Passes Away

"Jim," as they call him in Indiana, "The Hoosier Poet," as the head-line writers term as the head-line writers term him, James Whitcomb Riley, as we refer to him, is dead.

The passing of this much-loved writer was chronicled in Sunday's press dispatches.

Riley had been ill since July, 1910, when he sure elastroke of paralysis. He recovered, however, but lost the use of right hand. During his illness he learned to write with his left hand. Last May he returned to Indiana from a visit to Florida and announced that he "never felt better," so that his friends and admirers felt assured that he would give to the world for years to come the world for years to come his messages of good cheer.

Riley was a lover of children, whose spirit he divined so intimately.

Politicians

Politics are beginning to liven up. Some time ago Geo. S. Walker announced his candidacy for Congress, and, now E. A. Hayes has tossed his hat in the ring for the same job. W. J. Martin of Salinas, will be a candidate for the assembly on the Republican ticket. To oppose our present Supervisor, J. L. D. Roberts, Chas. Kiernan, now superintendent of streets of Monterey, has announced himself a candidate.

It would be well, if you wish to vote, to call at the Pine Cone office and register.

There is one important contest for which this regi tration is essential. Governor Johnson has announced his candidacy for the Senate. To be a candidate in November he must be nominated. Under the law, he may aspire to the nomination of any or all the parties, and he will be a candidate for at least the nomina-tion of the Progressive and Republican parties. Since he will probably be unopposed for the Progressive nomination, the place in which a yote will be most useful will be in the Republican primary.

Here Friday Evening

The Western Drama Society has started something. Some years ago one of the popular magazines inaugurated revival of Neapolonic literature, then came a great wave of Lincoln stories, and these were followed by a publication and re-publication of the works of Kipling.

Who knows but what the dramatization of the dream children of Robt. Louis Stevenson, by John Northern Hilliard and Herbert Heron, under the title of "Tusitala," is the beginning of an unprecedented demand for the Stevenson books throughout the country.

At last Friday evening's per-formance at the Del Monte open-air theatre, of "Tusitala," an audience made up of people from all parts of the world was present to see in animated form the characters depicted by Robert Louis Stevenson. The characters were so presented as to please not only those who know Stevenson, but also to engage the interest of those who should him.

Two of the episodes presented may be termed the features of the presentation, because of their action, especially in the climax. "Treasure Island" and the "Samoan" episodes will be placed on sate friday next at the Carmel Development Co.'s office at 50 cents for general admission

The authors are to be congratulated on their splendid work, and the producers for a fine performance.
On Friday evening the entire present population of Carmel should attend the performance of the Masque at the Forest theatre.

My dear sir:

Please request the writer of the article headed "Let Efficiency be the Test" in your issue of the 19th inst., to visit the adjutant's office at the Presidio, Monterey and ask for the last volume of the Army Register, look it over and see for himself that there are now in our army hundreds of officers who enlisted as private soldiers, and then like a man take back his statement that "a private has about as much chance to become a commissioned officer as a German peddler has to become a Kaiser."

In his speech on our last Decoration Day in Kansas City, Colonel Roosevelt mentioned the opportunities of enlisted men in the regular army to be made officers, and told what a great satisfaction and honor it was to him, while President to commission as lieutenant generals, Major General Adna R. Chaffer and Major General Samuel B. Young. both enlisted as privates in the regular army at the beginning of the Civil War and rose to the highest rank. Their promotions were based on merit. Yours,

B. Rockwell.

"he Political "Pork Bar'l"

What is the origin of the terms "pork" and "pork barrel" in public affairs? The most plausible derivation was offered by a writer in the Christian Science Monitor some time ago and is based on a story. the case of a man charged with purloining a pig. The evidence was sufficient, but because the culprit had presented each of the jurymen with a piece of the pork, which each put in his own pork barrel, found themselves unable to bring in a verdict of guilty. Hence pork-barrel legislation, meaning a division of appropriations based on something other than merit or public necessity.

Trade at Home

In a nearby town, says an exchange, a grocery clerk is buying his clothing of a city mail order house, and a clothing clerk is buying his gro-ceries of the same house. Both of them get their living from the people who trade at home, and both would be out of jobs if everybody in their home town did as they do. Yet they send their money out of town with a short-sighted idea of saving a penny once in a while, while they help themselves to lose dollars by doing so. Those two clerks are a reflection, however, of how many people in every town, even some business people among them, look upon trading at home. They think that everybody who uses goods they themselves sell hould buy at home, but anything they themselves need they want to buy where they please. A get together pledge among business men on the subject would be a good way to start the buy-at-home move-

Proposed San Francisco to Oakland Bridge

The project for a bridge across the bay from San Francisco to Oakland is under discussion again. The plan which has been devised by an association of eastern bridge engineers is said to have been approved by Col. Thomas Rees, United States engineer of rivers and harbors, who calls it the first feasible scheme that has been prepared.

This proposal is for a bridge about four miles long, running across shallow water for the most part, and above the bulk of the bays shipping, the terminals being not far from the Southern Pacific station at Third and Townsend streets on the San Francisco side, and at the foot of Adeline street in Oakland. The cost would be about $20,000,000, it is estimated.

The proposed location, the engineers say, offers the shortest distance between the two cities, traverses shallow water and slight currents near the shores, and is beyond the greater portion of the bay's shipping.

The bridge would have block signals like those on the express tracks in the New York subways, which would permit a one minute and forty e-onds headway schedule for trains and a speed of 45 miles an hour. There would be four railroad tracks and two roadways for vehicles, one of which roadways would be for trucks and slow-moving wagons and the other for automobiles. Bridge trains would pass through subways at the terminals.

Among the engineers who have been associated in the work of preparing the plans for the bridge are: Wilbur J. Watson, consulting engineer of Cleveland, O., William R. Davis, consulting engineer of Albany, N. Y., and Harlan D. Miller, a bridge engineer of New York City.
