

Woman, dogs treated after raccoon attack

By MARY SCHLEY

A CARMEL Valley resident needed emergency medical care early Monday morning after being attacked by a raccoon. Neighbors called 911 for the woman around 2:15 a.m. Sept. 24 after she showed up on their doorstep bleeding and terrified, clad only in a T-shirt and underwear.

Elizabeth Kirkpatrick had been chased and repeatedly clawed and bitten by a raccoon that forced open a screen door to her Carmel Valley Ranch home in pursuit of her dogs.

"Around 2, I woke up to an attack in my bedroom," she told The Pine Cone. The raccoon had gotten its paw through a narrow opening in a screen door and pushed it open to go after her little 3-pound "schnorkie" — a schnauzer-Yorkie mix. "I turned the light on, and the thing just launched itself at me."

Kirkpatrick said the animal was large, weighing 25 or 30 pounds, and that it charged her from about 5 feet away and then leaped up, biting her just under the ribcage and scratch-

Pt. Lobos: Reservations needed to control crowds?

By CHRIS COUNTS

WORRIED THAT crowds at Point Lobos State Reserve are not only causing dangerous traffic conditions but threatening the park's fragile environment, some are calling for shuttle and reservation systems to be established.

Created to find solutions to the challenges facing Point Lobos and other local parks, a group called "Park It!" has been meeting with local state park officials since January.

"Our goal is to balance public access with safety and resource protection, while allowing for growth," said one of the group's members, Ernest Chung of Pebble Beach.

The group is suggesting that the vacant property between the Crossroads shopping center and Highway 1 be used as a staging area for the shuttle.

Blocking the road

Just as it has in many local parks, visitation to Point Lobos has gone up considerably in recent years. Vehicles routinely block the bicycle lanes on along both sides of Highway 1 near the entrance to the park, where visitors frequently cross in front of oncoming motorists.

City won't appeal records decision

By MARY SCHLEY

AT A meeting that had people yelling from the gallery and audience members providing sections of the Brown Act to council members, assistant city attorney Jon Giffen announced Tuesday that the city council decided not to appeal a judge's recent order to make documents related to city attorney Glen Mozingo's resume public.

The council was scheduled to discuss the case at closed sessions Oct. 1 and 2, and several members of the public spoke Monday regarding how they thought the council should respond to its Sept. 14 loss in Monterey County Superior Court to former Monterey Herald editor Royal Calkins, who sued the city for refusing to turn over letters, commendations and other documents council members used to validate Mozingo's resume.

The city's lawyers had argued the documents are protected under the Brown Act because they were presented in a closed session and contain personal information, among other reasons, but Judge Robert O'Farrell disagreed and ordered the city to make them public.

After the ruling, Mozingo said the council might vote to appeal it — a prospect that rankled many.

Resident Hugo Ferlito said the council "received erroneous legal advice" that "resulted in a lawsuit that the city promptly lost," and that it should focus on correcting the mistake instead of fighting it and spending even more taxpayer dollars.

Cal Am spends 850K to defeat Measure J

Agha, Burnett helping bankroll takeover initiative

By KELLY NIX

CALIFORNIA AMERICAN Water spent nearly $850,000 in the last several months on its campaign to defeat Measure J — the ballot measure asking voters to OK a government takeover of the Cal Am's water system - while Yes on Measure J's biggest backers include a developer who's long tried to build his own desal project and a founder of the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

From July 1 to Sept. 22, Cal Am spent $841,192.31 on its effort to defeat Public Water Now's Measure J. The private utility's expenditures included more than $400,000 on TV and cable airtime and production costs, $202,005 on campaign consultants and $55,250 for polling and research, campaign disclosure statements filed last week with Monterey County Elections revealed.

Cal Am made three $250,000 donations to its No on Measure J campaign from July 3 to Sept. 11, and a $100,000 donation on Sept. 19. On Sept. 25, Cal Am reported it set aside an additional $1 million to continue its opposition to the measure — but the private utility says it is not using revenue from Monterey Peninsula ratepayers to oppose Measure J.

Former mayor's mom

During the same period, Public Water Now reported raising a much more modest $74,761 in contributions, with $20,000 of it from Nancy Burnett, a founder of the Monterey Bay Aquarium, vice chair of the David & Lucile Packard Foundation and mother to former Carmel Mayor Jason Burnett. She's given a total of $21,000 to the Yes on J campaign.

Recycling: It's good for the bottle and the can — the coffee cup, not so much

By ELAINE HESSER

T'S 6:30 in the morning and you've drained your first paper cup of coffee from Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Co. Taking a few extra steps to find the nearest recycling bin, you toss in the empty container, enjoy a millisecond's worth of virtuous feeling, and go on with your day.

But what happens to the cup? Surprisingly, nothing different than if you had thrown it in the trash. It'll end up in the landfill on the north side of Marina, except now it has to go through some additional steps to get there.

It wasn't long ago that we were all being reminded to carefully prepare our milk cartons, empty tin cans and cardboard boxes for recycling. We had to sort them into different receptacles, too. But in the late 1990s, most local areas started picking up mixed recycleables — and since then, what happens to them has become something of a mystery.

According to Jeff Lindenthal, spokesman for the Monterey Regional Waste Management District, the contents of residential and business recycling bins are trucked to the district's "material recovery facility," just next door to the Last Chance Mercantile and the entrance to the landfill. The building, affectionately known as MRF (pronounced "merf") 2.0, opened in February this year at a cost of $24 million, replacing a 20-year-old facility that, after processing more than 1.6 million tons of materials, was no longer up to the task.

An endless line

The trucks full of plastic, glass, paper, cardboard and whoknows-what take their places in a seemingly endless queue of vehicles trundling down the road from the end of Del Monte Boulevard and then turning off into a noisy, cavernous building several stories tall - the recovery facility. Once inside, the load of cans, boxes, plastics and other items are placed onto a conveyor belt where their 400-foot-long journey begins. There are two processing lines, which can handle 30 and

At the processing facility, tons of recycled items fly by on 400 feet of conveyors as usable materials are separated from trash.

Pampered poodle

WANDERING THE streets of Carmel with her people is a slow parade for Ruby. Her coloring, the fluff of her hair, and her regal presence stop almost everyone, and very few think to ask before they reach out to touch her.

But all that admiration doesn't come without effort on her part. Thankfully, Ruby responds well to her daily pre-parade grooming. In fact, her person, a former dog groomer, needs only say, "Uppie," and Ruby jumps onto the table to await her pampering. The process can take much of the morning.

Ruby's person searched the entire country, she said, to find a show-quality apricot standard poodle. She located her at a breeder in Las Vegas and drove there on a Tuesday to collect the 12-week-old puppy that also had been born on a Tuesday. Hence, her full name is Ruby Tuesday.

Her show name is Lido's Ruff-n-Red-d Ruby Tuesday. Behind the name reside BN, RN, CGC, CD – her titles from years of competition in obedience and citizenship, also recognized by quite an array of ribbons. Now 9 and retired from the show ring, she's just Ruby around town.

"Ruby is a person in a poodle costume, an integral part of our family, the love of our lives," her person said.

Ruby lives on an acre lot in Carmel Valley where, in her retirement, she loves to look for ground squirrels and bunnies. She also loves to promenade down Ocean Avenue, making the rounds of the dog-friendly shops and cafés, to collect cookies. She knows exactly which storefronts will cater to her.

"We take Ruby to the beach, but we only let her on the sand when she already needs grooming," her person said. "From beach to bath to scissoring, it can take four hours. I spend more time on her grooming than on mine."

Major storm-drain project about halfway done

By MARY SCHLEY

A $1.4 million project to install new drains and gutters in the northeast part of town to stop rainwater from running onto adjacent properties is more than halfway completed, according to public works director Bob Harary. Anderson Pacific Engineering received the contract in May to lay the new storm-drain system down Fifth Avenue from Torres to Carpenter and then east on Fourth, with spurs on Guadalupe and Fourth.

While the project was originally proposed for construction in phases, the council decided it should all be done at once and hired Anderson Pacific to do the whole job.

Construction began in mid-July, and on Friday, crews were finishing up their work near the intersection of Fifth and Guadalupe before preparing to install the new pipe and equipment along the block of Fifth below Carpenter Street this week, digging trenches up to 20 feet deep, according to Harary.

"They will be paving Fifth Avenue next week," he said, after which they'll begin construction on Carpenter between Fourth and Fifth, with one-lane traffic control in effect.

Resident Jaynie Moore, who lives in the area and has urged the city to fix the flooding problem for years, told Harary and public works superintendent Rob Culver how thrilled she is that the work is finally getting done. "I so appreciate the speech that you gave at the city council meeting several months ago. Encouraging the council members and the mayor to approve all three parts of the project certainly helped to get the necessary approval," she said in the email, speaking to Harary.

Addressing Culver, she said, "I am highly appreciative of all the conversations that we have had over the past sixplus years, and also the times that we've met in person on my street."

And to both, she wrote, "Your hard work and dedication have helped me, along with many other residents of Carmel, and we all owe you a debt of gratitude."

Few seem to understand

Moore said she is looking forward to seeing the positive effects on her property once the whole project is finished and the winter rains come but said she thinks her neighbors might not be as aware of its importance.

"In conversations with people in this neighborhood, I have been amazed by how few understand how helpful this new storm runoff system will be for several blocks around here," she wrote.

Harary said that so far, the job is about a month ahead of schedule. Anderson Pacific has until the end of the year to finish the work, "but the contractor estimates completion by the end of November, weather permitting."

When this extensive storm-drain project is finished, it should bring an end to a years-long problem of stormwater flooding properties in the area.

The gavel falls

Verdicts, pleas and sentencings announced by Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo

Aug. 21 — De Jesus Sanchez, 23, of Greenfield, was sentenced by Judge Julie R. Culver to 12 years and 8 months to the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation for gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated and driving under the influence of alcohol causing great bodily injury.

On February 11, 2017, the defendant, while driving with a blood alcohol content of .23, crashed his car through a road closure gate located at the Elm Avenue bridge east of the City of Greenfield. The defendant's Honda Accord spun out of control striking three pedestrians who were on the bridge. The pedestrians were crushed between the defendant's car and a steel guard rail and violently thrown into the Salinas River.

Due to an abnormally wet winter, the Salinas River was flowing very rapidly and had breached its banks, flooding farmlands and demanded money from the cash register. Another female employee approached the cash register, at which point Morgan pointed the weapon at the second employee and threatened to "blast all of them" if they did not open the drawer. Both victims were extremely fearful and shaken from this encounter, to the point where they had trouble accessing the cash in the register. After one of the victims was able to open the register, Morgan retrieved approximately $300 and fled from the business.

The next day - March 5, 2017 - Morgan robbed the Walgreens store located at 1055 Fremont Blvd. in the City of Seaside. He walked into the store at approximately 1:30 p.m. wearing a bright blue beanie and dark sunglasses and approached the female employee at the cash register. He then pulled out a semi-automatic handgun and demanded the cash in the register, telling the employee, "Hurry up, I don't want to shoot you." Fearing for her life, the victim removed $1,100 from the cash register, which were mostly in $20 denominations. Morgan stuffed the money in his jacket pocket and left the store. Later that day, Morgan visited the Marina Club Casino and was seen on video exchanging a stack of $20 bills for $100 denominations. None of the victims were able to identify him as the suspect due to the fact that Morgan had concealed his face during the commission of the robberies. However, a commander from Seaside Police Department recognized Morgan from video still-shots taken from the surveillance system in Walgreens. The commander's identification was based on the commander's previous extensive dealings with Morgan and his family. Sentencing is scheduled before Judge Carrie M. Panetta. Morgan is facing 20 years in state prison and stands convicted of two violent strike offenses.

roadways throughout the county.

Despite extensive wounds, two of the victims were able to make their way to the riverbank. The third victim, Julian Lopez, was carried downstream and his body has never been recovered despite multiple attempts by search and rescue teams as well as friends and family.

The defendant entered a plea to all of the charges during the third day of jury trial.

Aug. 22 — James William Morgan, 63, a resident of Seaside, pled no contest to two counts of robbery using a semi-automatic handgun. Morgan also admitted a prior "strike" conviction for robbery committed in April 1990.

On March 4, 2017, at approximately 6 p.m., Morgan, wearing dark sunglasses and a hoodie, visited the Dollar Store located at 1816 Fremont Blvd. in the City of Seaside. He approached the female store employee and exposed a semi-automatic firearm. He then "racked" the slide on the firearm and October 5, 2018

Transient convicted of murdering woman, burying her at Rio Road lot

By MARY SCHLEY

THE HOMELESS man Monterey County Sheriff's deputies tracked to New Mexico and had arrested for murder last December was sentenced last week to 15 years to life for killing Remie Nadeau Casillas and burying her body on a vacant lot on Rio Road, according to prosecutor Stefanie Zamora.

Casillas, a former Santa Cruz resident whose family had reported her missing in February 2015, had last been seen with her killer, Dale Dean Pierce, in Sand City around that time, according to Zamora.

On the morning of Aug. 26, 2016, a worker using an excavator on a vacant piece of property located between the Cal Fire station and the Carmel Mission Inn uncovered human remains, which were badly decomposed. While coroner's investigators revealed fairly soon after that the body had been that of a female, it took months for them to determine it was Casillas.

Further investigation revealed that she had been murdered, and late last year, sheriff's investigators publicly identified Pierce, a transient from Texas "as one of several persons of interest." Zamora said this week that deputies had found a wallet containing Pierce's ID near Casillas' body.

Deputies had a difficult time tracking him down, because he had contacts in several states and was constantly on the move. But in late November 2017, authorities learned he was in Taos, N.M., and flew there a few days later to interview him.

Prompt confession

Monterey County Sheriff's homicide investigators and officers from the Taos Police Department found Pierce in the parking lot of a grocery store, and at the conclusion of an interview that "lasted for a couple of hours," he confessed to killing her, the sheriff's office reported at the time. He also turned over "at least one of the weapons used to commit the murder," and was jailed in Taos on the charge. Investigators wouldn't say at the time how she died.

Pierce, 43, was extradited to Monterey County and jailed Dec. 31, 2017, and on Aug. 7, he pleaded guilty to felony second-degree murder for killing Casillas.

Superior Court Judge Julie Culver sentenced him in her Salinas courtroom last week.

Seaside Fire open house Saturday

IN HONOR of Fire Prevention Week, Seaside Fire Department will hold an open house at its station Oct. 6 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., with "exciting live demonstrations," flu shots from Walgreen's, free hot dogs and burgers prepared by the Seaside Police Officers Association, bounce houses, free popcorn, a Red Cross blood drive, and loads of information about firefighting and fire safety.

The firehouse is located at 1635 Broadway.

AFTER MORE than 14 years, Harrison Memorial Library will be open on Sundays, starting Nov. 12. Last week, the library's board of trustees approved more hours at the main library and the Park Branch, both of which experienced cuts during the economic downturn resulting from the burst of the dotcom bubble.

