive at the holidays — you know, about everyone else’s children mastering exotic languages or discovering new worlds, while my kids were still struggling to find their mouths with their spoons.

I also begin to wonder why I didn’t end up being a titan of capitalism, ruling over the boardroom at General Motors or having power lunches in the executive dining room at CBS. We start out equal at birth. I mean, what happened? I worked at some pretty prestigious companies. I possessed the skills — had a good education, came up with innovative ideas at meetings, presented well in front of clients — why didn’t I make it to the top?

“Do people stop buying?”

Then it dawned on me how important timing is in life. Don’t get me wrong. I was often in the right place at the right time for things to go my way. The problem was that I would always say the right thing at the wrong time. Put in a more blue-collar way — I never knew when to keep my mouth shut.

Here’s a case in point. The winter of 1977-78 had been one the coldest and snowiest on record across the central and eastern United States, with arctic air masses periodically spilling southeastward out of Canada and meeting up with warm, moist air from the Deep South.

At the time, I was working a sales territory in Western Michigan and northern Indiana. In the dead of winter, my colleagues and I were summoned to Chicago to meet the new president of the company. At the evening cocktail hour, the guys from my region and I tried to outdo each other with stories about how hard our territories had been hit with snow, cold, ice, wind, and that ultimate deterrent to mobility, slush. We took turns arguing about which state had experienced the worst winter — whether it was Minnesota, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, or Illinois.

The new president was taking this all in, not realizing that most of the talk was sheer hyperbole. After listening for a ated more equal than others.” If only I hadn’t read “Animal Farm.”

Unexpected laughter

However, I did go out, if not in a blaze of glory, certainly by avoiding insignificance all together. At the end of my lengthy sales career I represented a consortium of small medical publishers, none of which was large enough to maintain an individual sales force. I was their rep in San Francisco. One day I received a notice of a sales meeting in Baltimore at the end of June. The last thing I wanted to do was travel 3,000 miles into the heat and humidity of Maryland. Then, two weeks before the meeting, the owner phoned me to tell me he was letting me go. I started laughing. He asked me why.

I said: “I’ve been trying to find a way to get out of this sales meeting and you solved the problem for me.” He said he never expected that kind of reaction.

I asked why he was letting me go. He said he didn’t think I was doing a good enough job. Which I agreed with. My heart was no longer in it. It was time to turn in my Willy Loman-like sample bag.

“Hey, by the way,” Dennis said. “There’s some pretty big medical meetings coming up in San Francisco this fall. Would you cover them for me?”

“Dennis, you SOB, you just told me I wasn’t doing a good job, and now you want to me cover for you.”

“Hmm,” he said quickly. “Maybe we should forget it.”

Anyway, I managed to survive all of my blunders. You won’t read about them in my obituary. No, there you’ll read about how I was short-listed for a Pulitzer in journalism, beat Elon Musk into space, and solved the Peninsula’s water problems. An exquisitely useful life.

while he asked: “When the weather conditions are so bad, do some people stop buying our product?”

“No,” I replied. “But some people stop selling it.” The look on his face must have matched Gen. Custer’s when he rode into his ambush at Little Big Horn. And like the general, my scalp was on the chief’s wickiup.

Fast-forward a couple of years. Another sales meeting, same company, different president, thankfully. Several salespersons were complaining about the imbalances in territories, trying to get management to consider realignment. Finally, the national sales manager got exasperated and said, “Nothing is going to change. We work hard to ensure that all territories are created equal.”

To which I blurted out: “Yes, but some territories are cre-
