Hacienda Hay & Feed closes as owners retire

By CHRIS COUNTS

SMALL BUSINESSES open and close every week on the Monterey Peninsula, and hardly anyone bats an eye. But the closure this week of Hacienda Hay and Feed in Carmel Valley has many in mourning.

And they're wondering what will become of Sidney, the shop's iconic emu.

Locals have long depended on the business — located at 7180 Carmel Valley Road — for hay and feed for their livestock, along with a variety of horse and pet supplies. They've also brought kids and grandkids there to pet an assortment of animals, which included a donkey, goats, tortoises and, of course, the emu. And they went there for conversation and camaraderie, because those commodities were always available.

Owner Chris Olow told The Pine Cone he was surprised by how big a deal Hacienda Hay and Feed's closure has become. He and his wife, Jo Ann, have owned the business since July 1999.

"I didn't realize we had this big an impact," Olow said. "I know this has been a great run — with all the well-wishes, I know we did it right."

The longtime owners of the property, the Wolter family, are selling it, but Olow said that's not the reason he's closing his business.

"We decided to retire and move to property we own in Oregon," he explained.

Olow said he and his wife — who met in kindergarten and graduated from

Coastal staff urges 'No' vote on desal

■ Reverses course on 'slant well' technology it previously demanded

By KELLY NIX

THE STAFF of the California Coastal Commission this week recommended denial of a permit for Cal Am's desalination plant — a potentially devastating blow to the private water company facing a two-year deadline to stop pumping most of the Monterey Peninsula's water supply from the Carmel River.

The staff's recommendation, which represents a reversal of long-held state guidelines for desal technology, will be considered by the coastal commission Nov. 14 when it meets in Half Moon Bay.

Despite an OK from the California Public Utilities Commission for the desal project just last year and approval by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors in July, the commission's 91-page staff report released Monday says that Cal Am's proposed plant could be harmful to the environment and might supply more water than the Monterey Peninsula needs.

"A primary concern is that the project would not conform to Coastal Act provisions regarding environmentally sensitive habitat areas," the report said.

'Sensitive species'

Specifically, the coastal commission contends that the wells Cal Am would use to supply seawater for desalination would be located in an area that supports a "number of sensitive species" that could be "adversely" affected by the wells.

In 1995, Cal Am was ordered to stop pumping a large amount of water from the Carmel River. After a long period of discussion and debate about how to replace that water, consensus settled on the possibility of a desal plant, but then Cal Am was also told it could not draw seawater for such a plant directly from the ocean. To comply with that provision, Cal Am proposed building a desal plant in Marina with source wells located near the beach. The wells would be drilled at an angle, allowing them to take in seawater that's filtered through the sandy layer beneath the ocean, rather than from the ocean itself, thereby avoiding impacts to sea life. This idea was something the coastal commission heartily endorsed, especially in an age when use of desalinated water seemed destined to become an essential part of life in California.

But now the coastal commission's staff says building wells on land is no good, either, because that can also cause environmental damage.

Council returns to rules on sidewalk vending

By MARY SCHLEY

PREDICTED TO be an epidemic but in reality just a sporadic outbreak, sidewalk selling returns to the city council's agenda at its regular meeting Nov. 5, when planning director Marc Wiener plans to recommend extending an ordinance restricting it.

A state law that took effect Jan. 1 requires cities to allow sidewalk vending and says street sellers can only be limited based on threats to the public's health, safety and welfare. While other cities have seen more sellers, from coffee carts to pegboards full of jewelry, the streets of Carmel have been virtually untouched since the council approved an "urgency ordinance" regulating street sellers Jan. 8.

Crickets

The ordinance caps the number of sidewalk vending permits at 13, three of which can only set up in Devendorf Park, and vendors can't occupy narrow pathways and sidewalks, or be near benches, public trashcans, doorways, corners and other features commonly found downtown. The law expires Dec. 20, and rather than coming up with permanent regulations for street vending now, Wiener wants it extended until Dec. 19, 2020, to "provide the city council and staff additional time to study the issue and make decisions on a future program."

Before the ink was dry on the new ordinance at the beginning of the year, applications poured in for the permits, most of which went to local restaurants and owners who have never used them, including Rich Pepe, La Bicyclette, Pescadero, Bashar Al Sneeh and Faisal Nimri (co-owners of Dametra and several other restaurants), Ryan Sanchez (Surf N Sand and Valley Hills Deli), Faris Nemri and Loie Al Nimri.

Also, Trevor Forster, a youth center board member, Fermin Sanchez (Bruno's Market) and Bowdee's Shave Ice were authorized to sell in Devendorf Park, but not on sidewalks.

The sole permit issued to someone who wasn't planning to sell food went to artist Alyson de Guigne, who was also the only person who actually set up a cart to sell products on the sidewalk. After she lost a battle with planners over whether she could add a protective cover to her cart, de Guigne hasn't been seen selling merchandise downtown in months.

SELDOM-SEEN ALBATROSS RESCUED BY SPCA

By KELLY NIX

AN ALBATROSS that was found emaciated and suffering from hypothermia at Marina State Beach last week was transferred to a center that specializes in rehabilitating injured birds and is slowly getting better.

On Oct. 22, wildlife specialists from the SPCA for Monterey County rescued the large bird, which was in critical condition. The nonprofit's wildlife rescue team gave the seriously injured Laysan albatross fluids and food, and warmed him up. As of late last week, the bird was able to eat fish but was still hypothermic and unable to regulate his body temperature.

But SPCA spokeswoman Beth Brookhouser said Monday that the nonprofit's wildlife center — which treats a variety of rescued animals — stabilized the animal and got him out of the critical phase before he was healthy enough to be transferred to International Bird Rescue in the San Francisco Bay Area for long-term care and rehabilitation.

"The bird came in very poor shape and was about as emaciated and unwell as we have seen an albatross come into care," JD Bergeron, executive director of International Bird Rescue, told The Pine Cone Wednesday. "But he's making slow progress."

Staff experts are helping the seabird eat pieces of fish and a "fish slurry," which Bergeron characterized as a fish smoothie. Yum.

New city forester hired, gets salary of $123k

By MARY SCHLEY

A CERTIFIED arborist who has worked in some aspect of horticulture since she was in high school in Colorado Springs, Colo., will become the new city forester next month. Sara Davis emerged as the top choice among 26 applicants, city administrator Chip Rerig said this week, not only for her knowledge and experience, but for her personality. She is currently the urban forestry program manager for the City and County of Denver.

"She has a very approachable personality," he said. "We've got a lot of folks here who like to share their perspective, and she seems like a good listener."

After longtime city forester Mike Branson retired in the spring, the city advertised in professional journals and

Waldo Works

When they were trying to decide which blue merle Australian shepherd to bring home from the breeder, they tossed a little ball toward the trio of puppies and chose the one who retrieved it.

Once they got home, they realized they'd chosen a little rascal who liked to play hide-and-seek in the house. And when constantly asking, "Where's the dog?" became, "Where's Waldo?" that's when they knew they'd named him.

"We had been trying to figure out a unique name for him," one of his people said. "When we had him at the dog park, we didn't want five dogs to come running when we called him. Waldo works."

Waldo and his people had been living in Washington State but moved to California and settled in Pacific Grove, where one of them works as a commercial fisherman.

Waldo became a devoted deck hand, which led to the nickname "Jig Head," referring to a lead sinker attached to a fish hook. He's that attached to his people.

Yet, as much as Waldo likes being near water, he especially likes to hang out on the boat when it's parked on the driveway.

"Waldo loves to swim," one of his people said. "As soon as he gets to the beach at Asilomar, he runs full speed into the waves. He doesn't have a problem with getting wet, but he doesn't seem to like the unstable feeling of a boat on the water."

Waldo's family describes him as energetic, mischievous, bossy and very loyal – all very Aussie qualities.

"Velcro would have been another good name for him," they said. "He doesn't leave our side."

Commission: War memorials need protection, regular maintenance

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CITY'S most visible war memorial — the stone arch on Ocean Avenue designed by architect Charles Sumner Greene nearly a century ago to honor those lost in World War I — should have the benefit of ongoing care based on a solid city plan, planning commissioners said last month, and so should all the other war memorials in town. Commissioners approved a set of policies that are set for review by the city council at its Nov. 5 meeting.

More than three years ago, the planning commission appointed a subcommittee to draft a policy, but the issue subsequently went dormant.

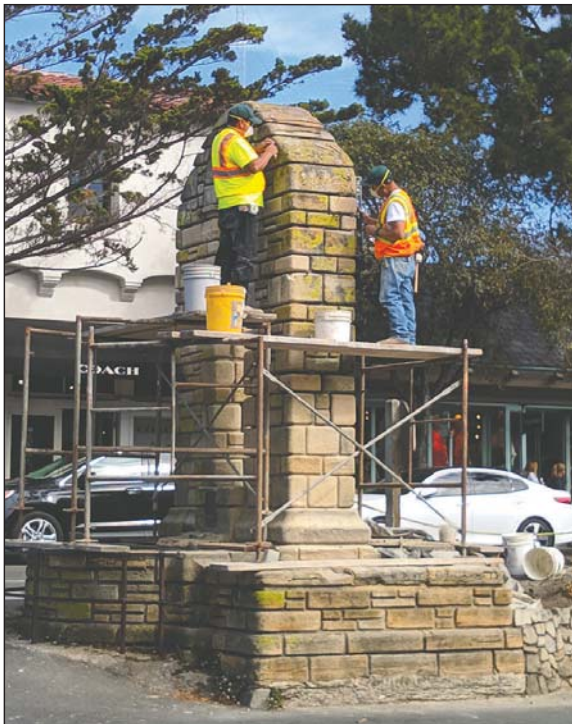

“The draft War Memorial Policy has been complete for some time now, and staff has decided to move forward with bringing this before the city council for adoption,” planning director Marc Wiener said at the commission’s Oct. 9 meeting.

The short document that seeks “to establish policies that maintain the respect and dignity of the war memorials with regards to their care, treatment and maintenance” includes rules for displaying banners near them, maintaining them, and keeping an inventory of them.

“Each war memorial stands as a reminder and recognition of the sacrifice and courage that individuals made for our country and each of us,” the policy reads. “As such, it is of the utmost importance that policies be established with regards to the treatment and care of these memorials that honor the men and women who served our country.”

According to the policies, which must be approved by the city council:

- No banners or structures shall be attached to war memorials or the surrounding structures that are part of them.
- Banners and structures cannot obscure any war memorial.
- Periodic maintenance assessments should be conducted and maintenance scheduled in a timely manner, and those tasks will be the re-

Verdicts, pleas and sentencings announced by Monterey County District Attorney Jeannine Pacioni

Aug. 30 — Arthur Bright Jr., 71, was sentenced today by Judge Andrew Liu for a cannabis cultivation operation discovered at his Carmel Valley Road home in June 2018. Bright received a three-year probation sentence and was ordered to serve 90 days jail.

The illegal cultivation was discovered by the Department of Fish and Wildlife via air. A search warrant was executed on the property and three separate grows were located. Bright claimed that he was growing medical marijuana for himself but the amount, over 500 plants, far exceeded the amount allowed. Additionally, the grow operations were drawing water from a stream via gas generator. The streams in this area flow into the Arroyo Seco, which in turn feeds the Salinas River. The Salinas River is designated critical habitat for steelhead. Cannabis plants can require six gallons of water per plant per day and the growing season usually coincides with low water season, thus further taxing this limited resource.

Commercial cannabis cultivation is highly regulated, and this includes obtaining permission from the Central Coast Regional Water Quality Board to ensure that the operation will not negatively impact the waters of the state, including ground and surface water.

Negative impact may occur from the use of fertilizers, even if organic, or any pesticides, as well as having trash and generators close to the waterway. Bright had not enrolled his cultivation operation with the water quality board.

Permits are also required if someone intends to divert or obstruct the natural flow of water or alter any stream bed. Such activity requires a Lake or Streambed Alteration Agreement available through the Department of Fish and Wildlife. Bright had not obtained such permission.

Even without environmental violations, anyone wishing to grow cannabis must make sure they understand all of the local and state requirements. Monterey County requires those growing over six plants, even if approved by a physician, to register with the county.

Sept. 9 — After a three-day jury trial, Eusebio Andrade, 29, was found guilty of carrying a loaded firearm in his car. Judge Thomas Wills presided.

On November 8, 2018, while working at a local manufacturing company, Andrade and a co-worker exchanged unpleasant words

Battery over cat with flashlight

By MARY SCHLEY

POLICE ARRESTED a San Carlos Street man for assault with a deadly weapon Friday night after he allegedly hit a woman with a metal flashlight during a fight over his letting her cat out, according to Carmel Police Cmdr. Luke Powell.

At around 8:45 p.m. Oct. 25, officers went to the home in the 24000 block of San Carlos Street at the north end of town to investigate a reported assault, arriving to find 53-year-old Graham Smithback standing in the street in front of the house. The alleged victim was inside.

The woman, whose identity was not released, told officers that during an argument, he hit her "several times about the head and shoulders with a metal flashlight," Powell said. She got away and dialed 911.

Police observed she had a bump on the back of her head and a purple welt under her left eye, and requested an ambulance to come further evaluate her injuries, according to Powell. After the crew examined her, she refused any additional medical care.

"Smithback's version of the story was slightly different," Powell continued, adding that the two were fighting because he let her cat outside. The man told officers that when they were yelling at each other, she got really close to him and "put hands" on him.

Smithback stated he was not going to let the victim attack him, "so he 'bopped' her with the flashlight in order to get her to stop," Powell said.

Police arrested Smithback and took him to Monterey County Jail on a felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon. He has since been released. According to Monterey County Superior Court records, Smithback also had a felony case in 1994 and a misdemeanor case in 2011.

Probationer jailed on warrants after yelling at restaurant worker

A MAN who got angry and "created a scene" because employees at a downtown restaurant didn't know the Monterey-Salinas Transit schedule was arrested Oct. 17 for probation violation and three outstanding warrants after one of the workers called Carmel P.D., according to Cmdr. Luke Powell.

Gregory Miller, a 55-year-old Carmel Valley resident, wasn't a customer. He walked up to the hostess and asked for help. Angered by not getting the information he wanted, he left when police were called. Shortly before 6:30 p.m., officers found him walking nearby and questioned him, Powell said. They learned he had three outstanding warrants — two misdemeanors out of Monterey County for DUI and public intoxication, and a felony out of Sacramento County for committing fraud to obtain aid. They also learned he was on probation and is not allowed to drink.