The board also approved a new policy on service animals — including miniature horses — and updated the rules for eating and drinking in the library, activities that were once considered way out of line.

Opening on Sundays

The change in hours has been more than two years in the making, according to library director Ashlee Wright. In February 2016, the library board asked the city administration to hire additional staff so the libraries could be open longer, and while the council agreed, turnover and slow hiring thwarted those efforts.

But now, with all the part-time reference and circulation jobs filled, she said, the final

Starting in mid-November, patrons will be able to walk through the front door at Harrison Memorial Library seven days a week for the first time in more than 14 years. Last week, the board of trustees voted to extend the hours at both branches.

Potter tops all candidates in campaign fundraising, spending

By MARY SCHLEY

MAYORAL CANDIDATE Dave Potter raised more money during the last three months than any of the five other people running for election in Carmel Nov. 6 — and spent more — according to campaign finance forms filed at city hall last Thursday. Council incumbent Carrie Theis came in second in total contributions, mayoral incumbent Steve Dallas followed in third, with challenger Jeff Baron fourth, council incumbent Carolyn Hardy fifth, and mayoral challenger Gene Hughes sixth.

Dave Potter

Potter collected $13,035 in cash and $2,028 in non-monetary donations between July 1 and Sept. 22, and spent $13,392.

Significant donors included produce company executive officer Tonya Antle, who donated $1,000, and Aptos resident Carol Saveria and former Carmel Foundation CEO Jill Sheffield, each of whom also gave $1,000.

Among the donors who contributed $500 were the Coniglio Family Trust, Carmel Belle owner Jay Dolata, Texas resident Bob Harrell, San Francisco attorney and San Antonio Avenue homeowner Bruce Hyman, contractor David Stocker, and Robert Kahn of the Alpha Analytics Investment Group in Los Angeles.

Other notable supporters were retired attorney Chris Campbell ($250), George Couch of Pebble Beach ($300), Boys & Girls Clubs development director Miranda Jackson ($250), Old Monterey Business Association executive director Rick Johnson ($150), Monterey City Councilman Ed Smith ($200), former Carmel City Councilman Ken Talmage - who lost the race for mayor to Dallas two years ago - ($250) and Carmel City Councilman Bobby Richards, who donated $101.

Former Mayor Sue McCloud, who joined former Mayors Charlotte Townsend and Ken White in campaigning for Potter by signing a letter entitled, "Vote for Change and Experienced Leadership!" received by voters this week, donated $250.

Contributions of $99 or less don't require identification of the individual donors. Potter received $2,334 in "unitemized" donations.

Nonmonetary donations of food and wine for his campaign kickoff came from Cantinetta Luca owner David Fink, Dawn and Jack Galante's two wineries, and Rich Pepe.

Expenses included $800 to the Carmel Woman's Club for an event, $1,071 to MP Express in Salinas for campaign literature, and numerous payments totaling $8,873 to Political FrameWorks, the Carmel Valley consulting firm founded and run by Potter's business partner, Plasha Will.

Carrie Theis

Theis raised $11,735 during the same period, collecting $5,786 in cash and a substantial $5,949 in nonmonetary contributions, while her campaign expenses totaled $7,543, leaving a cash balance of $6,185.

Theis and her family own and run the Hofsas House hotel on San Carlos Street, and two other hotel operators were her biggest donors: Horizon Inn ($500), and Inns by the Sea ($900). Cheryl Assemi, who owns the Carmel Cottage Inn, gave $250, and Theis' mother, Doris, donated $200.

Former Mayor Sue McCloud wrote a check for $250, while former councilman Mike Brown gave $125 and former councilwoman Paula Hazdovac donated $100. Former council-

PG&E pipeline work to begin Monday

By MARY SCHLEY

WITH THE city council's 2-1 approval last month of PG&E's plans to install almost a mile of 6-inch gas main through the northwest end of town, work is set to begin Monday, according to the public works department.

Construction workers will start tunneling and trenching near the intersection of Junipero and Camino del Monte, and will work a block at a time south on San Carlos, west on Fourth Avenue, and then north on San Antonio Avenue, ending at the gate to Del Monte Forest. PG&E officials have said they will bore holes and then feed the flexible line through tunnels underneath the roadway surface as much as possible in order to keep trenching to a minimum.

In an effort to minimize construction impacts on the community, the city council imposed 54 special conditions of approval on PG&E's project, including keeping lane closures to a minimum, coordinating as much as possible with nearby businesses and residents, and protecting trees along the route.

Nothing you can see

The project will not result in any new facilities above ground, and the company doesn't need any easements for the work. Also, PG&E will have to reimburse taxpayers for the hours city employees spend on the project, post a bond to replace any trees that are damaged or die in the next five years because of the work, ensure all other underground utilities are not impacted, be available 24/7, step up its insurance coverage, coordinate with other agencies, stop work during major events, and resurface and repaint the streets where the work was done. The company prepared detailed traffic and detour plans that also accommodate pedestrians.

Groundbreaking is seven months in coming. PG&E first came to the council in March with a proposal to install 4,900 feet of pipeline that would simply carry gas from one side of the city to the other, without delivering any of it here. After council members objected, PG&E officials said the new line would also provide service (and new safety shutoff valves) to 44 homes and connect with several lesser gas mains in town.

$11K purse stolen

A PAIR of women teamed up to steal a very expensive purse from Foxy Couture Saturday afternoon, according to Carmel Police Cmdr. Luke Powell. Surveillance video showed the two women — who appeared to be French and had French accents, shop employees told police — browsing in the store before one distracted the clerk while the other opened an unlocked glass display case, removed the purse and replaced it with a similar but different handbag. She hid the purse in her jacket and the two walked out together as two other customers entered.

Photos of the women and the surveillance video were posted on various social media sites in hopes that someone will recognize the thieves and turn them in, according to Powell.

Mayor Carbone goes to Washington

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE THE loud opposition by some to Donald Trump's presidency has made many wary of accepting an invitation to the White House, Sand City Mayor Mary Ann Carbone attended a conference there last month for women who serve as mayors.

Carbone, who is running unopposed for reelection this year, said she was "humbled" to attend the conference in Washington D.C., where she discovered common ground between her city and many others.

"My city and my husband thought it was an honor to be invited," Carbone told The Pine Cone. "It was rewarding to me to feel the camaraderie between everybody — we all share the same issues and same goals."

Organized by the White House Office of Intergovernmental Affairs, the conference was attended by about 90 women, who were welcomed by Vice President Mike Pence, and listened to presentations by Second Lady Karen Pence, Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos, White House counselor Kellyanne Conway and many others. The conference covered many topics, including preparing young people for tomorrow's job market, and combatting the growing opioid crisis.

Carbone said she was surprised to hear Devos' forecast of the job market a dozen years into the future. "She said 85 percent of jobs in 2030 haven't even been invented yet," the mayor reported.

With fewer than 400 residents and thriving business district, Sand City seems like a quite

Joy B. Osborne: Conservationist and Volunteer November 3, 1928 • September 29, 2018

Joy Louise Bailey Osborne, 89, passed away peacefully on Sept. 29 in her Monterey apartment. She was surrounded in her last days by a niece, and a team of loving caregivers who took her for outings along the coastline and who filled her home with the music she loved from her large classical collection.

Joy Louise Bailey was born on November 3, 1928, the youngest of three daughters of Herbert and Alice Bailey. She graduated from Shaker Heights High School in 1945 and went on to Wellesley College, where her 1949 B.A. in Chemistry reinforced a long interest in science. Her continued support of her alma mater in later years included the Wellesley Annual Book Sale in Carmel, which she organized.

After graduation, Joy worked in Cleveland for several years, but felt the urge to explore other places. She read a book about the ten best cities in the United States and, after trying Denver and not liking it, moved to California and settled in the Bay Area. She earned a Master's Degree at UC Berkeley and became a researcher at the California Academy of Sciences.

Around 1970, Joy moved to the fair climes of the Monterey area, where she became a volunteer and supporter of numerous environmental, aesthetic, civic, and spiritual organizations. Above all, she was an enthusiastic and dedicated conservationist. She was among the first class of docents at Pt. Lobos, and continued to serve for three decades. She was famous for her tidepool walks, and assembled the first Pt. Lobos Visitors' Guide. The conservation organizations she supported included the Nature Conservancy, the Audubon Society, and the Cetacean Society.

Everyone who knew Joy was aware of her passion for music and dance. She took ballet lessons through her high school years, practiced many types of folk dance, took up belly dancing on Cannery Row, and never ceased to enjoy dance performances on stage and TV. She sang with the Cleveland Orchestra Choir, and later a Monterey Peninsula choir. Her family recalls how she lit up holiday gatherings with her dramatic songs and stories. She was known to all for the extra measure of energy she brought to every gathering with her creativity and enthusiasm. Even in her 80s she was lithe and spry, refusing to let age slow her down.

According to her friends, Joy had the uncanny gift of knowing just the right time to show up with a gift or offer of support. She never drew attention to her generosity, and few knew of her charitable and compassionate deeds. At one time she met a quadriplegic nursing home resident during a Christmas gift program, and became a regular visitor.

The United States and our Allies fought German National Socialism and Italian Fascism during World War II to defend liberal capitalism. That point was made crystal clear by Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's Propaganda Minister, who defined World War II in stark economic terms, declaring that "England is a capitalist democracy. Germany is a socialist people's state."

To seize (steal) private property and companies was the essence of Marxist-inspired Fascists and their efforts to plunder other nations, races, private property, and private businesses. The National Socialists were serial kleptomaniacs who believed they could take whatever they wanted for what they deemed was the public good. Their motto, "the common good before the individual good", allowed the National Socialists to engage in what Hitler called "social justice," social engineering, and nationalistic policies. Under the yoke of authoritarian socialism, they established a centralized welfare-warfare state determined to militarily conquer the world. After all, the origins of "fascist ideology" was "Marxism."

The United States was able to stop Germany's and Italy's socialization and fascistization of Europe. It is time to do the same here and stop this social-fascistization of the economy from plaguing America.

Ever spiritually adventurous, Joy practiced the Science of Mind teachings at the Center for Spiritual Awakening in Pacific Grove. In a note to be read after her passing, she wrote, "I am not my body. My soul has fled. Return me to the earth."

Joy will be missed by her sisters Marjorie Bailey Rachlin of Washington, D.C., and Nancy Bailey Allchin of Baltimore, MD; nieces Carol Allchin and Nancy Joy Allchin (and her children), and nephew Douglas Allchin (and Libbie Henderson); and by her lifelong friend Patricia Qualls.

Public Water Now breaking campaign laws, lawsuit says

By KELLY NIX

A MONTEREY man has filed a lawsuit against the activist group behind the Cal Am takeover measure on the November ballot, contending the organization is violating state law in its campaign efforts.

Former Monterey Peninsula Water Management District director candidate Jeffrey W. Gorman contends in a complaint filed in Monterey County Superior Court Oct. 2 that Public Water Now, among other things, is violating California law by not telling voters that it is behind the Yes on Measure J campaign.

Public Water Now "has engaged in significant advertising activity without properly disclosing to the voting public who has paid for the advertising" in violation of the law, the Cal Am-funded lawsuit alleges.

"Any advertisement paid for by a committee ... shall include the words 'paid for by' following the name of the committee as it appears on the most recent statement of organization," the lawsuit, citing California Govt. Code section 84502, says.

Similarly, Gorman also argues that Public Water Now's political yard signs, Facebook page, campaign literature and website all violate the 1974 Political Reform Act because they fail to include disclaimers — which are often included in smaller print at the bottom of ads and campaign signs — revealing that the group is sponsoring the Yes on J effort.

Gorman — who lost a 2015 election to Molly Evans for the Division 3 water board - also alleges that Public Water Now is seat violating the law for "using an illegal name," since Govt. Code section 84107 requires that

"any committee which is primarily formed to support" a ballot measure, "shall, if supporting the measure, include the statement, "a committee for Proposition in any reference to the committee required by

Brower to leave water district board

By KELLY NIX

LONGTIME MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District director Bob Brower announced this week that he's retiring from the board to focus on his health.

Brower, 69, who represents Division 5, which includes Carmel-by-the-Sea, Carmel Valley, Carmel Highlands and the Carmel River watershed, told The Pine Cone Thursday that he has pancreatic cancer. He's had chemotherapy to prevent the cancer from spreading and will undergo surgery next month.

"As such, my health issues seem to rule the day, and I would be doing the community a disservice by continuing on the board," he said. "Most of the heavy lifting of the board has already occurred, and I am proud to say it occurred during my watch."

Brower said that in early November, he's scheduled to undergo a Whipple procedure, which involves, in part, removing a portion of the pancreas next to the first part of the small intestine.

"Essentially, the goal is to remove the cancer and remove other organs not necessarily needed to survive," he said.

Doctors attempted the surgical procedure early this year, however, Brower said his "insides were too inflamed from a gangrenous gall bladder."

Brower, who was first elected to the board in 2007 and has served as board chair three times, was serving a term that was set to expire in November 2020. His accomplishments

Council authorizes tiny new tax on food and drink to help sell restaurants

By MARY SCHLEY

COME JAN. 1, restaurant patrons will start seeing a little bit more money leaving their pockets. On Tuesday, with the support of nearly 80 percent of the restaurants in town, the city council approved the Carmel Restaurant Improvement District, which will collect 25 cents for every $100 of gross food and drink sales at the 51 full-service dining establishments here.

The new "assessment," expected to generate $200,000 annually, will be used for marketing and other efforts designed to draw more tourists to town. The nonprofit called Visit Carmel, which already handles similar campaigns for the hospitality improvement district, will represent the restaurants, too. The city will collect the money quarterly and deliver it to Visit Carmel, keeping 2 percent of the total for its troubles.

Although some restaurant owners objected to the new fee in person and in writing at last month's council meeting, no one commented on the proposal Oct. 2.

"I think it's really great to see the restaurants coming together, and I'm sorry there are a few restaurants that don't seem to be on board," councilwoman Carrie Theis said. "I think the Carmel inns have proved that this

PRISON WORKER'S SEX VIDEO PROMPTS LAWSUIT

By KELLY NIX

A FEMALE Soledad prison employee has filed a lawsuit against the state Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation and several male guards alleging the men showed co-workers a video of her engaged in a sex act.

In a lawsuit filed Sept. 26 in Monterey County Superior Court, Correctional Training Facility Soledad secretary Anahi Ramirez claims that in January 2017, correctional officer Tony Serna recorded a video of Ramirez "during a private sexual encounter" without her consent and while she was intoxicated.

Serna — Ramirez contends in her lawsuit — then sent the video to officer Roy Munoz and supervisor Che White, a lieutenant at the prison.

After "Munoz and White received copies of the video, they distributed the video to other department of corrections employees, including supervisors, and failed to report the video or take action to halt the distribution of the video," Ramirez's lawsuit alleges.

In March, a union rep informed Ramirez that another prison employee reported the existence of the video, and that it depicted Ramirez engaged in a sexual act, "apparently unaware that she was being recorded." The suit doesn't say whether Serna was involved in the act or recorded Ramirez by herself or with someone else. It also doesn't say where the act occurred.

After learning that the video had been shared with coworkers, Ramirez said she's suffered "severe humiliation, emotional distress, anxiety, sleeplessness, and general mental and physical anguish."

"Ms. Ramirez keeps to herself at work. When forced to

Completion of pipeline celebrated

By KELLY NIX

WITH PUBLIC officials and community leaders on hand, California American Water this week celebrated the completion of a $50 million pipeline that will deliver recycled water to the Monterey Peninsula next year and water from Cal Am's Marina desal plant in about three years.

At an old pump house in the center of the Eardley Avenue roundabout in Pacific Grove, Cal Am executives and others convened Monday morning to mark the completion of the 7-mile pipeline, which will first convey water to Monterey Peninsula customers from the Pure Water Monterey project.

Jade festival is back in business

By CHRIS COUNTS

FOR THE first time since 2015, there will be a Big Sur Jade Festival. Pacific Valley School will be the site of the gathering Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 5-7.

"This one is special because it's our 25th," organizer Kirk Brock told The Cone. "We've been trying to have it for three years - we had to cancel one because of a fire, and the other because the road was out."

The Soberanes Fire put the kibosh on the 2016 festival, while road trouble resulting from the previous winter's storm damage cancelled the 2017 event. But with no natural or manmade disasters to deal with, this year's celebration of all things jade-related is expected to go off without a hitch.

Billed as one of the largest jade festivals in the world, the event features a marketplace of vendors selling jade specimens and jewelry, and offering an eclectic assortment of stones, gems, art, clothing and apparel.

The first Big Sur Jade Festival was staged in 1990 at Gorda, and later moved to Pacific Valley School, which appropriately is located just steps away from Jade Cove, where specimens of the dazzling blue-green gemstone can be found along the rocky shoreline.

Brock reminded those attending the festival that services in the area are limited and cell service is spotty, so bring cash. "There's no ATM, and people are going to have a hard time taking a credit card," he added.

Proceeds from the event benefit the nonprofit South Coast Community Land Trust.

called it an "important step." Pure Water will supply 3,500 acre-feet of treated wastewater to Monterey Peninsula users as a supplement to the water provided by the new desal plant.

"I think Cal Am should be commended for this pipeline," Stoldt said. "For the first time, we will be able to move water from the north and into Carmel Valley."

The 36-inch pipeline runs from Gen. Jim Moore Boulevard in Seaside to the Pacific Grove boundary at Eardley Avenue, where an old pump house was located.

"Hopefully the desal plant will be online in 2021, and all our problems will be solved," Stoldt said to a few chuckles. "We appreciate Cal Am's diligence in putting this together. The roads are pretty much back to normal, the pipeline is in place, and we can't wait to fill it."

Depending on the weather, the pipeline could transport water from the aquifer storage and recovery project — which captures excess Carmel River water in the winter and stores it in the Seaside Groundwater Basin for use in dry months — as early as this year, Cal Am said.

Pacific Grove Mayor Bill Kampe called the completion of the system an "incredible accomplishment," especially considering the many "obstacles" along the way.

Rudy Fischer, Pacific Grove city councilman and candidate for mayor, congratulated Cal Am on what he said was a "milestone in bringing water to the Monterey Peninsula."

Holding up a copy of "River in Ruin," a book by Ray A. March that chronicles the river's history, Cal Am President Rich Svindland briefly outlined that history and said the $50.3 million pipeline was completed on budget.

Poll workers needed

WITH LOCAL elections set for Nov. 6, Monterey County Elections is seeking people who are willing to help voters submit their ballots.

"This is a call for the new generation to step up and do their civic duty," Greta Arevalo of Monterey County Elections told The Pine Cone. "Monterey County Elections is in need of over 300 poll workers across the entire county.'

Poll workers must be 18 years old and registered voters or lawful permanent residents. They are also required to speak and write English, and bilingual workers are in high demand. Volunteers must attend a 2 1/2 hour training session, and work from 6 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Nov. 6.

Workers receive a stipend of $135. While a vehicle is not needed, they will need to find transportation to the polling station. To learn more about becoming a volunteer poll worker, call (831) 796-1485.

suit contends.

Gorman is asking a judge to order Public Water Now to stop using the "illegal name" and failing to include disclaimers on campaign materials and yard signs

The complaint was filed for Gorman by Salinas attorneys Tony Lombardo and Jennifer Pavlet and Los Angeles attorney Stuart L. Leviton. Lombardo directed questions from The Pine Cone to Cal Am Vice President Kevin Tilden.

"Right now, laws are not being obeyed and it's not a level playing field," Tilden told The Pine Cone, adding that some Public Water Now fliers are compliant with the law, while others are not.

Public Water Now managing director George Riley declined to comment on the lawsuit.

In August, Rick Heuer filed suit against Public Water Now over Measure J's title, contending it was argumentative and prejudicial. The group agreed to omit some of the disputed words. The election is Nov. 6.

model is beneficial, and I hope the restaurants will understand that when you're working together, it's better."

Mayor Steve Dallas thanked the people who worked hard to get to that point by talking to business owners, getting petitions signed — and being willing to temporarily help fund the $40,000 cost of establishing the district.

"It was a grassroots effort by a few restaurateurs to make this happen," he said. "This will give great marketing dollars to put the city on another level compared to other cities on the Peninsula and throughout our community."

Marketing efforts will bring more of "the right people" to town, he said, to eat and drink — which will, in turn, generate more revenues overall for the city.

The council unanimously approved the program, which will start on New Year's Day and continue for five years.

At the meeting, city administrator Chip Rerig said he would also be happy to talk to any retailers interested in establishing a similar district to benefit their businesses.

include the formation of the Water Supply Planning committee as a means of developing new water supply projects.

In terms of the district's mission of providing a long-term water supply for the Peninsula, Brower's stint on the board was during its most successful years.

"My commitment to the community was to help produce a sustainable water supply, and we have achieved that goal with the district's aquifer storage and recovery project and the Pure Water Monterey project," he said. "It's a testament to my fellow board members and the district's fantastic staff that we are producing such a significant amount of new water with unanimous consensus from everyone involved."

Bob Brower

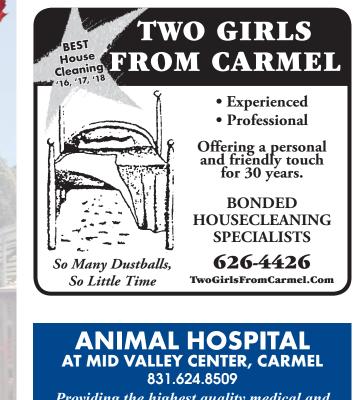

In a water district press release, Division 2 director Andy Clarke said Brower has been a "true asset to his constituents and a wonderful mentor to me."

"His knowledge of water and his wisdom regarding working toward collective goals will surely be missed," Clarke said.

Brower will leave the post Oct. 16. To fill his seat, the water district is accepting statements of interest and qualifications until Oct. 31 at 5 p.m. Candidates must live within the Division 5 boundaries.

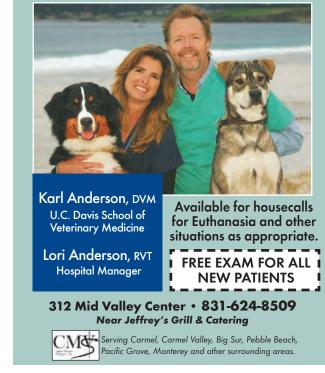

If there is agreement on a qualified candidate, the board will deliberate on the selection of an appointee at the Nov. 19 board meeting, the district said.

who can access the park, though, is not an option.

"We need to be practical," explained Chung, a board member of the Big Sur Land Trust and the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. "If we don't provide alternatives, we would be restricting coastal access, and we can't do that."

Besides its ongoing dialogue with state park officials, Park It! has sought support for the shuttle and reservation systems from elected officials and local homeowners groups. Chung said the results so far are encouraging. "We'll never get 100 percent support, but we want to hear from as many people as we can," he suggested.

Fifth District Supervisor Mary Adams said the ideas have merit.

prosperous place.

But Carbone said it shares many of the same problems and challenges faced by other cities, including shortages of water and housing, and rising homelessness.

The cost of her trip to Washington D.C. and the White House was shared by Carbone and the city she works for.

She called the conference "very powerful," and she looks forward to sharing what she learned with other mayors in Monterey County.

"Everybody I have spoken with is supportive," Adams said. "It's important to make the area safe for visitors and residents alike.'

Independent of the efforts of Park It!, residents Meredith Stricker, Thom Cowen and Gina Weston recently sent a letter to state park officials urging them to consider establishing shuttle and reservation systems. They also support creating a parking lot at the future Point Lobos Ranch, which California State Parks bought 15 years ago but has never opened to the public.

Locals miss 'No Parking' signs

"We support and commend the efforts of the state parks to restore and preserve Point Lobos and solve the haphazard parking on Highway 1 with a reservation system and nearby parking at Point Lobos Ranch augmented by shuttle service from Marathon Flats near the Crossroads," the trio suggested.

Besides offering possible solutions to thorny problems at Point Lobos, the three suggested that any park, however popular, can only accommodate a finite number of visitors.

"We strongly support continuing to include 'carrying capacity' as the guiding principle for Point Lobos and other local state park planning," the letter continues. "No matter how much social media or visitor demand increases, there are still limits to how much the land itself can absorb and how much traffic can flow."

During the recent construction for the Highway 1 climbing lane project at Rio Road, state officials allowed "No Parking" signs to be temporarily placed along the east side of Highway 1 near the entrance to Point Lobos. The move was made so ambulances and fire trucks would have a way to get around gridlocked traffic, which increased during the project. But the signs were removed shortly after the work was done - in accordance with a prior agreement.

"It was terribly disheartening to lose the signs," Adams added. "But we haven't given up, and we're still working with the agencies to see if there's hope of getting the signs returned."

Measure M is a lemon.

Measure M makes promises it can't keep: it won't lower rents, create affordable housing, or even increase hotel occupancy.

It will keep one promise though: it will cut our city services by at least $1.3 million per year at a time when pension obligations will add as much as $4 million a year in expenses.

Residents—homeowners, seniors, renters, children— will pay the high cost of M: decreases in police and fire department protection, recreation programs, road repair, preservation of the Monarch Sanctuary, parks and our coastline, staffing at our Library.

Jeanne Byrne: "This initiative is poorly written, will tie the hands of City Council and will be costly to the City to address future STR issues."

Bill and Cheryl Kampe: "With the limits imposed by M, the city faces cutbacks that will reduce the quality of life here for a long time. PG deserves better."

Cesar Lara, MBCLC: "From the lens of labor, you can see just how many jobs these short-term rentals are providing and how they are vital to local employment."

PG businesses will pay the cost of Measure M with a decrease of $15-$20 million per year in revenue. If vacation rental guests stay elsewhere, they eat and shop elsewhere. STR owners will no longer need regular services of local contractors, plumbers, electricians, landscapers, painters and housekeepers.

5 of 7 City Council candidates are voting NO on M, along with leading residents like Bill and Mary Fredrickson, Rudy Fischer, Debby Beck, Steve Lilley, JR Rouse, Terry Coen, Lin and Dave Blaskovich, Bill Bluhm, Bob Sadler, Georgia Kary and Kathleen Kennedy.

Don Mothershead: "I'm concerned about the city's financial future. Measure M will most definitely have a catastrophic effect on the City if passed."

Ken Cuneo: "Measure M is extreme. It will lead to service reductions. Why not continue the revenue stream from tourists to help us invigorate our city?"

materials per hour.

Screens sort the materials by size, and air jets separate lighter-weight items from heavier ones. A machine called a polishing screen isolates flat items from the rest, and an optical device "sees" different types of plastics to get them to the correct destinations. Powerful magnets grab onto iron-based metals, separating them from aluminum and everything else.

As the trash travels from belt to belt between separating devices, human sorters reach across the fast-moving lines, pulling out what are called "contaminants" - things that can't be recycled.

That includes, sadly, your coffee cup, which doesn't make the cut because it's a "mixed material" — in this case, paper with a plastic lining. Other rejects include clothing - heaps of it - and curtains and household rags. Tissues and styrofoam, and even small appliances and garden hoses show up, along with an average of one bowling ball per day.

Once this flotsam and jetsam has been removed, it goes to the landfill. (Items bound for the Last Chance Mercantile have to be dropped off there; they are not salvaged from the recovery facility.)

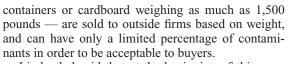

The remaining finished products — bales of cans, plastic

Lindenthal said that at the beginning of this year, China changed the amount of contaminants it would accept in some recyclables from 5 percent to .5 percent. For a ton of material, that works out to no more than 10 pounds of other stuff in the mix. And as you've no doubt heard, China is also no longer accepting plastic bags — so neither is the recovery facility. They end up in the landfill, too.

Resorting to reusables

All of that's enough to make a latte-loving tree-hugging environmentalist throw up his hands in despair. But there is good news. First, of course, there are many substitutes for nonrecyclable items, from the ubiquitous travel coffee mugs to stainless steel straws and lunch kits that include reusable flatware.

Second, there are ways to make sure that what vou throw into the recycling bin really belongs there. The district has a website, www.whatgoeswhere.info, which provides a great deal of information, and there's an app for your phone, where you can type in an item's description, and immediately find out how to dispose of it. For example, by entering your zip code and the words "plastic grocery bags,"

Bales of aluminum cans, weighing approximately 1,500 pounds apiece, stand ready to be shipped to Pennsylvania, where they'll be recycled into new cans.

you can find out what stores near you accept them for reuse.

Another common question is, "How clean do recyclables have to be?" The answer is "kind of clean." More accurately, you don't need to run your Carmel Honey Company jars and empty Chesebro bottles through the dishwasher. Just make sure they're empty and, if appropriate, scraped out with a rubber spatula. Aluminum foil with a few traces of grease is OK, but an aluminum pan with a layer of caked-on cheese from last night's lasagna is not.

What about the batteries?

If you have a household recycling bin (as opposed to a communal bin in an apartment or condo complex), you can also place clear plastic bags filled with used batteries on top for pickup and disposal. Lindenthal noted that it's especially important not to toss lithium batteries, which are prone to burst into flame, into your garbage.

Finally, you might be wondering where all the stuff that is accepted for recycling goes. It's purchased by companies and brokers worldwide for various uses, usually with the buyers paying the shipping. According to the list on the district's website, some kinds of plastic go to Georgia, where they might come back to you as a new carpet, while another type goes to Iowa to be made into industrial piping, and yet another variety is shipped to Taiwan, where it's turned into molded plastic products.