"While taking him into custody, officers searched his backpack and located a bottle of vodka," Powell said. "Officers could smell a strong odor of alcohol coming from his person, and when asked about the vodka, Miller stated he had consumed 8 ounces of alcohol, a violation of his probation."

Their trip to Monterey County Jail took an unexpected detour to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula when he complained of back pain.

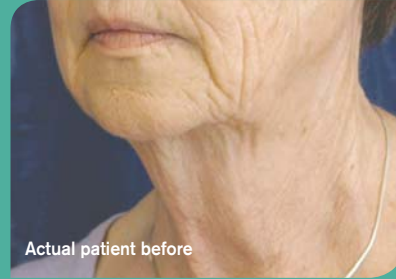

After a physician there conducted a "jail check" and concluded he was fine, Miller was booked into county jail on the warrants and violation of probation. He remained in custody Thursday.

County commission OKs hot springs makeover despite wildfire warnings

By CHRIS COUNTS

WHILE SOME contend that a plan to build a 103-room hotel and 77 timeshare units at Paraiso Hot Springs will create a wildfire hazard, the Monterey County Planning Commission voted unanimously Oct. 30 to approve it.

If all goes according to the plan, the resort will include a visitor center, restaurants, a spa, a fitness and wellness center, a culinary training center, an outdoor amphitheater and much more.

Because the resort is located in a box canyon with dense and dry vegetation, much of the testimony at this week's hearing focused on its ability to protect workers, guests and structures from a fire.

Consultant Michael Huff defended the project's fire protection plan, which includes having a fire engine onsite, along with a safety coordinator and staff trained in responding to emergencies.

"Just because a site might be in a high fire severity zone, it does not mean that you can't build there," Huff told the planning commission. "It means you have to do additional things to build there."

The fire protection plan also includes hydrants, three onsite wells and storage tanks, hoses, alarms, a fire pump and extinguishers — as well as widening an existing road to 20 feet, doing extensive brush clearance, and relying on firefighters from Soledad, who could reach the resort in a little more than 15 minutes.

When asked by planning commissioner Martha Diehl if public safety electricity shutoffs — suddenly a very hot topic in California — would hinder the resort's ability to contend with a fire, Huff said it wouldn't because there will be a backup power supply.

Second road needed?

But David Fulcher of Cal Fire warned that the resort only has one way in and out, and needs a second route for people to flee a fire. He suggested that the builder should be required to create such a road or explain why he doesn't need one.

"Until the developer puts in a secondary ingress and egress, I can't support this," Fulcher said. "And if there's not a factual basis for not putting it in, the developer has to give us a reason."

Two representatives of Land Watch Monterey County spoke out against the project, including executive director Mike DeLapa, who warned the fire risk is going to get much worse in the coming years. He urged the planning commission to downsize the project to better "protect visitors and workers."

"Things are getting hotter and drier," DeLapa said. "It's getting more difficult to support safe building in rural areas. Climate change means more fires."

Also speaking out at the hearing were members of the Alliance of Monterey Area Preservationists, who argued the builder should pay a big price for illegally

New urgent care clinics will include one at Carmel Rancho in 2020

By KELLY NIX

TO GIVE people without regular doctors an option besides going to its emergency room at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, Montage Health announced this week it's opening three new urgent care centers, including one in Carmel Rancho in 2020.

Montage Health, community hospital's parent company, will open its first urgent care facility at the site of Monterey's old rollerskating rink in mid-December, with a similar clinic in Marina in early 2020 and another in mid-2020 on Carmel Rancho Boulevard, the former location of Do Re Mi Music, which closed last summer.

Montage Health vice president Cynthia Peck told The Pine Cone that the centers — which Montage said would allow most patients to get in and out within 30 minutes — are needed because of the extraordinary number of people who visit CHOMP's emergency room.

"Today, approximately 20,000 people come to our emergency department every year for conditions that can easily be treated in a doctor's office or an urgent care clinic," Peck told The Pine Cone. "But there aren't enough doctors available in our community and patients at local urgent care centers frequently experience very long waits."

'Asked us to solve problems'

The clinics will allow patients to make online reservations but will also take in walk-ins without appointments. Lab work and X-rays will be done on site and a "clinical concierge" will help patients during their visit, Montage said. The clinics will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., seven days per week, 365 days per year. People who need urgent care overnight will still have to go to the emergency room.

Peck said that the patients Montage surveyed cited long wait times, operating hours and other concerns as things they'd like to see changed.

"They asked us to solve those problems," Peck said, "so we have re-engineered the urgent-care experience from the ground up, making it smarter, faster, and more patientcused."

The urgent care clinics, which the company calls "MoGo" are the first of their kind for Montage. Though the company owns a small stake in Monterey Bay Urgent Care near Fisherman's Wharf, the clinic is closing at the end of December.

The three new centers will accept "most insurance" plans, and there will be flat-fee pricing for those who aren't covered.

"While we have not yet set the actual charge for a MoGo visit, it will be a small fraction of what it costs to have the same condition treated in the emergency department, and it will be competitive with other area urgent care centers," Peck said.

Montage will publish the fees on its website for patients to find out "in advance what their cost will be, no matter what they need during their visit," Peck said. The fee will include lab tests, X-rays, things like crutches and splints, and medications for most conditions.

Braxton Stuntz Scholarship announced

By MARY SCHLEY

COMMUNITY HOSPITAL is launching a new scholarship in memory of Carmel resident Braxton Stuntz, the Stevenson School grad who died in January while showing Garrapata Beach to some college friends, according to his mom, nurse Ruth Baltés. "CHOMP just announced the Braxton Stuntz Memorial Scholarship tonight with rounds of applause and tears at their staff meeting at Embassy Suites," she said last Thursday night. "We are so overwhelmed and honored." Baltés' husband, Dr. Mike Stutz, is a CHOMP surgeon who often brought their son to work, and Braxton was planning to become a doctor.

Dr. Matt Fritsch, an anesthesiologist at Community Hospital, said the medical executive committee and top administrators decided to add the scholarship. CHOMP already offers scholarships ranging from $100 to $2,000 to students who have a parent or guardian on the medical staff. After speaking with Braxton's parents, Fritsch said, they decided that starting next year, one of the students will also be named a Braxton Stuntz Memorial Scholar.

While the criteria haven't been finalized, he said, they "are most likely very heavily weighted to volunteerism, citizenship and selfless giving of one's time, rather than gifts of money or other goods." Braxton was devoted to helping people, including assisting his father on medical missions at a children's hospital in Cambodia and, without his parents' knowledge, buying food and supplies to donate to the homeless at Christmastime.

"Also, academic performance is considered very minimally compared to acts of caring for other people," Fritsch said. "The more direct human-to-human contact to learn what can most help another person is what is valued most highly here." Fritsch said he plans to donate money in Braxton's honor and encouraged others to do the same.

Police station redo, development on Dolores Street and vacation rentals on council agendas

By MARY SCHLEY

WHEN THE city council holds back-to-back meetings at 4:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 4-5, it will get an update on the remodel of the police station and hear proposed changes to the zoning code and residential design guidelines, as well as discuss whether to let a developer put a garage ramp across a sidewalk, whether to approve an ordinance controlling short-term rentals downtown, and whether to allow a Dolores skincare store to remain open, among several other items of public business.

After a closed session to discuss a few legal issues, including existing lawsuits and the ongoing question of who might move into the aging Flanders Mansion and fix it up in exchange for years of free rent, the council will open the public meeting, set for 4:30 p.m., to talk about amendments to the residential zoning code and design guidelines, including providing incentives for people to retain their existing houses rather than tearing them down and building new ones, no longer counting small sheds when calculating the total floor area of buildings on a lot, limiting wood-burning fireplaces to one per house, allowing garbage enclosures in side or front setbacks, and authorizing "cottage food operations" in the residential districts, since state law requires it, among many other changes.

Police station update

In March 2019, the city council voted to vastly scale back a planned remodel of the police station at Junipero and Fourth that would have expanded the 52-year-old building on two sides and provided more space for officers, evidence, dispatch, the emergency operations center and other uses. Since then, Kasavan Architects redrew the plans, which now call for minor exterior changes and more extensive work inside. City staff reviewed them and requested changes, and the drawings are now complete, according to public works director Bob Harary's report. He discourages the council from making any changes, since that could be expensive and lead to more delays, and says changes should definitely not be made once work is underway, since doing so would be even more costly.

Dolores project

A developer's proposal to build underground parking, condos and apartments on what is now the parking lot next to the Seventh & Dolores Steakhouse, and to turn the small building there into a market, includes a lift that would provide access to the garage without cutting a driveway into the sidewalk and having a steep ramp. But since that would mean installing the lift, which would have gates on each side that would rise when a car enters or exits, on a public sidewalk, the council needs to OK it. The plans also call for balconies that would extend into the right of way, too, even though they would be far above the ground. The planning commission supported the design concept and the encroachments, but planning director Marc Wiener is recommending denial.

Also on Monday, the council will receive a report on Sunset Center and consider a Mills Act Contract, which provides financial incentives for historic preservation of a home by lowering taxes on the property. Senior planner Marnie Waffle is rec-

Entries sought for selfie mural contest

By MARY SCHLEY

THE CITY might attract more visitors (and their money) if they have an eye-catching mural to pose in front of for selfies that they would then share with friends and strangers through social media, according to Amy Herzog, executive director of Visit Carmel, the taxpayer-funded nonprofit tasked with marketing the town to travelers. A contest starting Friday and running through the end of the year will give local artists the opportunity to design and hang a temporary mural on a large blank wall on the west side of Mission south of Sixth for just that purpose.

Herzog brought the concept to the city a few months ago, mentioning it toward the end of a lengthy presentation about Visit Carmel to the community activities commission. She said the idea dawned on her when she and city administrator Chip Rerig, who represents the city on the organization's board of directors, were walking around town, and she noticed people stopping in the middle of the crosswalk at Ocean and Junipero to pose for photos with the brown wood Carmel-by-the-Sea sign in the median.

Enthusiastic response

"That's not necessarily safe and also not necessarily representative," she said at the June 11 meeting. "If that's what they're posting on social media, is there a way where we can create something that's a little more bold and modern and graphic and exciting that shows us as the arts destination we are? Then we can rely on other people here to tell our story for us."

The board discussed the concept and where a mural could go, and restaurateur Rich Pepe, also on the board, approached property owner Phil Coniglio about using the wall at Mission and Sixth, she said, and received an enthusiastic response.

Commissioners were similarly enthusiastic and discussed the concept briefly, calling it "brilliant," and "very fun." Donna Jett said it was "the best idea I've heard all year," and Nancy Whitman commented, "It should have been done a long time ago."

Community activities director Ashlee Wright told commissioners the mural would be temporary so that perhaps more than one artist in the city could have a crack at it, and so that no one will be stuck with its maintenance and upkeep over the long term. She also said the planning department and the commission would weigh in again before anything is hung.

The rules

This week, Herzog announced the contest and its rules. "Visit Carmel is seeking a local artist to create an eye-catching mural that is modern, bold, fresh, highly photographable and unmistakably 'Carmel-by-the-Sea,'" she said. Only artists who create or sell their work in the city and/or who are members of the Carmel Art Association can apply, and the winner will get a $500 prize and up to $1,000 in reimbursement for materials. The piece should "communicate the concepts of Visit, Live and Love Carmel-by-the-Sea," and would cover a wall measuring 40 feet wide and a bit over 11 feet high.

In January 2020, a committee of Visit Carmel board members will review the entries and select the top three, which will then be subjected to a popularity contest through social media. The committee will still make the final selection, however. No one knows how long the piece will hang on the wall.

The rules explain that the city has final say and might request changes to the design, that the contest might not even yield a winner at all, and that "the artist waives right to ownership of the mural, and it can be removed or painted over at any time at the discretion of the sponsor, building owner, or the City of Carmel." PACIFIC GROVE TO SPEND BIG BUCKS TO MAKE ICE PLANT PRETTY AGAIN

By KELLY NIX

IT MAY be the “face of Pacific Grove,” but it needs a facelift that won’t come cheap.

On Wednesday, the P.G. City Council voted 7-0 to pay a consultant more than $70,000 to develop a plan that will ensure that the so-called “magic carpet” that blooms along the city’s picturesque waterfront every year will be as stunning as it used to be. It is unknown how much it will cost to implement the plan.

The vibrant drosanthemum floribundum ice plant that blankets Perkins Park has long dazzled residents and visitors, but the purple blooms have become more sparse in recent years due to drought, invasive plants, rodents and the reduction in the use of traditional herbicides, according to the city.

“I have been pulling weeds in Perkins Park for 10 years with not a whole lot of success,” councilwoman Cynthia Garfield said of her work to protect the perennial plant, which is native to South Africa.

While Garfield said efforts to plant more vegetation at Perkins Park have helped, they have brought more weeding challenges. The hope is that the plan will show how to get “this iconic face of Pacific Grove to look the way it’s supposed to,” she said.

The consultant the city hired, Santa Cruz-based Ecological Concerns, Inc., has proposed focusing on vegetation management from Lovers Point about three-quarters of a mile to Esplanade Street. The city will pay the company $71,815, plus a 15 percent contingency for the work.

Overcoming neglect

The Perkins Park plan will “include detailed conditions assessments, recommended maintenance activities for the next five years, plans and specifications for implementation, and yearly cost estimates for recommended maintenance activities,” a report to the city council said.

“I wish it didn’t cost so much, but that’s what it is,” Garfield said of the city’s contract with the consultant. Resident Lisa Ciani said that while regular maintenance and volunteer weed-pulling efforts are helping the ice plant, it will “take some time to overcome the years of neglect compounded by drought and gophers.”

“For the Perkins Park Restoration plan, we acknowledge that we will not be redesigning this park, but will be creating a vegetation management plan which maintains an eye for the park cohesion and the user experience,” according to Ecological Concerns, Inc.’s proposal to the city.

The company said it would work in coordination with the consultant for the city’s shoreline management plan — a separate proposal that “will assess ways to provide continuous recreation trail access and protect vital, city-owned infrastructure along the shoreline well into the future while protecting and enhancing the coast’s natural and cultural resources.”

In July 2017, the California Coastal Commission approved the repair of a failed portion of seawall on condition that the city develop a shoreline plan. The council Wednesday received a brief update on that effort, which is on track to be completed before July 20, 2020.

Big Sur road still needs work, but U.S. taxpayers help with $1.6 million

By CHRIS COUNTS

THE UPPER portion of Palo Colorado Road is still closed after suffering major storm damage in 2017 — and it's uncertain when it will be fixed — but Monterey County just received a $1.6 million taxpayer grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency last week that will help pay for it.