Cardboard goes to Vietnam and steel is sold to a broker in the United States to be remade into car parts - maybe even a few have rolled across the lawn at Concours. The aluminum cans and foil go to Pennsylvania and become new cans and other aluminum products. And your shredded tax returns might just find their way into a roll of toilet paper. There's something sort of satisfying about that, isn't there?

interact with coworkers and supervisors, she constantly fears that those individuals have seen the video showing her in the most intimate of settings without her knowledge or consent," according to the lawsuit, filed for Ramirez by Salinas attorney Elizabeth R. Leitzinger with law firm Fenton & Keller.

Ramirez filed complaints earlier this year with the corrections department's office of civil rights and investigative services unit.

In June, though, the civil rights division informed her that the "complaint was being closed" because the other department was investigating the matter.

Ramirez alleges that the corrections department has failed to properly investigate and respond to her complaints. Furthermore, she says the state agency does not provide "adequate training and education" to prison staff, including managers and supervisors, for discrimination and harassment policies and procedures.

NANCY CANNON 1942 - August 5, 2018

Friends of the Carmel Valley Library and the Jamesburg School lost an ardent supporter on August 5 when Nancy Cannon passed away at the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. A forty-eight-year resident of Carmel Valley, Nancy was a founding member of the Jamesburg Players in Carmel Valley. She was committed to community theater and the Jamesburg school. She sang and played guitar with her group "Robles Del Rio Brewing Co." She played the Running Iron Saloon when it was half the size it is now.

Mrs. Cannon taught first-grade in the Monterey Peninsula School District for thirty-five years. She always insisted that she have a piano in her first-grade classrooms. Fortunate were the children who happened to get Nancy Cannon for their first-grade experience. Nancy loved books, reading, and teaching children to read. Reading was her specialty in education. She was proud to have taken a master's degree in education.

Nancy's word to parents, "Get involved in your child's education. Help the teacher. Learn from your child's teacher. Encourage kids to read. Reading is the entry to a lifetime of a person's education."

At her home in Carmel Valley, Nancy grew flowers and vegetables so she enjoyed cooking, canning, and making salsa. An avid reader of new books, she was a Friend of the Carmel Valley Library. Donations in Nancy Cannon's name to Friends of the Carmel Valley Library would be appreciated.

3orn in Fresno, California, Nancy grew in Visalia. She attended Fresno State College, UC Santa Barbara and University of La Verne. She died after many years of extreme anemia resulting from the rare and often undiagnosed hereditary bleeding disease, HHT. The most common symptom is frequent nose bleeds. Nancy never had children because she didn't want to pass HHT to another human being. She always encouraged people to learn about HHT so that those who have it, undetected, may learn about it and get treatment at an HTT treatment center. If you know someone who has frequent nosebleeds, tell them to get tested for HHT. Search CUREHHT. org 1.800.448.6389. Cure HHT is the only organization in the world with a sole commitment to bettering the lives of families with HHT. Their work is driven by a single mission: To Find, Treat and Cure HHT.

Prison management should have known that such failure would result in discrimination and/or harassment against female employees, and "such failure" constituted "deliberate indifference" to the rights of female prison workers, including Ramirez, she contends.

"CDCR's failure to prevent and/or stop the harassment compounded and exacerbated the physical and emotional injuries Ms. Ramirez was already suffering as a result of the unlawful conduct," the complaint alleges.

Ramirez alleges sexual harassment and failure to prevent discrimination and harassment in violation of state law, and is seeking an undisclosed amount in damages, including punitive damages, exceeding $25,000.

CDCR press secretary Vicky Waters told The Pine Cone that the agency doesn't comment on pending litigation, but that it's investigating the allegations.

"CDCR has a zero-tolerance policy with regards to sexual harassment," Waters said Thursday. "We take all allegations of sexual misconduct seriously and investigate them thoroughly in order to ensure the safety of our staff and inmates, and to hold staff accountable for any criminal or administrative misconduct."

Debra Ann Schulte-Gaasch 1954 • 2018

My beautiful, precious wife and closest friend, Debra Ann Schulte-Gaasch, died peacefully in her sleep in the Canterbury Woods skilled nursing facility in Pacific Grove on August 26, 2018. She was 64. Her six years journey into a rare and little understood dementia, Pick's Disease, has finally ended.

She was a bright sun of love, laughter and luminous joy to me, to her three children, John, Joe and Jenna, her two surviving sisters, Sharon and Karen, and to so many, many, others.

Deb was born in Clarion, Iowa, on November 15, 1954, the daughter of Marlowe and Carol Okland.

With a doctorate and as an RN, Deb had a successful career as a nursing educator. She was the Director of Community Hospital's Maureen Church Coburn School of Nursing, located on the Monterey Peninsula College campus, for 25 years. Always a creative and far-sighted leader, one of her many accomplishments was the creation of the successful and widely emulated Men in Nursing program. This program, which provided guidance and support to men wanting to become registered nurses (a field once traditionally entered almost solely by women), has been used as a model in nursing programs across the United States.

Members of her faculty, upon learning of her passing, shared some of their thoughts about her: "...one of the greatest bosses I ever had", "... a good friend, mentor, and 'big sister", and "Deb will be forever missed, gone far too soon. We strive to carry on her legacy..."

Deb loved running. In the beginning, as friends and colleagues at Community Hospital, we discovered our mutual love of running. (I asked if she would like to go for a run together. She said yes, and that's how our relationship began.) We started running together, running many local races, such as the Big Sur Half Marathon (several times), and Run in the Name of Love.

Although her physical form is lost to us, she is not gone from us. Her vibrant love, warmth and generous heart will live in our memories forever. We who knew her and loved her are richer for the gift of her having been in our lives.

A memorial service for Deb and celebration of her life will be held in the Canterbury Woods auditorium in Pacific Grove on Thursday, November 15, 2018, from 5-7 p.m.

HILMA SCHAAR SMITH November 16, 1925 $ September 21, 2018 Pacific Grove

Hilma Schaar Smith, 88, a lifelong resident of Pacific Grove, and retired high school teacher and business owner, passed away peacefully at the Cottages of Carmel, following a period of failing health.

Mrs. Smith was born in Pacific Grove in 1929 and attended local schools. Following graduation from Pacific Grove High School in 1947, she married and spent several years living in the Canal Zone, Panama. Upon returning to California, she attended San Jose State University, where she earned both a teaching degree, and, later, a Masters' Degree in Education, carrying on the tradition to inspire and educate young minds started by her mother, the late Clara young minds started by her mother, the late Clara Peterson Schaar, who in the 1930s was the sole teacher at the lone schoolhouse in Little Sur when the whole family had to move about the hills by donkey.

After completing her formal education in 1955, Mrs. Smith began her own long teaching career, returning to Pacific Grove in 1959. For many years, she headed the Physical Education Department for Girls at Pacific Grove High, where her discipline and dedication to her students are still remembered to this day. She retired from teaching in 1985 to begin a new career as a business owner and major importer. Never one to remain idle, she traveled widely internationally as well as within the USA, often on the spur of the moment, heading out in her VW van or suddenly jumping on a plane to Kathmandu, Nepal, among dozens of destinations. This zest for adventure and reaching outside the box never left her.

Mrs. Smith was a long time member of the Pacific Grove High School Alumni Association, and was an active member of the Red Hat Society. Other memberships included the Delta Kappa Gamma Society, California Retired Teachers Association and the Monterey Civic Club. A devoted champion of her native Pacific Grove, she lived most of her life in several houses on Eardley Ave., the first house having been hand-built by her grandfather. She worked tirelessly to preserve the unique character and history of Pacific Grove.

Surviving are an elder brother, John G. Schaar (Dorothy) of San Jose; sons, Martin Meehan (Cecile) of Oregon and James Gustav Smith (Jennifer) of Prunedale; grandchildren, Max and Margot Meehan of Oregon; niece and nephew, Linda Schaar Stotts and Chris Schaar and several great-nieces and great-nephews.

Mrs. Smith was preceded in death by her loving grandparents, parents and her brother, Peter Schaar, all of Pacific Grove, and, recently, her brother, James W. Schaar of Sacramento. Interment will be in the family resting site at El Carmelo Cemetery in Pacific Grove.

A memorial visitation with family and friends will take place on Saturday, October 13 between the hours of 2 to 5 pm at The Little Chapel by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove. In lieu of floral arrangements, the family requests that donations can be made in Mrs. Smith's memory to the Sally Griffin Senior Center, 700 Jewell, Pacific Grove, California, 93950. ing her legs as it lunged. Reacting without thinking, she hit it with her fist, and it bit her again on the hand.

"I ran through the door, and the raccoon chased me and jumped and bit me on the back. It scratched my legs," she said. "I ran to the neighbor's and started banging on the door. I was incoherent. They called 911."

A fire engine and ambulance were dispatched to the neighbor's house. "She's at her neighbor's house bleeding and requesting medical attention," the dispatcher told them. "The raccoon is inside of her residence and is killing her dog.' Kirkpatrick said the little dog, Poppy, managed to hide under the couch, but the raccoon then went after her other dog, a Yorkie named Max. Both pups suffered scratches and bites.

Raccoon chased out

Firefighters found the raccoon "running around in the house" and chased it out, she said, and then corralled the terrified little dogs to assess their injuries, too.

They were taken to an emergency vet while Kirkpatrick went to the ER.

The vet shaved and cleaned the wounds on the dogs, and doctors treated hers.

"We all had rabies shots," she said. She didn't receive any stitches because closing up skin sliced open by a raccoon can lead to serious bacterial infections, according to Kirkpatrick.

"I'm healing," she said. "And my dogs are going to be fine. Believe it or not, that 3-pound dog made it."

After the attack, the homeowners association at Carmel Valley Ranch sent out a notice warning residents about raccoons.

they can open anything," Kirkpatrick said, adding that she later found paw prints on her sliding glass doors indicating the animal had tried to get in elsewhere before finding the screen door, which she said is sticky and hard to open and close. "I never thought something would be that aggressive to attack an animal in a house and then completely go after me. I hadn't moved at all to attack it, I had just turned on the light."

A tennis player, Kirkpatrick said she would have suffered much more had she not been able to get away from the animal as quickly as she did.

"If I had been not agile or as athletic, it probably would have been a lot worse," she said. "I didn't stop."

Retired attorney and resident Chris Campbell urged the council not to appeal. "To me, as an attorney, the decision was clear," she said. "I'm doubly troubled now that Mr. Mozingo is advising the city on whether to proceed." Even though Mozingo was not named in the suit, Campbell said she felt his ongoing participation was a conflict of interest.

She also found his remarks that O'Farrell's decision could set precedent for cities throughout the state "specious."

"Nothing that Judge O'Farrell ruled can bind or touch or be precedent for any other city in the State of California," she said. "The decision was excellent and well reasoned, and we need to put this behind us and these documents need to come forward."

"An appeal does not have our vote, and it should not have yours," commented resident Georgina Armstrong.

"I believe there's a clear conflict of interest," said council candidate Jeff Baron. "The city's interests are not aligned with the city attorney's." "I urge the city to accept Judge O'Farrell's ruling,' former Mayor Sue McCloud said. "Let's get this matter behind us and go on to bigger issues that concern us all.' Because councilwoman

Glen Mozingo

Carolyn Hardy was absent Monday, Mayor Steve Dallas told the public the council would not make a decision in that afternoon's closed session, but would do so on Tuesday.

Ask Google

At the Oct. 2 meeting — which started more than an hour late due to the closed session running long - Giffen read a statement describing the council's decision not to appeal.

"The city council has met in closed session, heard from counsel and considered several options and has decided that. so long as the language of the proposed judgment and proposed writ that we have from the court do not materially change, the city council will not appeal and will release the documents that were presented in closed session to the public within 15 days from receipt of a signed final judgment from the court," he said. "The city has been told that the final judgment and writ will protect the city, as a matter of law, from any enforcement action for violating the Brown Act from the district attorney's office. In other words, the district attorney has told us that it will not enforce any violation of the Brown Act from this disclosure, and that is the basis of the council's decision."

After he was done, Ferlito asked Giffen to reveal who voted which way on the matter during the closed session. Giffen declined, saying that information was protected under the Brown Act, which had Ferlito and Baron yelling from the audience that he was wrong.

What the law says

Ferlito then pulled up the pertinent legal section on his cell phone, and the council and attorneys took a break to review the language in the Government Code that clearly states that votes taken on legal matters in closed session must be reported out to the public.

After several minutes of various council members and attorneys walking into and out of the chambers and conferring, they reconvened and revealed that four council members voted in favor of the statement Giffen had read earlier, while councilman Bobby Richards voted against it. When Richards asked if he could explain his reasons, Mozingo said he could not.

With the loss in court, taxpayers are on the hook for the costs of fighting the suit and will also have to cover opposing counsel Neil Shapiro's bills. Given the city attorney's reluctance to reveal legal costs related to specific cases, it's unknown when those totals will be made public.

On Thursday, Mozingo released a statement regarding the council's decision not to appeal and to release the documents. "The dissemination of this information will allow the members of the public to conclude that the misrepresentations and manipulation of information regarding the city attorney's resume and credentials have been a deliberate attempt to smear an unblemished reputation and to engage in character assassination," he said.

AFTER FIVE closed-session meetings to discuss city administrator Chip Rerig's job performance over the past year - and deciding he has been "highly competent," based on several indicators like leadership, management, community relations, financial management and vision - the city council on Tuesday voted to extend his contract to 2023 and give him a 3.5 percent pay raise, along with a couple of other benefits.

Rerig took the post on March 1, 2016, with a base salary of $190,000. His new contract ups his pay to $196,650 and also gives him an extra $6,000 a year in deferred compensation and a one-time benefit of an extra 40 hours of paid leave, for a total 120 hours during the fiscal year that ends June 30, 2019. The deferred compensation makes up for differences in the retirement programs offered by Carmel and his previous employer, the City of Monterey, while the additional "executive leave" was offered "in recognition of his prior service to the city," when he worked in the planning department more than a decade ago. His new contract was OK'd without discussion.

Sundays. This week, Wright said the new hours will take effect Nov. 13.

Service animals

The board also adopted an official policy for handling people who bring animals into the libraries. Wright recommended clearly defining which creatures are permitted by using Americans with Disabilities Act standards.

"Per the ADA, service animals are defined as dogs or miniature horses that are individually trained to do work or perform tasks for people with disabilities," she said. "Examples of such work or tasks include guiding people who are blind, alerting people who are deaf, pulling a wheelchair, alerting and protecting a person who is having a seizure, reminding a person with mental illness to take prescribed medications, calming a person with Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) during an anxiety attack, or performing other duties. Service animals are working animals, not pets. The work or task a dog has been trained to provide must be directly related to the person's disability."

Animals that simply provide emotional support, comfort or therapy are not considered "service animals," she noted.

While Wright said she has never seen a miniature horse in the library, the ADA specifically mentions them and dogs, which she recommended echoing in the policy. Trustee Tara Twomey countered that the library policy should simply permit "service animals as defined by the ADA."

"That way, if the ADA says you can have a goose or a pig or whatever, we don't have to change our policy," she said. "We are not permitting 'support' animals. That's consistent with what our obligations are, and it keeps us away from very difficult decisions for the staff."

Acceptable snacks

Finally, the board updated the rules on the once verboten activity of eating and drinking in the library.

"I feel strongly about loosening the rules," Wright said, to accommodate the "teens and tweens who come in after school ... and are enjoying their sandwiches and their Flaming Hot Cheetos."

She said it's important to understand who is using the library, and how, and to make them feel wanted there, not policed by librarians.

"I want them to feel comfortable — that this is their library and they feel welcome and that having chips after school isn't a crime," she explained.

The existing policy prohibits "consuming foods that create a nuisance or disrupts library use" due to odor, garbage or spills, as well as alcoholic drinks. It allows other beverages in containers with tops or lids.

Wright proposed slightly rewording the rule to prohibit "consuming smelly, messy, or noisy food, or food that creates a nuisance or disrupts library use because of odor, garbage, or spills," and adding a sentence allowing library staff to "ask anyone to relocate, remove, or dispose of food and drink" if necessary.

Twomey agreed the changes are a good idea.

"If it gets problematic or we get complaints from other patrons, then we'll have to revisit them," she said.

Wright assured the board the library wouldn't begin encouraging people to eat their dinners there, and the trustees voted to approve the new verbiage.

October 5, 2018

Other donations to the Measure J campaign include Carmel resident Amy Anderson, who gave $7,000, while Moss Landing Commercial Park LLC, - a company owned by developer Nader Agha - gave $4,000, bringing his total contributions to $6,000. On Oct. 1 Agha also made a personal donation of $5,000 to the Measure J campaign, according to a statement filed by Public Water Now the same day.

Agha has proposed a desalination plant on his Moss Landing property to compete with Cal Am's proposed plant in Marina. Public Water Now managing director George Riley who is also a candidate for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board of directors - has refused to say which desal solution he supports, if any.

Expenditures

For expenditures, Public Water Now reported paying San Francisco attorney M.R. Wolfe and Associates $3,356 for legal work, $505 on Facebook, $6,224 on advertising with the Monterey County Weekly, and $14,666 on Wellman Advertising & Design — a business owned by Melodie Chrislock, a Public Water Now director, and her husband Phil Wellman.

The intent of Measure M, the short-term vacation rentals (STRs) initiative, is to limit STRs in residential zones of Pacific Grove. It will not affect STRs in the Coastal Zone or in Pacific Grove's commercial districts, nor will it interfere with home-sharing (room rentals in resident-occupied homes).

Editorial

Third time's a charm?

WE EXPECT the Cal Am takeover initiative to pass come Nov. 6. One reason is sheer voter fatigue — this is the third time in the last few years a similar takeover initiative has been tried. Plus, everybody is so tired of all the tumult and shouting over our water supply they've had to listen to for the last 23 years, they probably just want something different to happen. Meanwhile, as everybody knows, the electorate, whether nationally or right here at home, is perfectly capable of making dreadful mistakes for inexplicable reasons. There's certainly no good reason for Measure J to be approved. In fact, the arguments in favor of it are all complete nonsense. Let's look at them one at a time:

■ 'Water for less'

It's certainly true that our water bills are very high, even as our supply is horribly inadequate. And when you get a big bill, it's easy to blame the company that sent it to you. But Cal Am is no more responsible for the price of our water than it is for its scarcity, and neither is our water shortage the responsibility of Mother Nature. We don't have enough water and are charged the earth for the trickle we're allowed to use because environmentalists purposely conspired to take our water away, and because the government let them do it, and then utterly mismanaged what we were left with.

Obviously, the first question for the takeover activists would have to be: Since government is already so much at fault, why should we trust it to be the solution now? Their answer: "Because public water now." And that's it — the kind of statement only a fool would listen to for more than two seconds.

But it goes deeper than that. Never mind the particulars of our water situation — arguing that the government can do anything cheaper and more efficiently than private enterprise is not only philosophically untenable, it's historically ignorant.

There are some things the government must do. Almost everything else, and particularly the production and sale of goods and services, should be done by individuals working either separately or collectively according to the rules of supply and demand. That is, if you want those goods and services to be of the highest quality at the lowest price.

Regardless of the direct cost savings that may be involved, such as eliminating profit or reducing borrowing costs, turning Cal Am into a government-run entity will not make our water cheaper or more plentiful — it will only do the opposite.

■ 'It's just a study'

Some people who are backing Measure J are trying to convince voters that no risk is involved in voting for the measure, because all it does is require the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to do a study to determine if the takeover would be "feasible." That is not true. Measure J requires the water board to take over Cal Am if doing so would be feasible. So once the study is done and who knows what "feasible" actually means — the takeover would have to commence.

■ 'The takeover won't delay the desal plant'

Also not true. Last time there was a takeover measure on the ballot, then-Carmel mayor Jason Burnett vehemently opposed the measure because of the delay it would entail in getting the desal plant built. He was right then, and the same thing is true now — if Measure J passes, just the negotiations and lawsuits will be enough to delay the desal plant for years, if not decades.

But last time they got it on the ballot, at least the people behind the takeover initiative weren't openly hostile to the idea of a desal plant. This time they are. They argue that conservation and reclamation, not desal, are the answer to our shortage. But this community is already conserving as much as it can, and there simply isn't enough water to be reclaimed to end our water shortage. The desal plant is a necessity, and the passage of Measure J would put it in extreme jeopardy.

So there you have it. Measure J is contrary to the public interest and should not

Giving credit Dear Editor,

It's no secret that I was quite critical of the Forest Theater renovation process under the previous administration. But now, I must give credit where credit is due. First, I'd like to thank Steve Dallas for coming up with a unique solution to the devastating loss of the theater's iconic trees that used to create that stunning backdrop we all knew and loved.

Very soon, the site will have four new medium-sized trees gracing the area behind the stage, which future audiences will enjoy as a natural backdrop to our plays, musicals and concerts. After all, what is the Forest Theater without the forest? Thank you, Mayor Dallas, for understanding this, and coming up with a wonderful solution.

I'd also like to thank facilities maintenance supervisor Cleve Waters, who remains the city's unsung hero for the care and love he has shown the facility since it re-opened in 2016. Cleve is a one-man army who responds quickly and efficiently, putting out fires (so to speak) as fast as they erupt. The hours he puts in and the oversight he provides are above and beyond. Thanks, Cleve!

'Keeping up' Dear Editor,

As native San Franciscans, we have visited Carmel-by-the-Sea since the early 1960s. Like many of you, we became residents in 2003 and have watched our community evolve into the modern village concept that we have today.

Our current mayor deserves to be re-elected to a second term in order to complete the timely changes that are in progress, such as the additional housing projects and resolving water issues with the new desalination plant. This will also help accommodate increased tourism, which will provide business growth and much-needed tax revenue.

Steve Dallas is following through on all these issues. Yes, we all would love our little village to have stood still in time, but this is California, and Dallas has done an excellent job in retaining our village image with a modern twist to keep up with the new views of California.

Let's re-elect Steve Dallas on Nov. 6. Nicholas and Stephanie Delis, Carmel

'Two short years' Dear Editor,

Steve Dallas is running for re-election. He has many terrific plans for the city and our community and should be given the opportunity to complete these plans. Look at all the positive things he has done be approved. If it is, the water nonsense you've heard over the last 23 years will only get a lot worse, water will be no cheaper, and the solution to our shortage will be a lot further away.

Do you know the muffin man? Well, you certainly should.

WHILE YOU might think there comes a time in life when service to others is no longer in the cards, Sid Ottman begs to differ.

To sit and talk with this 100-year-old resident of Sunrise Senior Living in Monterey is to know that not only is his sense of humor still delightful and his savvy still sharp, but that his heart is as kind and his spirit as generous as it ever was.

"He's always thoughtfully working on ways in which to make a difference in the lives of others," said one of his regular weekly visitors.

Born on Oct. 10, 1917, in Waupaca, Wis., to Will and Mabel Ottman, he was the middle child of seven. Ottman said he has an amazing recollection of a day, back in his infancy, when his father stood holding him and together they listened to the church bells ring, announcing the end of World War I.

Ottman's rural Midwestern childhood was much as you might imagine — filled with swimming holes, pickup football games (which he often organized) and hours spent with books in the public library.

"I didn't realize I could check them out, which meant that, come 5 p.m., my mother would have to call the library and have me sent home," he said.

Getting to work

A strong work ethic made an early showing when he took on a paper route while he was in third grade, and continued through a variety of jobs, including one as a pin setter at the YMCA's bowling lanes.

One occupation he found particularly interesting — at least from a historical perspective — was distributing National Recovery Administration posters for merchants to display in their windows. At 18, Ottman started a youth group at his church — the beginning of a lifelong mission of service to others.

Following two years of education at Lawrence University, in Appleton, Wis., Ottman attended the University of Wisconsin, and then Stanford University, where he earned his master's degree in journalism and his doctorate in health education.

He has worked as coordinator of health and physical education for Santa Barbara County, where he and his wife lived for 55 years before moving to Monterey. He directed Santa Barbara County's special education program, and worked with educational research and project development, as well. He was president of the Goleta school board and worked as a teacher.

His journalism degree was put to good use, too. He was editor of a weekly newspaper in Renton, Wash., and is the author of the book, "Brother Timothy," a story set in one of the California missions during the 1880s.

Ottman served for more than 30 years in the Army and the National Guard. He has been affiliated with so many community and service organizations that to recount them all would be difficult, at best. To see the array of honorary certificates and awards of achievement, recognition and appreciation that cover the wall of his home is to get just a glimpse of the many ways in which he has contributed to the world around him.

Ottman has also been an avid golfer. "One of the happiest times of my life was the day I shot a 93 — and I was 93," he said, with a broad grin.

While Ottman claims that the breadth of his career and community involvement has made for "a magnificent life," no greater pride

Skills in the kitchen

Family has obviously been at the center of his life, but he also adores something else, for which he is quite well known: his bran muffins. It had been too long since he last put his baking skills to work, and he said he truly missed making them — and more important> ly, sharing them with family and friends as he did for so many years.

RIE MEECH came quickly. The Monterey United Methodist Church — where Ottman is a member — and the Marina United Methodist Church work together to provide monthly dinners and breakfasts for homeless women. Surely they could use a few more treats.

While Ottman's not able to stand for long periods of time, others bring the kitchen to him. Using his own recipe, helpers provide a bowl with the dry ingredients, which he mixes together by hand, using a spoon, "with plenty traction to the unknown has also been a central inspiration for her art. "I love trying any kind of new thing."

That adventurous spirit also applies to Winfield as an artist.

She's a mixed-media specialist who photographs things that catch her eye — very often a unique-looking door, usually closed — then paints around the photo to enhance the scene with details from her imagination.

The images she has photographed, and subsequently painted, are from India, Turkey, Mexico and Spain, as well as U.S. locations like New Orleans, Cape Cod, and the coast of California.

"I know people love to go hiking in a place like Yosemite, but if you put me in the middle of a strange city and let me wander with my camera, capturing little moments of light, patterns, color, and beauty in architecture, I'm a very happy person," she said.

"I mount the photos on a board, then build up the surface around the photo with Marlon paste, which creates a nice texture to paint on," Winfield explained. "Then I start painting out from the photo, adding different elements that can sometimes make things more surreal, make the viewer go, 'Wow, wait a minute ...'" streets, is a showcase for her painted photos.

And those closed doors — a recurring theme — might be an extension of her attraction to the unknown, like weird, exotic foods. She loves to wonder what might be on the other side of the door, she said, and then use her paint and imagination to encourage the same curiosity in the viewer.

All in the family

Her photo-paintings — hundreds of them — are in private collections all over the world and have been exhibited in galleries and shows in Palm Desert, New Orleans, St. Louis, Nashville, Ann Arbor, Mich., and Provincetown, Mass.

> Winfield is part of a well-known art family. Her father, Rodney, who retired in Carmel and died in 2017, was a multi-faceted St. Louis painter, sketcher, sculptor, poet and composer, and college art professor.

> Her older brother, Chris, is a celebrated abstract artist who since 1989 has owned the Winfield Gallery on Dolores Street, just a few strides from Robin's space.

> David, second-born, studied at the Chicago Art Institute and became a quirky, edgy woodworker, and a custom cabinetmaker until he lost a battle to cancer in 2008.

Her younger sister, Nancy, was a talented oil painter before she went to work in the wine industry.

"As an artist, I didn't have a real focus for a lot of years. It took me a long time to figure out where I wanted to go with my art ... and I guess I'm still working on that part," Robin said.

'The truthful version' Dear Editor,

There are many misstatements of fact in preservationist Nancy Runyon's "Misstatements of Facts" letter to the editor on Sept. 21 with regard to the Mehdipour house. Runyon claims that it is factually incorrect to state that the house, which was built in 1958, was not considered historic in 2004 when Mehdipour purchased it. Simple math tells a different story, 2004 minus 1958 equals 46 years, several years less than the 50 years required to begin the "historic" process.

Runyon then introduces a new word in her next sentence by stating that the house has been "important" since it was built. If the house was "important," she might have written about it at least once in the years between 1958 and 2010. The year 2010 is when she began her coordinated campaign, after Mehdipour submitted plans for a new home. I'm sure Mehdipour would be happy to allow the preservationist and special interest groups to take the house and relocate it to their destination of choice.

Runyon concluded, "If someone does not want a historic house in a sensitive habitat, maybe they should not buy one." Not a single person involved, including the seller, the realtor, and architects, all well versed in Neutra's work, knew or even questioned whether it was designed by a known architect. The fact that Mehdipour did not apply to have the house demolished immediately is further proof that she had no idea it could possibly be considered historic.

The issue today is Mehdipour refusing to be bullied off the street by preservationists and other vindictive people in their crusade against her. Many of us still hold dear the great American value of property rights and the quiet enjoyment of our property.

Dennis Chambers, Carmel

New home an 'enhancement' Dear Editor,

This is to respond to the letter submitted by architect Richard Neutra's son. His letter tries to make the case that the house his father designed on Signal Hill in Pebble Beach should be preserved. This is nonsense. The house is a blight and ill-suited for Northern California in this day and age. The minimalist look of a cracker box on its side may have been in fashion in the 1950s and 1960s in Southern California, but it is dated and without character in this area. Those pushing to control the owner's property rights are acting in their own interests in an effort to control and limit their neighbor's presence on Signal Hill.