Congressman Jimmy Panetta said he supports spending money on making Monterey County's roads more stable and secure.

"I will continue to engage with FEMA officials to ensure not only that our communities have the financing they need for storm repairs, but that we make federal investments in resilient infrastructure so that they are protected against future storms," he said.

Congressman praises workers

Panetta also complimented local workers who helped fix the lower portion of the same road, which was damaged from the same storms.

"When this road was completely washed out, our local crews got to work," the congressman said. "The repairs made last year got the road back into shape for the many people who rely on it to safely travel to work and school."

The 8-mile route, which travels southeast from Highway 1 to Botchers Gap, provides access to an assortment of distant neighborhoods named after their geographical features, such as Green Ridge, Long Ridge and Upper Rocky Creek.

So far, according to Monterey County spokesperson Maia Carroll, the county has spent more than $6 million to repair the parts of the road. The total cost of repairing the entire road is estimated to exceed $19 million.

The damage came during a wet winter that followed the 2016 Soberanes Fire, which destroyed 57 homes — mostly in the Palo Colorado area — and burned more than not become an enclave just for billionaires. That's part of the reason I support the Pure Water Monterey Expansion. PWM water will cost only 25 to 30 percent as much per acre-foot as Cal Am's desal.

With many friends and family who are business people, I'm a fan of small business, but not biased against government. The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's report contains data and very careful reasoning, concluding that the PWM expansion can provide enough water for residential, business, housing, and development uses and growth, including new businesses, new residents, affordable housing, renovations and upgrades. The PWM expansion's use of some of the winter stormwater that currently flows to the ocean (global warming is already producing more intense winter storms) means it will also be able to store ample water to improve groundwater basins and protect us from future drought.

If we eventually need a desal plant, the PWM expansion gives us plenty of time to plan a more environmentally responsible, nonprofit project that does not endanger Marina's groundwater and can serve the entire region more affordably.

Marli Melton, Carmel Valley

'Don't hold your breath'

Dear Editor,

Once again the Pine Cone misstates the facts in their piece entitled "Anti-Cal Am group asks state board to block desal plant." The Pine Cone just loves to belittle what they derogatorily characterize as "activists" and of course any astute reader of the typical Pine Cone article regarding water, (and other issues), knows very well how their so-called journalists like to present their own alternative 'facts' to uninformed readers. The simple truth is, the 28 elected officials in question wrote and signed their own letter to the California Coastal Commission, not one that was penned by public advocacy group Public Water Now. But, as usual, The Pine Cone just invents their own version of reality and expects the gullible reader to adopt it as is. Apparently, The Pine Cone brain trust regards their readers as essentially a bunch of idiots incapable of independent thought. But does anyone think they will offer a retraction — don't hold your breath on that one.

Larry Parrish, Carmel Valley

Publishing junk

Dear Editor,

I wasn't going to respond to the letter to the editor from James King in your Oct. 18 edition, but it has been bothering me ever since I read it for two reasons. One, the letter in itself is what is wrong with society today. Instead of addressing the problem: lack of effort to address the invasion of robocalls and the problem of the inaccessibility of a public servant from a constituent, James King instead takes the low road and uses a community's newspaper to malign a public servant.

Two, who is he to malign Jimmy Panetta, who paid his way through college and law school, who served this community as a gang prosecutor, who volunteered to serve in our military in combat operations in Afghanistan and decorated for his actions in combat, who volunteered with me on several nonprofit boards in our community, and is now continuing to serve me and my community? Thank you, Jimmy, for stepping up to serve once again as our congressman. I'm embarrassed that people continue to stoop so low as to belittle our leaders and military veterans in public and ashamed that The Carmel Pine Cone would stoop even lower and publish this kind of junk.

'Something productive for a change'

Dear Editor,
The Trump Administration has negotiated a treaty to replace the outdated NAFTA; it is called the USMCA or U.S. Mexico, Canada trade agreement. Economists predict that this agreement would add at least .5 percent to our gross domestic product. The USMCA has broad support in the business and labor communities but must be ratified by first the House and then the Senate. President Trump has repeatedly asked the House to act on this treaty. Mexico has already ratified the USMCA, but the House has not seen fit to deal with the issue.

I called Congressman Jimmy Panetta's D.C. office to see why the House has not acted. In reply, I got a letter from Panetta which stated, in part, "to date the Administration has not yet delivered the agreement to Congress for consideration and debate." This statement is an outright lie. I called D.C. again and told Panetta's office I wanted a retraction of their statement or I would go to the media; I got a quick phone call back from a Mark Denham who said that Congress was negotiating for some changes in the agreement. I pointed out to Mr. Denham that Mexico had already ratified the agreement and asked how Congress could ask for a change in terms if they had not received the proposed agreement as stated in the letter. Mr. Denham's response was to stonewall.

The problem is, of course, that the Democrats are so consumed with the impeachment issue and their hatred of the president that Nancy Pelosi has no time or inclination to deal with issues that would benefit the country.

Maybe The Pine Cone can persuade Panetta and his boss Pelosi to do something productive for a change.

'Excellent and logical'

Dear Editor,
Please pay no attention to the advice from the Oct. 11 letter writer Christine Hoberg.
Keep writing your excellent, logical, sensible and high-brow editorials.
I start reading always from your editorial.
There are enough newspapers at a lower intellectual level, so everybody has a chance to choose whatever they want.

You have even more license than other editors to print whatever you consider appropriate because the paper is free. So there is no argument that she may request anything because she pays for it.

And yes, we already have enough one-sided opinions and there is a chorus of liberal views available, so simply for our sanity, it is necessary to be exposed to opposing views.

OUTDOOR PUBLIC ART MURAL CONTEST

For more than a century, the resplendent beauty of Carmel-by-the-Sea has inspired artists of all kinds. Their work, in turn, has drawn countless visitors to the white sands of Carmel Beach and to our charming village in the forest.

To both honor our artistic heritage as well as provide a safe and accessible spot for visitors to take photos, Visit Carmel is sponsoring the creation of a new temporary outdoor public art mural.

Visit Carmel is seeking a local artist to create an eye-catching mural that is modern, bold, fresh, highly photographable, and unmistakably "Carmel-by-the-Sea."

For details and to enter, please visit CarmelCalifornia.com/MuralContest

Submission period opens November 1, 2019 and closes December 31, 2019.

Open to all graphic artists who reside or own a gallery in Carmel-by-the-Sea (93921), and/or are a member of the Carmel Art Association.

$500 cash prize will be provided to the winner, with up to $1,000 for expenses.

Thousands vie for cash prizes in juried photography contest

TO COME up with 45 finalists, the judge of the Center for Photographic Art's 2019 International Juried Exhibition, Paula Tognarelli, looked at more than 2,300 submissions from as far away as Japan. The winners will be announced Saturday, Nov.

2, at 5 p.m., when the nonprofit gallery hosts an opening reception.

"It's a really interesting mix of photographs," executive director Ann Jastrab told The Pine Cone. "The work comes from all over world. There's a lot of abstract work, work done in early photographic processes like cyanotypes and gum bichromates, and some interesting still lifes and collages."

Besides cash prizes for the best photographs, one of the winners will be awarded a solo exhibit at the Griffin Museum of Photography in Boston, where Tognarelli works as its executive director. Jastrab called Tognarelli a pioneer in digital printing. "She's juried hundreds, if not thousands, of shows," she added. The Center for Photographic Art's gal-

Carol Cortright Keaton

November 1, 2004

Death is nothing at all.
 It does not count.
 I have only slipped away into the next room.
 Nothing has happened.

Everything remains exactly as it was.
 I am I, and you are you, and the old life that we lived so fondly together is untouched, unchanged.
 Whatever we were to each other, that we are still.

Call me by the old familiar name.
 Speak of me in the easy way which you always used.
 Put no difference into your tone.
 Wear no forced air of solemnity or sorrow.

Laugh as we always laughed at the little jokes that we enjoyed together.
 Play, smile, think of me, pray for me.
 Let my name be ever the household word that it always was.
 Let it be spoken without an effort, without the ghost of a shadow upon it.

Life means all that it ever meant.
 It is the same as it ever was.
 There is absolute and unbroken continuity.
 What is this death but a negligible accident?

Why should I be out of mind because I am out of sight?
 I am but waiting for you, for an interval, somewhere very near,
 just round the corner.

All is well.
 Nothing is hurt, nothing is lost.
 One brief moment and all will be as it was before.
 How we shall laugh at the trouble of parting when we meet again!

James Wayne Pond

February 20, 1949 — August 8, 2019
 Carmel-by-the-Sea, California

James Pond was born in Cody, Wyoming, the sixth of eight children of Irene Felsheim Pond and Dean H. Pond, Sr. He died at the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula of heart and kidney problems that afflicted other family members. Will Taylor, his domestic partner of twenty-seven years, had died in November, 2018.

After high school and studies at St. Meinrad in Indiana, James joined the Air Force, serving in Greenland and New Zealand. He worked as a driver and transportation manager in Montana and Wyoming before becoming a rehabilitation counsellor in Reno, Nevada, and a Trager bodywork practitioner. With Will he lived in San Francisco and Carmel, and enjoyed a mountain cabin in Portola, California where he gardened for health and for his expert cooking and gave sessions of the super-gentle Trager bodywork, performed in high altitude sunshine and pine breezes.

When their partnership was first formed, Will and James organized "a gathering of friends we never met" to introduce their people to each other. They traveled often to reconnect with Will's friends from youthful years in Germany, Turkey, and NYC. In recent years James made cruise trips on the Danube, and on the Maine coast for lobster. When effects of diabetes reduced his mobility, he focused his energy on good food, for which he could always provide recommendations, and on bridge, becoming a Life Master of the American Contract Bridge League.

Friends were the keynote of James's life. "The most sensitive man," one friend recalled him, "so kind to his older friends" said another; others noted how he "was always there" for people at key moments in their lives. He greatly enjoyed his fiftieth high school reunion in Cody in 2017. After Will's passing, an old Cody friend John Beck came to live with James in Carmel. James's heart was in the mountain West, especially Cody and Portola, and it was warmed in the last seven years of his life by a beautiful and loving rescue dog named Stella. Their ashes will be buried in Cody.

James was preceded in death by his parents and three siblings, Dean Pond, Jr., Patricia English, and Paula Chamberlain. He is survived by older brother Willard (Obie) Pond of Washington state, sisters Peg Pond Paul (husband George), Pamela I. Briggs, and Phyllis M. Claudson (husband Earl), of Cody, many cousins, nephews, and nieces, and by Will's brother Claxton and his wife Kim, and children Austin, Llama, and Tully.

Saturday, November 16, from 3-6pm, an open house will be held for friends to remember James, at Camino Real 3SE of 12th, Carmel. RSVP optional to (831)-241-3473.

When the council last reviewed its sidewalk vending law in February, members discussed requiring sellers to go out and set up their carts a certain number of days per month or year. They also decided the permits should expire when the ordinance does. Wiener is recommending the time requirement be put off until a permanent law is adopted and that the issued permits remain valid until the extended ordinance expires a little over 13 months from now, assuming the council does what he wants.

And in the meantime, Wiener said, the council should schedule a time to talk about sidewalk vending, including determining how to equitably issue permits in the future and deciding whether vendors should be required to go out and do business on the sidewalks of Carmel.

The council meets in city hall on Monte Verde south of Ocean at 4:30 p.m.

Alyson de Guigne is the only one of 13 permit holders to actually go out and sell on the sidewalk. The city council is set to decide what should happen to those permits when it meets next week.

struggling and needs help getting its strength back," he said. "We are not sure when it might be released."

The albatross also had some lesions on its feet which the bird rescue center is treating to prevent infection.

The bird — which has a wingspan of more than 6 feet — may be the first of its kind to have been rescued by the SPCA for Monterey County.

"While we occasionally see black-footed albatross, we don't have records of a rescued Laysan albatross," Brookhouser said. "Laysan albatross are pelagic birds, which means they live their lives at sea except while nesting."

While it was under the SPCA's care, wildlife center staff used a baby monitor to observe the bird so it wouldn't be stressed since they're afraid of humans. SPCA employees were able to track his progress and watch him eat without the bird hearing or seeing them.

Laysan albatross range across the northern Pacific Ocean from about the latitude of Costa Rica to the Aleutian Islands and southern Bering Sea.

CARLOS OLVERA CHAVEZ

December 19, 1953 – August 31, 2019

On the 31st of August, Carlos conceded defeat in his 18-month battle with Grade 4 Glioblastoma. He passed at home, his favorite place to be, surrounded by his loving family.

Born December 19, 1953 to Dr. Horacio Olvera Huerta and Celia Chavez de Olvera in Colonia Coyoacan, Mexico City, he was blessed with an amazing family who nurtured their children's love of music, art, history, literature, science, and world travel. His father was the Under Secretary of Health and Welfare for Mexico. He was also a writer and poet. He was Carlos's greatest inspiration. Carlos carried on his legacy in his warmth, generosity, intelligence, humor and culture.

In the summer of 1976, in the midst of this bucolic upbringing, a "Gringa" showed up and swept Carlos into a whirlwind of culture clash and new experiences. After earning a bachelor's degree in Business Administration from La Universidad La Salle in Mexico City, Carlos and Melissa were married in his parent's home Christmas Eve of 1977. Then they were off to England where Carlos did graduate studies in Public Health Administration at Aston University. They spent the next 42 years savoring new adventures and continuing to grow and learn together while raising a family. And there was always music! Carlos's passion for music permeated family life.

After 21 years with the City of Pacific Grove, Carlos retired as Administrative Services Director. A highlight of this experience was the lifelong friendships he formed. Although the Olvera family eventually left Pacific Grove and followed the sun to Carmel Valley, Carlos still made it back to PG twice a week to meet friends and play his favorite golf course.

The births of Carlos's children and granddaughters were the most joyful moments of his life. He was the center of their universe. We called him the baby whisperer.

Carlos leaves behind a heartbroken family, his wife, Melissa Manke de Olvera, his three beloved children, Gretchen Olvera Robinson (Jesse) of Pacific Grove, Eben Olvera (Elizabeth) of San Jose and Penelope Olvera of Carmel Valley, his younger brother, Dr. Arturo Olvera Chavez of Mexico City and the lights of his life, his three granddaughters, Eloise and Saoirse Robinson and Baby Elena Olvera. Carlos was preceded in death by his parents and older brother, Dr. Raul Olvera Chavez.