Property owner Massy Mehdipour is interested in creating a home in harmony with its coastal dunes setting. Her architect, Ricardo Legaretto, visited the site multiple times, took soil and vegetation samples and designed a home with understated earth tones as an exterior. In square feet, the home is large, yes, but the lower floor is underground and thus invisible from the drive along the coast. It is to be a home for Ms. Mehdipour's large and growing family. It is my opinion it will be an enhancement to the Pebble Beach community. Images of the proposed home have appeared in The Pine Cone and can be found online.

I believe there are many who support a property owner's right to create a beautiful, updated home enhancing its setting as it blends with it.

in Northampton, Mass., one of the storied Seven Sisters women's colleges on the East Coast, where she majored in art, taking classes in painting, drawing, ceramics, sculpture, architecture, and art history.

"My favorite things at the time were etching and printmaking, but I moved to Cape Cod, where I didn't have printmaking facilities, so a boyfriend and I raised oysters and went scallop fishing," she said. "It was a totally different kind of life, but I loved it."

When her father got a major contract to create artwork for a St. Louis bank, he summoned Robin to help. Together, they learned to sew, creating three large quilts for the wall above the bank tellers.

"It took us two months, and it was really fun, and my dad gave me the sewing machine when we were finished," she said.

That's when she began painting fabric and making wearable art — garments and jackets she sold in Boston and New York. Her creations were popular, but labor-intensive, so she returned to St. Louis, began painting her photographs, and became enamored with the genre.

Unexpected

In 1994, Winfield moved with her parents to Carmel, where her brother, Chris, was already established. A year later, she rented an apartment and studio in town and at last became a full-time artist. Her work will be part of an exhibit at the Monterey Museum of Art in April 2019, and can be seen at the Robin Winfield Gallery or online at www.robinwinfield.com.

"I've always thought of myself as an East Coast person and never even imagined living in California, but I pretty much fell in love with the area right away," she said. "It's just so different, so unexpected."

She also fell in love with Ron Baxter, a Massachusetts native she met in 2001 at an art opening at Nancy Dodds Gallery in Carmel. They talked, they danced, and they noticed an instant spark.

"It was the night of the shooting stars, and we moved on to another party to watch the stars," she said. "Our attraction to each other was pretty much immediate. It was one of the best days of my life."

They were married in 2005, and live today on Monterey's Spaghetti Hill in a 104-yearold home they purchased and renovated themselves.

A Story of Two Strokes

My sweetheart of 25 years, Dennis Trason, had two separate strokes this year whose end results were as different as night and day.

On January 4, 2018 around 9 p.m., while we were talking together, I noticed a slight drooping of his left lip and a little slurring of his words. When Dennis started to get up from his chair but couldn't, I tried to help him. We both ended up sliding down to the floor. Fortunately, he didn't hit his head or lose consciousness. He begged me not to call 911, which I did anyway. Help came immediately. Yes, Dennis was having a stroke.

Since we live only five minutes from Community Hospital, he quickly arrived at the ER.

I was given the pros and cons of giving Dennis a risky medication called TPA. This would either bust up Dennis's clot or could cause death. What a choice! I opted for the TPA and began to pray.

In 48 hours, the miracle occurred when Dennis moved his left hand and leg. In time, he was admitted into Community Hospital's state-of-the-art Inpatient Rehabilitation Unit.

After three weeks, Dennis came home where his recovery was progressing along until March 30, 2018, when he suffered his second stroke affecting his right side.

At the ER, the TPA was given immediately. Miraculously, within about one hour he was already moving his right side. I was elated!

Soon after, I was given the bad news that this time Dennis's clot was in his neck. Although Community Hospital is a certified stroke center, there are different levels of care. Because of Dennis's condition, he would need to be transported by helicopter to Stanford Hospital for an advanced procedure called a thrombectomy to remove the clot.

The helicopter had to land at the Monterey Airport because Community Hospital doesn't have a helipad. The flight nurses and their equipment went by ambulance to Community Hospital where they prepared Dennis and then transported him to the airport. Precious time was lost. It took nearly four hours before Dennis had a brain scan at Stanford, which showed he had no brain tissue left.

Dennis passed away the next day as soon as the ventilator was removed.

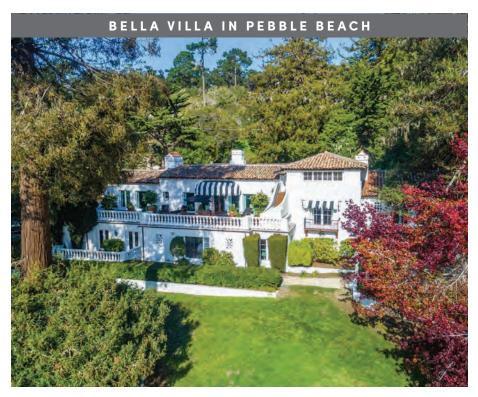

There might have been a different ending to this story, if Dennis had gotten to Stanford more quickly or Community Hospital was able to do the thrombectomy.

To bring public awareness to these issues, I am sponsoring a charity golf tournament.

Please see the flyer next to this article. Any donations are gratefully appreciated.

Rivalry raises stakes for Carmel High, Stevenson golf squads

STEVENSON SCHOOL has been Monterey County's dominant power in girls golf for two decades, during which the Pirates have won eight league championships, along with three Central Coast Section crowns. They were league titlists in three of the last four seasons, including last year, when they won the Monterey Bay League's Gabilan Division.

But being a part of a dynasty is a lot more fun and interesting if you've got a rival, and the 2018 Carmel High squad appears to have grown into that role.

The Padres scored an upset victory over Stevenson in a head-to-head match on Oct. 8 at Quail Lodge — Carmel's home course — to emerge as the only undefeated team in the Gabilan Division of the new Pacific Coast Athletic League.

Rematch dead ahead

The season marked a huge milestone for the Carmel program, which is just four years old, and put the Padres in strong position to win the 2018 league crown. But there's plenty of golf remaining, including a rematch on the final date of the regular season at Poppy Hills, one of two courses (along with Spyglass Hill) that Stevenson calls home. There's also a league tournament, the results of which are combined with the head-to-head dual-match results to determine a champion.

"Our girls took the loss to Carmel very well," said Stevenson's first-year head coach, Tiffany Lim, whose team came up six strokes short against the Padres.

"We knew it was going to be a really close match, and we knew it would be tough to win at Quail, where most of our girls were playing for the very first time," she said. "Ultimately, we needed each of our players to shave one or two strokes off their round, and it didn't happen, but I think our players came away from the match feeling very motivated to host Carmel at Poppy in a few weeks."

The victory ranks at the top of the list in the Padres' brief history of varsity girls golf, but coach Ross Kroeker tempers his excitement. On the one hand, he acknowledges that a home-course advantage is worth several strokes for a golf team, and says the challenge will be much greater when the Padres play Stevenson again on Oct. 17. On the other hand, he believes his team can play much better.

"It was actually a pretty typical round for us," said Kroeker, whose team improved to 7-0 in dual meets two days later with a victory over Santa Catalina at Old Del Monte. "It was nice to stay undefeated for the season, but it wasn't our lowest round of the year."

Co-medalists Brenna Ozel and Lauren Hickam shot 39 (four over par). That's a score Ozel has equaled on two other occasions this season, while Hickam's season-best is a 35.

They were followed by Wendi Ma (45), Elle Bohlman (47) and Priscilla Caballero (59).

Stevenson's best were Callie Chen (44) and Grace Baldridge (45), followed by Kristina Abanico (47), Emma Chung (49) and Sophia Dai (50).

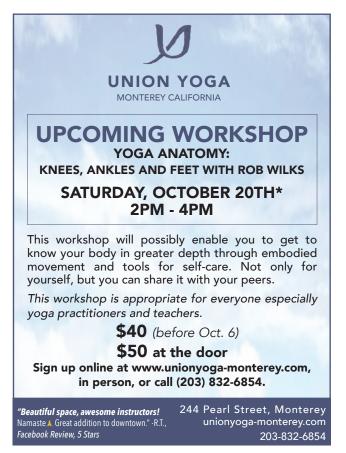

Ozel and Hickam were co-medalists again on Tuesday when the Padres beat Pacific Grove at Quail Lodge. Both shot 39 again.

The two teams are interesting to compare. Ozel (a senior), Hickam and Caballero (both juniors) all played in the Central Coast Section championships a year ago, but Carmel's other six players are freshmen, which obviously bodes well for the future. "That's a full team of players that hopefully is going to stay together for four years," Kroeker said.

Stevenson also has a young roster, with remarkable balance: Four different players were medalists in the Pirates' first five matches of the year, and another, Aviva Yang, (a junior from China), shot a 38 for the junior varsity team one afternoon, a score that would have won medalist honors in the varsity match that day.

We have a very deep team," said Lim, a San Jose native who played four varsity seasons at Harvard University. "Our No. 6 player could potentially beat our No. 1 player on any given day, which makes it pretty fun."

Indeed, on Tuesday, Aviva Yang, the Pirates' No. 6, beat everybody else on the golf course in Stevenson's win over Santa Catalina with a 43 on the front nine at Old Del Monte.

Among Stevenson's 15 players, only three (co-captains Gabby Butler and Angela Zhan, and Kathy Jung) are seniors, and two (Chen and Yang) are juniors.

Chen played in the 2017 CCS tournament with Baldridge and Abanico, who are part of a sophomore class that also includes Xam Calugas (from the Philippines), Sophia Dai, Maria Duda and Nicole Gouw. Four others are freshmen, including Emma Chung and Sydney Craven, both of whom have seen varsity action this fall.

"Last year, Stevenson had two real powerhouse players (Antonia Malate and Michelle Xu), who went on to play college golf, and we're more about team balance this season," Lim said. "I think several of our players have the talent to play in college if they choose to go that route, and if they start competing during the summer months, which is something I definitely plan to encourage."

Carmel plays Salinas on Tuesday at Quail Lodge. Stevenson hosts San Benito on Tuesday at Spyglass Hill, and travels Thursday to play Gilroy at Eagle Ridge. Matches start at 3:30 p.m.

Made up of local women who enjoy roller derby, the Derby Dames will compete against another California team, Derby Republic, in their last "bout" of the season. But the athletic contest will share the spotlight with a Rocky Horror Picture Show-themed celebration and costume contest. Even the players will trade their jerseys for Rocky Horror costumes.

The film, which came out in 1975, quickly became a cult favorite, inspiring devotees to dress up in outlandish costumes for late night screenings, and launching the idea of midnight movies. The Derby Dames, meanwhile, staged their first Rocky Horror Roller Derby last year.

"We're going all out on the 'Rocky Horror' theme," Morgan Goyette of the Derby Dames told The Pine Cone. "Many of us are 'Rocky Horror' fans. We're inviting everybody to dress up — it's a big costume party."

At Scheid Vineyards' tasting room at San Carlos and Seventh, 15 percent of the proceeds from sales of the winery's rosé will go to the nonprofit, too.

Quail Lodge

Quail Lodge is going all out with its Quail in Pink initiative. "My family, like many others, has experienced firsthand not only the physical and emotional hardship that comes from this disease, but also the financial complexities," sales and marketing director Craig Barkdull said. "We are excited to partner with a local nonprofit, BCAG, for this years' initiative where the proceeds will directly benefit the women and men in the communities that we live." During the past year, the group has distributed more than $116,000 to 77 women in Monterey County.

Guests staying at the lodge or visiting the pro shop or golf course will have the opportunity to donate, while those who want to sip to help can order the Quail's signature Pretty in Pink vodka cocktail at Edgar's in the golf club or the Waypoint Bar & Deck at the lodge.

On Oct. 13 from 2 to 4 p.m., Waypoint will be the place to be for the annual Quail in Pink afternoon tea, which costs $28 per person and includes scones and jams, finger sandwiches and sweets, and Palais des Thés teas. Reservations are required. Call (831) 620-8831 or visit quaillodge.com/way-point.

On Saturday, Oct. 20, 15 cars will embark on the inaugural Quail in Pink drive through the backroads to an "express lunch" at the Pinnacles National Park. The entry fee is $150 per car (up to two people) and includes a route book, rally gift and lunch. Register by Oct. 12 by calling (831) 620-8866. The drive will culminate at the Horsepower Happy Hour at Waypoint, a party to which all are invited, from 3 to 7 p.m. "Bring your own pink car to display or decorate your car in honor of Breast Cancer Awareness Month to receive a free appetizer," Barkdull said.

Other touches for Breast Cancer Awareness Month include pink lighting at night, pink flags on the range and pink cups on the course, pink ribbon in guestrooms, and special pink gear. For more about the nonprofit itself, visit bcagmc.org.

Bernardus Lodge and Bernardus Winery might not be under the same ownership anymore, but they collaborate a lot. At the 3rd Annual Barbecue, Grape Stomp & Oyster Shuck Saturday, Oct. 6, from 1 to 3 p.m., vineyard manager Matt Shea (who lovingly tends to the small vineyard in front of the lodge, as well as Marinus Vineyard in Cachagua) and winemaker Dean DeKorth will be in Ingrid's Vineyard at the lodge at 415 W. Carmel Valley Road to lead the festivities.

The afternoon will tap into the hectic pace of harvest with grape stomping and wine tasting, live music, fresh Pacific Gold oysters from Morro Bay and a family-style barbecue lunch. The cost is $85 per person, plus tax and tip. Call (831) 658-3400 or email reservations@bernarduslodge.com to reserve.

Help with the Happy Girl homestead

Todd and Jordan Champagne, owners of Happy Girl Kitchen in Pacific Grove, are holding "Homestead Dinners" to raise money for their plans for a 26-acre homestead in Carmel Valley where they can hold workshops, summer camps, retreats and dinners. "It is going to take a lot of equity to make our dreams come true," the couple said. "We seem to have lots of sweat equity, and we decided to host a monthly dinner series in efforts to help fund our dreams for the property." They said they plan to use the money to "help build our dreams of a community space around food," and are already at work renovating the kitchen and planning a kitchen garden.

The first dinner will take place Oct. 12 at 7 p.m. and will feature "The Best of the Last of Summer." As is always the case with dinners at Happy Girl, the menu will be vegetarian and plentiful, with pickled cherry tomatoes and fennel with housemade crackers and cheese from Marin, seared green guindilla peppers (which are mostly mild), ricotta-stuffed squash blossoms, tomato and mozzarella salad with basil and avocado, heirloom cranberry beans with roasted peppers, carrot risotto and broccolini, roasted cauliflower, green salad, and caramelized quince and apples with vanilla ice cream from Revival for dessert.

Dinner costs $55 per person, and guests often bring wine to share. For reservations, visit www.happygirlkitchen.com. The shop is located at 173 Central Ave. in Pacific Grove.