Memorial contributions in Carlos's honor may be made to some of his favorite places: the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco (legionofhonor.famsf.org), Monterey Peninsula College Music Department or, to help the battle against this relentless disease, to UCSF (Glioblastoma research).

Frances Camille Maysonave

1924 ❖ 2019

Frances Camille Maysonave was born October 19, 1924, in Charleston, South Carolina, to Frances and Emile Passailaigue. When she was 12, she moved with her parents and brother, Emile, to Carmel to live with her Aunt Marie Gordon, who built the seventh home in Carmel, Casa del Mar Azul, which still stands on San Antonio.

Fran attended Sunset School and served as the first "Queen of the Carmel Mission." A member of one of the first graduating classes of Carmel High School ('43) she sang soprano at the Bach Music Festival and worked at Fortier's Drug Store, where she served Clark Gable and Carole Lombard.

Fran met Captain René Maysonave, serving in the 7th Division at Fort Ord, at a dance. When he asked to see her again, she told him that he could find her at the Carmel Mission, singing in the choir on Sundays. They married at the Mission in 1946. René's Army career meant a life of travel, first to Baltimore, where they welcomed their firstborn, Camille (1950), then to Munich, Germany, where Nanette (1951) was born. Postings followed at Fort Lee and Quantico, Virginia, Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas, and Falls Church, Virginia.

René was assigned to Tehran, Iran, in 1960, where Fran began her decades-long volunteer work for the American Red Cross. In 1962, they were transferred to Fort Mason in San Francisco, where Desirée (DeeDee) was born in 1965. Following René's Korean tour, he was reassigned to the Joint Chiefs of Staff at the Pentagon. The family joined him in Falls Church, Virginia.

In 1970, with their older daughters in college and the completion of René's tour of duty in Vietnam, René retired and they settled in Pebble Beach. René and Fran joined The Retired Officers Association and The Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club, where Fran was active with the Spinnakers. She also enjoyed swimming, painting watercolors, reading, knitting and travels to Ireland, Spain, Canada, and Hawaii.

Camille and Nan eventually settled in the Monterey Peninsula. Nan, working in marketing at The Monterey County Herald, married Nick Chiulos. Camille, an Army nurse, married Heinz Brinks and had three daughters, Aimée, Kate and Elisabeth.

In 1987, René passed away after a brief illness. Desirée married Nick Lerissa in 1994 and had three daughters, Belle, Ella and Renée.

In 2007, after Nanette was diagnosed with cancer, Fran was a fixture at her bedside, a great source of comfort to her daughter, who passed away quickly. Fran's brother, Emile Passailaigue, died the following year. She moved into Forest Hill Manor, Pacific Grove, where she was loved and well-cared for, and family and friends visited often.

Fran is survived by Camille and Desirée, their daughters, and eight great-grandchildren, Camille, Tristan, Jude, Alex, Colette, Luke, Nathan and Nanette.

Services for Frances Maysonave are scheduled for Monday, November 4, at 9:30 a.m., at San Carlos Cathedral (500 Church St., Monterey), followed by a reception in the Parish Hall.

Carmel High School together in 1974 — will soon be living in a house they own in the high desert north of Bend. They previously lived in the area for four years and love that part of the country. “We feel like we’re going back home,” he said.

Emu and others find new homes

So what’s going to happen to the many animals that once inhabited the petting zoo? They’ve all found new homes, including the emu, who came to Hacienda Hay and Feed as a chick — and is now 17.

“Sidney has gone to a farm in Aromas where they raise emus,” Olow reported. “Oriole the pig is going to live with his brother, Sulu, his sister, Lucy, and friend, Carnita, on Schulte Road.”

The goats and tortoises, meanwhile, have found homes in the Jamesburg area.

Lifelong resident Doug Steiny, who as a realtor is selling the property — which is in escrow — described the business as “a gathering spot since the Wolters opened it.”

“People go by to pick up hay and stay for an hour,” he explained. “It’s such an integral part of our community.”

While the place has a rich history, Steiny said the Olow’s made it extra special.

“They’re just really nice people,” he said. “They’re completely selfless — they basically would do anything for anybody.”

Another local, Iris McGilloway, said she will miss Hacienda Hay and Feed and its owners. She described the business “as her daughter’s favorite place to go.”

“I love Chris and Jo Ann,” McGilloway posted on social media. “They are like family.”

But she wonders where residents will get the products Hacienda Hay and Feed once offered.

“Where the heck is everyone supposed to get hay and feed and all the things from now on,” she asked. “This is a really big change in a way of life here.”

Picking up the slack

Thankfully, another local business is picking up at least some of the slack. “We will be carrying some of their products, including wild bird seed, chicken feed, and treats and supplements for horses,” said Sarah Adams, the owner of the Raw Connection, which is located less than four miles away in the Carmel Rancho shopping center.

On the internet, numerous comments about the closing include the concern that another wine tasting room will set up shop on the site, but so far, there’s no evidence of such a venture. Steiny said he can’t speak for the new owners, but he did say, “there is a fair amount of talk” about keeping its use “the same or similar” to what’s previously been located there.

Olow said the building Hacienda Hay and Feed occupied was built in the 1930s. For many years, Wolter’s Hacienda Market operated on the site.

elsewhere for someone to replace him and received more than two dozen applications. Rerig and others in city hall culled the list to a handful who were subjected to panel interviews and one-on-one talks.

The individual interviews “are less structured and a little more of a conversation, and that’s where you really hit on fit,” he said. “It’s one thing if someone knows the lifespan of a redwood tree, but it’s another when it comes to how they’re going to build relationships with the development community and the CRA, and when someone disagrees with your planting a tree in front of their house or your decision to refuse to remove one.”

Sara Davis

$2.6 million budget

According to Davis’ resume, she graduated from UC Davis with a Bachelor of Science degree in environmental horticulture and urban forestry in 2001 and has been involved in gardening, horticulture and tree cultivation and care since she was in high school. At Davis, she was a student gardener in 2000 and an intern in the U.S. Forest Service Center for Urban Forestry Research in 2001.

After stints in the private sector, including as a landscape manager for a property care company and as a department supervisor at Home Depot, Davis first went to work for the City and County of Denver in 2005 as a gardening technician in charge of coordinating and training master gardeners throughout the city in cooperation with the Colorado State University Extension.

From there, she oversaw a million-tree planting initiative by handling outreach, social media, site analysis, mapping, coordination, planning and implementation.

Now, she manages a half-dozen people and a $2.6 million budget, and oversees annual outreach efforts and campaigns on behalf of her department. She also supervises a program that plants 3,000 trees in the public right of way every year, collects and analyzes data, and works on relationships with the construction community, nonprofits and other government agencies, among many other duties.

Peninsula’s strong pull

In her letter to the city, Davis said she often visited Carmel with her parents when she was a child, and fell “in love with the tide pools, large trees and quirks of the area.”

“I have worked in different facets of the green industry from my first high school job at a local garden center to my current position running one of the largest and most progressive urban forestry programs in the nation,” she said. Davis hadn’t been hunting for a job when she came across the vacancy for city forester here, “but the idea of working and living on the Monterey Peninsula has changed my mind,” she wrote.

In running her department, she said planning and policy work have played a large part.

“I hold a core value that the community must participate in guiding the work of a municipal government, and public involvement is key,” said Davis, who has overseen a lot of strategic planning in climate action and adaptation, environmental hazard mitigation and other areas.

Rerig said he found Davis to have “a very even temperament.”

“I was looking for someone who has the necessary skills and abilities — is an arborist and has experience in an urbanized forest, and who is good with people,” he said. “I think she’s really going to fit the bill. She’s a personable person.”

In her new position, Davis will receive an annual salary of $123,240 plus benefits and retirement contributions.

Talk on brain health in late adulthood

THE NEXT Community Night with the Library will feature Dr. Quinn Kennedy presenting, “Cognitive Reserve: Maintaining Cognitive Function into Late Adulthood” Wednesday, Nov. 6, at 7 p.m. in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center on Mission at Ninth.

During the free talk, Kennedy, who holds advanced degrees in psychology and cognitive aging from Stanford University, will describe research indicating that “cognitive reserve” can help delay age-related declines in cognitive function and the onset of dementia symptoms. She will also offer advice on everyday activities that can help build cognitive reserve and will provide information about free resources regarding cognitive aging.

Kennedy will draw on her 20-plus years of researching and investigating factors that affect older adults’ decision making and mental performance. Her work has been published in numerous scientific journals and has been featured on numerous media outlets. For more information, visit www.carmelpubliclibraryfoundation.org.

When the state's Public Utilities Commission OK'd the desal plant in September 2018, it concluded the Monterey Peninsula needed 14,000 acre-feet of water per year — including a small amount for infill development and other new uses.

But the coastal commission said that's not the case now. "Since the CPUC's review and decision, new information about water supplies and demands shows that there is less need for water from new sources than previously determined," the staff report says.

The coastal commission's findings rely heavily on a report Monterey Peninsula Water Management District general manager Dave Stoldt released in September that says Pure Water Monterey — a project to purify sewage and other contaminated water — could supply enough water to the Peninsula for decades to come, with no ocean desalination needed.

Pure Water Monterey, if expanded to produce more water than first planned, and combined with other water sources, would produce 11,294 acre-feet of H₂O per year, according to the water district. Cal Am's desal plant, with other water supplies, including the reclamation project, would provide 15,296 acre feet annually.

The PUC and Cal Am contend that, without desal, there would not be enough water for tourism, lots of record and other uses, and that not building the desal plant would make the Monterey Peninsula's water shortage permanent.

Nevertheless, the coastal commission — which did not include Cal Am's response in its document — called Pure Water Monterey this week "a feasible and less damaging alternative," and said it's "progressed from being too speculative for the PUC to consider as a viable alternative, to now being a feasible, well-developed alternative."

It also said Pure Water Monterey would have "few adverse environmental effects compared to the desal plant and few, if any, adverse effects to coastal resources, since it would be located outside of the coastal zone."

Years of delay?

Though Pure Water Monterey would not need approval by the coastal commission, Stoldt conceded that if the agency rejects a permit for Cal Am's desal plant, there's no telling how long it could take to get the expanded reclamation project approved.

"There is no expedited track for the PUC to consider an alternative to their decision approving Cal Am's desal plant," Stoldt told The Pine Cone.

Cal Am spokeswoman Catherine Stedman said Cal Am's strategy at the meeting will be to make commissioners aware of the "flaws" and "unsubstantiated claims" about the Peninsula's water needs, and point out what it believes are the drawbacks of Pure Water Monterey project.

"We will point out that the Pure Water Monterey expansion without desal, as laid out in Stoldt's memo, does not contemplate years in which we have a multiple drought-years scenario," Stedman said.

Stoldt has said that Pure Water Monterey would survive drought due to "built-up drought reserves in average to wet years." This week, he knocked Cal Am's criticism of his water demand analysis.

"I'm going through the 140-page Cal Am rebuttal to my report and I'm amused, to say the least, that they can continue to say that the analysis is flawed because the PUC reached its conclusion" on the amount of water the Peninsula needs, Stoldt told The Pine Cone. "That was then, this is now, and things are different."

The City of Marina, which argues that the desal plant would harm its coastal dunes and groundwater, issued a press release praising the coastal commission staff's recommendation.

"The analysis outlined in the report is thorough and highlights the damages to the environment and the community that were identified when the City of Marina's planning commission issued its own coastal permit denial in March," the city said.

Agencies in conflict

A denial of Cal Am's project by the coastal panel would put the company in the precarious — and perhaps unprecedented — position of being caught in the middle of contradictory mandates from the coastal commission, the Public Utilities Commission and the State Water Resources Control Board.

"We would be in a situation of conflicting direction from state agencies and an inability to comply with the orders of all those agencies," Stedman said.

The state water board has ordered Cal Am to stop pumping most of its water from the Carmel River, the Peninsula's primary water source, by Dec. 31, 2021. If it doesn't, the people of the Monterey Peninsula could face mandatory cutbacks and fines.

If commissioners deny Cal Am's permit, the company could appeal, but that would likely mean a protracted process that would make it unable to comply with the state water board order. As it stands, Cal Am has said it would have to begin building the desal plant shortly after approval to meet the state water board deadline.

In its recommendation for denial, the coastal commission also pointed out what it called the "environmental justice" issues stemming from the cost of water from Cal Am's desal plant, which is expected to be about $6,100 per acre-foot, compared to $2,100 per acre-foot from water produced by Pure Water Monterey.

"Cal Am's project would create substantial hardships for several communities of concern that would be affected by the relatively high water costs," the document said.

Cal Am notes that the desal plant would provide water to the City of Castroville, which has a severely disadvantaged population and a saltwater-tainted groundwater supply. Proponents also say the project would benefit the county's hospitality workers, many of whom live in economically disadvantaged areas of the county.

"Having an adequate water supply to meet the basic demands of the community is in my mind a social justice issue," Stedman said.

Adoption group celebrates 35 years

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE MONTEREY County-based adoption and foster care nonprofit, Kinship Center, is celebrating its 35th year providing adoption, foster care and caregiver and mental health services to children and families.

Founded in 1984 by Carol Bishop and Carol Biddle, Salinas-based Kinship Center went from a three-person agency in an apartment to part of a statewide nonprofit, Seneca Family of Agencies, with more than 1,000 employees.

The group's official anniversary was in September, but the agency announced the milestone ahead of national adoption month in November.

"Every year, Kinship Center supports more than 1,500 children and their families," the group said. For more information regarding Kinship Center's 35-year anniversary, National Adoption Month, or to donate, visit kinshipcenter.org or call (831) 455-4713.

tearing down 18 structures, including nine historic cottages, in 2003. One of them, Jeffrey Becom, said it would cost $1.7 million to rebuild the lost structures, so he reasoned a fine of that size would be a fair.

Jobs for locals

Others suggested the renovation of the resort would provide a big boost to the local economy. The builder has predicted it would create 300 jobs, generate $2 million per year in hotel tax, $1 million in property tax, and $8 million in tourist dollars.

Kim Stemler, the executive director of the Monterey County Vintners & Growers Association, called the effort to bring the resort back to life “heroic,” and said it would create better job opportunities in local communities.

Planning commissioner Melissa Dufflock, who represents the district where the resort is located, offered her support. She also suggested that had it been approved earlier, its success might have saved local wineries that went out of business.

“I’m really excited about this project,” Dufflock said. “The general plan has said there’s going to be a wine corridor — this is going to be an anchor.”

This week’s hearing was continued from March, when planning commissioners held off on making a decision about the make-over — in part because Attorney General Xavier Becerra’s office had concerns about the wildfire risk.