Tequila & Cuisine

The culmination of thousands of hours of hard work and planning by Crystal Murphy and a group of dedicated volunteers, Monterey Bay Tequila & Cuisine, set for Oct. 13 from 5 to 8 p.m. in the Grand Ballroom at the Hyatt Regency Monterey, will give guests "an exclusive opportunity to sip some of the world's finest brands" of tequila while sampling custom-paired bites from chefs Matt Beaudin of the Monterey Bay Aquarium, Marc Jones of Tasty Solutions, Pablo Mellin from Roy's at Spanish Bay, and Patrick Hendon of Rancho Cielo (the youth campus in Salinas that will benefit from the event). Organizers seek to "share through education the rich, vibrant tradition that's so integral to tequila," and to dispel the reputation of the spirit as a party drink "and replace it with a respectful awareness of this cultural contribution," according to volunteer Janna Lopez. Brand experts, owners and master distillers will be there to share their experiences and knowledge throughout the evening. "This is not a typical Taco'n' Tequila Tuesday party, but rather a singular event where the greatest master distillers in the world come to share their pride and history for this spirit," she said. "As commercialized products crowd the marketplace, and sustainable farming practices are more important than ever, this event serves to educate the public about how, where and when tequila is produced to garner a respect and appreciation for its cultural contributions."

Tickets run from $70 for general admission, to $135 for "All Access," which includes dinner the night before. The Hyatt is also offering special rates for guests. For details, visit www.MontereyTequila.com.

The Chinese porcelain artists are represented by Qian Kiln & Fine Art, whose general manager, Helen Chau, told The Pine Cone that the display will complement Bull's paintings, which are known for their bold colors and floral designs.

Chau said porcelain art has a rich history in China. Originally made exclusively for royalty, it is now accessible to everybody. First done in blue and white hues with, the pieces are now created in very imaginable color — and with contemporary designs.

"China has been doing porcelain art for over 2,000 years," Chau explained. "It's very deeply rooted in the culture. There's a tremendous amount of talent in China painting on porcelain."

The process of creating porcelain art is not only old, but complex. Each piece is fragile, and must be heated to over 2,000 degrees.

The gallery is located on the southeast corner of Ocean and Monte Verde. Call (831) 622-3010 or go to www.qiankiln.com.

Painters celebrate 'Endless Summer'

Just in time for the arrival of our famous off-season mild weather, "Endless Summer" opens at the Carmel Art Association.

The exhibit, which showcases the talents of painters Christine Crozier and Gerard Martin, features oil and acrylic paintings depicting scenes along the Monterey Bay coastline.

Crozier employs "her characteristic loose impressionist style" to capture scenes along the Santa Cruz Boardwalk, while Martin focuses on "harbor views and coastal landscapes."

The nonprofit gallery will host a reception for Crozier, Martin and others Saturday, Oct. 6, from 5 to 7 p.m.

Also opening this weekend at the gallery are shows by painters Gael Donovan, Wilda Northrop, Peggy Jelmini and Michel Tsouris. The art will be on display through Nov. 6.

The gallery is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. Call (831) 624-6176 or visit www.carmelart.com.

Spotlight falls on painter

Painter Rich Brimer will be showcased Saturday, Oct. 6, from 4 to 7 p.m., when The Barnyard shopping center presents its monthly Art Walk. The event is free, and during it, Brimer will offer a painting demonstration at Carmel Visual Arts (which is located above Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Co.).

Gerard Martin used acrylics to create the painting, "Junior Guards," which is featured in a show opening Oct. 6 at the Carmel Art Association.

Adults are invited. Admission is free. Reservations required. Contact Sirie at (831) 646-5632 or thongchu@monterey.org

"Rich's appreciation for water manifests as bold fluidity on the surface of his canvases," organizers said. "For well over a decade, his preference to paint both the surface reflections of water and its deep translucence has been casting a spell for his collectors."

Co-op opens its doors

Downtown Pacific Grove hosts its monthly First Fridays celebration Oct. 5. A mix of shops and galleries will stay open until 9 p.m., including the Pacific Grove Art Center, Artisana Gallery and the Monarch Art Studio Co-Op, which will celebrate its grand opening. Located in the former Marina Patina site at 520 Lighthouse Ave., the studio and gallery is representing 18 artists, including including painters, photographers, ceramic and glass artists, and sculptors.

Gallery owner and painter Mariko Lofink is busy sprucing up the new space. "The studio and gallery are glowing with wonderful creative energy," Lofink reported.

Bunny Breckinridge was a local eccentric celebrity of Carmel from the mid 1950's to the mid 1990's.

His biography, or autobiography, written by a local man named Rod Woodard is a titillating story of a wealthy homosexual socialite who ruled his court life in San Francisco through the 1940s and 50s from his half ownership of the Palace Hotel. He was also quite well known in Hollywood at that same time while rubbing elbows with famous people such as William Randolph Hearst, Betty Davis, Barbara Hutton, and Countess Dorothy di Frasso. You must have heard the phrase "A friend of Dorothy's." Dorothy di Frasso was friends to many Hollywood stars and European Royalty. She knew everyone and invited them to all of her famous summer parties to her Villa Madama near Rome, Italy, and grand Hollywood home.

Bunny's great-grandfather was vice President of the United States from 1856 to 1860. His other great-grandfather was Lloyd Tevis, the founder of Wells Fargo bank. Lloyd Tevis is also a great uncle of Congressman Sam Farr, and Shary Farr was Bunny's social worker the last six months of his life in 1996. Bunny's step-great-grandfather was William Sharon who was a California senator and second in wealth to Lloyd Tevis, who both built most of San Francisco into what it is today during the mid to late eighteen hundreds.

BOOK ONE

Exalted as an Early Hero of the GAY RIGHTS MOVEMENT

Biography by ROD WOODARD BOOK TWO

Bunny's fascinating life began in 1903 when he was born in Paris, then finished his education in England during the "Great War". His sexual coming of age stories are hilarious. His mother forced him to marry into French royalty in 1927. That union produced a female heir and a divorce after two years. He then appeared in the Paris Folies Bergère as Pierre Lapin with Josephine Baker through most of the 1930's.

Bunny's homosexual scandals were daily news made possible by Herb Caen in the San Francisco Chronicle. Gore Vidal, a long time friend of Bunny's, wrote of Bunny's wanting a sex change as "Myra Breckinridge". Bunny was the lead actor in "Plan 9 from Otter Space", dubbed the worst horror movie ever made, directed by Ed Wood. In Johnny Depp's movie "Ed Wood," the part of Bunny was played by Bill Murray."

Throughout most of his life Bunny Breckinridge was in the public eye as an openly gay man, which helped many young people realize they were not the only ones who preferred the same-sex lifestyle.

His story is told in two books available through Amazon as E-books for 9.99 each.

LETTERS From page 26A

LandWatch supports M and J, opposes 6 Dear Editor,

Pacific Grove's Measure M would prevent commercialization of neighborhoods and loss of long-term rental housing.

Measure J is the Monterey Peninsula Water System Local Ownership Feasibility Study Initiative. Affordable housing relies on affordable water. Water from Cal Am's oversized desalination plant will cost about $6,000 per acre foot. In contrast, recycled water costs $2,000 per acre foot, has fewer environmental impacts, and uses much less energy.

Cal Am has no incentive to build the least costly water supply for Peninsula residents. Why? Because Cal Am generates profits based on capital investments, regardless of whether those investments are in the public's interests. A public entity would be more likely to provide water at the lowest cost.

Proposition 6 would repeal the gas tax and undermine public transportation. Without the gas tax, fewer local roads would be repaired and public transit would suffer. There would be fewer Monterey County bus routes; fewer bike and pedestrian projects; and more cars on overcrowded roads.

Please vote for Measures M and J because they are in the public interest, and against Proposition 6 because it is not.

> Michael de Lapa, Monterey

Fascism — not Dear Editor,

The authors of the paid advertisement "Stop the Fascist Takeover of Cal Am" don't know much about fascism. First, while fascist Italy (1922-1943) exercised state control over some industries only after 1933, big fascist brother Nazi Germany (1933-1945) almost exclusively mandated cartelization (monopolies) of private firms, not nationalization.

Second, public ownership of vital services

(such as health care, water, postal service, physical infrastructure) is a common — indeed, essential — feature of modern constitutional democracies of all types. It is in no way "fascism."

Private enterprise may be best for what people desire, but government works best for what people require. Cal Am water is the most expensive — or among the most expensive — in the nation. Experience and scholarship tell us that private service providers cost more than public ones. This is because profit, returns to shareholders, and advertising generate much higher overhead costs than do government programs.

Geoffrey Cocks, Carmel

Farm bureau opposes J Dear Editor,

Wondering why an agricultural organization would jump into taking a position on a ballot measure that doesn't impact Salinas Valley farming? It's all about the process.

While many may have various opinions on the initiation of a feasibility study that Measure J proposes to determine ownership of our water system, the process that the ballot measure lays out is flawed and threatens the very right of voters to decide upon the findings of the feasibility study itself.

First, Measure J does nothing to define feasibility, leaving this to an arbitrary decision of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Board and staff.

Second, if the feasibility study comes back and says, "Yes, let's condemn our water system for public ownership and it's legally feasible to do so," yet the price tag comes back somewhere north of $500 million, will the voters feel the same about paying that price?

Measure J does not allow for that intermediary step ... if the feasibility study comes back in favor of public ownership, it requires the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to initiate the action to condemn the water system assets without voter approval of the anticipated price tag.

For this reason, Monterey County Farm Bureau urges a NO vote on Measure J. The community should decide, once again, to proceed with public water after the facts and costs are determined. Measure J doesn't allow for that to happen.

> Norm Groot, Executive Director, Monterey County Farm Bureau

We have the people Dear Editor,

The most valuable resources for all living things are air and water. Right now, people are trying to recycle water and even harvest it (scientists are working on that) from the air. And here on the Monterey Peninsula we nonchalantly allow a privately owned corporation to manage it for us. According to Food and Water Watch we have the most expensive water in the United States.

It is no wonder that Cal Am spends millions of dollars to keep us in the palm of their hands — they can't lose. At least 87 percent of the nation has publicly owned and managed water companies.

To think that we lack competent, knowledgeable people to do the job here on the Monterey Peninsula and that we need Cal Am to come from New Jersey to hold our hands and manage it for us is a big insult. We've had enough of Cal Am's incompetency and greed.

'He was the government' Dear Editor,

"Once a Cal Am man, always a Cal Am man." Funny thing about Larry Foy, he consistently tells you half of the story. He doesn't mention that after retiring from Cal Am, he subsequently served on the water management district board. Ironically, he did nothing while on the board to lower our water costs or come up with a much needed new water supply. He bemoans the "government," when he actually was the "government."

He also whines about the removal of the San Clemente Dam. Somehow, Cal Am managed to walk away with $25 million in profits from the removal of the dam. Yes, it was an injustice, as Mr. Foy claims - another Cal Am rip-off. That's Larry Foy, a Cal Am half-truth man to the bone. I wonder how much we're paying for his retirement package?

Furthermore, regarding the idea of government lowering the cost of water, look no further than the Marina Coast Water District — their rates are a fraction of what we are paying to Cal Am. But don't believe me — give them a call and compare bills.

'Afraid to speak up' Dear Editor.

The long arm of the hotel/inn lobby of Pacific Grove has wrapped itself around Measure M like a muscled vine. Not only has it funded 80 percent of the cash contributions for the Measure to ban the majority of short-term rentals in town, it also has tightened its grip on the P.G. Chamber of Commerce, choking out the voices of the member businesses that don't provide lodging but do profit from STRs.

That chokehold is so strong that business owners — who privately acknowledge that guests from vacation houses are buying large quantities of their food, souvenirs, hardware, movie tickets, clothing and sundries - will not come out publicly to endorse No on M for fear of reprisal. They are as intimidated by the hotel/inn lobby as they are of chamber president Moe Ammar.

The hotel lobby's strong-arm tactics caused an ad that appeared in a local newspaper to be pulled from Strong PG's Facebook page last week. Because P.G. businesses were afraid to speak up, the ad sought to give voice to the entities in P.G. that profit from STR monies.

Apparently, that included the P.G. Chamber of Commerce, which earns tens of thousands from member dues and ads placed in Chamber publications by P.G.'s top two vacation rental companies that represent STRs.

How did America's last hometown come to be ruled by a hotel lobby so powerful that people are afraid to speak up in their own self-interest?

There is room for everyone. If we all put down our guns to collaborate and cooperate, our businesses and our residents could all benefit.

a scene from "Rocky Horror Picture Show." And at the end of the evening, awards will be presented for Best Dressed Adult and Best Dressed Child.

The popularity of roller derby grew rapidly shortly after World War II, but the sport eventually devolved into a spectacle akin to professional wrestling, where theater trumped athleticism. But all that changed in recent years when significant numbers of women began to play the game. "It's a highly evolved version of what you used to see," Goyette suggested.

One roller derby tradition that has remained is the use of colorful stage names. Like their counterparts of old, the Derby Dames use inventive monikers like "Storm Tripher" and "Juke Ellington." Goyette calls herself "Scary Poppins."

Besides offering women an opportunity to play a fast-moving and physical sport, roller derby offers them a place to come together and meet new friends.

"Our skaters come from all walks of life," Goyette added. "We have teachers and artists and medical professionals. The beauty of the sport is that it offers a sense of community. We're like a family."

The doors open at 6 p.m., and play begins at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance and $15 at the door. Children 10 and under get in for free. Water City Hockey and Sports Center is located at 2800 2nd Ave.

MAKING A CASTLE PICTURE-PERFECT CALLS FOR EXPERT HELP

BY ELAINE HESSER

NCE YOU turn off of Highway 1 onto Garrapata Ridge, you start going up. And up. And up some more — about 1,100 feet in all — until you come to the home at 36296 Weston Ridge Road. The current owner, an author who goes by the name Maren Meandering, took a rather unorthodox path to find it, herself.

For 13 years, from the time she was a young girl, Maren began writing notes with philosophical prose, imaginative theories about how the universe operates, and poetry and predictions about the future, and burying them in jars up and down the West Coast. More than 40 years later, she and a gentleman friend were traveling along Highway 1, in part on the beginning of a project to locate and dig up some of the jars.

Without realizing the date, they wandered into our area on Independence Day in 2013 and were caught in the usual holiday traffic.

"We couldn't wait to get out of here," she said.

However, the then-Floridians were able ist to get into the shower," she said, and she was sure the spiders that lurked in the "scary basement" were simply waiting for an opportunity to jump out and eat her.

Quoting from the movie, "The Princess Bride," she said she also half-expected to find the enormous "Rodents of Unusual Size" from the fire swamp depicted in the film.

Nevertheless, the couple saw potential — and understood the romance of living on a ridge named for one of California's favorite photographers and his talented progeny. In fact, from the edge of the property, there's a glimpse of a freestanding darkroom on a nearby property that Maren believes one of the Westons shared with Ansel Adams.