Located seven miles west of Greenfield in the foothills of the Santa Lucias on a 235-acre property, the hot springs resort had operated since the late 19th century—but has been closed since 2003. Two years later, developer John Thompson unveiled his plan, which also includes expanding an existing water system, installing a wastewater treatment system and cutting down 185 oak trees.

ART

■ The greatest invention?

New shows will be unveiled Friday, Nov. 1, at the Pacific Grove Art Center, including a display by Gerald Huth, whose imagination runs wild when he has paper in his hands.

“Paper is one of the great inventions of mankind,” Huth said. “The uses and varieties continue to inspire and influence artists today — this exhibit will showcase a large variety of collages, paintings, and collage sculptures, and help to expand the understanding of the richness and the intricate possibilities of this medium.”

Also new at the art center are shows by photographer Rachell Hester (“Between Here and There”), painter Nina Temple (“Moving Water”), multi-media artist Kerry Conboy (“So Far”), and local incarcerated youth (“Empathy with Animals”).

Nov. 1 is also First Friday in downtown P.G., where many merchants will stay open late, including Artisana Gallery (612 Lighthouse Ave.), which represents many local artists, and Hawk Fine Arts (206 Fountain Ave.), which focuses on early and contemporary California art.

The shows will be on display through

Dec. 12. The art center is located at 568 Lighthouse Ave. Call (831) 375-2208.

■ The fine art of flowers

A painter with an affection for florals and rich color, Margery Ammon will demonstrate how she paints tulips and daffodils Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., at Gallerie Amsterdam, which is located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth. “There are some subjects that seem to want to be painted,” the artist suggested.

While tulips and daffodils in Ammon’s garden always fade, her paintings of them will likely outlast her. “By creating paintings of them, we need not watch them fade, nor do we need to wait another year for their appearance in our gardens,” she added.

130,000 acres. The rain triggered mudslides, which damaged many sections of the road.

While most of residents can now reach their homes by vehicle, a few who live along the upper portion of Palo Colorado Road still can’t.

After a major culvert replacement project began in June 2018, the first four miles of the road — which provides access to most homes in the area — were reopened four months later.

As for a time table on repairs to the upper part of the road, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors was set to discuss it at their Nov. 5 meeting, but the county’s chief of public works, Randy Ishii, told The Pine Cone it’s been pulled from the agenda because some details still need to be worked out. He expects the item will be back on the agenda with a couple months. “We still need to present it to the budget committee before bringing it to the full board for consideration,” Ishii reported.

ommending approval of the agreement for a historic house on Lopez Street.

Tax arguments

At Tuesday's meeting, the council will review proposed ballot arguments in favor of increasing the sales tax, which voters are set to decide in the March 2020 election, and will consider extending an ordinance on sidewalk vending (see story page 1A).

The first draft of an ordinance regulating short-term rentals in the business district and apartment buildings will also be up for a vote. The new law would allow those who have permits now to keep them and would also use vacation rentals as incentives for construction of new housing in the commercial districts. A developer could have one transient rental if the plans also include three other units, with at least one for low-income residents and one for moderate-income residents.

Finally, the council will consider a business owner's plea to operate a store on Dolores Street that sells honey-based skincare products. After people complained about the shop's employees standing in the doorway and soliciting business, a city official visited the shop and noted it offered skincare products, which requires a special permit. The planning commission a few months ago denied the permit, and the owner wants the city council to overturn that decision. Wiener is recommending the council uphold the denial, which means the store will either have to change its inventory, shut down or sue the city.

Much needed

Post Cmdr. Brian Andrus commented that the World War I memorial arch is "looking great," since it is now being restored, but he told commissioners he had to ask kids to get down off it during Car Week. He suggested including the frequency of inspections in the policy and a line about the rules being in keeping with state and federal guidelines.

"Thank you for considering this," he said. "It's been really nice seeing people get behind this and having the memorial come back to the forefront."

Chair Michael LePage, who was on the committee, said it's important to maintain the memorials to honor the people who sacrificed their lives.

Commissioner Christopher Bolton suggested inspections be done annually, rather than "periodically."

"We need this policy," he added. "I think this policy is thoughtful, and I support it," commissioner Stephanie Locke said.

Commissioner Julie Wendt suggested adding another line explicitly stating that special events on Ocean Avenue need to adhere to the rules protecting the memorial arch. With that addition, the commission unanimously voted to send the new policy to the council for review, and members will look at the updated version Tuesday.

followed by "dirty looks" from the co-worker. This was preceded by vague rumors that the co-worker was going to "hurt" him. Instead of reporting this to his supervisor or security, Andrade left work, drove to his house in Salinas, put his loaded handgun and an extra loaded magazine in a lunchbox and returned to work.

Upon returning to work, he told his supervisor that he had a loaded firearm. The supervisor immediately called the Monterey County Sheriff. After a brief investigation, Andrade was arrested for carrying a loaded firearm in his car in the City of Salinas. Judge Wills sentenced Andrade to 15 days in jail, and ordered the weapon destroyed.

AUGUST

Most memorable moment: August and a fellow firefighter once crawled upstairs to the second floor of a burning home, spotted the feet of an unconscious woman, and pulled her to safety.

"I'm the guy who grabbed her, but it was a team effort from the get-go," said August, who received a commendation for his action. "It was impressive how every one of us did exactly the right thing that day."

August began building and racing radio-controlled cars, and in 1996, he went to the national championships in Seattle, where he took top honors in two separate classes, thanks in large part to the custom paint jobs he applied to his cars. He also painted models for other racers.

After that event, he was recruited by a Costa Mesa model car manufacturer to apply custom paint jobs to its products.

"That arrangement kept me in the sport for 10 years," he said. "I took most of my compensation in trade. I'd deliver the car bodies to him, then he'd hand me a box and send me into his plant to pick out all the parts I wanted."

Tilted masts

A passion in recent years has been creating miniature models of historic sailing vessels, like the Vasa, a warship built between 1626 and 1628 to the specifications of the king of Sweden. The boat listed to one side just 1,300 meters into its maiden voyage, its cannon ports filled with water, and, with most of Stockholm's population looking on, sank in the harbor.

A model of the 1797 USS Constitution ("Old Ironsides"), with an intricately crafted copper hull, took two years to construct. It's a centerpiece of the living room in August's northeast Carmel home, alongside his replica of The Royal Caroline, a yacht built in 1750, then broken up for parts in 1820.

One of August's personal favorites is a Baltimore clipper, on display in his workshop.

"I fell in love with Baltimore clippers because their masts are tilted, rather than standing straight up, and they just look like they're going fast," he said.

He also has a miniaturized "luxury tugboat" (a current fad in the Seattle area). Peek through the window of the vessel to see hardwood floors, a dining room, and a complete kitchen with a tiny Pepsi can on the countertop.

Some of his projects take years to complete, but August said he's far more likely to give one away than sell it. He has never approached a gallery and doesn't have a website, but occasionally does commission work.

He can be reached via email at caugust1946@hotmail.com or by phone at (831) 625-2637.

Tax dollars aren't free

THIS WEEK we report that Monterey County has received a $1.8 million grant from the federal government to help fix Palo Colorado Road, which is definitely good news for anybody who needs to use that road. But it's also a time to consider what "grant" means.

The word pops up all the time in meetings of local city councils, planning commissions, park districts, etc., etc. When they want to do something they don't think they can afford within the limits of their own budget, local officials usually try to get a "grant" — a term they use as a synonym for "gift" or perhaps "lottery winnings," which is to say, money that can be spent happily or even frivolously.

Sometimes, they're right. A grant can be a gift, but usually it's not. The difference is very important, as officials at all levels of state and local government debate whether to apply for and spend those wonderful things called "grants."

A grant is a gift — something given at no cost to the recipient — when it comes from a private individual or organization that offers money to promote whatever cause they're interested in. The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, for example, gives millions in grants every year to promote population control, conservation and education, all in accordance with the wishes of Gates, one of the world's richest men, who has decided to give away a large portion of his billions. Numerous other tycoons of the internet era have also set up foundations that make grants, and all of them should be thanked.

But most grants you hear discussed at city hall or in the board of supervisors' chambers are sent from one branch of government to another. They are definitely not gifts. They are an allocation of tax dollars which are, of course, collected from people who have incomes. These taxpayers have no choice but to pay their taxes, and when they send their money to the government — federal, state or local — they expect it to be spent wisely.

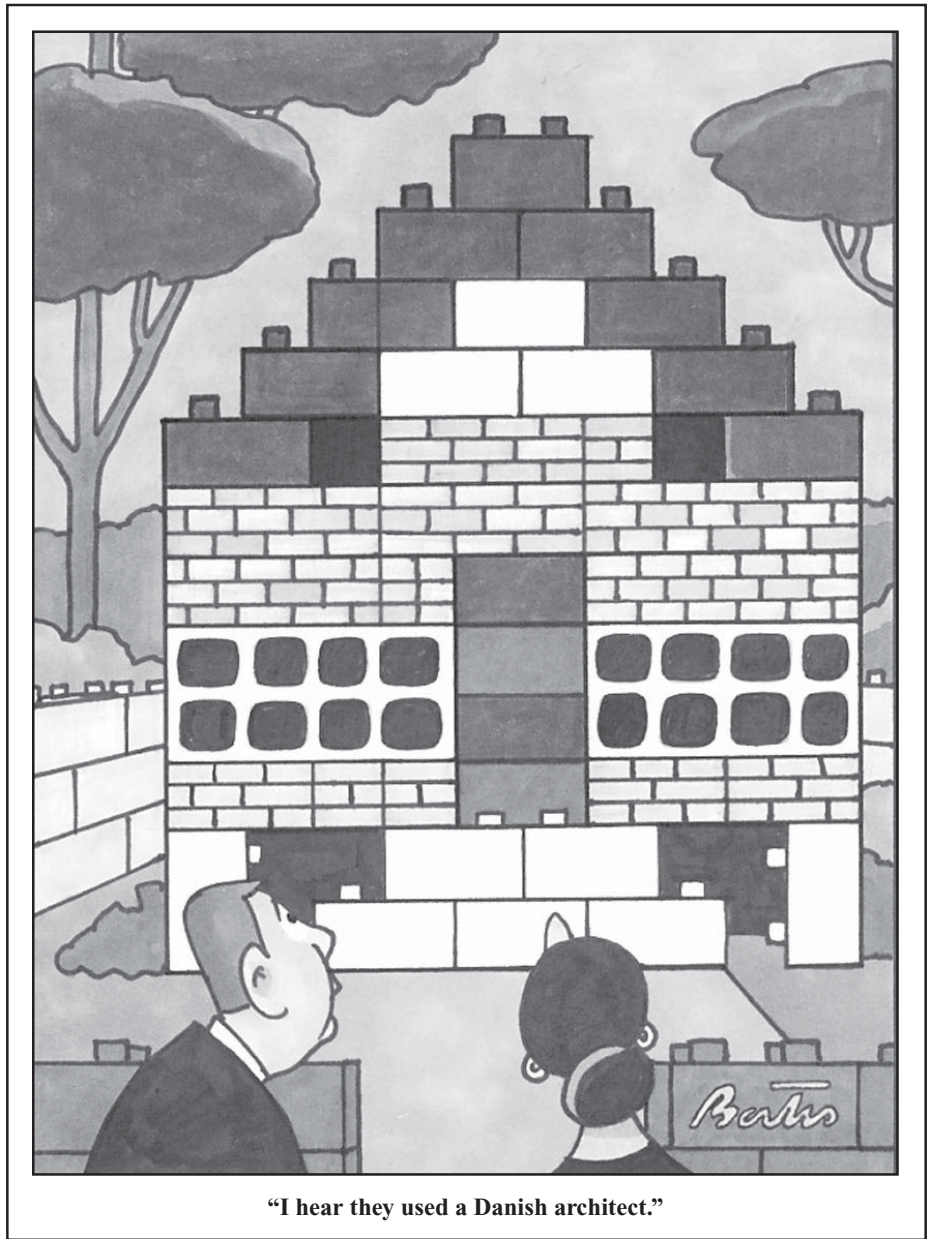

Too often, local government officials speak of a grant from the federal or state government as if it fell from heaven. Television and newspaper reports almost always refer to a federal grant with studied casualness, never mentioning that the money gleefully received at city hall or the county courthouse in the form of government grants comes from the very taxpayers whose interests the journalists should be guarding.

The more distant the source of the grant, in fact, the less local officials and reporters seem to worry about who is really paying for it.

The subject is relevant not only because of what's going on in Palo Colorado Canyon, but because "grants" represent the hopes and dreams of government officials everywhere. In just the last couple of years, we have reported about "grants" from one layer of government to another for things like repairs to Mission Trail park, maintenance of the World War I Memorial Arch, construction of Cal Am's desal plant (which may not get a permit but got $10 million from the Department of Water Resources anyway), installation of new trash containers in downtown Carmel, design and building of the roundabout, improving services to the homeless, etc., etc. All of these are very worthy causes. But when the water resources department "grants" $10 million for the construction of a desal plant, this money represents the hard work of taxpayers. It is not play money to be spent just because it's there.

Unfortunately, so much money flows from citizens to government at all levels, most officials can't help but start thinking of that money as something to be spent at will. They should be doing the opposite. Taxpayer dollars — from whatever source — are very precious and should only be spent when they have to be.

Letters to the Editor

'Not the victims'
Dear Editor,

We live on Pine Hills Drive in the Carmel Views neighborhood. The Pine Cone Oct. 25 article about a recent dog attack misrepresents what happened and does not address concerns for safety in our neighborhood.

The Akita jumped a fence, crossed the street, and attacked an adult, Larry Arthur, walking his dog. Mr. Arthur's defensive injuries are not "alleged" but quite real and required staples and stitches on both his arms. His dog needed stitches in his throat, face and ears as well. Their injuries would have been more significant if Larry had not defended himself with a pocketknife.

Quite a few of us walk, skateboard and bicycle on Pine Hills. Many passersby have felt intimidated by the growling and barking dogs straining at the Henderson's fence. The constant barking of three dogs disrupts the quiet we enjoy in our neighborhood.

The Henderson's claim that they don't feel safe because of Larry Arthur is far outweighed by our collective fear of their dog's aggressive behavior. If this dog is returned to our neighborhood, then the next passersby walking with a dog or a stroller might not be able to defend themselves. Some of us have opted not to take walks just to avoid the area where the dogs are located.

We are relieved that Monterey County Animal Services has impounded the Henderson dog in order to protect the rest of us walking in our neighborhood. And we wish to set the record straight, that Larry Arthur and his dog were the victims, not the offenders.

Who really sent the letter
Dear Editor,

Your lead article last week, "Anti-Cal Am group asks state board to block desal plant," was in error. The letter sent to the California Coastal Commission from 28 local elected officials opposing Cal Am's desal plant did not come from Public Water Now. Stating or characterizing this letter from elected leaders as a Public Water Now letter is absolutely false.

Was this an attempt on the part of The Pine Cone to diminish the voices of elected officials or just a mistake on the paper's part? This paper has long been a friend to Cal Am. I call on The Pine Cone to publish this important letter and let those who signed it speak for themselves.

I am a partner in a local advertising agency; I arranged the press conference on the letter. The demonstration set up in conjunction with the press conference was a group effort by Public Water Now, Citizens for Just Water and other groups.

The Carmel Pine Cone was established in 1915 and is a legal newspaper for Carmel-by-the-Sea, Monterey County and the State of California, established by Superior Court Decree No. 35759, July 3, 1952

BENJAMIN EICHORN was sitting in the MEarth amphitheater at Carmel Middle School, surrounded by singing birds and buzzing insects, when he became keenly aware that the breeze had changed.

"The wind just shifted, the heat's rising inland, and the land is warming up," he said. "We hear so much about climate change. I've definitely seen the weather change here over the years."

Earlier this year, taking the helm as executive director of MEarth — the environmental sustainability education program in Carmel Valley — was a kind of homecoming. He first became engaged with the organization in the late 1990s, when it had an owl program and had begun to rebuild the natural habitat for birds.

Cuban music

After graduating from Stevenson School, Eichorn, who grew up in Palo Colorado Canyon, went off to Whitman College in Washington, and traveled extensively in Cuba and Central and South America before settling for a time in San Francisco. But now that he's here, he said he feels like he never really left home.

"I was 1 year old when my parents bought 40 acres of poison oak in Palo Colorado Canyon," he said. "I spent my early years in a pig barn my dad bought and took to the canyon to serve as an instant house, until he built his dream home — a rammed-earth house."

Eichorn's dad is building contractor Peter Eichorn, and his mom is Janie Rommel-Eichorn, a marriage and family therapist.

pist. His sister, Lizzie, is a scientist. Meanwhile, at their home — dubbed Country Farm Flat — the whole family grows organic fruit, vegetables and cut flowers, and keeps honeybees and goats.

"I was thinking, just this morning, as I poured a little goat's milk into my coffee, about the quality of my life and how fortunate I am to be able to enjoy having grown up here," he said. "I didn't always feel that way."

Eichorn said he used to feel like an outsider, driving his rusted pickup to Stevenson School. He left home for college at 18, pretty sure he wasn't coming back.

"I was ungrateful — not that I didn't love or respect my parents and the way they raised us," he said, "but I'd gone to Stevenson, thinking farming was unglamorous, and I wasn't interested in land stewardship. I knew I'd be back only if I needed Plan B."

Eichorn was finishing high school when he met the president of Whitman College at a Carmel High college fair. He liked the idea that Whitman was not too far from home, but far enough to get away and enjoy the four seasons of Washington State. He majored in sociology and Spanish, and minored in environmental science, graduating with what he considers a good liberal arts education.

"During school, I spent six weeks studying in Cuba, led there by a love of Afro-Latin music," he said. "I'm a percussionist, and I really wanted to learn how to play the rhythms of this culture while studying social sciences in Havana."

As he moved through the city, Eichorn noticed a number of urban farms and thought, "Holy cow, this farming thing is unique — beautiful, super-productive, and organic." I also noticed they were being managed by elderly farmers. Locals told me farming was not hip or cool to young people. I knew I needed to explore that."

Back at Whitman, he did a 30-page paper (in Spanish), which explored the value of family, community and culture, and how they're connected to the land.

"I realized what my parents had done in Palo Colorado was pretty cool," he said, "And I understood that this is how to get people to eat healthy food — you get them involved in the cycle of planting, cultivating, growing, harvesting, cooking, eating, and composting. This creates ownership and connectivity."

Eichorn went on to do a senior paper on school gardens and their impact on aca-

Tiny houses: Extreme edition

LIKE SO many kids of his generation, Chuck August built model cars, a hobby that evolved into "kit bashing" — creating unusual cars out of parts left over from his other models.

Then he started building and flying model airplanes, which took his enthusiasm to a new level.

"It was such a rewarding thing to take what was basically a box full of sticks and

And he built an ornate replica of a famous old Canadian filling station, Shady Grove Texaco, resplendent with red trim over white paint, and two tiny, antique gas pumps. Parked alongside is a model of a "woodie" station wagon with two surfboards strapped to the roof.

"Where I grew up — Rock Springs, Wyo. — that's what a lot of the gas stations looked like," August reminisced. "I remember life there being a lot of fun. It was one of those places where we'd get in our cars and cruise from one end of town to the other, turn around, and go all the way back, just like in make it fly," he said. "This was way before radio-control, and it was a whole lot of fun for kids like me, growing up in Wyoming."

August today is a "master modeler," specializing in meticulously detailed boats, cars (some radio-controlled), and quirky buildings, like his miniature reproduction of the Tuck Box, the iconic little restaurant on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

The charm of his work is in the detail. "Peek through that window," suggested the 73-year-old artist. "See that picture on the wall? That's the actual art that's on that wall in the Tuck Box."

August photographed the painting in the cozy restaurant, then reduced his image to the size of a large postage stamp. He used the same technique to replicate shelves displaying teacups. There's also a fire in the fireplace.

His Tuck Box model won first prize in the 3D class at last year's Monterey County Fair and got a third-place award in the overall art exhibit.

Missing Wyoming

August also created a miniature version of another local landmark, Uyeda Bros. Automotive, which operated in Monterey for 40 years at 560 Fremont St., as a commission for the Uyeda family.

He's replicated Mel's Drive-In (from "American Graffiti") — a model now on display at the Corvette Museum in Bowling Green, Ky; the Nifty Fifty's Drive-In (a popular East Coast chain); In-N-Out Burger (complete with tiny hamburgers on the grill), and similar slices of Americana.

"American Graffiti."

His grandfather, Charles August, immigrated to Rock Springs from Greece and found work but decided after two weeks that he was likely to be killed in the copper mines. He quit that job, bought himself a camera, and in 1919, he opened New Studio Photography, which still exists today. Chuck's father, Tony August, and his Uncle Mike took over the business in 1945 and ran it together until Tony uprooted the family and moved to Carmel in 1962.

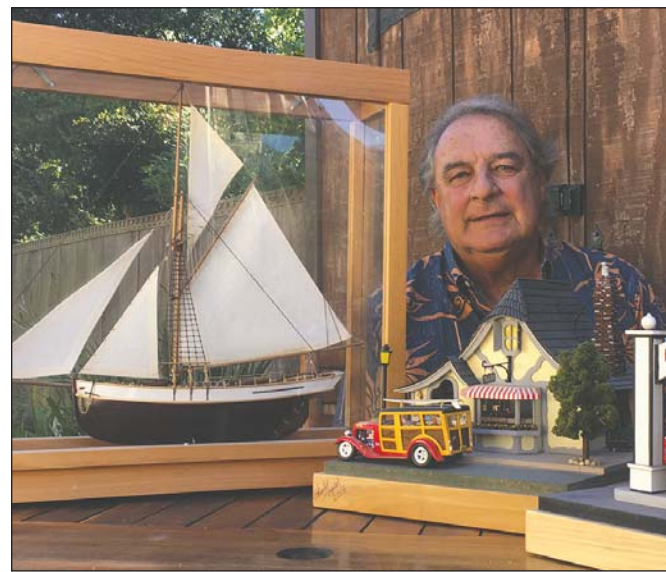

"We moved here the summer before my junior year in high school, and I wasn't happy about it. I had so many friends in Rock Springs — life there was a bowl of cherries for me," Chuck said. "My very first impression of Carmel was, 'Wow, there aren't even any sidewalks or street lamps ... what kind of place is this?'"

The August family bought the Colonial Terrace Inn at 13th and San Antonio. Chuck and his father refurbished three of the rooms and quickly started turning a profit.

Chuck August graduated with Carmel High's Class of '64, and 10 years later, he was hired as a firefighter for the City of Carmel. He worked there 32 years, retiring in 2006.

"It was the perfect job for me," he said. "I knew how houses were built, how to take care of them, where problems were likely to lie. It wasn't a desk job, so I was outside and active, serving the community. I really didn't want to retire, but I was just getting too old."

The wedding gift that ultimately turned the bride into a widow

ONE TRACT on the map of the Ranchos of Monterey County stands out because of its non-Spanish name — the James Meadows Tract. The nearly 4,600-acre ranch sat along Carmel River, between today's Quail Lodge

He was an old man when his fourth wife died giving birth to Loreta the very night the pirate Hippolyte de Bouchard plundered Monterey in November 1818.

Fisher's story is partly fiction, but her account that in 1834, the padres of the Carmel Mission gave land as a wedding present to Loreta and her first husband, Domingo Peralta, is close to accepted tradition. There was no written deed from the church, which lost its lands a year earlier through the Secularization Act.

That set the stage for a lethal conflict. Loreta's husband, Domingo Peralta, was Esselen. Since neither of them was Mexican, their unwritten land claim was easily challenged. Gov. Alvarado prepared to grant the land to Jose Antonio Romero, a civil administrator. Several native families who lived there pled for protection from the grant, and Jose Amesti, acting justice of San Carlos, declared that some of them had valid claims. Still, Al-varado's grant, dated Jan. 27, 1840, gave the land to Romero with the understanding that one of the natives, Jose Agricio, could keep his house and farm.

The grant made no mention of the Peraltas and other families, who didn't understand how someone could claim the land which their ancestors roamed freely, and which the padres had assured them was theirs. They stayed, even as Romero and his men harassed them continuously. Domingo Peralta was soon found dead in the hills, and Loreta became a widow with two children, Jacinta and Madelena.

Enter an Englishman

Meadows arrived at Monterey with a whaling ship in 1837 and decided to stay, but that didn't last long. He was one of 50 aliens deported to Mexico in 1840, suspected of supporting insurrection. After 18 months he was Resort and Garland Ranch. It officially became Meadows' property in 1866, although he moved there following his 1842 marriage to Loreta Peralta y Onesimo, a young widow with two children.

Loreta's story was made famous by Anne Fisher's 1940 work, "Cathedral in the Sun." Fisher's source was the couple's daughter, Isabelle Meadows. According to Fisher's story, Loreta's father, Juan Onesimo, was a Rumsen native who helped build the Carmel Mission.

demic achievement. His thesis explored the lasting impact of having a garden and concluded that it connects us to the earth and to ourselves, and to our cultural heritage via the way we cook, share and eat.

Enamored by Che Guevara's memoir, "The Motorcycle Diaries," the college graduate went on a bus trip through South America and ended up in Brazil, where he spent a year studying music. During that time, he also visited 14 countries, absorbing their cultures. He came home fluent in Spanish and Portuguese.

In 2010, Eichorn established a consulting company, "Grow Your Lunch," committed to building educational gardening programs in public, private and charter schools, after-school programs, to help children learn to eat off the fat of the land.

You can go home again

He also spent four years working as a garden educator at Chef Alice Waters' Edible Schoolyard in Berkeley. In 2015, he wrote a gardening handbook, which Waters championed.

When Eichorn was ready to leave the city, he and his wife, Anastasia, moved to the family homestead in Palo Colorado, and he accepted the opportunity to take the helm at MEarth.

"At MEarth and in life," he said, "my job is to weave it all together under the umbrella of stewardship. We must be self-advocates for what we need, and give our kids the tools to do that, as well — to grow, cook, nourish and care for themselves, their community and the natural world that supports the human community."

In order to take care of the earth, he said, we have to learn to love it, first.

five children together between 1843 and 1860: Frank, Isabelle, Edward, James and Thomas. Meadows had apprenticed as a blacksmith, and did that work for others, even as he built up his own ranch.

Meadows' efforts to resolve ownership of the property were aided by friends like Thomas Larkin, as well as by external events. When Commodore Sloat claimed California as a U.S. holding in 1846, uncertainty about the future caused land values to fall. Romero sold the ranch in January 1847 to William Garner. Larkin bought it from Garner in March and sold it to Meadows. Following California's statehood in 1850, Meadows filed his petition for title on Feb. 10, 1853. Delays brought apprehension, and on April 27, 1861, Meadows also claimed the land as a homestead. Finally, his patent, or title, was issued by the government on Aug. 9, 1866. Meadows became a very successful rancher and leader.

In 1858, his dedication to education led him to help establish the Carmelo School district, where he served as a trustee for the rest of his life. He even had Matthew P. Smith of Ohio, an early teacher, live on the ranch. Loreta learned to read and write and reportedly became a teacher.

Meadows also pushed the plan for building Carmel Valley Road, which was approved in January 1892 after he, accompanied by William Hatton and Joseph Steffani, petitioned the county board of supervisors to build the road. Loreta did not see its completion. She died at the ranch on Sept. 30, 1892.

When Meadows died on July 12, 1902, his estate was initially valued at $125,000, and his will stipulated that the revenue from the ranch should be paid to his children, but the ranch was not to be sold until the last child died. Then it was to be sold with the proceeds divided among the grandchildren. However, his eldest son, Frank, was excluded and contested the will.

Negotiations dragged on, and when they were finally resolved in March 1905, the estate was valued at $700,000, and much of Meadows' will was set aside.

The estate was immediately divided equally among the children, and the ranch was chopped up and sold off, accelerating an influx of new residents to Carmel Valley. Thomas, the Meadows' youngest and last living child, died 35 years later.

Early to bed, early to rise, and your water polo team can beat the other guys

THERE'S A world out there that many of us rarely see, populated by insomniac roosters, masochistic joggers, sleepy milkmen and a gaggle of student-athletes who are expected to be on the deck of the swimming pool at Stevenson School at 5:45 a.m. for water polo practice.

The rest of us can only presume that it's a rude awakening to hit the water at that hour on chilly mornings, with the sunrise leaking through the trees in Del Monte Forest. But the Stevenson Pirates also must be sleeping well these days.

Worth setting the alarm clock

As they get ready to play their regular season finale (5 p.m. Friday at Stevenson) against rival Carmel, the Pirates have the best record in school history — 20-1 — and realistic hopes of winning a Central Coast Section crown for the first time. Someday, when they've got kids and grandkids of their own, they're likely to see this legacy as something that was worth rolling out of bed for.