A pleasant stroll

They brought in Big Sur architect Mickey Muennig, perhaps best known for his work on Post Ranch Inn, Hawthorne Gallery and the baths at Esalen. While preserving the original cottage's footprint and layout, Muennig added glass through which to take advantage of the now-cleared (thanks to brush removal) views of sky, mountains to see past the congestion to the beauty around them. Intrigued by a real estate listing for a cottage just 10 miles south of town that had been built in 1977, Maren decided to make an offer on it — sight unseen.

The realtor wisely insisted they come out and take a look at it, which they did, one year later.

'Potential'

It was quite a disappointment: Two squarish buildings — not much more than shacks, really — overgrown with weeds and showing the effect of several years of neglect, not to mention habitation by wild critters. The brush had taken over to the point that it completely hid dramatic views from the edge of Garrapata Canyon, as well as a view to the ocean farther to the west.

"You practically had to be a contortion-and sea. Stacked-stone fireplaces were also added, emphasizing the high ceilings.

Now the main house, which has more than 5,500 square feet of space, comprising four bedrooms, two bathrooms, a den, laundry room, home theater, wine cellar and spacious, open kitchen and dining area illuminated by an expansive gold orbshaped ceiling light. Marble counters and stainless appliances with a deep, farmhouse sink await the home cook.

And if you can't get your Zen on in the fitness and yoga area overlooking the canyon, you have a serious Om deficiency.

Take a pleasant stroll from the main house to find a guest cabin the owners call "enchanted." A smaller version of the main house, it's heated by two stoves and offers

On a road named for famed photographer Cole Weston, the views from a Mickey Muennig-designed house are just as pretty as you might expect (top). Even on days when the fog manages to reach the glass-enclosed home, the dining room (center) is still brightened by a golden orb of light, and a fire surrounded by stacked stone can warm hearts, as well as hearth.

Pebble Beach authors confab is like a spa weekend for the brain

IN THE old Popeye cartoons, no matter how badly Bluto was beating him up, the sailor man always managed to pop open a can of spinach and chug it down like it was green lightning, causing his muscles to instantly bulge and turn into roaring turbines.

The speakers at the Pebble Beach Authors and Ideas Festival have the same effect on me - it's like they open the top of my head and pour cans of intellectual stimuli in, rejuvenating the brain.

The festival makes me aware of how many new ideas are spinning around the world without me knowing the slightest thing about them. And all of this is accomplished in the beautiful academic setting of the Stevenson School in Pebble Beach.

The venue was not what the host of the popular NPR show "Wait, Wait Don't Tell Me," Peter Sagal thought it would be when he was invited to speak. He thought he was going to a big red brick building in a room with a basketball hoop hanging over the speaker's head. Sagal has a wonderful radio voice that always makes me thing he must look like Peter Lawford - which it turns out he actually does. I learned Sagal is a marathon runner who told us a riveting story of how he was 5 minutes away from being a victim of Boston Marathon bombing in 2013.

I didn't know there were Paper Engineers until I met John Rives, a genius, poet and perpetrator of pop-up books. He showed me how something as wonderfully creative as a popup book works from the inside. He takes flat pieces of paper and turns them into a complicated hands-on book.

Misunderstood myself

I have been merrily going about my business under the general misconception that I am a flaming extrovert. Then, professor on aging at UCLA Gary Small, through a short test on where we fall in the extroversion/introversion continuum, showed me that I am a closet introvert - or, more precisely, an ambivert, a middle-of-the-road category where most of us live.

For most in the audience, it would probably be almost impossible to select a favorite from among the presenters. But I can tell you which one impressed me most: Vikram Amar, one of the nation's preeminent authorities on constitutional law. His remarks during a breakout session were quite timely. He touched on the Kavanaugh hearings (it's not about the person, it's about the minority party not wanting anyone the majority party nominates); sanctuary cities (officials cannot tell employees not to cooperate with ICE); campus speech (the content and viewpoint of speech in a public place cannot be forbidden).

During the first couple of years of the festival, the proportion of local attendees, as opposed to people coming from outside the area, was 90 percent. Now, it is more of a 50-50 split. It does not bring in the number of visitors the Concours d'Elegance or the AT&T tournament do, but the prestige of the speakers and the wealth of information disseminated, discussed, and hashed over is one more thing that makes where we live so special.

We go for annual medical checkups, change the oil in our cars, rotate our tires, change the air filter in the furnace and replace the batteries in our smoke alarms. The Pebble Beach Authors and Ideas Festival is a Mayo Clinic for the mind. It is 30 TED talks, a

A great lady goes up for sale in downtown Pacific Grove

BY ELAINE HESSER

F YOU'VE lived around here for any amount of time, you know it's hard to miss the property for sale at 649 Lighthouse Ave. in Pacific Grove. The Hart House is a Queen Anne-style Victorian, meaning its design is one of the more ornate styles of the period. Even among other types of Victorians, a Queen Anne stands out as a painted lady among painted ladies.

The home was built for Andrew Jackson Hart, a doctor who moved here with his family from Modesto, where the Queen Anne style of architecture had a brief heyday. According to the detailed history at the home's website, hartmansion.com, the designer, one Julien Mourot of Modesto, enjoyed a solid reputation and created a home and office suitable for someone of Dr. Hart's social and professional prominence.

The doc even had his name over the front door in stained glass (which remains to this day), with a foyer mirror positioned just beyond so that the name could be read a second time as a visitor entered.

Behind the colorful exterior of Hart House (above), you may hear echoes of its incarnations as a home to families and many different businesses. An original claw-foot tub (top right) in a third-floor bathroom offers a peek of the world below, while a dining room on the second floor is warmed by paneled walls and the brightness of a hammered-tin ceiling — but not by the coal-burning stove, which now serves as a reminder of times past.

Open Saturday 1-3 | 25148 Hatton Road | $1,795,000

Situated on a coveted 12,100 square foot lot, this exquisite Carmel cottage provides a delightful European ambiance. From the carefully manicured, boxwood edged pathways, round the bubbling fountain to the stone courtyard, one is treated to secret gardens and private sitting areas. The home is an architectural jewel. The turretted entrance, paned windows, dutch door, and stone floored entry reinforce the magic of a French country home. The Carmel stone fireplaces, wood floors, and plaster walls add to the classic beauty of the home. A stunning kitchen remodel is a chefs dream. The home offers two bedrooms and one bath. The sellers have bought extra water allowing for the new owners to expand.

Sadly, Dr. Hart lived only a few years after the house was finished, and died of cancer in 1899. Two more generations of doctors from the family lived there, and then it was occupied by Marie Hovden, the ex-wife of Knut Hovden. Knut is best known for two things: having the largest fish-processing plant on Cannery Row, and raising the idea for a "world class aquarium" somewhere on the Monterey Peninsula way back in the 1920s.

Of course, his cannery became the Monterey Bay Aquarium. Marie and the couple's sons moved into Hart House in the late 1930s, and until the mid-1950s, it was called the Hovden Mansion. After that it was the Antique Castle, a retail business, and then a series of restaurants run by people whose very names still warm the hearts of gourmets.

One of them was chef Robert Kincaid, remembered as the man behind Monterey's 1980s special-occasion spot Fresh Cream, who operated Robert's White House inside the Hart House. Most recently, the home was purchased in 2010 by Jim and Kathy Turley, who opened a tea room.

According to Sotheby's, where Bill Bluhm is offering the house for $2 million, the Turleys are ready to leave the home for the next generation of owners — but not before they got it spiffed up for the lucky buyers. The place has been rewired, replumbed and a new central heating system has been installed. Of course, the large cast-iron, coal-burning stove that used to warm the home is still on the second floor for nostalgia.

Vision for the future

Other original furnishings, including antique hardware, hand-plastered walls, a tiled fireplace, stained glass and the home's claw-foot bathtub are still there, while appliances, much of the wallpaper and some landscaping have been replaced but kept in harmony with the rest of the design.

There's a lovely hammered tin ceiling on the second floor and pocket doors — apparently a common feature of Queen Anne homes — can be used to divide the open floor plan on the first floor into separate rooms. The exterior was repainted by restoration expert Jon Stuefloten, known for his work at the Carmel Mission over the past several years.

The house, with its soaring tower and winding staircases, is laid out so that the first floor could be used as a restaurant or tea room once again — particularly with its newly-remodeled commercial kitchen. The second and third floors have comfortable living quarters, with a family-sized kitchen and private dining room.

Hart House is built of redwood construction throughout its 3,400 square feet, with views of the bay from the second and third floors. There are four bedrooms, two full baths and two half-baths. Jim Turley, in a video at Sotheby's website, also referred to the free entertainment they've enjoyed as parades and festivals take over Lighthouse Avenue at various times of the year.

Kathy, in the same video, said she hopes the house sells to someone who loves and respects its architecture, but what its next use will be, remains to be seen. "I think somebody's going to have a vision we haven't even thought of yet. And whatever it is, I think they're just going to enjoy being part of the community and part of downtown," she said.

Carmel Charm in Silicon Valley

Located in the foothills of the Santa Cruz Mountains, Los Altos is one of the Bay Area's premier communities, due in large part to the city's natural beauty and convenient location between San Francisco and the Silicon Valley. Originally an agricultural town with many summer cottages, Los Altos is now a thriving bedroom community known for its beautiful parks and tree-lined streets. Country lanes run throughout the town and are lined with cozy ranch-style houses as well as larger custom Mediterranean, contemporary and traditional-style homes. To help maintain the small town feel of the city, commercial zones within Los Altos are strictly limited to the downtown area and the small shopping and office parks lining Foothill Expressway and El Camino Real. Bucolic charm and unmatched location make Los Altos a great place to call home.

BY LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

HEY SAY it was the second house built in Carmel, and it can be seen rising above the familiar coastal landscape in early photographs. It is the McGowan house, purchased in 1908 by writers Grace Mc-Gowan Cooke and her sister, Alice McGowan. Designed in 1905 by architect Eugenia Maybury, it was built by Benjamin Turner, who had arrived in Carmel in 1889, after spending more than 20 years as a brick mason in San Francisco.

#266816 and insured.

The McGowan sisters named their home Locksley Hall, and it became a popular gathering place for an array of artists and other creative types in town.

When Bill Daniel saw it in the early 1960s, the house was lavender, complemented by a stone chimney painted "kidney bean red." It also didn't seem to have been lived in for years.

But he managed to look past the color clash and the waisthigh weeds in the yard to see the virtues of the two-story shingle-and-stone Tudor-style house with leaded-glass windows overlooking the white sands of Carmel Beach and the placid blue

waters of Carmel Bay.

He also started watching the house, hoping it would go on the market so it could become the place he and his family - wife, Millie, and kids, Cindy and Wayne — would call home.

Millie's father, Rawlins Tileston, lived there at the time, so he kept an eye on the house, too, waiting for the opportunity for his family to buy it as soon as it came on the market.

When the house went up for sale in 1965, Daniel paid a visit to the property, accompanied by a handyman whose services Tileston had used. The two made their way, through the weeds to the basement door. Inside, they found the refuse of a life lived and abandoned. But the visit also confirmed the potential of a house Daniel had loved for years.

"I knew, once we got the junk out and cleaned up the place, we could make a beautiful home out of it," Daniel said. "I stood in the yard with the realtor, and just as I tried to tell him I wanted to offer $34,000, a plane flew overhead." The realtor got the figure wrong, and four hours later, Daniel had a signed contract to buy it for $32,000.

Beloved home

After a dozen trucks were filled with abandoned belongings and debris, Tileston's handyman spent three months restoring the house to its original Tudor Revival elegance and making it habitable. He painted the interior in neutral tones, replaced half of the shingled roof and all interior doors, and made repairs throughout.

When that work was done, Daniel rented the house to a series of tenants over the next nine years, including Monterey's deputy chief of police, and a few families with young children.

In 1974, when Daniel retired from his career as a captain in the Navy, he and Millie moved into McGowan House. Once again, his beloved home needed help. During the next few years, they rebuilt the front porch, and reconfigured the interior to better suit their lifestyle.

privacy just a stone's throw away.

The Rodents of Unusual Size, by the way, never materialized, nor has anyone been eaten by a giant spider. But Maren's mason jar notes live on, collected into "The Book of Buried Letters," published in June of this year. At once fanciful and charming, it would make a pretty nice read. In front of one of the fireplaces, say, with a nice glass of wine.

The renovated house and its owners have played host to guests, nature retreats, deep discussions and treks through the woods, and is now listed by Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty for just shy of $8 million, represented by realtor Julie Mergen.

wand to clear the cobwebs in our cerebellum, a mop for mental dust bunnies that gather when we don't challenge ourselves with new ideas, and a reminder that we are all students in the school of lifelong learning. And it is a place to discover the things we didn't know we didn't know.

In her opening remarks at the festival, Monterey County Superintendent of Schools, Nancy Kotowski, told the audience that all the speakers were ordinary people who found their passion and pursued it.

As we mature it is easy to let our immersion into the mundane glitches of everyday life dissipate the passion that launched us into interesting and challenging careers. The festival is a place to recharge your passion battery.

That's the beauty of the Authors and Ideas Festival speakers still immersed in their passions - handing their creative ideas off to us so we can feel their passion.

Panoramic Views and Privacy in Carmel

Offering a rare combination of views and privacy in Carmel, this newly constructed 4 bedroom, 2 1/2 bath estate brings to life the artistic vision and skilled craftsmanship of a world- traveled builder and his wife. The home expresses artful European influences and occupies a hillside that showcases views of the best of the Monterey Peninsula's beauty: Pacific Ocean, Point Lobos, Carmel Mission, Carmel River Beach and the Santa Lucia Mountains. This private setting is convenient to the downtown Carmel-By-The-Sea and local shopping and services. Completed in 2018, the home has all the elements of today's lifestyles: modern kitchen and baths and spacious rooms with high ceilings, as well as some unexpected luxuries, including plaster walls, private outdoor shower and an elevator. This is a home for those who truly embrace uniqueness and the Carmel lifestyle.

COTTAGE

"We turned a back porch with a corner shower — it must have been used to rinse off sand from the beach — into our indoor utility room," Daniel said. "We turned the only downstairs bedroom into our breakfast room, and updated the kitchen. We took out a total of five walls, converting some bedrooms into sitting rooms, and we modernized the bathrooms."

The Daniels also enclosed the front porch, converting the space into a sunroom used for exercise and leisure. They lamented that their most important view of Carmel Bay had been eclipsed by a neighboring building — but "fortunately, we have beautiful views from the garden and from the upstairs bedrooms," he said.

The interior staircase that winds its way up past board-andbatten walls to the bedrooms rises under a wooden header painted with the words, "Ye canna expect to be baith [both] grand and comfortable." The Daniels, who recently celebrated 68 years of marriage and 58 years in their home, believe the McGowan sisters were responsible for the message. They also believe, in their home, one can, in fact, be both.

Like the McGowan house, simple pleasures like a cozy reading nook haven't changed much.