"Our philosophy is to focus only on the game that's directly in front of us, respect every opponent on our schedule, and devise a game plan specifically for that opponent. We don't take any game for granted," said second-year coach Frank Reynolds, whose 2018 squad became the first in school history to win a CCS playoff game.

Maintaining humility is undoubtedly harder than it sounds when you're part of a team that routinely routs opponents by scores like 17-2, 19-3, and 24-5.

Stevenson opened its season by outscoring four opponents 57-13 at the Pioneer Valley tournament in Santa Marina, and steamrolled its first four challengers in the Gabilan Division of the Pacific Coast Athletic League by a combined score of 80-23.

Then, on Sept. 12, the Pirates scored their biggest regular season victory ever, a 12-8 conquest of St. Ignatius College Prep, a tradition-rich West Catholic League power from San Francisco.

"We learned that night that if we prepare and train, we're capable of taking it to any opponent," Reynolds said. "Our guys were really up for that game, and winning it was truly something historic for our program."

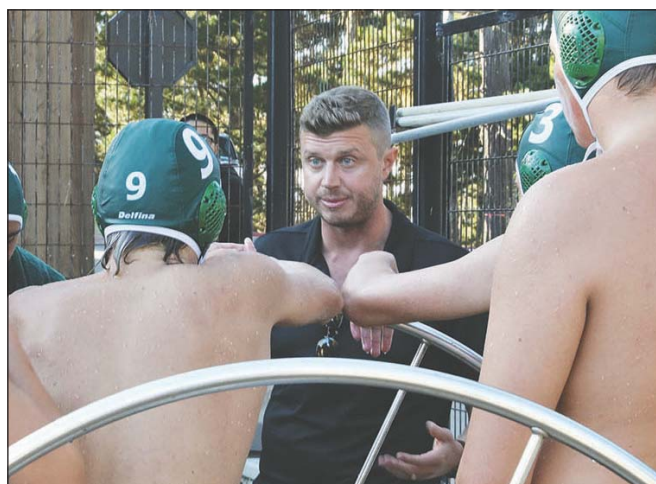

The emotional victory took place the night before they co-hosted the Pete Cutino Cup (named for UC Berkeley's late, great, NCAA Hall of Fame coach, who was a Monterey resident).

A good teacher

That's when Stevenson lost for the first and only time this year, 14-8 to Los Altos, a school that, at this writing, is 22-2 overall, and 12-0 in the De Anza Division of the Santa Clara Valley Athletic League.

"We didn't win, but we gave a really good opponent a real dogfight. I think we learned some things against Los Altos about maintaining intensity after a very tough game the night before, and what it takes to compete against an opponent with players who definitely will play at the collegiate level,” Reynolds said.

It's 5:45 a.m. at Stevenson School (left) and the Pirates' water polo team is practicing while other teams sleep. Second-year coach Frank Reynolds (above) has not only instituted a strict practice regiment, he's guided the team to a 20-1 regular-season record.

Those are lessons Reynolds is clearly qualified to teach. He was a two-time All-American, and three-time all-state and all-league selection at Foothill High (Class of '04) in Tustin, then played at the University of Southern California before finishing his career at UC Berkeley.

Reynolds scored a goal against USC as a sophomore in the 2006 NCAA championship match, went to the finals again that summer with the Lamorinda club team, earning All-America honors, and was named co-captain of UC Berkeley’s squad in his junior year. The Bears, with Reynolds in the lineup, were NCAA champions both years.

Not overwhelmed

That resume convinced Jim Fannin to step aside last fall after 20 seasons as coach of Stevenson’s boys team and take over the girls program instead. (That, by the way, is a separate success story: Stevenson’s girls also won the PCAL’s Gabilan Division this season and also are headed to the playoffs.)

Since that September loss to Los Altos, Stevenson’s guys have gone 13-0, and their record may well land them in the Open Division bracket with the best teams in the Central Coast Section for the playoffs. If not, they’ll play in Division 2, based on their small-school enrollment.

Either way, they’re unlikely to feel overwhelmed. Four players — Patrick Powers, Luca Bozzo, Jasper Dale, and Owen Monke — were on the team that beat Sobrato 14-7 in the quarterfinals of the 2018 Division 2 tournament, then lost 6-5 to West Catholic League powerhouse Archbishop Mitty in the semifinals.

Powers and Bozzo, both juniors, are right-handed drivers on this year’s team.

“Those guys are like thunder and lightning for us — they bring non-stop energy,” Reynolds said. “Patrick is the fastest swimmer in school history, and he sparks our counterattack. Luca is the brains of our offense — a very cerebral player who is very meticulous about how he breaks down an opponent.”

Unstoppable

In the center of the lineup, quite literally, are the Dale brothers, both 6-foot-5 and well over 200 pounds, with experience playing in the U.S. National Team’s developmental system. Wiley Dale, a freshman, is in the middle of the offense, nearly unstoppable when he gets the ball. Jasper, his sophomore brother, is a second-year defender assigned to contain the opponent’s best scorer.

“Jasper is a vocal leader and a lock-down defender who I would put up against anybody in the state,” Reynolds said. “He really takes pride in running our defense.”

FOOD & WINE

Big Sur Food & Wine tickets going fast, food bank fun(ds), and C.V. Coffee Roasting turns 25

THE BIG Sur Food & Wine Festival, which each year raises tens of thousands of dollars for Big Sur charities, returns Nov. 7-9 with a full lineup of wine tastings, dinners, parties and other culinary adventures. Some of the festival's quirkier events, like the Magical Mystery Tour and Hiking with Stemware, are already sold out, but there's plenty left on the schedule to enjoy down the coast.

Thursday night start

Ventana Big Sur will host the lavish Opening Night celebration Nov. 7 from 6 to 9 p.m., with more than a dozen chefs and purveyors partnered with some two dozen champagne and wine producers, all complemented by live music and a stunning setting.

Guests can expect delicious small bites from Roux restaurant chef/owner Fabrice Roux, Carmel Valley Ranch executive chef Tim Wood, executive chef Michelle Estigoy of Cultura, 7D Steakhouse executive chef Tom Snyder, head Bernardus Lodge chef Cal Stamenov, Brad Briske from Home, Salt Wood executive chef Paul Corsentino (who formerly worked at Ventana), Alta Bakery's Ben Spungin, Rio Grill exec chef Eduardo Coronel, chef Eric Piacentine from Big Sur Bakery, Michelin-starred chef Justin Cogley from Aubergine, as well as baker and pastry chef Ron Mendoza, chef Nadiv Geiger from Testarossa Winery, Cheese Shop Carmel owner Kent Torrey, and Black River Caviar's Graham Gaspard. Tickets are $175 per person, with shuttle rides to and from Carmel available for an additional $35.

Fun Friday

Friday will be a busy day at the Big Sur festival, starting with a tasting of Tablas Creek wines at Ventana at 10 a.m. For $50 per person, guests will enjoy a lineup of coveted Tablas Creek's flagship mourvedre-based Chateauf-neuf-du-Pape-inspired red blend, starting with the first vintage in 1997.

Located in Paso Robles, Tablas Creek was born 30 years ago through a decades-long friendship between two significant wine families, the Perrins of Chateau de Beaucastel in France and the Haas family of Vineyard Brands. After searching all over California for limestone soils and a Mediterranean climate, they bought a 120-acre parcel a dozen miles inland from the Pacific, imported cuttings from their French estate, and planted their biodynamic vineyard.

Tablas Creek is credited with helping start this country's "Rhone Rangers" wine movement and putting Paso Robles on the map as a wine region. Second-generation proprietor Jason Haas will present the tasting, which will span two decades, from the first bottling to the recently released 2017 Esprit de Tablas.

That afternoon from noon to 3 p.m., the beautiful chef's garden at Sierra Mar at the Post Ranch Inn will host the Pinot Walkabout, a popular exploration of this region's spectacular pinots from 20 producers paired with bites from a half-dozen local chefs. The cost is $150 per person.

And in the evening, from 6 to 10 p.m., A Dinner in Sustainability at the Big Sur Lodge will be prepared in collaboration with the Monterey Bay Aquarium in recognition of its longstanding contribution to sustainable seafood and helping people avoid fish that is in declining supply or should not be consumed for other reasons.

The $200-per-person dinner will feature chef Virginia Willis from Culinary Enterprises, chef William Disson from Market Place Restaurant, chef Morgan L'Esperance of Costanoa, Big Sur Lodge's Rick Sahagun, and baker/pastry chef Ron Mendoza.

Also that evening, Deetjen's Big Sur Inn will host a winemaker dinner for the festival, this one focusing on the Pioneers of Santa Barbara, with seatings at 5:30 and 8:30 p.m.

Similar to Monterey County, Santa Barbara valleys run east to west, allowing cool ocean breezes to drift into hot inland areas in the afternoon, making it an exceptional area for cultivating varieties like pinot noir and chardonnay, and Rhone grapes like syrah and grenache. Executive chef Renee Esperanza is creating a menu to match the evening's impressive lineup. Reservations should be made directly with the restaurant by calling (831) 667-2378.

Saturday starts with brunch

The new Village Big Sur next to the River Inn just added a Big Sur Food & Wine Festival event. The Bubbly Disco Brunch will cost $100 per person, and while the 9:30 a.m. seating is already sold out, spots are available at 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Chef A.J. Beatty is planning a five-course organic brunch to pair with local sparkling wines. The vibe will be created by Big Sur's Milky Way Radio featuring Nico Georis, DJ wax-by-the-sea and Two Mandy DJs.

The weekend's popular bash, Wine & Swine at the Henry Miller Library, will run from 6 to 10 p.m. and is described as "a rock-and-roll, no-holds-barred, let-your-hair-down-and-bring-your-dancing-shoes party," with special live musical guests and plenty of porky treats, with wines to match.

Talented chefs and purveyors signed on for Wine & Swine include Tony Baker (Montrio), Jamie Collins (Serendipity Farms), Percival Lammie (Percival's Pies), Jonathan Roberts (PigWizard), Chris Watts (Carmel Valley Ranch), Danny Leach (Folktale), Terry Teplitzky (Michael's Catering), Todd Spanier (California Truffle Orchards), Erika Neargarder (Julia's Vegetarian Restaurant) and Jerry Register (Monterey Plaza Hotel).

Tickets are $125 per person, plus $35 for the mandatory shuttle ride to and from Rio Road in Carmel. There is no parking near the library this year.

The informal finale of the festival is Bennies and Bubbles at Deetjen's, a place famous for its spectacular Eggs Benedict, on Nov. 10 from 8 a.m. onward. No reservations are needed — though there might be a wait if you dillydally.

Making a difference

The Big Sur Food and Wine Festival is a nonprofit created to support to the Big Sur community. Grants from last year's festival totaled $80,000, including $16,500 each for the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade and the Big Sur Health Center, $10,000 for Henry Miller Library, and $6,000 each for Mid Coast Fire, Apple Pie preschool and the Big Sur Park school. Big Sur Grange, Big Sur Fiddle Camp, Stage Kids, Ventana Wilderness Society, the Weston Call Big Sur Fund and Big Sur Softball also received gifts.

To learn more about everything, go to www.bigsurfoodandwine.org. Tickets for the fest are available through Eventbrite.com.

MPC Foundation scholarship dinner

The Monterey Peninsula College Foundation will present its 3rd Annual Evening Opportunity Gala, "Sea of Dreams," at the Monterey Plaza Hotel on Cannery Row Nov. 2 at 5 p.m., with the goal of "raising dollars for scholars and making students' dreams come true." Tickets are $250 apiece.

The menu planned for the evening includes baby spinach salad with feta and toasted pecans, followed by entrée choices of braised short ribs and ricotta gnocchi with cauliflower gratin, onion-crust sea-bass with fingerling potatoes and seasonal vegetables, or porcini mushroom risotto with grilled asparagus and red quinoa. Dessert will be Valrhona triple chocolate mousse cake. For tickets and information, go to mpcfoundation.org.

7D cocktail competition

The second round of Seventh & Dolores Steakhouse's Mixology Throwdown will be held Nov. 4 at 8 p.m., when bartender Lindsey Greblo from the Monterey Plaza Hotel challenges Ryan Feliciano from Cibo. The contestants will first make a cocktail that must contain Belvedere vodka and a secret ingredient, and will then undertake a skills challenge — seeing who can cut citrus the fastest — before presenting a second cocktail entirely of their own creation, with no restrictions on ingredients.

Guests vote for their favorites, as do the four judges, and in the case of a tie, the competitors do another skills challenge. If they are still tied, they make a cocktail on the fly for the judges, who have the final say at that point.

Tickets are $20 through Eventbrite.com and include tastes and entertainment. Additional drinks and food will be available for purchase.

Happy 25th, C.V. Coffee!

In celebration of their company's 25th anniversary, Dean and Janet McAthie are offering special deals on beans, refills and gift cards, and have resurrected the limited-edition Organic Anniversary Blend. Created by longtime wholesale director Tina Muia and roaster Rory Phares, the anniversary blend includes organic coffees from Colombia, Sumatra and Mexico. The duo first created the blend for Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Company's 20th anniversary.

Through the end of the year, customers who purchase a 12-ounce bag of the Anniversary Blend will get a free 12-ounce coffee.

In addition, on the 25th of November and December, refills will be 25 cents for people hanging out at any of their shops at mid-valley, the Crossroads, the Barnyard, Ocean Avenue, Lighthouse Avenue in Pacific Grove, and Fremont and Broadway in Seaside. Finally, from Nov. 25 to Dec. 25, $25 gift cards will be sold for $20 apiece.

Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Co. is family-owned and operated by the McAthies, who acquired the business from founders Barbara and Dick Ely, who served on Carmel's city council, in 2001. The company's coffee roasting facility is located at Mid Valley Shopping Center. The McAthies also own and serve their coffee at East Village Coffee House in downtown Monterey.

MORE SPORTS

The other side of the offense is patrolled by Tristan Evans, an explosive freshman, and Daniel Meyer, the team's senior leader. Both are strong-armed lefties.

And Reynolds feels blessed to have two sophomore goalkeepers: Owen Monke, who was in the cage for last year's playoff victory, and Luca Zaninovich.

"Both guys have an incredibly competitive spirit, and they make each other better every day in practice," the coach said.

"Our strength is that we have talent across the board, but we don't rely on one player to carry us. Any number of players could step up in any given game," Reynolds said. "They're a very cohesive unit, and they're really looking like a team that is poised for the playoffs."

CCS boys water polo playoffs are scheduled Nov. 9 (quarterfinals at home sites), Nov. 12 or 13 (semifinals at home sites), and Nov. 16 (finals at Independence High School in San Jose).

Successful fall season for Pirates

In addition to the girls and boys water polo teams, Stevenson athletes clinched division or league championships this season in girls golf and field hockey. The field hockey team won its first league title since 1997.

Stevenson's football team currently is tied for second place in the Santa Lucia Division of the PCAL.

Battle-tested Padres

Carmel's football team flogged San Benito 41-14 on Saturday, which levels the Padres' record at 3-3 in the brutal Gabilan Division of the PCAL this season. San Benito previously was unbeaten in the division.

Carmel leads all Gabilan teams in yards gained, averaging 490 per game, and the Padres scoring average (39.9 per game) ranks second to Salinas (46.3).

Benicio Cristofalo leads the PCAL in receiving (1,033 yards on 48 receptions, 8 TDs). Dakota Mornhinweg is the PCAL's second-leading rusher (835 yards on 132 carries, 17 TDs), and quarterback Kai Lee is the second leading passer (121 completions on 175 attempts, 1,880 yards, 14 touchdowns, no interceptions).

The Padres, 5-4 overall, have one division game remaining against Everett Alvarez at 2 p.m. Nov. 9 at home. This week's scheduled game with Gilroy was cancelled when the Mustangs forfeited their final six games of the year after multiple players were accused of sexual assault.

Looking ahead (Nov. 1-7)

Cross country — Saturday: Pacific Coast Athletic League Championships, Toro Park (TBA).

Field hockey — Monday: Central Coast Section playoffs, first round (3 p.m., site TBA). Wednesday: Central Coast Section playoffs, second round (3 p.m., site of higher seed).

Football — Friday: Stevenson at St. Francis SCP (7:30 p.m.).

Girls golf — Monday: CIF NorCal Regional Championships, El Macero Country Club (TBA).

Girls tennis — Monday: PCAL Gabilan Division Individual Tournament at Chamisal Tennis Club (12-5 p.m.). Tuesday: PCAL Gabilan Division Individual Tournament at Chamisal (1-5 p.m.).

Girls volleyball — Saturday: Central Coast Section Division 4 first round (7 p.m. at site of higher seed). Tuesday: Central Coast Section quarterfinals (7 p.m. at site of higher seed). Thursday: Central Coast Section semifinals (5 and 7:30 p.m., Notre Dame-Belmont).

Boys water polo — Friday: Carmel at Stevenson (5 p.m.).

Girls water polo — Central Coast Section play-in game (site and time TBA).

MAUDE

Hey there, my name is Maude. I'm a mellow 9-year-old girl who loves taking cat naps, sitting in windowsills and being brushed. I was found wandering the streets, ended up at a shelter and although I was microchipped no one claimed me. So I became homeless. Now I'm in a Golden Oldies foster home waiting for a new forever family.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF DORIS E. CAMPANELLI aka DORIS CAMPANELLI Case Number 19PR000400
 To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of DORIS E. CAMPANELLI aka DORIS CAMPANELLI.
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by JON CAMPANELLI and NICOLE CAMPANELLI in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.
 The Petition for Probate requests that JON CAMPANELLI and NICOLE CAMPANELLI be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
 THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.
 THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows:
 Date: Dec. 18, 2019
 Time: 9:00 a.m.
 Dept.: 13
 Address: Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.
If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.
You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

making whisky from their surplus grain for centuries. Alexander Reid, a barley farmer and schoolteacher, founded the company that makes The Macallan in 1824. It was one of Scotland's first licensed distillers and is highly respected today, with some of its more aged offerings, like the 18-year and 25-year whiskies, fetching high prices and being difficult to acquire.

Tom Tobar, western regional manager for Edrington — the company that owns The Macallan and describes it as “the world's most precious single malt whisky” by which all others must be judged — will pour a selection of Scotches perfectly paired with the four-course dinner the culinary team at the Portola Hotel has created.

The evening will begin with socializing and a sip of The Macallan Sherry Cask 12 Year, after which guests will sit down for traditional “white pudding” with apple and chestnut paired with 12 Year Double Cask, then Scotch egg with arugula and 15 Year Triple Cask, followed by wild Scottish game birds paired with Rare Cask. The dinner will wrap up with cheeses, quince and Scottish tablet served with The Macallan 18.

Dinner is $125 per person and reservations are required. Call (831) 649-7874. The Portola Hotel is located at the foot of Alvarado Street in Monterey.

45 rpm party at Poppy Hall

Poppy Hall restaurant at 589 Lighthouse Ave. in Pacific Grove will present “45 Live! A Prix-Fixe Record Party” Nov. 7 from 6 to 9 p.m.

That evening, while DJ Leo “spins from his vast collection of ultra-rare 45s and displays vintage multi-media projections,” the restaurant will offer a $45 prix-fixe menu that should be a good match for 1960s soul, with garden salad with homemade ranch and toasted pecans, turkey fricassee with mushrooms and bacon, long-cooked greens, skillet cornbread and cupcakes.

Founded by Big Sur Bakery & Restaurant chef Philip Wojtowicz and Big Sur Roadhouse chef Brendan Esons, Poppy Hall “is a community gathering place serving unique rustic California food for the soul” nightly, as well as during weekend brunch from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

For reservations, call (831) 204-9990 or go to poppyhallpg.com.

Beer beer beer beer

Edgar's Restaurant in the Quail Lodge clubhouse at 800 Valley Greens Drive will celebrate “Beer, Sausage, Cheese, Prost!” Nov. 7-10, with specials on cold beers and traditional German fare every evening from 5 to 9 p.m. Reservations are required for dining. Visit quailodge.com/edgars.

Bubbly dinner at Highlands

California Market at Pacific's Edge will hold its final “Forks Corks Action” wine-maker dinner of the year when executive chef Chris Vacca pairs his excellent food with exceptional champagne from Perrier-Jouet and G.H. Mumm in the restaurant's famous wine room Nov. 7.

The four-course dinner will begin at 6 p.m. with a glass of G.H. Mumm Brut and fried oysters and deviled eggs, followed by a sit-down dinner in the wine room, starting with Perrier-Jouet Blanc de Blancs and warm Laura Chanel goat cheese on crostini with tarragon, orange oil and figs. Perrier-Jouet Brut will be served with hamachi crudo, and G.H. Mumm rosé will be paired with Vacca's Duck Duo — lacquered duck breast, duck confit dumplings, sunchoke purée, bok choy and mushrooms. For the final course, Perrier-Jouet Belle Epoque will be poured alongside local berries and sabayon.

Dinner costs $130 per person, including tax and tip. Reservations are required and must be made through Eventbrite.com. The inn is located at 120 Highlands Drive.

album, "Love Fell On Me," which featured a cameo by Wonder and wowed the critics.

Shel a is co-starring in a biopic on the legendary gospel group, the Clark Sisters. Titled "The First Ladies of Gospel," the miniseries is set to be released in January.

Earlier this year, Shel a released her third LP, "Pretty Things," which pays tribute to the songwriting team of Alan and Marilyn Bergman.

Showtime is 8 p.m. Tickets are $39 to $59. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2048.

■ Groovin' on a Sunday afternoon

If you like classical or Celtic music, Sunday afternoon offers three enticing options.

At Hidden Valley Music Seminars at 3 p.m., the Monterey County Composers' Forum presents "Still Life with Cello," when a member of San Francisco's experimental Friction String Quartet, cellist Douglas Machiz — along with others — will play music by an assortment of local composers, including Carleton Macy, Edward Moncrief, Hana Ettinger, Steve Ettinger and Paula Kaiser.

A reception follows the show. Tickets are $10. Hidden Valley is located at Carmel Valley and Ford roads.

Also Sunday at 3 p.m., Youth Music Monterey kicks off its new season with a concert at Sunset Center. The event marks the debut of the nonprofit's new music director, Danko Drusko, and will showcase violinist Rose Vinn, the winner of its 2019 concerto competition.

Tickets are $19 for general admission, $9 for seniors and $4 for children. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. For more details, call (831) 375-1992.

The same afternoon at 4 p.m., Alasdair Fraser and Natalie Hall take the stage at the International School of Monterey in Seaside. Fraser is one of Scotland's premier fiddlers, while Hall is a gifted cellist from California. Together, they have recorded five albums that have stretched the boundaries of Celtic music. The concert is presented by the Seaside nonprofit, Palenke Arts.

Tickets are $20 for adults and $12 for students and seniors. The school is located at 1720 Yosemite Street.

"Police Log" Carmel-by-the-Sea, Oct. 10

Department received letter from a woman in San Jose regarding her life.

She discussed the passing of her sister, her recent divorce, and corruption in San Jose.

She wished the letter be forwarded to the Mayor of Carmel.

Two unique teams on the diamond: The King & His Court and the House of David

THE 2019 World Series is winding down as my fingers pound the keyboard on my computer. So far, we've seen some great baseball from both teams plus something I've never seen at a game. Usually the third base coach flashes signs to the players. During Game 5 it was two young female fans who flashed the Houston pitcher. Baseball, which always honors outstanding performances, should find room for them in the Hall of Fame.

While watching the best teams from the National and American leagues battle for baseball supremacy, I remembered two of the best teams ever to play the game. I saw one, The King & His Court, in Southfield, Mich., in 1978. I never saw the other team, The House of David — even though it was founded in a town I often traveled to while peddling medical books in Western Michigan — because it disbanded in 1950.

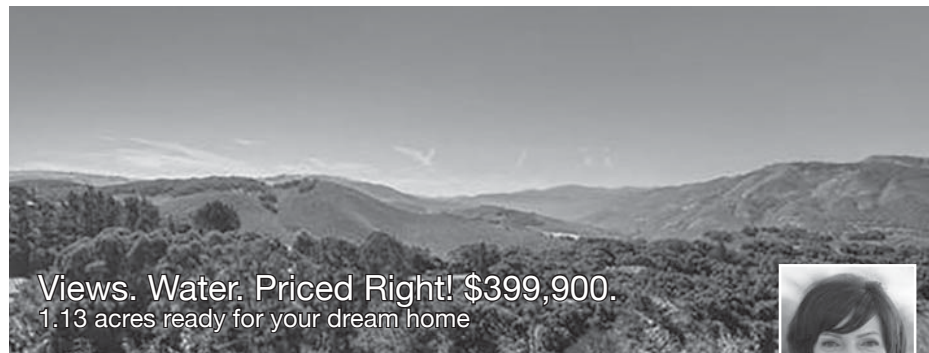

If you've never heard of them, don't go rummaging through your Dickson Baseball Dictionary. They're probably not there. The King & His Court was a four-man softball team organized by Eddie Feigner in 1946. Feigner had been pitching for Kilburg's Grocery store in the Green Pea League of Walla Walla Valley, Wash. During one game, Feigner beat a team from Oregon 33-0. After the game, the players gathered at a tavern, where the manager made a nasty comment about Feigner's pitching ability. Feigner said he could beat any team the tavern manager put together with just a catcher. The manager challenged Feigner

TEHÁMA

CARMEL

One by one, families have found their idea of paradise at Teháma.

For some, paradise at Teháma is an inspiring architectural home perched high above the Carmel Valley with far-reaching views of Monterey Bay. For others, it is a masterfully-crafted residence secluded amid century old oaks and towering pines. For all who call Teháma home, it is living in a last-of-its-kind community — where 85% of its over 2,000 acres is preserved as open space, conservation and sustainability are a way of life, world-class amenities seamlessly sync nature and nurture, and the very best of Carmel and Monterey are just moments away.

Homesites 5 to 24 acres. Pricing from $1.5 million.
Nearly 70% of Teháma's 90 homesites now sold.

to prove it. Feigner added two more players so he could have a batter if his team loaded the bases. Then Feigner pitched a perfect game, striking out every batter he faced with two exceptions. One failed when he tried to bunt the ball, the other hit a grounder to the first basemen. The four players of the King & His Court easily beat the nine-player bunch 7-0. Thus began a barnstorming tour that took the four-man team all over the world for almost 60 years.

When I saw them play, Eddie was in his 50s. The game was held at a high school softball field. Three members of the team roamed through the crowd, passing their caps to collect money. I saw him pitch a seven-inning no-hitter, where he struck out 18, one while pitching from second base, another from centerfield, and one while blindfolded.

Feigner's meticulous records include 9,743 victories, 141,517 strikeouts (15,000 while blindfolded), 930 no-hitters and 238 perfect games. In 1967, Feigner appeared in a celebrity charity softball game against many major league players. During the game, he struck out Willie Mays, Willie McCovey, Brooks Robinson, Roberto Clemente, Maury Wills and Harmon Killebrew — all in a row. How? Well, his fastball was clocked at more than 100 miles per hour. Thrown from a pitching mound about 40 feet away rather than the baseball distance of 60 feet, 6 inches, would make it almost unhittable.

Worthy but unhonored

Feigner is not enshrined in Cooperstown, but he is a member of the Shrine of the Eternals, which is part of the Baseball Reliquary (www.baseballreliquary.org) and includes Roberto Clemente, Jackie Robinson, Vin Scully and Satchel Paige.

The Israelite House of David was a religious society founded in Benton Harbor, Mich., in 1903. It had many of the characteristics of a cult: a charismatic leader, apocalyptic beliefs, communal living, and strict prohibitions on sex, alcohol, and cutting one's hair. Today's hirsute players would look almost well groomed compared to the House of David team members.

The group allowed women to vote and hold office, ran an amusement park, sent traveling bands on the vaudeville circuit — and formed a sensational baseball team that drew massive crowds as it barnstormed around the country.

The team popularized the art of the "pepper game," a collection of Harlem Globetrotter-esque antics where they juggled and tossed balls, made them vanish only to pull them out of their beards, and even played while mounted on donkeys.

Famous professional players occasionally donned fake beards and joined the team for games, including Grover Cleveland Alexander, Satchel Paige and Babe Ruth. The team considered signing the Babe in 1934, but decided his hedonistic lifestyle would be a poor fit for the puritanical team. They continued to draw crowds until the 1950s, when a sex scandal wracked the commune, leading to a decline in their popularity.

Benton Harbor has not dismissed the memory of its team. Writing in the Detroit Free Press on April 22 this year, John Carlisle quotes Chris Siriano, the owner of the House of David museum in neighboring St. Joseph, Mich.: "It was an amazing amount of entertainment and excitement. They wanted to have fun, they wanted to invite America into their lives, and they loved to entertain and laugh and have a blast. They always told me it was a means to an end, to get them to tomorrow, 'cause tomorrow was when paradise was coming."

For me it is almost the perfect summing up of baseball — entertainment and excitement, laughing and having a blast, and another game tomorrow — paradise found.
